General Comment

It troubles me greatly that the government is once again potentially placing individuals such as myself in a position of having to violate one's conscience by paying through taxes or fees or other less obvious ways for products or procedures that terminate the life of the unborn.

My faith, based squarely upon the teachings within the Bible, unambiguously informs my conscience that abortion, at whatever stage of life and by whatever means, whether surgically or orally performed, is murder.

Therefore, this rule requiring group health plans and insurance issuers to provide birth control which includes "morning after" pills as morally reprehensible.

If the First Amendment still has authority over the laws enacted by the American government then to require me to violate my conscience by aiding and abetting in the murder of unborn children, whether that action is great or small, is unacceptable.

I humbly request this rule under consideration be rejected.
