A. I don't think I signed that document particularly. But there is a signature page saying, stating that I reviewed the whole contract and like the whole, everything from soup to nuts and the whole packet that she puts together. That the addresses of each farm were correct, that the contract, all that stuff, there's a signature page for that that I reviewed and approved everything, so yes, I did.

Q. You did review it before signing it?

A. Yes. Yes.

Q. And at the time, did everything look accurate to you before you signed it, the forms?

A. Yes.

Q. And now in hindsight, were those forms accurate?

A. As far as job description and all?

Q. Were there any details in the job order for 2015 that now you think are inaccurate?

A. The -- I don't know what you call it, the clause, there was a portion of it that I don't know if it was clear on the use of the kitchen and the meal plan.

Q. And what was inaccurate about that?

A. Now it's all cleared up. It could have been skewed or misinterpreted that the guys were going to be just generally free-for-all in the kitchen, 100 guys making their own meals, when you could never have that. You could never build a kitchen big enough for that to happen. It's more spelled out. It's much more clear.

Q. And how did that -- why were the 2015 job orders written that way?

A. I don't think there's a particular reason. I just think it was an oversight.

Q. And that part of it, was that description about the kitchen and the meals, was that written?

A. That was revisited and reworded, but everything else in there is pretty much verbatim the same as it was.

Q. And what prompted you to or Sun Valley to reword that?

A. This problem.

Q. You're referring to the US Farm Labor investigation?

A. The lawsuit, yeah. Because of some miswording, we're all here today, a misunderstanding. Whatever you want to call it. Oversight.

Q. Do you think the wording in the 2015 job orders was misleading?

A. Do I think that directly? At the time, I didn't. Again, it was an oversight.

Q. What do you think now?

A. And that was the first time I ever had to do that. What do I think now? Hindsight is 20/20 as to what I think now. Do I think it's accurate as I sit here right now, no, that's why I changed it.

Q. So in hindsight, you think that the job orders for 2015 were inaccurate with respect to the kitchen and meal plan?

A. I guess you could say that, yes.

Q. I would like to introduce what -- can we mark this as Exhibit 12?

- - - - -

(ETA Form 790 Bates DOL01466 to 1485 marked R. Marino Exhibit 12 for identification.)

- - - - -

BY MR. HEYMAN-KANTOR:

Q. Take a look at that document and tell me if you recognize it. These documents are Bates stamped DOL01466 through DOL01485.

A. This is a new contract, this is the 2016?

Q. Yes. So if you take a look at page 2, which is DOL01467 at the top, this is under number 14, do you see that?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. I'm going to read this. "Employers will furnish workers, will furnish workers living in employer provided housing with 3 meals per day at 11.86 per day, or the current subsistence rate as posted in the federal register. In the event the employer provided meals are less than 11.86 per day, workers will be only charged the cost of those meals." Do you see where it says that?

A. Yes.

Q. So this statement is accurate for the 2016 growing season?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. And is it also accurate for the 2015 growing season?

A. Yes. I don't know about the 11.86, if that was the same in 2015. It might have been less. It might have been more. It wouldn't have been more.

Q. So with the possible exception of the amount of money per day, those first few sentences are also accurate for the 2015 growing season?

A. Yes. Should have been. I know it wasn't worded that way.

Q. The 2015, the job order for 2015 should have been worded this way?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, here it says, and directly after that it says, "Workers will sign a payroll deduction authorization." Do you see that?

A. Uh-huh. Agustin doesn't do that. When they pay up, and they pay for the meal plan, they sign a roster and I believe he gives that to Lisa and she has those on file somewheres in the office in a filing cabinet somewheres.

Q. So after the 2015 growing season, workers paid for their meal plan through a payroll deduction?

A. Oh, no, no, no. No, they sign -- I'm sorry, I misheard you or misinterpreted what you said. Where is that?

Q. Fourth line down from the top.

A. No, there is no payroll deduction.
Q. So that's inaccurate?
A. That's inaccurate.
Q. And do workers sign some document?
A. They sign saying that they paid. Just on a -- each week, Lisa because she prints out a list of current workers that are employed and gives it to Agustin for simplicity. And it just has a list of all the guys and as they pay, they sign next to their name and he gives that to her at the end of the week. Saying that they paid him for his meals that he's making, that he's providing. And I mean not only is that to prove these guys are eating the food and they're paying for the food, not only they're paying for the food, but they're also eating the food. Otherwise, they wouldn't sign. Not only is that to cover us, but it's also for Agustin as well. Because I mean he's the one that's in charge of the kitchen and what can it hurt. But no, there is no payroll deduction whatsoever.
Q. So Agustin --
A. That was very inaccurate.
Q. So Agustin passes out or asks workers, what does he ask for them to do?

A. They just sign it. They just sign next to their name.

Q. It's like a -- is this a sheet typed on a computer?

A. Uh-huh, a Word document.

Q. And who types it on the Word document?

A. I do.

Q. And then you hand it to Agustin?

A. He just gets copy of it. So it's a, I don't know, it's a cover letter saying that, it states in English and Spanish, and they know when they sign next to their name, they got their meals and they're eating their meals and they're paid up for the week or whatever.

Q. Is it one piece of paper for each worker?

A. No, no, you wouldn't be able to keep track of that. He keeps them right there in the kitchen or it in the kitchen. It might be four or five pages. But it has that on the front and they know when they sign next to their name, that's for that document. That signature page is for that document.

Q. And then he -- how does he -- how did you give him this form?

A. I just did that.

Q. And when did you hand it to him?

A. Whenever I saw that it was necessary to start doing that.

Q. Was this after the 2015 growing season ended?

A. I forget exactly when I started it. The Word document might even have a date stamp on it somewheres when I created it.

Q. And then do you e-mail it to Agustin?

A. No, it's hard copy. It's photocopied.

Q. Does he make -- have to make photocopies periodically of it?

A. Lisa does that for him. She provides him with a blank list of names. Because once they're signed next to it, it's a big old mess and she puts it in the filing cabinet. And when he's in the office there the next week or whatever, she gives him a nice clean one and it has all them signatures and I think it's -- she stamps a date on there of that week, I believe.

Q. So each week, Lisa Justice, is that her name?

A. Yes.

Q. Lisa Justice each week hands a blank piece of paper with places for people to sign that they paid?

A. It's not blank. It's a list with all their names with a blank spot for them to sign.

Q. So each week --

A. Attached is a letter that I wrote up in a Word document explaining what they're signing.

Q. And each week, Lisa Justice hands that to Agustin?

A. Right.

Q. And then Lisa Justice stores this --

A. Uh-huh.

Q. -- in the Sun Valley Orchards office?

A. Yes.

Q. And you instructed her to do that?

A. Yes.
Q. Just turning briefly back to the workers who left in May, a group of about 19, did these workers, you know, work slowly during that couple of weeks that they started or were they working regular pace? What pace were they working at?
A. I don't know, I'm not -- I don't know.
Q. Did you know at the time?
A. No. I'm not out there with the guys physically. Like I said earlier, I'm not -- I mean I might see them out there. I might be working to an adjacent field, but no, I don't -- I'm not out there directly side by side with them seeing how they're performing.
Q. And Agustin had not previously told you about the quality of their work?
A. Not that I can recall.
Q. Do you have any notes about what he might have said about these workers?
A. No.
Q. Is there any way that you could figure out if you go to the office tomorrow to figure out if these workers were working?

A. No. There would be no records on that, unless there was an -- I'll say an issue of some sort. Then it would have been documented, but no, there wouldn't be anything on file for that.

Q. Is it possible there's an issue with one of these workers?

A. Anything is possible, but nothing was brought to my attention.

Q. Nothing had been brought to your attention about these workers before you had these meetings with them?

A. That's correct.

Q. These workers left and they knew what they were getting into when they agreed to work for Sun Valley Orchards?

MR. SCHULTE: Objection. How does he know what they knew?

BY MR. HEYMAN-KANTOR:

Q. These workers were informed of what they were getting into?

A. They were given a copy of the contract and they signed it saying they understood it and they agreed to everything on there.

any money in my pocket. I didn't have anything marketable. I don't want to say anything. There was several acres, I couldn't market, because I couldn't cut. I couldn't get to it.

Q. How much, could you estimate how much potential gain you lost out on because of the workers who separated?

A. When it was over a course of several days, I couldn't begin to estimate, upwards of 50,000, potentially more.

Q. All right. And then you had also said that Sun Valley pays, in the kitchen pays for the heating?

A. Yes.

Q. And the electricity. Why does Sun Valley Orchards pay for these, these things?

A. Well, we just -- those bills come to the office for the electric. That's because in the off season, it's just cleaner. Why do we pay for them? We own the building. We own the heater, the equipment in there. We pay for repairs, because without the farming operation, that stuff wouldn't be getting utilized and potentially damaged or need repair. And why do we pay for the water test? Well, it's our camp. It's our well. You know, we're going to house people in it and I -- we just take it upon ourselves to pay those.

Q. Is the bill separated between the charges for the kitchen versus for the other parts of the farm?

A. Yes. It has got its own electric meter. It's got its own fuel tank, it's own gas tank. When the plumber or electrician, whoever, carpenter comes to do repairs, they state it on there what it's for.

Q. Do you ever ask -- did Sun Valley Orchards ever ask Agustin Hernandez to reimburse it for these expenses?

A. No.

Q. Why not?

A. He's a respected employee and out of good faith I guess, just doing the right thing.

MR. HEYMAN-KANTOR: That's all I have.

BY MR. SCHULTE:

Q. Last round. In here, in the 2016 order that we talked about before, it says employers will furnish three meals a day, is that correct? Do you furnish the feels or Agustin does?

A. Agustin does.

Q. And it refers to the workers being charged and just to be clear, they're charged by Agustin, not by you?

A. Yes, there's no payroll deductions whatsoever. I guess I need a lawyer to write up that ETA.

Q. Do you remember what was in the 2015 job order?

A. I don't specifically. I don't know if we just omitted a sentence or two of that paragraph.

Q. Okay.

A. But it was worded differently.

Q. If it says that the workers would be offered access to a kitchen and be taken to the store to get their own food, does that sound right?

A. Yes.

Q. And both of those were true, right?

A. Yes.

MR. SCHULTE: Nothing further.

MR. HEYMAN-KANTOR: We don't have anything further.

14. Describe how the employer intends to provide either 3 meals a day to each worker or furnish free and convenient cooking and kitchen facilities for workers to prepare meals / Describa cómo el empleador tiene la intención de ofrecer, ya sea 3 comidas al día a cada trabajador, o proporcionar gratuitamente instalaciones para cocinar.

Employers will furnish workers will furnish workers living in employer provided housing with 3 meals per day at $11.86 per day, or the current subsistence rate as posted in the federal register. In the event the employer provided meals are less than $11.86 per day, workers will only be charged the cost of those meals. Workers will sign a payroll deduction authorization.
Housing is provided at no cost to workers who are not reasonably able to return the same day to their place of residence. This paragraph applies to such workers only. Housing is not provided to non-workers. Housing capacity is strictly regulated by the US Department of Labor, and no person, other than the eligible employees authorized by the employer, may occupy or remain overnight in employer-provided housing. Employer-provided housing must meet the full set of DOL Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) standards set forth at 29 CFR 1910.142, or the full set of standards set at §§ 654.404 through 654.417, whichever are applicable under § 654.401. The housing is offered as temporary in-season (during the employment period only) housing provided for migrant agricultural workers while they are employed at farms beyond normal commuting distance from their residence. Workers provided housing by the employer must promptly vacate the housing upon termination of employment. No charge will be made for beds or cooking utensils and similar items furnished to workers to whom housing is provided. All housing is group housing in which all workers will share kitchens and common areas without regard to gender. Female workers, however, will be provided with sleeping facilities shared only with other family members or with other females. Sex-segregated toilets facilities will be provided. Workers who reside in such housing agree to be responsible for maintaining the housing in a neat and clean manner. Workers residing in employer's housing may have mail directed to them at the employer's address on attached addendum. Rental housing will comply with all applicable regulations.

Assurances

INTRASTATE AND INTERSTATE CLEARANCE ORDER

The employer agrees to provide to workers referred through the clearance system the number of hours of work per week cited in Item 10 of the clearance order for the week beginning with the anticipated date of need, unless the employer has amended the date of need at least 10 working days prior to the original date of need by so notifying the Order-Holding Office (OHO). If the employer fails to notify the OHO at least 10 working days prior to the original date of need, the employer shall pay eligible workers referred through the intrastate/interstate clearance system the specified hourly rate or pay, or in the absence of a specified hourly rate or pay, the higher of the Federal or State minimum wage rate for the first week starting with the original anticipated date of need. The employer may require workers to perform alternative work if the guarantee is invoked and if such alternative work is stated on the job order.

The employer agrees that no extension of employment beyond the period of employment shown on the job order will relieve the employer from paying the wages already earned, or specified in the job order as a term of employment, providing transportation or paying transportation expenses to the worker's home.

The employer assures that all working conditions comply with applicable Federal and State minimum wage, child labor, social security, health and safety, farm labor contractor registration and other employment-related laws.

The employer agrees to expeditiously notify the OHO or State agency by telephone immediately upon learning that a crop is maturing earlier or later, or that weather conditions, over recruitment, or other factors have changed the terms and conditions of employment.

The employer, if acting as a farm labor contractor, has a valid farm labor contractor registration certificate.

The employer assures the availability of no cost or public housing which meets applicable Federal and State standards and which is sufficient to house the specified number of workers requested through the clearance system.

The employer also assures that outreach workers shall have reasonable access to the workers in the conduct of outreach activities pursuant to 20 CFR 653.107.

ATTACHMENT TO ETA 790

Workers recruited under this Job Order are recruited to work on the employer's farm shown on the addendum in the certified occupation during the period of employment shown in Item 9. The employer/member will offer US workers at least the same opportunities, wages, benefits, and working conditions as those which the employer offers or intends to offer to non-immigrant foreign workers. Use of the masculine pronoun herein is for convenience of reference only.

1. Name and address of employer: Sun Valley Orchards LLC; 29 Vestry Rd, Swedesboro NJ 08085.

9. Anticipated dates of employment: 04/19/2016 until 10/10/2016.

10. The number of workers shown is the aggregate number of foreign workers that will be employed by the employer under this temporary employment certification. The approximate maximum number of workers (foreign and domestic) to be employed in the certified occupation is shown on the addendum. The numbers shown are approximations provided for the governing administrative agencies. The actual number of workers employed in the certified job opportunities of the grower at any given time may be more or less than the approximate numbers shown in the addendum, depending upon crop conditions, weather, markets or other circumstances that develop during the season.

11. Anticipated Hours of Work: Worker will report to work at the designated time and place as directed by the Grower each day. The standard workweek of 7 hours per day Monday-Friday, and 5 hours on Sunday is normal; however, workers may be requested to work 12+ hours per day depending upon the conditions in the fields and maturity of the crops but will not be required to do so. Also, the workers may be requested to work on federal holidays and on their Sabbath but will not be required to do so. Workers may volunteer to work additional hours when work is available. Down Time: Workers should expect occasional periods of little or no work because of weather, crop or other conditions beyond the employer's control. These periods can occur anytime throughout the season.

Starting and ending times will change due to weather and crop conditions. During certain times of the season workers are required to work at night. Workers will be given as much notice as possible when the changing of shifts is required. If a worker is offered and agrees to work more than the scheduled hours during the workweek, they must still report to work on their other scheduled days, unless arrangements are approved in advance with the owner or supervisor. Choosing to work longer hours during the week does not exclude workers from working each scheduled work day. Not reporting for work on your scheduled work day will be counted as an unexcused absence.

14. Employer will furnish workers living in employer provided housing with 3 meals per day at ~~$11.86~~ per day, or the current subsistence rate as posted in the federal register. In the event the employer provided meals are less than ~~$11.86~~ per day, workers will only be charged the cost of those meals. Workers will sign a payroll deduction authorization. $12.0

Housing is provided at no cost to workers who are not reasonably able to return the same day to their place of residence. This paragraph applies to such workers only. Housing is not provided to non-workers. Housing capacity is strictly regulated by the US Department of Labor, and no person, other than the eligible employees authorized by the employer, may occupy or remain overnight in employer-provided housing. The housing is offered as temporary in-season (during the employment period only) housing provided for migrant agricultural workers while they are employed at farms beyond normal commuting distance from their residence. Workers provided housing by the employer must promptly vacate the housing upon termination of employment. No charge will be made for beds, cooking utensils and similar items furnished to workers to whom housing is provided hereunder unless unlawfully removed or damaged beyond normal wear and tear. All housing is group housing in which all workers will share kitchens and common areas without regard to gender. Female workers, however, will be provided with sleeping facilities shared only with other family members or with other females. Sex-segregated toilets facilities will be provided. Workers who reside in such housing agree to be responsible for maintaining the housing in a neat and clean manner. Reasonable repair costs of damage or loss of property, other than that caused by normal wear and tear will be charged to the worker if he is found to be responsible for damage or loss to housing or furnishings. Workers residing in employer's housing may have mail directed to them at the employer's address on attached addendum. All housing or public accommodations will comply with applicable State, Federal, Local, or health regulations. Employer-provided housing will meet the full set of DOL Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) standards set forth at 29 CFR 1910.142, or the full set of standards set at §§ 654.404 through 654.417, whichever are applicable under § 654.401.

15. Interested candidates should contact their local State Workforce Office to receive a copy of the ETA 790 and applicable attachments. Once the applicant has a copy of the job order they may apply directly to employer by calling (856) 769-5280 ext 7. Applicants are encouraged to fax applications or resumes to (856) 769-5213 attn Farmworker Job. Group interviews for local applicants will be held Tuesdays and Fridays from 8am – 11am. Applicants are encouraged to arrive 15-20 minutes early to complete/review an application packet at 29 Vestry Rd, Swedesboro NJ 08085.

All interstate (out of state) and intrastate (in state) applicants interested in this job offer should first contact the order holding office prior to contacting the employer for information and permission to refer. Workers should be fully apprised by their local employment office of the terms, conditions and nature of employment prior to referral. This will enable applicants to review all the information and make an informed decision about the job and will ensure compliance with disclosure requirements. Interstate (out of state) and Intrastate (in state) candidates will be interviewed over the phone once employer has received written confirmation that all required disclosures have been made. Completing an application is part of the interview process.

Workers should be fully apprised by the local employment office of the terms, conditions and nature of employment prior to referral. Workers are screened for compliance with the following criteria: a) confirm ability, availability, qualifications and willingness to perform work described and confirm intuition to work the entire season, 2) local workers confirm availability of reliable daily transportation to and from the job site for the entire season. Non local workers confirm availability of transportation to job site to begin work, 3) confirmation of full disclosure of all terms, condition, and nature of work-job by local employment staff, 4) affirmative confirmation of legal qualifications to work in the US as described below. The employer may terminate the worker (foreign and/or domestic) with notification to the employment service if employer discovers a criminal conviction record or status as a registered sex offender that employer reasonably believes, consistent with current law, will impair the safety and living conditions of other workers.

Only workers legally entitled to work in the United States and who possess original identity and employment eligibility documents sufficient to complete INS Form I-9, as required by the Immigration and Nationality Act, will be permitted to complete the hiring process. Workers referred against this order should be informed that they must have these documents in their possession when they arrive at the place of employment. Provided that workers complete section 1 of form I-9, workers will have three business days to produce the required documentation to complete section 2 of form I-9, as provided in the Act. Workers not providing this documentation will not be allowed to go to work on the fourth business day of employment, or any subsequent days until the documentation is provided, as provided in the Act.

16. Job Specifications: Must have three months' verifiable experience hand harvesting a perishable crop. Applicants must be able to furnish affirmative job references from recent employers operating comparable operations establishing acceptable previous experience.

Worker must possess requisite physical strength and endurance to repeat the harvest process throughout the workday, working quickly and skillfully to perform activities for which they were hired. Workers must work at a sustained, vigorous pace and make bona fide efforts to work efficiently and consistently that are reasonable under the climatic and other working conditions. Workers may not leave trash, or other discarded items in work areas or vehicles but must dispose of such items in provided receptacles. Workers must wash hands with soap and water after all bathroom and meal breaks. Allergies to varieties of ragweed, goldenrod, insecticides, related agricultural chemicals, etc, may affect workers ability to perform the work described herein. Workers should be physically able to do the worker described with or without reasonable accommodation. Must display the ability to move, place, climb and work from orchard ladders up to 6 feet in height, making the necessary adjustments for various procedures while carrying up to 30 pounds.

Sanitation Requirements: For food and general personal safety purposes, all workers will be required and expected to follow common sanitary practices at all times. This is particularly critical when hand harvesting crops for human consumption. Employees are required to cleanse their hands by washing them thoroughly with soap and water after using the bathroom and before entering the fields for harvest activities or the packing facility for packing operations.

Workers will plant, cultivate, and harvest Asparagus, Zucchini, Pickles, Cucumbers, Egg Plant, and Peppers. .

Asparagus: Workers will move along assigned row, stopping, bending and reaching to cut asparagus spears at ground level may operate self-propelled harvesting aid on which workers ride while stopping to cut spears at ground level. Spears which are less than ¼ inch in diameter (measured at butt) are discarded. Spears over ¼ inch in diameter which exceed 12 inches in length will be re-broken at the butt end. Any spearhead which has begun to open will be discarded. Spears meeting harvest specification will be placed in a straight fashion in field buckets and carried to trucks or trailers for dumping. Workers will be required to stay on their assigned row. Workers must use care while using knifes to prevent injury to themselves and other workers.

Zucchini, Pickles, Cucumbers, Egg Plant, and Peppers: Workers will plant, cultivate and harvest vegetables. Workers will be required to remove weeds by hand or with a hoe. Workers will bend and stoop to pick vegetables according to size, color, shape and degree of maturity and place into field containers. Workers may carry full container weighing approximately fifty (50) lbs. and empty into field bin or load onto trailer. May be required to pull and discard culls as directed by supervisor. Pickers will take care not to bruise or scar produce. Pre-harvest activities may include staking, tying, transplanting and pruning. Workers will stand on feet for long periods of time. Workers are required to work in fields when plants are wet with dew or rain. Temperatures in fields during working hours can range from forty (40) to over one hundred (100) degrees.

Peaches: Workers will perform various duties associated with thinning and picking peaches. Worker will be assigned a row, usually with a partner, and is responsible for picking all the proper fruit from that row, or half row. Fruit are selected from the tree according to size and/or color standard set by the picking supervisor. In some instances, fruit harvest will be done from a six-foot ladder weighing up to 30 lbs. All workers must be able to lift, carry, and work from the top of the ladder. The entire tree must be checked to ensure removal of all fruit meeting-picking requirements. Fruit are placed gently in the picking container until container is full. The full picking container weighing up to 25 lbs. is then taken to fruit wagon and gently emptied into a field bin, taking care of not to spill or bruise the fruit in the container or in the field bin. Workers are to stay on their assigned row unless directed by a supervisor to change, or to help someone out sporadically. Picking units will be kept free of limbs, leaves or mushy fruit. Fruit harvested specifically for sale at a roadside stand as fresh market specialty baskets in peck or half bushel containers must be field graded. For fruit harvest for sale at a roadside stand, extra care must be used to insure that each piece of fruit is undamaged and perfect. Workers will be required to pick up and return picking ladders to the ladder wagon provided by the grower at the end of each workday or as directed by the grower or designated supervisor.

Farm Equipment Operation: Workers may be required to operate tractors and other farm equipment during daily operations, as an incidental activity. Before any worker is require to operate any farm equipment, workers will be instructed in the safety and operation of the tractor before driving the tractor. Tractors should be driven in a manner to protect operator, other workers, products, trees, crops, and equipment. Repeated failure to obey safety requirements and operating instructions may result in termination.

Orchard Maintenance: Workers will be responsible for general orchard clean up. They will rake up debris from the land such as sticks, straw, etc. Workers involved in orchard maintenance may be required to hoe trees, girdle, spread fertilizer, pick up roots and limbs, strip suckers or unwanted growth from trees, dig root suckers, knock fruit off trees, use hand sprayer, remove vines, lay irrigation pipe, repair and maintain drip system, and strap and tie fruit trees. Employer will provide all equipment. Instruction will be given for each task and standards of performance communicated to workers. The specific standards for a job will be disclosed and demonstrated by the supervisor before the work begins.

Orchard Clean Up: They may be responsible for the removal of old and unproductive peach trees. They must take care to not damage or destroy any other trees or property in the area.

Forklift Operation during Packing Operations: Workers may be required to operate forklifts during packing operations as an incidental. Before any worker is required to operate a forklift, the worker will be instructed in the proper and safe operation. Workers will be required to operate forklifts according to instructions and in a manner that protects the operator, other workers and equipment. Repeated failure to obey operating and safety instructions may result in termination.

Farm, and Field Sanitation
All workers will be responsible for picking up trash, cleaning bathrooms, sweeping floors and other farm sanitation duties.

During certain duties, workers may be required to work in teams to accomplish a certain task. When engage in team work activities workers must coordinate with other members of the team to accomplish the task.

Employer retains the right to discharge an obviously unqualified worker, malinger, or recalcitrant worker who is physically able but does not demonstrate the willingness to perform the work necessary for the employer to grow a premium quality product.

This employer may grow one or more other crops. Farmers frequently decide whether to plant these crops and what additional crops they will plant after this application is submitted. Information on crops planted after submission of this application will be disclosed in writing to the U.S. Department of Labor for approval as soon as it is known.

GENERAL CONDITIONS APPLICABLE TO ALL CROPS: Fieldwork begins at assigned time shortly after daylight. Work may be performed during light rain and in high humidity and in temperatures ranging from 110+ degrees to below 20 degrees F. Workers will perform the majority of tasks standing in the upright position and can expect to stand on their feet for extended periods of time. Some tasks, however, require workers to perform activities on their feet in stooped or crouched position for long periods of time. Workers will supply their own work clothes. All the tasks in this Job Description constitute one (1) job; the employer may assign workers to different tasks on any day or to multiple tasks during the same day in the sole judgment of the employer. Workers may be required to perform work, on the farm, that is incidental to farming the crops listed in the application, such as performing hand cultivation tasks, packing, weeding or hoeing, cleaning and repairing farm buildings, grounds, set up and move equipment, cleaning and maintaining drip irrigation systems, , weeding, etc. This is a very demanding and competitive business in which quality specifications must be rigorously adhered to. Sloppy work cannot and will not be tolerated.

Full Crop Commitment: This is regular work, seven hours per day, Monday-Friday, and five on Sunday for the full remainder of the period of employment. The worker agrees to work for assigned employer(s) whenever work is available during the full remaining period of employment even though work may be slack at times. The worker understands that if the worker quits or is terminated for cause prior to the end of the period of employment, the worker will not receive the 3/4 guarantees discussed below and will not receive certain transportation reimbursements discussed below. Excessive tardiness and/or absences will not be tolerated and will result in termination.

Daily individual work assignments, crew assignments, and location of work, will be determined by and at the sole discretion of the farm manger and/or farm supervisor as the needs of the farming operation dictate. Workers may be assigned a variety of duties in any given day and/or different tasks on different days. Workers will be expected to perform any of the listed duties and work on any crop as assigned by the worker's supervisor.

Harvesting specifications, in particular, can change from time to time during the season due to crop or market conditions, even on the same crop. Workers will be expected to conform to the specific instructions given for each day's work.

The farm owner/supervisor or a designated employee will provide instructions and general supervision. However, field workers will be expected to perform their duties in a timely and proficient manner without close supervision.

17. Wage Rates, Special Pay Information and Deductions: The tasks in the crops listed below will be paid at the piece rates listed. All other work will be paid the adverse effect wage rate (AEWR) of $ 11.66 per hour. Employer will pay the highest of the AEWR, prevailing wage, the agreed-upon collective bargaining wage or the Federal or State minimum wage when the work is performed. In the event that the Department Of Labor promulgates a new AEWR applicable to any portion of the period of employment covered by this job order which is higher or lower than the AEWR herein, the employer will pay the higher AEWR, and may, at the employer's discretion pay the lower AEWR, beginning with the effective date of the new AEWR.

Workers are guaranteed that their total earnings will be at least equal to the AEWR of $11.66 per hour for all hours worked in a pay period. If a worker's total earnings in any pay period in which the worker has worked at a piece rate are less than the AEWR of $11.66 for all hours worked in the pay period, the employer will increase the worker's pay to the guaranteed minimum of $11.66 per hour for the total hours worked in the pay period.

Commodity	Rate	Unit

Zucchini	$1.65	Packed out ½ bu equivalent
Pickles	$2.00	Packed out 1.0 bu equivalent
Cucumber	$1.65	Packed out 1 1/9 bu equivalent
Eggplant	$1.00	Packed out 1 1/9 bu equivalent
Pepper	$1.00	Packed out 1 1/9 bu equivalent
Peaches	Hourly + POB	Packed out ½ bu equivalent

*POB= Packed Out Bonus

All jobs performed hourly will be compensated at $11.66/hr

*Peaches: $11.66/hr + $3.50/bin + Pack out bonus

Due to weather and crop conditions, the employer reserves the right to temporary increase the listed piece rates, or add a piece rate. The employer also reserves the right to completely do away with the piece rate all together to ensure a quality product and fair earnings. Employer reserves the right to add a piece rate, with notification to workers, prior to adding the rate.

All activities not listed as paid by piece rate will be paid by the hour.

18. More details concerning pay: Employer reserves the right to pay higher than the stated wage rate to any worker foreign or domestic. This is not promised or guaranteed. The decision to pay above the stated rates will be made by the employer, at their sole discretion, and will be based on factors including the recipients' performance and tenure.

A). The employer will make the following deductions from the Worker's wages: FICA taxes, Medicare, Local, State (if applicable) and Federal Income tax as required by law. Workers will be charged for the following: cash advances and repayment of loans, repayment of overpayment of wages to the worker, payment for articles which the Worker has voluntarily purchased from the Employer and any other charges expressly authorized by the Worker in writing. Deductions from pay may be made for payment of the workers portion for any employer-sponsored health care benefit that may be offered to the worker for the worker and the workers dependents that the worker chooses to purchase. The worker will not be required by the employer to purchase any health care benefit that may be offered and may choose to state in writing that the worker declines to purchase any such employer sponsored health care benefit. If the worker timely chooses to purchase any such health care benefit, at the time the worker states his or her desire to purchase such a health care benefit by completing and submitting any required written application any such health care benefit, the worker also will be required to authorize a deduction from the workers' wages to pay for the workers portion of the monthly insurance premium. Such authorization by a worker for the employer to make a deduction from wages, that is for the deduction to be made from wages paid to pay the workers share of the health benefit premium must be made in writing and signed by the worker. The worker's decision to decline or to accept the opportunity to purchase any health care benefit may be offered (including the worker's authorization to the employer to continue deductions from wages for the workers share of each monthly premium as may be required by applicable law or by the insurance carrier or by both) will likely be irrevocable for the remainder of the benefit plan year for which the offer and acceptance are made, absent a "qualifying event" affecting the worker. Information concerning the amount that the worker must pay as the workers share of the premium cost in order to purchase a heath care benefit will be provided in writing if such a plan is offered. Benefits offered under any health care plan, if offered, and other terms under which any such plan will be offered will be governed by the terms of any such health care plan, the requirements of any insurance company or third party administrator as well as by payroll administration requirements. No deduction not required by law will be made that brings the worker's hourly earnings below the statutory federal or state minimum wage. There may be deductions that reduce your pay below the stated contract wage; but will not reduce your pay below Federal or State Minimum Wage, whichever is higher. FICA, State and Federal taxes will not be deducted from those worker's wages that are working under a temporary, agricultural visa, unless it's discovered it is required or if the worker request withholding.

B) Employers guarantee to offer employment for the hourly equivalent of 3/4 of the workdays of the total specified period during which the work contract and all amendments thereof are in effect, beginning with the first workday after the workers' arrival at the assigned Grower's farm, ready, willing, able, and eligible to work and ending on the expiration date specified in the work contract and all extensions thereof or upon the termination of this employment as provided below. For purposes of this guarantee, a "workday" consists of seven hours Monday-Friday and five hours on Saturday. The worker is not required to work on his Sabbath or on federal holidays which are New Year's Day, January 1; Martin Luther King, Jr.'s birthday, the third Monday in January; Presidents Day, the third Monday in February; Memorial Day, the last Monday in May; Independence Day, July 4; Labor Day, the first Monday in September; Columbus Day, the second Monday in October; Veteran's Day, November 11; Thanksgiving Day, the fourth Thursday in November; and Christmas Day, December 25. On certain of these days, work may be available. If the worker at the conclusion of his work agreement has been afforded less employment opportunity than required under this provision, the worker will be paid at his average hourly rate for the hours, in addition to those actually offered, up to the hourly equivalent of the guaranteed number of days. In determining whether the guarantee of employment has been met, any hours which the Worker fails to work during a workday, when the Employer offers him the opportunity to work, and all hours of work actually performed shall be counted toward meeting this guarantee.

C). This employment guarantee shall be terminated before the end of the Period of Employment if the services of the workers are no longer required for reasons beyond the control of the Employer due to fire, frost, flood, drought, hail, other Act of God (AOG) which makes fulfillment of this contract impossible. (CO will be notified and employer will seek approval for AOG's) In such cases, the employer will make efforts to transfer workers to other comparable employment acceptable to workers. If such transfer is not effective, workers will be returned at Employer's expense to the place from which Worker, without intervening employment, came to work for employer. In the event of such termination, the 3/4-guarantee period ends on the date of termination. The guarantee shall be void from the beginning should the Worker voluntarily abandon this employment before the end of the contract period or in the event the Worker is terminated for a lawful job-related reason, and the employer notifies the NPC, and DHS in the case of an H-2A worker, in writing or by any other method specified by the Department or DHS in a manner specified in a notice published in the Federal Register not later than 2 working days after such abandonment occurs and this will relieve the employer from subsequent transportation and subsistence costs and the 3/4th guarantee.

D). The payroll period shall be weekly. Workers will be paid weekly with a 1 week holding period.

E). Employer will provide a worker referred through the SWA Interstate System forty (40) hours of work for the week beginning with the anticipated date of need, unless the employer has amended the date of need by notifying the local employment service office at least 10 working days prior to the original date of need. If the employer fails to notify the order-holding office, then employer shall pay an eligible worker referred through the interstate clearance system $11.66 per hour for the first week, starting with the original anticipated date of need. 40 hrs x $11.66 = $466.40 gross (before taxes). The employer may require the worker to perform alternative work if the guarantee cited in this section is invoked. If the worker fails to notify the order-holding office of his continuing interest in the job no sooner than nine working days and no later than five working days before the date of need, the worker will be disqualified from the above-mentioned assurance.

F). The Employer will furnish to the worker, on or before each payday one or more written statements showing the worker's total earnings for the pay period, his hourly rate or piece rate (if applicable); the hours of work which have been offered to the worker, the total hours actually worked by the worker, beginning and ending times, an itemization of all deductions made from the worker's wages; the worker's net pay; the employer's name, address and IRS identification number. Employer will abide by all regulations at 20 CFR 655.122(j)(k).

19. Transportation: The Employer will not advance transportation and subsistence costs to Workers for transportation to the place of employment.

This subparagraph applies only to Workers who cannot reasonability return to their residence the same day. After the workers have completed 50% of the work contract. All eligible applicants will have their inbound reasonable transportation expenses reimbursed, one time only. Domestic applicants from outside of the normal commuting distance that voluntary chose not to reside in the employer provided housing, the employer will pay for the initial inbound transportation reimbursement. However, the employer will not reimburse any workers for daily transportation cost whether commuting from inside or outside of the area of intended employment. Employer will not pay for voluntary trips back to their residence due to family emergencies, or vacations.

The amount of such transportation payment will be equal to the Worker's actual transportation costs not to exceed the most economical and reasonable common carrier transportation charges for the distance involved. In lieu of the above payments to the workers for transportation, the employer reserves the right to charter or otherwise arrange to provide for transportation
$12.0 at the employer's election. Subsistence reimbursement shall be $11.86 per day, without producing documentation of actual expenses, or will otherwise be paid as per 20 CFR 655.122(h) only to those employees who are eligible under the H-2A
$51.00 program regulations for subsistence pay. Maximum Amount to be reimbursed with receipts is $46.00. By way of illustration per and not in limitation of the foregoing, the employer will not pay transportation for such worker if he does not have suitable documents to comply with proof of identity and employment eligibility requirements of IRCA, if he is discharged for lawful job-related reasons, if he has knowledge at the place of recruitment that he cannot perform the duties of the job as described above or if he abandons this employment when he is needed by the Grower. If the grower reimburses the worker prior to the 50% date, and the worker is terminated for cause or abandons prior to the 50% date, the grower reserves the right to recapture that reimbursement.

Employer will provide, pay, or reimburse transportation and subsistence under this agreement if the worker is terminated because of work related injury caused by this/these crop activities and is so certified by a doctor acceptable to employer before leaving employers farm, or termination resulting from an Act of God, as outlined in 655.122(o), which makes fulfillment of this contract impossible as provided in paragraph 18C or if the worker is displaced by a U.S. worker under DOL's 50% rule.

Employer will offer free transportation for workers living in employer's housing facility both to and from the daily work site. The use of the transportation by the worker is voluntary; no worker will be required as a condition of employment to utilize the transportation offered by the employer. Workers are free to choose their own means of transportation at their own expense.

. . . appropriate supervisory staff prior to voluntarily terminating their employment to be considered and eligible for exemption to the no complete - no rehire policy.

B). The employer may discipline the worker, including requiring the worker to leave the field ("time out") for a period determined by the foreman, suspension from employment for up to three days, or termination of employment as described in termination (A) above.

C). Employer Obligation if Employment Extended: No extension of employment beyond the Period of Employment specified in the job order shall relieve the Employer from paying the wages already earned, or if specified in the job order as a term of employment, providing return transportation or paying return transportation expenses to the Worker.

D). Employer Notification of Changes in Employment Terms and Conditions: Employers will expeditiously notify the order-holding local office or State agency by email immediately upon learning that a crop is maturing earlier or later, or that weather conditions, over recruitment, or other factors have changed the terms and conditions of employment. The terms of this Work Agreement thereafter may be changed upon posted notice to the Worker.

E). Outreach Workers: Outreach workers shall have reasonable access to the Worker in the conduct of outreach activities pursuant to 20 CFR 653.107 and 20 CFR 653.501.

F). Training: There will be a short demonstration period (up to 1 hr.) to familiarize workers with job specifications, to demonstrate proper methods and other crop specific issues. The employer will not provide separate formal orientation or training periods for each different crop or each different type of task or job assignment covered within the job description. After completion of the training period the employer will expect all workers to possess the skills to work in the production of the crops above. For purposes of this section seven or more hours will be considered one day.

G). Work Agreement: A copy of the contract or Job Clearance Order and work rules (copy attached) will be provided to the worker by the employer no later than on the day the time at which the worker applies for the visa (for foreign workers), or to a worker in corresponding employment no later than when the when employment is offered.

H). Employer agrees to abide by the regulations at 20 CFR 655.135.

I). The employer as a part of positive recruitment as per 20 CFR 655.154 is willing, if and when any substantial number of applicants are available, to coordinate group transportation arrangements (to facilitate their purchase of bus tickets etc.), where appropriate, and to provide any additional information that workers need to coordinate their arrival.

J) We are an equal opportunity employer. Women and minorities are encouraged to apply to these positions.

K). SUBSTANCE ABUSE POLICY: This employer will strive to provide a safe and healthful work environment, free of substance abuse, for the protection of our associates, employees and visitors. The use, possession or being under the influence of illegal drugs or alcohol during working time is prohibited. (Alcohol may be permitted in the housing facility outside work hours.) Employees may also be requested to take random drug tests at no cost to the worker. Workers are subject to random drug testing effective their first date of work. Failure to comply with the request or testing positive will result in immediate termination.

L). Pursuant to 20 CFR 655.135(i)(1), each employee that enters the United States with an H-2A temporary work visa must return at the end of the period listed in this contract and certified by the U.S. Department of Labor or upon separation from the employer, whichever is earlier, unless the employee is being sponsored by another subsequent H-2A employer.

M) Grievance Policy: If any area of your work is causing you concern, you have the responsibility to address your concern with your immediate supervisor. Most problems can and should be solved in discussion with your immediate supervisor; if after these attempts there is no satisfactory resolution, you should bring your concerns to upper management.

This employer strongly urges the reporting of all incidents of discrimination, harassment or retaliation, regardless of the offender's identity or position. Individuals who believe they have experienced any of these or who have concerns about such matters should file their complaints before the conduct becomes severe or pervasive. Individuals should not feel obligated to file their complaints with their immediate supervisor first before bringing the matter to the attention of upper management.

. . . Our goal is to have a work environment where we all treat each other respectfully and professionally. Any unprofessional or disrespectful behavior, even if not illegal, that interferes with that goal and will not be tolerated. The employer reserves the right to respond to inappropriate behavior even where no one has complained or indicated they have been offended

N) The employer is committed to providing a safe, flexible and respectful environment for employees, staff, clients, or anyone you come into contact with on company business, free from all forms of sexual harassment. Any type of sexual harassment is grounds for immediate termination. Sexual harassment is a specific and serious form of harassment. It is defined as: unwelcome sexual behavior, which could be expected to make a person feel offended, humiliated or intimidated. Sexual harassment can be physical, spoken or written. It can include: a) comments about a person's private life or the way they look, b) sexually suggestive behaviour, such as leering or staring, c) brushing up against someone, touching, fondling or hugging, d) sexually suggestive comments or jokes e) displaying offensive screen savers, photos, calendars or objects, f) repeated requests to go out, g) requests for sex, h) sexually explicit emails, text messages or posts on social networking sites.

Just because someone does not object to inappropriate behavior in the workplace at the time, it does not mean that they are consenting to the behavior.

Sexual harassment is covered in the workplace when it happens at work, at work-related events, between people sharing the same workplace, or between colleagues outside of work.

Illegal drugs may not be used or kept on any employer premises, including housing at any time. Use or possession of illegal drugs, failing or refusing to take a drug test will be CAUSE FOR IMMEDIATE TERMINATION.

3. Excessive absences and/or tardiness will not be permitted. Employees are expected to be present, on time, able and willing to perform the assigned work every scheduled workday. This is not sporadic or "day work." Excessive absences are defined as: Two unexcused absences in a 30-day period. Five consecutive days of unexcused absences is considered abandonment of their position. Violation will be CAUSE FOR IMMEDIATE TERMINATION. Workers must report at assigned time and place each workday as directed by the grower or supervisor. WORKERS WILL BE DISCHARGED FOR EXCESSIVE TARDINESS. Excessive tardiness is defined as 2 unexcused tardies in a row or 5 unexcused tardies in a period of thirty days.

4. Workers who reside in such housing agree to be responsible for maintaining the housing in a neat and clean manner, allowing for reasonable wear and tear. Workers shall cooperate with other workers assigned to such housing in maintaining common kitchen and living areas in good condition. Workers will be required to keep the exterior area surrounding the camp clean and clear of debris. Workers shall promptly report any problems with housing to the employer or designated supervisor.

5. Workers living in employer's housing assigned to bunk beds may not separate bunk beds, as floor space in sleeping rooms is needed by all occupants.

6. Workers living in employer's housing may not cook in sleeping rooms or any other non-kitchen areas. Workers are forbidden from removing batteries from smoke detectors for any reason. VIOLATION WILL BE CAUSE FOR IMMEDIATE TERMINATION.

7. Workers must not drop paper, cans, bottles and other trash in fields, packing house, or on housing premises. Trash and waste receptacles must be used.

8. Workers may not take unauthorized breaks from work. This includes personal calls during work hours.

9. Workers may not leave the field or other assigned work area without permission of farmer or person in charge.

10. Workers may not enter employer's premises without authorization.

11. Workers may not begin work prior to scheduled starting time or continue working after stopping time unless authorized by the employer.

12. Workers living in employer's housing may not have guests in housing premises after 9:00 p.m. except on Saturday night on which guest hour's end at 12:00 a.m. No persons, other than workers assigned by employer to a room, may sleep in any room.

JOSEPH MARINO, having been duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

- - - - -

BY MR. GLICK:

Q. Good morning, Mr. Marino.

A. Good morning.

Q. Thank you for bearing with us this morning as we resolved some of these matters, I appreciate you coming here today.

As I previously introduced myself, my name is Jason Glick. I represent the Secretary of Labor in Sun Valley Orchards, LLC, case number 2017-TAE-00003. And I represent the Administrator of the US Department of Labor Wage and Hour Division in a case called in re: Agustin Hernandez, case number 2017-MSP-00002.

And we're here today for the deposition of both yourself, Mr. Joseph Marino, and of the corporation, Sun Valley Orchards, LLC.

As I'm sure your counsel has explained, I'm going to ask you questions today. It's very important that you respond verbally so that the court reporter can record your responses. Do you understand?

A. Yes.

Q. It's also very important that you understand my questions. So if anything that I say is unclear or you would like me to -- if you don't understand a question, will you let me know that?

A. Yes.

Q. If you answer a question, I will assume that you understood the question. Do you understand?

A. Yes.

Q. If you need a break, please let me know and I'll make every effort to accommodate you promptly. If we're in the middle of a question, however, I'm going to ask that you finish my question before we break.

During the deposition today, I will use the term "Sun Valley" to refer to Sun Valley Orchards LLC. Do you understand?

A. Yes.

Q. When I refer to a worker in the United States on an H-2A visa, I'm going to say

H-2A worker. Do you understand?

A. Yes.

Q. When I refer to an agricultural worker in the US without an H-2A visa, I'm going to say either a domestic worker or a non-H-2A worker, do you understand?

A. Yes.

Q. Unless I specify otherwise, I'll be asking you questions about year 2015. Do you understand?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you understand that you're under oath today and must answer questions truthfully and to the best of your ability?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you understand that's the same oath that you would swear in court?

A. Yes.

Q. Because it's critical to get your full, complete and accurate answers, I have to ask, are you taking any medication or drugs of any kind or have you consumed any cough syrup or medicine that might make it difficult for you to understand and answer my questions today?

A. No.
Q. Is there any reason that you cannot truthfully answer my questions today?
A. No.
Q. Have you ever been deposed before?
A. Yes.
Q. How many times?
A. Once.
Q. What kind of proceeding was that?
A. I'm not sure what to call it.
Q. What was the case about?
A. That involved a previous driver that worked for us.
Q. Have you ever --
A. Separate company.
Q. Was that a case regarding something at Sun Valley?
A. No.
Q. Have you ever been deposed in connection with your work at Sun Valley?
A. No.
Q. Have you ever been involved in any other civil legal proceeding?
A. No.
Q. When did you learn about this lawsuit?

A. When he came and dropped it on my desk. I forget his name.

Q. Let the record reflect the witness indicated Mr. Steven Risko.

What's your understanding of the nature of this lawsuit?

A. I'm not sure.

Q. Do you understand what this lawsuit is about?

A. No.

Q. Do you speak Spanish?

A. No.

Q. Do you understand any Spanish?

A. Very little.

Q. Do you use any Spanish in your work at Sun Valley?

A. No.

Q. I know you said very little, is there anything more you can explain about how much Spanish you understand?

A. I took two years of Spanish in school.

Q. Do you ever hear conversations at Sun Valley in Spanish?

A. Sure.
Q. Do you understand those conversations?
A. No.
Q. Now, in addition to testifying for yourself here today, you're also testifying on behalf of Sun Valley Orchards in this case. Do you understand?
A. Yes.
Q. I will assume that you're answering my questions on behalf of both yourself and on behalf of Sun Valley unless you tell me differently. Do you understand?
A. Yes.
Q. Prior to your deposition today, I provided Mr. Schulte with a list of topics that I would cover with you in this deposition of Sun Valley. Have you seen that list?
A. Yes.

MR. GLICK: I would like to introduce this as Exhibit 13.

(Amended Notice of Deposition marked J. Marino Exhibit 13 for identification.)

despite having considerable additional time to do so. And that Mr. Marino has specifically testified, contrary to counsel's representation, that he is experienced, he owns the company and he has expertise in the company and its operations and is prepared to answer whatever questions counsel raises to him.

And we would object completely to any proposal to reopen the deposition or to ask additional witnesses, particularly, those who have already been made available at considerable time and expense.

BY MR. GLICK:

Q. I have every intention of carrying out the deposition efficiently and I appreciate your willingness to answer my questions today. Mr. Marino, how long have you been at Sun Valley?

A. Since I -- Sun Valley, clarify.

Q. Do you work for Sun Valley?

A. I'm part owner of Sun Valley Orchards, LLC.

Q. How long have you been part owner at Sun Valley Orchards, LLC?

A. Sun Valley Orchards, LLC, it's relatively new. I'm not quite sure of the year.

Q. Have you been part owner of Sun Valley Orchards, LLC since that corporation came into existence?

A. Ask the question again.

Q. Since Sun Valley Orchards, LLC was formed --

A. Yes.

Q. -- have you been part owner at Sun Valley since that time?

A. Yes.

Q. Prior to that time, Sun Valley Orchards had -- scratch that. Were you ever part owner at Marino Brothers?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you become part owner at Marino Brothers?

A. I can't recall. It's a long time ago.

Q. Was it more than ten years ago?

A. Yes.

Q. Were your responsibilities at Marino Brothers the same as your responsibilities at Sun Valley?

A. Yes.

Q. What do you do at Sun Valley?

A. Sales and administrative.

Q. Anything else?

A. I work. Yes, I work, things on the farm. Things, various things that need to be done on the farm, tractor work, any work, anything that needs to be done. I'm primarily, I'm in sales and administrative.

Q. About what percent of your time at Sun Valley do you spend on sales and administrative work?

A. It depends on the time of year.

Q. In 2015, about what percent of your time did you spend on sales and administrative work?

A. It depends on the time of the year.

Q. How would you break down the year?

A. There's the summer season when we're in harvest and the majority of my time is spent in sales. Then there is postharvest and pre harvest where I might be spending most of my time with office, company, end-of-year stuff. Spring season, it's all farmwork.

Q. What months correspond to the preharvest time?

A. January to April.

Q. What about postharvest?

A. October to December.

Q. During the preharvest time, what kind of work do you do in the office?

A. Pre-season sales stuff.

Q. Is there other kind of work you do in the office during pre-season?

A. There's a lot of things I do. There's just no one word answer to give you to encompass all that I do.

Q. Are you --

A. You're inundated every day with different tasks. It's just the way it is when you own a business. There's no big departments. You don't hand things off. So you just do what is needed to be done the day it needs to be done.

Q. You're involved in a lot of things at Sun Valley?

A. Yes.

Q. Anything Sun Valley does that you're not involved in?
A. No.
Q. Are you involved in the payroll for the H-2A workers?
A. To some extent.
Q. Were you involved in 2015 in the payroll for H2 workers?
A. To some extent.
Q. How were you involved?
A. Like I told you, I'm involved with -- I handle most of our IT issues, so the software system that we use, I researched and implemented. I handle questions on that. Help the guys with their iPads and scanners, that type of thing. But I'm not involved in the daily payroll or any of the wages or anything like that.
Q. Are those iPads used to track the hours workers work?
A. Yes.
Q. Is that through the system called PET Tiger?
A. Yes.
Q. Is that the system that Sun Valley used to track workers' hours in 2015?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you tell me more about how Sun Valley used PET Tiger in 2015?

A. It is a software and hardware system that gives you the availability to keep track of your payroll. That's how we used it. Electronically. So that there's no mistakes.

Q. Does it keep track of the amount of pay workers receive?

A. Yes.

Q. Does it keep track of the number of hours Sun Valley's workers work each day?

A. Yes.

Q. Does it keep track of hours Sun Valley offers its workers, but that workers don't work on a given day?

A. Reask the question. I don't understand the question.

Q. Does Sun Valley use PET Tiger to track information about whether a worker does any work on a given day?

A. I still want you to clarify your question, then I'll answer it.

Q. If a worker doesn't perform any work on a given day --

A. Yes.

Q. -- what would the PET Tiger system show about that worker?

A. If he's not there and present to be scanned into a job for the day, he has no hours or work for the day.

Q. Is there any other information in PET Tiger for that worker on a day when he doesn't work?

A. I'm not understanding your question. I'll explain, workers get an ID card. They have a scanner and an iPad runs the software. You show up to work. You scan your ID. You scan your job, whatever it is you're doing for the day. It keeps track of it. If you're not there, there's nobody to scan. So I don't -- I'm not getting your question. It's very simple. You either show up for work or you don't.

Q. And when a worker doesn't show up for work, does Sun Valley record that in any other system?

A. No.

Q. Does Sun Valley record the reason that a worker doesn't show up for work on a given day?

A. No.

Q. In 2015, did Sun Valley record the reason that a worker didn't show up for work on a given day?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Who would know the answer to that question?

A. To what question?

Q. Who would know whether in 2015 if a worker didn't show up for work on a given day, the reason for the worker not showing up was tracked in some system?

A. What do you mean was tracked in some system? You're asking -- reask the question. I don't understand the question.

Q. Besides the PET Tiger, what kind of payroll software did Sun Valley use in 2015?

A. Famous actually prints the paychecks. Famous software is our operating system. PET Tiger is a third-party software system that collects the data that transfers to Famous to print the checks.

Q. So Famous is a system Sun Valley used?

A. That's our operating system. That's our accounting software.

Q. Other than PET Tiger, are there any other sources of information supplied to Famous?

A. Reask the question. I don't -- be more specific.

Q. The information to print the paychecks comes from the Famous system?

A. The information to print the checks is generated by PET Tiger. That information transfers daily to Famous, our accounting system. Famous physically prints the checks. PET Tiger doesn't print paychecks. PET Tiger is a data collection software system. Famous is our operating system, that's our accounting system. It runs our general ledger and everything else, sales, invoicing, accounts receivable, payable.

Q. Did Sun Valley use any other payroll systems in 2015?

A. No.

Q. Did Sun Valley use any other systems to keep track of the number of hours worked in 2015?

A. No.

Q. Did Sun Valley use any other systems in 2015 to keep track of the reasons why a worker didn't work on any given day?

A. No.

Q. Did Sun Valley keep any other documents of the reasons why a worker didn't work on a given day?

A. I guess that depends. You got to be more specific with your question.

Q. Are there any such documents?

A. Documents for what?

Q. The reasons why in 2015 a worker didn't perform work on a given day.

A. On a given day or a series of days? Be more specific with your question.

Q. Let's take the first one, on a given day.

A. Not to my knowledge. You're talking about an employee that just for whatever reason didn't show up for work for one day?

Q. An employee for whatever reason didn't show up for work in one day, where would you look to see to find out the reason why the worker didn't show up?

A. I don't know the answer to that.

Q. Who would know the answer to that?

A. Agustin or my brother Russ.

Q. What about on any series of days?

A. Again, Agustin on my brother Russ. You had him yesterday.

Q. In 2015, how much did you interact with Sun Valley's H-2A workers?

A. Very little.

Q. About how often?

A. I can't say.

Q. Was it less than once a week?

A. I'm not sure.

Q. In 2015, how often did you -- in 2015, how often were you in the fields while H-2A workers were working in the fields?

A. Very little.

Q. About how often?

A. Be more specific with the question.

Q. Did you talk to workers in the fields in 2015?

A. No. I told you, I don't speak Spanish.

Q. Do any of the Sun Valley's workers speak English?

A. Agustin. That's the only one, to my knowledge.

Q. Did you understand any conversations that you overheard in 2015 in the fields?

A. No.

Q. What about Sun Valley's non-H-2A workers in the fields, did you understand any of those conversations in 2015?

A. Again, I'm not bilingual, no.

Q. Who decided that Sun Valley would participate in the H-2A program?

A. We all did.

Q. Who does that include?

A. Myself, my brother, Russell, Jr., my father, Russell, Sr., my Uncle Harry.

Q. Why did you all decide to participate in the H-2A program?

A. Because there's not an available domestic supply of labor to do the type of work that's needed on the farm.

Q. Sun Valley used a company called NAC to help submit paperwork to participate in the H-2A program, right?

A. I'm not sure of the acronym, my brother deals with that company and if that is the same, is that Theresa's? I don't, I can't, I can't tell by the acronym. I don't know.

Q. There's a company, there's a person named Theresa.

A. With the company that we deal with, I believe, I believe her name is Theresa.

Q. Do you know the name of that company?

A. No, not off the top of my head.

Q. Who supplied information to that company from Sun Valley?

A. What company?

Q. The company Theresa works for, who supplied information to that company?

A. My brother, Russell.

Q. Did anyone else supply information to that company?

A. No.

Q. Were you personally involved in submitting any information to that company?

A. No.

Q. Were you personally involved in Sun

Valley hiring any H-2A workers to work in 2015?

A. No.

Q. Were you personally involved in Sun Valley hiring any non-H-2A workers to work in 2015?

A. No.

Q. The workers who worked at Sun Valley in 2015 who were none H-2A workers, were you personally involved in hiring them in any previous years?

A. No.

Q. Who decided how many hours of work to list on the job offers in the H-2A program in 2015?

A. I'm not sure.

Q. Who would know?

A. My brother Russ.

Q. In 2015, who at Sun Valley decided how many hours workers worked each day?

A. I'm not sure.

Q. Who would know?

A. Russ.

Q. In 2015, did workers have a choice of how many hours to work each day?

A. I can't answer that.

Q. Why not?
A. I don't, I don't deal with that. Russ could answer that question.
Q. Did you take any efforts to find out the answer to that question before today?
A. No.
Q. Who hires the workers at Sun Valley?
A. Again, you have to ask Russ.
Q. Why is that?
A. How can I say this? How can I say this in a nice way? He, in our company, is in charge of this H-2A program and the whole process and dealing with the company that we use. And he works in conjunction with Agustin and that's how it happens. I don't have a hand in it. So that's, I have my own issues. I have my own responsibilities that I don't inundate him and my other two partners with. We have our own responsibilities.
Q. In 2015, did Sun Valley offer rides to workers to purchase groceries at a nearby town?
A. I believe so. You've got to ask Russ.

Q. Did Sun Valley ever provide workers with meals?
A. No.
Q. Is there a kitchen at Sun Valley?
A. Yes.
Q. Does someone prepare meals in those kitchens?
A. I think so.
Q. Who is that?
A. Agustin.
Q. Did Agustin provide, prepare meals in those kitchens in 2015?
A. Ask Agustin.
Q. In 2015, did Agustin prepare meals in the kitchens?
A. Ask Agustin. I'm not Agustin. I'm not answering on Agustin's behalf. You had him Monday.
Q. Mr. Marino, do you know if Agustin prepared meals in Sun Valley's kitchen in 2015?
A. I believe he did. You have to ask him.
Q. Did you enter the kitchen in 2015?
A. Nope.
Q. Did you ever enter the working eating area in 2015?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever enter the Sun Valley's worker housing camp in 2015?

A. I drive by it. I don't enter it.

Q. In 2015, you didn't enter the worker housing camp?

A. No.

Q. Have you ever spoken with Agustin Hernandez about the kitchen at Sun Valley?

A. Yes.

Q. When was that?

A. I don't recall.

Q. Do you remember any times you have spoken with Agustin Hernandez about the kitchen at Sun Valley?

A. Just when we've had company meetings where we bring him in and talk about things and season and --

Q. At those meetings, do you remember anything you discussed with Agustin Hernandez about meals at Sun Valley?

A. No. I don't understand the question.

Q. There were meetings at Sun Valley that you participated in?

A. Sure.

Q. Agustin Hernandez was at some of those meetings?

A. Sure.

Q. Did you ever discuss meals at Sun Valley with --

A. Meals, no.

Q. Did he ever discuss meals at Sun Valley at those meetings?

A. Nope.

Q. At any of the meetings that you've held at Sun Valley where Agustin Hernandez was present, did anyone discuss the kitchen at Sun Valley with him?

A. Yes.

Q. What was discussed at that meeting?

A. The shape of the kitchen. If the stoves are adequate. Just the overall condition of the facility.

Q. Anything else about the kitchen?

A. We provide the facility and we have nothing to do with it after that. It's not our -- it's not -- it's nothing to do with us.

Q. When you say facility, what does

Sun Valley provide?

A. We provide free housing and we provide a kitchen. Pay all the utilities and that's it.

Q. Does Sun Valley provide any of the equipment in the kitchen?

A. I think we did, yeah. I think we bought everything, the stoves, we -- we provided all that.

Q. What else in the kitchen did Sun Valley provide?

A. I'm not sure. I don't know all that's in there. I don't even know.

Q. So when you discussed the kitchen at Sun Valley with Agustin Hernandez, what did you discuss?

A. You asked if I was present at discussions, I said yes. What was discussed, I don't remember. I don't know. I told you overall condition of the facilities. That's my answer.

Q. Do you remember anything about what was discussed in the meetings with Agustin Hernandez at Sun Valley about the kitchen?

A. No.

Q. Did Sun Valley change anything about the way the kitchen operated in 2015?
A. Not to my knowledge.
Q. Does Sun Valley give Agustin Hernandez any instructions about how to operate the kitchen?
A. No.
Q. Did Sun Valley set any rules for how Agustin Hernandez ran the kitchen?
A. No.
Q. Sun Valley paid some money in 2013 because of a US Department of Labor audit?
MR. SCHULTE: Objection. Are you asking or testifying?
BY MR. GLICK:
Q. Do you know if Sun Valley paid money in 2013 because of a US Department of Labor audit?
A. No.
Q. Do you know if Sun Valley ever paid money because US Department of Labor audit determined that workers were overcharged for their meals?
A. No.
Q. In 2015, were Sun Valley's H-2A

A. My brother, Russ.
Q. Anyone else?
A. Not to my knowledge.
Q. Who at the payroll office would be informed about that kind of problem?
A. Lisa.
Q. Is that Lisa Justice?
A. Yes.
Q. Anyone else at Sun Valley keep track of those kinds of problems in the payroll office?
A. No.
Q. Does anyone else work in the payroll office at Sun Valley?
A. No.
Q. A minute ago, you mentioned Sun Valley's records. What kinds of records does Sun Valley have of the hours H-2A workers worked in 2015?
A. Whatever PET Tiger is capable of.
Q. Does Sun Valley use any systems other than PET Tiger to keep track of the hours H-2A workers worked in 2015?
A. No.
Q. Does PET Tiger keep track of the time of day that a worker clocked in?

A. Yes.
Q. Does PET Tiger keep track of the time of day that a worker clocked out?
A. Yes.
Q. PET Tiger is an electronic system?
A. Yes.
Q. What kinds of reports can be run from that PET Tiger system?
A. I'm not sure. I don't use it daily.
Q. Who uses the PET Tiger system?
A. Lisa.
Q. Does Sun Valley currently have information from 2015 about the hours workers worked in 2015?
A. Reask the question.
Q. Does Sun Valley still have information in PET Tiger about the hours workers worked in 2015?
A. Yeah.
Q. About the pay workers received in 2015?
A. Yes.
Q. Does Sun Valley have records from 2015 about which days workers didn't work?

A. No.
Q. Are you familiar with a job order from the H-2A program in 2015 at Sun Valley?
A. No.
Q. Do you know whether the workers at Sun Valley in 2015 were guaranteed the opportunity to work a certain number of hours?
A. Oh yeah, I know that, yes.
Q. Can you tell me about your understanding of that guarantee in 2015 for the H-2A workers?
A. There's a guarantee that needs to be met. And it's -- I don't know what it is.
Q. Do you know if the guarantee is broken down at all by weeks or months or days?
A. I don't know. I just know that there's a guarantee.
Q. How does Sun Valley keep track of whether workers have been offered the number of hours under that guarantee?
A. Through the payroll software.
Q. How does Sun Valley use that payroll software to keep track?
A. You could pick an employee and run his work history. It will generate reports and they got all the reports they wanted. It generates reports until you can't read them no more.

Q. What specific information would that work history show?

A. I don't know, whatever you ask it to show. I don't know. I don't use it. I don't use it. I just know that it can do it.

Q. Do you know if it can show the number of hours a worker worked in a particular day?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know if it shows the reason why a worker didn't work a certain day?

A. Reask the question. I don't know why you keep going back to this, because it's -- like it's not relevant. Reask the question, because I don't understand it.

Q. PET Tiger can run reports?

A. Yes.

Q. Someone from Sun Valley can use PET Tiger to run a report?

A. Yes.

Q. That report would show information about work that the H-2A workers in 2015 did at Sun Valley?

A. Yes.

Q. That report would show -- that kind of report could show the number of hours that a given worker worked in 2015 at Sun Valley?

A. Yes.

Q. Could that report show any information about why a worker didn't work on a given day?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Who would know that?

A. No idea.

Q. If you wanted to find that out, who would you ask?

A. Russ.

Q. In 2015, did Sun Valley take any steps to determine whether any of its workers were owed money in relation to the three-quarters guarantee?

A. I don't understand your question.

Q. In 2015, did Sun Valley take any steps to figure out whether any workers had met the three-quarters guarantee?

A. I'm sorry, explain that again.

the typed information in Exhibit 8?

A. I do not know, no. You'd have to ask Russ. His name is clearly on it, so I hope you asked him yesterday.

Q. If Agustin Hernandez testified that you personally posted Exhibit 8 at Sun Valley, how would you respond?

MR. SCHULTE: Objection, that's actually not at all what Agustin Hernandez testified to, so that's a hypothetical.

BY MR. GLICK:

Q. Did you personally post Exhibit 8 at Sun Valley?

A. No. No.

Q. You're not involved in maintaining the housing at Sun Valley?

A. No.

Q. You're not involved in inspecting the housing camp at Sun Valley?

A. Nope.

Q. Preparing the housing facility at Sun Valley?

A. No.

Q. You're not involved in inspecting the bathrooms at the working housing camp at Sun Valley?

A. No, no, no.

Q. You're not involved in the transport of workers between the housing camp and the fields at Sun Valley?

A. No.

Q. You're not involved in maintaining those vehicles?

A. No.

Q. You're not involved in overseeing who drives those vehicles?

A. No.

Q. Sun Valley employs a mechanic named Leonard Fleming?

A. Yes.

Q. Who oversees Leonard Fleming?

A. The owners. We all do. He's an employee of us. He has no mechanic boss.

Q. Do you ever assign work to Leonard Fleming?

A. Sure.

Q. What kinds of work do you assign him?

A. Things that need to be fixed.

A. You've got to ask my brother. That's him. Not me.

Q. Mr. Marino, I'm showing you a document that I would like to have marked as Exhibit 19.

- - - - -

(Insurance Policy marked J. Marino Exhibit 19 for identification.)

- - - - -

BY MR. GLICK:

Q. Do you recognize Exhibit 19?

A. It looks like it's from our insurance company.

Q. Sun Valley insures the vehicles that it owns?

A. Yes, we do.

Q. Who at Sun Valley is in charge of making sure that the vehicles are insured?

A. My mother.

Q. What's your mother's name?

A. Judith Marino.

Q. Is your mother an owner at Sun Valley?

A. No.

Q. Is she an employee of Sun Valley?

A. Yes.
Q. Does he have a job title?
A. Yeah, she's the glue that keeps it all together. She's accounts receivable and all of this administrative stuff, vans and titles and insurance. And so it's a very big, very big responsibility for my mother. She's got a lot of stuff to keep straight.
Q. The US Department of Labor previously cited Sun Valley for problems with some of the tire treads on some of its vehicles. Do you know about that?
A. No.
Q. Who would know about that?
A. Russ.
Q. Do you know what steps Sun Valley took to address the tire tread problems that the US Department of Labor found in a previous investigation?
A. Russ would.
Q. Do you know?
A. No. See, when they come, they meet with him. And then he gets the findings, whatever it is, the nitpicky stuff that they find and it gets addressed, but Russ addresses it. Russ handles it. So again, I'll reiterate that, it's my brother. So I hoped you asked him yesterday.

Q. There was some groups of workers who left Sun Valley early in 2015?

A. Be more specific.

MR. SCHULTE: The testimony was that there was a group of workers, we covered this earlier.

THE WITNESS: Yeah.

BY MR. GLICK:

Q. Was there a group of workers who Sun Valley laid off in 2015?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you personally involved in the decision to lay those workers off?

A. Yeah, we all discuss it. We all discuss what was going on in our business.

Q. Can you tell me more about the circumstances that led to the layoff of those workers?

A. We had a crop disaster. We lost our pepper crop. We had nothing left to pick. Nothing left to pick. There's no work. So we determined we had to let people go. And we made sure that their contracts were fulfilled for the guys that were laid off. That's the end of that. There's no work. It's a disaster.

Q. Those workers who were laid off in 2015, did they sign forms before they left?

A. I don't know. Because I don't get involved in any of that after the fact. That's my brother. That's the agent that we used to make sure that we follow everything that is supposed to be followed, to do what we're supposed to do. I'm not involved in that.

Q. Who was involved in determining whether the workers who were laid off received the three-quarters guarantee?

A. Russ and Lisa. We ran detailed reports like you're putting in front of my face to determine that they actually worked the time before anybody was laid off. Because none of us want to be sitting here. You can bet that. None of us. You might think we do coming in our office throwing this stuff at us, but we don't. That's why we spend what we spend. That's why we hired the consultant and we ask questions and we do, but we were advised to

ALEIDA PENTLAND, having been duly sworn, translated the following questions from English to Spanish and Spanish to English as needed as follows:

- - - - -

AGUSTIN HERNANDEZ, having been duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

- - - - -

BY MR. GLICK:

Q. Good morning. My name is Jason Glick. With me today is Jacob Heyman-Kantor and we represent the Secretary of Labor in the case called in re: Sun Valley Orchards, 2017-TAE-00003. And we represent the administrator of the Wage and Hour Division in the case called in re: Agustin Hernandez, 2017-MSP-00002.

Mr. Hernandez, as I'm sure Mr. Schulte has explained, I'm going to ask you some questions today. And it's very important that you respond verbally so that the court reporter will be able to record your answers.

I just want to clarify, the witness has been sworn in, right?

THE COURT REPORTER: Yes.

BY MR. GLICK:

Q. It is also very important that you understand my questions this morning. I would like you to let me know if there's anything that you don't understand so that I can rephrase it. Do you understand that?

A. Yes.

Q. And I'm going to be asking you questions in English to start. And my understanding is that that's the language that you prefer to take this deposition in; is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. As you know, we have an interpreter with us this morning who can translate between English and Spanish. Do you understand?

A. Yes.

Q. And if there's any time when you prefer that I ask -- that my question be translated into Spanish, will you just let me know that, please?

A. Yes, I will.

Q. And if you answer in Spanish, then we will have the answer interpreted from Spanish to English.

Now, it's very important that we, for the transcript, that the deposition be conducted in one language at a time. Do you understand?

A. Yes.

Q. If you need a break, please let me know and I'll make every effort to accommodate you.

A. Okay.

Q. So if I am in the middle of a question, I will prefer that we finish the question and the answer before taking a break.

A. Okay.

Q. In order for the transcript to be clear, it's also very important that I finish my question before you begin your answer.

A. Okay.

Q. And so even if it seems pretty clear what my question is going to be, I will ask that you allow me to finish before answering.

A. Okay.

Q. Now, during the deposition today, I'll use the term "Sun Valley" to refer to the farm called Sun Valley Orchards. Do you understand?

A. Yes.

Q. And I may refer to a worker in the US on an H2 visa as an H-2A worker. Do you understand?

A. Yes.

Q. Unless I specify otherwise, I'm going to be asking you questions about the year 2015 today. Do you understand?

A. Yes.

Q. And we're going to be using exhibits today for the depositions later this week. So if I could ask that counsel, if you could bring the exhibits back for later this week so we can save on copies.

MR. SCHULTE: Sure.

BY MR. GLICK:

Q. Mr. Hernandez, do you understand that you're under oath today and must answer my questions truthfully?

A. Yes, I understand.

Q. And that you must answer my questions to the best of your ability, do you understand?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you understand that that is the same oath that you would swear in court?

A. Yes.

Q. And I'm going to ask the following, because it's critical that we receive full and complete answers today. So I would like to ask, have you taken any medication or drugs of any kind that would make it difficult for you to understand my questions today?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Have you taken any medication or drugs that would make it difficult for you to answer my questions today?

A. No.

Q. Have you consumed any alcohol that might make it difficult for you to answer my questions today?

A. No.

Q. Is there any reason that you cannot truthfully answer my questions today?

A. No.

Q. Have you ever been deposed?

A. Yes. Yes, I did.
Q. Who did you prepare with?
MR. SCHULTE: Objection.
Assumes facts not in evidence.
BY MR. GLICK:
Q. Did you prepare for this deposition with anybody else?
A. No, but the lawyer.
Q. Did you review any documents in preparing for the deposition?
A. No.
Q. In 2015, did you work for Sun Valley?
A. Yes.
Q. What kind of work did you do for Sun Valley?
A. I do, I'm a crew chief and my job is to make sure everything gets done right with the workers in the field. I'm in charge of that.
Q. And what does being a crew chief involve?
A. In the field, showing the guys, teaching the guys how to do jobs, how to work. And at the camp, make sure everything is okay.

The meals, like I -- I'm in charge of that too.

Q. Is there anything else that your work at Sun Valley in 2015 involved?

A. No, other than that, no.

Q. Were you involved in arranging the transportation of Sun Valley's workers between the camp and the fields?

A. No. Well, there is the vans from the company, the buses from the company and I taught them how to use them and I, I send them to the field. That's it.

Q. Were you involved in distributing paychecks to Sun Valley's workers?

A. No. No.

Q. Were you involved in hiring Sun Valley's workers?

A. No. No, the H-2A workers, no.

Q. Any other workers?

A. They, they called me and to, to, I don't know if it's called to hire, if it's called, they make me hire the guys, but they sometimes, most of the times, they call me to look for an opportunity to come. And I make a list of the guys I want or the guys I pick and then I hand it to the office and they send it to the -- this office. That's it. That's all I do. Make a list of the guys that I want.

Q. Are there any documents that describe what your role at Sun Valley is?

A. No, there are -- I don't know. I don't know.

Q. Is there anything that would help you find out?

A. Yes.

Q. What would that be?

A. Well, I would need to ask them, some kind of proofs. I don't know.

Q. Do you have an employment contract between you and Sun Valley?

A. No.

Q. Do you have any kind of contract agreement between you and Sun Valley?

A. No. Not writing, not writing. We did that verbally, you know.

Q. Who did you discuss that with?

A. With all of them, but first with one of the oldest guys. It was like what, like 20 years ago, so I have been working for them for 27 years. So I mean, you know, that's why they keep me here with them.

Q. Has the kind of work you've done for Sun Valley changed over those 27 years?

A. It changed, it changed the way that we hire, we get the people and the H-2A, but the work don't change, don't change much.

Q. In 2015, do you remember what month the farm workers arrived at Sun Valley?

A. It was sometime in April.

Q. Before April, in 2015, what kind of work did you do for Sun Valley?

A. Trim, before April, trimming trees, peach trees.

Q. Did you personally trim peach trees?

A. Yes. Yes, sure.

Q. Was there other work that you did in 2015 before April for Sun Valley?

A. Just trimming, just trim peach trees. We started out in March I'll say.

Q. Could you tell me about how you teach the farm workers to do their work?

A. I show them personally, I do the job a little bit, I show them how to do it. And like how they have to do it and then they keep going. And I check them if they are doing good or not, everything right or not. But I do it all myself.

Q. Is that how you taught those workers in 2015?

A. Yes. Yes, I showed them. I showed them the job and I work with them for, you know, when they stay there.

Q. How do you know if the workers are doing a good job or not?

A. Oh, because like in April, we are picking, cutting asparagus like now and they are just working, they leave the good ones and they don't cut the weeds. They have to pick the right ones, right. So I told them, look, this is good. This is not. This is brush.

Q. How do you tell them whether their work is good or not?

A. I don't know, when the guy, when one guy is coming willing to work, he does the right thing the first time. And some of them, they don't want to do it or they don't like it and they start to walk and leave a lot of vegetables or whatever or they are just talking or they're standing or I don't know. It is when I see one guy is not good, but I never say he's not good. I just say he don't want to do his job right. And that's when sometimes I talk to him, you know, about this job, he likes it or not.

Q. In 2015, were there workers who did a bad job picking asparagus?

A. There were some, like always every year that happen.

Q. And in 2015, how did you respond to that?

A. There were some guys that they didn't like to do the job. They didn't like it.

Q. And what did you do?

A. Nothing, I just kept them, kept them, that year I worked hard. That year, I worked more, harder than all the years, because I was helping and helping, you know, to help out the guys with the other guys. And working with them together and be patient with them. I was patient with them all the time.

Q. How did you help them?

A. Cutting, I got my knife and I cut with them.

Q. Did anyone supervise your work in the asparagus fields?

A. My boss. When something, when something is wrong, when we cut wrong, we do, we don't do the job right, they see it in the packing house is when they come and supervise.

Q. And who is it in the packing house who says it?

A. It's Russ, Russell. Russell, one of the -- Russ Marino, Russ Marino.

Q. Is that Russ Marino, Jr.?

A. Yeah, junior, yeah. And when it's wrong, when something is wrong, one of them will come to the field and they'll start to work and supervise it.

Q. Other Russ Marino, Jr., are there other bosses who would come to the field and supervise?

A. Harry Marino. Harry Marino. He's Russ' uncle.

Q. Anyone else?

A. No. Because the father, but he don't go to the field.

Q. What's the father's name?

A. Russell, Russell, Sr.

Q. Does Joe Marino come to the field to supervise?

A. Once in a while. Very rare.

Q. How often?

A. Like when something is wrong, maybe twice a season maybe. He never, he never go out to the field.

Q. How often does Russell Marino, Jr. come to the field?

A. He comes more often, maybe once or twice a week.

Q. How often does Harry Marino come to the field to supervise?

A. When something was wrong, last year it was, he went like the first weeks, he went like a couple of times. And then maybe a couple of times a week.

Q. In 2015, how often did Harry Marino come to the fields to supervise?

A. He always come to the field, don't go through the, you know, through the field and walk. Only when something is really wrong. Which never, almost never happened.

Q. In 2015, how did the Marinos find out if there was something wrong?

A. All the packing house, they see in Like supervising is like 100 percent. Because I supervise everybody in the field. It's my job.

Q. Do you also spend time making sure the camp at Sun Valley is okay?

A. Yes, because I go back and forth. The fields are close by and I go back and forth.

Q. Do you spend more time making sure the camp is okay?

A. No. No. I spend more time in the fields.

Q. What does keeping -- what does making sure the camp is okay involve?

A. It looks clean, to be clean. Outside, outside the trash, especially the bathrooms, because there's a lot of people in the bathrooms. It's a mess. So I have to, I have to leave one of the guys, one of my workers, they stay every morning, you know, to clean it up. And then I come to supervise and then I come back to the field.

Q. What camp is that?

A. What camp, the one we have on Route 45, 1321 Route 45.

Q. Did anyone tell you that it was your job to make sure that the camp at Route 45 was clean?

A. No, I know it this is my job. So my boss don't have to come to the camp and say, oh, you have a lot of trash or it's dirty or when the inspector, the state inspectors come, they inspect and they told me what need to be done and then I know what I need to fix. So it's they, you know, in good condition all the time. And I know, I know my job. I know that I have to do that. It's part of my job.

Q. In 2015, did anyone at Sun Valley supervise you in maintaining the camp clean?

A. The state, the state inspector came and when the fellow inspector, when the labor department came, they saw, they saw too maybe. When I have a hundred guys there, it's not shining, but it's clean.

Q. Did Russell Marino supervise you in keeping the camp clean in 2015?

A. Yes, at one time in the beginning.

Q. Was that Russell Marino, Jr.?

A. Yes.

Q. And how did he supervise you at that time?

A. Because I asked him to get all the paint and all that I was going to need. He brought me all I needed to paint, to fix. And then he came and looked and that's it.

Q. Did any of the Marinos supervise you --

A. No.

Q. -- keeping the camp clean?

A. No.

Q. I believe you told me before that the company has vans that are used to transport workers between the camp and the fields; is that right?

A. Right.

MR. SCHULTE: Objection. That wasn't his testimony. He said the company provides it.

THE WITNESS: They're the company's buses. They provide the transportation, I don't.

BY MR. GLICK:

Q. Is that transportation between the camp at 1321 Route 45 and Sun Valley's fields?

A. Yes.

Q. Who drives those vans?
A. Different guys. I mean there are some guys, they are drivers and they got the -- I asked them if they have the license even for Mexico and when they told me they -- I let them drive the van. Or somebody that I trust.
Q. So you decide who drives those vans?
A. Sometimes.
Q. Who else?
A. Nobody else.
Q. Does anyone from Sun Valley supervise you in determining who drives the vans?
A. Russ Marino. He, sometimes he told me that, that I had to look to be sure that the guys had the license and they have to be a driver. That's all he asked me.
Q. Was that Russell Marino, Jr.?
A. Yes.
Q. When did he tell you that?
A. He told me that every year before we start, before we get the guys.
Q. What was the first year that he told you that?

A. I don't remember. It's a long time ago. About every year he told me that. Maybe, I don't know, since he start to be more focused on the job, he was like, I don't know, maybe ten years ago.

Q. Was anyone else from Sun Valley involved in determining who drove the vans?

A. No.

Q. And in 2015, were you in charge of meals at Sun Valley?

A. Yes.

Q. Could you tell me about that?

A. Yes. When, when I knew that the H2 workers they were going to come to work. I talked to Russ about that, how we want to charge them. Because I hear in other camps that they got their own little camps, you know, and they cook their own meal. But like in this company, we have only one big kitchen. So, so for everybody to go and cook in that same facility is not, you know, it's a mess. It can't be. So he told me that we can, you know, keep the way we were doing, you know, charging the guys, collecting from the guys, but he told me to make, to be in charge for that and like

I, I talked to the guys about that when they first came, about, you know, everybody go in one kitchen and you know, it's not possible for them to cook everybody. So I hire the cookers, you know, the cookers in there and they, everybody agreed. They thought that was a good idea. And we, we keep, we kept doing that. So I, I charge, we charge -- I charge $80 a week. I collect the money from them. And then I am in charge for buying everything and pay the cookers.

Q. Did the meal plan work the same way in 2014?

A. Yes. No. No, no. The 2014 behind, they -- almost the same, but they pay less, because the company pays, used to pay the cookers, two persons in the kitchen. So they pay, they pay less money. They pay less money. But I was in charge for buying, went to the grocery store and you know, supply, buy all the supplies.

Q. When did the meal plan at Sun Valley start?

MR. SCHULTE: Objection to calling it a meal plan at Sun Valley.

THE WITNESS: I have been in the kitchen for quite a bit years and I have been doing like that every year. So it has been like, I don't know, over ten years.

BY MR. GLICK:

Q. How did that arrangement start?

A. Again, since we start to get a lot of people, they didn't have the facilities to, for everybody to cook, so we have only one big kitchen. And always I talk to the guys about, you know, getting, getting, paying the kitchen or they can, you know, get food from outside.

Q. Did you discuss that arrangement with any of the Marinos?

A. Yes.

Q. Who?

A. Harry, Russ.

Q. Was that Russ?

A. Russ, Jr.

Q. When did you have that first conversation?

A. A long time ago. I think we started, we opened the kitchen, first opened the kitchen like in 1995 or six. I don't remember. Since we start doing that, you know, for the guys to pay, to pay me, to pay us -- to pay me for to cook the meals, a long time ago.

Q. And in those conversations with Sun Valley with the Marinos about the meal plan, what did you discuss?

A. Nothing, just about how much I was going to charge and that's it.

Q. Did they tell you that you should charge the workers?

A. No.

Q. Did you ask if you could charge the workers?

A. No, no, I didn't ask. I know that I have to collect the money to buy food.

Q. Who decided that there would be a charge to the workers for the meal plan?

A. Who decided? I think me. It was me, I talked to them and we both agree and I charge the guys.

Q. Who did you talk to?

A. I think at that time, it was Harry I think. Harry Marino.

Q. Did you talk about how much to charge the workers?

A. No. I told them how much I was charging, but I never, you know, because this is how, how the expenses work, you know, like I buy everything and then it's more or less about how much it comes to.

Q. How is the amount of the meal plan charge determined?

A. Based on how much I spent in the grocery store and how much I'm paying the cookers. And then Russ Marino, he give me, I don't know what you call it, it's a limit that I don't -- we don't have to pay -- they don't have to pay more. It was a limit of the money, I don't know if you understand. It's a limit. And based on that, you know, it's more or less what it comes to.

Q. Tell me about that limit.

A. Russ Marino showed me one -- some notice from, I don't know where he got it, it says, like it's a rule or like a law or, I don't know. The workers don't have to pay more than 80, I think he said 80, $83 per week or so much per meal.

Q. When did Russell Marino show you that notice?

A. Last year.
Q. In 2016?
A. Uh-huh.
Q. Before 2016, did any of the Marinos tell you that there was a limit on how much the workers could be charged for meals?
A. No, no, before 2016 and 2015, no, it was in 2015 he give me that notice. But before, no. Before '15, no.
Q. In 2015, about how many hours a day did you spend at Sun Valley doing work related to the meals?
A. I don't know, I go back and forth. Maybe, when I was busy, maybe a couple of hours. And when I was not at work, I was in the kitchen. Like when it's slow or it's raining or I don't work, I spend the day in the kitchen.
Q. Whom did you recruit to work at Sun Valley in 2015?
MR. SCHULTE: Objection. Facts not in evidence. Object to the form. You haven't shown that he recruited anybody.

BY MR. GLICK:

Q. Do you understand the question?

A. No. Who do I recruit?

Q. Did you hire anyone to work at Sun Valley in 2015?

A. No, no.

Q. Did you call anyone on the telephone about working at Sun Valley in 2015?

A. No.

Q. Did anyone call you on the telephone about working at Sun Valley in 2015?

A. Yeah, a few guys, a few guys.

Q. Tell me about that.

A. When they found out we were starting to work with a visa, a few guys that they know or they hear, they call me. There is an opportunity to come. This only was, I don't know, maybe ten guys. I don't remember.

Q. Did you make a list of those people?

A. No.

Q. What is the list of workers that you sent to the office?

A. Sent to the office? Oh, the list to recruit the people or what I --

Q. Tell me about the list to recruit the people.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Could you explain the list to recruit the people, please.

A. Uh-huh. Yes. I just write the names and I told them to send me the copy of his passport. And the telephone number for them. And I send it to the office. They sent it to the other office. That's all I do.

Q. Were those H-2A workers?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you help Sun Valley find any non-H-2A workers to work at Sun Valley in 2015?

A. There were like 20 or 30 guys that were regular, we call regular guys that they were old workers from the years before. And they, they came. They go to Florida. They go to North Carolina. And then they came back, you know, seasonal workers. And then before, because we weren't sure, we wasn't sure of how many were going to come, so we accept like 30 guys I think, 25, 30 guys, regular guys in 2015.

Q. How did you decide that number of guys?

A. I didn't decide. I didn't decide. They just came, they were the first group of guys that came. And then after we were, we were sure that the H2 guys were coming, we didn't accept no more.

Q. The guys that did come, how did they know to come to Sun Valley in 2015?

A. Because it's, like I say, they were all guys that worked for me years before. And they know, they know when we start. They know what we do. And they start to come. They call me. And I say okay, come.

Q. When do they call you?

A. They start to -- that year, they start to call me in March.

Q. What did you say when they called you?

A. That we were going to need a few guys, but not, not 100 guys. So they hurry up and they came. They came like the end of March. About the end of March, beginning of April they came. They were here when the H2 guys arrived.

Q. Did you tell the non-H-2A guys to

A. No.
Q. Before 2015, did you travel anywhere to find workers for Sun Valley?
A. No.
Q. Before 2015, did you phone anyone to ask them to work at Sun Valley?
A. I think I, I telephone like a couple of friends of mine that they used to work like ten years, 15 years ago with me and I tried to get them and I called them. It's only a couple of friends in my hometown.
Q. What year was that?
A. It was in 2015.
Q. Why did you call them?
A. Why? Oh, because I told them that we were going to have an opportunity to get work, visa workers, if he would like to come, so I could have, you know, put him on the list.
Q. Did they come to work at Sun Valley that year?
A. I think only -- yeah, a couple of them. And then they, the older guys hear about that and they start to call me. It's just, you know, just spread the word, you know, like I told one, a couple of guys and they told more guys and then they start to call me and call me.

Q. What did you say when they called you?

A. Same thing, you know, that we might, you know, that I -- we were going to need some guys. And they say give me, give me the opportunity to work and I put them on the list.

Q. What list was that?

A. The list of the H-2A workers. With the passports, with the passports, you know.

Q. Did someone tell you to compile that list?

A. When, when they, when Russ, Russ, Jr., he told me about the H2 workers, I told him that if I can, you know, bring some of my friends, the old workers and they say yes. He said yes. But the majority of the workers, the agencies in Mexico send us, send the group of guys. There were a lot of guys that they send us. We didn't know anybody.

Q. How many workers were on the list?

A. Like 40, in the first list, I think was 45, 45 guys. Yeah, 44, 45 guys.

bringing their friends and relatives to work at Sun Valley?

A. They ask me if I can bring a person or I can bring a brother. I say yes, okay. If we need them, if I need them, okay. I said yes.

Q. When you accepted workers to work at Sun Valley, does anyone at Sun Valley ever later reject those workers?

A. No.

Q. Did you have the power to fire workers at Sun Valley?

A. No.

Q. Who had the authority to fire workers at Sun Valley?

A. Russ, Russ, Jr.

Q. Anyone else?

A. Legally, no. Only him, because not even, not even Harry, not even Harry Marino, only Russ Marino.

Q. The workers that you accepted to work at Sun Valley in 2015, did you mail them any documents before they arrived at Sun Valley?

A. No.

Q. Did you send them any documents in any way before they arrived at Sun Valley?
A. No.
Q. Before they arrived at Sun Valley, did you tell the non-H-2A workers about the meal charges?
A. Yes.
Q. What did you tell them?
A. That it was a meal charge. They pay so much a week and that's it. Most of them, they knew how the system was in the camp and they like it and they come back.
Q. How do you know they liked it?
A. Because they come back. If they don't like, they don't come back, right?
Q. Were there any non-H-2A workers at Sun Valley in 2015 for whom it was the first time they worked at Sun Valley?
A. Can you repeat that?
Q. In 2015, were there any non-H-2A workers working for Sun Valley for the first time?
A. A few guys, maybe five guys. I don't remember. I'm pretty sure I had a few new ones.

Q. How did they find out about Sun Valley?

A. With the relative, with the friends.

Q. Did the new non-H-2A workers call you in 2015 before coming to Sun Valley?

A. Yes.

Q. What did they say to you?

A. That if we need more help, they were willing to come.

Q. And what did you say?

A. When I need them, I say yes, they could come.

Q. Were there any people you told not to come?

A. When we had, yes, when we had the -- all the H2 guys came, we didn't need -- we didn't need any more, so when they call me, because they keep calling me and calling me, I said no more, we are full.

Q. Was that in 2015?

A. Yes, 2015.

Q. What month was that?

A. May, June. May, June. They still calling, they were calling me from Florida.

Q. How many times?
A. I don't remember. It was a lot of times.
Q. Was it more than ten times?
A. Maybe. Yeah.
Q. Was it more than 20 times?
A. No, more than ten times.
Q. Did you have interactions with Theresa in North Carolina?
A. No.
Q. Did you have interactions with any agencies that helped Sun Valley with the H-2A program?
A. No.
Q. How did the H-2A workers at Sun Valley find out about work at Sun Valley?
A. It's the same question that you asked me before, what -- when they decide to go into the H-2A program, he told me, they told me and they make the order for the guys in Mexico, but I ask them if I can bring some of my friends and I make a couple of calls to a couple of friends in Mexico. Then the rest of them, they knew and now everybody knows everyone.

Q. In 2015, did you help any workers travel to Sun Valley from anywhere outside of New Jersey?

A. No.

Q. How many groups of H-2A workers came to Sun Valley in 2015?

A. Two. One in April and one in June, two groups. But then the first group, they came in April. They didn't like the job and they quit, 19 guys. And then they let, they left us. And he told me that he talked to Theresa and they replace the guys, they make another order, so they came in like at the end of May. They came another group, different, so there was two groups I guess.

Q. When the first group arrived at Sun Valley, who told them about the housing?

A. When they -- when they -- when they work here, when they get, when they all here, I talk to them and I told them about the facilities and all that. I explain.

Q. What did you tell the group of H-2A workers who arrived in April 2015 about the housing?

A. That we had the rooms that if it's -- we have bunk beds, showed them the bathrooms. The kitchen, I told them about the kitchen, about the meals. I told, I explained to them everything. What we were going to do, cutting asparagus.

Q. Did you explain anything else to them?

A. Just the rules for the camp, nothing else.

Q. What were the rules of the camp?

A. Not to, not to keep problem, they have to go to bed early, so the guys can rest. No problems. You know, rules. Keeping the bathrooms clean. Rules.

Q. What did you tell the workers who arrived at Sun Valley in April 2015 about the work hours at Sun Valley?

A. I think I gave them, they are given some kind of, I don't know if it's like a contract, the contract thing. They sign something about explaining what they were going to do.

Q. Did you explain anything to the April arriving workers at Sun Valley about the work hours at Sun Valley?

A. Yes.
Q. What did you explain?
A. That we were going to work by the hours and the hour increase, 11.66 at the time.
Q. Did you tell them how many hours that they would work a day?
A. Yes, yes. I told them that too. I told them that we can work up to ten, 11 hours a day, but they, sometimes they, some of them, they don't want to work. They just let me know, then they'll stay in the camp. And sometimes, we were slow. Sometimes we, work a couple of days, sometimes three hours, sometimes, you know, up to ten, 11 hours a day.
Q. For the H-2A workers who arrived at Sun Valley in June, did you tell them anything different?
A. No.
Q. Did you tell the H-2A workers who arrived in June anything different about the housing?
A. No. I told them the same thing.
Q. What did you tell the H-2A workers in 2015 about the meals?
A. Same as I say before, that we have only one big kitchen. There wasn't enough room for everybody to cook. The cookers, the person in charge, you know, to cook the meals and they say yes. And but I told them like every time I told them, anybody don't like, don't want or don't like, don't want to pay or don't like the food, they are free to eat outside or to order a delivery meal. It's up to them. They got that option.

Q. When did you explain all this to H-2A workers?

A. When they come. As soon as they come. 2015 and 2016, this year, we have the first group, first two groups they came and I told them the same thing.

Q. Did you explain anything differently in 2016 than 2015?

A. No, I explained it every year. It's the same.

Q. What kind of food is provided at the meals?

A. We got different, different meals, We cook different meals with, it could be pork meat, chicken meat, beef meat, fish. We always we got rice and beans and tortillas.

Q. How many meals are there a day?
A. It's in the morning, we got coffee and bread. And before we go to work. And at lunchtime, at 12:00 o'clock, and in the afternoon, when they come at 5:30, 6:00 o'clock, it depends on what time we come, we finish. So it's two meals and one breakfast.
Q. Where is the breakfast served?
A. At the camp before we leave.
Q. And what about the other meals?
A. At camp.
Q. So --
A. Sometimes, we got a farm far away, but we have all conditions there and we have tables and you know, to eat and we, I bring the food there.
Q. So when the workers in 2015 paid $80 a week for meals, that covered the breakfast, the lunch and the dinner?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you provide food to Sun Valley's workers other than those three meals?
A. No. No meals, no other meals before that, before that.

Q. Did you sell any other food to Sun Valley's workers in 2015?

A. No food, no food. I, I got in the kitchen, I got, I sell like just like chips, but it's not food, it's just a snack. They call them snacks.

Q. What else do you sell in the kitchen?

A. Soda.

Q. Anything else?

A. The Monster, the drink, the Monsters and the Red Bull and the chips, the honey buns, honey buns. I don't know, sweet bread, bread.

Q. What else do you sell in the kitchen?

A. That's it.

Q. How much do you charge for the chips?

A. Seventy-five cents.

Q. Was that the price in 2015?

A. Yes.

Q. In 2015, how much did you charge for the soda?

A. A dollar.

Q. How much did you charge for the Monster?
A. 1.50.
Q. How much did you charge for the Red Bull?
A. 1.50 too.
Q. How much do you charge for the sweet breads?
A. It was 75.
Q. The sweet breads cost how much?
A. Seventy-five cents.
Q. Where in the kitchen did you sell these items?
A. I have a little box, little boxes. I have a couple of refrigerators. It's not, it's not a whole lot, it's just, just a few.
Q. How many refrigerators are there in the kitchen?
A. Four, five. Five.
Q. There are five refrigerators in the kitchen at Sun Valley?
A. Yes.
Q. And these snacks are located on top of one of the refrigerators?
A. Yes, but only a couple of boxes, it's not in one -- yeah, the refrigerators, yeah.

Q. Are there other places that you store these snacks?

A. I got a little rack, at that time, I had a little rack on the entrance, yeah.

Q. Any other place that you store the snacks?

A. No.

Q. Any other place that you store the sodas?

A. Yeah, a little room I call the storage room, I call the storage room.

Q. Where is the storage room?

A. It's inside the kitchen.

Q. Who owns the kitchen?

A. Sun Valley.

Q. Who owns the refrigerator?

A. Sun Valley.

Q. Does Sun Valley own all five refrigerators?

A. Yes.

Q. Are there other freezers?

A. A chest freezer, yeah, for the meat, yes.

Q. How many?
A. Two, two, one big and one small.
Q. Who owns those freezers?
A. Them.
Q. Sun Valley owns the freezers?
A. Yes.
Q. Who owns the stove at the kitchen?
A. Sun Valley.
Q. How many stoves are there?
A. Two.
Q. What about the blender?
A. The blender?
Q. Is there a blender in the kitchen at Sun Valley?
A. Yes.
Q. Who owns the blender?
A. I think, I guess the guys, because I bought it with the, you know, when I collect the money, you know, little things that I need in the kitchen, I bought it from the Sun Valley.
Q. Are there other appliances in the kitchen that Sun Valley bought?
A. A microwave and blender and the air conditioner. We got three air conditioners, because it gets really hot in the summertime.

Q. Sun Valley purchased the air conditioners?

A. No, I did.

Q. Who pays the electricity for the kitchen?

A. Sun Valley.

Q. Does Sun Valley pay for the gas bill at the kitchen?

A. Yes.

Q. When did Sun Valley buy the refrigerators in the kitchen?

A. I think the last, the last one they bought was like five years ago I think. But before when we start with the kitchen, they bought everything. The refrigerators has been old. They're old. Some of them, they're old. And I mean, yeah. They pay.

Q. Who owns the microwave in the kitchen?

A. The guys, because I bought them a microwave with the food money. Uh-huh.

Q. Could the guys take the microwave home with them at the end of season?

A. If some of them want, I think they need to, yeah, I guess. Yes.

Q. Could the guys take the blender home with them at the end of the season?
A. Yes.
Q. Did anyone try to take the blender home?
A. No.
Q. What would you say if they tried to take the blender home?
MR. SCHULTE: Objection. Calls for speculation.
THE WITNESS: I don't know.
THE INTERPRETER: Could I go to the ladies' room for a second?
MR. GLICK: Yes. Is it okay if we take a short break?
MR. SCHULTE: Yeah, sure.
- - - - -
(A recess was taken at this time.)

BY MR. GLICK:
Q. Mr. Hernandez, I just want to remind you, we have a Spanish language interpreter available. Do you understand that?
A. Yes.

Q. What language do you prefer to take this deposition?
A. Let's keep it in English. Yes.
Q. Will you tell me if you prefer to have the Spanish interpreter translate any of my questions?
A. Yes.
Q. The coffee and the sweet breads that were part of the meal plan in 2015, those were served at the kitchen; is that right?
A. Yes.
Q. Were there any snacks served to workers in the fields in 2015?
A. Only, only sodas, drinking sodas.
Q. Were there any pastries provided to the workers in the fields in 2015?
A. Yeah, sometimes, uh-huh.
Q. Who provided those?
A. Me.
Q. Did you sell those pastries to the workers?
A. Yes.
Q. How much did they cost?
A. Seventy-five cents.
Q. How many days a week did you sell pastries to the workers in the fields in 2015?

A. It depends. Maybe five times, sometimes six. It depends on how long we work.
Q. That was six times a week, five or six times a week that you sold pastries?
A. Yes.
Q. So is it fair to say that you sold pastries to the workers in the fields almost every day in 2015?
A. Yes.
Q. Other than the pastries, were there other snacks that you sold to the workers in the fields?
A. No.
Q. Other than the sodas, were there other beverages that you sold to the workers in the field?
A. No.
Q. Did those sodas that you sold in the field include Monsters?
A. Just sodas, like sodas.
Q. What else does sodas include?
A. Sodas and Red Bull or Gatorades.
Q. Did you sell water?
A. No.

Q. Do you sell juice?
A. No.
Q. Were the prices of the sodas that you sold to the workers in the field the same as the prices --
A. Yes.
Q. -- being sold in the kitchen?
A. Yes, yes.
Q. And those sodas weren't included in the $80 a week charge for the meals?
A. No.
Q. And what about the pastries that were sold in the fields for 75 cents, were those included in the $80 a week charge?
A. No.
Q. What else was not included in the 80-dollar a week meal charge?
A. What is not, nothing, no.
Q. What time during the day did you sell the sodas in the fields to the workers?
A. Usually around 8:30 or 9:00 o'clock.
Q. 8:30 or 9:00 o'clock in the morning?
A. In the morning, yes.

in the fields, how did you bring those sodas to the places where the workers were working?

A. Yeah, I got a big cooler, like a field cooler. Is that, all right, cooler. It's a cooler. And I put it on the back of my pickup.

Q. How many sodas fit in that cooler?

A. Like 50, maybe about 70 maybe, 60, 70 sodas.

Q. Did you fill the cooler with 60 or 70 sodas when you brought it to the field in 2015?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you refill the cooler between the mid-morning break and the afternoon break?

A. No.

Q. How many sodas did you sell in the field during 2015?

A. I don't know.

Q. Was it 60 a day?

A. A day?

Q. Was it 60 sodas a day that you sold in the field in 2015?

A. Sometimes, sometimes less.

Q. When it was less, how many sodas was it?

A. Maybe 20, 30, I don't know. I don't remember.

Q. When was it less?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Is there anything that would help you remember?

A. I don't know.

Q. Did you ever refill the cooler with more sodas during the day?

A. When I come, the first break, I don't, I don't refill it until the second break, when we take the second break.

Q. Did you refill the cooler after the second break?

A. No.

Q. Did you refill the cooler before the second break?

A. No. Before, yes, before the second break, yes.

Q. So in 2015, you would fill the cooler with about 60 or 70 sodas before the morning break?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. So that the court reporter can accurately respond, could you please make sure that you give an answer that the court reporter can record?

A. Yes.

Q. In 2015, you would fill the cooler with 60 or 70 sodas before the mid-morning break?

A. Before the break, yes.

Q. And after the break, what would you do with the cooler?

A. It was sitting on my, on the back of my pickup, until we go at lunchtime.

Q. What would you do with the cooler at lunchtime?

A. It's there. I never hauled it out of my truck.

Q. And what would you do with the cooler at the afternoon break?

A. I keep it there.

Q. Did you refill the cooler between the mid-morning break and the afternoon break?

A. No.

Q. When did you fill the cooler again?

A. When we are ready to take the second break. The afternoon break.

Q. Did you refill the cooler at the beginning of the afternoon break?

A. Yes, at the beginning, yes. Before. Before.

Q. Where did you go to refill the cooler at the beginning -- before the beginning of the second afternoon break?

A. To the kitchen.

Q. How many sodas would you put in the cooler before the afternoon break, but after the morning break?

A. The same, same, 60 or 70, whatever it fits.

Q. Why did you refill the cooler after the morning break, but before the afternoon break?

A. I refill it before the morning break and I don't refill it until before the second break.

Q. Why did you refill it again before the second break?

A. Why, because, because we were going to take the break and they ask me for sodas.

Q. Did you refill the cooler before the second break because there wasn't enough soda left to supply to the workers?

A. I just fill it and I -- I don't go back and refill it. I just, whatever brings and that's it.

Q. Did you sell pastries at the afternoon break?

A. No.

Q. Were there any weeks that you sold more than one or two -- let me rephrase that. Were there any weeks that you sold sodas more than once or twice a day to the workers in the fields in 2015?

A. No.

Q. How many months during 2015 did you sell sodas in the fields to the workers?

A. Only maybe all together, maybe three months.

Q. Did you sell sodas beginning in May?

A. At the end of May when it gets, starts to get hot.

Q. When did the work begin in the fields at Sun Valley in 2015?

A. I think April 20th.

Q. What did the workers drink in the fields between April 20th and the end of May?

A. I supplied them with a lot of water. We got always cold water.

Q. Where was the cold water?

A. In the -- we got a -- what can he call it, a well truck. It's a different truck and we have jugs, cans, whatever. We got them in the back of the truck. And we drive them, you know, around the field.

Q. Where was that truck between late May and -- let me rephrase that. In 2015 when you sold sodas to the workers in the fields during the breaks, where was the water truck during those breaks?

A. Right there. One side it was.

Q. In relation to the cooler, where was the water truck during the breaks?

A. Right there. It was one side of us, they can drink the water. Every time, we finish one round of the -- in the field, the truck is right there. The water truck is right there.

Q. Did the workers have to ask permission to take a drink of water?

A. No, no.

Q. How far did the workers have to walk from where they were working to get to the water truck?

A. They don't walk far. The truck is right there. Maybe a few steps.

Q. Was it less than a minute to walk?

A. For some of them, nothing. For some of them, maybe a minute, because there's a lot of guys, they had to walk, you know, the truck is sitting right in between the whole group, so somebody had to walk and somebody is right there.

Q. Did the workers prefer water or soda in the fields?

A. It's up to them. A lot of them prefer water. Some of them prefer a soda. It's up to them.

Q. Why did some of the workers prefer soda?

MR. SCHULTE: Objection. Calls for total speculation.

THE WITNESS: I don't know. We never asked them.

BY MR. GLICK:

Q. Did you ever ask the workers why they prefer sodas?

A. No, no. Why should I?

Q. How did you decide to sell soda in the fields?

A. Some, again, since the beginning, so when we start some guys, they, they work like that in Florida, in every work, works like that, everywhere and all camps, all fields in the United States, they sell them. And they ask me if I can do that.

Q. Who asked you?

A. The workers.

Q. Did you discuss with anyone at Sun Valley selling sodas to workers in the field?

A. To tell you the truth, no. No.

Q. Did Sun Valley know that you were selling sodas in the fields to the workers?

A. I don't know.

Q. When Russell Marino, Jr. would drive around the fields, did he see you selling sodas to the workers in 2015?

A. He never saw me. He never saw me. We saw every time he pass by, we, he saw us taking a break. But he never come right there, you know, to see.

Q. How close did he get?
A. To the wall, to the main road, I don't know. I don't know how far away.
Q. How many minutes would it take to walk from where he was to where the workers were taking the break?
A. He was, he was, he wasn't there. He drove by.
Q. Did you take the breaks with the workers in 2015 near the road?
A. Near the road? No, we always have the fields, no.
Q. How did the cooler get from your truck to where the workers took the breaks?
A. Because if we got -- if we are working in the middle of the row, I wait until they finish up the row, so we, the row, picking the row, before, you know, to take the break.
Q. Did the break take place next to your truck?
A. Yes.
Q. Was your truck on the road?
A. Not on the road, on the roadway. It's a dirt road.
Q. Did Russell Marino, Jr. ever drive on that dirt road?

A. Maybe he did, I don't know. You know, when we were there, when we were there, no. Maybe at different times.

Q. Was his vehicle able to pass on that dirt road?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Is it --

A. Yes, yes, yes.

Q. Did anyone else from Sun Valley ever walk by during breaks that the workers took in the fields in 2015?

A. No.

Q. Did anyone from Sun Valley drive by the place where the workers took their breaks in the fields?

A. Maybe, I guess a couple of times Harry Marino, the other partner. He see us when we take the break.

Q. And what happened then?

A. He knows, he knows, they knows, everybody knows that we're taking a break.

Q. Did he stop and talk to you?

A. No, he drove by.

Q. When you sold the sodas to the workers in the fields, how did they pay? How did the workers pay for the sodas?

A. How, they gave me, they give me the money.

Q. Did you ever sell a soda to a worker who didn't have money available at that time?

A. Yes.

Q. How would you keep track of that purchase?

A. Because I write the -- in a little piece of paper, I write the name. Sometimes I forget. Sometimes they, it's a lot of guys, sometimes they not even pay.

Q. What would you do with that little piece of paper?

A. When I, when I go to the kitchen, I, how do you say it, put it clean in my notebook or another bigger piece of paper, I don't know. It's a list that I have.

Q. What else did that list include?

A. That's it. Sodas. Pastries. Chips.

Q. Did that list include anything about the 80-dollar a week charges?

A. No.
Q. So it was a list of the sodas, chips and pastries that the workers at Sun Valley bought apart from the weekly meals?
A. It's separate. It's separate.
Q. Do you still have those lists?
A. No.
Q. When is the last time you had those lists?
A. Every year, every year, I change the book.
Q. Did you have the list at the beginning of 2016?
A. I think, I think I had it from the '15 to the '16. I think I -- I'm not sure if I had it. But now, I don't have it anymore. I don't have anything.
Q. Did you have the list of purchases from 2015 at the end of 2016?
A. No.
Q. What happened to the list of purchases from 2015?
A. When it gets full, I throw it away. I throw it away.
Q. Are there other lists that you throw away?

A. Sometimes. Sometimes when I'm too busy, I don't know where I left my receipts or papers or whatever, I lost a lot of, a lot of things, when I'm really busy. I don't keep -- you know, very busy.

Q. Did anyone tell you that you should keep track of the purchases by workers of sodas and chips and pastries?

A. No, no.

Q. Why did you decide to keep track?

A. I don't keep track of all them, only when they tell me, I got a soda, can I pay you whenever they can. I say yes, then I write their name, so I don't forget.

Q. And then what would you do with the list?

A. They pay me. They pay me and then I threw it away.

Q. How would they know how much to pay you?

A. Because they know. They know. They know how much, they know how many sodas or they got one soda or two sodas, they know.

Q. Did they ever forget how many?

A. No. No, I don't think so. No.
Q. When did they pay you?
A. Some of them, they pay me at the end of day. And some of them, they pay me when the paycheck, when they get the check, paycheck.
Q. Did they pay you, for the workers that paid you after they received their paycheck, in 2015, did they pay you cash?
A. Yes.
Q. Did they pay you cash after they received their paycheck?
A. Yes, after they receive their paycheck.
Q. How did the workers in 2015 cash their paychecks?
A. Okay. Harry Marino come to the camp and he make us sign the receiving check, some signature check. I don't know, however you call it and they got the check and they sign it and they hand it to me, they hand the check to me. And I go, I go to the bank and I cash the check. The office at Sun Valley, they send, they e-mail to the bank, they make it easy. They send the list to the bank so when I'm -- when I go for the pile of checks, they got the envelopes with the money. You know, with everybody's name. They check and they, I get all the envelopes and I bring it to the camp. When they finish, I hand the checks to everybody.

Q. Did you ever remove any money from the envelopes before giving the checks to the workers?

A. Never, never, never, no. I never do that. I never did it. I never would, no.

Q. How did the workers pay the $80 weekly fee for the meals?

A. Cash.

Q. When did they pay the cash?

A. On Friday, Friday. Friday afternoons.

Q. What day of the week did the workers receive the cashed Sun Valley checks?

A. Friday, Friday afternoons.

Q. Did you keep track of the workers that paid the 80-dollar weekly fee?

A. Yes.

Q. How did you keep track?

A. Okay. They send me a list from the office. It says a list of all the workers we have. It says meals and they have transportation. And then every, every one of them that they pay me, they look for their name and they sign.

Q. And what does it mean when they sign?

A. That they paid, that they pay. That they have paid the meal.

Q. Why did you keep track of that?

A. Because it's a requirement, the Department of Labor asks for that.

Q. How do you know it's a requirement?

A. Because -- well, because I think we had to -- they had to have a proof that they pay and they received the meal. It's like saying that he pay you and he's receiving the meal. He's received the meal during that week.

Q. Who told you to keep track of that?

A. Sun Valley.

Q. Who at Sun Valley?

A. Russ, Russ Marino, Russ, Jr.

Q. When did he tell you to keep track of that?

A. In '15.

Q. Was it at the -- what month in 2015 did Russ Marino, Jr. tell you to keep track?
A. April, April.
Q. Was that the first time he told you to keep track?
A. For the H2 workers, yes.
Q. And what about the non-H2 workers?
A. From years behind they didn't say anything.
Q. Did you keep track in seasons before 2015 of the workers who paid a weekly fee for meals?
A. Yeah, because every time he pay me, I write the name.
Q. Was 2015 the first time that the workers signed --
A. Yes.
Q. -- for receiving the meals?
A. Yes, uh-huh.
Q. What records did you keep about the costs for selling the sodas to the workers?
A. When the Department of Labor came in 2015, they told me about that and they told me if I got any records of that, I say no. They say, oh don't worry, anyway, we can figure it out. He asked me where I buy the sodas and I told him, I go to Sam's Club and that's it. And he told me, oh, I can find out. I don't keep receipts when I buy the sodas, no.

Q. Did you buy sodas at stores other than Sam's Club?

A. Yes.

Q. What stores?

A. There's a Mexican store in Bridgeton, New Jersey.

Q. Any other stores?

A. It can be different, different stores. Sometimes when I need something, maybe in the middle of the week, if we need something, we go to the Acme. We go to the Shop-Rite. It's different stores. But only little ones, but the biggest shops is in the Sam's Club and the Mexican stores in Bridgeton.

Q. How did you decide to charge one dollar per soda to the workers at Sun Valley in 2015?

A. How? Because I saw the -- I buy sodas at the store, I saw more or less the prices. I don't know. This is what I decided on.

Q. What was the price that you paid at Sam's Club for sodas in 2015?

A. It's like, I don't know, maybe -- I didn't do the math for a single soda, but a case, maybe 13, $14.

Q. How many sodas are in a case that costs 13 or $14?

A. I think 24. Twenty-four. Twenty-four. I think it's 24.

Q. And is that the price for a particular kind of soda?

A. No.

Q. So the Monsters, Red Bull, Coca-Cola, all cost 13 or $14 a case?

A. No, I'm talking about the sodas. The Monster costs like $32 a case, there's 24. The Red Bull I think costs 31, 30, 31 for a case of 24.

Q. What about the sweet breads that you sold in the fields, how much did those cost to purchase?

A. Like eight, eight dollars.

Q. For how many?

A. I think there's 12.

Q. Where did you purchase those sweet breads?

A. In Sam's Club.

Q. What else did you buy at Sam's Club?

A. I buy food like all the items for cleaning the kitchen. Fruits, fresh fruits. Like cooking oil. Like the chocolate for the coffee, sugar, salt. I buy a lot of things, a lot of stuff for Sun Valley. Milk, mostly milk.

Q. Was there anything that you bought at Sam's Club that you sold to the workers that wasn't included in the 80-dollar weekly fee?

A. No.

Q. How many Red Bull were in a case that cost $31?

A. How many, could you repeat?

Q. How many Red Bulls were in a case that cost $31?

A. Twenty-four.

Q. What about the 32-dollar case of Monster, how many Monsters were in that case?

A. It costs $32, but it comes with 24.

Q. Were the prices for the sodas different at any of the other stores where you bought them?

A. Maybe, but like in Acme and Shop-Rite, sometimes there are specials, but I don't go there, because they sell only a few per person. I don't go there. But it might be, because the workers, they buy maybe cheaper, but they like, they look for specials. I don't do that.

Q. Did you sell sodas to the workers at any location other than the kitchen or the fields in 2015?

A. No.

Q. Did you sell sodas to the workers after dinner in 2015?

A. After dinner, yes.

Q. Did you sell anything else to the workers after dinner in 2015?

A. No, sodas. Same, same, Monster, chips.

Q. In 2015 when a worker wanted to buy soda after dinner, what would they do?

A. They went to the kitchen.

Q. What happened next?

A. They went to the kitchen and I'm there. And they, they go in the kitchen and they get a soda and they pay me and that's it.

Q. Where were the sodas in the kitchen?
A. One of the refrigerators.
Q. Was there anything else in the refrigerator?
A. No.
Q. And where were the snacks?
A. On, like I say, on top.
Q. The snacks were in the rack that was in the kitchen?
A. It was a little rack that I had and on top.
Q. How late in 2015 did workers work in the fields at Sun Valley?
A. How late?
Q. What was the last month in 2015 where workers worked in the fields at Sun Valley?
A. '15 was October.
Q. In September --
A. I think September 25th, I think that year was early. I think it was September 20 something, 25th when we finish.
Q. In September 2015, did you sell sodas to workers in the fields?

A. Yeah, but less, less than in the hot days. Yeah. Yeah. Yeah.

Q. How many sodas a day?

A. Like once a day in September.

Q. Did the workers take a mid-morning break in September?

A. Yes.

Q. Did the workers take an afternoon break in September?

A. It's like less work, not very often. That year, particularly that year.

Q. Did the workers take an afternoon break in 2015?

A. Sometimes.

Q. When the workers took an afternoon break in September 2015, did you sell sodas?

A. Sometimes.

Q. How often?

A. Like maybe a couple of times a week.

Q. What was different in September 2015 than other months that year?

A. That is not too hot and we had less work.

Q. Less work than what?
A. Than in July.
Q. Was September 2015 different than Septembers in other years?
A. Yes. Yes. Every year is different in the farm. Every year is -- every month is different. Every year is different. It depends on the weather.
Q. The workers that did buy sodas in the fields in 2015, how many sodas did they buy at a time?
A. One. One.
Q. And what about Monsters?
A. Some of them, they, not all of them consume Monsters, just a few of them, you know. Whatever they, sometimes they drink one and they don't drink until three, four days. Because they know it's, it's bad for the health. You know, the sugar, the caffeine. So they don't, they don't consume it very often.
Q. What about the Red Bulls?
A. The same thing. They consume it very rare.
Q. The Monsters are bad for the worker's health?

A. They say that, I don't know. For me, I can't take the Monster. It's bad for my heart I know. My stomach doesn't take it. I hear sometimes the guys say they are starting to feel bad from the Monster, heartburn. I don't know. I don't know.

Q. Do you still have the lists from 2015 of the workers who signed for having paid the $80 a week for their meals?

A. I don't, I don't have it. But I think this guy, the inspector, he's a Spanish guy, he took a copy of everything. When he came to the camp, he took a copy of everything.

Q. Did Sun Valley make any copies of the records before the inspector took them?

A. I'm not sure.

Q. Did you ever give any of those signature records to Sun Valley?

A. No. In the '15, I know this guy, the Department of Labor, he took them all. Then he brought, he brought them to me, back to me, but and -- yeah. No. No. I think they'll have it. Somebody will have it.

Q. In 2015, did Sun Valley ever check whether you were keeping records of the workers who paid for the meals?

A. They asked me a couple of times, yes, they asked me. But I didn't, they didn't see --

Q. What did they ask you?

A. If I, if I have every, if I was keeping everything on track, if I was keeping everything track of everything. And I said yes.

Q. Who asked you?

A. Russ Marino.

Q. Was that Russell Marino, Jr.?

A. Junior, yes.

Q. Anyone else?

A. No.

Q. When did he ask you?

A. I don't remember. It was 2015.

Q. How long after he originally told you that you should keep those signature lists did he ask you whether you were keeping them?

A. I think two months later I think he asked me.

Q. And any other times?

A. No, I don't remember. I don't remember. Maybe, maybe not. I don't know. I don't know.

Q. Do you keep notes of your conversations with Russell Marino, Jr.?

A. No.

Q. Do you ever keep any notes of any conversations that you have with anyone at Sun Valley?

A. No.

Q. The notebooks where you keep track of the workers who purchase sodas in the fields, do you keep track of anything else in those notebooks?

A. No.

Q. Do you still have any notebooks from 2015 where you took notes?

A. No, I thought I said no.

Q. How did Sun Valley's workers in 2015 get to the stores where they purchased these sodas if they didn't buy them from you?

A. There's different ways for them to go to the store. One way is they usually when they, when they come, they are, I don't know how they do it, they do it. But soon I knew a few vans pull out, pull into the camp and they, all I see the guys jumping in the vans and they leave. Vans coming from outside. I don't know how they do it. How they get in touch, I don't know. But they have their ways to go to the store.

Q. In 2015, did any of Sun Valley's farm workers ask you for help in getting a ride anywhere?

A. Yes, yes.

Q. How often?

A. Only the first couple of weeks. Only the first few times they asked me to go to the store to buy, to buy, you know, like a towel, the shoes. And I let them use my truck and they go to the store. Or when I send an older guy, you know, who drives who knows the area and he took them to the store. But only once or two times. I don't remember, maybe a few times. But not all of them, just a few times.

Q. In those times, did you charge the workers for the ride?

A. No.

Q. Other than those times, did any workers ask you for help getting to a store?

A. Yeah, before, before '15, years before, every year, they asking me for, you know, if I had a way to bring them to the store. And I don't have -- because I'm very busy, I don't have time. I tell them, you know, tell that guy or I don't know. But they ask me for help.

Q. And was that any different than in 2015?

A. No. It was the same.

Q. What guy would you tell them to talk to instead?

A. There's -- there was a couple of guys at the camp that they can drive. I tell them to go and talk to them, the person, you know.

Q. How did you pick those guys?

A. Because it's only two guys that I have that they have the vans.

Q. And what were those guys' names?

A. I don't know. I don't remember who it was in 2015. They are no longer here. But they came from Florida. I don't know. I don't remember.

Q. The workers from Florida who drove the vans in 2015, did they charge Sun Valley's workers?

A. No. No. Did they charge the guys? I don't know. I don't know. I don't know how they do it. I don't know.

Q. Did you ever talk to the workers from Florida who drove the vans about whether they charged the other workers for a ride?

A. No.

Q. Were there rules about whether Sun Valley's farm workers in 2015 were allowed to buy sodas on their own when they went to town?

A. Not rules. No rules. They just go to the stores and they buy their own sodas.

Q. Did they buy anything else when they went to the stores?

A. I don't know.

Q. Where did the workers keep the sodas?

A. In the lockers. They have lockers. Lockers. Underneath the beds. Anywhere. I don't know. I don't know. Sometimes I work on the bedrooms and I see a lot of things, you know, they got this, the sodas there, they got there. I don't know. And I sometimes, I see them when they come from the store, they bring a lot of stuff.

Q. Was there a refrigerator in the worker camp?

A. I don't know. No, not that I know of.

Q. Was there anywhere that workers could keep their sodas cool?

A. Some of them, like I say, some of them, but just some of them, there was, that I used to get, you know, along with them. Sometimes they ask me, when it's really hot, sometimes they ask me to keep a case of soda or a big soda, bottle of soda in the fridge inside the kitchen.

Q. Which fridge was that?

A. I got five, one of them.

Q. Did you ever refuse workers permission to store something in the refrigerator?

A. No, uh-huh, no.

Q. How many workers have permission to store something in the refrigerator?

A. Only a few. Only a few. They almost never ask about it. Almost never. Just when I get along with a couple of guys, and they, we trust, I don't know, they ask me, but only a few times.

Q. How much extra space was there in the refrigerators for workers to store food?

A. Almost none. I got everything filled with -- there's only a little bit of space sometimes.

Q. So if more workers wanted to store sodas or food in the fridge, would they have been able to?

MR. SCHULTE: Objection. Speculation. He specifically said that nobody else asked to.

THE WITNESS: I don't know. If everybody asked me for it, I don't know what I would do.

BY MR. GLICK:

Q. How much extra room was there in 2015 in the fridge?

A. There's no extra room. I got, in the five refrigerators, I got my stuff, the stuff there from the kitchen.

Q. In 2015, could workers cook their own meals in the kitchen?

A. No.

Q. Did anyone ask for permission to cook their own meals in the kitchen?
A. No.
Q. Who is in charge of giving permission to use the fridge in the kitchen?
A. That would be me.
Q. And who is in charge of giving permission to cook in the kitchen?
A. Like I'm in charge of the kitchen, it would be me.
Q. Is there anyone else who could have given permission for a worker to cook in the kitchen in 2015?
A. Russ Marino, Sun Valley.
Q. Do you know if Russ Marino or Sun Valley gave anyone permission to cook in the kitchen?
A. I don't know. I don't know. They never said anything to me.
Q. Who else works in the kitchen in Sun Valley?
A. In the kitchen? I got my wife. I got one -- I got my wife and other kid, other guy. There's three, three persons.
Q. Were those the same three people in 2015?

A. Yes.

Q. What are their names?

A. No, no, it's different. Different. The '15, I had another guy who left last year. He didn't come last year. So last year, I replaced him for another guy. But the girl, I'm not sure if she -- she was with me since '15.

Q. In 2015, other than you, there were three people who worked in the kitchen?

A. Uh-huh. They don't work. They help. I got about three, three other persons. Four, my son. I got my son, I got three persons that help me. But after, afterwards, after we get done job, they help me. And you know, they pay me half of the, you know, the meal, because they help me, when we -- when we finish in the afternoon, they help me to wash all the dishes, do all the dishes. It's a lot of work.

Q. So there are workers who pay you to help in the kitchen?

A. No.

Q. I maybe didn't understand. Could you explain to me the workers who help in the kitchen, what the arrangement is?

A. Okay. It's not an arrangement. It's help that I give it to them and they give to me. After they finish work, say we finish at six, they come and they come to the kitchen after they get -- everybody eats, and they help me to wash, to do the dishes. This is what they help. You know, I have three guys.

Q. Who pays the workers who help in the kitchen?

A. Me.

Q. How do you pay them?

A. Cash.

Q. In 2015, which workers participated in the 80-dollar weekly meal plan?

A. The H2 guys and the regular guys, whoever.

Q. And did any H-2A workers cook on their own in the kitchen?

A. No.

Q. Did any domestic, did any non-H-2A workers cook on their own in the kitchen?

A. No.

Q. Is there anyone who didn't participate in the meal plan in 2015?

A. In '15, there was, there was two guys. They didn't agree, since they come, it was from the second group. They came in June. They came in June. Not the April, in June. They were -- one of the them, he started, he didn't agree with the plan. He didn't say anything to me. And he started to do, to cook his own meals in the bedroom -- yeah, in the bedroom. I didn't know until maybe a week or later. I find out that that guy was cooking by himself. Because I was wondering how he didn't pay me, how he was doing. And I found out his friends told me that they, every day, he go to the store, he buy like bread and make a sandwich or tuna, whatever. I didn't say nothing, because I didn't want to have problems or hurt his feelings, whatever. I don't know. I didn't say nothing.

And then another guy came to me and he say that he wasn't going to pay me. Okay. He was doing the same thing. And then maybe a week later came another guy. The same thing. This is when all this, I guess, all this start. Because by that time, is when we send some guys to Mexico, because we didn't have enough job for everybody. We sent a group of guys and this is when they call the Department of Labor I guess and this is when it was all this problem of them cooking in their bedrooms. It can't been done in their bedroom, because it's not clean or I don't know.

Q. Were there any workers who you -- strike that. Were there any workers who you denied permission to participate? How many workers didn't participate in the meal plan in 2015?

A. Three.

Q. Did anyone else ask permission not to participate in the meal plan?

A. No, nobody else.

Q. When did you find out that they weren't participating in the meal plan?

A. Like I say, the first guy I found out about the second week. And the second guy, a few days later.

Q. The second week of what?

A. It was June. I think it was June. Since they go here, the first guy, since he go here, he never bought, he never paid the kitchen, the meal in the kitchen.

Q. Do Sun Valley's rules permit a worker to cook in the housing camp?

A. We didn't know, this is not allowed to cook in their bedrooms. We didn't know and they didn't know.

Q. Where did those workers store their groceries?

A. I don't know. I never went to the bedroom. I never did. But they say that they have on the -- they had, they had just a little bit, I guess, they have a little, I don't know how you would call it, a little, like a table or I don't know. I don't know. I never went to them. I never went inside.

Q. Did workers store any of their groceries in Sun Valley's refrigerators?

A. No.

Q. Other than sodas, did workers store anything in Sun Valley's refrigerators?

A. No.

Q. How much do you pay the people who work in the kitchen at Sun Valley?

A. Okay. In 2015, I pay to my wife, I think it was 600 a week. 600. And to the other guy, I think the same. I'm not sure. 600, I think. And to the girl, 450.

Q. So you paid the girl $450 a week?

A. Yes, a week. But she was, she was working only half day.

Q. And you paid those three workers in the kitchen in 2015 cash; is that right?

A. Yes, yes.

Q. Where did you get that cash from?

A. From the guys. This is the money from the meals. I pay from the same money.

Q. So when the workers paid the $80 fee per week for their meals in cash, you would pay the kitchen workers their salaries out of that money?

A. Yes.

Q. What else did you do with the cash that you collected from the workers?

A. I buy all the foods, the meat and all that and the salary of the three people.

Q. Did you purchase any appliances out of that pool of money?

A. Like I say, like the blender, I did, yes. I said before. Like the microwave, I did, yes.

Q. Who decided to purchase the blender?

A. They needed it in the kitchen. Me. Me.

Q. Who decided to purchase the microwave?

A. It was me. Because we need it to preheat sometimes food.

Q. The cash that the workers paid you for the sodas, Monster, Red Bull, snacks, and those kinds of items, what did you do with that cash?

A. We, I just, I just get the money and buy again and buy again and buy again.

Q. What did you buy with that money?

A. Sodas, Monster, Red Bull.

Q. Did you keep the money that the workers paid for the sodas and Red Bull and Monster and snacks separate from the money the workers paid for their meals?

A. No. Sometimes I put it together. But I know how much I got from the meals, so I never, I know sometimes, sometimes I'm a little bit short on the food and I take money from these and it's money, I move the money back and forth.

Q. When were you short on the money from the food?

A. Fridays.

Q. Why was that?

A. When?

Q. Why were you short on money from the foods?

A. Sometimes, when I buy more or sometimes, when the -- when all those guys come and they don't have money, I have, I wait for them sometimes and if it's a one or, one day or whatever, I don't charge them until the next week. I don't know. When I go to the store and they send me the receipts, not send me, they give me the receipts, I add them up and this is when I know I'm short or I'm going to be short or over, or whatever, but it can be, you know, up and down.

Q. Did any of the Marinos ever enter the kitchen at Sun Valley?

A. Yes.

Q. Which of them?

A. All of them, Russ, Jr., and Harry.

Q. What about Joe?

A. Joe, he almost never come to the camp.
Q. What about the kitchen?
A. No.
Q. How often did Russ, Jr. come to the kitchen at Sun Valley in 2015?
A. Maybe once a week sometimes. Sometimes once a month.
Q. And what about Harry, how often did he come to the kitchen in 2015?
A. He come outside of the kitchen, because he is the one to hand me the checks and he's looking, he's looking inside. He don't want to step inside, but he's outside.
Q. Would Russell Marino, Jr. enter the kitchen?
A. Yes.
Q. Why did he enter the kitchen in 2015?
A. I guess just to see how clean we have everything. I don't know. I don't know. Sometimes, he come in and tell me, they're looking for me to say something to me about the job. And they enter the kitchen.
Q. Did he ever give you instructions about running the kitchen?

A. No.

Q. Would he talk to the other three workers in the kitchen?

A. I don't know. I don't know.

Q. Did you ever see him talking to the other three workers in the kitchen?

A. No, no.

Q. Did any of the three workers in the kitchen in 2015 ever tell you that Russell Marino, Jr. had spoken with them?

A. No.

Q. Did Russell Marino, Jr. ever pay those three workers in the case?

A. No.

Q. Did anyone else at Sun Valley pay those workers?

A. No.

Q. Did any of the three workers in the kitchen ever tell you that anyone else from Sun Valley had spoken with them?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever see any of the three kitchen workers interact with any of the Marinos?

A. No.
Q. What about before 2015, did you ever see any of the kitchen workers interact with the Marinos?
A. No. No. No.
Q. Before 2015, did any of the Marinos give you instructions on running the kitchen?
A. Before, a long time ago, yes, Russ. And Harry, yeah. But it was a long time ago.
Q. And what did they instruct you?
A. They said the way we have to keep the kitchen, the fixes outside. That's it.
Q. What did they tell you about how to keep the kitchen?
A. Clean. How? They have to keep the kitchen clean and that's it I think. They don't say much. They didn't say much.
Q. Has the kitchen been remodeled in the time that you have been at Sun Valley?
A. No. Just painting. Every year, we paint it.
Q. Has the housing camp at Sun Valley been remodeled since you have been at Sun Valley?
A. No, just painting every year. And fixing broken things. That's it. Nothing more.

Q. What's the housing camp like at Sun Valley?

A. I'd say it looks clean compared with other camps. It's not a five-star hotel, but it's clean.

Q. Is that the way it was in 2015?

A. Yes, yes.

Q. In 2015, who lived in the housing camp?

A. The housing camp? The workers.

Q. Did all of the H-2A workers live in the housing camp in 2015?

A. Yes.

Q. What about the non-H-2A workers?

A. Yeah, we got enough room.

Q. Who gets the housing camp ready for the workers before they arrive at the beginning of the season?

A. Russ Marino, Russ, Jr.

Q. Anyone else?

A. And me.

Q. And what does Russ Marino, Jr. do?

A. When I go to the camp and I see something is wrong or we need to fix something, I tell them and he hires somebody to fix it. So he knows it's fixed. The electrician, the plumber, the paint -- we, I think the year we paint the roofing, the tins, aluminum tins. I don't know, yeah.

Q. And what's involved in maintaining the worker housing throughout the season?

A. Me.

Q. What do you do to maintain the worker housing throughout the season?

A. What do I do? Like I say, it's just I know every, at least, when we have our food house, all of them, they don't have the -- I don't know how you say, but they throw the trash everywhere. And the next day, I put a -- I make one guy to stay in the morning for a couple of hours and clean everything and he told me and he will tell me if it's like the shower is broken or the toilet is broken. Then I fix it or if I can't, I tell Russ, Jr. and he send a plumber or somebody. But if I can, I fix it myself.

Q. Other than a worker telling you that something is broken, how else would Sun Valley find out if there were a problem at the housing?

A. They wouldn't know until I say something.

Q. In 2015, did you inspect the housing to see if there were any problems?

A. I, I didn't, the inspector come, the state came. The state inspectors came and inspect the camp.

Q. After the state inspector came in 2015, did you ever inspect the housing to see if there was a problem?

A. I didn't inspect, you know, room by room, but every time they -- somebody tell me that there is something wrong, I go and fix it.

Q. If a worker didn't tell you that something was wrong, would you ever go into the housing to check anyway?

A. Sometimes I go inside the bathrooms. Sometimes, sometimes, I go inside the bedrooms and if I see something is wrong, I say something or I fix it.

Q. In 2015, did you find out that there was anything wrong about the housing?

A. Yeah, I think two, a couple of sinks broken. The -- what do I say -- the -- I don't know, the doors, the screens, the screen door is broken. I fix that or I send somebody to fix it.

Q. When did that happen in 2015?

A. It was in June, July.

Q. Was it after the US Department of Labor came to visit the house in 2015?

A. After the state department came, yes. Before they, the fellow inspector came, and before, yeah, yeah, in between, yeah.

Q. When in 2015 did the state department inspector come to inspect the housing?

A. The beginning of April. First week of April I think.

Q. Were there mattresses in the worker housing camp?

A. There are mattresses, yes. Every bunker has -- every bed has their own mattress.

Q. Who bought the mattresses?

A. Sun Valley.

Q. Were there pillows?

A. No pillows.

Q. Were there sheets?

A. Sheets, yes. Cover mattress and blankets.

Q. There were blankets in the worker housing in 2015?

A. Yes.

Q. Did workers have to buy their own pillows in 2015?

A. I guess, yeah, because Sun Valley didn't -- don't provide pillows. Just the pillows.

Q. What else did Sun Valley provide for the housing?

A. All the tools that we need to work, like knives, sometimes gloves. The blankets and the mattress cover.

Q. Did workers have to buy anything on their own?

A. Whatever they need I guess, yes.

Q. What did the workers buy on their own?

A. Their clothes. Their personal items. I don't know.

Q. Who bought the toilet paper?

A. I provide them with the toilet paper. I got a dispenser, back in 2015, I think I didn't have the dispenser. I put it at the end, but sometimes I used to give rolls to the guys. But most of them, they buy their own.

Q. In 2015, how many rolls did you put in the bathrooms?

A. I don't remember.

Q. In a given week, how many rolls did you put in the bathrooms?

A. Maybe -- I put a lot. I put the rolls in every, about, I don't know, I don't remember how many.

Q. In 2015, how often did you enter the bathrooms?

A. Maybe a lot, like once a day.

Q. What did you do, did you do anything when you entered the bathroom to inspect its condition?

A. I just look and see if anything is, the water is not leaking. Because we have a lot of leakings. If they are clean or you know, how much trash we got on the floors, so yeah.

Q. Did you test whether there was hot water?

A. No, the guys will tell me if there is hot water or not.

Q. In 2015, did the workers tell you that there wasn't hot water?

A. They told me, but only when, only when, the pump that we have doesn't fit, you know, when everybody comes, like 100 guys, everybody comes and this, we had like 15 showers, everybody in one shower is not enough and the hot water runs out, you know, rapidly. So they say it's cold, but there's nothing we can do about that.

Q. In 2015, how often did that happen?

A. Every couple of months did I hear that. After that, the guys knew, they have, not everybody have to enter, they go, they see 20 guys are running to the showers, they wait. So they, you know, give it some time for the pump to work.

Q. What time did the workers shower in 2015?

A. Usually after, after work, maybe say around six, five. Five, 6:00 o'clock in the afternoon.

Q. Did the workers shower before work?

A. I don't know.
Q. Was 2015 the first year that there were problems with enough hot water at Sun Valley?
A. It's always the same problem.
Q. Has Sun Valley done anything to fix the problem?
A. To tell you the truth, I didn't say -- I don't remember if I say something to them. I don't remember.
Q. Did you do anything to fix the hot water problem?
A. No.
Q. When you entered the bathrooms in 2015, did you inspect whether the windows had screens?
A. In the bathrooms?
Q. In the bathrooms, yes.
A. Yes. And I know we have three windows that they don't have the screen doors, so they don't -- if they open, if they open it, it doesn't have the screen doors.
Q. How long have those windows not had screen doors?
A. Since they built it.

Q. When did they build it?
A. I'm not sure, 2000, '95, 2000. I don't remember.
Q. Did Sun Valley ever do anything to address the missing screen in those windows in the bathroom?
A. The state never asked for those, for those screen doors on the bathrooms. That's why we never did that, anything. They saw, when they come to inspect, they saw everything. They don't, they didn't require. If they did, I would say something to them, but they never required that, not in the bathrooms. In the bedrooms, yes.
Q. What about the bedrooms, did the bedrooms have screen on all the windows?
A. Yes, windows and doors.
Q. In 2015, how often did you enter the worker dorm?
A. When I need to, almost every day. Almost every day. Maybe every other day. If I don't need to, I don't go.
Q. How often did you need to?
A. When I need to say something to one guy in specific, I enter the room.

Q. How often did that happen in 2015?
A. I don't know, maybe a couple of times a week.
Q. When you entered the working housing in 2015, did you ever inspect whether the screens in the windows were ripped?
A. Yes.
Q. What did you find when you looked?
A. The screen door was, it was mainly in the front entrance, in the front door, the guys, they go just like that. They don't be careful and they rip it. We fix it and the next day it's broken again. And you have almost, almost every day, I tried to, I tell the guy to fix that.
Q. Was that a problem in the windows or in the door?
A. In the screen door. I'm talking about the screen doors. Not the doors itself, the doors are okay. And the frame, it's okay. Just the screen door.
Q. Apart from the screen door, were there screens in the windows in the housing camp?
A. The windows in the kitchen, uh-huh.

Q. When you entered the worker housing camp in 2015, did you ever see a fridge?

A. I think once, I think once I saw, you know, a fridge, a little fridge.

Q. Where was it?

A. What?

Q. Where in the housing camp was it?

A. One of the bedrooms. It was one of the guys for one of the bedrooms, where the guys are staying.

Q. How many bedrooms are there in the housing camp?

A. Six.

Q. How many worker beds are there in each bedroom?

A. There's 26, 28, 30, 30 and then 33. There's four of 30 beds and two of 20 something.

Q. When you entered the worker housing, would you visit all of the bedrooms?

A. Not very often. Like I say, only when I need to speak to someone in specific or I'm looking for someone.

Q. In 2015, did you enter all of the different worker bedrooms at some point?

A. Yes.
Q. How often did you enter each worker bedroom?
A. I don't remember.
Q. Did you enter each of the bedrooms more than 20 times?
A. During the season, no, maybe less.
Q. About how many times?
A. Maybe ten or less sometimes.
Q. How many fridges did you see in the worker bedrooms in 2015?
A. I saw only one that I remember.
Q. In 2015, did you ever see any mattresses placed on the floor of the worker housing camp?
A. No, those I would remember.
Q. Before 2015, was there ever a problem at Sun Valley with there not being enough mattresses for all of the workers in the dorm?
A. No.
Q. Was there ever a problem with there not being enough places for the workers in the dorm to sleep?
A. No.

Q. In 2015, was there a problem with there not being enough places to sleep?

A. No, no.

Q. In 2015, did the Marinos enter the working housing?

A. I think that I remember, only once, Russ Marino, Russ, Jr. he entered one of the bedrooms.

Q. And why did he do that?

A. I don't remember. But I think his -- why did he enter? I don't remember. Because, but I was in the inside when he came and he, he step inside, but nothing specific.

Q. What did he say to you then?

A. I don't remember what he told me. He was telling me something about the guys, when we have all these problems, the guys didn't want to work. I don't know. I don't remember.

Q. Did that conversation have anything to do with workers leaving Sun Valley?

A. Not yet. I think, I think that, that, the first time, we still didn't know that they were going to leave.

Q. Which workers are you referring to?

A. The June, June group.
Q. How many workers were in that group?
A. I think 20.
Q. Were there electrical outlets in the bedrooms of the worker housing?
A. Yes.
Q. About how many?
A. The outlets, they have plenty and every time I go and I tell them not to overcharge them, over-plug, you know, plug different stuff.
Q. What would the workers plug in?
A. Because they have fans. They have air conditioners -- I mean fans. They have the radio. I don't know. They have a lot of things.
Q. Did they have anything else?
A. I don't know.
Q. What kind of problem was there if the workers plugged too much into the outlets?
A. The cable can overheat and it can burn and inside, we have the breaker, breaker box and it trips.
Q. Did that happen in 2015?

A. Yes.
Q. How many times?
A. Only one, one time, two times, I remember.
Q. What does it take to fix that?
A. I just go to inside and I push the breaker and that's it.
Q. What about before 2015, was there a problem with workers over-plugging devices?
A. Always the same problem, but only one or two times, once or twice a year. Because now many, after that, they know, they don't have to plug, you know, a lot of things into one outlet.
Q. Does Sun Valley have rules about what workers can plug in, in the dorms?
A. No, no.
Q. Do you set rules about what the workers can plug in the dorms?
A. No, no.
Q. The buses that the workers rode from the housing camp to the fields in 2015, who owned those vehicles?
A. Sun Valley.
Q. Who paid the insurance on the vehicles?

A. Sun Valley.

Q. Were you involved in the use of those vehicles?

A. No.

Q. Did you drive those vehicles?

A. No.

Q. Did you assign people to drive the vehicles?

A. Like I said at the beginning, when a group of guys come and we need drivers, I ask the guys who has the Mexican driver's licenses or who is a driver, experienced driver and they drive. I let them drive.

Q. If someone -- in 2015, did workers show you a Mexican driver's license?

A. Like two of them that I remember.

Q. Was that enough for them to be permitted to drive the vehicles?

A. I don't know.

Q. Did they show you anything any other licenses?

A. No.

Q. Did you permit them to drive the vehicles?

A. Yes.
Q. Did Sun Valley know that those workers were driving the vehicles?
A. Well, when they told me about that, I said there's nobody with a New Jersey license, so somebody has to drive the vans. So.
Q. Did Sun Valley know who was driving those vehicles?
A. No.
Q. Other than those two workers, who else drove the vehicles in 2015?
A. Nobody. Nobody.
Q. Who drives the vehicles this year at Sun Valley?
A. This year, right now, I got three, three drivers. I got my son, who he has a New Jersey license. And I got another two guys that drive the vans. But to tell you the truth, I haven't asked them if they have -- I know them from -- I don't know if they still got them. They still got their license or not, I don't know.
Q. Where do you know them from?
A. Not in Mexico, but from here. They have been coming for the past two years.

Q. Have you asked them to show you their driver's licenses?

A. No, I haven't. I haven't thought of that.

Q. Did you ask them to show you their driver's licenses in a previous year?

A. No. I just know that they are good drivers.

Q. What about last year, who drove the vehicles at Sun Valley?

A. Different guys. I don't remember.

Q. Did they show you their driver's licenses in 2016?

A. Only a couple of them.

Q. Did they -- who was in charge of deciding who drove the vans in 2016?

A. That would be me.

Q. And what about in 2017, who was in charge of deciding who drove the vans?

A. That would be me.

Q. Before 2015, who was in charge of deciding who drove the vans?

A. It's me. I'm in charge of the camp.

Q. Did Sun Valley ever tell you what kind of license was required before someone drove other workers in a van?
A. Yes.
Q. Who told you?
A. Russ. Russ, Jr.
Q. What did he say?
A. That we need drivers with a New Jersey license.
Q. When was this conversation?
A. Before the, before the first group of H-2A arrived in 2015.
Q. Was it in 2015?
A. Yes.
Q. What did you say in response?
A. That I was going to, I was going to talk to them and ask them. If they have any kind of license. Only two of them show me the license and no, the rest of them, they didn't have anything.
Q. And how did you respond?
A. They drove. They drove it.
Q. In early 2015, you had a conversation with Russell Marino, Jr. about the driver's licenses. And that was before the H-2A workers arrived?

A. Yes, a little bit before, yes.

Q. Did you tell Russell Marino, Jr. that you had problems in the past finding workers with a New Jersey license?

A. Yes.

Q. What did he say?

A. What can we do? We can do nothing.

Q. What did you understand him to mean?

MR. SCHULTE: Objection, speculation.

THE WITNESS: I didn't say anything.

BY MR. GLICK:

Q. Did you understand what Russell Marino, Jr. told you?

A. Yeah, I understood that he asked me for, to look for -- that we need the guys with a license. But then I couldn't find any license, I didn't have any guys with a New Jersey license, so I let drive the vans, two guys that I knew they were drivers.

Q. Did Russell Marino, Jr. know that there were people driving the vans who didn't have New Jersey licenses?

A. I don't know. I didn't never said nothing to him.

Q. Did anybody at Sun Valley know that there were people without -- excuse me. Did anyone else at Sun Valley know that there were people without New Jersey driver's licenses driving workers in vans in 2015?

A. I guess. I don't know. I say no.

Q. Before 2015, did anyone from Sun Valley give you instructions about who was permitted to drive vans between the housing camp and the fields?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Could you please answer verbally?

A. Yes, yes.

Q. When was that?

A. Before 2015?

Q. Yes.

A. Just it was a long time ago when we started to work in the fields and when they start to buy the vans, they told me. I was like 30 some years old.

Q. Who was it that told you something about the vans?

A. Harry Marino.
Q. What did he tell you?
A. They were going to get vans, but we got to be careful and we have to look for guys with a license or experienced drivers.
Q. Did he say that if a driver had experience, they didn't need to have a license?
A. I don't understand.
Q. Harry Marino told you that you should look for drivers with licenses or experience?
A. Uh-huh.
Q. Was it enough for someone to have experience, but not a license?
A. Oh, I think I didn't have another option.
Q. When was the first time that you told someone from Sun Valley that you had difficulty finding workers who had New Jersey driver's licenses to transport workers at Sun Valley?
A. Since the beginning. Since the beginning, 27 years ago.
Q. Did you tell someone at Sun Valley every year about this?

A. No.
Q. How many different years did you tell someone at Sun Valley?
A. I don't remember.
Q. Did you tell someone more than once?
A. Yeah, I think I told them like one, one time. I don't remember.
Q. Did you ever drive the vans that transported workers between the fields and the housing camp?
A. No.
Q. Did you ever ride on those vans?
A. No.
Q. Did you ever go inside of the vans?
A. When I want to inspect that it's clean, that it needs to be clean, yes.
Q. Did you inspect the vans for anything else?
A. Yes, you know, check the oil, check the brake fluid, yes. Uh-huh.
Q. In 2015, did you check to make sure that the seats were securely attached?
A. I don't remember. I don't remember.

Q. How many seats were there on the vans?
A. We have, back then, we had small vans. They fit like 15 passengers.
Q. In 2015, Sun Valley used small vans?
A. Yes, small vans.
Q. How many small vans did Sun Valley have?
A. In 2015?
Q. In 2015, how many small vans did Sun Valley have?
A. Like four or five. I don't remember. And then they start to buy big vans.
Q. When did they start to buy the big vans?
A. In '15.
Q. Do you remember what month in 2015?
A. No.
Q. Did Sun Valley use a big van to transport workers in 2015?
A. Yes.
Q. And there were three people who drove the vehicles in 2015?
A. No, there were more, more than that. I would say only a couple of guys showed me, they told me that they have the Mexican license, but the other guys didn't have a license.

Q. There were other people in 2015 who drove vehicles who didn't show you any licenses?

A. Uh-huh. Yes, yes.

Q. And you permitted them to drive the vehicles?

A. Uh-huh, yes.

Q. Did Sun Valley know that people without any licenses drove the vehicles in 2015?

A. I don't know. I never say nothing.

Q. Did the workers who rode in the vans have space to sit in the vans?

A. Yes.

Q. Did the workers ever stand in the aisles of the vans?

A. They might, I don't know. I'm not sure. But I always, always, when I refer to them and when I saw the guys running to the vans, I tell them once after every day that they don't have to run standing. I don't know what they did while I wasn't there. I don't know.

Q. Did you decide how many people would ride in each van?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you decide which vans would go to which of the fields?

A. Yes, yes.

Q. How did you decide that?

A. Because I keep the guys by groups. I said I need three guys for that group. So take two vans, it's three guys. Or take three small vans, send another three guys. And then after that, they know, you know, where they go.

Q. In determining how many workers went to the different fields, would you count the seats that were available in the vehicles?

A. Yes. Because I told the drivers not to let the guys ride standing.

Q. Did you ever find out that the drivers allowed the workers to ride standing?

A. Only a couple of times, yeah.

Q. What did you find out?

A. When I came, when I get to the field, we were close and they, when I wasn't, I was at the camp and I saw the van coming and I saw a couple of guys standing.

Q. What did you do?

A. I told them. I went right there and I told them that is not allowed. Not permitted.

Q. How many people were riding in the vehicle --

A. Two, at that time, it was only two guys.

Q. How many people were sitting in that vehicle?

A. I don't remember it was, if it was a small van or a big van. I don't remember.

Q. Were people standing in that van because there wasn't enough space to sit?

A. No. Because they were coming, other vans empty, there was, they just step in and the guys are like that. Sometimes they just go.

Q. How did you decide which fields to send workers to?

A. I don't decide. Harry Marino decide.

Q. Does anyone else decide where to send workers to work in the fields?

A. Russ, Jr.
Q. How did they tell you about their decision where the workers should go?
A. Depending on what we're going to pick, he told me we need so many guys to do the job. Bring me three guys. Or bring 20 guys. The rest of the guys, send them to do this job. They decide.
Q. So they decide what crops need attention?
A. Yes, uh-huh.
Q. Do you have a role in deciding that?
A. No, no.
Q. Do you decide when crops should be picked?
A. No.
Q. Do you decide when crops should be planted?
A. No.
Q. How far is it from the housing camp to the furthest away field?
A. It's a 15-minute drive.
Q. What about the closest camp, how far is that from the worker housing? I'm sorry, the closest field, how far is that field from the working housing?

A. Five minutes.

Q. Five minutes by driving?

A. Driving, uh-huh. Very close.

Q. The field that is a 15-minute drive away, is it possible to walk from the housing camp to that field?

A. It's possible, but they're not going to walk for a couple of hours.

Q. It would be a couple of hours walk to walk from the furthest field to the worker housing?

A. Uh-huh, yes.

Q. How often did workers work in that particular field?

A. Not that I remember.

Q. Did they work there ever in 2015?

A. In 2015, I don't remember anybody who walked from the field to the house.

Q. It would be a very long way to walk?

A. It's two hours, yes.

Q. Did some workers work in that far away field in 2015?

A. Yes, we have vegetables there, yes, in that part.

Q. What crops were grown there in 2015?

A. Peppers, cucumbers, pickles.

Q. If a worker wanted to leave the field after working for eight hours in a day, how could they get back to the housing?

A. Okay. There is two ways. When, because they had told me, I have been through that a lot of times. If some guys want to quit at lunchtime, I got my truck, my personal truck, that is not a farm truck, it's my truck, we run the food there. And if there are two or three guys that they don't, they want to stop at lunchtime and they ask me, they tell me, they come to me and say, I want to stop, because I don't feel good or whatever, I let them drive in the -- on the back of the truck with a camper, with a camper.

Q. And you would drive the workers?

A. No, my wife. I mean, I would drive, no. My wife is driving my truck, because I have to stay in the field.

Q. So if workers wanted to leave the field early, your wife could drive them back?

A. But only after lunchtime. Only at 12:00 o'clock, when we finish. If that happened, after she leaves, either one. They have to stay in the vans, they have to work for us or if I have to go to the camp to do something, I drive them in my truck. So if it's only one guy, drive in my passenger seat.

Q. Are there any other ways that a worker could return to the housing camp if it was after lunch?

A. Yes, yes.

Q. How else?

A. Sometimes they have friends, they're going to do, they're going to go somewhere and they call their friends and they come and they pick them up and they go.

Q. Any other ways that a worker could return to the housing early?

A. No.

Q. If a worker in 2015 chose to wait in the van until the end of the day, was there air conditioning in that van?

A. It was in the shade. We have a lot of woods there. And the truck is parked there. They go, they stay in the shade. I seen some guys sleeping or -- because I'm very busy. I can't send anybody home just to take this guy in particular.

Q. There wasn't any air conditioning in the vans?

A. They got air conditioning, but I haven't tried if it works or not. But I think some of them, they have, they have.

Q. If a worker --

A. Yeah.

Q. If a worker stopped working early, was there somewhere they could drink water?

A. Yes.

Q. Where was that?

A. In the place where we -- where we park all the vans, there's a faucet and if not, they see us right from here to the road, they go and drink water.

Q. Are the fields very large at Sun Valley?

A. Some of them, there are long rows, yes.

Q. How long would it take to walk from one side of the field to the other?

A. I would say walking, ten minutes, not even ten minutes. I would say, I don't know, but, yeah, but walking, yes, not even ten minutes.

Q. Were there times when a worker would have to walk across the field to get water?

A. No, we always have water right there, one side.

Q. How many supplies of water were available at each field?

A. We have a truck, the water truck, and I got one guy in charge of that, making sure that we need water. And we got the water jugs in the back of the wagon that we're working with. And in the truck, on one side, on one side, if we working one way, I tell them to put the truck one way. But every time me or the driver, the tractor driver, I tell them to make sure if the water jug is almost empty, I send the guy and he goes, he goes to the water supply and come back.

Q. Who is it that's in charge of the water supply?

A. It could be anyone. It could be anyone.

Q. So were there ever times when workers were working in different parts of the field at once?

A. Yes. Yes, but when we work -- when we have two groups, I have one group here and one group there.

Q. How far away would those two groups be in the fields in 2015?

A. Like 15 minutes walk.

Q. Was there water in both places?

A. Yes.

Q. Always?

A. Yes, always.

Q. How did you make sure of that?

A. Because I call the guy that I have in charge of that group and I send the guy in the water truck to go and supply water to them.

Q. How many different fields does Sun Valley have?

A. Many.

Q. More than ten?

A. More than ten.

Q. Is it about 12?

A. It could be, because they are big. It's a big farm. They rent a lot of ground.
Q. In 2015, how many different fields would workers work in at the same time?
A. Saying to farms, I'm not sure. I'm not sure.
Q. Was it more than three?
A. More than three, yes.
Q. Was it more than five?
A. I'm not sure.
Q. How could you make sure that there was water in all the different fields at once?
A. We got only one water supply, the faucet. Only one, only one water spot where we and where we, when we leave to the field, I -- we fill the water jugs with fresh water. And when it's too hot, they are drinking and drinking and they empty fast. So I got the guy checking them and they grab the water jugs, they put them in the truck and they go back to the water supply and bring them to the field.
Q. And you keep track of all of that?
A. Yes.
Q. In all of the different fields at once?

A. Yes.

MR. SCHULTE: Off the record.

BY MR. GLICK:

Q. Mr. Hernandez, as you know, there is an interpreter present. Do you understand?

A. Yes.

Q. Are there any questions for which you would like to have a translation?

A. Not at the moment.

Q. You will let me know if there are any times which you would like to have translation?

A. Yes.

Q. So we were discussing or I was asking you questions about the fields and about the water that is available. The faucet pump from which the drinking water comes, how much time does it take to drive from the place where the water cooler is parked to the faucet?

A. Like five minutes.

Q. Is it longer from some of the

A. Me and another guy, another two guys. I had two groups, two groups besides me. I have two groups.

Q. Anyone else besides those other two?

A. No.

Q. There were more than three different fields being worked at any given time; is that right?

A. Well, when I say more than three fields, we have in the farm, we have more than three fields, but when we work with the groups, it's one group in each field.

Q. What time of day would the water run low in the fields?

A. Especially after lunch when it gets hot. Maybe around two or 3:00 o'clock is when they start to drink more water.

Q. And that's also the time that you bring out the sodas to sell to the workers?

A. No, no, it's in the morning, the break in morning. The morning break is 8:30, 9:00 o'clock. In the afternoon, it's around three, 3:30. Between 3:00 and 3:30.

Q. The lunch that's served at the kitchen, is there water available for the workers to drink?

A. Yes. Yes, there is.

Q. Is that water available for free?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. Are there also other beverages available for the workers?

A. Not besides water, fresh water, uh-huh.

Q. Are there beverages that the workers can buy at lunch?

A. Just like the Gatorades, yes.

Q. Anything else?

A. The sodas.

Q. The same sodas --

A. The same sodas, yeah.

Q. -- that are sold at the kitchen in the afternoon?

A. Yes.

Q. And the same beverages that are sold at the afternoon break in the fields?

A. Yes.

Q. And at the morning break in the fields?

A. Yes.

Q. Are the prices the same --
A. Yes.
Q. -- as lunch for the workers to buy?
A. Yes.
Q. Is there anything else sold at lunchtime besides the sodas?
A. No.
Q. At dinner, are the same sodas sold to the workers?
A. Yes.
Q. Anything else available for purchase by the workers at dinner?
A. No.
Q. And was that true in 2015, the workers could purchase sodas at lunch?
A. Yes.
Q. And at dinner in 2015, the workers could purchase sodas at dinner?
A. Yes.
Q. Is there water provided for free at dinner?
A. Yes.
Q. Who provides the water?
A. Me and the kitchen, the helpers. I tell them to fill the jugs with waters on the tables, yes.

Q. In 2015, did the workers buy sodas at lunch?

A. Yes.

Q. How many?

A. I don't know.

Q. Did you keep records of their purchases?

A. No.

Q. How did they pay?

A. Cash.

Q. Did they pay you?

A. Yes.

Q. Did they ever purchase the sodas from someone other than you?

A. Yes. When they, when the vending trucks come, they pull into the camp, they buy from them. They sell sodas, yes.

Q. Those are trucks that you aren't running, right?

A. No, no, it's vending trucks. It's like they come from other towns and they come to the camps. They are driving around. There are people that all they do is that, vending.

Q. Did you ever send any of those vending trucks away from Sun Valley?

A. Oh no, no.

Q. Did you ever tell any workers not to purchase items --

A. No.

Q. -- from the vending trucks?

A. No.

Q. Mr. Hernandez, if you could please try to wait until I finish asking my question until you answer. Do you understand that?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever criticize a worker for purchasing something from the vending truck?

A. No.

Q. Did anyone set any rules about whether workers could purchase items from the vending trucks?

A. No.

Q. Earlier in 2015 before the workers arrived and when you were pruning trees, how did Sun Valley pay you?

A. They pay me by piecework and they give me a commission of what the guys trim.

Q. Did they pay you anything by hour?

A. Not in pruning. When we work picking stuff, picking, when we start harvesting, yes, sir, they pay me by the hour.

Q. So just focusing on the time that you were pruning, you were paid a combination of piece rate and a commission; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Did Sun Valley deduct taxes from your paychecks during that time?

A. Yes, a lot. It's a lot.

Q. And during that time when you were pruning trees in 2015, did Sun Valley reimburse you for any expenses?

A. I don't remember. When I do some expenses in the camp, they do reimburse me.

Q. What kind of expenses did Sun Valley reimburse you for in 2015?

A. I don't remember. I'm not sure.

Q. Did Sun Valley reimburse you for any expenses in connection with the worker housing?

A. No.

Q. Did Sun Valley reimburse you for any expenses related to the kitchen?

A. No.

Q. Did Sun Valley reimburse you for any expenses for work equipment?

A. No.
Q. Did you have any expenses in 2015?
A. Not at the camp, I don't think so. I'm not sure.
Q. What about before 2015, did Sun Valley reimburse you for any expenses?
A. No, because all, when there was something wrong, they hired people to fix it.
Q. In 2015, did you have to pay out of pocket to fix anything at Sun Valley?
A. Yes, but little things. Little things. I wasn't worried about that. Little things like screen doors, five dollars. Like light bulbs, ten dollars. Little things, but not much. And I never, I never say nothing to them.
Q. You never asked Sun Valley to reimburse you?
A. No.
Q. Did Sun Valley have a policy about whether they would reimburse you?
A. I don't know.
Q. Did they ever tell you that they would reimburse you for expenses?

A. Yes.
Q. What did they tell you?
A. That if I spent on some fixes, bring the tickets, they will reimburse me.
Q. Who told you that?
A. Russ Marino, Jr.
Q. When did he tell you that?
A. It was a long time ago, before '15, a long time ago.
Q. Did Sun Valley's policy about reimbursement change after you had that conversation?
A. I don't know.
Q. Did Sun Valley ever tell you that the policy had changed?
A. I don't know. No, they don't, they didn't.
Q. In early 2015, was there a time where you weren't doing pruning work?
A. After, after the first week of April, we, we finish with the pruning. We did something else.
Q. When did the pruning start in 2015?
A. The beginning, like March 15th.
Q. Who assigned you to do the pruning in March 2015?

A. Harry, Harry Marino.

Q. Did he decide how much work you would do?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he decide when you did the pruning work?

A. Yes.

Q. Before March 15, 2015, did you do any work for Sun Valley between January 1st and March 15, 2015?

A. January 15, no.

Q. Did Sun Valley pay you anything in January or February 2015?

A. No.

Q. What about before March 15, 2015?

A. No.

Q. Where were you living between January and March 2015?

A. I was living at my home and I was, I went to Mexico for vacation for six weeks. I came back and I was collecting, I started to collect, not -- I mean for a few weeks for, I don't know, I don't remember, three, four weeks, three weeks, I went to Mexico, I came back and I was collecting unemployment.

Q. Were you collecting unemployment in relation to your work at Sun Valley?

A. Yes.

Q. In 2015, did you work for anyone other than Sun Valley?

A. No.

Q. In 2014, did you work for anyone other than Sun Valley?

A. No.

Q. When was the last time you worked for anyone other than Sun Valley?

A. I never, I never, I never worked for anybody else other than Sun Valley.

Q. Was there ever a time where Sun Valley paid you money that they didn't deduct taxes from?

A. No.

Q. Why did the kitchen workers start to be paid by you instead of Sun Valley?

A. Okay. When they make the change to H-2A workers, they told me the rules was going to change. Everything was going to change. And they were -- they didn't want to be involved with the kitchen anymore. This is when they told me that, they decide to leave me the kitchen, to leave the kitchen, you know, separate from the farm, the kitchen.

Q. Who told you that?

A. All of them. A meeting that we had.

Q. Was that the Marinos?

A. The Marinos, yes.

Q. What year was that?

A. I'm not sure if it was at the end of '14 or the beginning of '15. I don't remember. But it was those months. When they decide to bring, to go H-2A.

Q. What else did the Marinos decide about the change in the kitchen at that time?

A. They decide not to get involved with the kitchen and they decide not to do some jobs that they -- that is their business, I don't want to, you know, they did a lot of changes in the farm, you know, it's not my concern.

Q. What other changes were those?

A. Like in one type of work that I know, I'm talking just about work, I don't know about any financial, I don't know anything of all that. But the type of work, we used to cover the pickles and they decided not to cover anymore. Why the decision, I don't know, because they was -- they were spending more money then.

Q. And did anything else change about the kitchen in 2015 other than who paid the workers in the kitchen?

A. No, no.

Q. Did the people who worked in the kitchen change in 2015?

A. Change? I don't know what, change, change?

Q. Were the people who cooked in the kitchen the same people in 2015 as they were in 2014?

A. Yes.

Q. How did you decide to pay them?

A. Cash.

Q. Did you pay them the same amount they were paid the year before?

A. No, it was a little bit, a little bit less.

Q. Did Sun Valley change the way it paid you in 2015 compared to 2014?

A. It was the same. They looked at my records and they pay me the same thing at the end of the year. It's the same thing, about the same.

Q. Did they tell you anything about what to charge the workers for?

A. No.

Q. Did they set any rules about what you would charge the workers?

A. No.

Q. Did they tell you that it was okay to sell the workers sodas?

A. No.

Q. Did they say anything about selling sodas to the workers?

A. No.

Q. Did they say anything about selling meals to the workers?

A. No.

Q. They knew that in the past you sold meals to the workers?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you discuss anything in that conversation with the Marinos around the end of 2014 or early 2015 about the sales of meals to the workers?

A. We talk a little bit about that, but it was about what was going to change, that they were paying two persons in the kitchen, in 2015, they were not going to pay anymore. That's what we discussed.

Q. Did they tell you that there were things that weren't going to change?

A. No.

Q. Does Sun Valley give you vacation time?

A. No.

Q. Is there a policy about when you can take time off at Sun Valley?

A. No.

Q. Was that the same in 2015?

A. Yes, sir. It has been the same since I have been with them.

Q. Does Sun Valley give you sick time?

A. When I'm really sick, yes.

Q. What happens in terms of your pay if you are sick?

A. If I sick for a day, I never been sick for more than a day, all day. When I -- I manage the hours, so either one I can, I can get -- I can write my hours or I can leave it like that, it's up to me.

Q. And you don't work for any other companies other than Sun Valley?

A. No. No.

Q. Have you ever applied to work at a company other than Sun Valley?

A. No, never.

Q. You don't want to work anywhere else?

A. No. I'm too old for that.

Q. Is there a poster, in 2015, was there a poster in the kitchen that told the workers about any laws?

A. Yes.

Q. Who put that poster up?

A. Joey Marino.

Q. What did the poster say?

A. About the minimum wage, you don't make the minimum wage, you have -- even you have to do to make so much an hour. Even if you are working, kind of how to keep safe, the OSHA stuff and all that.

Q. What's the room called where the workers sat when they ate their meals?

A. Call them eating room or I don't know, because it's in between the kitchen and the bathrooms with the roof.

Q. If I say eating area --

A. Eating area.

Q. -- will you understand I'm referring to the place where the workers ate the three meals a day in 2015?

A. Yes.

Q. Were there posters in that eating area about any laws?

A. Yes.

Q. How many posters?

A. There was one on each side.

Q. What did the posters say?

A. On the laws, requirements of the safety things, the H-2A laws. All kind of information.

Q. Did you put up any of those posters?

A. No.

Q. Did you fill out any information on those posters?

A. I remember one time they asked me to translate, to write in Spanish. I did once,

A. Yes.
Q. When did you first have that license?
A. I'm not sure if it was in 1997. A little bit before 2000.
Q. Did you have a Farm Labor Contractor license from the US Department of Labor in 2015?
A. Yes.
Q. Why did you apply for a US Department of Labor farm contractor -- why did you apply for a US Department of Labor Farm Labor Contractor license?
A. I don't know. Maybe it was a confusing thing, I don't know. I knew before I had the federal, a state license is one and the federal license is another. So what I understand, I always have -- had the federal. When they give me the state, I applied for the federal and they sent me by mail and a couple of weeks ago, the Department of Labor in California called me and they started to ask me about being farm labor contracting, because they thought that I was getting myself the H-2A workers and I told them no, I'm not. So I

Q. Has anyone else filled out an application for a Farm Labor Contractor license saying that you will hire H-2A workers?

A. No.

Q. Have you ever signed an application that says you will hire H-2A workers?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. In 2015 when workers had a question, who would they ask a question?

A. To me.

Q. Would they ask anyone other than you?

A. No. Only when they start to get tired of the job and they start to complain, that I'm talking about the April group, 19 guys, they start to get mad and they start to get tired or do that job, and they quit on me. They didn't want to keep working. They went to the house and they asked me to talk to my boss to tell them. They told me, tell your boss, because we don't even know them. This is when Russ, Jr. and Joey came to the camp to talk to them is the only time somebody has done.

Q. Other than that time, were the workers at Sun Valley able to ask questions directly to Russell Marino, Jr.?

A. Yes. Yes.
Q. Did they ever ask questions directly?
A. I don't know.
Q. When would they have the opportunity in 2015 to ask questions directly of Russell Marino, Jr.?
A. I don't know.
Q. Do you ever see anyone complain to Russell Marino, Jr.?
A. Only that time.
Q. No other times?
A. Not that I see.
Q. Did you ever see any worker ask any question of any of the Marino brothers?
A. No, no.
Q. Did you ever see the Marino brothers speak to any of the workers directly outside of that one time?
A. No.
Q. Was there any other time when workers asked you to pass a message onto the Marino brothers?
A. No.

Q. Any other times that the workers asked you to ask permission for the Marino brothers for something?

A. No.

Q. If the workers wanted something changed, they had to ask you?

A. I think they would. I think they can ask me.

Q. Could they ask anyone other than you?

A. Maybe like I'm in charge of the camp, maybe I would think that they can ask me. And I will ask the farmers to come and we discuss whether, you know, whatever they want to change. I don't know.

Q. Other than the 19 workers who asked to speak to Russell Marino, Jr. and Joey Marino, were there other times in 2015 when workers asked something to be changed?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. When the workers asked to speak to Russell Marino, Jr. and Joey Marino on this particular occasion, these 19 workers, what happened?

A. Well, when he came, he was very busy. He was a little upset. And because the asparagus needed to be cut, we were losing product and they just -- they just a week and a half, they just arrived. They -- he was upset. They didn't say anything offensive. And one of those guys did understand a little bit of English. Because I hear that guy to tell him don't speak loud. And he, he calmed down. And he told them, you know, that's it. And they can't do the job, you know. They wanted to leave. They worked for too long.

Q. Who else was there at the time when this meeting took place?

A. It was outside of the room. All of the workers, the 19 guys and Joey, Russ and me.

Q. Was anyone else there?

A. No.

Q. This was outside of --

A. The bedrooms.

Q. And this was a meeting that happened around the beginning of May 2015?

A. I think close, I think it was about that time. I don't remember the exact date, but it was, it was in early May.

Q. And the 19 workers were H-2A workers who had arrived at some point in April 2015?

A. Yes.

Q. Where were you standing during this meeting?

A. One side. I didn't speak out. He, he understand and he speak Spanish pretty good.

Q. Who does?

A. Russ Marino.

Q. Were you able to hear everything that Russell Marino, Jr. said at this meeting?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you able to hear everything that the workers said at this meeting?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you able to hear everything that Joey Marino said at this meeting?

A. Yes.

Q. What time of day was this meeting?

A. I don't remember exactly. It was at the beginning of May. I think it was at the beginning of May.

Q. Was it in the morning?

A. Around, around lunchtime. Around, I remember it was a little bit before or a little bit after.

Q. Did those 19 workers work in the fields that morning?

A. I don't remember. I don't think so. All of them they stay home, because they want to leave.

Q. How did you know they were going to leave?

A. Because they, they were talking and talking, that they didn't like the job. And they were suffering in the field. I saw them. And calling by phone. I hear a couple of guys calling to their agent in Mexico. I spoke with their agents. And I just, I explain to her, it was a lady, I explain to her and I told them that the job was too tough for them. And then he asked me to speak with one of the guys again. And he tell her, that yes, the job was too tough. That it was not for them. That job wasn't for them. That they would want to leave.

Q. How long before the meeting outside the worker housing did you have this conversation with the agent?

A. A couple of minutes.

it was fast.

Q. Did you translate at that meeting?

A. No.

Q. You didn't speak at that meeting?

A. No, I didn't speak.

Q. Who spoke first at that meeting?

A. Russ Marino.

Q. What did he say?

A. That he was, he was there to see what happened, what was wrong. Why they keep -- they can keep working. We have a lot of asparagus and it was, you know, growing up. We were going to lose, what was wrong.

Q. Who spoke next?

A. About three or four of them, they were like the leaders of the group.

Q. And which of them spoke?

A. I don't remember. I don't remember.

Q. But one of them spoke next?

A. Yes.

Q. What did they say?

A. It wasn't the job for them. That they wanted to leave.

Q. What happened next?

A. I don't remember. I don't remember.
Q. Did any other workers speak?
A. About three other guys speak.
Q. Did Russell Marino, Jr. respond to what the first worker said?
A. Yes, I think, I think he did.
Q. What did he say?
A. I don't know.
Q. Do you remember anything Russell Marino, Jr. said in response to a worker at that meeting?
A. That he was, he was losing a lot of asparagus. It was a tough job, but they knew what -- they knew in Mexico what they were expected to do when they come here. But they, why they came.
Q. What else did he say?
A. And at the end, then he say that they wanted to leave, that's okay, just to, they had to sign the note, the voluntary exit, I don't know.
THE COURT REPORTER: The what exit?
MR. SCHULTE: He said voluntary.

THE WITNESS: It's a voluntary note, you know, signing they're free to go.

BY MR. GLICK:

Q. What did the other workers say at the meeting?

A. I don't remember. I don't remember.

Q. Is there anything else you remember about the meeting?

A. Just that they didn't want to sign. They were like they didn't want to sign, because they were afraid that this, that this signature will affect them in the future with coming with another visa. And he said that no, he wasn't going to harm, harm them or, you know, yeah. Make any harm. But he was going to leave the notes and check the box whatever they feel more comfortable with English or Spanish.

Q. It was Russell Marino, Jr. who responded about the forms?

A. Yes.

Q. Did Russell Marino, Jr. bring those forms to the meeting?

A. Yes. Yes. No, later he went and got them and a couple of more hours later, in the afternoon, he give me the -- all the forms and I brought them to the camp. I handed one by one. They read it. And I told them like he say check the box whatever is more convenient for you.

Q. Did you say anything else?

A. No.

Q. Did you help the workers fill out the form?

A. No.

Q. Did any of the workers ask about how to fill out the form?

A. No.

Q. Did anyone tell the workers which box to check on the form?

A. They ask me, but I say it's in Spanish, whatever is more convenient for you. I didn't tell them check this or check that, no.

Q. What do you mean by convenient?

A. There was different options, it was like three or four options. And whatever, so they make sure it wasn't harm, you know, make harm in the future. You know, like they check, I'm quitting my job is, you know, another was, I want to go to Mexico, because I got a sick family. I think it was, you know, different, all the different options.

Q. Did any of the workers tell you that they had sick family?

A. No.

Q. Did any of the workers tell you that a family member had died?

A. No.

Q. Did any of the workers tell you that they were sick?

A. No.

Q. Did you tell the workers to fill out the form truthfully?

A. If they told me?

Q. When you gave the form to the workers, did you tell them to fill it out truthfully?

A. Yes. Well, I told them, I told them read it in Spanish and check the box more convenient for you. Whatever you want. I didn't tell them what box to check.

you into the worker housing?
A. No.
Q. Did any of the other Marinos enter the worker housing at that time?
A. No.
Q. Did Russell Marino, Jr. sign the forms that the workers signed?
A. I don't remember.
Q. Did Russell Marino, Jr. watch the 19 workers signed those forms?
A. No.
Q. He wasn't around when the workers signed those forms?
A. No.
Q. Were you present when the workers signed the forms?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you watch the workers sign the forms?
A. Yes.
Q. Again, referring to the 19 workers who left around early May 2015 and the meeting that took place outside the housing area with Russell Marino, Jr. and Joey Marino, and yourself, do you understand what I'm referring talking about quitting. My job is to inform everything that happens to the farmer, to the owner.

Q. And the owner is who?

A. Russ Marino and Harry Marino.

Q. Were there other times in 2015 when groups of workers left the farm for some reason?

A. That year, later, with the second group, yes.

Q. What happened?

A. It was in June, July, August, I think it was in August, I think. I don't know how many acres, but a lot of acres of peppers, they got diseased and we lost them. So they decide that we got too many guys in the camp for the work, the work coming ahead. So they decide to send 44 guys back to Mexico.

Q. Who decided that?

A. Harry and Russell Marino.

Q. How did you find out about that decision?

A. They told me.

Q. What did they say?

A. That we were running out of work, there's not enough work for everybody. It does not make sense for everybody to be there in the camp doing nothing, working a couple of hours. That it's better to send one group ahead.

Q. When did the Marinos tell you that?

A. That was in August, I think it was in August.

Q. Where did that conversation take place?

A. In the farm.

Q. Was it a meeting with them in person?

A. No.

Q. Was it by phone?

A. He told me in person, but not in that meeting. He told me, he told me in the field.

Q. Who decided which 44 workers were going to have to go?

A. Me.

Q. How did you decide?

A. I decide, I had to pick the guys that they were, I don't want to -- I don't know, we look, I look, my job is look for the better for the company, right. And I saw there are some guys that are good and some guys that are not too good. They don't like to work. They stay in the house. Every weekend, they stay in the house. They talk too much, give you a lot of troubles and this is the way I pick those guys.

Q. Did Sun Valley give you instructions on how to pick the 44 guys?

A. Just they told me the guys that should leave first, should leave is the guys that came first in the first group, you know, they have more time, more hours worked.

Q. Who told you that?

A. Russell Marino, Russell, Jr.

Q. Did he explain why those workers should be the ones selected to leave?

A. Because they have the most, the more, more time, the more -- they got there before, more hours worked. And they got a rule or a requirement that the guys has to work so many hours at least to leave without getting into trouble.

Q. Did you use any lists to help you pick which those 44 workers were?

A. No, because I knew.

Q. How did you know?
A. After, after one month, I know everybody.
Q. You knew what month people arrived?
A. They arrive in June, the first of June, uh-huh.
Q. Did Sun Valley approve your selection of which workers were going to leave?
A. Yes.
Q. How did you present your selection of those workers to Sun Valley?
A. I make a list, again, I make a list and I give it to them.
Q. Who did you give it to?
A. To Russ, Jr.
Q. Did Russ, Jr. ask you to make a list?
A. Yes, to pick, yes, make a list of 44 guys.
Q. And do you still have that list?
A. No.
Q. What happened after you gave the list to Russ, Jr.?
A. He arranges, he arrange everything, the legal stuff with Theresa and he called the bus company and the bus company sends one of the buses from Mexico and they were paid that day. Everybody got their paycheck and the two paychecks, because we work in one week ahead. They got two paychecks and then they left. They signed, you know, you know, reimbursement.

Q. Who told the workers that were being let go about this decision?

A. Me.

Q. How did that happen?

A. I call all the guys and I told them about, about what happened with the acres of peppers we lost. And if we stay, if everybody stay, there was, there wasn't enough work for everybody down the road. And the farmers want to, want 45 guys to leave so there's enough work for all the guys and not many guys in the camp, I told them.

Q. And what happened next?

A. Nothing. They just, they just saw each other and nothing, they didn't say anything until when I, when I name all the guys, I read the list. One day later, I read the list to them.

Q. So the meeting that you just documents before they left?

A. They signed the same, the same note, the same application with the voluntarily exit.

Q. That's the same kind of form that the 19 workers departed in May of 2015 --

A. Yes, exactly.

Q. -- signed?

A. Yes.

Q. How do you know that the August workers signed that form?

A. Because again, I give it to them.

Q. Did you give it to all of the 44 workers --

A. Yes.

Q. -- who left in August?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you give it to them?

A. When I -- after I name all the 44 names, and then I hand the list to the office and they make it.

Q. How long after you announced the names did you hand out the paperwork to -- how long after you announced the names did you hand out the paperwork for the voluntary departure?

A. It was the next day.
Q. Where did you hand out the forms?
A. At the camp.
Q. Was it inside the camp?
A. Yes.
Q. Inside the bedrooms?
A. No.
Q. Where inside the camp?
A. The eating area, eating area.
Q. Were any of the Marinos present when you handed out the forms to the 44 workers in the eating area in August?
A. No.
Q. What did you say when you handed out the forms?
A. Again, I told them the same thing, the 19 guys, I told them to check the box. It was the voluntary exit that they read it and sign it, English and Spanish and keep the Spanish one and give me back the English form. And check the box more convenient for them.
Q. Did the workers fill out the form that day when you handed it out?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you see the workers sign the form?

A. Yes.

Q. Did all of the workers give you the form back?

A. Yes.

Q. Did all of the forms you received back have signatures on them?

A. Yes.

Q. And Russell Marino, Jr. didn't see those workers sign those forms?

A. He wasn't there.

Q. So he didn't see them sign the forms?

A. No.

Q. Did the workers ask any questions in the eating area when you passed out the forms in August?

A. No.

Q. Did any of those 44 workers leave Sun Valley voluntarily?

A. Yes, I would say yes.

Q. How many of them?

A. I don't know. The 44.

Q. Did any of the 44 workers who left in August have a choice about whether to leave

Sun Valley?

A. Nobody say nothing to me.

Q. Could any of the 44 workers have decided to keep working at Sun Valley in August 2015?

A. No one say nothing to me.

Q. Could any of the 44 workers have decided to stay and work in 2015?

A. I don't know.

Q. Did you decide that those 44 workers had to leave Sun Valley?

A. I just, I just told anyway 44 guys was, they had to leave, 44 guys, any 44. So I made the decision to pick all those names. Nobody, nobody asked me to change, you know, for a different guy or he really want to stay, nobody say nothing to me.

Q. Didn't some of the workers tell you that they were upset and they wished -- why couldn't somebody else leave instead?

A. Yeah, one guy, about the six guys that I was talking about, they started to talk and talk and talk that they -- but they didn't say why me? They say why don't send them.

Q. Isn't that the same thing?

A. Not for me.
Q. How is it different?
A. Because he never had a chance to consent. He never asked me, hey look, I really want to stay why don't you send the other guy instead.
Q. How did you respond to those workers who said why not send someone else?
A. I said 44 guys cut, they say 44 guys have to leave. I could pick any other names.
Q. But you picked those 44 names?
A. Yes.
Q. In 2015, did Sun Valley's workers use a system to clock in when they started working?
A. Yes.
Q. What was the system?
A. It's called PET Tiger. It's a system they have from California, with if a how forget it.
Q. Is it an electronic system?
A. Yes. Yes.
Q. Where is the system physically located at Sun Valley?

A. In the office. The office.
Q. How did workers use that system?
A. The main, the main computer is inside the office. They give me, I use a couple of tablets, iPads and they, I got the application and I scan them in, scan them out.
Q. Do you do that every day?
A. Yes.
Q. What do you scan?
A. The ID card with the photo and the bar code.
Q. Every worker at Sun Valley has a photo with a bar code?
A. Yes.
Q. When do the workers receive that photo with the bar code?
A. Before they start to work. Every time when they come, before they start to work, they have to have the ID card.
Q. When during the workday do you scan the bar code to mark the worker as clocking in?
A. When we start in the morning, and when we finish out the day.
Q. Do the workers clock out at any point during the middle of the day?

A. When some of them, they don't feel good, he feeling sick, I clock them out and he go home.

Q. Do the workers clock out for the mid-morning break?

A. No.

Q. Do you clock the workers out at lunch?

A. No.

Q. Do you clock the workers out at the afternoon break?

A. No.

Q. Is there any other reason that a worker would clock out -- excuse me one second.

Is there any time a worker wouldn't clock in, in the morning?

A. When we start to work, it's like in every group is like 30, 40 guys, they came over and I start to clock them in, clock them in. I don't see their faces. And it happened a couple of times I know of that after lunchtime he told me, I didn't do it. Why didn't you do it? I forget, like they, they didn't get used -- like they didn't use to it. They didn't do it, they forget. But what I do, what I do in that cases, I call the secretary in the office and they fix the time in the computer.

Q. When that happens, what do you tell the secretary?

A. To fix the time for this name. And they look at the computer that day, oh say, oh yes, he didn't, this guy didn't clock in. So she fix it. They are able to fix it.

Q. And what does the secretary change it to?

A. I don't know. I'm not familiar with the system there.

Q. Do you ask the secretary to make sure that the worker gets credit for --

A. Yes.

Q. -- beginning the time that he began working that day?

A. Yes.

Q. Are there any other times when this electronic time system would not accurately show how many hours a worker worked on a particular day?

A. It happened, this year, it hasn't happened. But last year, it happened like three times where we didn't have enough, it wasn't set up right, the iPads, the satellite, I don't know. They were having problems, but I would do regular and when everything fixed, they fix everybody.

Q. Were there any problems like that in 2015?

A. No. I don't remember.

Q. Any other problems with the timekeeping system in 2015?

A. Not that I remember.

Q. Were there times where a worker wouldn't go to work in 2015 for an entire day?

A. Again, I have those six guys coming from Vera Cruz in Mexico, they never work on Saturdays. They will never work on Saturdays. Even if we need them, they never work on Saturdays. They say because I'm not sure, or Sundays, I'm not sure, I think it was Sundays. Sorry. I think it was Sundays. I'm not pretty sure. But they never work on one day of the week. They say because they need their rides and they are not allowed, supposed to work on Sunday. Okay. You don't want to work, no problem. It was six guys, every Sunday, they stay home. It's the only day.

Q. In 2015, did those six workers, when they would stay home on the weekend, would you tell somebody in the Sun Valley office about that?

A. Yeah, I tell the boss, yeah.

Q. What would you tell them?

A. That I have a group of guys that they don't work on Sundays.

Q. Why did you tell the office that?

A. This is my job.

Q. Were there ever days where workers were sick in the year 2015?

A. Yeah, it was a couple of cases.

Q. Would you tell the office about that?

A. Yes.

Q. What would you tell them?

A. That I got a sick guy and he's not able to work or she wasn't feeling good.

Q. And what would the office say?

A. They would say okay.

Q. Who at the office would you talk to about that?

A. Harry.

Q. Anyone else?

A. No.

MR. GLICK: Could you please mark this as Exhibit 1.

- - - - -

(List Bates DOL01212 marked Hernandez Exhibit 1 for identification.)

- - - - -

BY MR. GLICK:

Q. Mr. Hernandez, I'm showing you a document with a number on the bottom right corner that says DOL01212 and I'm going to refer to this document as Exhibit 1. For the record, I'm just going to note that this was a document previously attached as Exhibit D, as part of Exhibit D to our Request for Admission.

Mr. Hernandez, do you recognize this document?

A. This is my, this is my handwriting.

Q. So you recognize this document by your handwriting?

A. Yes.

Q. And what is this document?

A. It's when, when before, before the H-2As came, I had these guys working, so this is when I started to charge 75 for the foods. And in the bottom is expenses and I have two cookers.

Q. So this document, Exhibit 1 marks names of workers that were at Sun Valley before the H-2A workers arrived?

A. Yes, they were there before, yes.

Q. And on Exhibit 1, what does the series of $75 notations mean?

A. It's what they pay for food at that time.

Q. And on Exhibit 1, what do the checkmarks next to $75 mean?

A. It's just a way to do it, I just put 75 and I check, 75, check. And when they don't pay, I don't check.

Q. So in Exhibit 1, a checkmark means that a worker paid $75 to you?

A. Yes.

Q. And the workers paid this money for the meal plan in 2015 at Sun Valley?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you keep these kinds of tallies on a regular basis in 2015?

A. Yes.

Q. Did anyone else at Sun Valley keep these kinds of tallies?

A. I don't remember if I hand it to the office, but I don't, I'm not sure. I don't think so. I don't think. But the Department of Labor saw all this.

Q. In Exhibit 1, I would like to call your attention to a line about halfway down the page that looks to me that it says 16 x 75. Do you see that line?

A. Oh yes. Sixteen times 75.

Q. Why did you write that on Exhibit 1?

A. Because I think there were 16 guys, they pay me 75, how much I collect from them.

Q. In 2015, was it your usual practice to make notes about the total amount that you collected from the workers?

A. Yes.

Q. And those notes reflected the total amount you collected from the workers in cash for the meals at Sun Valley?

A. Yes.

Q. What do the lines on Exhibit 1 mean below the 16 times 75?

A. The expenses, what I spent.
Q. Those are expenses related to the kitchen?
A. Yes.
Q. And what are those expenses for?
A. When I start the kitchen, in the first month, the first four or six weeks, when I have a small amount of guys, I spend more than I collect from the guys and I put money out of my pocket for five or six weeks, whatever, until more guys come and we start to, I start to collect more money from the guys and we start to get even and sometimes I get the money back, the difference.
Q. How do you keep track of the difference?
A. I don't, I don't keep track, I just guess or -- I don't know. I just do like that. I never keep track.

MR. GLICK: I would like to have this marked as Exhibit 2, please.

- - - - -

(Signature List by Crew Bates DOL01368 to 1369 marked Hernandez Exhibit 2 for identification.)

- - - - -

BY MR. GLICK:

Q. I'm showing a document that has the letters at the bottom DOL01368 and the second page DOL1369. Mr. Hernandez, I'm going to refer to this document as Exhibit 2. Do you understand?

A. Yes.

Q. And I'll just note that this is another document previously attached to our Request for Admission as one of the pages in Exhibit D. Mr. Hernandez, do you recognize Exhibit 2?

A. Yes.

Q. How do you recognize Exhibit 2?

A. Because this is the list that they start to hand me when the H-2A workers came, they start to hand me this list. So they sign, it's the form I was talking about earlier, when they sign, they pay me. They sign and they pay me. They sign and they pay me.

Q. So you recognize Exhibit 2 because Sun Valley gave you lists of the workers each week and this is one of those lists?

A. This is one of the lists and I know a lot of names from here, these names, yeah.

Q. And you used Sun Valley's lists of workers to keep track of which workers paid for the meals in 2015?

A. Yes.

Q. How did you use Exhibit 2 to keep track?

MR. SCHULTE: Objection. He didn't say he did.

BY MR. GLICK:

Q. Mr. Hernandez, did you tell the workers to sign Exhibit 2?

A. Yes.

Q. And what did you tell them?

A. This is a requirement just to make sure to prove that they pay and they get the meal. By signing this, they, they are agreed that they received the meal and they pay. They receive the meal and they pay.

Q. If a worker didn't sign Exhibit 2, what would you do?

A. Like in this case, like some guys in blank, some guys, they don't pay me, because they help me in the kitchen and I help them out with that. And in other cases, like in other cases, I didn't put over here. But in some cases, some of the guys, they leave and the name keeps getting there and they don't sign, because they are not working there.

Q. Mr. Hernandez, on Exhibit 2, I would like to call your attention to a column on the right side of the page, handwritten numbers, I see the number 60 written to a name, a signature that looks to me like Ricardo Arias. Do you see the number 60?

A. Yes.

Q. What do the numbers in that column of numbers mean?

A. That I didn't do it. I have no idea.

Q. Do you recognize the handwriting of those numbers?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Is there any other handwriting on Exhibit 2 that you don't recognize?

A. No, just those numbers.

Q. At the bottom of the second page of Exhibit 2, where it says 98 times 80 equals 7,840.00. Do you see what I just read?

A. Yes.

Q. What does that phrase on Exhibit 2 mean?

A. It's 98 guys, 98 guys pay me $80. I collect from them $7,840.

Q. On Exhibit 2 is 98 times 80 equals 7,840, is that your handwriting?

A. No, it is not.

Q. Do you know whose handwriting it is?

A. It could be my wife, because she help me to do some math, sometimes when I'm too tired. It could be.

Q. Were there weeks in 2015 at Sun Valley where you did not have the workers sign forms like Exhibit 2 to indicate that they paid for the meals?

A. No, every week they signed them.

Q. And do those forms look like Exhibit 2?

A. Yes.

MR. GLICK: If you could mark this as Exhibit 3, please.

- - - - -

(Photographs marked Hernandez Exhibit 3 for identification.)

- - - - -

BY MR. GLICK:

Q. Mr. Hernandez, I'm showing you a document that I'll refer to as Exhibit 3, which is two photographs. Do you recognize these photographs?

A. Yes.

Q. What do these photographs show?

A. This is one of the racks I told you about.

Q. How do you recognize the rack in that photograph?

A. This is the one I have before.

Q. And is that the rack at Sun Valley in 2015?

A. Yes.

Q. What else does the top photograph in Exhibit 3 show?

A. The chips that I was telling you about that was on the top of the fridge.

Q. Is there a refrigerator shown in Exhibit 3?

A. Yes. Say that again.

Q. Is there a refrigerator in the photograph on the top of Exhibit 3?

A. No, this is a refrigerator for me.
Q. Let the record reflect that the witness is pointing at the refrigerator with the word Coca-Cola at the top.
A. Yes.
Q. What is that refrigerator?
A. Coca-Cola fridge.
Q. In 2015, what was in that fridge?
A. Sodas, the sodas.
Q. The sodas that you sold to the workers at Sun Valley?
A. Yes. Yes.
Q. Was that a fridge where workers could store anything?
A. Not in the one, in this one, in the other beside.
Q. Let the record reflect that Mr. Hernandez is pointing at what I will refer to as a white refrigerator to the left of the refrigerator with the Coca-Cola logo. Mr. Hernandez, in the top photo of Exhibit 3, can you tell me more about that white refrigerator?
A. It was a refrigerator, we store some food leftovers or any more drinks or, yeah, anything.

Q. Was that a refrigerator where workers could store anything?

A. Sometimes when they ask me.

Q. Did you store anything in that refrigerator that you sold?

A. No.

Q. Mr. Hernandez, I would like to refer to the bottom photograph in Exhibit 3. Can you tell me about what you see in this photograph?

A. That's of the coffee urn, coffee urn. I use this, I hook it up to the timer so I don't get up too early, you know, to know when I came. And this is where I keep the money from the sodas.

Q. Let the witness reflect -- I'm sorry, let the record reflect that the witness is pointing to the --

A. The cash, cash box. I don't know what you call it. Where you store cash, I don't know.

Q. And so you recognize this, these items as part of the eating area at Sun Valley?

A. No, this is inside. The eating area is outside.

Q. How do you call this part of Sun Valley, the part that is visible in the bottom photograph in Exhibit 3?

A. The kitchen.

Q. In the bottom photograph of Exhibit 3, below the coffee urn, what do you see?

A. Oh, the soups. Yeah, the soups.

Q. What soups are those?

A. The instant soups.

Q. Did you sell those instant soups to the workers?

A. Yeah, in the nighttime, yeah.

Q. How much do you charge for those instant soups?

A. Like $75 -- 75 cents.

Q. Were those instant soups included in the weekly meal plan?

A. No.

Q. Toward the upper right corner of the bottom photograph in Exhibit 3, do you see any refrigerators?

A. Yes.

Q. In 2015, what were those refrigerators used for?

A. To store the food, all the food. Vegetables, whatever we need in the kitchen. It's always full of food.

Q. Could workers store anything in those refrigerators?

A. If they asked me to store, to keep a gallon of milk, yes. Because the milk, you know, because that spoils; spoil. And I could do that for them sometimes when they ask me.

Q. Do you store anything in those refrigerators that was not included in the weekly meal fee that you sold to the workers?

A. No.

Q. Can you tell me more about this cash register in the kitchen that's -- the cash register that's depicted on the bottom photograph of Exhibit 3?

A. It was a way I saw in the store and I thought it was a good idea to have the cash register to keep the money. So I don't carry in the hand, you know, the bills.

Q. Did you use that cash register to record purchases that the workers made from you?

A. No, no. It's different.
Q. When workers bought items from you, did you ever ring up those purchases in a -- when workers bought items from you in 2015, did you ever ring up those purchases in a cash register?
A. Yes.
Q. Is the cash register in the bottom photograph of Exhibit 3 the cash register you used to ring up those purchases?
A. Yes.
Q. Did that cash register produce written receipts?
A. No.
Q. Did that cash register store information about the purchases the workers made from you?
A. No.
Q. How often in 2015 did you use that cash register to ring up purchases that workers made?
A. I'd say every day.
Q. Did you use that cash register in the evening after dinner to record purchases?
A. Yes.

Q. Did you use the cash register during the three meals to record purchases the workers made at those meals?

A. I just put the money for the products they bought from me, I put the money there. Enough for the meals.

Q. What about sodas that the workers bought during the meals, did you record those purchases in this cash register?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ring up the purchases in the cash register?

A. Yes.

Q. How did you ring up those purchases in the cash register?

A. I just push a button and the register opens and I put the money inside. I don't understand.

Q. Did you type the price of the purchase into the cash register?

A. No.

BY MR. GLICK:

Q. Mr. Hernandez, I'm showing you a copy of a document that I will refer to as Exhibit 5. Do you understand?

A. Yes.

Q. And Exhibit 5 is just two more photographs. And Exhibit 5 has the Bates numbers DOL00363 in the bottom right-hand corner. Mr. Hernandez, do you recognize the photos in Exhibit 5?

A. Yes.

Q. What do you recognize?

A. The baskets and the cans, because like I say, I was there, I was there the whole time.

Q. These are baskets and cans on Sun Valley's property in 2015?
A. Yes.
Q. And what do you recognize about the baskets?
A. I just recognize it.
Q. What were those baskets used for in 2015?
A. To pick up the trash, the cans, the bottles, plastic, everything. Here's one of the jobs, one of the jobs that I put one guy in the morning to clean up the camp and he clean up all the trash, all the cans and he put them there. I told him to store, to store all the cans in that specific room.
Q. And where was that specific room where the cans were stored?
A. Where the baskets are.
Q. And where are these baskets in relation to the kitchen at Sun Valley?
A. I don't understand.
Q. Can you explain where these baskets are in relation to one of the other rooms at Sun Valley?
A. It's like in front is the kitchen and you have to walk, I have to walk like 20 or 30 paces to get to this room.

Q. Is this room closer to the worker housing camp than the kitchen?

A. It isn't far, but it isn't close.

Q. Is it the same distance from the worker housing as the kitchen?

A. Yes. Yes.

Q. And that's the room where these baskets were ordinarily kept in 2015?

A. Yes.

Q. Were these baskets always kept there in 2015?

A. Not always. The basket, I would say yes.

Q. And the worker who would collect cans to place those cans in these baskets in 2015, where did the worker collect the cans from?

A. From outside the camp, all around. He cleaned, he cleans right in front, the guys, they throw the cans and trash and plastic and cardboards and all kind of stuff. And he cleans. He pick everything up. He make it clean.

Q. Why did you have someone collect all those cans every day?

A. Why? Because at the end of the season, I save some, I save the aluminum cans and I, at the end of the season, in October, I bring a few boxes to the recycling place.

Q. Did the recycling pay you for those cans?

A. Yes.

Q. How much did the recycling center pay you?

A. Whatever is the pound, sometimes it's 40 cents a pound. Sometimes it's 30. Sometimes it's 60. They go up and down.

Q. How many times did you take cans to the recycling center from Sun Valley in 2015?

A. One.

Q. How much did you get paid for those cans?

A. I think a couple of hundred dollars. It wasn't much. Three hundred, maybe 300. I don't remember.

Q. Were you paid that money in cash?

A. Yeah, they give me cash.

Q. Was there a record of the amount you were paid for turning in those cans in 2015?

A. They give a receipt, yes. But I don't know where I left it.

Q. When did you last have that receipt?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Were all of the cans that you turned in to the recycling center in 2015 cans that the workers at Sun Valley purchased from you?

A. No.

Q. Other than cans of items that workers purchased from you in 2015, what was in the cans that you turned into the recycling center in 2015?

A. Just aluminums.

Q. What other aluminum?

A. Yes, cans.

Q. What cans besides cans that workers purchased from you?

A. All kind of cans, soda cans, juice cans, all kind of aluminum cans.

Q. Whose cans were they?

A. The guys.

BY MR. GLICK:

Q. Mr. Hernandez, I'm showing you a document that has been marked as Exhibit 6, a document stamped at the bottom DOL1399. This is another of the pages that we previously attached as part of Exhibit D as our Request for Admission, but again, I will refer to it as Exhibit 6. Mr. Hernandez, do you recognize this document?

A. This is one of the sales ticket or sales receipt that I go from one of the grocery stores where I buy the supplies.

Q. How do you recognize Exhibit 6?

A. This is the stamp, the stamp at the top of the receipt.

Q. Is Exhibit 6 one of the receipts that you maintained in 2015 as part of documenting the meal costs for Sun Valley's workers?

A. Yes.

Q. How do you know that about Exhibit 6?

A. Because I make a run for all these supplies and they deliver to me.

Q. Who filled out the information in Exhibit 6?

A. The delivery guy.

Q. Mr. Hernandez, I would like to call your attention to a line toward the bottom of written information in a row that begins with a number 90. Do you see the number 90 toward the bottom of the receipts?

A. Uh-huh, yes.

Q. And could you read this line in Exhibit 6, please, it begins 90?

A. 972.50, I think or 55.

Q. Mr. Hernandez, could you show me where you're reading, please?

A. Oh yes, starting with the nine you said.

Q. Thank you for showing me. I'm pointing one line up from where I believe you were reading, Mr. Hernandez.

A. Oh yes, yes, yes.

Q. Right above the word "received," Mr. Hernandez. Could you read to me the line where I've just noted that I'm pointing in Exhibit 6, please?

A. Received by.

Q. Could you read the handwritten line immediately above that?

A. It's 90, breads, breads. It's bread.

Q. And you're translating for me the word to the right of the number 90 on Exhibit 6?

A. Yes.

Q. And what is the number to the right of the word that you translated as breads?

A. I think it's 54.

Q. And what does this information mean?

A. There's 90, 90 pieces of bread is $54.

Q. And these are 90 pieces of bread that you purchased for $54 in 2015 at Sun Valley?

A. Yes.

Q. What did you do with these breads?

A. The bread, we consume a lot of bread. In the morning when I, when everybody go to the kitchen to get coffee and bread, coffee and bread.

Q. Were these 90 pieces of bread part of the meal plan that was covered by the weekly meal fees in 2015?

A. Yes.

Q. Could you read to me the line directly above what you just read, the number that's 60? There's a number 12 that is typed and then could you read to me the numbers and words to the right?

A. Yes, 60, this is pastry. Pastry. I think it means pastries, but it's the same bread, you know, another kind of bread.

Q. And does Exhibit 6 say that you purchased 60 pastries as part of the purchase described in Exhibit 6?

A. Yes.

Q. How much did you pay for those 60 pastries?

A. It says 75 cents, it says here, each, a piece.

Q. Were those 60 pastries part of the weekly meal plan?

A. Yes.

Q. Did workers pay extra for those 60

pastries?

A. No.

Q. Is there anything in Exhibit 6 that refers to something that you sold to the workers that wasn't included in the weekly meal plan in 2015?

A. No.

Q. Is there anything in Exhibit 6 that you don't understand?

A. No.

MR. GLICK: Could you mark this as Exhibit 7, please?

- - - - -

(Store Receipt Bates DOL01422 marked Hernandez Exhibit 7 for identification.)

- - - - -

BY MR. GLICK:

Q. Mr. Hernandez, I'm showing you a document that I will refer to as Exhibit 7, which is Bates stamped DOL01422 and was attached as part of Exhibit E to our requests for admissions. Again, I'll refer to this as Exhibit 7. Mr. Hernandez, what is this document, Exhibit 7?

A. It's another shop receipt from a different store where I get the items.
Q. Is it a receipt from 2015?
A. Yes.
Q. How do you know?
A. Because it has the date. The date is there.
Q. What else do you recognize about this document?
A. Most of it.
Q. Is your name written on this document?
A. I don't see it, no. Yes. Yes, I'm sorry.
Q. And in Exhibit 6, of this document next to your name, there's a phone number, whose phone number is that?
A. I guess it's the store phone number, I guess. I never take notice of that.
Q. It's not your phone number?
A. No, no.
Q. I believe I may have misspoken when I referred to this document by number, but again, Exhibit 7, Mr. Hernandez, could you please see the typed number seven in the leftmost column?

A. Yes.

Q. Could you read to me what is to the right of the typed number seven in Exhibit 7?

A. It says, I didn't notice, but it says Coca-Cola lata.

Q. What else does it say on that line?

A. Five. Five 36 Coca-Cola lata.

Q. Does this line in Exhibit 7 mean that you purchased five cases of cans of Coca-Cola?

A. I buy some Coca-Cola through this guy, but I pay separate, not from the -- I pay separate receipt and I guess they mixed them there. I don't know. I didn't notice.

Q. Did you buy the five cases of cans of Coca-Cola described in Exhibit 7?

A. I don't remember. It was '15, I don't remember. I know I sometimes I used to buy Coca-Cola from them.

Q. And does Exhibit 7 indicate that the cases of Coca-Cola cans had 36 cans per case?

A. It says there, I don't know. They never sell me 36. I don't know. I'm not sure.

Q. Does Exhibit 7 say a different number of cans of Coca-Cola per case?

A. No, it says there, I think it's three, 36, I think.

Q. And each of the cases of Coca-Cola were $13?

A. It says there.

MR. SCHULTE: I just object that it looks like it's scratched out. I mean the document speaks for itself, but as far as trying to interpret what somebody else's handwriting is, there are a number of places where other numbers are scratched out or written over.

THE WITNESS: Yeah, that happened when I make the order and I very busy and they just deliver it and I'm not in the kitchen and they just give me the -- I trust, I trust the people and I pay them. I don't know.

BY MR. GLICK:

Q. When you bought Coca-Cola from the Laurel Food Market, did you usually ask them to record that purchase in a different receipt than the food receipts?

A. They always keep a copy.

Q. Did you ask the market to record your soda purchases separately from your other purchases?

A. Yes.

Q. Why did you ask the market to record those purchases for beverages separately?

A. Because this is different. It's different. One thing is the food and one thing is whatever I sell, you know, the stuff I sell to the guys.

Q. You didn't want the prices of the sodas to be kept as part of your records for the meals?

A. No, because it's different.

Q. Why did you want them to be kept separately?

A. Like I said, it's different. I know I have to keep all the food separate from the sodas.

Q. Did it take extra work to ask the market to make two sets of receipts for you?

A. No, I asked, I asked for that.

That day, I don't know why he mix it in. I don't know.

Q. So usually your receipts had the beverages listed separately?

A. Separate, yeah.

Q. And those are receipts that you don't have anymore?

A. I, I buy more the sodas and all that, I buy more from Sam's Club than these guys. It's only when I need only a couple, two or three, a little bit. I almost never, never ask the store to supply soda for me.

Q. When you bought sodas from Sam's Club, did you have the Sam's Club keep the sodas on a separate receipt?

A. Yes.

Q. What did that involve?

A. Nothing, they just keep separate, separate.

Q. Did you have to checkout from the store at Sam's Club in two separate purchases?

A. Yes.

Q. And that took extra time?

A. Yes.

Q. Wouldn't it have been easier just to mark everything on the same receipt?

A. No, because I don't want the misunderstanding like in this case, that they think or you think or the inspector think that I'm buying everything and then selling it to them with the same money. I don't want that.

Q. But you are buying all these things and selling them to the same workers?

A. No, I don't. It's only this case, I don't know why they mix that there.

Q. Did someone tell you to keep the records separate for the meals, groceries purchases versus the soda purchases?

A. No.

Q. You decided to do it that way yourself?

A. Yes.

Q. And you kept all the money from the sales of the soda?

A. If I have, I almost don't have much of a profit. Like I said, like the guys always ask for something cold to drink and they are asking and asking. I remember that day the first, I think it was '13 or '14 when the federal inspector came and we closed the kitchen, we close it -- I didn't sell sodas for a week and a half, two weeks. And the guys, they always asking and asking for cold sodas. And they always ask for that. And like I said, sometimes I use the money, they go to the food sometimes. I don't know, maybe I can get, maybe a couple of hundred dollars, maybe. I don't know. I never kept down the amounts. But it is not like, you know, thousands.

Q. Did you do any math to keep track of the profit from selling the beverages?

A. No. Well, I'm not a store like. I just sell them because, this, you know, I don't know. Maybe I shouldn't, I know, but the guys they keep telling, me telling me that, I don't know why you do that. It's a lot of headaches. I spend a lot of time doing that.

Q. Isn't it more of a headache to keep two separate sets of receipts?

A. Maybe I should, should do that.

Q. And the time it takes to decide which sets of receipts to throw away?

MR. SCHULTE: Objection, come on.

MR. GLICK: If you could

Q. In 2015, were there differences in the work that the H-2A workers and the non-H-2A workers did?

A. No, everything is the same. Was the same. No differences.

Q. And in 2015, when workers had to take a van back from the fields at the end of the day -- let me rephrase that question. In 2015, who decided that it was the end of the workday in the fields?

A. Most of the time, it's me. Other times, it's Harry Marino. And other times, a few times, is when we finish, we have to finish one field and that's it. Whatever the hours, but when we have a lot of work, I always say till five, to 5:30 call them up.

Q. Could the workers decide that they want to work longer than you tell them to?

A. Not usually. By the end of the day, they are dead. They are tired. All they want to do is go home.

Q. Did ever any workers in 2015 ask to keep working at the end of the day after you called the end of the day?

A. No. Not that I remember.

it passes.

Q. And they did pass you?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Did they check the number of beds available?

A. Yes.

Q. And do you know if they checked the vehicles or just the housing?

A. Just the housing. The state just the housing. The federal in 2015, they check the vehicles.

Q. And just to clarify, when the first group of 19 were leaving, you said that you wanted what was convenient for them. Can you just explain more what their concern was about saying they couldn't handle the job?

A. Yes, because they check the box where it said that I quit my job is because they are afraid or they were afraid that when they -- those records go to the immigration or whatever, the visa department or whatever, that they were afraid that saying that, they wouldn't hire, hire them anymore in any work. Do you understand?

Q. Yeah. So did they choose which box to --

A. They choose. I think most of them they choose I want, I want, in the 19 guys they choose, I want to leave for my hometown, because I have a sick family. Sick family. I think I remember that.

MR. SCHULTE: That's all.

MR. GLICK: Just quickly.

MR. SCHULTE: Sure.

BY MR. GLICK:

Q. Mr. Hernandez, can you tell me more about the bus company that you described in relation to the laundromat?

A. I don't know how he calls, but I think when those 19 guys first came, they, they didn't have, they didn't have the company yet. Instead, we -- we were allowed to use their buses, the little buses, the better buses, the buses and go to the laundromat, not far away, near. And that's where I send them a few times.

Q. When did the bus company become available in 2015 to the workers at Sun Valley?

A. I'm not sure it was in 2015 or it was last year. I think it was last year.

Q. So the bus company didn't start providing transport to the laundromat until 2016?

A. I think. I'm not sure. I don't remember they start at the end of '15, I'm not sure. But last year, just the whole year.

Q. Where is the laundromat that the bus took workers in 2016?

A. In a town called Bridgeton, Bridgeton, it's like 15 miles away from the camp. And the guys like it there, because there's more Hispanic stores, they wire the money and they like it there and they ask to go there.

Q. In 2015, how did workers at Sun Valley do laundry?

A. Like I said, I send them, I send them in the vans, buses a few times and the other van, they didn't, I offered them and they, they went like, we don't, we don't drive. We don't drive the buses that far away and they wanted to go that far away. They look for something, a different transportation. I don't know how they did it, but they stopped asking for that service.

Q. In 2015, did Sun Valley's workers use Sun Valley's buses?

A. Yes, sir, a few times.

Q. Sun Valley, in 2015, Sun Valley's workers used Sun Valley's buses to travel to the laundromat?

A. Yes, a few times.

Q. Who arranged that?

A. I asked Russell Marino, Jr. if it's okay to do that, he said yes, just to check, to pick out the best two buses, everything works on them, you know, the lights and brakes and all that and then I sent them.

Q. Were there other buses where the lights didn't work?

A. Not, it's more, everything works, but the older buses are older. They look ugly on the road.

Q. Did the brakes on the other buses work?

A. Yes.

Q. Who drove the buses to take the workers in 2015?

A. A couple of guys that had the Mexican licenses.

Q. On those trips to the laundromat in 2015, could Sun Valley's workers go to stores other than the laundromat?

A. Not that I know of. Only to the laundromat is like 5 miles away, like the closest town.

MR. GLICK: Okay. That's it.

Statement:

I started serving food to the workers on 04/08/2015 - at that time there were only 20 or 22 workers that participated in the weekly meal plan. The weekly meal plan costs each worker $75; the price of the meal plan has always been the same. The workers pay my husband Agustin in cash weekly for the meal plan. Currently there are 98 workers that are participating in the weekly meal plan. The weekly meal plan includes 3 daily meals - breakfast (coffee and bread), lunch (meat, rice and beans) and dinner (meat, rice and beans). The workers can ask for additional food if they are hungry. Drinks are sold to the workers in the field and in the kitchen - soda (coke or sprite) is $1, gatorade is $1, monster energy drink is $2, juices are $2.50, and jarritos are $1. The workers purchase an average of 4 drinks per day that include sodas, gatorade, juices and monster energy drink - at times workers purchase up to 8 drinks per day. Each worker purchases at least 1 drink with every meal they eat and every break they take. I purchase all foods and drinks at Sam's Club and a mexican food store (La Fiesta and El Paisano). At Sam's Club I purchase all the drinks (gatorade, monster energy drinks and coke/sprite) - I purchase all meats and jarritos at the mexican food store. I keep all the receipts from the purchases that I make - my husband keeps a record of all the purchases. Workers are not allowed to enter the kitchen to cook their own meals - we sometimes give the workers permission to use the microwave to reheat food in the kitchen. The workers are not allowed to put their own food in the refrigerators in the kitchen. The kitchen is always closed except when we are cooking the meals. There are 3 of us working in the kitchen (myself, Lucia and Felix) - Omar also worked in the kitchen but now he works in the fields picking vegetables. I work 7am to 6/630pm 7 days per week - I take 1 hour lunch - I work some 70 hours per week. Lucia works 730am to 1pm 7 days per week - Felix works 6am to 6/630pm but he takes a 1.5 hour break during the day except for Friday and Saturday which is when we go shopping - Felix works 7 days per week. I earn $700 per week - I earn $10 per hour - Lucia earns $400 per week and Felix earns $700 per week. My husband, Agustin, pays the kitchen workers directly including myself in cash weekly every Friday. My husband also sells drinks to the workers in the field. None of the workers have asked me to use the kitchen to cook their own meals. Felix and I are the only ones who have keys to open the kitchen door. If a worker needs to use the kitchen to reheat food Felix will allow them to enter the kitchen but he stays with the worker the entire time. I do not keep track of how many drinks we sell daily. The majority of the workers participate in the weekly meal plan. I have never seen any kids working here.

The above statement has been read to me and I agree.

Statement:

Empeze a darle comida a los trabajadores en 04/08/2015 - eran unos 20 o 22 trabajadores que participan para el plan de comida semanal. Los trabajadores eran pagado $75 esa semana. El plan de comida semanal siempre ha sido $75 - pagaron en efectivo a mi esposo Agustin. Ahora mismo son unos 98 personas que compran el plan de comida semanal. Vendemos las 3 comidas al dia con el plan semanal de comidva = desayuno (pan con café), lunche (carne, arroz, frijoles), y la cena (carne, arroz, y frijoles). Los trabajadores pueden pedir mas comidas si tienen hambre. Vendemos las bebidas en el campo y en la cocina. Soda (coke, sprite) = $1.00, gatorade = $1.00, monster = $2.00, jugos = $2.50 (jumix), jarritos = $1.00. Los trabajadores compran como 4 bebidas al dia entre soda, gatorade, jugos, y monster - pueden beber hasta 6 - 8 al dia. Los trabajadores siempren compran por los menos bebidas durante la comida y los breaks. Yo hago las compras de Sam's Club y tiendas mexicanas (la fiesta y el paisano) - en Sam's Club compramos las sodas (gatorade, monster, cocke) - en la tienda mexicana compramos jarritos y la carne. Tengo todos los recibos de las compras - mi esposo esta encargado. Los trabajadores no pueden entrar a la cocina para cocinar - solo le damos permiso para usar el microondas. Los trabajadores no pueden ponder su comida en los refrijeradores - la concia siempre esta cerrada afuera de cuando estamos cocinando. Somos 3 trabajadores en la cocina (yo, Lucia, y Felix) - Omar trabajo un poco tiempo pero trabaja en el campo. Trabajo 7am hasta las 6/630pm - 7 dias a la semana (1 hora de lunche) - trabajo 70 horas a la semana. Lucia trabaja de 730am hasta 1pm - trabaja 7 dias a la semana. Felix trabaja de 6am hasta 6/630pm - toma un break de 1 1/2 hora al dia menos Viernes y Sabados que hacemos la compra - trabaja 7 dias a la semana. Yo gano $700 a la semana ($10 a la hora), Lucia gana $400 a la semana, Felix gana $700 semanal. Mi esposo le paga a los trabajadores de la cocina (incluyendo yo) en cash (efectivo) todos los viernes. En los campos mi esposo vende las bebidas a los trabajadores. Los trabajadores nunca me han pedido usar la cocina para cocinar. Solo yo y Felix tenemos las llaves de la cocina - si ay un trabajador que quiere calentar durante el dia Felix le puede habrir la puerta pero tiene que quedar con el. No tomamos quenta de cuantas bebidas se venden al dia. La malloria de los trabajadores en el campamento participan en el plan semanal de la comida. Nunca e visto ningun nino trabajando aqui.

Pursuant to 29 CFR § 18.63 of the Rules of Practice for Administrative Hearings Before the Office of Administrative Law Judges, Respondents respond to the Administrator and Secretary's First Set of Requests for Admissions as follows:

Specific Responses and Objections

Sun Valley Orchards

Request for Admission 1:

Notwithstanding extraneous markings, the document provided as Exhibit A is a true, accurate and complete copy (including any attachments or appendices) of the Agricultural and Food Processing Clearance Order (ETA Form 790) signed by Russell Marino, Jr. on December 22, 2014, for the period of employment of April 13, 2015 to October 10, 2015 and filed with the U.S. Department of Labor by Sun Valley.

Response to Request for Admission 1:

Admitted.

Request for Admission 2:

Notwithstanding extraneous markings, the document provided as Exhibit B is a true, accurate and complete copy (including any attachments or appendices) of the Agricultural and Food Processing Clearance Order (ETA Form 790) signed by Russell Marino, Jr. on December 22, 2014, for the period of employment of June 1, 2015 to October 10, 2015 and filed with the U.S. Department of Labor by Sun Valley.

Response to Request for Admission 2:

Admitted.

Request for Admission 3:

During 2015, Sun Valley did not enter into any written contract regarding terms or conditions of employment with its domestic workers or H-2A workers, apart from the documents attached as Exhibit A and Exhibit B.

Response to Request for Admission 3:

Admitted in part, denied in part. Respondents deny that the documents provided as Exhibit A and Exhibit B are written contracts with Sun Valley's domestic workers or H-2A workers. Respondents admit that no written agreement was entered into between Sun Valley and its domestic workers or H-2A workers for the 2015 season.

Request for Admission 4:

Sun Valley is the successor in interest to Marino Brothers, Inc., a/k/a Marino Brothers.

Response to Request for Admission 4:

Admitted in part, denied in part. Respondents admit that Sun Valley shares some common ownership with the entity known as Marino Brothers, Inc., a/k/a Marino Brothers, and Sun Valley currently operates the farming operation formerly known as Marino Brothers. To the extent that this Request for Admission calls for a purely legal conclusion or implies any particular legal conclusion as a result, such a conclusion is denied.

Request for Admission 5:

During 2015, Sun Valley was an employer of each of the workers listed in Exhibit B of the Administrator and Secretary's Initial Disclosures dated February 15, 2017.

Response to Request for Admission 5:

Admitted to the extent that not all of the workers listed were employed for the entire 2015 growing season, but all were employed for at least part of 2015.

Request for Admission 6:

Notwithstanding extraneous markings, the documents found at Exhibit C are true and accurate copies of payroll records that were created and maintained by Sun Valley in the regular course of business.

Response to Request for Admission 6:

Admitted, to the best of Respondent's knowledge, information and belief.

Request for Admission 7:

During 2015, Sun Valley did not maintain any documents, apart from those found at Exhibit C, concerning the number of hours of work offered each day in 2015 to each of its domestic workers and H-2A workers.

Response to Request for Admission 7:

Admitted in part, denied in part. The records at Exhibit C are complete payroll records, as such, but there are additional documents, provided herewith, reflecting the voluntary resignation of several Sun Valley employees that concern the number of hours of work offered to its H-2A workers (Exhibits 3 and 4.1-4.11).

Request for Admission 8:

During 2015, Sun Valley did not create or maintain any documents concerning the reasons any of its domestic workers and H-2A workers worked fewer hours than the number of hours of work offered in the work contract in 2015.

Response to Request for Admission 8:

Denied. Sun Valley created and maintained the payroll records found at Exhibit C. Sun Valley also created or maintained records reflecting the decision by 19 H-2A employees to terminate their employment voluntarily in May 2015 and others to do so later in the season. Such records are provided herewith and in response to the Administrator and Secretary's Document Requests. (Exhibits 3, 4.1-4.11).

Request for Admission 9:

Notwithstanding extraneous markings, the documents found at Exhibit D are true and accurate copies of records concerning charges for weekly meals paid by Sun Valley's domestic workers and H-2A workers in 2015.

Response to Request for Admission 9:

Admitted in part, denied in part. The documents found at Exhibit D appear to reflect amounts paid by some of Sun Valley's workers, but these amounts were not paid to Sun Valley.

Request for Admission 10:

During 2015, apart from those found at Exhibit C and Exhibit D, Sun Valley did not maintain any documents concerning the amount of or reasons for any and all deductions from any domestic worker or H-2A worker's wages between April 8, 2015 and July 21, 2015.

Response to Request for Admission 10:

Denied. Sun Valley did not make any deductions from any domestic worker's wages during this time period. Additional documents exist reflecting Sun Valley's expenses for operating its kitchen facilities (Exhibit 5), but those expenses were not part of any deduction from workers' wages.

Request for Admission 11:

During 2015, Sun Valley charged its domestic workers (including migrant agricultural workers) and H-2A workers a weekly fee for meals.

Response to Request for Admission 11:

Denied. Sun Valley did not charge any of its workers a weekly fee for meals.

Request for Admission 12:

During 2015, Sun Valley's weekly meals fee was $75 in some weeks and $80 in all other weeks.

Response to Request for Admission 12:

Denied. Sun Valley did not charge any of its workers a weekly fee for meals.

Request for Admission 13:

During 2015, Sun Valley did not furnish free cooking or kitchen facilities to its domestic workers (including migrant agricultural workers) or H-2A workers.

Response to Request for Admission 13:

Denied. Sun Valley denies this Request inasmuch as it maintained cooking or kitchen facilities at all times during 2015. Sun Valley further does not admit that any of its domestic workers were migrant agricultural workers, nor that any of its domestic or H-2A workers ever requested to use such facilities. Sun Valley's employees, both domestic and H-2A, purchased and ate meals prepared for them by a third party, apparently without complaint.

Request for Admission 14:

During 2015, Sun Valley did not offer to provide free transportation to any store for domestic workers (including migrant agricultural workers) or H-2A workers to purchase groceries.

Response to Request for Admission 14:

Denied. First, Sun Valley denies that it had any obligation under the H-2A rules or any other provision of law or regulation to provide such transportation to local domestic workers. Sun Valley further does not admit that any of its domestic workers were migrant agricultural workers, nor that any applicable workers were denied transportation to any store.

Request for Admission 15:

Notwithstanding extraneous markings, the documents found at Exhibit E are a true and accurate copy of Sun Valley's records of Sun Valley's costs in providing food and beverages (including three daily meals) to its domestic workers (including migrant agricultural workers) and H-2A workers between April 8, 2015 and July 21, 2015, to the best of Sun Valley's knowledge, information and belief.

Response to Request for Admission 15:

Denied. Respondents object to this Request because it fails to meet the basic requirement that requests be simple, concise and state facts singly. This request requests admissions of multiple separate sets of facts. Without waiving the foregoing objections, Respondent denies that the documents found at Exhibit E are a true and accurate copy of Sun Valley's records on this issue. The documents found at Exhibit E reflect expenses to Sun Valley in the form of a refrigerator and the cost of setting up the kitchen, but the remaining expenses for groceries were for Agustin Hernandez and not Sun Valley. Sun Valley further specifically denies that it provided food and beverages or daily meals to its domestic workers beyond paying for the kitchen facilities at the farm and paying the utilities as reflected in Exhibit 5.

Request for Admission 16:

Sun Valley did not maintain any documents, apart from those found at Exhibit E, concerning the cost of food, beverages, or other items that Sun Valley sold or re-sold to its domestic workers and H-2A workers between April 8, 2015 and July 21, 2015.

Response to Request for Admission 16:

Denied – see response to Request for Admission 15. By way of further response, Sun Valley did not sell or re-sell any food, beverages, or other items to its workers. The groceries reflected in the receipts included in Exhibit E were not "re-sold" to Sun Valley's employees but were used by Agustin Hernandez to prepare hot meals for employees.

Request for Admission 17:

During 2015, Sun Valley sold soft drinks to its domestic workers.

Response to Request for Admission 17:

Denied. Sun Valley did not sell soft drinks to its domestic workers.

Request for Admission 18:

During 2015, Sun Valley sold soft drinks to its H-2A workers.

Response to Request for Admission 18:

Denied. Sun Valley did not sell soft drinks to its H-2A workers.

Request for Admission 19:

During 2015, Sun Valley sold soft drinks to its domestic workers at a profit to Sun Valley.

Response to Request for Admission 19:

Denied. Sun Valley did not sell soft drinks to its domestic workers.

Request for Admission 20:

During 2015, Sun Valley sold soft drinks to its H-2A workers at a profit to Sun Valley.

Response to Request for Admission 20:

Denied. Sun Valley did not sell soft drinks to its H-2A workers.

Request for Admission 21:

During 2015, Sun Valley was not licensed to sell beer.

Response to Request for Admission 21:

Admitted in part and denied in part. Sun Valley did not hold any specific license to sell beer but denies any inference that any such license was required, nor that this has any relevance to the issues raised in the Department's determination letter or Order of Reference for this matter.

Request for Admission 22:

During 2015, Sun Valley sold beer to its domestic workers.

Response to Request for Admission 22:

Denied. Sun Valley did not sell beer to its domestic workers.

Request for Admission 23:

During 2015, Sun Valley sold beer to its H-2A workers.

Response to Request for Admission 23:

Denied. Sun Valley did not sell beer to its H-2A workers.

Request for Admission 24:

During 2015, Sun Valley was not licensed to sell cigarettes.

Response to Request for Admission 24:

Admitted in part and denied in part. Sun Valley did not hold any specific license to sell cigarettes but denies any inference that any such license was required, nor that this has any relevance to the issues raised in the Department's determination letter or Order of Reference for this matter.

Request for Admission 25:

During 2015, Sun Valley sold cigarettes to its domestic workers.

Response to Request for Admission 25:

Denied. Sun Valley did not sell cigarettes to its domestic workers.

Request for Admission 26:

During 2015, Sun Valley sold cigarettes to its H-2A workers.

Response to Request for Admission 26:

Denied. Sun Valley did not sell cigarettes to its H-2A workers.

Request for Admission 27:

Sun Valley's housing facility at 1321 Route 45 in South Harrison Township, New Jersey, was constructed prior to April 3, 1980.

Response to Request for Admission 27:

The housing facility described was on the property when Sun Valley acquired it, but to the best of Sun Valley's knowledge and information, the Request is admitted.

Request for Admission 28:

During 2015, Sun Valley transported its domestic workers and H-2A workers in vehicles operated by drivers without valid licenses or permits to operate vehicles in New Jersey.

Response to Request for Admission 28:

Denied. On information and belief, Sun Valley and its employees complied with all applicable laws and regulations. Sun Valley is not in possession of the licenses or permits of such drivers at this time.

Request for Admission 29:

In early August 2015, Sun Valley terminated more than 40 H-2A workers.

Response to Request for Admission 29:

Sun Valley objects to this Request as unnecessarily vague as far as "early August" but admits that it terminated a number of H-2A workers in August 2015, after more than three-fourths of the hours in the job order had been completed, based on a poor pepper harvest and a decreased need for labor.

Request for Admission 30:

In early August 2015, Sun Valley terminated more than 40 H-2A workers without cause.

Response to Request for Admission 30:

See response to Request 29.

Request for Admission 31:

Notwithstanding extraneous markings, Exhibit F is a true and accurate copy of a document that Sun Valley provided to approximately 45 H-2A workers on or about August 8, 2015.

Response to Request for Admission 31:

Admitted.

Agustin Hernandez

Request for Admission 1:

At all times during 2015, Hernandez was registered with the U.S. Department of Labor as a farm labor contractor.

Response to Request for Admission 1:

Denied. Mr. Hernandez was registered with the State of New Jersey as a crew leader, and a copy of his 2015 license from the State is provided as Exhibit 8, but on information and belief, he was not registered with the U.S. Department of Labor as a farm labor contractor.

Request for Admission 2:

Hernandez recruited migrant agricultural workers to work at Sun Valley during 2015.

Response to Request for Admission 2:

Denied. Mr. Hernandez did not recruit migrant agricultural workers to work at Sun Valley during 2015. In 2015, Sun Valley employed local workers, H-2A workers, and domestic workers who had worked at Sun Valley in previous seasons and returned on their own.

Request for Admission 3:

Exhibit G is a true and accurate copy of a document that Hernandez posted at or near 1321 Route 45, South Harrison Township, New Jersey in 2015.

Response to Request for Admission 3:

Admitted in part and denied in part. The Request is improperly vague as to place and time but, to the extent that it can be answered, Mr. Hernandez admits posting this document.

Request for Admission 4:

Hernandez did not disclose in writing to Sun Valley's migrant agricultural workers that Sun Valley would charge those worker a weekly fee for meals in 2015.

Response to Request for Admission 4:

Denied. Sun Valley did not charge any workers a weekly fee for meals in 2015. As such, no such disclosure was required or appropriate.

Request for Admission 5:

In 2015, Hernandez was not licensed to sell beer.

Response to Request for Admission 5:

Admitted in part and denied in part. Mr. Hernandez did not hold any specific license to sell beer but denies any inference that any such license was required, nor that this has any relevance to the issues raised in the Department's determination letter or Order of Reference for this matter.

Request for Admission 6:

In 2015, Hernandez was not licensed to sell cigarettes.

Response to Request for Admission 6:

Admitted in part and denied in part. Sun Valley did not hold any specific license to sell cigarettes but denies any inference that any such license was required, nor that this has any relevance to the issues raised in the Department's determination letter or Order of Reference for this matter.

Pursuant to 29 CFR § 18.60 of the Rules of Practice for Administrative Hearings Before the Office of Administrative Law Judges, Respondents respond to the Administrator and Secretary's First Set of Interrogatories as follows:

General Objections

Respondents, by and through counsel, object generally to each interrogatory in the Administrator and Secretary's First Set of Interrogatories as follows:

1. Respondents objects to the First Set of Interrogatories to the extent they seek information protected against disclosure by the attorney-client privilege, the work-product privilege, or any other rule of privilege or confidentiality provided by law.

2. Respondents' responses to the First Set of Interrogatories are based on Respondents' good faith effort to ascertain responsive information to the extent such information is reasonably available. Respondents reserve their rights to supplement its responses in accordance with 29 CFR §18.53.

3. Respondents object to any interrogatory that seeks information that is unreasonably cumulative or duplicative of information that can be obtained through other sources that are more convenient, less burdensome, and less expensive.

4. Respondents object to any interrogatory that fails to describe the information sought without reasonable particularity.

5. Respondents object to any interrogatory requests to the extent that they do not relate to the claims in the determination letters in this matter. Respondents include within this objection those interrogatories that may be conditionally relevant unless a proper foundation has been laid at the time of attempted evidentiary use.

6. Respondents object to the "Instructions" to the extent that they purport to impose a duty or duties in excess of that required by 29 CFR § 18.10, et seq., or the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. Respondents will comply with the regulations and Federal Rules of Civil Procedure in response to these Discovery Requests.

7. Respondents' responses to these interrogatories are based on Respondents' best recollection of facts in question and represent a good faith effort to ascertain responsive information to the extent such information is reasonably available. Respondents reserve the right to supplement any responses if it is learned that, in some material respect, a response is incomplete or incorrect and if the additional or corrective information has not otherwise been made known during the discovery process or otherwise.

8. Respondents object to any interrogatory that fails to describe the information requested in a reasonably particularized manner. Respondents will attempt to respond to such Requests by attempting to discern what information the Administrator or Secretary is seeking and respond to the Request as so interpreted where it is reasonably able to do so.

9. By responding to an interrogatory, Respondents do not thereby agree with or otherwise adopt any implicit or explicit characterization of the facts or legal conclusions in such Request. They expressly reserves the right to object to, and challenge, any such characterization whenever advanced.

10. All of the responses contained herein are based only on such information that is currently available to and known to Respondents. It is anticipated that further discovery, independent investigation, legal research and analysis will supply additional facts, add additional meaning to the known facts, as well as establish new factual conclusions and legal contentions, all of which may lead to substantial additions to, changes in and/or variations from responses herein set forth. The following responses are given without prejudice to Respondents' right to produce and introduce at trial evidence of any subsequently discovered facts that they may later develop. The responses contained herein are made in a good faith effort to supply the factual information as is currently known, but in no way subject Respondent to prejudice in relation to further discovery, research or analysis.

11. Respondents expressly reserve all objections to the admissibility at trial or any other proceeding of any of the information or documents they produce in response to these Discovery Requests.

Sun Valley

1. Please identify all person, other than your attorneys, who responded to or assisted in responding to the Department's First Set of Requests for Admissions, First Set of Document Requests, and is [sic] Set of Interrogatories, specifying separately which person(s) assisted in responding to each item of discovery.

Response: Russell J. Marino, Jr., Joe Marino, and Agustin Hernandez of Sun Valley Orchards, LLC, with respect to all responses, with assistance from Lisa Justice, Payroll Manager at Sun Valley as to receipts and records and payroll issues, and Theresa Ward of National Agricultural Consultants, LLC, as to the Forms 9142 produced with these responses.

2. Please identify all persons, other than U.S. Department of Labor employees, who possess knowledge of the following:

a. Sun Valley's meal plan for domestic workers and H-2A workers during 2015;

b. Sun Valley's policies for creating and maintaining earnings records during 2015;

c. The cost of food, beverages, and other items (not including three daily meals) sold by Sun Valley to its domestic workers and H-2A workers during 2015;

d. Sun Valley's disclosure to its domestic workers and H-2A workers during 2015 of the terms and conditions of employment;

e. The conditions of housing provided to Sun Valley's domestic workers and H-2A during 2015;

f. The conditions of vehicles used to transport Sun Valley's workers in 2015 between Sun Valley's agricultural fields and/or 1321 Route 45, South Harrison Township, New Jersey;

g. The termination and/or resignation of H-2A workers employed by Sun Valley during 2015, on dates before October 10, 2015; and

h. Any other persons, other than U.S. Department of Labor employees, who possess knowledge of the facts involved in Case No. 2017-TAE-00003, as well as a description of those individuals' knowledge.

Response: Respondent objects to this interrogatory to the extent that fails to describe the information sought in a reasonably particularized manner, as the question related to the "facts involved in this case" is ambiguous. Without waiving its objection, Respondent refers to the individuals referenced above. These individuals have knowledge of the H-2A application process, disclosures to workers, cost and charges for meal expenses, and resignation or termination of all H-2A workers during the 2015 season.

Other individuals with information regarding the condition of the vehicles and housing would be Sun Valley's in-house mechanic, Leonard Fleming, and outside mechanic, Al Foote, who inspected and maintained the buses, as well as representatives of the New Jersey Department of Labor and Workforce Development who performed inspections of housing before the 2015 season.

3. Please identify all domestic workers and H-2A workers employed by Sun Valley at any point during 2015.

Response: Respondent objects to this Interrogatory to the extent that it is duplicative and/or seeks information beyond the scope of this matter. To the extent that the Interrogatory seeks the identities of domestic workers in "corresponding employment" as that term is defined in the H-2A regulations and H-2A workers employed by Sun Valley during the 2015 season, that information is included in the payroll documents found at Exhibit C to the Administrator's Request for Admissions.

4. Please identify all farm labor contractors employed by Sun Valley during 2015.

Response: Sun Valley did not employ any farm labor contractors in 2015.

5. Please identify all individuals who, at any time during 2015, operated a motor vehicle to transport one or more of Sun Valley's domestic workers or H-2A workers between Sun Valley's agricultural fields and/or 1321 Route 45, South Harrison Township, New Jersey.

Response: Sun Valley's employees, for purposes of this Interrogatory, are listed in the payroll records found at Exhibit C to the Administrator's Request for Admissions.

6. Regarding the Department's First Set of Requests for Admissions, separately set forth in detail, for each such request that is not fully admitted without objection, all facts that relate to or explain each of your denials.

Response: Respondent refers you to its responses to the Requests for Admissions.

7. Please identify how the weekly commission paid to Hernandez by Sun Valley during 2015 was calculated.

Response: In 2015, Mr. Hernandez received $0.33 for every hour worked by Sun Valley's H-2A and domestic seasonal agricultural workers.

8. Please identify Hernandez's job responsibilities during 2015.

Response: Sun Valley objects to the term "job responsibilities" as used in this Interrogatory. Mr. Hernandez operated as an independent contractor during 2015, paid pursuant to the arrangement described above. In that capacity, he provided labor management services and, on his own behalf, provided meals and other concession items to the farm workers and was paid by the workers for such.

9. Please identify all of the H-2A workers employed by Sun Valley during 2015 who resigned or terminated their employment at Sun Valley voluntarily before October 10, 2015 and specify the reasons given, if any, for such voluntary resignation or termination.

Response: There was a group of 19 workers voluntarily resigned on May 6, 2015, despite pleas from Sun Valley for them to stay and continue working, early in the work period. Copies of the documents that they provided when they turned in their Sun Valley employee identity cards have been produced with these responses as Exhibit 3. These workers and others are also identified in Exhibits 4.1-4.11, notices submitted by Sun Valley's filing agent to USCIS, the New Jersey Department of Labor, and the U.S. Department of Labor's Chicago National Processing Center. As shown in those documents, some workers claimed to have sick family members at home, while others simply stated that they were leaving for "personal reasons." A subsequent group of workers was terminated in August 2015 after they had completed three-fourths of the hours in the job order due to a poor pepper harvest that caused a decreased need for farmworkers at that time.

10. Please identify all of the H-2A workers employed by Sun Valley during 2015 that Sun Valley terminated for cause before October 10, 2015 and, for each worker identified, set forth all facts that support that the termination was for cause.

Response: No H-2A workers in 2015 were terminated for cause by Sun Valley before October 10, 2015.

11. Please identify all of the H-2A workers employed by Sun Valley during 2015 that Sun Valley terminated for other than cause before October 10, 2015.

Response: These individuals are identified in the Sun Valley payroll records referenced above; all were terminated only after completing three-fourths of the hours set forth in the job orders provided as Exhibits A and B, and do not appear to be part of the current litigation.

Agustin Hernandez

1. Please identify all persons, other than your attorneys, who responded to or assisted in responding to the Department's First Set of Requests for Admissions, First Set of Requests for Document Requests, and this Set of Interrogatories, specifying separately which person(s) assisted in responding to each item of discovery.

Response: Myself.

2. Please identify all persons, other than U.S. Department of Labor employees, who possess knowledge of the facts involved in Case No. 2017-MSP-00002, as well as a description of their knowledge.

Response: See Response #1.

3. Regarding the Department's First Set of Requests for Admissions, separately set forth in detail, for each such request that is not fully admitted without objection, all facts that relate to or explain each of your denials.

Response: All such information has been provided in the Responses to the First Set of Requests for Admissions.

Pursuant to 29 CFR § 18.60 of the Rules of Practice for Administrative Hearings Before the Office of Administrative Law Judges, Respondent responds to the Administrator's Second Set of Interrogatories as follows:

General Objections

Respondent, by and through counsel, objects generally to each interrogatory in the Administrator's Second Set of Interrogatories as follows:

1. Respondent objects to the Second Set of Interrogatories to the extent they seek information protected against disclosure by the attorney-client privilege, the work-product privilege, or any other rule of privilege or confidentiality provided by law.

2. Respondent's responses to the Second Set of Interrogatories are based on Respondent's good faith effort to ascertain responsive information to the extent such information is reasonably available. Respondent reserves its right to supplement its responses in accordance with 29 CFR §18.53.

3. Respondent objects to any interrogatory that seeks information that is unreasonably cumulative or duplicative of information that can be obtained through other sources that are more convenient, less burdensome, and less expensive.

4. Respondent objects to any interrogatory that fails to describe the information sought without reasonable particularity.

5. Respondent objects to any interrogatory requests to the extent that they do not relate to the claims in the determination letters in this matter. Respondent includes within this objection those interrogatories that may be conditionally relevant unless a proper foundation has been laid at the time of attempted evidentiary use.

6. Respondent objects to the "Instructions" to the extent that they purport to impose a duty or duties in excess of that required by 29 CFR § 18.10, et seq., or the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. Respondent will comply with the regulations and Federal Rules of Civil Procedure in response to these Discovery Requests.

7. Respondent's responses to these interrogatories are based on Respondent's best recollection of facts in question and represent a good faith effort to ascertain responsive information to the extent such information is reasonably available. Respondent reserves the right to supplement any responses if it is learned that, in some material respect, a response is incomplete or incorrect and if the additional or corrective information has not otherwise been made known during the discovery process or otherwise.

8. Respondent objects to any interrogatory that fails to describe the information requested in a reasonably particularized manner. Respondent will attempt to respond to such Requests by attempting to discern what information the Administrator is seeking and respond to the Request as so interpreted where it is reasonably able to do so.

9. By responding to an interrogatory, Respondent does not thereby agree with or otherwise adopt any implicit or explicit characterization of the facts or legal conclusions in such Request. It expressly reserves the right to object to, and challenge, any such characterization whenever advanced.

10. All of the responses contained herein are based only on such information that is currently available to and known to Respondent. It is anticipated that further discovery, independent investigation, legal research and analysis will supply additional facts, add additional meaning to the known facts, as well as establish new factual conclusions and legal contentions, all of which may lead to substantial additions to, changes in and/or variations from responses herein set forth. The following responses are given without prejudice to Respondent's right to produce and introduce at trial evidence of any subsequently discovered facts that they may later develop. The responses contained herein are made in a good faith effort to supply the factual information as is currently known, but in no way subject Respondent to prejudice in relation to further discovery, research or analysis.

11. Respondent objects to the Administrator's Second Set of Interrogatories to the extent that it exceeds the limit of 25 interrogatories, including all discrete subparts, as set forth in 29 C.F.R. § 18.60(a)(1). Responding to an interrogatory or discrete subpart does not waive this objection, and Respondent expressly reserves its right to raise this objection to any attempt to introduce any response to an interrogatory promulgated in excess of this limitation.

12. Respondent expressly reserves all objections to the admissibility at trial or any other proceeding of any of the information or documents they produce in response to these Discovery Requests.

Interrogatories

1. Please identify all persons, other than your attorneys, who responded to or assisted in responding to the Department's Second Set of Interrogatories, specifying separately which person(s) assisted in responding to each item of discovery.

Response: Russell J. Marino, Jr. and Lisa Justice responded to or assisted in responding to each interrogatory in the Administrator's Second Set of Interrogatories.

2. With respect to the document that Respondents produced as Exhibit 9 on April 7, 2017, please explain in detail and state:

a. the date Exhibit 9 was created;

b. the source of the information in the "Total Hours" column; and

c. the meaning of the information in the "Total Hours" column, including whether "Total Hours" refers to hours actually worked, hours offered, or something else (if so, please explain what else). If the answer to this interrogatory varies for different rows in Exhibit 9, please explain in detail any such variation.

Response: (a) Exhibit 9 was created on February 17, 2016, as indicated on the document. By that, Respondent means that that precise piece of paper was printed at that time. The information included in the document was created at some point prior to that date, in 2015, based on data entered into Sun Valley's records at the time when the work reflected in the document was performed by these workers, in April through August 2015. Respondent is unable to determine more precisely when the spreadsheet reflected in Exhibit 9 was first created.

(b) The "Total Hours" reflect the hours worked by each work and paid by Sun Valley, based on data from the PET ("Payroll Employee Tracking") Tiger tracking system.

(c) The information in the "Total Hours" column refers to hours actually worked by each employee.

3. With respect to the document attached hereto as DOL00513-19 please explain in detail and state:

a. the source of the information in the "Total Hours" column; and

b. the meaning of the information in the "Total Hours" column, including whether "Total Hours" refers to hours actually worked, hours offered, or something else (if so, please explain what else). If the answer to this interrogatory varies for different rows, please explain in detail any such variation, and please do so with reference to the categories listed in the "Ern/Ded Description" column ("Asp Harv H2A," "Minimum Wag[e]," "Planting H2A," etc.).

Response: The information in the "Total Hours" column comes from the PET Tiger tracking system used by Sun Valley, as imported into the "Famous" payroll tracking system used by Sun Valley. The information in the "Total Hours" column takes two forms, as reflected in the "Ern/Ded Description" column. The categories shown for this time period are:

- "Asp Harv H2A" – asparagus harvesting by H-2A workers; the AEWR is paid to both H-2A and domestic workers doing work covered by the job order, and the "H2A" notation reflects the tax-withholding difference for H-2A workers only;
- "Planting H2A" – planting other vegetables; again "H2A" reflecting the tax treatment rather than the wage rate; and
- "Minimum Wag[e]" – described in more detail below.

The "Minimum Wage" notation arises where: (1) a worker is performing work that would be compensated on a piece-rate basis; (2) the piece-rate earnings for that worker on that day do not reach the level required of AEWR times the number of hours worked for that day; so (3) additional compensation is provided to increase the worker's earnings to the required AEWR level. That additional compensation is reflected as "Minimum Wage" for a given day. So, for all hours worked, both the hours actually worked and the number of "pieces" are tracked, and the higher of the AEWR x hours or pieces x rate is automatically used for that day's pay.

The "Total Hours" notation for a "Minimum Wage" pay increase simply mirrors the hours worked for that day as already shown on the piece-rate entry for that day (e.g., "Asp Harv H2A") and were not used to calculate three-fourths guarantee "Total Hours" for any of these workers. For entries showing a "Minimum Wage" payment on a given day, the "Total Hours" column for such a payment is not relevant – the "Total Hours" for the piece-rate-based work for that day is the relevant number of hours worked for purposes of the AEWR-times-hours minimum payment.

4. With respect to the document attached hereto as DOL919-20, please explain in detail and state:

a. the source of the information in the "Hours" column; and

b. the meaning of the information in the "Hours" column, including whether "Hours" refers to hours actually worked, hours offered, or something else (if so, please explain what else). If the answer to this interrogatory varies for different rows, please explain in detail any such variation.

Response: The information in the "Hours" column is transferred from the PET Tiger tracking system. The information in the "Hours" column means the actual hours worked by each employee (i.e., not reflecting any payroll adjustments for "Minimum Wage" adjustments discussed above, where the piece-rate production fell below the AEWR hourly requirement).

5. Please state whether Respondent's answers to Interrogatories 4a and 4b are also the same for all other documents in Exhibit C titled "Payroll Run Inquiry – Check View." If the source or meaning of the information in the "Total Hours" column for the other "Payroll Run Inquiry – Check View" documents differs from the source or meaning of the information in the "Total Hours" columns in DOL00919-20, please explain in detail any such variation.

Response: Respondent objects to this Interrogatory as compound, vague, and confusing. Subject to those objections, Respondent states that the answers to Interrogatories 4a and 4b are the same for the information included in the "Hours" column of the documents comprising Exhibit C. The "Payroll Run Inquiry – Check View" reports in DOL00919-20 and Exhibit C all come from the same source.

6. With respect to the document attached hereto as DOL00501-11, please explain in detail and state:

a. the source of the information in the "Total Time and "Reg" columns; and

b. the meaning of the information in the "Total Hours" and "Reg" columns, including whether "Total Hours" and "Reg" refers [sic] to hours actually worked, hours offered, or something else (if so, please explain what else). If the answer to this interrogatory varies for different rows, please explain in detail any such variation.

Response: For most of the employees and most of the days, the information in those two columns is identical and reflects the hours actually worked. For the few employee-days where the numbers are not the same for these columns, Sun Valley has checked with its payroll software vendor for an explanation of the difference. It appears that the disparity occurred (and has since been remedied) where a worker split time between hourly and piece-rate work in a given day, with the "Total Hours" amount showing only one type of work and the "Reg" amount showing the combination. The "Reg" amounts consistently exceed the "Total Hours" amounts in the few cases where they are not identical.

7. Please state whether Respondent's answers to Interrogatories 6a and 6b are also the same for all documents in Exhibit C titled "Job Card: Payroll Summary." If the source or meaning of the information in the "Total Hours" or "Reg" columns for other "Job Card: Payroll Summary" documents differs from the source or meaning of the information in the "Total Hours" or "Reg" columns in DOL00501-11, please explain in detail any such variation.

Response: The source of the information was the same for the "Job Card: Payroll Summary" reports, whether in Exhibit C or in DOL00501-11, so the explanation should be the same as in Interrogatory 6, to the extent that there is any variation between the numbers in those columns for a particular worker on a particular day.

8. For each of the following six workers (Miguel A Elizondo Soto, Jose D Islas Larraga, Luis A Luna Gonzalez, Dario Morales Acosta, Rodrigo Raya Tapia, and Jose L Silva Loopez), please provide a full, complete, and detailed description of how Sun Valley calculated that Sun Valley satisfied the three-fourths guarantee in 2015. In your response, please state, for each of these six workers, the total number of hours actually worked and the total number of hours of work offered, and identify the records that support those numbers.

Response: Subject to the objections set forth above, Sun Valley responds as follows. Lisa Justice and Russell J. Marino, Jr. took the contract period for each worker and determined the number of weeks in that period. They then multiplied the number of weeks by 40 hours per week, as set forth on the job order, to determine the total contract hours. They then calculated 75% of that total number of hours and compared that to the total hours worked as of that date by each of the employees in question.

For the job order with a period of need of April 13, 2015 through October 10, 2015, there were 26 weeks, multiplied by 40 hours/week for 1040 hours total, with 780 hours as the three-fourths target. For the latter job order, with a period of need of June 1, 2015 through October 10, 2015, there were 19 weeks, for a total of 760 hours and a three-fourths target of 570 hours.

As shown in Exhibit 16 (provided herewith and prepared in response to this Interrogatory), 5 of the six workers identified in the Interrogatory (all but Jose Islas Larraga) worked on the second target, thus having a three-fourths target of 570 hours. Miguel Elizondo Soto worked 715.26 hours, Luis Luna Gonzalez worked 708.39 hours, Rodrigo Raya Tapia worked 690.06 hours, and Jose Silva Lopez worked 859.19 hours.

The other two workers were offered more hours but did not work them, due to illness or refusal to work – Dario Morales Acosta sat in camp for three weeks after he hurt his foot. Jose Islas Larraga worked 633.25 hours on the earlier contract, and Dario Morales Acosta worked 486.34 hours on the later contract. The "hours offered" to each worker that bring their total hours offered above their respective three-fourths guarantee level were determined by the hours offered/worked by their co-workers, as shown in Sun Valley's payroll records.

Sun Valley Orhards LLC grows various vegetables. Sun Valley's season begin in April once the ground is no longer frozen. If the ground is frozen Sun Valley is unable to plant their vegetable plants. From April until October the workers are planting, cultivating, harvesting, and performing post harvest field clean up. During the months of October through March none of the crops that Sun Valley's grows will survive outside.

Employer has complied with all requirements placed on them by the US Dept of Labor. It is general knowledge that all crops are seasonal in nature. They all must be planted, cultivated, and harvested within a certain time frame in order to maintain the highest level of quality for that specific crop. There are warm season and cool season crops, dependent upon certain temperatures of the air and ground. But they all have a distinct growing season of which must be adhered to for an optimum yield.

If "Yes," E-Verify Company ID or Client Company ID: _____

The H-2A/H-2B petitioner and each employer consent to allow Government access to the site where the labor is being performed for the purpose of determining compliance with H-2A/H-2B requirements. The petitioner further agrees to notify DHS beginning on a date and in a manner specified in a notice published in the Federal Register within 2 workdays if: an H-2A/H-2B worker fails to report for work within 5 workdays after the employment start date stated on the petition or, applicable to H-2A petitioners only, within 5 workdays of the start date established by the petitioner, whichever is later; the agricultural labor or services for which H-2A/H-2B workers were hired is completed more than 30 days early; or the H-2A/H-2B worker absconds from the worksite or is terminated prior to the completion of agricultural labor or services for which he or she was hired. The petitioner agrees to retain evidence of such notification and make it available for inspection by DHS officers for a 1-year period. "Workday" means the period between the time on any particular day when such employee commences his or her principal activity and the time on that day at which he or she ceases such principal activity or activities.

For H-2A petitioners only: The petitioner agrees to pay $10 in liquidated damages for each instance where it cannot demonstrate it is in compliance with the notification requirement.

The petitioner must execute Part A. If the petitioner is the employer's agent, the employer must execute Part B. If there are joint employers, they must each execute Part C.

Part A. Petitioner:

By filing this petition, I agree to the conditions of H-2A/H-2B employment and agree to the notification requirements. For H-2A petitioners: I also agree to the liquidated damages requirements defined in 8 CFR 214.2(h)(5)(vi)(B)(3).

BILLING CODE 4510–FN–P

DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

Employment and Training Administration

Labor Certification Process for the Temporary Employment of Aliens in Agriculture in the United States: 2015 Allowable Charges for Agricultural Workers' Meals and Travel Subsistence Reimbursement, Including Lodging AGENCY: Employment and Training Administration, Department of Labor.

ACTION: Notice.

SUMMARY: The Employment and Training Administration (ETA) of the Department of Labor (Department) is issuing this Notice to announce (1) the allowable charges for 2015 that employers seeking H–2A workers may charge their workers when the employer provides three meals a day, and (2) the maximum travel subsistence meal reimbursement that a worker with receipts may claim in 2015. The Notice also includes a reminder regarding employers' obligations with respect to overnight lodging costs as part of required subsistence.

DATES: Effective Date: This notice is effective on February 23, 2015.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: William W. Thompson, Acting Administrator, Office of Foreign Labor Certification (OFLC), U.S. Department of Labor, Room C–4312, 200 Constitution Avenue NW., Washington, DC 20210. Telephone: 202–693–3010 (this is not a toll-free number).

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

The United States (U.S.) Citizenship and Immigration Services of the Department of Homeland Security will not approve an employer's petition for the admission of H–2A nonimmigrant temporary agricultural workers in the U.S. unless the petitioner has received from the Department an H–2A labor certification. The H–2A labor certification provides that: (1) there are not sufficient U.S. workers who are able, willing, and qualified, and who will be available at the time and place needed to perform the labor or services involved in the petition; and (2) the employment of the foreign worker(s) in such labor or services will not adversely affect the wages and working conditions of workers in the U.S. similarly employed. 8 U.S.C. 1101(a)(15)(H)(ii)(a), 1184(c)(1), and 1188(a); 8 CFR 214.2(h)(5).

Allowable Meal Charge

Among the minimum benefits and working conditions that the Department requires employers to offer their U.S. and H–2A workers are three meals a day or free and convenient cooking and kitchen facilities. 20 CFR 655.122(g). Where the employer provides the meals, the job offer must state the charge, if any, to the worker for such meals. Id.

The Department provides, at 20 CFR 655.173(a), the methodology for determining the maximum amounts that H–2A agricultural employers may charge their U.S. and foreign workers for providing them with three meals per day during employment. This methodology provides for annual adjustments of the previous year's maximum allowable charge based upon updated Consumer Price Index (CPI) data. The maximum charge allowed by 20 CFR 655.173(a) is adjusted by the same percentage as the 12-month percent change in the CPI for all Urban Consumers for Food (CPI–U for Food).[1] The OFLC Certifying Officer may also permit an employer to charge workers a higher amount for providing them with three meals a day, if the higher amount is justified and sufficiently documented by the employer, as set forth in 20 CFR 655.173(b).

The Department has determined that the percentage change between December of 2013 and December of 2014 for the CPI–U for Food was 2.4 percent. Accordingly, the maximum an employer is allowed to charge under 20 CFR 655.122(g) shall be no more than $11.86 per day, unless the OFLC Certifying Officer approves a higher charge for a specific employer as authorized under 20 CFR 655.173(b).

Reimbursement for Daily Travel Subsistence

The regulations at 20 CFR 655.122(h) establish that the minimum daily travel subsistence expense for meals, to which a worker is entitled to reimbursement, must be at least as much as the employer would charge for providing the worker with three meals a day during employment (if applicable), but in no event less than the amount prescribed under § 655.173(a), i.e. the rate annually adjusted by the 12-month percentage change in CPI–U for food.

The Department determines the reasonable meals component of the daily travel subsistence expense on the Standard Continental United States (CONUS) per diem rate as established by the General Services Administration (GSA) at 41 CFR part 301 (formerly published in Appendix A, and now found at www.gsa.gov/perdiem). The CONUS minimum meals component remains $46.00 per day for 2015. Workers who qualify for travel reimbursement are entitled to reimbursement for meals up to the CONUS meal rate when they provide receipts. In determining the appropriate amount of reimbursement for meals for less than a full day, the employer may provide for meal expense reimbursement, with receipts, to 75 percent of the maximum reimbursement for meals of $34.50, as provided for in the GSA per diem schedule. If a worker has no receipts, the employer is not obligated to reimburse above the minimum stated at 20 CFR 655.173(a) as specified above.

The term "subsistence" includes both meals and lodging during travel to and from the worksite. Therefore, an employer is responsible for providing (either paying in advance or reimbursing a worker) the reasonable costs of transportation and daily subsistence between the employer's worksite and the place from which the worker comes to work for the employer, if the worker completes 50 percent of the work contract period. Upon the worker completing the contract, the employer is obligated to pay the return costs. In those instances where a worker must travel to obtain a visa so that the worker may enter the U.S. to come to work for the employer, the employer must pay for the transportation and daily subsistence costs of that part of the travel as well.

As the Department has stated before, we interpret the regulation to require the employer to assume responsibility for the reasonable costs associated with the worker's travel, including transportation, food, and, in those instances where it is necessary, lodging. The minimum and maximum daily travel meal reimbursement amounts are established above. If transportation and lodging are not provided by the employer, the amount an employer must pay for transportation and, where required, lodging, must be no less than (and is not required to be more than) the most economical and reasonable costs. The employer is responsible for those costs necessary for the worker to travel to the worksite if the worker completes 50 percent of the work contract period, but is not responsible for unauthorized detours, and if the worker completes the contract the employer is further responsible for return transportation and subsistence costs, including lodging costs where necessary. This policy also applies to instances where the worker is traveling within the U.S. to the employer's worksite.

For further information on when the employer is responsible for transportation, lodging and meal costs, please see the Department's H–2A Frequently Asked Questions on Travel and Daily Subsistence, which may found on the OFLC Web site: http://www.foreignlaborcert.doleta.gov/.

BILLING CODE 4510–FP–P

NUCLEAR REGULATORY COMMISSION

[Docket No. 50–271; NRC–2015–0034]

Entergy Nuclear Operations, Inc., Vermont Yankee Nuclear Power Station

AGENCY: Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

ACTION: Exemption; issuance.

SUMMARY: The U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) is issuing an exemption in response to a October 31, 2013, request from Entergy Nuclear Operations, Inc. (Entergy or the licensee), from certain regulatory requirements. The exemption would remove the requirement that a licensed senior operator approve the emergency suspension of security measures for Vermont Yankee Nuclear Power Station (VY) during certain emergency conditions or during severe weather.

ADDRESSES: Please refer to Docket ID NRC–2015–0034 when contacting the NRC about the availability of information regarding this document. You may obtain publicly-available information related to this document using any of the following methods:

- Federal Rulemaking Web site: Go to http://www.regulations.gov and search for Docket ID NRC–2015–0034. Address questions about NRC dockets to Carol Gallagher; telephone: 301–415–3463; email: Carol.Gallagher@nrc.gov. For technical questions, contact the individual listed in the FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT section of this document.
- NRC's Agencywide Documents Access and Management System (ADAMS): You may obtain publicly-available documents online in the ADAMS Public Documents collection at http://www.nrc.gov/reading-rm/adams.html. To begin the search, select "ADAMS Public Documents" and then select "Begin Web-based ADAMS Search." For problems with ADAMS, please contact the NRC's Public Document Room (PDR) reference staff at 1–800–397–4209, 301–415–4737, or by email to pdr.resource@nrc.gov. The ADAMS accession number for each document referenced in this document (if that document is available in ADAMS) is provided the first time that a document is referenced.
- NRC's PDR: You may examine and purchase copies of public documents at the NRC's PDR, Room O1–F21, One White Flint North, 11555 Rockville Pike, Rockville, Maryland 20852.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: James Kim, Office of Nuclear Reactor Regulation; U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission, Washington, DC 20555–0001; telephone: 301–415–4125; email: James.Kim@nrc.gov.

I. Background

Entergy is the holder of Renewed Facility Operating License No. DPR–28. The license provides, among other things, that the facility is subject to all rules, regulations, and orders of the NRC now or hereafter in effect. The facility consists of a boiling-water reactor located in Windham County, Vermont.

By letter dated January 12, 2015, (ADAMS Accession No. ML15013A426), Entergy submitted to the NRC the certification, in accordance with Section 50.82(a)(1)(i) and 50.82(a)(1)(ii) of Title 10 of the Code of Federal Regulations (10 CFR), indicating it permanently ceased power operations and that the VY reactor vessel was permanently defueled.

II. Request/Action

On October 31, 2013 (ADAMS Accession No. ML13317A077), the licensee requested an exemption from 10 CFR 73.55(p)(1)(i) and 73.55(p)(1)(ii) pursuant to 10 CFR 73.5, "Specific exemptions." Section 73.55(p)(1)(i) and 73.55(p)(1)(ii) require, in part, that the suspension of security measures during certain emergency conditions or during severe weather be approved by a licensed senior operator. The exemption request relates solely to the licensing

The Food Plans represent a nutritious diet at four different cost levels. The nutritional bases of the Food Plans are the 1997-2005 Dietary Reference Intakes, 2005 Dietary Guidelines for Americans, and 2005 MyPyramid food intake recommendations. In addition to cost, differences among plans are in specific foods and quantities of foods. Another basis of the Food Plans is that all meals and snacks are prepared at home. For specific foods and quantities of foods in the Food Plans, see Thrifty Food Plan, 2006 (2007) and The Low-Cost, Moderate-Cost, and Liberal Food Plans, 2007 (2007). All four Food Plans are based on 2001-02 data and updated to current dollars by using the Consumer Price Index for specific food items.

All costs are rounded to nearest 10 cents.

The costs given are for individuals in 4-person families. For individuals in other size families, the following adjustments are suggested 1-person—add 20 percent; 2-person—add 10 percent; 3-person—add 5 percent; 4-person—no adjustment; 5- or 6-person—subtract 5 percent; 7- (or more) person—subtract 10 percent. To calculate overall household food costs, (1) adjust food costs for each person in household and then (2) sum these adjusted food costs.

Ten percent added for family size adjustment.

Counsel for Respondent

The Administrator, Wage and Hour Division, U.S. Department of Labor ("Administrator"), through the undersigned attorneys, hereby responds to Respondents' First Set of Interrogatories in the above-captioned case.

The Administrator reserves the right to supplement, revise, correct, or clarify any of the responses herein. The Administrator interprets the Interrogatories not to seek attorney-client communications between the Wage and Hour Division and the Office of the Solicitor, attorney work product, or information concerning documents provided to the Office of the Solicitor by the attorneys that represent the Respondent. The Administrator further interprets these interrogatories to relate only to the instant matter and not to the matter that the Court dismissed on May 15, 2017, Secretary of Labor v. Agustin Hernandez, 2017-MSP-00002.

GENERAL OBJECTIONS

1. The Administrator objects to Respondent's Interrogatories as untimely served insofar as they call for responses after the close of discovery in this case.

2. The Administrator objects to these Interrogatories to the extent they seek information possessed by Department of Labor agencies other than the Wage and Hour Division, or possessed by individuals employed by such agencies. The Wage and Hour Division is the only Department of Labor agency that is a party to this case. The Administrator interprets such requests to refer only to the Wage and Hour Division.

3. The Administrator objects to Respondent's Interrogatories to the extent they seek disclosure of materials protected by the attorney-client privilege, the attorney work product privilege, the informant's privilege, the deliberative process privilege, the investigative techniques privilege, the common-interest privilege, and any other applicable protection, restriction or immunity from discovery. Such privileges are explicitly preserved and are not waived or limited by any response herein. The inadvertent disclosure of any information subject to such privileges or protection is not intended to relinquish any privilege or protection and shall not be deemed to be a waiver of any applicable privilege or protection.

4. The providing of information herein shall not be construed as an admission by the Administrator that any such information is relevant, material, or admissible for any purpose, including trial, in the above-captioned action, and the Administrator does not waive his right to object, on any ground, to the admissibility or use of the information provided in response to the Interrogatories.

5. The Administrator objects to Respondent's Interrogatories to the extent they seek information that is neither relevant to this action nor reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. The Administrator further objects to the Interrogatories to the extent that they purport to impose discovery obligations beyond those provided for in the Rules of Practice and Procedure for Administrative Hearings of Administrative Law Judges, the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, or other applicable rules or statutes.

6. The Administrator objects to Respondent's Interrogatories to the extent that they are overbroad, unduly burdensome, or would require an unreasonable investigation on the part of the Administrator given the needs of the case, the amount in controversy, and the issues at stake.

7. The Administrator objects to Respondent's Interrogatories to the extent that they are ambiguous, vague, confusing, misleading, or incomprehensible.

8. The Administrator objects to Respondent's Interrogatories to the extent a relevant time period is not specified, and to the extent the time period specified is overly broad.

9. The Administrator objects to Respondent's Interrogatories to the extent they seek admissions for which the Administrator has no independent means to ascertain the truth. The Administrator further objects to the extent that the information requested is not held by the Administrator or by an individual or entity with which the Administrator maintains a relationship that would enable her to procure the required information.

10. To the extent that the Administrator responds to Respondent's Interrogatories to which she objects, such objections are not waived. These responses are made without waiver of, and with preservation of all issues as to the competency, relevancy, materiality, privilege, and admissibility of these responses as evidence for any purpose.

11. All responses herein are based on the Administrator's current knowledge and reasonable belief, and the Administrator reserves his right to amend or supplement these Responses.

12. The Administrator incorporates by reference every general objection set forth above into each specific response set forth below. A specific response may repeat a general objection for emphasis or for some other reason. The failure to include any general objection in any specific response does not waive any general objection to that Interrogatory.

RESPONSES

1. Provide the name, address, and telephone number of each individual likely to have discoverable information that you may use to support your claims, including information to be used solely for impeachment, identifying in reasonably specific detail the substance of such information.

Response: The Administrator responds as follows:

A) Individuals with knowledge of the Department's investigations of Sun Valley Orchards, LLC ("Sun Valley") and Agustin Hernandez, and the findings of those investigations.

1. Jose L. Perez, Investigator, Wage and Hour Division;
2. John M. Crudup, Investigator, Wage and Hour Division;
3. Bryen Belcher, Regional Enforcement Coordinator, Wage and Hour Division;
4. Steven Risko, Assistant District Director, Wage and Hour Division;
5. Charlene L. Rachor, District Director, Wage and Hour Division.

These five individuals can be contacted through the U.S. Department of Labor, Office of the Solicitor, 201 Varick Street, Room 983, New York, NY 10014, attention Jason Glick, (646) 264-3687.

6. James F. Mooney, former Regional Enforcement Coordinator, Wage and Hour Division.

James F. Mooney can be contacted at: 51 Greenpond Road, Belvidere, NJ 07823; (908) 475-5136.

B) Individuals with knowledge of Respondent's employment policies and practices, including but not limited to: business operations, payroll and accounting, hours worked by employees, wages received and deductions made from wages, and the terms and conditions of employment at Respondent's workplace. The addresses and contact information for these individuals can be found in Respondent's records or is best known to Respondent.

7. Russell J. Marino Jr.;
8. Joseph M Marino;
9. Russell Marino;
10. Harry Marino;
11. Agustin Hernandez; and
12. Elia Pinon

C) Individuals with knowledge of Respondent's employment policies and practices, including but not limited to: hours worked by employees, wages received and deductions made from wages, and the terms and conditions of employment at Respondent's workplace, including but not limited to Respondent's kitchen, meal plan, and meal charges. Addresses and contact information for these individuals can be found in Respondent's records, is best known to Respondent, and/or for Sun Valley's H-2A workers, is contained in the attached Exhibit A. Pursuant to 29 C.F.R. § 18.60(d), Respondent is also referred to DOL 01602-04 and Exhibit A to the Administrator's February 15, 2017 initial disclosures.

13. Current and former agents and employees of Respondent, including but not limited to individuals who have worked in Sun Valley's kitchen facilities, and the individuals listed in the attached Exhibit A.

2. Describe by category and location all documents, electronically stored information, and tangible things that are in your possession, custody, or control that you may use to support your claims, including information to be used solely for impeachment.

Response: The Administrator may use the following documents in support of her claims. All of these documents are in the possession of the Office of the Solicitor

1. Department Investigation narratives, worksheets, checklists, and notes;
2. Department wage and CMP computation sheets;
3. Interview statements;
4. Photographs;
5. Payroll and hours records;
6. Employee meal charge tallies;
7. Supermarket and grocery receipts and price information;
8. Correspondence between the Department and the Respondents;
9. Correspondence between the New Jersey Department of Labor and Workforce Development and the Respondents;
10. Department Notices of Determination dated June 22, 2016 and August 9, 2016; and

11. ETA Form 790 Agricultural and Food Processing Clearance Orders, ETA Form 9142A Applications for Temporary Employment Certification, and similar documents filed by Sun Valley or issued in response to Sun Valley's filings;
12. Vehicle insurance documents from Sun Valley;
13. USDA letter concerning August 2015 weather problems;
14. Deposition exhibits and videos; and
15. Other documents produced by the Administrator or the Respondent in this matter, including but not limited departure forms signed by Sun Valley's former workers.

3. Identify each person who has, or reasonably may have, information that may tend to exculpate Respondents from one or more of the asserted violations. For each person, provide a reasonably specific and detailed summary of such information.

Response: The Administrator objects to this Interrogatory to the extent that it seeks information outside of the Administrator's custody or control as well as information protected by the informant's privilege.

Subject to the foregoing and without waiving the general objections, the Administrator is not aware of persons who have information that may tend to exculpate Respondents from any of the asserted violations. Respondent is further directed to the Administrator's Document Production including but not limited to DOL 00001-462.

4. For each witness who is an employee of DOL, state, in complete and precise detail, all training and/or education that such witness has had with respect to the allegations that form the subject matter of this proceeding.

Response: The Administrator interprets this question as seeking information regarding who the Administrator will call as a witness at the merits hearing. Accordingly, the Administrator objects on the basis that this Interrogatory seeks the Administrator's witness lists before the time called for in the Court's February 7, 2017 order.

Subject to the foregoing and the general objections, the Administrator states as follows: John Crudup, Jose Perez, Steven Risko, and Charlene Rachor have completed Basic 1 and 2 training and the "Just in Time" agricultural training. In addition, Charlene Rachor has attended the Advanced Agricultural Training. These trainings include instruction on investigation techniques and the H-2A program, among other topics.

5. State whether any written statements were obtained in connection with the allegations set forth in either Notice of Determination (Exhibits 12 and 13). If a statement was obtained, please state the date the statement was obtained and the name, present or last known address and job title of the person or persons giving and obtaining the statement and having custody of the statement so obtained.

Response: The Administrator objects to this interrogatory to the extent that it seeks information protected by the informant's privilege. Subject to the foregoing, statements were obtained by Wage Hour Investigators Jose Perez and John Crudup. Mr. Perez and Mr. Crudup can be contacted through the U.S. Department of Labor, Office of the Solicitor, Room 983, New York, NY 10014, attention Jacob Heyman-Kantor (646) 264-3672. The statements Mr. Perez and Mr. Crudup obtained are in the possession of the Office of the Solicitor. Pursuant to 29 C.F.R. § 18.60(d), Respondent is directed to documents produced by the Administrator including but not limited to DOL 00187-90; 00202-05; and 00225-0226.

6. Identify any expert witness(es) who you anticipate calling in this administrative hearing. With respect to such witness(es), further state: (a) the expert's current occupation and title, specialty and qualifications; (b) whether the stated expert has prepared a written report or whether he or she intends to; and (c) the substance of the facts and opinions about which the expert is expected to testify; and a summary of data relied upon for that opinion.

Response: The Administrator does not anticipate calling any expert witnesses.

7. Identify any other persons, not otherwise identified in the above paragraphs, who have knowledge or information related to any of your claims alleged in the Notice of Determination and describe the nature of that knowledge or information.

Response: The Administrator objects to this Interrogatory on the basis that it is vague. The Administrator further objects to this Interrogatory on the basis that it is unduly broad and overly burdensome to the extent that it seeks the information of individuals who do not have any discoverable information and seeks information beyond the scope of discovery. Subject to the foregoing, see Interrogatory Response 1. In addition, pursuant to 29 C.F.R. § 18.60(d), the Administrator hereby directs Respondent to the Administrator's document production.

8. Identify all documents provided by Respondents to DOL in response to any demand, whether written or oral, from DOL related to the investigation that resulted in the Determination letters.

Response: The Administrator objects on the basis that it is not clear what this interrogatory means by "identify all documents"; "identify" is defined in Respondents' Interrogatories only in the context of identifying individuals.

Pursuant to 29 C.F.R. § 18.60(d), the Administrator refers to the documents she is producing in this case, including but not limited to DOL 00463–1204, 00187–90; 00202–05; 001206–41, 001243–69, 001271–96, 001298–1318, 001320–56, 001358–95, 001397–1436; 001602–04; 02928–38, 02947–74, 03001–65.

9. Identify all documents reviewed and considered by DOL representatives prior to issuing the Determination letters.

Response: The Administrator objects on the basis that it is not clear what this Interrogatory means by "identify all documents"; "identify" is defined in Respondents' Interrogatories only in the context of identifying individuals. The Administrator further objects to this Interrogatory to the extent that it seeks information protected by the informant's, investigative files/techniques, and deliberative process privileges.

Subject to the foregoing and without waiving the general objections, pursuant to 29 C.F.R. § 18.60(d), see the documents the Administrator is producing to Respondent, including but not limited to DOL 00001-1465.

10. Identify all communications relating to any investigation of Respondents conducted by DOL, at any time prior to the present, including communications relating to the outcome of any such investigation and any action or potential action that DOL considered with respect to the results of such investigation.

Response: The Administrator objects on the basis that it is not clear what this Interrogatory means by "identify all communications"; "identify" is defined in Respondents' Interrogatories only in the context of identifying individuals. The Administrator further objects to this Interrogatory to the extent that it seeks information protected by the informant's, investigative files/techniques, and deliberative process.

The Administrator further objects to this Interrogatory as overly broad and burdensome. In addition to the documents she is producing in this case, the Administrator has in her possession a case file from a previous investigation of Sun Valley and is producing a redacted narrative of this investigation and of several earlier investigations. The Administrator objects to production of the underlying case file in her possession as the burden of processing and redacting it significantly outweighs whatever marginal relevance that it may have.

Subject to the foregoing and without waiving the general objections, pursuant to 29 C.F.R. § 18.60(d), Respondent is referred to DOL 00424-00456.

11. The Determination letter to Sun Valley alleges that 19 H-2A workers were "constructively forced to return home" prior to being offered three-fourths of the hours in the work contract. With respect to each of these workers, identify each worker whom you contend was underpaid, the reason that DOL believes each worker terminated their employment with Sun Valley, the basis for such belief, and specify in complete and precise detail all facts supporting your contention.

Response: The Administrator objects to this Interrogatory to the extent that it seeks information protected by the informant's privilege.

Subject to the foregoing and without waiving the general objections, the Administrator alleges that these workers were either constructively discharged because of intolerable conditions of employment at Sun Valley, or were terminated after complaining about the conditions of employment at Sun Valley. These nineteen workers (who are more fully identified in the attached Exhibit A) are:

1. Jose Manuel Baltazar Cheguez;

2. Carlos Cervantes Ramirez;
3. Hugo Leonel Cinta Tegoma;
4. Humberto Dominguez;
5. Hector M. Garcia Dominguez;
6. Celso Grijalva Ramos;
7. Ines Hernandez Sanchez;
8. Javier Juarez Hernandez;
9. Marco G. Maldonado;
10. Gustavo Marquez Perez;
11. Cristian Mendez Hernandez;
12. Marcelo Ortega Vargas;
13. Delfino Antonio Reyes;
14. Lucio Rosales Lopez;
15. Venustiano Sanchez Dolores;
16. Isau Santiago Mendoza;
17. Tomas Sonalo Guerrero;
18. Adrian Vazquez Desion; and
19. Marcos Zaveleta.

Regarding the facts supporting our contention, pursuant to 29 C.F.R. § 18.60(d), Respondent is referred to documents the Administrator is producing in this case including but not limited to DOL 00020-00045, 00164-00254.

12. For any other Sun Valley employees that the Department believes are owed back wages concerning the three-fourths guarantee, please state, with respect to each worker, the amount you contend was underpaid, the basis for that conclusion, including the number of hours offered and the number required to have been offered.

Response: The Administrator objects to this Interrogatory to the extent that it seeks information protected by the informant's privilege.

Subject to the foregoing and without waiving the general objections, the Administrator responds as follows: the amount of back wages owed to other Sun Valley employees for the three-quarters violation was calculated primarily based on the start dates and number of hours worked in Sun Valley's own payroll records, including but not limited to the "Job Card: Payroll Summary" and "Payroll Run Inquiry – Check View" found at DOL 01602-04, DOL00463-1204). The Administrator used those records of hours worked because Sun Valley did not produce or maintain records of hours offered in accordance with 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(j). The Administrator determined that the following employees (in addition to those named above) are owed back wages under the three-fourths guarantee given that these workers were terminated and/or constructively discharged.

Name	Number of hours offered	Number of hours required under the 3/4ths guarantee	Amount underpaid
Miguel A. Elizondo	471	550.5	$897.56

Soto
Luis A. Luna Gonzalez	515.27	550.5	$397.75
Rodrigo Raya Tapia	475.25	550.5	$849.92
Jose L. Silva Lopez	540.73	550.5	$110.30
Dario Morales Acosta	352.23	550.5	$2,238.47
Jose D. Islas Larraga	470.75	695.25	$2,534.61

13. State in complete and precise detail all facts which you contend relate to the housing and transportation violations for which you seek civil money penalties in the Sun Valley determination letter, including the identity of all witnesses to the alleged violation(s), and the identity of all documents that you contend relate to such alleged violations.

Response: The Administrator objects to this interrogatory as vague and on the basis that it is not clear what this Interrogatory means by "identity of all documents"; the term "identify" is defined in Respondents' Interrogatories only in the context of identifying individuals.

Pursuant to 29 C.F.R. § 18.60(d), Respondent is referred the Administrator's document production including but not limited to DOL 00018-00045. As discussed in those documents, regarding transportation, Sun Valley has had a policy of transporting workers using drivers without licenses or improper licenses. Sun Valley also used vehicles with worn-out tires and a vehicle with a broken rear-directional light. Regarding housing, Sun Valley housed workers in a dormitory that lacked proper screen doors and screens on windows, supplied garbage cans that had no lids, and had at least one worker sleeping on a mattress directly on the floor. Furthermore, a number of Sun Valley's dormitory bathroom sinks lacked hot water.

Regarding the identity of individuals who may have witnessed Sun Valley's substandard housing and unsafe transportation, see Interrogatory Response 1.

14. Provide the name, title, address, and telephone number of each individual who made or contributed to the determinations set forth in the Determination letters.

Response: The Administrator objects to this Interrogatory on the basis that it is vague.

Subject to the foregoing and without waiving the general objections, the following current and former Wage Hour employees participated or assisted in the investigation that resulted in the issuance of the June 22, 2015 Determination Letter:

1. Wage Hour Investigator Jose L. Perez;
2. Wage Hour Investigator John M. Crudup;
3. Wage Hour Assistant District Director Steven Risko;
4. Wage Hour Regional Agricultural Coordinator James Mooney (retired);
5. Wage Hour Regional Agricultural Coordinator Bryen Belcher;
6. Wage Hour District Director Charlene Rachor;
7. Office of the Solicitor, Counsel for Wage Hour Molly Biklen; and
8. Office of the Solicitor Trial Attorney Jacob Heyman-Kantor.

With the exception of James Mooney, these individuals can be contacted through the U.S. Department of Labor, Office of the Solicitor, Room 983, New York, NY 10014, attention Jacob Heyman-Kantor (646) 264-3672. James Mooney can be contacted at 51 Greenpond Road, Belvidere, NJ 07823; (908) 475-5136.

15. Identify in complete and precise detail all documents that were relied upon by each individual identified in answer to Interrogatory No. 14.

Response: The Administrator objects on the basis that it is not clear what this Interrogatory means by "identify all documents"; "identify" is defined in Respondents' Interrogatories only in the context of identifying individuals. The Administrator further objects to this Interrogatory to the extent that it seeks information protected by the informant's, investigative files/techniques, and deliberative process privileges.

Subject to the foregoing and without waiving the general objections, pursuant to 29 C.F.R. § 18.60(d), see the Administrator's document production and the regulations at 20 C.F.R. Part 655, Subpart B, and 29 C.F.R. Part 501.

16. Identify all documents showing payments to Sun Valley and not to Agustin Hernandez by any worker for meals, food, drinks, beer, or cigarettes.

Response: The Administrator objects on the basis that it is not clear what this Interrogatory means by "identify all documents"; "identify" is defined in Respondents' Interrogatories only in the context of identifying individuals.

The Administrator further objects to this Interrogatory on the basis that it makes no sense. Agustin Hernandez is a manager at Sun Valley; payments made to him are payments made to Sun Valley. The Administrator is not aware of documents showing payments workers made to Sun Valley through Sun Valley managers other than Agustin Hernandez.

17. Identify any worker from the 2015 season who discussed the provision of meals, condition of housing, or condition of transportation, with Sun Valley.

Response: The Administrator objects to this Interrogatory as vague, to the extent it seeks information from third parties and/or Sun Valley and to the extent that it seeks information protected by the informant's privilege.

Subject to the foregoing and without waiving the general objections, Agustin Hernandez and Russell Marino Jr. testified at their depositions that Sun Valley holds orientations with all workers. Based on this testimony, the Administrator understands that Sun Valley had discussions with all workers concerning the provision of meals, housing, and transportation.

18. State whether the factors set forth in 29 C.F.R. § 501.19(b) were applied in this case and, if so, state the conclusions made with respect to the application of each factor to each alleged violation and the facts upon which such conclusions were based. State whether any other factors were considered, and if so, identify such factors and the conclusions and facts upon which such conclusions were based in the application of such other factors.

Response: The factors set forth in 29 C.F.R. § 501.19(b) were considered for each civil money penalty assessment. Pursuant to 29 C.F.R. § 18.60(d), Respondent is referred to the documents the Administrator is producing in this case including but not limited to DOL 00018-45.

Counsel for Respondent

The Administrator, Wage and Hour Division, U.S. Department of Labor ("Administrator"), through the undersigned attorneys, hereby responds to Respondents' First Set of Requests for Admissions (hereinafter "Request(s)") in the above-captioned case.

GENERAL OBJECTIONS

1. The Administrator objects to Respondent's Requests as untimely served insofar as they call for responses after the close of discovery in this case.
2. The Administrator objects to Respondent's Requests to the extent they seek information possessed by Department of Labor agencies other than the Wage and Hour Division, or possessed by individuals employed by such agencies. The Wage and Hour Division is the only Department of Labor agency that is a party to this case. The Administrator interprets such requests to refer only to the Wage and Hour Division.

3. The Administrator objects to Respondent's Requests to the extent they seek disclosure of materials protected by the attorney-client privilege, the attorney work product privilege, the informant's privilege, the deliberative process privilege, the investigative techniques privilege, the common-interest privilege, and any other applicable protection, restriction or immunity from discovery. Such privileges are explicitly preserved and are not waived or limited by any response herein.

4. The Administrator objects to Respondent's Requests to the extent they seek information that is neither relevant to this action nor reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. The Administrator further objects to Respondent's Requests to the extent that they purport to impose discovery obligations beyond those provided for in the Rules of Practice and Procedure for Administrative Hearings of Administrative Law Judges, the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, or other applicable rules or statutes.

5. The Administrator objects to Respondent's Requests to the extent that they are overbroad, unduly burdensome, or would require an unreasonable investigation on the part of the Administrator given the needs of the case, the amount in controversy, and the issues at stake.

6. The Administrator objects to Respondent's Requests to the extent that they are ambiguous, vague, confusing, misleading, or incomprehensible.

7. The Administrator objects to Respondent's Requests to the extent a relevant time period is not specified or the time period specified is overly broad.

8. The Administrator objects to Respondent's Requests to the extent they seek admissions for which the Administrator has no independent means to ascertain the truth. The Administrator further objects to the extent that the information requested is not held by the Administrator or by an individual or entity with which the Administrator maintains a relationship that would enable her to procure the required information.

9. To the extent that the Administrator responds to Respondent's Requests to which she objects, such objections are not waived. These responses are made without waiver of, and with preservation of all issues as to the competency, relevancy, materiality, privilege, and admissibility of these responses as evidence for any purpose.

10. All responses herein are based on the Administrator's current knowledge and reasonable belief, and the Administrator reserves her right to amend or supplement these Responses.

11. The Administrator incorporates by reference every general objection set forth above into each specific response below. A specific response may repeat a general objection for emphasis or for some other reason. The failure to include any general objection in any specific response does not waive any general objection to that Request.

RESPONSES

Request for Admission 1: Notwithstanding extraneous markings, the document provided as Exhibit 12 is a true, accurate and complete copy (including any attachments or appendices) of the Notice of Determination issued by the Administrator to Sun Valley, dated June 22, 2016.

Response 1: Admitted. The Administrator also notes that it amended the June 22, 2016 Notice of Determination in its December 23, 2016 Order of Reference.

Request for Admission 2: Notwithstanding extraneous markings, the document provided as Exhibit 13 is a true, accurate and complete copy (including any attachments or appendices) of the Notice of Determination issued by the Secretary to Hernandez, dated August 9, 2016.

Response 2: The Administrator deems this request to be withdrawn pursuant the Parties' May 5, 2017 Stipulation of Dismissal in Case No. 2017-MSP-00002.

Request for Admission 3: Notwithstanding extraneous markings, the document provided as Exhibit 14 is a true, accurate and complete copy (including any attachments or appendices) of the Request for Hearing for Sun Valley, dated July 20, 2016, and timely received by the Administrator under 29 C.F.R. § 501.33.

Response 3: Admitted.

Request for Admission 4: Notwithstanding extraneous markings, the document provided as Exhibit 15 is a true, accurate and complete copy (including any attachments or appendices) of the Request for Hearing for Hernandez, dated September 2, 2016, and timely received by the Secretary under 29 C.F.R. § 500.212.

Response 4: The Administrator deems this request to be withdrawn pursuant the Parties' May 5, 2017 Stipulation of Dismissal in Case No. 2017-MSP-00002.

Request for Admission 5: The 19 H-2A workers who ceased employment with Sun Valley early in the 2015 work contract period voluntarily abandoned employment under 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(n).

Response 5: The Administrator objects to this vague Request. Without waiving the foregoing objection, the Administrator denies that the 19 workers whose employment with Sun Valley ended approximately May 5, 2015 voluntarily abandoned employment with Sun Valley. Rather, those workers were terminated and/or constructively discharged by Sun Valley.

Request for Admission 6: Sun Valley and its owners and managers tried to convince those 19 H-2A workers to remain and complete the work contract period.

Response 6:. The Administrator objects to this vague request. Without waiving the foregoing objection, the Administrator denies that Sun Valley and its owners and managers tried to convince the 19 H-2A workers whose employment with Sun Valley ended approximately May 5, 2015 to remain and complete the work contract period. Sun Valley terminated and/or constructively discharged those workers.

Request for Admission 7: Any of Sun Valley's H-2A workers or migrant agricultural workers in corresponding employment who terminated employment with Sun Valley prior to the end of the work contract period in 2015 voluntarily abandoned employment under 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(n).

Response 7: The Administrator construes this request to refer to the H-2A workers identified in the Administrator's Initial Disclosures for whom the Administrator seeks back wages for Sun Valley's three-fourths guarantee violation. So construed, the Administrator denies this request.

Request for Admission 8: If any of Sun Valley's H-2A workers or migrant agricultural workers in corresponding employment were terminated without cause prior to the end of the work contract period in 2015, such worker(s) had already been offered three-fourths of the hours set forth in the applicable H-2A job order.

Response 8: The Administrator objects to this vague request. Notwithstanding the foregoing objection, the Administrator denies this request with respect to the H-2A workers identified in the Administrator's Initial Disclosures for whom behalf the Administrator seeks back wages for Sun Valley's three-fourths guarantee violation. The Administrator further states that the issue with respect to the three-fourths guarantee claim is not whether "worker(s) had already been offered three-fourths of the hours set forth in the applicable H-2A job order," but whether Sun Valley complied with 655.122(i) and related regulations.

Request for Admission 9: Sun Valley met the three-fourths guarantee requirement for all H-2A workers and migrant agricultural workers in corresponding employment for 2015, pursuant to 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(i).

Response 9: Denied. The Administrator denies that Sun Valley met the three-fourths guarantee in 2015 with respect to the workers identified in the Administrator's Initial Disclosures for whom Administrator seeks back wages for Sun Valley's three-fourths guarantee violation Request for Admission 10: Sun Valley did not deduct any charges from the pay checks, prior to issuance, of any H-2A workers or migrant agricultural workers in corresponding employment for meals, food, nor any other cost or living expense in 2015.

Response 10: The Administrator objects to this request as vague. Subject to the foregoing, the Administrator admits that Sun Valley's payroll records do not show any such deductions from the paychecks. The Administrator further states Sun Valley deducted or collected charges from its workers for meals, food, beverages, beer, and other costs, expenses, or items, after Sun Valley issued the pay checks. The timing distinction is irrelevant to the Administrator's claims pursuant to 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(g), (p), and (q).

Request for Admission 11: Sun Valley provided a means of transportation for the workers to travel to a supermarket to purchase their own food, if they chose to do so, free of charge to the workers in 2015.

Response 11: The Administrator objects to this vague request. Subject to the foregoing, the Administrator denies this request in part, and, after a reasonable inquiry, in part lacks knowledge or information sufficient to admit or deny this request. Notwithstanding the foregoing inquiry, the Administrator states that workers' testimony is that Sun Valley did not provide a free means of transportation to anywhere outside of Sun Valley during at least the period of late April to early May. As for other times in 2015, the Administrator lacks information sufficient to admit or further deny this request.

Request for Admission 12: Sun Valley provided kitchen facilities in which to prepare such food, free of charge, in compliance with 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(g).

Response 12: Denied.

Request for Admission 13: Sun Valley provided housing as required under 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(d)(1) that complied with all applicable housing safety and health standards.

Response 13: Denied.

Request for Admission 14: Sun Valley did not receive any payment from its H-2A workers or migrant agricultural workers in corresponding employment in 2015 concerning meals.

Response 14: Denied. The Administrator further states that Agustin Hernandez, who received payment from Sun Valley's workers concerning meals in 2015, was at all relevant times Sun Valley's employee, agent, and manager.

Request for Admission 15: None of Sun Valley's H-2A workers or migrant agricultural workers in corresponding employment in 2015 complained to Sun Valley or any of Sun Valley's owners, managers, or employees concerning meals, meal charges, or the use of kitchen facilities.

Response 15: The Administrator objects to this vague request. Notwithstanding the foregoing objection, the Administrator denies this request.

Request for Admission 16: None of Sun Valley's H-2A workers or migrant agricultural workers in corresponding employment in 2015 complained to Sun Valley or any of Sun Valley's owners, managers, or employees concerning the condition of the housing site(s).

Response 16: The Administrator objects to this vague request. Notwithstanding the foregoing objection, the Administrator denies this request.

Request for Admission 17: None of Sun Valley's H-2A workers or migrant agricultural workers in corresponding employment in 2015 complained to Sun Valley or any of Sun Valley's owners, managers, or employees concerning the condition of passenger vehicles used to transport such workers.

Response 17: The Administrator objects to this vague request. Notwithstanding the foregoing objection, the Administrator denies this request.

Request for Admission 18: Neither Russell J. Marino, nor any other owner or employee of Sun Valley coerced any workers to waive their rights in violation of 29 C.F.R. § 501.5.

Response 18: Denied.

Request for Admission 19: Sun Valley did not sell beer in 2015.

Response 19: Denied. The Administrator further states that Agustin Hernandez, who sold beer in 2015, was at all relevant times Sun Valley's employee, agent, and manager.

Request for Admission 20: Sun Valley did not sell cigarettes in 2015.

Response 20: Denied. The Administrator further states that Agustin Hernandez, who sold cigarettes in 2015, was at all relevant times Sun Valley's employee, agent, and manager.

Request for Admission 21: Sun Valley did not sell soft drinks in 2015.

Response 21: Denied. The Administrator further states that Agustin Hernandez, who sold soft drinks in 2015, was at all relevant times Sun Valley's employee, agent, and manager.

Request for Admission 22: Other than the sale of produce to its customers, Sun Valley did not sell anything else in 2015, particularly to its workers.

Response 22: The Administrator objects to this vague request. Notwithstanding the foregoing objection, the Administrator denies this request.

Request for Admission 23: Hernandez was not the employer of any of the workers for whom the Administrator seeks back wages from Sun Valley.

Response 23: The Administrator objects to this vague request. Subject to the foregoing, the Administrator admits that Hernandez was not an employer in 2015 within the meaning of the H-2A regulations. As to other statutes and regulations not at issue in this case, the Administrator denies this request.

Request for Admission 24: Hernandez, at all times during 2015, was an independent contractor and not an employee of Sun Valley.

Response 24: Denied.

Request for Admission 25: Hernandez did not recruit any of the migrant agricultural workers employed by Sun Valley in 2015.

Response 25: Denied.

Request for Admission 26: Plaintiffs do not have any documents concerning the reason(s) that any of Sun Valley's workers' employment was terminated during the 2015 work contract period.

Response 26: Denied.

Request for Admission 27: Plaintiffs do not have any documents concerning payments by Sun Valley's workers to Sun Valley for food, meals, soft drinks, beer, or cigarettes during the 2015 work contract period.

Response 27: Denied.

Request for Admission 28: Plaintiffs do not have documents concerning Hernandez's status as a DOL-certified farm labor contractor, as defined in 29 C.F.R. § 500.20.

Response 28: The Administrator deems this request to be withdrawn pursuant the Parties' May 5, 2017 Stipulation of Dismissal in Case No. 2017-MSP-00002.

- - - - -

Q. Everything you were telling me about this orientation, setting up the orientation, was that all true for 2015?

A. Yes.

Q. So let's go back to Agustin, we were talking about his duties.

A. Yes, primarily labor, obviously anything that may be associated with the labor. His responsibilities mainly would be to make sure things are going correctly in the field as far as harvesting, whether it be any kind of maintenance in the field, you know, pulling weeds, things like that. Thinning, you know, anything that the help may be doing as far as their jobs.

Also he takes, we, he assumes responsibility to keep the vehicles clean, swept out. Keep the camp clean. The kitchen is immaculate. The bathroom is clean. When I say he's responsible, he may dictate or I mean delegate to another worker to do those things, make sure that the bathrooms are transported from farm to farm or field to field, wherever they need to be. Water is in the field.

And I assume what you're really

A. Soap? No, I've never seen that.
Q. Have you seen shampoo being sold?
A. I would never eat soap or shampoo. I've never seen them sold at lunchtime, no.
Q. How about instant noodles, like soup?
A. No, not that I take notice.
Q. Pastries?
A. Perhaps, on occasion.
Q. So you've seen chips, Gatorade, and possibly pastries being sold. Have you seen anything else being sold from the kitchen area?
A. No.
Q. At other times other than lunch?
A. No.
Q. And who sells these items, the chips and the Gatorade and pastries?
A. If Agustin is there, I guess Agustin, I would assume.
Q. Anybody else?
A. I don't know.
Q. Were these items being sold before 2015?
A. I don't know.
Q. Have you ever seen beer being sold?

A. No.
Q. Do you know if Agustin kept receipts for these items?
A. I don't know.
Q. So you told him to keep receipts for the meal purchases?
A. Yes.
Q. But did you tell him to keep receipts for these purchases?
A. No.
Q. Why not?
A. Because by law, I'm required to keep the receipts for the meal plan that I provide, that Sun Valley Orchards offers the men on behalf of Sun Valley Orchards.
Q. So Sun Valley Orchards offers the meal plan, but not --
A. We offer it in the contract. It's known to them that we will, Sun Valley Orchards as a company has the means to provide a meal plan.
Q. And that is true for 2015?
A. Yes.
Q. So the guarantee is that Sun Valley Orchards in 2015 -- okay. Scratch it. I got think it was 19 guys. They left as a group.

Q. And what were the circumstances of their departure?

A. They just, they didn't, they said they couldn't do the work.

Q. Well, how did you -- how did you learn about this?

A. They collectively, Agustin brought it to my attention that there were several men that either couldn't do or didn't want to do the work and wanted to go back home. So I went to the camp, because the guys weren't in the field, so I went to the camp, talked to the guys and sure enough, they didn't want to do the work and they wanted to go back home.

Q. So you first heard about this from Agustin?

A. Yes.

Q. And when did he first start telling you about this?

A. The exact day?

Q. No, like how much before you actually met with them did Agustin tell you that?

A. That day, that morning, they didn't want to go back out to the field, they didn't want to do the work anymore. And so I immediately went to the camp and talked to the guys and wanted to know, you know, what the issue, if there was an issue, what the issue was. And if we could resolve it, if we couldn't, then we'd have to go through your proper channels to get them back home.

Q. All right. So you didn't know that there were workers who didn't -- weren't happy -- did you have any -- let me rephrase.

Prior to that day that you met with the workers, did Agustin give you any indication there were workers who were not happy?

A. Yeah. And -- yes.

Q. Can you tell me more about that?

A. He explained that there were a few men, it wasn't 19, but there was a few guys that were finding the work much harder than they had anticipated and they were complaining a little bit. That was maybe a day or two prior. And I just kind of thought, him and I both assumed that after a few days of doing the work and they would get used to it and they would see how things were done. If they couldn't, if they didn't want to do the work after that, then they would go back home.

Q. And so when, the day of this meeting, when did Agustin -- was there anything else said in this conversation with Agustin the day or two prior?

A. No.

Q. So the day of, when did Agustin call you, he called you, Agustin?

A. Yes. He called me on the phone. And I went to the camp. He was there with the guys. There was a few guys outside, but when I got there, I said all the guys come out, because I wanted to speak with all the guys and make sure I got the story right, the general consensus of what was going on. And just spoke Spanish to them and they spoke Spanish back to me and I think we understood each other and had to proceed getting the forms signed and going through the -- because it was all new, how to do all this stuff to, you know, get them back home. And he said that it was voluntarily, I wasn't firing the guys, because I obviously needed help to get my product to the packing house. And so yeah, it's -- so we went through all the proper channels to do all that.

Q. So all the workers who left around that time were at this meeting?

A. Yes.

Q. About how many would you say?

A. I believe it was 19. I believe. I believe 19.

Q. And Agustin was present?

A. Yes.

Q. For the entire meeting?

A. Yeah. He was there -- he might have saw me coming through the field and then he got there shortly right behind me. But I believe he was there for the -- all the meeting, yeah.

Q. And who else was there at this meeting?

A. Just him and I and the guys.

Q. So Joe Marino was not there?

A. No.

Q. Nobody else from Sun Valley?

A. No.

Q. And where exactly was the meeting?

A. At the camp, at the living background, but yeah, it was relatively quiet.

Q. I mean did that interfere with hearing?

A. I don't believe so.

Q. And have you told me everything about this meeting?

A. Yes.

Q. And so then the meeting ended, you said this and then what happened?

A. Well, I left and I believe Agustin went back out to the field and the guys just kind of hung out at the camp and waited to hear back from us when I found out what I had to do.

Q. And when did you see these workers next, if at all?

A. Maybe the next day when I brought all the forms there for them to sign and Agustin oversaw that they signed them. But I think I may have seen a few of the guys that day. I don't know that I saw them all. And then maybe the next day or maybe two days later.

Q. So the next day or two days later, you handed forms --

A. For them to sign that they were leaving voluntarily.

Q. And you gave them to Agustin?

A. Yes.

Q. And then Agustin gave them to the workers?

A. Yeah. And I collected them. I went back, he collected them or I collected them and they were all signed in English and Spanish, their form. It's the right form, I wanted to make sure, because again, this was all new to me.

Q. And so I'm sorry, you collected them or Agustin collected them?

A. He collected them from the workers and then I went back and got them from him.

Q. From Agustin?

A. Yes.

Q. And where did you -- sorry, the next one or two days after the meeting, you handed all the forms to Agustin and then how much later did you come back to get the forms?

A. A half hour.

Q. And how did you see workers, you said you saw a few workers filling out the forms, how did you see that?

A. I brought a bunch of pens and said I need you all to sign and left them there in the eating quarters right there and they were all gathered. They were all starting to come out to gather to sign. And again, not everybody was out there, but I did explain to a few guys, the guys that were out there that we could -- there was several boxes to check off as to why they were returning. And I explained to them, you know, I wasn't going to check the box that said they didn't want to do the work or whatever the box said, I forget the exact wording, because Theresa actually told me, explained to me that checking that box off might make it harder for the men in the future to get return work. So there was another box that said they want to return home to, I don't know if it said family emergency or they're homesick. I forget the exact word, but I explained to them, why, you know, you guys can check this box, but it's clear I'm not firing you. It's clear I need help. And I'm willing to train you guys and do what we got to do to get you guys out here and working. But that wasn't happening. So that it was clear I

Q. Who else left?
A. I don't know names.
Q. How many other workers left?
A. I'm not exactly sure. Left on their own or just work was done?
Q. Either one, separated from Sun Valley.
A. I mean either way, I don't know their names. Nor do I know the amount, the number of men. But there were, I think there were a few instances where a couple of guys may have left mid season. And then we had a group of guys that we explained to them that we just didn't have the crop and they had filled their three-quarter guarantee, I made sure of it before, that's how I came up with the names. Lisa and I went through and made sure each of them made their three-quarter guarantee before we put together any kind of list.
Q. So let's talk about that. What month did they leave in, this three-quarter guarantee group?
A. I believe it was, I want to say it was either at the very end of August or beginning part of September.

Q. How many workers were in this group?
A. I'm not sure.
Q. More than 30?
A. Possibly. For some reason, 34 is sticking out in my mind. I don't know. I forget.
Q. And tell me again why these, what happened, what the circumstances were?
A. We had a bad growing season, horrible growing season and we didn't have peppers, which is our largest commodity by volume.
Q. What kind of peppers?
A. Just regular green bell peppers.
Q. Was there bad weather or what --
A. Bad weather. It was a wet season and disease.
Q. And so Sun Valley determined that there were too many field workers?
A. Right.
Q. And Sun Valley came up with a number of workers that had to be let go?
A. Not had to be, but were asked to, explained to as to why. It wasn't just like, oh, you know, we don't want you guys anymore. We didn't have the work. And there wasn't enough hours for the amount of men that we had.

Q. And so you and Lisa came up with a number, a number of workers?

A. A list of workers that were well over the three-quarter guarantee.

Q. And how many workers were on that list?

A. I forget.

Q. Was it more than the number of workers that were let go or the exact number of workers that were let go?

A. I don't know. It may have been a half a dozen more, just to be sure that I had the amount of guys that I figured I could let go. I mean there was a whole bunch of factors that determined as to why the number of people that we were letting go. The way the crews are split up. We wanted X amount of people left in the camp perhaps. I'm not exactly sure of the reasoning behind it right now. But at the time, I'm sure there was a method to the madness.

Q. And you and Lisa created that method?

A. Well, between my uncle and I, we kind of figured out approximately how many men we could let go. And then Lisa and I, her and I just, all her and I did collectively was to be sure that they met their three-quarter guarantee.

Q. So Harry Marino, Jr. determined both the number of workers that needed to be let go and from fields they needed to be let go?

A. Well, they're not assigned to a specific field. They're just, we knew how many guys, about how many guys we can get the rest of the work done, and cleanup. We had a few things we were still harvesting and that takes X amount of people and through experience and all that stuff, we knew about how many people we would need left to complete, to finish out the season. So doing that, we determined how many people we could let go.

Q. Basically between you and Lisa and Harry, you made a decision that X number of people needed to be let go?

A. Well, the number of people, that was made between Harry and I. Showing that they met the three-quarter guarantee, Lisa and I.

Q. And other than the three of you, was anyone else involved in this decision?

A. No, uh-uh. No, I'm sorry. It's amazing you catch me every time I do that.

Q. And how was this communicated to the workers, this decision?

A. Just like I -- how, in Spanish.

Q. Did you do it directly or did it go through Agustin or through someone else?

A. Him and I. Him and I collectively.

Q. So take me, take me through it.

A. We just at the camp, where guys, the guys were all there and we explained to them that, you know, it was a poor growing season we had, and it was obvious that, because the guys, they weren't doing much and they didn't have many hours. So I explained to them we were going to let some guys go. We're going to determine who, but we explained most likely, it would -- it has got to be guys that may have been here the longest, and maybe the guys that got here first, because they would have been the guys that would reach the three-quarters first naturally. And they understood that and they understood that we had no product. We had nothing to pick. We had nothing to harvest. And they generally, yeah, they understood that and they were okay with it.

I mean a lot of the guys at that point, they were, they were excited. Some of them were excited to go home and see their families. And okay, we came and it wasn't the best season, but these guys aren't going anywheres. And there will always be next year and it was explained to them that way, you know, we're not letting you go because you didn't perform or nothing like that, it was just we don't have, we don't have the season. We don't have the product. I look forward to seeing you next season if, you know, you choose to want to come back.

Q. And why did you -- so it seems like you had, well, were there two meetings, one, this one meeting and then another meeting to tell the workers who were being let go?

A. I mean there's another one, once we compiled the list of actually who could be let go, like legally be let go, we presented it to them. And okay, here's the names and this is how we're going to do it and this is the process.

Q. So you mean you created a list which workers had met the three-quarters guarantee so they could be let go?

A. Yes.

Q. And why did you have two, you know, two different meetings?

A. Well, I mean because I had let the guys know prior, at least I felt like I owed that to them and once I compiled the list, because I hadn't done that legwork yet, it was maybe a day or two later.

Q. Two meetings were a day or two apart?

A. Yes.

Q. So it was sort of you had the initial meeting sort of as a courtesy to the workers?

A. Right.

Q. So and how is it determined, okay, we've got a -- we've got to let go some workers?

A. Yeah, I mean, yes. Yes.
Q. What other produce was affected?
A. Pickles. Zucchini. All of them, eggplants. Peppers definitely the worst. Cucumbers were pretty bad at that time. They had a lot of powdery downy mildew, but we don't grow cucumbers late that time of year. So cucumbers is on this list, but we didn't -- I think we were done cucumbers by that time.
Q. Could you have afforded to have kept on all those workers for the rest of the growing season?
A. If I was able to, I would have kept them. I'm sure that would have been very detrimental to me to hang onto labor. You don't want to pay labor to do what, walk through the fields and don't pick anything. That would be foolish.
Q. Walk through the fields and what?
A. And not pick anything. Just walk by the plants that don't have anything on them or dead plants, I can't, I can't. It's foolish.
Q. It would have been financially detrimental to Sun Valley Orchards?

A. Absolutely.
Q. So workers who were, can we call them fired, fired, is that fair?
A. No, they weren't fired.
Q. Laid off?
A. Okay.
Q. Let go. The workers who were let go, this group of workers in August or September, did they sign any --
A. Yes.
Q. -- resignation?
A. Yes.
Q. They signed resignation forms?
A. I don't know resignation, but they signed forms that they were being let go due to crop loss, absolutely.
Q. Does Sun Valley Orchards still have those forms?
A. Yes.
Q. And so those forms say that the workers left because of crop loss?
A. Yes.
Q. So the forms that Sun Valley Orchards gave workers who departed in around May, where were those forms obtained from?

A. I believe it's -- I believe from Theresa Ward at NAC.

Q. So she would have e-mailed them or mailed them to Sun Valley?

A. Probably e-mailed me and I just made copies.

Q. Do you usually correspond with Theresa via e-mail or via phone or both?

A. Both.

Q. Were there any other e-mails that you had with Theresa about the workers departing?

A. I don't know about e-mails, perhaps, I would have to really dig back. But most of that may have been phone conversations, but there was probably a few e-mails in there. But I don't know for sure.

Q. We're talking about 2015?

A. Right.

Q. And you haven't, so you haven't checked your e-mails for this?

A. No.

Q. No one else at Sun Valley has either?

A. Not that I know of. No, nobody

Q. Was Sun Valley Orchards in the practice of notifying the government when workers were separated from Sun Valley Orchards?

A. That's required.

Q. And how does Sun Valley Orchards do that?

A. I call Theresa or whoever in her office that handles that or I e-mail them and tell them that they have to notify whoever they have to notify. That's part of the service that they provide. That's what their agency does.

Q. And would you send them, would you e-mail this organization the list of workers that were separating?

A. Lisa probably did, because this list looks like it's comes from our type of payroll system that we used. And she may have, you know, because I'm sure there's Heather, yeah, because the spelling is correct. I mean this had to come from some kind of a -- some kind of document that Lisa sent to them.

Q. And this reminds you of the payroll system that Sun Valley Orchards has?

Q. Anything Sun Valley does that you're not involved in?

A. No.

Q. Are you involved in the payroll for the H-2A workers?

A. To some extent.

Q. Were you involved in 2015 in the payroll for H2 workers?

A. To some extent.

Q. How were you involved?

A. Like I told you, I'm involved with -- I handle most of our IT issues, so the software system that we use, I researched and implemented. I handle questions on that. Help the guys with their iPads and scanners, that type of thing. But I'm not involved in the daily payroll or any of the wages or anything like that.

Q. Are those iPads used to track the hours workers work?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that through the system called PET Tiger?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that the system that Sun Valley

used to track workers' hours in 2015?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you tell me more about how Sun Valley used PET Tiger in 2015?

A. It is a software and hardware system that gives you the availability to keep track of your payroll. That's how we used it. Electronically. So that there's no mistakes.

Q. Does it keep track of the amount of pay workers receive?

A. Yes.

Q. Does it keep track of the number of hours Sun Valley's workers work each day?

A. Yes.

Q. Does it keep track of hours Sun Valley offers its workers, but that workers don't work on a given day?

A. Reask the question. I don't understand the question.

Q. Does Sun Valley use PET Tiger to track information about whether a worker does any work on a given day?

A. I still want you to clarify your question, then I'll answer it.

Q. If a worker doesn't perform any work on a given day --

A. Yes.

Q. -- what would the PET Tiger system show about that worker?

A. If he's not there and present to be scanned into a job for the day, he has no hours or work for the day.

Q. Is there any other information in PET Tiger for that worker on a day when he doesn't work?

A. I'm not understanding your question. I'll explain, workers get an ID card. They have a scanner and an iPad runs the software. You show up to work. You scan your ID. You scan your job, whatever it is you're doing for the day. It keeps track of it. If you're not there, there's nobody to scan. So I don't -- I'm not getting your question. It's very simple. You either show up for work or you don't.

Q. And when a worker doesn't show up for work, does Sun Valley record that in any other system?

A. No.

Q. Does Sun Valley record the reason that a worker doesn't show up for work on a given day?

A. No.

Q. In 2015, did Sun Valley record the reason that a worker didn't show up for work on a given day?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Who would know the answer to that question?

A. To what question?

Q. Who would know whether in 2015 if a worker didn't show up for work on a given day, the reason for the worker not showing up was tracked in some system?

A. What do you mean was tracked in some system? You're asking -- reask the question. I don't understand the question.

Q. Besides the PET Tiger, what kind of payroll software did Sun Valley use in 2015?

A. Famous actually prints the paychecks. Famous software is our operating system. PET Tiger is a third-party software system that collects the data that transfers to Famous to print the checks.

Q. So Famous is a system Sun Valley

used?

A. That's our operating system. That's our accounting software.

Q. Other than PET Tiger, are there any other sources of information supplied to Famous?

A. Reask the question. I don't -- be more specific.

Q. The information to print the paychecks comes from the Famous system?

A. The information to print the checks is generated by PET Tiger. That information transfers daily to Famous, our accounting system. Famous physically prints the checks. PET Tiger doesn't print paychecks. PET Tiger is a data collection software system. Famous is our operating system, that's our accounting system. It runs our general ledger and everything else, sales, invoicing, accounts receivable, payable.

Q. Did Sun Valley use any other payroll systems in 2015?

A. No.

Q. Did Sun Valley use any other systems to keep track of the number of hours that you participated in?

A. Sure.

Q. Agustin Hernandez was at some of those meetings?

A. Sure.

Q. Did you ever discuss meals at Sun Valley with --

A. Meals, no.

Q. Did he ever discuss meals at Sun Valley at those meetings?

A. Nope.

Q. At any of the meetings that you've held at Sun Valley where Agustin Hernandez was present, did anyone discuss the kitchen at Sun Valley with him?

A. Yes.

Q. What was discussed at that meeting?

A. The shape of the kitchen. If the stoves are adequate. Just the overall condition of the facility.

Q. Anything else about the kitchen?

A. We provide the facility and we have nothing to do with it after that. It's not our -- it's not -- it's nothing to do with us.

Q. When you say facility, what does

Sun Valley provide?

A. We provide free housing and we provide a kitchen. Pay all the utilities and that's it.

Q. Does Sun Valley provide any of the equipment in the kitchen?

A. I think we did, yeah. I think we bought everything, the stoves, we -- we provided all that.

Q. What else in the kitchen did Sun Valley provide?

A. I'm not sure. I don't know all that's in there. I don't even know.

Q. So when you discussed the kitchen at Sun Valley with Agustin Hernandez, what did you discuss?

A. You asked if I was present at discussions, I said yes. What was discussed, I don't remember. I don't know. I told you overall condition of the facilities. That's my answer.

Q. Do you remember anything about what was discussed in the meetings with Agustin Hernandez at Sun Valley about the kitchen?

A. No.

Q. Did Sun Valley change anything about the way the kitchen operated in 2015?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Does Sun Valley give Agustin Hernandez any instructions about how to operate the kitchen?

A. No.

Q. Did Sun Valley set any rules for how Agustin Hernandez ran the kitchen?

A. No.

Q. Sun Valley paid some money in 2013 because of a US Department of Labor audit?

MR. SCHULTE: Objection. Are you asking or testifying?

BY MR. GLICK:

Q. Do you know if Sun Valley paid money in 2013 because of a US Department of Labor audit?

A. No.

Q. Do you know if Sun Valley ever paid money because US Department of Labor audit determined that workers were overcharged for their meals?

A. No.

Q. In 2015, were Sun Valley's H-2A

system have about that?

A. The hourly rate and the piece rate.

Q. Are there codes for different jobs?

A. Yeah.

Q. What are some of those codes?

A. They're job descriptions.

Q. Can you give me an example of a job description?

A. Pepper harvest, cucumber harvest, squash, picking, picking peaches. That's a few of them. I gave you an example.

Q. Are those job categories listed in the PET Tiger system?

A. Yes.

Q. What other information goes into the PET Tiger system?

A. Be specific.

Q. So the PET Tiger system has information about the hours workers work?

A. It keeps track of that.

Q. It keeps track of the job category the workers work?

A. Yes.

Q. What else does the PET Tiger system keep track of?

A. The piece rates.

Q. What else?

A. It's not that complicated. It keeps track of the work they do.

Q. Is there anything else in the PET Tiger system?

A. Be more specific. Ask a question. You're asking vague questions. Ask a specific question, I'll give you an answer. I don't know what you're asking.

Q. Does the PET Tiger system keep track of information other than what we've discussed?

A. I don't know what it's capable of, because we only use it for what we use it for.

Q. What does Sun Valley use the PET Tiger system for?

A. How many times do I have to explain this? I've explained it very clearly. What do we use it for? To keep track of what the workers do so we can pay them correctly. That's what we use it for. Ask a specific question, I'll give you an answer.

Q. How does Sun Valley keep track of whether it pays workers correctly?

A. We review the job cards daily and the system tells you if there's a mistake. Nobody's got records like us, I'll tell ya.

Q. What kind of mistakes would the PET Tiger system show?

A. If they double scanned an ID tag. It's very, very, very hard to not catch a mistake. The system is very, is very accurate. It knows if something is out of the ordinary. You review the job card every day and it will identify them, like this is out of sorts. And then you look at it. And then you adjust it.

Q. If a worker doesn't clock in one day, but did work at Sun Valley, would the worker be paid for the work that day?

A. Yes.

Q. What would Sun Valley do to make sure the worker got paid for that day?

A. It would have to be reported to the office to payroll for that to be rectified.

Q. Who would report that problem to the payroll office?

A. Agustin.

Q. Anyone else report those kinds of problems to your office?

A. My brother, Russ.
Q. Anyone else?
A. Not to my knowledge.
Q. Who at the payroll office would be informed about that kind of problem?
A. Lisa.
Q. Is that Lisa Justice?
A. Yes.
Q. Anyone else at Sun Valley keep track of those kinds of problems in the payroll office?
A. No.
Q. Does anyone else work in the payroll office at Sun Valley?
A. No.
Q. A minute ago, you mentioned Sun Valley's records. What kinds of records does Sun Valley have of the hours H-2A workers worked in 2015?
A. Whatever PET Tiger is capable of.
Q. Does Sun Valley use any systems other than PET Tiger to keep track of the hours H-2A workers worked in 2015?
A. No.
Q. Does PET Tiger keep track of the time of day that a worker clocked in?

A. Yes.

Q. Does PET Tiger keep track of the time of day that a worker clocked out?

A. Yes.

Q. PET Tiger is an electronic system?

A. Yes.

Q. What kinds of reports can be run from that PET Tiger system?

A. I'm not sure. I don't use it daily.

Q. Who uses the PET Tiger system?

A. Lisa.

Q. Does Sun Valley currently have information from 2015 about the hours workers worked in 2015?

A. Reask the question.

Q. Does Sun Valley still have information in PET Tiger about the hours workers worked in 2015?

A. Yeah.

Q. About the pay workers received in 2015?

A. Yes.

Q. Does Sun Valley have records from 2015 about which days workers didn't work?

A. No.

Q. Are you familiar with a job order from the H-2A program in 2015 at Sun Valley?

A. No.

Q. Do you know whether the workers at Sun Valley in 2015 were guaranteed the opportunity to work a certain number of hours?

A. Oh yeah, I know that, yes.

Q. Can you tell me about your understanding of that guarantee in 2015 for the H-2A workers?

A. There's a guarantee that needs to be met. And it's -- I don't know what it is.

Q. Do you know if the guarantee is broken down at all by weeks or months or days?

A. I don't know. I just know that there's a guarantee.

Q. How does Sun Valley keep track of whether workers have been offered the number of hours under that guarantee?

A. Through the payroll software.

Q. How does Sun Valley use that payroll software to keep track?

A. You could pick an employee and run

his work history. It will generate reports and they got all the reports they wanted. It generates reports until you can't read them no more.

Q. What specific information would that work history show?

A. I don't know, whatever you ask it to show. I don't know. I don't use it. I don't use it. I just know that it can do it.

Q. Do you know if it can show the number of hours a worker worked in a particular day?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know if it shows the reason why a worker didn't work a certain day?

A. Reask the question. I don't know why you keep going back to this, because it's -- like it's not relevant. Reask the question, because I don't understand it.

Q. PET Tiger can run reports?

A. Yes.

Q. Someone from Sun Valley can use PET Tiger to run a report?

A. Yes.

Q. That report would show information

Q. Did all of Sun Valley's workers in 2015 meet the three-quarters guarantee?

A. Yes.

Q. How do you know?

A. Because we made sure.

Q. Who made sure?

A. My brother sat down and went through everything with Lisa.

Q. Do you know what records they used to figure it out?

A. No. You've got to ask him.

Q. Was anyone else involved besides Russell and Lisa?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. In 2015, did Agustin Hernandez ever convey information to you about complaints that workers had made to him?

A. No.

Q. Did anyone convey information to you in 2015 about complaints by workers?

A. No.

Q. Did anyone tell you that a worker had a question in 2015?

A. No.

Q. Did anyone in 2015 tell you that workers wanted to leave Sun Valley?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you tell me more about that?

A. We had, I think it was our first, our first group of H-2A employees. We were just starting asparagus harvesting and we really needed them bad. I don't know the exact number, how many it was, but I think it was that entire group wanted to go home. They didn't want to do the work. And we were stuck, stuck in a bad way, in a real bad way. We needed, we needed workers. And I know we all went over there, myself, my brother, my uncle, my dad, Agustin, and we talked to them all. My brother talked to them. You know, tried to figure out, you know, what it was that they didn't like, what they didn't want to do and they just said they did not want to do this work and they wanted to go home. So that was it, they left. And we needed them bad, really bad.

I'm sure you're aware, this H-2A program is not an easy program to navigate. You just don't pick up the phone and replace 20 people. Meanwhile, the asparagus comes out of the ground every day, every day, every day, every day. You've got to cut it. There's nobody there to do it. So that's how that went.

Q. Who first told you that some of the workers were having issues?

A. I think Agustin. Agustin is the manager of the help. He went and told my uncle and I think my brother that these guys are not happy. They don't like the work. They don't want to do it. They want to go home. Well, then I find out, what do you mean they want to go home, they just got here. So we all went over to talk to them to see what it is that we could do to make it work and they just, they said no. My brother even explained to them, you know, we understand, it's not about pride. It's not about anything else. Just, you know, can you, nope, they didn't want to do it. They wanted to go home.

Q. Who did you first learn about the situation from?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Was it your uncle?

A. I don't remember. I don't know. I just, I remember it happened. But I don't know who told me exactly.

Q. When you and your dad and your uncle and your brother and Agustin Hernandez were present with these workers, where were you at that time?

A. At the -- at the living quarters.

Q. Was it inside?

A. No, we were all outside. We were all outside standing as a group.

Q. Were you close to the building?

A. Yeah.

Q. About how close?

A. I was in the parking lot area.

Q. How close were you to the workers?

A. We were talking in a group.

Q. Were you pretty close to the workers?

A. Yeah. I'd say from here, from here to the wall, maybe a little further.

Q. Let the record reflect that the witness is sitting at a table that is about three chairs away from the end of the table and then there's, is it fair for me to say a couple of more feet to the wall?

A. I don't get this.

MR. SCHULTE: The record speaks for itself. I think we would guess maybe 15 feet, but I'm not really sure where this is going.

THE WITNESS: Between 15 and 20 feet.

BY MR. GLICK:

Q. Who spoke at that meeting?

A. My brother, Agustin.

Q. Did anyone else speak?

A. I don't recall.

Q. Did you speak at that meeting?

A. I don't recall. I don't remember what was said. Again, I'm under oath, so everything I answer has got to be the truth and I don't remember, so.

Q. I appreciate that. Did Agustin speak in Spanish at that meeting?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he speak in English as well?

A. He translated.

Q. Who did he translate for?

A. For us, we're not bilingual.

Q. Did he translate for you?

A. No.

Q. At the meeting in 2015 with the workers outside the housing camp, did he translate for Russ?

A. I don't, I don't recall. Russ is, Russ is pretty fluent in Spanish. I don't recall.

Q. Did Russ speak Spanish at that meeting?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you understand what he said?

A. Nope.

Q. Did Russ speak English at that meeting?

A. Yes.

Q. What did he say?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you understand him when he spoke?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you understand Agustin when he spoke?

A. English.

Q. Anything he said, did you understand it?

A. When he spoke English.
Q. Do you know what he said?
A. No.
Q. Who spoke first at that meeting?
A. I don't recall.
Q. How many workers spoke?
A. I don't recall.
Q. Was it more than one?
A. I don't recall.
Q. Was anyone upset at that meeting?
A. No.
Q. How do you know?
A. Define your definition of upset. I don't -- I don't understand what you're asking. My definition and yours might be two different things.
Q. What was the mood like at the meeting?
A. The mood was fine. We were just trying to figure out what the problem was. It was just a, hey, what's going on. What's going on, what's, what's the problem. What don't you like? What's -- I mean before I knew it, that was it, they wanted to go home and that was it. I don't remember the specifics, what was said.

All I know is we did everything we could, we needed them bad. We couldn't afford to lose them. They wanted to go home, so.

Q. Did the workers explain any concerns that they had at that meeting?

A. I don't recall. Again, I'm going to tell you again, I don't know specifically what was said. I just explained the mood of the meeting. I explained the intent, what was going on. I can't recall from 2015 the exact words of what was said, who said what, when, where and how. I don't. I don't remember. So move onto the next one.

Q. Is there anything else about the meeting in 2015 that we haven't discussed that you do remember?

A. No.

Q. Do you have any notes from that meeting?

A. No.

Q. Does Sun Valley have any notes from that meeting?

A. I don't know. You'd have to ask Russ.

Q. Who else would know?

Exhibit 18?

A. No.

Q. Have you seen Exhibit 18 before?

A. No.

Q. Do you know who created Exhibit 18?

A. For certain, no.

Q. Do you know whose handwriting appears on Exhibit 18?

A. I do not.

Q. You don't recognize the handwriting on this document?

A. I do not, no.

Q. Does Sun Valley have an orientation for when H-2A workers arrive at Sun Valley?

A. I believe so. My brother does that. You've got to ask him.

Q. Are you involved in the orientation?

A. No, I am not. Again, I am not involved with the labor, the day-to-day operations, the H-2A program, that is not my responsibility at the company.

Q. So --

A. I cannot speak for certain on these questions you're asking, no. You had that opportunity yesterday.

Q. Are you personally involved in any orientations for workers at Sun Valley?

A. No.

Q. Other than Agustin Hernandez, did anyone at Sun Valley have a New Jersey crew leader license in 2015?

A. I don't know.

Q. Who would know?

A. I have no idea. I don't know. I don't know the answer to that, no.

Q. Do you know if anyone at Sun Valley had a Farm Labor Contractor license from the US Department of Labor in 2015?

A. I do not know.

Q. Mr. Marino, I'm showing you a document that I think has been previously marked as Exhibit 8 in the deposition of Agustin Hernandez. Do you recognize Exhibit 8?

A. I guess it's the -- it has something to do with the H-2A application. I don't know. I don't do it.

Q. You haven't seen Exhibit 8 before?

A. No.

Q. Do you know who fills out any of the typed information in Exhibit 8?

A. I do not know, no. You'd have to ask Russ. His name is clearly on it, so I hope you asked him yesterday.

Q. If Agustin Hernandez testified that you personally posted Exhibit 8 at Sun Valley, how would you respond?

MR. SCHULTE: Objection, that's actually not at all what Agustin Hernandez testified to, so that's a hypothetical.

BY MR. GLICK:

Q. Did you personally post Exhibit 8 at Sun Valley?

A. No. No.

Q. You're not involved in maintaining the housing at Sun Valley?

A. No.

Q. You're not involved in inspecting the housing camp at Sun Valley?

A. Nope.

Q. Preparing the housing facility at Sun Valley?

A. No.

Q. You're not involved in inspecting

the bathrooms at the working housing camp at Sun Valley?

A. No, no, no.

Q. You're not involved in the transport of workers between the housing camp and the fields at Sun Valley?

A. No.

Q. You're not involved in maintaining those vehicles?

A. No.

Q. You're not involved in overseeing who drives those vehicles?

A. No.

Q. Sun Valley employs a mechanic named Leonard Fleming?

A. Yes.

Q. Who oversees Leonard Fleming?

A. The owners. We all do. He's an employee of us. He has no mechanic boss.

Q. Do you ever assign work to Leonard Fleming?

A. Sure.

Q. What kinds of work do you assign him?

A. Things that need to be fixed.

Q. Other than vehicles?
A. It's a farm. He works on everything. If it's broken, he fixes it. So use your imagination. Anything that needs to be fixed on a farm, Leonard works on it. Within his capabilities. And if he can't fix it, we send it out.
Q. Who do you send it out to?
A. To whatever the appropriate shop may be to fix whatever it is that's broken.
Q. Does Sun Valley use a shop that employs a person named Al Foot?
A. Yes.
Q. What does that Sun Valley use that shop for?
A. Again, for whatever our overflow, whatever Leonard can't handle, if he's too busy, whatever needs to be fixed.
Q. Does that include fixing the vehicles that transport Sun Valley's workers between the worker housing camp and --
A. It could. Yes, it could, yes.
Q. Mr. Marino, I realize some of my questions are very long and it may be very clear what I'm about to say, but could I just

it. Russ handles it. So again, I'll reiterate that, it's my brother. So I hoped you asked him yesterday.

Q. There was some groups of workers who left Sun Valley early in 2015?

A. Be more specific.

MR. SCHULTE: The testimony was that there was a group of workers, we covered this earlier.

THE WITNESS: Yeah.

BY MR. GLICK:

Q. Was there a group of workers who Sun Valley laid off in 2015?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you personally involved in the decision to lay those workers off?

A. Yeah, we all discuss it. We all discuss what was going on in our business.

Q. Can you tell me more about the circumstances that led to the layoff of those workers?

A. We had a crop disaster. We lost our pepper crop. We had nothing left to pick. Nothing left to pick. There's no work. So we determined we had to let people go. And we made sure that their contracts were fulfilled for the guys that were laid off. That's the end of that. There's no work. It's a disaster.

Q. Those workers who were laid off in 2015, did they sign forms before they left?

A. I don't know. Because I don't get involved in any of that after the fact. That's my brother. That's the agent that we used to make sure that we follow everything that is supposed to be followed, to do what we're supposed to do. I'm not involved in that.

Q. Who was involved in determining whether the workers who were laid off received the three-quarters guarantee?

A. Russ and Lisa. We ran detailed reports like you're putting in front of my face to determine that they actually worked the time before anybody was laid off. Because none of us want to be sitting here. You can bet that. None of us. You might think we do coming in our office throwing this stuff at us, but we don't. That's why we spend what we spend. That's why we hired the consultant and we ask questions and we do, but we were advised to used by counsel who was unprepared to ask him questions yesterday on all of these topics.

THE WITNESS: Yes. And I also want to say that I was extremely prepared today on the topics I was to be deposed on as well. Thank you. I was not, not prepared.

BY MR. SCHULTE:

Q. While we're still on, just a couple of follow-ups. I'm sorry I thought you meant on your point. Three or four quicks ones. Does Sun Valley have a policy to exclude workers from using kitchens?

A. No.

Q. PET Tiger and Famous would show days where a worker didn't have hours worked, right? I mean it wouldn't have an entry for that, but you could tell if other workers in the same crew were working and and they had a zero for that, you could tell that they didn't work that day?

A. Sure, yes.

Q. Are you aware of any complaints that workers made in 2015 regarding the meals?

A. No.

Q. And in your experience when Wage and Hour investigators come out, have they made any comments about the food being served?

A. Yes. Wage and Hour has been to our farm since we have been in business, every year they come. They say what a great job we do. The kitchen is fantastic. The food smells wonderful. They all want to sit down and eat with everybody. And first year we get an H-2A, here we are, here we sit. So they know our operation very well and we have been a good farm for a long time.

And I do want to clarify the question about the food and kitchen stuff. The reason the answers are no, because we are not involved, never have been involved in anything that goes on with food or kitchen. That's a fact. Always has been. Always will be. We provide the free facilities and that is it. End of story.

MR. SCHULTE: That's all.

THE WITNESS: Thank you.

VIDEO TELECONFERENCE DEPOSITION OF HUGO LEONEL CINTA TEGOMA

New York, New York
May 11, 2017
3:37 p.m.

Reported by:
ELIZABETH F. TOBIN, RPR
JOB NO. 051117

May 11, 2017

3:37 p.m.

Video teleconference deposition of HUGO LEONEL CINTA TEGOMA, taken by The U.S. Department of Labor, Office of the Solicitor, held at the Offices of the Solicitor, U.S. Department of Labor, 201 Varick Street, Room 831C, New York, NY 10014, pursuant to 29 C.F.R. Section 18.64, before Elizabeth F. Tobin, a Registered Professional Reporter and Notary Public of the State of New York.

Q. Why did you decide to apply?

A. To get a job opportunity. I didn't have a job here in Mexico.

Q. Okay. So, I'd like to talk a little bit about what the work was like at Sun Valley. Maybe you can tell me, overall, what was it like in your experience? 03:55PM

A. Yes.

Q. Please tell us. 03:55PM

A. I arrived in May, in that month, but I don't remember the exact date. We knew that we were going to work on the fields and we were going to be harvesting asparagus, cucumber, eggplants and other type of vegetables that I don't remember that well. 03:56PM

Q. And what were your hours there?

A. We began working at 6:30 a.m. or 7:00 a.m. until 5:00 p.m. or 6:00 p.m.

Q. How many days a week?

A. From Sunday to Sunday. 03:56PM

Q. So you're saying seven days a week?

A. Yes. When the harvest was ready, we were going to work for seven days a week.

Q. Who determined the work schedule?

A. You had to harvest the asparagus so that 03:57PM

A. We told him that it was not logical that he was asking for something to happen that fast because we were human.

Q. Did Agustin ever punish anyone? 04:00PM

A. Yes. He punished me.

Q. How did he do that?

A. He took me out of the field and he told me that I was useless and that I was too slow, even when I was working at the same pace as other 04:00PM workers.

Q. How long did he take you out of the fields for?

A. Around two or three times.

Q. Did he punish any other workers? 04:01PM

A. Yes, he did the same to others.

Q. How many others?

A. I am not very sure, but I think it was from three to five people.

Q. And how did he punish them? 04:01PM

A. The same way, he took them out of the field.

Q. When you were working in the fields, what were you doing?

A. I was harvesting asparagus. 04:01PM

Q. Anything else?

A. No, because it was the season for asparagus.

Q. Did you have -- were there bathrooms in the fields? 04:01PM

A. No.

Q. So how did you relieve yourself?

A. It was a complete odyssey. We had to either hold it or run towards the trees. 04:02PM

Q. Was there water in the fields?

A. No, there wasn't any water.

Q. All right. Let me change the subject a little bit and talk about food. How did you eat at Sun Valley? 04:02PM

A. Mr. Agustin would sell us food.

Q. Did he sell you a weekly meal plan or food by the item or how was that arrangement?

A. It was a weekly arrangement. We had to pay for our meals weekly. 04:03PM

Q. Did Agustin sell anything else to the workers?

A. Yes. He would sell soda, Red Bull, Monster, beer, bread, milk, water and coffee.

Q. Can you repeat that list? I didn't quite 04:04PM

A. 7:00, 7:30, sometimes 6:00. It would change.

Q. What would you buy then?

A. Another beverage. 04:09PM

Q. What kind of beverage?

A. Coke or another flavored drink.

Q. Would you buy any other drinks from Agustin during this typical day?

A. No. No, not any other type of drinks. I saw that other people would buy beer from him, but I didn't buy any. 04:09PM

Q. Did your coworkers typically purchase the same number of drinks from Agustin or fewer than you or more than you? 04:10PM

A. I think that maybe a little bit more.

Q. Did any of your colleagues not purchase any drinks from Agustin?

A. No. Everyone bought from him. We all did. 04:10PM

Q. When you had your first drink -- when you purchased your first Monster at 8:00 or 8:30, what was going on at that time? What were you doing at that time?

A. We were harvesting asparagus. During the 04:11PM why you wouldn't drink -- I'm sorry.

Is that why you wouldn't purchase a drink from Agustin in the afternoon?

A. Sometimes I did because after drinking so much water, your stomach would hurt, so you would have to buy a Gatorade. 04:13PM

Q. Was the water good to drink or was there a problem with the water?

A. I don't think there was any problem with the water. It's just because we were working and sometimes if you have too much liquid, you feel like vomiting, but it's because you are putting a lot of effort in your work. But I don't think there was a problem with the water. 04:13PM 04:14PM

Q. Why did you drink Monster?

A. I thought that it's supposed to be an energetic drink, so it could help us work as much as Agustin was asking from us.

Q. These drinks that we've been talking about, were they included in the weekly meal plan? 04:14PM

A. Yes, because if you didn't have money to pay for them, he would give us credit.

Q. How much was the weekly meal plan?

A. It was $450, more or less. I am not that 04:15PM sure.

Q. Are you speaking in pesos?

A. Dollars.

Q. How often did you have to pay that? 04:15PM

A. I was there for a little while, so it was two or three weeks that I was there.

Q. Does that include the drinks or is that just the meals, that amount that you told us?

A. It includes everything, drinks and meals. 04:16PM

Q. Was there a specific price for the drinks?

A. Yes. There was, but I do not remember right now. I think it was $2 or $2.50 per Monster or maybe three. I cannot recall. 04:16PM

Q. What about the sodas?

A. $1.

Q. What about the water?

A. A dollar as well.

Q. What about the Red Bull? 04:16PM

A. I think that one was a little more expensive. I think it was 3.50, but I am not completely sure.

Q. When would you pay Agustin?

INTERPRETER ERRASTI: The interpreter 04:17PM needs clarification from the witness.

A. Every week when he gave us our paycheck, he would deduct the money that we owed him. So, for example, if I had made 900 pesos -- sorry, $900, and I owed him $500, I would at the end get $400. 04:18PM

Q. You were earlier saying that Agustin sold beer. How much was the beer?

A. I cannot tell you because, to be honest, I never bought any. 04:18PM

Q. How many of your coworkers purchased beer?

A. Most of them did.

Q. How many beers a week would your coworkers drink per person, if you can remember? 04:19PM

A. I think that weekly from Mondays through Fridays they would drink around five to six cases of 24 bottle beers, more or less.

Q. What kinds of beer were sold?

A. Corona and I think they also sold Modelo, Modelo Especial. 04:20PM

Q. Were they cans or bottles or how were they sold?

A. It was bottles and cans, both.

Q. How big were they? 04:20PM farm?

A. It was a decision taken by Mr. Russell.

Q. How did that come about?

A. Because we had a meeting, all the workers that were unsatisfied with the conditions and this meeting was with Agustin. 04:33PM

Q. Who else was there besides Agustin?

A. Mr. Russell was there and we were like 15 or 17 more persons in that meeting. 04:33PM

Q. How did that meeting come about?

A. So, we asked Agustin -- well, Agustin was being very harsh with us, so we asked him to set up a meeting with Mr. Russell. But he told us that Mr. Russell was really very violent and he was a nervous kind of person. So one day we just didn't show up to work, and I think that was the reason why Mr. Russell showed up. 04:34PM

Q. Why did you want to meet with Russell?

A. Well, because we didn't like the conditions that they were -- that we had to follow. They were too demanding with us. 04:35PM

Q. What did you plan to tell him?

A. Well, first of all, I was thankful with Mr. Russell because of the opportunity of giving me 04:35PM a job. And I was also somehow embarrassed because I couldn't give him what he wanted. But I wanted to continue if I had an opportunity to do so.

Q. What else did you want to tell him? 04:35PM

A. Well, that I was really very grateful and I wanted to keep working so I could feed my family because I couldn't get a job here in Mexico. But I wanted the conditions to be changed so they wouldn't be so demanding with us. Because I gave what I 04:36PM could, but my body could not help it any more, so --

Q. What was wrong with the conditions?

A. Well, they were really very demanding with us and I just think that we're not machines or animals. We're just people. People get tired. You 04:37PM cannot keep running all day long and that's what they wanted us to do, but I don't think that's possible.

Q. What did Agustin tell you when you said you wanted to speak to Russell? 04:37PM

A. What did I tell him?

Q. Who asked Agustin to meet with Russell?

A. All of us.

Q. How did Agustin respond?

A. He just -- he responded in a very bad 04:38PM

Russell called you all lazy and then what happened, just step by step? What happened next in the meeting?

A. Well, that was it. He called us lazy. He told us that we didn't want to work and, again, I want to repeat this. He told us that he paid for us and that we didn't want to work. 04:44PM

Q. Did you have any choice about staying or leaving? 04:45PM

A. No. He just said, the ones that are staying will give me more or the same as what I'm offering.

Q. Would you have been willing to stay and keep cutting asparagus? 04:45PM

A. Well, if he had accepted the conditions for us to work, I would have gladly stayed there to work.

Q. How many hours a week were you willing to cut the asparagus? 04:46PM

A. Eleven, 12, 13 hours.

Q. Is that per day or per week or how long?

A. Per day. Per day.

Q. What was it that you needed to change or wanted to change? 04:47PM the time and they were on top of us all the time and they were just really very demanding with us. That was the thing.

Q. But you were okay working long days? If they were more respectful, you would have been okay? 05:02PM

A. Yes, that is correct. And I worked at a farm in South Carolina and they didn't treat me the way they treated me in Sun Valley.

Q. Did you work long days at the farm in South Carolina? 05:02PM

A. Yeah, from 6:00 in the morning until 8:00 at night.

Q. Okay. What kind of crops did you work on on that farm? 05:03PM

A. It was strawberries, peaches, cucumber and squash.

Q. Is picking strawberries hard work?

A. Yes, it is a heavy work.

Q. Which is harder, strawberries or asparagus? 05:03PM

A. Asparagus is a bit harder, a little bit.

INTERPRETER ERRASTI: Interpreters need to switch.

MR. SCHULTE: Okay. Thank you. 05:04PM

(Interpreter de la Garma Romo replaced Interpreter Errasti.)

Q. Did any of the workers ever bring complaints to the Marino family about housing? 05:04PM

A. No.

Q. About the kitchen?

A. No.

Q. About the buses?

A. We told Mr. Agustin. 05:04PM

Q. Okay. Did you ever complain about buying drinks or buying meals from Agustin?

A. Yes.

Q. When was that?

A. I think so. I'm not quite sure but I told him that I wanted to wash my clothes and also to be able to buy water or sodas to drink. Because I had bought some water from elsewhere, but since there was too many of us at that place, it ran out really fast. So, I had to buy from Agustin. 05:05PM 05:06PM

Q. Who was it that you complained to?

A. I think I told Mr. Agustin. I think so. I cannot recall.

Q. Before the meeting with Mr. Russell had you ever spoken with him before? 05:06PM

A. No, because Agustin used to say that he was always very busy, very nervous and very worried.

Q. Did you ever speak with anyone else in the Marino family? 05:07PM

A. No. We always addressed Mr. Agustin.

Q. How long does it take to go from Monterrey to New Jersey?

A. It took us, I think, three nights and four days. I think so. I think so. I'm not that sure. 05:07PM

Q. Do you remember when you left Monterrey, what day?

A. I am not sure, but it was in May.

Q. You had your passport earlier. Is there a stamp in there or some notation of when you would have crossed into America in 2015? 05:08PM

A. Yes.

Q. Can you check that, please, and let me know when that was? 05:08PM

A. It was on April 22nd, 2015.

INTERPRETER DE LA GARMA ROMO: The interpreter wants to make a clarification. He's looking at the issue date of his visa.

MR. SCHULTE: I'm sorry. I missed that 05:08PM last part. What was that, your note you mentioned?

INTERPRETER DE LA GARMA ROMO: He is looking at the issue date of the visa. 05:09PM

Q. Is there a note in there that shows when you crossed the border?

INTERPRETER DE LA GARMA ROMO: He is pointing at the interpreter. Should I read you the date? 05:09PM

MR. SCHULTE: Please.

INTERPRETER DE LA GARMA ROMO: April 23rd, 2015.

Q. You said that you had gone to the store two times while you were in New Jersey. Would you always go on the same day of the week or was it different days? 05:09PM

A. It was different days.

Q. Do you remember what days?

A. No. To be honest, I have no idea. 05:10PM

Q. Was it after work?

A. No, it was before.

Q. What time of day would you go?

A. I think it was after 1:00 p.m.

Q. So, you'd work in the morning, have 05:10PM

the meal plan?

A. It was apart. Milk and bread, maybe coffee. But we had -- but I'm sure that they charged us for it. 05:29PM

Q. I'm sorry. When you say apart, you mean as one word, apart as in separate or a part as included with?

A. When I say apart, I mean that, for example, bread would have a price and also breakfast would have one set price as well as lunch and dinner. 05:30PM

Q. What was the part for breakfast?

A. No. Breakfast was that. Breakfast was bread. 05:30PM

Q. How much was the lunch?

A. I think that per week we might have paid 70 to $80. I cannot recall.

Q. Earlier you testified that the meals were $450. Was that -- was the $70 just for lunch or $70 for all of the meals? 05:31PM

A. That was an example that I gave when I said 450. And he would, for example, write down what we had, the beverages that we had had during the morning and at lunch and at night. And since 05:32PM you were tired, you would lose count whether you had asked or what he had noted down or not. We were tired because of work and because there was so much pressure on us. 05:32PM

INTERPRETER DE LA GARMA ROMO: The interpreters will switch now.

(Interpreter Errasti replaced Interpreter de la Garma Romo.)

Q. You said that $450 was an example. Did you ever pay that much? 05:32PM

A. Yes, I think I paid like 430 or 450.

Q. How many times did you pay him?

A. Just once.

Q. How much was the meal portion of that? 05:33PM

A. It was just a normal dish. And tortillas, we had like seven or eight tortillas but because of the chemicals they add to the asparagus, maybe that's why we were not that hungry.

Q. The question was how much of the 430 or $450 was for the meal and how much was for other items? 05:34PM

A. Well, again, Agustin just told me once, this is how much you owe and that was it.

Q. He never -- did he ever tell anyone else 05:34PM visa since 2015?

A. No.

Q. Are you planning on getting one this year? 05:36PM

A. No. Not H2A.

Q. H2B?

A. Yes.

Q. What kind of work will you be doing?

A. Landscaping. 05:37PM

Q. Do you know where?

A. That was in Memphis, Tennessee.

Q. When was that?

A. In 2016.

Q. Are you planning to get an H2A or an H2B visa for 2017? 05:37PM

A. Yes, H2B.

Q. Where will that be?

A. You mean the state?

Q. Yes. 05:37PM

A. I don't have an opportunity yet. I'm looking for an opportunity to get a job.

Q. Okay. Did Mr. Russell tell you anything about the form that we looked at earlier that you signed? 05:38PM

Tinta Tegona

A. No.

Q. You mentioned much earlier when we were talking about you would drink Monster to get more energy; is that right? How does Monster make you feel? 05:38PM

A. Well, as I mentioned earlier, Monster is an energy drink. When you're tired, you drink it and, I don't know, you think that it boosts you up.

Q. What time would you drink one in the morning? 05:39PM

MR. HEYMAN-KANTOR: Objection. Asked and answered.

A. 8:00, 8:30 in the morning. It depends.

Q. Were you tired when you drank one? 05:39PM

A. Very, very tired because there was no water.

Q. Which gives you more energy, water or Monster?

A. Well, I drank a bottle of water and I think the one that gave me more energy was Monster. 05:39PM

Q. You said that the workers paid for their return travel. How much did you pay?

MR. HEYMAN-KANTOR: Objection. Mischaracterizes testimony. 05:40PM

A. No, I don't know. I know that we all left but we all took different ways.

Q. What do you mean we all left?

A. Yes, because all the people that signed the document had to leave the farm. 05:42PM

Q. How many people signed?

A. Again, I don't know. It was 15 to 17 people. I do not have the exact number.

Q. And how many people were there -- how many workers were there at Sun Valley at that time total? 05:42PM

A. Maybe 80 or 100 people. I don't know, more or less. I don't know.

Q. Out of that 15 or 17 people, were they all working on asparagus all the time? 05:43PM

A. Yes. We were all working in the same area. Well, I said 70 or 80 people. I'm not sure. I don't have an idea about that. It's just a number. Because you just go there to work. You don't go to count people and see what's going on. 05:43PM

Q. Sure. The people who signed the form, though, they all were working together in asparagus all the time?

A. That is correct. 05:44PM

Q. Did any of them ever work on other vegetables?

A. I have no idea.

Q. You mentioned that you felt embarrassed that you couldn't do the job. Did anyone else tell you they felt the same way? 05:44PM

MR. HEYMAN-KANTOR: Objection. Mischaracterizes testimony.

A. Well, I mentioned that because that's my personal feeling, that's how I felt. I was grateful for the job opportunity that he was giving me so that I could give something better to my family. So, I felt committed to work, but the mindset that -- he working did not make the work easier for me to do. The mindset that he had for working did not make me feel comfortable doing my job. 05:44PM 05:45PM

Q. They didn't show you enough respect for how hard you were working?

A. I didn't show respect for that? 05:46PM

Q. No. No. They didn't show the workers enough respect.

A. Yeah. That's what I think because they did not value the effort and the sacrifice of going to the United States and having us there working. 05:46PM that's the option that Russell or Agustin would have checked because that's what it says. It says work slowed.

Q. Who put the check on the form? 06:13PM

A. I did.

Q. What do you mean Russell would have put a check on the form?

A. Yes. Later on I might have said that but I'm getting confused. It's because I understood 06:14PM that the options that I was slow, but instead now that I'm reading it, I can see that it says work slowed.

Q. What would have happened if a worker checked the box that said they were slow? 06:14PM

MR. HEYMAN-KANTOR: Objection. Mischaracterizes this form.

A. This option says that work is slow. That means that they're almost isn't a lot of job or a lot of work to do. 06:14PM

Q. Were any of the workers concerned that if they reported on the form that they couldn't do the job that they would have trouble getting jobs in the future in the United States?

MR. HEYMAN-KANTOR: Objection. 06:15PM

Mischaracterizes facts in evidence.

A. Yes. To be honest, I did. I thought that if I chose that option, then I wouldn't be able to go back to the United States. My ignorance made me think that. 06:15PM

Q. Before you came to the United States, did you know that there would be a charge for meals or transportation?

A. No. I know based on my own experience that you buy your own food and that they usually have a van that takes you to Walmart. Usually to Walmart so that you could buy food. 06:16PM

Q. If you had known that, would you have come to the United States to work anyways? 06:16PM

A. Sometimes out of need we have to take that kind of mistreatments and humiliation.

Q. What mistreatment and humiliation?

A. Sometimes -- well, when you have to work -- when you're working as hard as you can and they are demanding more from you and also that you don't have a place to wash your clothes or a place to cook or that you have to eat things that you don't like to eat and you have to eat them, maybe I didn't use the right word when I said humiliation or 06:17PM 06:18PM

Deposition of CARLOS CERVANTES RAMIREZ, taken by The U.S. Department of Labor, Office of the Solicitor, held at the Offices of the Solicitor, U.S. Department of Labor, 201 Varick Street, Room 831, New York, NY 10014, pursuant to 29 C.F.R. Section 18.64, before Jill Suttenberg, a Professional Shorthand Reporter and Notary Public of the State of New York.

A. All the time.
Q. What was the arrangement for eating meals when you worked at Sun Valley?
A. During the morning we had coffee and maybe a piece of bread and then at noon we had lunch and in the afternoon around 6:00 we had dinner. 03:16
Q. Was there a charge for those meals or was it free?
A. We had to pay $75 a week. 03:17
Q. Whom did you pay?
A. Agustin.
Q. Did you have a choice about whether or not to pay that $75 a week?
A. No. 03:17
Q. When you worked at Sun Valley, did you buy anything else from Agustin or anyone else at Sun Valley?
A. I would only buy from Agustin.
Q. What, if anything, did you buy from Agustin? 03:17
A. I would buy my meals, soda, cigarettes, potato chips.
Q. Did you buy anything else from

Agustin?

A. During the weekends I would buy one or two beers.

Q. Did you purchase anything else from Agustin? 03:18

A. No. Only that.

Q. Were any of the sodas, cigarettes, potato chip or beers included in the $75 a week fee?

A. No. 03:19

Q. When you worked at Sun Valley in a typical day, how many sodas did you buy?

A. Three or maybe four.

Q. What did that depend on?

A. Monster or a soda. 03:19

Q. Were there -- the days where you bought more drinks, was there a reason you bought more on that day?

A. Because water was not enough.

Q. What do you mean by that? 03:20

A. They would only take us a thermos of water, but when we ran out of it, we had to buy a soda or something to drink.

Q. Where were the thermoses?

the interpreter.

INTERPRETER ERRASTI: I didn't hear what you said.

MR. GLICK: Did you translate what the witness said? 03:36

INTERPRETER ERRASTI: I translated what he said because he didn't finish his question.

MR. GLICK: I will ask the next question, please. 03:36

Q. Mr. Cervantes, when you paid about $20 for beer, how many beers did that include?

A. It was 24 beers.

Q. Do you remember what brand of beer?

A. Bud Light, Budweiser and Caguama. 03:37

Q. Were those 24 beers cans or bottles or something else?

A. They were cans.

Q. Did your coworkers also purchase beer from Agustin? 03:37

A. Yes.

Q. How often did they buy beer from Agustin?

A. Just weekly.

something.

Q. Do you know where Agustin kept that notebook?

A. He was the only one that had that notebook. 03:39

MR. GLICK: Objection.

Nonresponsive.

Q. Do you know where Agustin kept the notebook?

A. He had it with him in his van. 03:40

Q. Do you know what percent of your coworkers from Sun Valley purchased beer from Agustin?

A. Most of them, 90 percent.

Q. How do you know that? 03:40

A. Because there were people from other states that would come with us and they were the ones that used to drink more.

Q. Did some of your coworkers purchase more beer from Agustin than you did? 03:40

A. No.

Q. Did any of your coworkers purchase beer from Agustin during the week?

A. No.

A. No. That was it.
Q. Do you know if there were any of your coworkers at Sun Valley who did not purchase beverages from Agustin while working in the fields? 03:43
A. No.
Q. During the time you worked at Sun Valley, did you ever buy anything outside of Sun Valley?
A. Yes, when we went out to cash our checks, they took us to a store, I would buy soap, soap for my clothes and toothpaste. And that was it. 03:43
Q. At that store, did you ever buy anything else? 03:44
A. I bought a 12 pack of Coca-Cola.
Q. Do you remember how much that 12 pack of Coca-Cola cost at that store?
A. It was 3.50, more or less.
Q. Did Agustin know whether you purchased that 12 pack of soda outside of Sun Valley? 03:44
MR. SCHULTE: Objection. How does he know what someone else knows?

A. It was just bunk beds.
Q. Was there any refrigerator in the dorms you could use?
A. No.
Q. What were the bathrooms like? 03:52
A. It was a room. On one side we had the showers and on the other side we had the toilets, but there were no curtains.
Q. Where were there no curtains?
A. None of the bedrooms. None in the 03:53 showers nor in the toilets.
Q. If you were using the toilet, could you see the person next to you?
A. Yes.
Q. Just part of their body or could you 03:53
see their whole body?
A. If someone walked in front of you, they would see that you were sitting there on the toilet.
Q. Would they see your whole body or 03:54 just a part of your body?
A. The whole body. There were no doors.
Q. Was there hot water in the bathroom?

A. Sometimes.
Q. What times was there not hot water?
A. Well, we were a lot in those rooms so water was not enough and we had to wait for someone to take a shower and then it would be us. 03:54
Q. Were there times where there was no hot water for you to use?
A. Yes, I think it was twice.
Q. Were the bathrooms clean? 03:55
A. No. Not very clean, but...
Q. What about in the fields, were there bathrooms for you to use in the fields?
A. No.
Q. Were there Port-a-Potties or some kind of portable toilet for you to use in the fields? 03:55
A. No.
Q. What would you do if you had to use the bathroom while working in the field? 03:56
A. We had to ask for permission and we would have to walk to the dorms. That's where the bathrooms were.
Q. Did Agustin always give you

Junior was yelling and waving his hands, do you know what he was saying?

A. No. I honestly don't know because I don't understand English.

Q. Did you speak to Mr. Marino Junior during that morning? 04:11

A. No. We were not able to talk to him and we didn't settle anything. He just said whatever he said and then he left and then Agustin spoke to us. 04:12

Q. Did any of your coworkers speak to Mr. Marino Junior that morning?

A. No.

Q. Before that morning, did you or any of your coworkers plan to tell Mr. Marino Junior anything if you had the opportunity to do so? 04:12

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know who it was who planned to speak with Mr. Marino Junior if they had the opportunity? 04:13

A. It was a group of 21 people and we told Agustin that we wanted to talk to Mr. Marino in order to know whether we were being paid by the hour or by the amount of production.

Q. Was there anything else that you told Agustin that you wanted to talk to Mr. Marino Junior about? 04:14

A. No. We only wanted to speak about work related topic.

Q. Any other work related topics that you wanted to speak to Mr. Marino Junior about?

A. We just wanted to know how we were getting paid, if it was by the hour or by how much we produced. 04:14

Q. Anything else you wanted to talk about?

A. Only about that because the paycheck didn't say whether we were being paid by the hour or by how much we produced. We just saw the final amount that we got paid. 04:14

Q. When did you tell Agustin that you wanted to speak to Mr. Marino Junior about that pay issue? 04:15

A. When we got the first paycheck because we would work the same number of hours, but some would get paid more and some would get

Q. Did other workers refuse to work at Sun Valley under any conditions?

A. No. We were all willing to work.

Q. How do you know that?

A. Well, we talked among each one of us and since I had gotten the money in order to pay for my transportation for my Visa for my passport, I had borrowed that money from someone, so I couldn't go back because I had to save enough money in order to pay. 04:23 04:24

Q. Do you know why Russell Marino thought that workers did not want to work under certain conditions at Sun Valley?

MR. SCHULTE: Objection. He has never said anything about Russell. 04:24

A. Because the job was very tough. We had to crouch all day and we had to spend many days -- many hours working.

Q. Did you ever complain about those work conditions? 04:25

A. It's because we worked for many long hours and then at the end of the day, the paychecks would be different. Some would get paid more and some would get paid less and

Agustin would also scold us because we were not producing enough. That's the reason we wanted to talk to Mr. Marino, in order to find out why some people were getting paid more and some people were getting paid less. 04:26

Q. Do you know if that's what Mr. Marino Junior was upset about that day?

MR. SCHULTE: Same objection. He only refer to a Mr. Marino.

A. Yes. 04:26

Q. Why do you think that?

A. Well, Agustin told us that he had said that he paid for us and that we had to follow the rules in his ranch.

Q. You mentioned a paper that Agustin brought to you at some point after that meeting with Mr. Marino Junior. When was it that Agustin brought that paper? 04:27

A. The next day in the morning after we had talked to the boss and he said that we had to sign the paper. 04:27

Q. Where were you when Agustin brought that paper?

A. In the place where we slept.

because you had a sick family member?
A. No.
Q. Did you choose to leave Sun Valley because you had a family member that died?
A. No. 04:30
Q. Did you choose to leave Sun Valley?
A. No.
Q. INTERPRETER DE LA GARMA ROMO: The interpreters will switch.
MR. GLICK: I would like to take a 04:31 short break, please. Just a couple of minutes.
INTERPRETER ERRASTI: Sure.
(A brief recess was taken.)
MR. GLICK: Everyone ready? 04:45
(Interpreter de la Garma Romo was relieved by Interpreter Errasti.)
Q. Mr. Cervantes, other than Agustin, were there any other supervisors or bosses that you interacted with at Sun Valley? 04:46
A. No.
Q. Do you see any other supervisors or bosses at Sun Valley?
A. We didn't see anyone else. We just saw Agustin and he was the one that told us what to do.

MR. GLICK: I have no further questions at this time, but I believe Mr. Schulte will. 04:46

MR. SCHULTE: Thank you.

EXAMINATION BY

MR. SCHULTE:

Q. I just have a few questions and then we will be done and let everyone go home. 04:47

Was 2015 your first year in the H2A program?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you ever worked in the United States other than that year? 04:47

A. No.

Q. Have you worked in agriculture in Mexico?

A. Yes.

Q. For how long? 04:47

A. Since I was a kid. For around twenty years.

Q. Did you ever work in asparagus there?

A. No.
Q. Do you have any plans to work on an H2A Visa this year?
A. No.
Q. Did you ever tell anyone from the Department of Labor that you might not be available for this deposition because you would be in the United States? 04:48
A. No.
Q. Any idea why they would think that? 04:48
MR. GLICK: Objection. Speculation.
A. I don't understand the question. Can you repeat it?
Q. It's okay. We can move on.
You said you had dinner around 6:00 p.m. most days. Is that correct? 04:48
A. Well, that was the official schedule that we got at the beginning, but it was not the case. Sometimes we left at 7:00 or 8:00 or 9:00. 04:49
Q. Would you work at sunset?
A. Yes.
Q. How would you work in the dark?
A. With the lights of the tractor.

INTERPRETER ERRASTI: Can you repeat your question again?

Q. If other workers had testified that they had received an envelope of cash as payment, would they be telling the truth? 04:55

A. No.

Q. Do you remember when you arrived at Sun Valley, what day?

A. No. To be honest, I do not remember the exact date. 04:56

Q. If someone else said that they had arrived on April 25th, would that sound about right?

MR. GLICK: Objection. Confusing.

A. Yes, more or less. 04:56

Q. Did you arrive as a group or did people arrive on their own?

A. In a group.

Q. Do you know when the last day you worked at Sun Valley was? 04:56

A. I think it was May the 6th.

Q. Do you have the exhibit in front of you still that you had signed that we looked at earlier?

Q. When you saw the job order for the work at Sun Valley, did it say that you would be working on asparagus?

A. There were several other things. It said peaches, asparagus, peppers and other things. 05:13

Q. Had you ever worked with those other types of vegetables other than asparagus?

A. In Mexico, I have.

Q. Do you prefer working on those as opposed to asparagus? 05:13

A. Yes.

Q. If you could have worked on those instead of asparagus, would you have stayed at Sun Valley? 05:14

A. Yes.

Q. Did Agustin ever tell the workers to clean the bathrooms or clean the housing?

A. No.

Q. Other than the man speaking English and moving his hands at the meeting with all the workers, did you ever meet anyone else from the Marino family? 05:14

A. No.

Q. WAS anyone from the Marino family ever there when Agustin was selling beer or soda?

A. No.

Q. How about chips or cigarettes? 05:15

A. No.

Q. How many people, how many workers were at the meeting when he was speaking English?

A. The group that was made up by 21 people. 05:15

Q. Could everyone see everyone else?

A. Yes.

Q. So if the person was shoved, everyone could have seen that? 05:16

A. We were on our way to the meeting.

Q. On your way from where to where?

A. We were going from the place that we slept in towards the truck where Marino was.

Q. Where did the person get shoved? 05:16

A. Next to the truck.

Q. So you said it happened while you were moving between the places, but then you said that it happened at the place where the meeting was. Which was it?

A. It happens -- the place, there's the dorm where we lived in and then the place where Mr. Marino parked his truck and we were getting outside of the place where we sleep and heading toward where he was standing. I don't know why he shoved him. Maybe he felt he was getting too close to him, but the place, the space where the meeting was, the space between where we sleep and the meeting is not very big. It is only maybe three meters. 05:18

Q. Did anyone speak for the workers?

A. No.

Q. Was there a leader of the group?

A. No. 05:18

Q. Were there any workers who had not worked the afternoon before?

INTERPRETER DE LA GARMA ROMO: The interpreter needs clarification.

Q. Out of the group of workers, did any of them not work the afternoon before the meeting? 05:19

MR. GLICK: Objection. Vague.

INTERPRETER DE LA GARMA ROMO: The

Q. Did anyone want to ask him about anything else?
A. Not that I know of.
Q. No one wanted to ask them about using the kitchen? 05:21
A. No.
Q. About the bathrooms?
A. No. We just wanted to talk about things related to work because regarding to the kitchen, well, they were giving us the food. 05:22
Q. On the form we looked at earlier that you had signed, did anyone threaten you to make you sign that form?
A. No.
Q. Did anyone from the Marino family tell you anything about that form? 05:22
MR. GLICK: Objection. Asked and answered.
A. No. Agustin said everything to us.
Q. Does asparagus grow very quickly compared to other vegetables? 05:22
A. Yes.
Q. What happens if it isn't harvested quickly?

A. It rots. It grows too much and it is not useful any more.

Q. Have you spoken with anyone, either Julia or Jason or José or anyone else, about this current case? 05:23

A. Only with them three.

Q. What did you talk about with them, about this case?

A. Well, only about this appointment and whether I was willing or not to 05:24 participate.

Q. Did they tell you why they chose you to participate?

A. No.

Q. Did they tell you what the case was 05:24 about?

A. Only to clarify the situation, what we had lived -- that we had lived in Sun Valley.

Q. What do you mean by clarify? What 05:24 did they tell you that clarified?

A. I don't remember.

Q. What do you think the case is about?

A. That we were mistreated and we were Deposition of HECTOR MISHEL GARCIA DOMINGUEZ, taken by The U.S. Department of Labor, Office of the Solicitor, held at the Offices of the Solicitor, U.S. Department of Labor, 201 Varick Street, Room 983, New York, NY 10014, pursuant to 29 C.F.R. Section 18.64, before Jill Suttenberg, a Professional Shorthand Reporter and Notary Public of the State of New York.

Q. Thank you very much.

Mr. Garcia, have you ever worked at a company called Sun Valley?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you work there? 10:14

A. It was April 2015.

Q. How long did you work there?

A. For two weeks. Around two weeks.

Q. Other than those two weeks, did you work at Sun Valley any other time? 10:14

A. No. Never.

Q. Did you work at Sun Valley on a Visa?

A. Yes.

Q. What kind of Visa? 10:15

A. H2A.

Q. How did you find out about the work at Sun Valley?

A. Through a contractor.

Q. What was the work like at Sun Valley? 10:15

A. The work at Sun Valley was a little harsh.

Q. In what way?

Q. Was there water available in the fields at Sun Valley?
A. Yes. They did have water.
Q. Was that available when you were working in the fields? 10:18
A. Yes.
Q. Did the water ever run out when you were working in the fields?
A. No. That didn't happen.
Q. Were there bathrooms available to use in the fields? 10:18
INTERPRETER ERRASTI: Interpreter needs clarification.
A. The first water, we did not have any bathrooms available. 10:19
Q. Could you use the bathrooms at all during that first week working at Sun Valley in the fields?
A. No.
Q. What did you do instead? 10:19
A. Most of the people went to the edge of the hill.
Q. What did you do?
A. They would pee or poop.

A. If Agustin was there, Agustin would sell the beer. If not, a colleague from Agustin that also worked at the fields.

Q. Did you buy beer at Sun Valley?

A. Yes. 10:32

Q. Did you see other workers at Sun Valley buy beer from Agustin?

A. Yes.

Q. How often did workers at Sun Valley buy beer from Agustin or his colleague? 10:32

A. It was on the weekends.

Q. Any other times?

A. At night. At night. One beer per night.

Q. Was that one beer per night on weekdays? 10:33

A. Yes.

Q. How much did the beer cost that was sold at Sun Valley?

A. Canned beer would be $1 and the bottled beer would be $2 and the 40-ounce beer were $5. 10:33

Q. What brands of beer were sold at Sun Valley?

A. Bud Light, Budweiser and Caguama.
Q. Any other brands?
A. No. Those are the only brands that I remember.
Q. How do you know that those brands were sold? 10:34
A. Because they had them in the freezer along with the soft drinks and the juices.
Q. I think you said that was a freezer. What freezer was that? 10:34
A. It was a refrigerator.
Q. Where was that refrigerator?
A. It was in the kitchen.
Q. Did you see that refrigerator?
A. Yes. 10:35
Q. How do you know that those were the prices that you told me for the beers?
A. Because when some of my colleagues bought beer, that's what I heard.
Q. Was there anything else that was sold at Sun Valley? 10:35
A. It was just that.
INTERPRETER ERRASTI: Interpreter needs to change.

(Interpreter Errasti was relieved by Interpreter de la Garma Romo.)

Q. Mr. Garcia, what days of the week did you purchase beer at Sun Valley?

A. I don't drink. I only heard what the other people asked when they bought the beer. 10:36

Q. How many beers did the other people purchase on a typical weekday?

A. They would never buy during their working hours. They would only buy them at night. 10:36

Q. At night during the week, how many beers would the workers typically buy?

A. Well, some of them would buy three or -- maybe three to five beers. 10:37

Q. Would other workers purchase a different number?

A. Yes, during the weekends they would buy two boxes of 24 can beers or sometimes even more. 10:37

Q. The beers that the workers purchased during the week at night, were those cans or $2 bottles or $5 bottles?

A. Some of them would buy the $5 bottles and others would buy the $2 beers.

Q. During the weekend, those cases, what kind of beers were in those cases?

A. They would buy Bud Light, Budweiser or Modelo. 10:38

Q. Were those cans or bottles?

A. Cans.

Q. Did you see the workers buy these cases of cans? 10:39

INTERPRETER DE LA GARMA ROMO: Interpreter needs clarification. Could you repeat the question?

Q. Did you see your coworkers purchase these cases of canned beers? 10:39

A. Yes.

Q. In a typical weekend, how many cases of beer did you see your coworkers buy?

MR. SCHULTE: Objection. Asked and answered on this specifically and I think we pretty well covered this. 10:39

A. It would go from one to two, sometimes three or even four cases.

Q. What did that depend on?

A. Well, maybe if they were tired or there was a lot of sun or if it was very hot.

Q. All of the beers you were telling me about, were those all sold by Agustin or his colleague? 10:40

A. Yes, both of them would sell them, Agustin and his colleague.

Q. Did anyone else sell those beers that you told us about?

A. No. Only they. 10:40

Q. What portion of the workers at Sun Valley did purchase beer versus those that didn't purchase beer?

A. Around maybe 10 or 12 people are the ones that would buy beer. 10:41

Q. How many other workers were at Sun Valley at the time that you worked there?

A. Mm-hmm, around 30, maybe 40 people.

Q. During the time you worked at Sun Valley, did you ever purchase anything from 10:42 trucks that arrived near the fields?

A. Almost never did a truck go to the field. Only Agustin sold food, but there was one occasion or two occasions when there was a for him for the work.

Q. When did Agustin say that you weren't useful for the work?

A. It was during the second week.

Q. What happened during the second week? 10:58

A. Well, because some of us had a backache and we were tired. Some of us told him we could not work the rest of the day because we were not feeling that well. 10:59

Q. What happened after that?

A. Well, I think that maybe Agustin told Russell about it and then Russell came to the field and instead of asking us what is going on or how we felt or to find out about us, he was very upset and he was aggressive and he was shouting and he asked what is it that we wanted. 11:00

MR. SCHULTE: Objection. Nonresponsive and speculative. 11:00

Q. How long after you had the backache and stopped working did Russell come talk to you?

MR. SCHULTE: Objection. He never testified that he had a backache.

A. The next day.
Q. What time of day did Russell arrive to talk to you?
A. Around 10:00 a.m. 11:01
Q. Did you work that day before Russell arrived to talk to you?
A. No, I didn't work that day.
Q. Did other people work that day?
A. Maybe approximately half of the 11:01 people who were there worked.
Q. Did the other half of the people?
A. Yes, the other half were working. It is the people that had been working with him the longest. 11:02
Q. How many people didn't work that morning that Russell came to talk to you?
A. Around five, six people didn't work.
INTERPRETER DE LA GARMA ROMO:
Interpreters needs to switch. 11:02
(Interpreter de la Garma Romo was relieved by Interpreter Errasti.)
INTERPRETER ERRASTI:
Q. Where were you at 10:00 a.m. that

Q. Did you hear any of your coworkers say anything else to Agustin in response?

A. No. Not really. We just waited for Russell to arrive.

Q. When Russell arrived, that was the next morning at 10:00 a.m.? 11:05

A. Yes.

Q. What happened when Russell arrived?

A. When he arrived, he was clearly upset and he was aggressive and he kept asking us why we didn't work and he also told us that he brought us from Mexico to work so why were we resting. 11:06

Q. Did Russell say anything else?

A. Yes, he asked us, do you want to work or not or what's happening here. 11:06

Q. What happened next?

A. And Russell was still upset. We ask him that we could probably use another type of work like instead of trying to grow other type of vegetables or pick other type of vegetables. 11:07

Q. Who spoke next?

A. But Russell told us that was the only job available for us.

that meeting?

A. Well, at the beginning it was just us and then some people from the field came, where we were all in the meeting. They went to the bathroom and so then they decided to stay in the meeting. 11:15

Q. Before those other people arrived, how many people were present?

A. We were probably six to eight persons at the meeting. 11:16

Q. Did that include you?

A. Yes.

Q. Did that include Russell?

A. No. It was us and Russell and Agustin. 11:16

Q. Who else was part of that six to eight people?

A. Some of the other workers that worked in the same fields.

Q. After more workers joined, about how many people were present at that meeting? 11:16

A. It was probably three or four persons more that arrived afterwards.

Q. Who was the coworker who spoke at that meeting?

A. It was one of the workers that was in the previous day when we took a rest.

Q. Do you know if that worker was working at Sun Valley on an H2A Visa? 11:17

INTERPRETER ERRASTI: Interpreter needs clarification.

Q. Do you know if that worker was working at Sun Valley on an H2A Visa?

A. Yes. 11:17

Q. Was he working on an H2A Visa?

A. No.

Q. What did that person say at the meeting?

A. He asked us why was it that Russell and Agustin were treating us that way, they should respect us as workers. 11:18

Q. What else did that coworker say?

A. He told us that they should respect us, that they should respect our rights and they couldn't yell it off if we could reach an agreement if we just talked. 11:19

Q. Did that worker say anything else?

INTERPRETER ERRASTI: I'm sorry?

Q. Did that worker say anything else at that meeting?

INTERPRETER ERRASTI: Thank you.

A. He told us why is Agustin forcing you to work all this extra overtime. He told us, what, are you machines? Then the boss said that if others could keep working and doing this job, why couldn't we. He said this pain we felt, it was noting at all. It was just a minor back pain. 11:20

Q. After the boss said that, what happened next?

A. Russell was still very upset and he didn't listen to what we told him. We just -- we're not good for this job. Why can't we get a different job. 11:20

Q. At that meeting did you personally say that you wanted to quit Sun Valley?

A. No.

Q. At that meeting, did you hear any other workers say that they wanted to quit Sun Valley? 11:21

A. No. It was just like Russell decided, making that decision and then we would to leave.

Q. Did Agustin tell you anything else?

A. No. That was it.

Q. Who else, if anyone, did Agustin tell that to? 11:24

A. He told this to the other persons that were in the meeting as well.

Q. Do you know if any of those other people who were at the meeting that day continued to work at Sun Valley after that 11:24 meeting?

A. The ones that were in the fields, they kept working, but the ones that were present in the meeting, we did not work any more. 11:24

Q. Who was it that gave you document to sign?

A. It was Agustin.

Q. When did he give you that document?

A. It was two or three days after we 11:25 stopped working.

Q. What did you do for those two or three days?

A. We did not work.

few inches?

A. (Witness complies.)

Q. Closer to the camera, please.

A. (Witness complies.)

Q. Please hold it there for a few more moments. 11:31

MR. SCHULTE: If we can have the record reflect, I don't know if it is a camera quality issue, that is completely illegible on this end. 11:31

Q. Thank you, Mr. Garcia. You can hold the document down.

Do you recognize this document, Exhibit 21?

A. Yes. 11:32

Q. How do you recognize Exhibit 21?

A. Yes, because I can read the options that I read on that document and I had to choose one of them.

Q. Are the options on Exhibit 21 the same options that you had when Agustin gave you the document at the dorm? 11:33

MR. SCHULTE: Objection. He never indicated that this is the form that Agustin gave him at the dorm.

A. Yes.
Q. Thank you. You can close the folder.
MR. GLICK: I have no further questions at this time. I assume Mr. Schulte does. 11:34
MR. SCHULTE: You are correct.
EXAMINATION BY
MR. SCHULTE: 11:34
Q. Good morning. I have a few questions for you and it is possible that Mr. Glick will have some more.
The form that you were just looking at, did you ever get a copy of that form? 11:34
A. Yes.
MR. SCHULTE: I'm sorry. I didn't hear the answer.
INTERPRETER DE LA GARMA ROMO: The answer is yes. 11:35
Q. Who gave you a copy of that form?
A. Agustin.
Q. Did Russell Marino ever talk to you about that form?

A. No.
Q. Did he tell you which box to check on that form?
A. Yes.
Q. Who told you that? 11:35
A. Agustin.
Q. The question was did Russell Marino ever tell you what to do with the form.
A. No. He didn't mention anything.
Q. Do you know what Sun Valley would do with the form after it was completed? 11:36
A. No. I have no idea.
Q. Do you know if it would be sent to the government?
A. No. I have no idea. 11:36
Q. You have worked in the H2A program in years other than 2015, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. Do you know what would happen if an H2A worker reported that he couldn't do the job? 11:37
A. No.
Q. How many years have you worked in the H2A program?

A. Five years.
Q. Which years would those be?
A. 2008, 2009, 2010, 2011, and 2012.
Q. So was 2012 the last year you worked in the program? 11:38
A. Yes.
Q. Have you ever worked in the United States in any years other than those five years?
A. No. 11:38
Q. What types of work did you do in those years that you described, 2008 through 2012?
A. I was collecting tobacco -- picking tobacco. 11:39
Q. Any other crops?
A. Also sweet potato. Only those two crops.
Q. Had you ever worked asparagus before you had worked at Sun Valley? 11:39
A. No. Never.
Q. You mentioned at the meeting that someone had asked Agustin if the workers could work on another vegetable. Do you remember that?

A. They asked whether it was possible to do that, but Agustin said that that was the only choice that they had. That was the only work they had for them. 11:40

Q. If there was other work, would you have stayed to do that?

A. Yes.

Q. Remind me again, please, how many people were at the meeting by the end of the meeting? How many workers? 11:40

A. It was around eight to ten people.

Q. Do you remember how many people traveled back to Mexico with you on the bus at the end of that week? 11:41

A. The people that were fired from the field, though it was us, ten, well, approximately ten, us included, but in total it was twenty people. So it was probably ten people from the meeting and the other, I don't know the reasons why, but maybe they left the work because they didn't want to work any more, but I do not know the reasons. 11:42

Q. Were all of those workers from Veracruz?

A. Yes.

Q. Were there workers at Sun Valley while you were there from other parts of Mexico? 11:42

A. Some of them I think were from Caliente maybe, and others I think they were from Michoacan and they were acquaintances of Agustin that maybe the reason why they were there. 11:43

Q. In the job order that you reviewed in Monterrey before you came to New Jersey, did it say you would be working on asparagus?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember what day the meeting was? That meeting at 10:00 a.m., do you remember what day that would be? 11:43

A. I do not remember the exact day.

Q. Do you remember the date on which you signed the form that we talked about earlier? 11:44

A. I don't remember the exact day.

MR. SCHULTE: Side bar for a second.

Is there a copy of the exhibit that date that I arrived to Sun Valley.

Q. Did you start working on the first day you arrived at Sun Valley?
A. No. The next day.
Q. You said that you were one of the workers who did not work the day before the meeting with Russell Marino; is that correct? 11:49
A. Yes.
Q. How many workers did not work that afternoon? 11:49
A. Around six people approximately.
Q. Before the meeting on -- before your meeting with Russell Marino, had you ever spoken with him before that?
A. No. We had never met him before. 11:50
Q. Had you ever met any of the other Marinos before that?
A. No. Nobody at all.
Q. I think you mentioned when you were talking about that meeting that this work is too hard. Why can't we get a different job. Do you remember that? 11:50
MR. GLICK: Objection.
Mischaracterizes his testimony.

A. We didn't say that we couldn't do it. We just asked if we could rest a little so we could carry on with our job.

Q. After that, you have never worked in H2A since then, correct? 11:51

A. Yes, I haven't worked in that program since 2015.

Q. Go back and talk about asparagus. Does asparagus grow very quickly?

A. Yes. 11:52

Q. What happens if it is not harvested on a regular schedule?

A. It goes soft. It rots.

Q. Did Russell Marino or Agustin ever say that they needed workers to be able to work 11:52 on the asparagus?

A. No. I don't remember whether they said that or not.

Q. If they didn't have enough workers to pick the asparagus, what would happen to it? 11:53

MR. GLICK: Objection. Calls for speculation.

A. Then it, all the asparagus would have rotten.

Q. You said that there's only enough hot water for ten showers; is that correct?

A. Yes. The rest of the people would have to shower with cold water.

Q. So 30 people would shower with cold water every day? 11:53

A. You had to either shower with cold water or wait for the water to get warm again.

Q. You mentioned going to the store to buy cell phones. Did you buy anything else when you were at the store? 11:54

A. No.

Q. Did anyone else?

A. No. We just went there to buy cell phones and then we had to go back again. 11:54

Q. Did you ever go to the laundromat?

A. No.

Q. Do you know if anyone else did?

A. I do not know.

Q. Do you know who made the bathrooms dirty? 11:55

A. No. I do not know. It is just that they never cleaned. So if, for instance, you would take a shower and you had some dust on

A. It was approximately after a week that we had been working.

Q. Do you receive paychecks for your work at Sun Valley?

A. After two weeks, they paid us the two weeks that we had worked there. 12:34

Q. Were you paid for all of the hours that you worked?

A. Well, we actually didn't know whether we were being paid by hour or just for all the work that we had done. We were not very sure how they paid us. 12:35

Q. Do you think they owe you any money?

A. Actually I don't know.

Q. Okay. 12:35

Did you ever pay Sun Valley to buy sodas?

A. Yes, I paid Agustin. I paid Agustin.

Q. Did you ever pay the company? 12:36

A. No. Not the company.

Q. Did you ever pay the company for meals?

A. Not to the company.

Q. For transportation?
A. No, not to the company.
Q. Did the company ever tell you to buy those things from Agustin?
MR. GLICK: Objection. Confusing. 12:36
A. No. But it was impossible to buy from anywhere else because there was no means of transportation to get somewhere else to buy things and we couldn't use the kitchen to cook because the kitchen was always being used by 12:37 somebody else.
Q. Did you ever ask to use the kitchen?
A. Well, we asked Agustin whether we could use the kitchen to cook, but he said that there was no other place for us to buy things 12:37 because there was no means of transportation to get somewhere to buy things.
Q. Did Sun Valley deduct any amounts from your paycheck for meals or drinks?
A. No. 12:38
Q. How did you pay for those? In cash or by check?
A. Cash.
Q. If you had the choice between drinking water or drinking soda, which would you choose?

A. Well, in some cases I would choose to drink water and in other cases I would choose to drink soda. 12:39

Q. If you were at a restaurant, for example, sometimes you would drink water and sometimes you would drink soda?

MR. GLICK: Objection. Mischaracterizes his testimony. 12:39

A. Well, yes. Yes.

Q. Okay. Thank you, sir.

MR. SCHULTE: No more questions from me.

MR. GLICK: We have a few more questions. If you could give me a moment, please. 12:39

INTERPRETER DE LA GARMA ROMO: The witness is asking me who is going to make the questions? 12:40

MR. GLICK: I'm going to take a short break and then I will come back and we will continue.

MR. SCHULTE: I will step out for a

A. Because we were tired from our backs and it was aching.

Q. What would have had to change at Sun Valley for you to continue working there cutting asparagus? 12:45

MR. SCHULTE: Objection.

Speculation.

A. Well, maybe if we had been given another option, such as maybe collecting other vegetables or maybe planting, in the 12:45 plantation, that's what the other workers were doing. Us, the ones that were hired, we were just picking asparagus and maybe there were other jobs that were easier.

Q. Were you willing to stay at Sun 12:46 Valley spending some of your time cutting asparagus and some of your time doing other jobs?

A. Yes.

Q. How many hours a week were you 12:46 willing to work cutting asparagus at Sun Valley?

A. At least 40 hours.

Q. How many hours were you working at Video teleconference deposition of JOSE LUIS SILVA LOPEZ, taken by The U.S. Department of Labor, Office of the Solicitor, held at the Offices of the Solicitor, U.S. Department of Labor, 201 Varick Street, Room 983, New York, NY 10014, pursuant to 29 C.F.R. Section 18.64, before Elizabeth F. Tobin, a Registered Professional Reporter and Notary Public of the State of New York.

also use bad words and we didn't like that.

Also, the food that we had to pay. We had to pay 80 U.S. per week. And meals did not include beverages. We had to buy them separate. We thought that that was very unfair, but we couldn't do anything about it because we didn't have a kitchen. So we had no other choice but to do what the foreman said.

The first day that we arrived, bathrooms were very, very dirty. We had to clean them ourselves because we didn't like it. The beds on which we had to sleep were also very dirty. Some of my workmates got very sick with chicken pox because the beds were very dirty. The company did not take them to the hospital or anything and they had to pay for their own medicine. One of the coworkers that got sick with chicken pox, his father went to the United States to get him and brought him back.

Like two days after we arrived where we were already working, two or three people left and went somewhere else to find another job because they didn't like it there. So that was a typical day of work. And we would complain about it with the foreman, but he would just say that that was what

Q. And was that from Agustin?

A. Yes, Agustin sold everything.

Q. Did you also see your coworkers purchase beverages from Agustin at meals?

A. Yes, everyone would. Later we started to purchase cases of soda from the store ourselves because it was less expensive.

Q. When you purchased beverages at Sun Valley at night, where did you purchase them?

A. Agustin.

Q. Where at Sun Valley was that?

A. Sometimes we would pay money to get a ride to go to the store. I don't remember the little town that we used to go to buy the cases of soft drinks or soda.

Q. When you purchased beverages from Agustin in the evening, where was that?

A. In the kitchen.

Q. Was the kitchen closed at night?

A. He would close the kitchen at 8:00, more or less.

Q. Would you ever buy beverages from Agustin after he closed the kitchen?

A. No, because when the kitchen was closed, no one could go in.

Q. Did anyone ever open up the kitchen after it was closed for the evening?

A. Sometimes he would leave his brother-in-law in charge of the kitchen.

Q. What did Agustin's brother-in-law do?

A. He would sell them.

Q. Did he open up the kitchen again?

A. Yes. Or he would leave it open and he would close it later.

Q. When Agustin's brother-in-law left the kitchen open, could you use the kitchen?

A. No.

Q. Why not?

A. Because we were not allowed to go into the kitchen to cook or to do anything.

Q. Did you buy beer from Agustin?

INTERPRETER GARCIA: Would you repeat that for me, please?

Q. Did you buy beer from Agustin?

A. Sometimes in the afternoon.

Q. About how often?

A. About three days a week.

Q. Was it more on some days than other days?

A. No, it was the same.

Q. When you bought beer from Agustin, how many beers would you buy in a day?

A. Just one or two.

Q. What kind of beer did you buy from Agustin?

A. Bud Light and Budweiser.

Q. How much did those cost?

A. Canned beer cost 1.50. No, I'm not sure. Maybe it was two, two.

Q. Where at Sun Valley did Agustin store that beer?

A. In that same place, in the kitchen.

Q. Where in the kitchen?

A. He had a separate refrigerator just for beer and the other refrigerators were for the other drinks.

Q. Did you ever see that refrigerator for the beer?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you see it?

A. When we would go to pay for our food or when we would go to buy a drink, they were just right there, next to each other.

Q. Other than the kinds of beer that you bought from Agustin, did Agustin sell other kinds of beer?

A. He would also sell Mexican brand beer such as Caguana.

Q. How do you know that?

A. Because I saw other coworkers purchasing that beer.

Q. How often did you see other coworkers purchasing that beer?

A. Always in the evening or on Sundays. There were some of them that would get drunk there.

Q. How many days a week did you see coworkers purchasing beer from Agustin?

A. Every day, almost every day.

Q. Did your coworkers on average purchase less beer than you from Agustin or the same or more beer?

MR. SCHULTE: Objection. No foundation.

A. More beers than I did.

Q. How did you know that your coworkers purchased more beer than you from Agustin?

A. Because I saw them doing it and because some of them talked about it.

Q. What did you see them doing?

A. Outside the kitchen there were these benches where we used to have our lunch, where we used to eat, and that's where they would sit down to drink their beer.

Q. What did you hear them talking about?

A. When they were drinking beer?

Q. I believe you told me that one of the reasons you knew that your coworkers drank -- scratch that.

One of the reasons you knew that your coworkers purchased more beer from Agustin than you is that you heard them talking about it?

A. I saw them and they brought the beer to the bedroom and drank it there.

Q. Where did you see them bringing the beer from?

A. From the kitchen to the dorms.

Q. Did you ever store -- scratch that.

Did you ever buy beer from somewhere other than Agustin?

A. Sometimes when we used to go to the store.

Q. When you went to the store and bought beer, did you ever store that beer at Sun Valley's kitchen?

A. No.

Q. Do you know if your coworkers ever stored beer in Sun Valley's kitchen if they bought that beer somewhere outside of Sun Valley?

A. No. Because if they bought it from the store, they would drink it.

Q. Did Agustin sell anything else to the workers at Sun Valley that you haven't told me about this morning?

A. He would also sell to us the gloves with which we had to work.

Q. Why did you need those gloves?

A. To pick the cucumber, because the cucumber had like prickles or spindles, thorns and they would hurt us without gloves.

Q. How much did Agustin sell those gloves for?

A. Two dollars.

Q. How often did you buy those gloves from Agustin?

A. Once a week.

Q. Did your coworkers buy those gloves from

Q. What time of day did the water tend to -- did the hot water tend to run out?

A. After work in the afternoon we'd go get a shower and the people who were the last to take the shower wouldn't get any hot water.

Q. Did that happen to you that you didn't get hot water to take a shower?

A. Yes.

Q. How often did that happen to you at Sun Valley in 2015?

A. Around five times.

Q. Were there sinks in the bathroom at Sun Valley?

A. Yes.

Q. Was there hot water in those sinks?

A. I think so.

Q. Was there always hot water in the sinks?

A. No.

Q. When wasn't there hot water in the sinks?

A. When everybody would take showers and the hot water would run out.

Q. Did that ever happen to you that there was not hot water in the sink?

A. Well, we didn't use the sinks much.

A. Not really. I had some coworkers and they gave us a little piece of paper. On this piece of paper, it mentioned what product we would be picking.

Q. Did it say anything about -- no, strike that.

You had come to Mayra looking for work in the United States, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. If you knew that the meals would be prepared for you instead of you cooking your own meals, would that have changed your decision to come to the U.S.?

A. I don't know. Maybe. I had a lot of need to go to the States and work. Maybe I would just go for that season.

Q. Were there any workers in 2015 while you were at Sun Valley who did not buy beer at all?

A. Yes. Some did not drink but I would say that the great majority did drink beer.

Q. Did they get into any trouble with Sun Valley for not buying beer?

A. No, because they were buying soft drinks and Gatorade.

Q. Was Russell Marino or any of the other Marino family members present when Agustin sold soda?

A. No, he was not there when he was selling that soda.

Q. How about beer?

A. Not beer either.

Q. Snacks?

A. No.

Q. Cigarettes?

A. Was Russell there when they were selling cigarettes is the question?

Q. Correct.

A. No.

Q. How about any of the other Marinos?

A. No.

Q. Was water available when you were working in the field?

A. Yes, there was water on the tractor.

Q. Was there water in the dining room?

A. Yes.

Q. You mentioned trips to the laundromat. Were you charged to go to the laundromat?

A. We were not charged any money to be taken to the laundromat. We just had to pay for the money we had to put into the machine to do the laundry.

Q. Other workers have said that there was a store that was a five-minute walk from the laundromat. Do you know about that store?

A. No, I did not go to these stores that were near the laundromat.

Q. You said that some workers bought drinks from the store at some point in the year; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you buy some from the store?

A. Sometimes.

Q. Where was that store?

A. It was like 30 minutes away from the fields, the ranch.

Q. Did you get in any trouble for buying drinks at the store?

A. No, but we had to drink them room temperature because we could not cool them. And if we wanted a cold drink, we had to buy it from Agustin.

Q. You mentioned that some workers bought fans to cool the room?

conclusion.

A. I think so because in the other company that I worked for later, they would pay for all of our rides. They would take us to the store and everything and make the deposits.

Q. Did you ever buy beer when you went to the store in 2015?

A. I think only twice.

Q. Do you remember how much they were?

INTERPRETER GARCIA: For the interpreter, you mean the price?

MR. SCHULTE: Correct.

A. No. To be honest, I don't remember.

Q. Did you ever buy gloves at Walmart?

A. Yes, sometimes I did.

Q. Do you remember how much those were?

A. I bought them in packages so I don't really remember. And it was like very late when I started to buy at Walmart.

Q. Did you get into any trouble for buying the gloves at Walmart?

A. No.

Q. Do you know if anyone from the government inspected the housing at Sun Valley before you says that?

A. No, I don't think so.

Q. When you signed that form, did you think you were giving up any rights?

A. I'm not sure because first no one wanted to sign that piece of paper. But then we asked Mayra and Mayra said that it was okay for us to sign it.

Q. So that was the Mayra that you spoke with before you took the job? Is that the same woman?

A. Yes.

Q. And you spoke with her on the telephone?

A. Yes, it was on the phone.

Q. Do you know who called her?

A. One of my coworkers, but I don't remember.

Q. What did they say that she told him?

INTERPRETER GARCIA: Would you repeat that for the translator?

MR. SCHULTE: Sure. I'm sorry. That was confusing to me, too.

Q. What did he tell you that Mayra told him?

A. That she had said that it was okay for us to sign the document, that it would do us no harm.

Q. Did Russell Marino ever tell you that you needed to sign the document?

A. No, he didn't. Russell didn't.

Q. Did he threaten -- I'm sorry. I apologize. Go ahead.

A. The one that told us was Agustin.

Q. Did Russell ever threaten you and say you had to sign the document?

A. No.

MR. SCHULTE: No more questions for me. Thank you, sir.

THE WITNESS: You're welcome.

MR. GLICK: Mr. Silva Lopez, I have a couple more questions.

BY MR. GLICK:

Q. Do you remember that on Tuesday afternoon you and I met through this video conference system in this room where you're sitting now?

A. Yes, uh-huh.

Q. Do you remember that the day before that on Monday afternoon I called you on the telephone?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember that on the phone there was someone else on the line?

repeat.

A. Agustin was on top of the supervisor.

INTERPRETER GARCIA: Just excuse me. He wanted to make sure that the word supervisor meant (Spanish word). That was the question he asked to the interpreter.

Q. Okay. I appreciate it.

Could workers choose to work fewer hours at Sun Valley?

A. No, there was no choice. Actually, the foreman would threaten us that if we didn't work but he ordered, we were going to be sent back to Mexico.

Q. I'd like to ask you a little bit about how you ate at Sun Valley. Can you tell me about the meal plan?

A. With respect to the nutritional value of the meals, they were balanced. But we were against what that we felt it was given to us very expensive.

Q. How much was the meal plan?

A. 80 US dollars per week plus soda. In total, in a week, we would be paying $125 including soda and meals.

Q. Who did you pay this money to?

A. To Agustin.

Q. How was this arrangement explained to you?

A. Agustin did it.

Q. What did he say?

A. From the moment in which we arrived, he told us we needed to pay 80 U.S. for the meals and that any soda also needed to be paid for.

Q. When would you pay him?

INTERPRETER GARCIA: Would you repeat this for me, sir?

Q. When did you pay Agustin the $80?

A. Every time I received a check.

Q. When did you receive checks?

A. Every eight days, every week.

Q. How long did you participate in this meal plan?

A. A bit over one month and a half.

Q. What did you do after that month and a half?

A. Some of the coworkers got together and bought a little grill and I saw that they were able to do their own cooking in that grill, so I joined them.

Q. Where did they use the grill?

to you about, was Agustin selling anything other than the meal plan?

A. He would sell soda, Red Bull, Monster.

MR. SCHULTE: Sorry to interrupt. Are you getting kind of a cross signal on the line, too, or is that just here? It sounds like there's another call in the background.

INTERPRETER GARCIA: No, we're not. We're fine here.

MR. HEYMAN-KANTOR: Yeah, we're fine here, too.

MR. SCHULTE: It's just me. Okay, then. Carry on.

A. Repeating his answer, he said that he would sell Red Bull, Monster and orange soda and he also sells or sold beer, Caguana. Caguana, it's like a large beer.

INTERPRETER GARCIA: Now you're gone? Can you hear me?

MR. HEYMAN-KANTOR: Yes.

INTERPRETER GARCIA: We can't see you. We can only see Mr. Schulte.

MR. HEYMAN-KANTOR: Let us try to fix this.

A. Yes, one beer was the Caguana, the larger one.

Q. How much did the smaller beers cost?

MR. SCHULTE: Objection. He never testified about having smaller beers, only this kind. He's asked and answered this several times already.

MR. HEYMAN-KANTOR: All right. Let me rephrase.

Q. Were there different -- did Agustin sell multiple types of beer or only one kind of beer?

A. Several.

Q. Can you tell us the different kinds of beer?

A. Bud Light, Vicky.

INTERPRETER GARCIA: He's calling them Vicky, like V-I-C-K-Y. He's saying it's like a Mexican beer that's called Victoria. So, he's using Vicky as short for Victoria.

A. Those were in six-packs.

Q. Were the Bud Lights sold in six-packs or in singles or some other way?

A. Either way. However you wanted it. If you wanted a six-pack or if you want one of them understand?

A. Yes.

Q. How many beers, typically, a week, would H2A workers drink?

A. Maybe five boxes per week. There were some that actually bought a lot.

Q. On a typical Friday night, how much would an average H2A worker buy in beer?

A. Five 24s.

INTERPRETER GARCIA: I'm asking permission to ask him to clarify for me.

MR. SCHULTE: I'm sorry. It's up to counsel to ask the questions. You can just interpret his answers. If counsel has a question about what he meant, he can follow up. Sorry.

INTERPRETER GARCIA: Okay.

Q. What do you mean by that?

A. With what?

Q. What do you mean by five 24s?

A. Five boxes of 24 each. I think it's 24 per case. Isn't that right? That's what they sell there?

Q. Okay. So, was Agustin also selling cases of 24 beers?

A. Yes, he did. He would sell six-packs or 24-pack cases and the Caguana.

Q. So, Caguanas were sold either in six-packs -- sorry. Sorry.

Are you saying Caguanas were sold in either six-packs or 24-packs?

A. I don't know about that because I did not buy those.

Q. Do you know how much Agustin charged for a 24-pack of Caguanas?

MR. SCHULTE: Objection. He didn't answer that they were sold in 24-packs. No foundation.

(Interpreter Jenkins relieved Interpreter Garcia.)

Q. You can answer.

A. He once saw that the undocumented workers once organized a party and he did see they were sold a case of Caguanas.

Q. What beers -- how many beers per H2A worker would a particular H2A worker have per week?

A. Just a few of them were drinking beer, not all of them. We would just see that they'd like clarify what is the word.

A. He said, also the hygiene in the field was really bad.

Q. What do you mean by that?

A. When we got there, everything was really dirty. The bathrooms were filthy, the showers, where we take showers were filthy, the dorms where we stayed.

Q. Turning back to the beer, what days of the week did Agustin sell beer?

A. It was open to whoever wanted to buy beer. But I would say -- but the days they would consume more beer was on Sunday.

Q. Could you buy beer all seven days a week or were there some days when it was closed?

A. No, it was open.

Q. What time during the day could workers buy beer?

A. When we came back from work.

Q. You previously talked about other workers buying beer. Did those workers purchase it from Agustin or from somewhere else?

A. At the beginning they were buying from Agustin and then after that they were buying it elsewhere.

Q. When did they start buying them from elsewhere?

A. That was towards the end. At least that's what I would observe. I wasn't drinking a lot. I would buy approximately two beers a week.

Q. So, how many weeks were left in the season when people started buying beer elsewhere?

A. That was like the last week.

Q. Where did Agustin sell the beers from?

A. Right there in the store in the diner -- in the dining room. He had it there in the fridge.

Q. How far was the dining room from where you slept?

A. Five to 15 meters away. It was right there in the building where we were staying.

Q. I'd like to ask you briefly a little bit more about the bathrooms. Can you tell me anything else about the bathrooms?

A. There was shit on the walls and on the toilets like rubbed on the walls -- on the toilets. There was toilet paper everywhere, dirty toilet paper everywhere. Some would piss outside of the toilets. In the showers there was even dirt, mud,

Q. How much time would you spend in these vans each day?

A. Every day.

Q. Can you estimate how much time; ten minutes, an hour, three hours?

A. It would depend in which field you were going to work at. It could be from 15 minutes to 30 minutes.

Q. And that's total per day, 15 to 30 minutes?

A. What do you mean?

Q. Fifteen to 30 minutes, is that the total round trip travel or is that just one way?

A. Fifteen minutes there and 15 minutes back, depending on where the field is. There was another field that was farther away and it took us 30 minutes to get there and another 30 minutes to get back.

Q. During the course of 2015, did you ever leave the farm?

A. Only when I got chicken pox. I mean I was staying. I was sleeping in the fields, but since I had fever, I could not go to work. And I would like to clarify that during this time I was being showed no preoccupation for us when I got sick. During this time that he got sick, I was being showed no concern for us.

Q. How long were you sick and not working?

A. About a week.

Q. Was there any transportation provided to you to do laundry?

A. Yes, there was one day out of the week that we used to go do our laundry.

Q. Was that transportation provided free of charge or was there a charge?

A. No. It was included.

Q. How much time would you have to do your laundry?

A. It would just depend on when we were all doing our laundry.

Q. Would you have time to shop at stores nearby?

A. Yes, there was a store nearby. At the end, that's where I would go buy my stuff. That's where I would go buy my food.

Q. Did you have time to go to the store on every trip to the laundry?

A. Yes. Sometimes, yes.

MR. HEYMAN-KANTOR: Let me rephrase.

Q. Is this the document that you were handed around the time that you were sent home?

A. Yes.

Q. I'd like you to look at another --

MR. HEYMAN-KANTOR: Sorry. Court reporter, can you mark this document as Exhibit 22?

(Exhibit 22, Miguel Angel Elizondo Soto's departure form, marked for identification, as of this date.)

Q. There should be a folder near you that says 22. Can you hold that up to the camera so we can confirm you have the right document?

(Witness complied.)

Q. Thank you. We've got the right document.

So, this document which I've marked as Exhibit 22, is that your signature on the document?

A. Yes, it is mine.

Q. Did you complete this document?

A. Yes.

Q. Was anyone with you when you completed this document?

A. Yes, the foreman Agustin.

Q. Anyone else?

A. No, just him.

Q. Do you see where there's an X on the document on the left side?

A. Yes.

Q. Why did you put an X there?

A. The foreman told me to put an X there. He told us all to put an X there.

Q. And then after you completed this document, what did you do with it?

A. There were actually two documents. One was in English and one was in Spanish, and I kept the one in Spanish.

Q. What did you do with the English one?

A. I gave it back to Agustin.

Q. Did you ever see this document again?

A. The one that was in English?

Q. Correct.

A. No, it was left there.

Q. Everything that you've been talking about today about Sun Valley, was that all about the 2015 growing season?

A. Yes.

MR. HEYMAN-KANTOR: I have no further questions. I think opposing counsel may have some questions.

EXAMINATION BY
MR. SCHULTE:

Q. Hello. Good afternoon, sir. I just have a couple of questions. I'll keep it quick for you.

A. Okay, perfect.

Q. When you completed that form, Exhibit 22, did Russell Marino force you to fill that out?

A. Well, it was Agustin.

Q. Okay. So did Russell tell you anything about the form?

A. I don't even remember if Russell Marino was there.

Q. Okay. Thank you. Going back, you said that you had chicken pox and were sick for a week. Do you know if any other workers were also sick?

A. Yes. And they decided to abandon the fields because they were getting no care at all and they said we may die here, so they decided to leave.

Q. When you say leave the field, you mean leave the housing, leave the farm all together?

A. Yes, they left. They left and worked as undocumented workers.

were hired on the contract and I would also say there were 35 workers.

INTERPRETER JENKINS: Repeat as an interpreter. There were 35 workers from Durango. Would you like me to spell that?

MR. SCHULTE: Yes, please.

INTERPRETER JENKINS: D -- as in Daniel -- U-R-A-N -- as in nothing -- G-O.

A. Of the undocumented workers, I couldn't give you an exact number because we really did not spend much time with them. But I could say it was approximately 40 workers.

Q. Were there H2As from anywhere else? From Veracruz maybe?

A. Yes, from Veracruz, but I can't give you precisely a number of how many there were. There were a few.

Q. Less than how many there were from Guanajunto?

A. Yes.

Q. More than 10?

A. Probably. I didn't really recognize them.

Q. You mentioned buying beers at the store, at maybe the Oxxo. Do you remember how much they cost there?

A. For each one, I think it was $2 a can, a small can, of the small ones.

Q. Were any of the Marinos ever there when Agustin was selling beer?

A. Let me think. No. I think this was something he was doing under the table without them finding out.

Q. Have you ever worked for other H2A employers?

A. No. It was my first year.

Q. Have you worked for any since then?

A. I have not had the opportunity again.

Q. Are you planning to do that this summer?

A. Let's hope so. I'm in need.

Q. Okay. Part of the pay at Sun Valley was what they call a piece rate so the more you harvest the more you're paid; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. So that the faster you pick, the more you're paid, right?

A. It was a little confusing because the foreman would sometimes say we'd be paid on an INTERPRETER GARCIA: Would you remind me what was the million dollars?

MR. SCHULTE: Against the Marino family.

MR. HEYMAN-KANTOR: I'm going to object that again it misstates what the case is about. It mischaracterizes. It's confusing.

A. The answer was no.

Q. No, he did not know that?

A. No, I don't know anything.

Q. Did anyone from the Department of Labor or from CDM talk to him about recovering money, about him being paid?

A. No, never.

Q. Does he think the Marino brothers owe him any money?

INTERPRETER GARCIA: Would you repeat that for me?

MR. SCHULTE: Sure, sorry.

Q. Does he believe the Marino brothers owe him any money?

A. The only thing is when I got ill because I was there on contract and the disease was in their field, so it was not my fault that I couldn't work. In any work in Mexico that you go to, if that happens, they'll give you a sick leave.

Q. They have paid sick leave, so if you are sick, they'll pay you for days you couldn't work?

MR. HEYMAN-KANTOR: Objection. Relevance.

A. Exactly.

MR. SCHULTE: Okay. No further questions. Thank you.

MR. HEYMAN-KANTOR: One moment. We'd like to take a break for maybe five minutes. Just hang tight. Okay?

(A recess was taken from 4:19 p.m. to 4:27 p.m.)

MR. HEYMAN-KANTOR: We're back on the record. We'll turn the recording back on. Just give one moment until the recording turns on.

BY MR. HEYMAN-KANTOR:

Q. Just a couple more questions. Do you remember on Friday you and I had a telephone -- you had a telephone conversation with the Department of Labor?

A. Yes, I remember that.

Q. And there was also someone on the phone helping to translate?

[2] By agreement of the parties, pages 59-73 of the Administrator's Response will be excluded, as they include the names and personal contact information of Sun Valley's H-2A employees for the 2015 season. The names of the employees are separately provided in the parties' Joint Disclosures, so the inclusion of their personal information here is unnecessary.

[3] By agreement of the parties, page 342a will be added as the second page of the English translation of that statement, in the interests of completeness and context.

10:20 a.m.

Video teleconference deposition of DARIO MORALES ACOSTA, taken by The U.S. Department of Labor, Office of the Solicitor, held at the Offices of the Solicitor, U.S. Department of Labor, 201 Varick Street, Room 983, New York, NY 10014, pursuant to 29 C.F.R. Section 18.64, before Elizabeth F. Tobin, a Registered Professional Reporter and Notary Public of the State of New York.

A. Yes.
Q. You mentioned a key. What is the key to?
A. The main door to the kitchen.
Q. How much did you pay for meals?
A. 100 U.S. per week.
Q. What did you drink in the fields?
A. During the light breakfast in the morning, sometimes Gatorade or a soda.
Q. What did you drink in the fields?
INTERPRETER GARCIA: You want me to repeat the question?
MR. HEYMAN-KANTOR: Yes, please.
A. They brought water from the kitchen to give us some in the afternoon.
Q. What else did you drink during the course of the day?
A. Sometimes at dinner, one beer.
Q. Did you drink anything else during the course of the day?
A. No, that's it.
Q. Where did you get the soda, Gatorade and beer?
A. Agustin sold them.
Q. Did he sell any other drinks?

A. Sometimes juices.
Q. Anything else?
A. No, that's it.
Q. Did Agustin sell any other items other than drinks?
A. Chips, soups and cigarettes.
Q. Anything else?
A. No. Just that, and the soda and the Gatorade.
Q. Was anything else sold from the kitchen?
A. No.
Q. So, typically, how many sodas or Gatorades would you drink in a day?
A. Sometimes three or four.
Q. If you can walk me through a typical day, what times would you purchase these sodas and Gatorades?
A. During the light breakfast at 10:00 in the morning, one soda. Between 12:00 or 1:00, another one. From 2:00 to 3:00 we drank the water that they provided. And at dinner Monster or soda.
Q. Can you repeat the first word?
INTERPRETER GARCIA: Monster. It's a power drink.

Q. When you say soda, do you mean Monster or are those two different things?

A. No, when I say soda, I mean Coke, Coca-Cola. Monster is different.

Q. Did Agustin also sell Monster?

A. Yes.

Q. You said at 10:00 a.m. you'll have one soda. At 12:00 or 1:00 you'll have one soda. Is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you go back to, what else would you have during this typical day?

A. The three sodas and the water.

Q. When would you drink the third soda?

A. In the afternoon, around 6:00 or 7:00.

Q. Would you ever drink a fourth soda or drink?

A. Around 5:00 and 6:00 a.m. in the morning there was coffee.

Q. Was the coffee free or was there a charge?

A. It was included in the weekly meal plan.

Q. Were the other drinks included in the weekly meal plan?

A. No, those we needed to pay one dollar per drink.

Q. Was it the same price for the coke, Gatorade and Monster?

A. Soda and Gatorade, one dollar; Monster, two dollars.

Q. Before when you said you'd have a soda at 10:00 a.m., a soda at 12:00 or 1:00 p.m., and a soda at 6:00 or 7:00 p.m., what do you mean by soda? Let me strike that.

What time of day would you have the Monsters?

A. In the morning at 10:00 with a sandwich that Agustin sold to us as part of the light breakfast.

Q. Would you have a Monster at any other time during the day?

A. No, just one.

Q. When would you have a Gatorade?

A. At 1:00 and at 6:00 p.m.

Q. When would you have a Coke?

A. Sometimes during lunch in exchange of the Gatorade.

Q. Is it your testimony you'd have one drink at breakfast at 10:00 a.m., one drink at lunch at 12:00 or 1:00 p.m. and one drink at dinner at 6:00 or 7:00 p.m.?

A. Yes, plus the water that was provided between 11:00 to 3:00. That was the time in which it would be hotter.

Q. Was water provided after 3:00 p.m.?

A. Yes.

Q. Did the other workers in the fields drink more or less or about the same as you drank?

A. Some of them more because they purchased double for lunch or for breakfast.

Q. Do you mean by double? Do you mean two drinks for lunch or two drinks for breakfast?

A. Two for the lunch.

Q. Are you saying that most of the workers in the fields had more drinks than you had?

A. No, maybe just one-third of them. Not even one-half.

Q. The other half of workers, did they drink the same as you or less than you?

A. The same.

Q. How do you know how much the other workers drank?

A. Because we were all together in the same group and we were all together in one single dining room for lunch.

Q. Before you said that Agustin sold beer. How many beers per week did your coworkers drink?

A. About a six-pack.

Q. How do you know that?

A. I would see the empty cans in the trash when they put all the trash together.

Q. Do you know where your coworkers got the beer from?

A. Agustin had a refrigerator for the beer in the kitchen.

Q. How did the workers get the beer?

A. At the end of the day you could purchase it, just as the other drinks or beverages.

Q. How much did they cost?

A. I don't really remember. But maybe 12 U.S. per six-pack.

Q. How much beer did you purchase a week?

A. Two to three Cerveza Modelo.

INTERPRETER GARCIA: C-E-R-V-E-Z-A and the second word M-O-D-E-L-O.

Q. Is that a brand of beer?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. What other brands of beer were sold, if any?

A. There was a red one that I don't remember the name. I think Budweiser if that is a red can.

Q. Any other brands?

A. I think there was also Bud Light. I think.

Q. Who sold the other brands of beer?

A. They were all together in the same fridge opened by Agustin.

Q. How much did the Budweisers and Bud Lights cost?

A. I don't remember because I never purchased those. But they were cheaper.

Q. How much did it cost to buy a single Cerveza Modela?

A. Two dollars.

Q. What times of day could you buy beer?

A. Only in the evenings when we were ready to go to rest or sleep.

Q. So what was the earliest time and what was the latest time you could buy a beer?

A. If you wanted a beer, it had to be before

Q. Anything else remarkable about the housing or the bathrooms?

A. I would think that's all.

Q. I want to ask you a little bit about your personal experience working. Was there ever a time when you were injured or didn't work during the 2015 growing season?

A. Yes, for about a week and a half.

Q. Why did you not work for that week and a half?

A. I broke a toe when we were doing the picking.

Q. How did you break the toe?

A. A splinter went into my shoe from where they would stack the peppers.

Q. When did you -- let me talk a little bit about the circumstances around the end of your work at Sun Valley. How did you end up or why did you stop working at Sun Valley?

A. What happened is that there were three big storms and this affected three of the fields of peppers, so they said the only thing we would be doing is collecting the plastics from the fields, hoses and spikes.

you first signed it?

A. Yes. It was in Spanish and in English.

Q. What happened to the Spanish part of the document, if you know?

A. We turned them both in to Agustin.

Q. The part of the document that you have here, Agustin has this or you had this?

A. Agustin handed it to us so we would sign it. After signing it, we returned it to Agustin.

Q. Just to go back, where are you located today?

A. In Celaya.

Q. What building is that? Whose office is that?

A. It's the office for immigrants' rights.

Q. Do you know the name of the organization?

A. I think it's CDM. The center for immigrants' rights.

Q. Has anyone from CDM spoken with you about testifying?

A. Yes, that it was going to take place.

Q. Did they talk to you about what you would testify about?

A. No. Just with the attorneys on the U.S.

room?

A. Yes.

Q. Thank you. If we can go back and talk about the kitchen. Did you ever ask to put anything in the refrigerator?

A. No, I never asked.

Q. How about the stove?

A. I did not. Just some coworkers and they were told that they had to buy their stuff.

Q. Did anyone ever tell you that?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever pay money to Russell Marino for meals?

A. No. He only visited us three times during the time we were at the ranch.

Q. Did you pay anyone other than Agustin for meals?

A. No, just him.

Q. Did you ever pay anyone other than Agustin for soda or Monsters?

A. No, he was the one who would collect the money for these things.

Q. That would apply for everything you mentioned before that was sold, right? There was nothing that you bought from anyone else at Sun Valley other than Agustin?

MR. HEYMAN-KANTOR: Objection, confusing.

A. Yes, he was the one who was with us.

Q. Did you ever go to the store? Did Sun Valley provide a van or a bus to take you to the store?

A. No. Only to wash our laundry.

Q. Was there a store nearby?

A. Yes. There was a store close by, five minutes walking.

Q. Did Sun Valley ever take money out of your paycheck to cover food for meals?

A. No.

Q. Was there anyone who did not buy beer, any of the workers who did not buy beer?

A. Yes, there were a few.

Q. So, you said that you came in June. Do you remember what time in June you arrived?

A. Like the first day.

Q. It looks like you left about August 9th. Is that about right?

A. I think so. 8th, the month of August.

Q. Other than that two-month period, do you

A. Around 30.

Q. Did Agustin explain why your coworkers could not use the kitchen?

A. No, he didn't. He just said that to them and that he it was not mandatory for any of us to eat that food or to drink those beverages.

Q. Okay. Now, in response to the questions from Mr. Schulte, you said that -- I'd like to talk a little bit about these trips to the laundry.

INTERPRETER GARCIA: Could you repeat that for me, please?

Q. I'd like to talk a little bit about the trips to the laundry that you were talking about earlier.

Would you always be able to go to the -- how much time would you be given to do the laundry?

A. About an hour and a half or two.

Q. Would you always have time to go to the store to buy food on that trip?

A. No. That would be a different trip on Saturday. We would go to the laundry twice a week.

Q. Did you pay for these trips?

A. Just if we were going to travel farther. For example, the trips to the laundry were paid by Agustin.

Q. And on the trips to the laundry, were you able to purchase food and other items?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you always have time to purchase other items on those laundry trips?

A. Yes. But, of course, we had to do that while the clothes were being washed, while they were in the machine because they would not wait for us if we needed more time.

Q. How much time would you have to go to the store while the laundry was being washed?

A. About 30 minutes or an hour.

MR. HEYMAN-KANTOR: All right. No further questions.

MR. SCHULTE: Just a couple of questions for me.

BY MR. SCHULTE:

Q. Did any of the Marino brothers speak with you about the meals?

A. No, they didn't. None of them. We just arrived and were taken to the dorms to make ourselves home. And it was Agustin the one who told us how the weekly meal plan worked.

MR. HEYMAN-KANTOR: All right. One moment. We need to confer here.

(A brief recess was taken at this time.)

MR. SCHULTE: I'm sorry. If I can go back. I have just have one last one.

BY MR. SCHULTE:

Q. Do you think you're owed any money for your work in 2015?

A. I guess not because at the end of every week they would give us our check and our stub.

MR. SCHULTE: Okay. Thank you. That was all.

MR. HEYMAN-KANTOR: We have no further questions. Thank you very much for your time and both for the interpreter for your help here and to the witness. We wish you a safe journey back home.

INTERPRETER GARCIA: Thank you, sir.

MR. GLICK: I'm going to stop the recording now.

Re: In re Sun Valley Orchards, LLC 2017-TAE-00003

Dear Judge Timlin:

Counsel for the Administrator writes to submit the password for the two encrypted DVDs provided to the Court at the outset of last week's hearing, and to request that the DVDs be filed under seal. The password is SunValley1!

As discussed at the hearing, the DVDs contain video from the six de bene esse depositions taken remotely from Mexico in May 2017. Under questioning from the Administrator's counsel, each witness held his passport up to the camera for identification purposes, and at least one witness did so as well (albeit not at counsel's request) under questioning from Respondent's counsel about the dates of visa stamps. As a result, portions of the DVD clips contain personally identifiable information such as national identification numbers. Accordingly, the Administrator respectfully requests that the DVDs be sealed from public access pursuant to 29 C.F.R. § 18.85(b). The deposition transcripts submitted into evidence by both parties contain substantially the same information as the DVDs — i.e. all the testimony submitted as PX 3, 5, 7, 9, 11, and 13, and RX 14–19 — without the private information captured on camera.

Finally, in the course of packing up after trial, counsel for the Administrator inadvertently took a video cable and a DVD Player manual from the television cart in the courtroom. Counsel is returning those items, enclosed with this letter.

Respectfully submitted,

Jeffrey S. Rogoff
Regional Solicitor

CHERRY HILL, NEW JERSEY

In the Matter of: ADMINISTRATOR, WAGE AND HOUR DIVISION, U.S. DEPARTMENT OF LABOR Plaintiff v. SUN VALLEY ORCHARDS, LLC Respondent	Case No: 2017-TAE-00003

JOINT MOTION TO SET POST-HEARING BRIEFING SCHEDULE

The parties jointly write to respectfully request that the Court set December 15, 2017 as the deadline for the parties to mail their post-hearing briefs to the Court.

At the close of the hearing on July 21, the Court directed the parties to meet and confer regarding a briefing schedule, with the expectation that the parties would propose a deadline of six weeks following receipt of the transcripts — subject to other obligations.

Respondent's counsel received the transcripts on September 21. Respondent is currently engaged in extensive preparations and briefing in a case set for trial the week of November 13, and is presenting at a conference the week of November 27. Other commitments made several months ago will have Respondent's counsel out of the office at the end of October and in early November, as well. As the Court is aware, one of the attorneys representing the Administrator is also representing the Administrator in a case, Volmar Construction, Inc., 2017-DBA-00002, scheduled for a hearing beginning October 25, with depositions and other pre-hearing preparation underway.

In light of the parties' existing obligations, the parties respectfully request until December 15 to submit post-hearing briefs. The parties would serve copies of their briefs and exhibits simultaneously on that date, via overnight mail, to the Court, with copies to opposing counsel.

Dated: September 25, 2017

In the Matter of

ADMINISTRATOR, WAGE AND HOUR DIVISION, U.S. DEPARTMENT OF LABOR Plaintiff

v.

SUN VALLEY ORCHARDS, LLC
Respondent

ORDER GRANTING JOINT MOTION TO SET POST HEARING BRIEFING SCHEDULE

This matter arises under the Immigration and Nationality Act ("INA") Temporary Alien Employment H-2A visa program, 8 U.S.C. Sections 1101(a)(15)(H)(ii)(a); 1188(c), as implemented by regulations at 29 C.F.R. Part 501. A hearing was held on July 18, 19, 20 and, 21, 2017 in Cherry Hill, New Jersey.

At the conclusion of the hearing on July 21, 2017, the undersigned directed the parties to meet and confer regarding a briefing schedule, with the exception that the parties would propose a deadline six weeks following the receipt of the hearing transcripts in this matter. Respondent's counsel received a copy of the hearing transcripts on September 21, 2017.

On September 25, 2017, by facsimile letter, the parties filed a Joint Motion to Set Post Hearing Briefing Schedule. The parties request until December 15, 2017 to submit post hearing briefs, with Respondent citing other commitments made several months ago that will have counsel out of the office at the end of October and early November.

Therefore, having found good cause, I hereby GRANT the parties Joint Motion to Set Post Hearing Briefing Schedule. The parties are directed to submit their post hearing briefs to the undersigned no later than December 15, 2017.

SO ORDERED.

II. Sun Valley's Supervisor Agustin Hernandez 4

III. The Onerous Conditions in Sun Valley's Fields 5

IV. Sun Valley's Substandard Housing 6

V. Sun Valley's Dangerously Deficient Work Transport 8

VI. Sun Valley's Inaccessible Kitchen; Undisclosed, Mandatory Meal Plan; and Company Store 10

A. The Marinos' and Hernandez's Roles Administering the Meal Plan 10

B. Sun Valley's Undisclosed Meal Plan Was Mandatory for Farmworkers 12

C. Hernandez Ran a Company Store That Sold Soft Drinks and Beer to Workers at a Profit and Without a Liquor License 14

VII. Sun Valley's Termination of Workers and of False Resignation Forms 16

A. Sun Valley's Discharge of Nineteen Workers in Early May 16

B. Sun Valley's Discharge of Forty-Four Workers in Early August 19

C. Sun Valley's False and Incomplete Notifications to Government Agencies of Workers' Departure 20

ARGUMENT 21

I. Sun Valley's Job Orders and Undisclosed Meal Plan Violated 20 C.F.R. §§ 655.122(g), (p), and (q). 21

A. Sun Valley Violated § 655.122(g) and (q) by Not Providing the Promised Kitchen Access. 22

B. Because Sun Valley Did Not Provide Employees with Kitchen Access, It Was Responsible for Providing Workers with Meals and Disclosing Any Meal Charges. By Failing to Do So, It Violated § 655.122(g) and (q). 26

C. Because Hernandez Administered the Meal Plan and Charged Workers on Sun Valley's Behalf, i.e. as Its Agent, Sun Valley Also Violated 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(g), (p) and (q) by Not Disclosing These Charges. 27

1. A "Charge" is Legally Equivalent to a "Deduction." 27
2. Because Hernandez Was Sun Valley's Manager and Agent, the Money He Charged Workers Were Effectively Sun Valley Deductions. 29
II. Sun Valley Is Liable for Hernandez's Operation of a Company Store that Illegally Sold Beer and Soft Drinks at a Profit, in Violation of 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(p)(2). 32
III. Sun Valley Owes $209,047.69 in Back Wages to Its Farmworkers for Improperly Charging Them for Meals, Drinks, and Beer. 38
A. Sun Valley Owes Workers Back Wages for the Full Amount of the Improper Charges for Meals and Drinks. 38
B. Under the Mt. Clemens Framework, Which Applies Here, the Administrator Has Met his Burden of Proof as to the Amount of Back Wages Owed 44
1. The Mt. Clemens Framework Applies Here 44
2. The Administrator Has Met His Burden of Proof Under the Mt. Clemens Framework. 45
3. The Administrator's Back Wage Computations for the Hidden Meal Plan Charges Are Fully Supported by the Evidence at Trial and Should be Upheld 46
4. The Administrator's Back Wage Computations for the Sales of Soft Drinks at a Profit Were Also Fully Supported by the Evidence at Trial and Should be Upheld. 48
5. The Administrator's Revised Computations for the Sales of Beer at a Profit and in Violation of State Law Are Fully Supported by the Evidence at Trial and Should Be Upheld. 51
IV. The Court Should Uphold the Administrator's Assessment of $198,450 in Civil Money Penalties (CMPs) for Unlawful Deductions for Undisclosed Meals, and for Drinks Sold at a Profit or in Violation of State Law. 54
V. Sun Valley Violated the Three-Fourths Guarantee By Discharging Twenty-Four Workers Without Paying Compensation Due. 59
A. The Three-Fourths Guarantee and Related Recordkeeping and Notice Requirements 61
B. As Sun Valley Concedes, It Owes a Three-Fourths Guarantee to Four Workers Terminated in August. 63
C. Sun Valley Owes a Three-Fourths Guarantee to the Nineteen Workers Who Involuntarily Departed in May After Sun Valley Discharged Them 63

1. Sun Valley Terminated, or Alternately Constructively Discharged These Workers. 63
2. The Administrator's Back-Wage Computations for the Discharged May Workers Are Reasonable. 68
D. Sun Valley Also Owes a Three-Fourths Guarantee to Jose Islas Larraga. 73
E. A Civil Money Penalty of $1,350 for Sun Valley's Pattern of Three-Fourths Guarantee Violations is Eminently Reasonable 74
VI. Sun Valley Attempted to Coerce Workers to Waive Their Rights by Signing False Forms, Warranting $1,350 in Civil Money Penalties. 75
VII. Sun Valley's Substandard Housing Violated 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(d)(1)(i), and the Administrator's Reasonable $3,600 CMP Assessment Should Be Upheld. 78
A. The Unscreened Bathroom Windows Exposed Farmworkers to Insects 79
B. The Ripped Dormitory Screen Doors Also Exposed Workers to Vermin. 80
C. The Exposed Refuse Bins Exacerbated the Unsanitary Conditions. 82
D. Sun Valley Also Failed to Provide Workers with Adequate Hot Water for Bathing and Handwashing. 82
E. Sun Valley Failed to Provide Clean Mattresses to Two Workers. 83
F. Sun Valley Is Liable for $3,600 in Civil Money Penalties for Its Housing Violations. 84
VIII. Sun Valley's Unsafe Transportation Violated 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(h)(4), Warranting $7,500 in CMPs. 86
A. Unlicensed Drivers 86
B. Broken Lights and Bald Tires 88
C. The Court Should Uphold the Administrator's Reasonable and Considered Decision to Assess $7,500 in CMPs for Sun Valley's Transportation Safety Violations. 89

Sun Valley recruited workers with promises, made under penalty of perjury, of safe and habitable living conditions, free cooking and kitchen facilities, and a guarantee that workers would be allowed to work for at least three fourths of the growing season. Instead, nearly 150 H-2A and domestic workers arrived to work at Sun Valley only to find charges for meals, deplorable housing conditions, and unsafe transportation. They also discovered that the company was further exploiting their vulnerability by allowing its lead manager to sell items to employees at profit on company grounds. When some workers complained about their intolerable working conditions, they were fired and then instructed to sign forms falsely stating that they had resigned for personal reasons. Sun Valley also laid off other workers later in the season, and then lied to government agencies about the reasons for the workers' termination.

Sun Valley's exploitation of its workforce, violation of its work contracts, and false statements to government agencies violated the H-2A program rules in six fundamental ways. Specifically, Sun Valley's undisclosed meal charges and false promises about kitchen access violated 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(g), (p), and (q); its charges for drinks and other items at a profit violated § 655.122(p); its discharge of workers before they had met their three-fourths guarantee violated § 655.122(i); its attempt to have workers waive that guarantee violated 29 C.F.R. § 501.5; its substandard housing violated § 655.122(d)(1); and its unsafe transportation practices and vehicles violated § 655.122(h)(4).

STATEMENT OF FACTS

Sun Valley is one of New Jersey's largest produce growers, with about a dozen fields totaling at least 2,500 acres.[1] PX-15, at 383:23–384:6,[2] see JX-1, at 18.

Sun Valley is owned and operated by four members of the Marino family: brothers Russell Jr. and Joe, their uncle Harry, and their father Russell, Sr. Tr. 787:18–21; ALJ Ex. 1 ¶ 2. Sun Valley's management also includes Agustin Hernandez, who is the lead supervisor of the farmworkers. Tr. 172:9–13, 799:19–23; PX-15, at 425:23–25.

I. Sun Valley's Owners

Russell Jr. oversees Hernandez's direct management of Sun Valley's farmworkers; personally supervises a handful of farmworkers when they work with irrigation; and is involved in Sun Valley's orientation of newly arriving farmworkers. Tr. 715:8–15, 719:6–18, 773:8–9. Joe Marino oversees Sun Valley's sales operations, integrated pest management program, tractor work, and various administrative operations. Tr. 786:24–787:12.

To participate in the H-2A program, Sun Valley filed two forms with the Department of Labor: an Application for Temporary Employment Certification (ETA Form 9142) ("TEC"); and an Agricultural and Food Processing Clearance Order (ETA Form 790). 20 C.F.R. §§ 655.121(a), 655.130(a). This latter document is known as a "job order" because it is used to recruit both H-2A and domestic workers and must describe all "material terms and conditions of employment, including those related to wages, working conditions, and other benefits." Id. § 655.103(b).[3]

Sun Valley filed two job orders to hire 100 H-2A workers in 2015, covering overlapping time periods: April 13, 2015 to October 10, 2015 (JX-1), and June 1, 2015 to October 10, 2015 (JX-3) (collectively, the "Job Orders"). The Job Orders represented that Sun Valley would "furnish free cooking and kitchen facilities to those workers who are entitled to live in the employer['s] housing so that workers may prepare their own meals." See JX-1, at 2, 9 ¶ 14; JX-3, at 43, 50 ¶ 14. In a separate section of the Job Orders, Sun Valley checked a series of boxes identifying whether certain deductions would be made from workers' pay. For the box corresponding to "Meals," Sun Valley checked "No," to indicate that it would not charge for meals. See JX-1, at 4 ¶ 17; JX-3, at 45 ¶ 17. Nowhere in the Job Orders did Sun Valley state that workers would be required to participate in a meal plan or otherwise pay Sun Valley for meals.

Russell Marino, Jr. signed the Job Orders, certifying that the documents "describe[] the actual terms and conditions of the employment being offered by me and contain[ed] all the material terms and conditions of the job." JX-1, at 6 ¶ 27; JX-3, at 47 ¶ 27. In the TECs, Sun Valley certified under penalty of perjury that it would "comply with all applicable Federal, State and local employment-related laws and regulations, including health and safety laws." JX-2, at 30 ¶ 8, 31; JX-4, at 69 ¶ 8, 70; see JX-2, at 40–41, 40 ¶ 3 (contract pursuant to which Sun Valley hired an agent, National Agricultural Consultants, to sign the TECs on Sun Valley's behalf, while Sun Valley retained "personal[] and sole[] responsibility" for all aspects of compliance with the H-2A program); Tr. 713:15–25, 739:23–741:7, 787:14–16, 788:1–2, 795:3–5 (Marinos' involvement in filling out the H-2A paperwork).

The Job Orders and TECs were approved, and Sun Valley used the Job Orders to hire approximately 147 workers during the 2015 growing season. Sun Valley did not enter into separate written contracts with its workers. PX-20, at 816–817 ¶ 3.

II. Sun Valley's Supervisor Agustin Hernandez

Mr. Hernandez supervised the farmworkers and virtually every aspect of the farmworkers' lives and work at Sun Valley. Tr. 172:9–13. As H-2A worker Marco Giovanny Maldonado explained, Hernandez was, as far as the farmworkers were concerned, the "man in charge" at Sun Valley. Tr. 17:22–17:25. Among other duties, Hernandez:

- Helped the Marinos choose how many H-2A workers to hire. Tr. 806:16–807:7;
- Recruited H-2A and domestic farmworkers to come to work at Sun Valley. Tr. 173:24–174:18;
- Oriented Sun Valley's workers when they arrived and told them the rules of the camp. Tr. 174:19–175:24;
- Maintained the workers' housing facilities at Sun Valley. Tr. 172:22–173:20;
- Sold Sun Valley's workers meals and drinks. Tr. 190:24–191:1 (sales of drinks); Tr. 223:25–224:1;
- Oversaw the transportation of workers between Sun Valley's housing and the fields, including selecting the workers that drove those vehicles. Tr. 205:5–15;
- Distributed pay to Sun Valley's workers. Tr. 211:24–212:9; and
- Selected certain workers for termination. Tr. 236:22–237:12.

Not surprisingly, Hernandez was the person to whom workers would bring any questions or complaints. As Sun Valley's owner Joe Marino put it, for a farmworker to go over Mr. Hernandez's head and communicate directly about a workplace issue to one of Sun Valley's owners would be violating the "chain of command." See Tr. 825:4–6; see also Tr. 61:14–22 ("Q. Did you ever say anything to Russell Junior? A. No. If we had a question, we had to go through the man in charge") (Maldonado testimony); id. at 172:14–21.

Mr. Hernandez's relationship with Sun Valley was longstanding and close: having worked there for twenty-seven years, he worked his way into the ranks of Sun Valley's "management" as one of the company's most "respected employee[s]."[4] PX-15, at 425:23–426:2, 498:12–17; Tr. 170:24–171:2. His ties to Sun Valley are so close that he has never held another job, and his son works there as well. Tr. 171:10–16.

III. The Onerous Conditions in Sun Valley's Fields

Sun Valley's workers labored for nearly twelve hours a day, seven days a week, as H-2A workers Marco Giovanny Maldonado, Gustavo Marquez Perez, and Jose Manuel Baltazar Cheguez testified, and Hernandez agreed. Tr. 17:17–19, 90:8–10, 139:5–8, 238:23–239:2, 257:8–9; see PX-2 (summary of payroll records). Hernandez set the hours. Tr. 17:20–25, 90:11–12, 91:2–4, 139:9–15, 257:6–7. At times, Hernandez "threaten[ed]" to "send" H-2A workers "back to Mexico" if they did not work as fast or for as many hours as he demanded, Baltazar Cheguez and Miguel Angel Elizondo testified Tr. 138:11–19, 148:10–16; PX-5, at 125:9–13.

As all of the workers present at the beginning of the season testified, there were no bathroom facilities whatsoever in Sun Valley's fields early in the 2015 growing season. Tr. 18:17–19 (Maldonado), 91:9–10 (Marquez Perez), 139:16–17 (Baltazar Cheguez); see PX-3, at 91:12–23 (Carlos Cervantes Ramirez); PX-9, at 216:5–10 (Hugo Leonel Cinta Tegoma); PX-11, at 274:10–24 (Hector Mishel Garcia Dominguez). Later, Sun Valley brought in some portable facilities but at first installed them improperly, "on their side," leaving them barely usable. Tr. 18:21–23, 76:9–11. Although Wage and Hour observed some portable facilities in the fields they visited in late July, Tr. 548:9–18, other fields remained without any bathroom facilities, and, as Pedro Zavala Almanza testified, they all lacked toilet paper. Tr. 257:12–14, 268:2–6.

[4] Sun Valley deducts taxes from Hernandez's wages during the growing season, and during the off-season, he collects unemployment benefits in connection with his employment at Sun Valley. Tr. 171:19–172:3. Indeed, over the last twenty-seven years, Hernandez has never even applied to work for another employer. Tr. 170:24–171:17.

Despite the grueling workday under the open sky, workers endured periods when Sun Valley provided no drinking water, several workers testified. Tr. 19:5–7 (Maldonado), 91:14–21 (Marquez Perez), 139:21–22 (Baltazar Cheguez); see also PX-3, at 73:5–13 (Cervantes Ramirez); PX-5, at 134:12–15 (Elizondo Soto); PX-9, at 216:11–12 (Cinta Tegoma). Later in the season, when water was provided, it often ran out in the afternoons. Tr. 19:10–12, 91:14–21. Even when water was available, workers remained concerned about the water's taste and cleanliness. Tr. 19:5–9, 262:6–13.

IV. Sun Valley's Substandard Housing

When Sun Valley's workers finally retired at the end of each long day, they did so in a housing facility maintained in meager condition.

Sun Valley's farmworkers lived in a dormitory compound on Sun Valley's property. ALJ Ex. 1 ¶ 19. The building had about five large bedrooms, each full of metal bunk beds to house 20 or more workers. Tr. 29:1–3, 162:22–23; see PX-33, at 1085. As Hernandez admitted, Sun Valley provided only the most basic bedding, thin mattresses, but no pillows, which workers had to buy for themselves. Tr. 199:18–19; see id. at 29:3–7. At least two workers slept on mattresses directly on the floor. Tr. 324:8–9, 329:11–330:3; see PX-28, at 1056. Others apparently caught chicken pox from dirty mattresses, Jose Silva Lopez explained. PX-7, at 170:12–15; see PX-5, at 144:21–24.

Shoddy screen doors barely separated the dorm bedrooms from the rest of the farm. Just outside, Sun Valley placed large garbage cans, left completely uncovered in the open sun. Tr. 324:12–15, 329:1–10; PX-28, at 1053–55. The dorms themselves were infested with flies. As Investigator Perez explained, "[e]ntering each room individually, the first thing you notice was flies actually hitting you in the face." Tr. 323:23–24; see id. at 324:12–15; PX-5, at 145:7–10 (Miguel Angel Elizondo Soto).

The dorm compound's bathroom was in even more neglected condition. As Hernandez admitted, the windows had no screens whatsoever and were left wide open. Tr. 201:25–203:1; see Tr. 324:3–4, 331:1–24; PX-28, at 1046–47. There, too, Wage Hour investigators were "actually hit in the face with flies that were located inside the bathroom" upon entering. Tr. 330:9–11. This infestation existed throughout the season, as Marco Giovanny Maldonado testified. Tr. 30:6–7. The overall conditions were filthy. Tr. 30:2–3, 103:14–17; see also PX-3, at 90:5–23; PX-9, at 226:20–227:2. Structurally, the toilets were unstable. As Gustavo Marquez Perez explained, "they were tilted and they moved." Tr. 103:20–23. Moreover, there was little to no privacy; there were no doors separating the toilets, and some did not even have any separation, let alone a plastic curtain in between. Tr. 29:25–30:2; PX-3, at 90:5–23.

Sun Valley's workers were trapped on the farm for most of 2015, unless they paid nearly an hour's wage for a ride to town from one of their U.S.-based co-workers. Tr. 31:1–9, 102:9–17, 266:3–8. Russell Jr. testified that the "closest town" to the dormitory with a "laundromat," "convenience store," and shopping center in the same complex was in Bridgeton, PX-15, at 450:23–451:8, a driving distance of 21.4 miles from Sun Valley's dormitory at 1321 Route 45.[5] As a result, some farmworkers resorted to washing their clothes by hand in tubs in the bathroom, and hanging their clothes dry. Tr. 30:15–23, 78:2–12, 297:13–24; PX-9, at 228:4–22. Only late [5] This is the distance according to Google Maps, of which the court may take administrative notice. E.g., Access 4 All, Inc. v. Boardwalk Regency Corp., No. 08-3817, 2010 WL 4860565, at *6 n.13 (D.N.J. Nov. 23, 2010); 29 C.F.R. § 18.201. See https://goo.gl/maps/yRKBqVSC6yk (last accessed Dec. 7, 2017) (showing 21.4 mile distance). Sun Valley provided only sporadic transportation to this shopping center, if at all. See infra n.6.

in the season, Sun Valley began providing free transportation to a laundromat. Tr. 295:23–25.[6] Even then, the vehicle that Sun Valley offered only fit 20 of the roughly 100 workers, and only made a single trip each week. Tr. 296:4–9, 296:14–19, 297:20–298:2.

V. Sun Valley's Dangerously Deficient Work Transport

Sun Valley shuttled its workers throughout a dozen fields, dispersed throughout Salem and Gloucester Counties, at a considerable distance from the worker dormitories. JX-2, at 38 (field locations). To cover these distances, Sun Valley used a fleet of worn-out school-buses to transport the workers. Tr. 104:13–17, 377:1–9, 377:15–21, 380:13–381:1; PX-29, at 1057; PX-35, at 1107. Sun Valley's workers rode these dilapidated buses "[a]lmost every day," four or more times a day between 10 and 30 minutes each way. Tr. 31:12–18, 32:9–23, 104:9–12, 204:24–205:1, 205:5–6, 378:22–379:1; see PX-7, at 190:3–191:19 (workers would travel to up to three fields in a single day, and would travel back to the mess hall for lunch).

The school buses were overcrowded and, in many cases, driven by unlicensed drivers. Even though one of the vehicles only had fifteen seats, Wage and Hour Investigators observed twenty-one workers ride inside — many of whom had to squat on coolers in the aisle of the bus. Tr. 382:25–383:8. In 2015, as he had in past years, Hernandez polled Sun Valley's workforce and selected from among them drivers who either had a "Mexican driver's license" or "experience driving." Tr. 205:24–206:3. If workers satisfied either criterion, Hernandez assigned them to drive their coworkers, for up to an hour a day in overcrowded vehicles.

[6] Although Sun Valley asserts that it consistently provided workers with free transportation, its shifting explanations are unsupported, not credible, and internally contradictory. First, Hernandez admitted that Sun Valley did not hire a bus company to transport workers to the laundromat until 2016, or perhaps late in 2015, at the earliest, though Hernandez was "not sure" of the 2015 possibility. Tr. 203:12–204:20. Second, although Hernandez testified that workers used one of Sun Valley's school buses to travel to the laundromat, in 2016, Russell Marino, Jr. admitted that Sun Valley did not provide workers any transportation to the laundromat in 2015. Tr. 501:22–502:11. Moreover, Hernandez testified inconsistently regarding how frequently Sun Valley's school bus was supposedly available to workers. Compare Tr. 235:16–236:8 (twice a week), with id. at 246:13-17 (only a few times the whole season). And he contradicted Russell Jr.'s explanation of the location to which workers were supposedly transported. Compare Tr. 215:23–216:2, with PX-15, at 450:23–451:8.

None of Sun Valley's five drivers in 2015 had valid licenses. Two had no license; two had only Mexican licenses; and a third had only an expired Mexican license. Tr. 383:12–22, 390:17–391:10, 391:23–25, 392:14–18, 393:12–395:7, 398:25–399:11, 401:4–17; PX-30, at 1064, 1066, 1070. Further adding to the danger, they drove at excessive speeds. Tr. 382:11–21.[7]

Moreover, three of the vehicles each had a worn-out tire, undermining the vehicles' traction and leaving them vulnerable to skidding off the road. Tr. 588:3–6, 607:9–11, 608:8–13; PX-29, at 1058–1063. These tires had "almost no tread" whatsoever in certain portions of the tire — specifically, the portions that made contact with the road — leaving those tires imbalanced. Tr. 403:14–404:2, 588:22–589:2; see Tr. 403:12–13, 537:21–25, 586:16–17, 587:15–24 (discussing PX-29, at 1062), 588:7–21 (discussing PX-29, at 1063). Indeed, cracks in the tread are visible in several of the photographs. See PX-29, at 1058, 1062.

Sun Valley also took steps to "hid[e]" further safety defects from the Wage and Hour Division, Dario Morales Acosta testified. PX-13, at 349:18–351:17. Hernandez removed those vehicles from operation after the Wage and Hour Investigators arrived, because he knew "he was going to be reprimanded" for the vehicles, which were "not in appropriate conditions to transport people." Id. at 349:25–350:4. Specifically, because of holes in the floor of one of the buses, the workers "could actually see the highway when" they were riding. Id. at 350:5–16. In addition, "[t]he side windows were broken. The seats were torn. The floor was open in some areas and the tires were in bad condition." Id. at 350:9–11. Since Wage and Hour never had an opportunity to inspect these vehicles, no citations were issued related to those conditions. Tr. 406:21–407:2.

VI. Sun Valley's Inaccessible Kitchen; Undisclosed, Mandatory Meal Plan; and Company Store

In its Job Orders, Sun Valley promised to not make any deductions for any meals provided to workers, and promised to "furnish free cooking and kitchen facilities . . . so that workers may prepare their own meals. Workers will buy their own groceries." See JX-1, at 2, 4, 9 (¶ 14); JX-3, at 43, 50.

The kitchen that Sun Valley promised to furnish to workers is located on Sun Valley's property, a few paces from the dormitory. Tr. 319:21–323:16; PX-33, at 1085–1089. As Russell Jr. and Hernandez admitted, Sun Valley's kitchen was not large enough to allow for Sun Valley's large workforce to cook its own meals, see Tr. 175:22–176:13, 743:25–744:8, particularly after workers arrived back at the dormitory around the same times to eat lunch and dinner during and after 12-hour shifts in the fields, see id. at 175:22–176:6 (Hernandez testimony), 804:2–4 (Joseph Marino); see PX-7, at 188:23–189:2–6; PX-15, at 447:10–14.

A. The Marinos' and Hernandez's Roles Administering the Meal Plan

Long before Sun Valley first participated in the H-2A program, Sun Valley improvised a workaround to the problem of its small kitchen: the company hired cooks to provide workers with meals (for a fee) so that Sun Valley's many farmworkers would have some way to eat in their otherwise geographically isolated location. Tr. 252:14–23 (Hernandez testifying about changes to the meal plan through the years); id. at 808:4–5 (Joe Marino: "there's always been a food program"). This arrangement at Sun Valley has existed for decades. Tr. 209:23–210:14. In these pre-H-2A years, Sun Valley hired and paid cooks, and Hernandez's role was to manage the other aspects of the kitchen, including the collection of a fee from workers. Tr. 252:14–23. The arrangement has caused Sun Valley trouble in the past: in 2013, Wage Hour assessed fines and back wages for Sun Valley's having sold these meals and drinks at inflated prices; Sun Valley paid these fines and back wages. Tr. 874:20–875:3; RX-23, at 325.

In preparation for the 2015 growing season, Russell Jr. decided that Hernandez would continue charging workers for meals, but that Hernandez himself would be in charge of paying the cooks. Tr. 176:24–177:10. Sun Valley continued paying one of its workers to "help the cooks with heavy lifting if they have to bring a lot of supplies in, you know, load the freezers up, things like that," Russell Jr. testified. Tr. 777:2–8.

Although in 2015 the Marinos gave Hernandez a larger role in managing the kitchen and providing the meal plan, Sun Valley's owners continued to have a critical role in both the kitchen and the meal plan. For example, the Marinos gave Hernandez instructions about the amounts of payments to collect from workers, and gave him guidance on certain records he should maintain. Tr. 186:25–187:2, 738:10–12, 742:22–743:8, 808:8. Sun Valley also paid the electricity and gas bills and provided appliances for the kitchen. See ALJ Ex. 1 ¶ 21; Tr. 793:3–5. The company also continued to pay for any kitchen repairs and replacement of major appliances such as a commercial stove and chest freezer. Tr. 777:20–778:17. In short, other than adding to Hernandez's responsibilities the obligation to pay the cooks himself, Sun Valley made no changes in 2015 in the way it had long exercised control of its kitchen. E.g., Tr. 791:12–792:16.

To help Hernandez enforce the meal plan program, Sun Valley's payroll office provided him with company payroll sheets, with each employee's name listed, so that employees would sign when they paid for meals. PX-17-2, at 799–800 (Sun Valley meal plan printout); Tr. 181:10–183:3. These printouts had the header "Sun Valley Orchards LLC" at the top. PX-17-2, at 799–800. And a Sun Valley owner followed up with Mr. Hernandez during the season to ensure that he was creating and maintaining these records. Tr. 186:25–187:2, 187:7–10.

Mr. Hernandez comingled the money employees paid him for meals with money he obtained from selling workers drinks and other items. Tr. 250:11–251:4 ("Q. And so sometimes you put the money from the meals and the drinks together? A. Yes, because everything is together. They pay everything together, so yes."). He did not maintain records of this comingling, nor did he maintain any balance sheet showing how much he collected for meals and how much of those funds he had spent on meal expenses. Tr. 250:11–251:4, 463:7–14.

B. Sun Valley's Undisclosed Meal Plan Was Mandatory for Farmworkers

Given workers' geographic isolation and lack of transportation to procure food,[8] workers had little choice but to participate in Sun Valley's meal plan. All of Sun Valley's 148 farmworkers participated in Sun Valley's meal plan for at least some of the season: 135 workers paid meal charges for the entire season; four workers paid for the plan until mid-way through the season when they acquired a hot plate and started heating canned food in a dangerous arrangement in the worker dormitory bedrooms; and nine workers received meals for free because they were friends or family of Mr. Hernandez's. See Tr. 444:6–445:5, 804:8–9, 967:13–

[8] Sun Valley also broke its promises in the Job Orders that it would "offer to provide" weekly "free transportation to assure workers access to the closest store where they can purchase groceries," JX-1, at 2 ¶ 14; JX-3, at ¶ 14. See Tr. 203:12–17 (transportation was provided only late in the season, if at all), 27:20–28:8 (workers had to pay $10 for rides to any store), 56:15–17 (no "opportunity provided by Sun Valley" to stores), 101:5–102:20, 266:3-9; PX-3, at 86:21–87:21. As for the limited rides that Sun Valley provided to some workers to a laundromat late in the 2015 season, those rides did not provide meaningful access to a grocery store. PX-7, at 186:17–19, 192:5–10 (Agustin would "only drive [workers] to the laundry"). See also supra n. 6.

22; ALJ Ex. 1 ¶ 22; Tr. 263:24–264:18; PX-13, at 358:25–359:22 (testimony by Zavala Almanza and Morales Acosta that workers had to buy a hot plate to cook in the dorm); PX-2.[9]

So many workers participated in Sun Valley's meal plan because, as Hernandez and his wife, cook Elia Pinon admitted, workers "cannot cook their own meals in the kitchen." Tr. 176:4–6; see PX-19, at 809 ("Workers are not allowed to enter the kitchen to cook their own meals."). "If a worker didn't want to participate in the meal plan, their options were to eat outside or to order a delivery meal," Hernandez admitted. Tr. 176:10–13.

Indeed, Hernandez took further steps to ensure that workers would pay into the meal plan, sending away food trucks that tried to sell to workers, retaliating against the few workers who managed to cook on a hot plate in their dorm room, apparently regretting his decision to grant such permission to those few workers. For example, H-2A employee Baltazar Cheguez testified that "if a different truck would drive into the fields to sell food or beverages to us, he would tell them to go away. We could only purchase from him." Tr. 162:8–11. Similarly, Zavala Almanza testified that once Hernandez "realized that everyone would want" to cook in the dorm, he "became upset." Tr. 265:2–266:2.

[9] Sun Valley employed 96 H-2A workers and 52 domestic workers plus Agustin Hernandez. PX-2. Although there is a "51" next to the final domestic worker on page PX-2 page 61, this number does not include Agustin Hernandez's son Brian Hernandez, a domestic worker for whom no back wages or civil money penalties were calculated, see Tr. 448:18–19, 804:8–9, but whose hours of work are listed on pages 49–50 of PX-2.

The workers who received meals without charge for the entire season (friends or relatives of Agustin Hernandez or his wife Elia Pinon) were Felix Arturo Hernandez (PX-2, at 39); Brian H. Hernandez (p. 49); Jose L. Pinon (p. 42); Omar Pinon Roque (p. 37); Armando Guillen Segovia (p. 26); Armando Rodriguez Jaimes (p. 10); Baltazar Arias (p. 33); Frediberto Villasenor (p. 34); Octavio Vargas Vargas (p. 38). (All pages numbers refer to PX-2.) The H-2A workers who stopped participating in the meal plan mid-season were Pedro Zavala Almanza (p. 25); Gustavo Cuellar Romero (p. 22); Miguel A Elizondo Soto (p. 25); and Rodrigo Raya Tapia (p. 25).

C. Hernandez Ran a Company Store That Sold Soft Drinks and Beer to Workers at a Profit and Without a Liquor License

Inside Sun Valley's kitchen, on Sun Valley's property, was a store from which Hernandez sold drinks, instant soup, cigarettes, soap, toilet paper, snacks, protective work gloves, and other items to farmworkers. Tr. 358:8–359:16; PX-32, at 1075–76; see PX-7, at 184:10–185:10. Sun Valley's store was open selling these drinks and other items to workers during lunch and dinner, and after dinner in the evenings. Tr. 21:22–22:12, 194:17–23. In addition, Hernandez sold soft drinks from the store while he supervised workers in the fields. See, e.g., Tr. 22:16–22, 195:9–11.

All ten worker witnesses unanimously testified that they, like all workers at Sun Valley, purchased soft drinks such as sodas and energy drinks from Hernandez in the fields, or at the company store, several times a day. See infra Appendix A. Workers purchased, among other things, several types of soda, Gatorade, and energy drinks such as Monster. See, e.g., Tr. 139:22; PX-7, at 176:7–177:4. Hernandez also sold a rehydration beverage — essentially a "saline solution" — for five dollars, PX-7, at 176:13–14, 177:5–6, presumably to counter the dehydration that some workers suffered, e.g., PX-5, at 136:4–6.[10] He also sold bottled water. Tr. 141:20–22, 142:9–10; PX-3, at 74: 20–21.

All ten workers who testified in this case also testified that the company store sold beer. See infra Appendix B; see also Tr. 97:17–21, 145:7. Their testimony is corroborated by the photographs of an entire refrigerator in Sun Valley's kitchen filled with beer organized by brand, and mounds of empty beer cans strewn over Sun Valley's property. See PX-32, at 1077, 1079; PX-33, at 1094–1102; Tr. 359:12–360:10, 374:23–376:8. Hernandez sold this beer even though neither he nor Sun Valley had a license to do so; Sun Valley and Hernandez have admitted that they lacked a license. PX-20, at 823 ¶ 21; PX-20, at 828 ¶ 5.

[10] At Jose Silva Lopez's deposition, the interpreter initially translated the Spanish word "suero" as "high sugar drink," before clarifying that the "correct translation [of suero] . . . would be saline solution." PX-7, at 177:5–20; see PX-8 (Silva Lopez Dep. video), at 32:17–32:32 (time stamp). Suero was one of the drinks that Hernandez repeatedly purchased for re-sale to workers. PX-36, at 1119 (line 12 of receipt on right), 1137 (line 2), 1138 (line 7), 1141 (line 1); Tr. 365:2–367:11. PX-36 are limited receipts that Hernandez provided the Administrator, Tr. 365:2-11, which with few exceptions show Hernandez's food but not beverage purchases.

Hernandez sold these soft drinks and beer to workers at a considerable profit. Indeed, even according to Hernandez's own testimony, he made a profit off of every soft drink he sold. For example, based on his own estimates of the prices he paid for 24-packs and the prices he re-sold individual drinks for, he made 32¢ off of each can of Red Bull; 21¢ or 42¢ off each can of soda; and 17¢ off each Monster. See Tr. 195:11–196:8. Given how many drinks workers were purchasing a day, see infra Appendix A, Hernandez earned quite a large profit from soft drink sales over the course of the growing season.

Hernandez did not maintain records of his beer sales, and never told Wage Hour how much he paid for the beer he resold or where he bought it — in fact he denied re-selling it. Tr. 450:20–23. However, all of the evidence submitted at trial shows that Hernandez earned a significant profit from sales of beer, on the order of $1.30 per beer. Tr. 189:8–11 (Hernandez bought drinks at the wholesaler Sam's Club); PX-32, at 1077 (Coors Light for sale at Sun Valley); PX-27, at 1044 (wholesale price of Coors Light: 70¢); Tr. 374:8–11; PX-5, at 132:13–14 (Miguel Angel Elizondo Soto: $2 for many brands); PX-7, at 181:10–11 (Jose Silva Lopez: $2 per beer); PX-13, at 345:19–20 (Dario Morales Acosta: "$12 U.S. per six-pack" of beer).

VII. Sun Valley's Termination of Workers and False Resignation Forms

A. Sun Valley's Discharge of Nineteen Workers in Early May

After enduring a host of intolerable conditions for about two weeks, and with their complaints ignored by Hernandez, a group of nineteen workers sought to raise their concerns with Russell Jr. Rather than hearing their grievances, he fired them on the spot.

The workers first presented their concerns over their living and working conditions, such as a lack of drinking water, to Hernandez, their only point of contact with Sun Valley's management. Tr. 60:21–61:17, 116:25–117:3, 172:18–21. When the intolerable conditions continued unabated, they asked Hernandez for an opportunity to speak directly with Russell Jr. Tr. 218:11–14. Marco Giovanny Maldonado, Gustavo Marquez Perez, and Jose Manuel Baltazar Cheguez testified that among the workers' collective concerns were their living conditions, the lack of accessible kitchen facilities, no transportation to a laundromat or a store, confusion about the basis of their pay,[11] and the "way in which [they] were treated by" Hernandez. Tr. 33:23–34:6, 90:16–91:1, 106:18–107:4, 122:7–13, 147:9–15. Perhaps because Hernandez sought to deflect blame over the workers' complaints about their mistreatment, Hernandez apparently conveyed the false message to Russell Jr. that the workers simply did not want to work. Tr. 147:18–21, 148:2–4, 766:5–14.

Russell Jr. soon arrived at the worker housing compound "very angry, screaming." Tr. 35:4–5, 21–22 (Maldonado testimony). As Marquez Perez testified, Mr. Marino was "very upset, cursing." Tr. 107:8–10; see also PX-3, at 98:19–23 (Carlos Cervantes Ramirez: Marino was [11] This confusion was understandable, to say the least, given that Sun Valley's Job Orders did not disclose that the piece rate was based on the work performance of a large group of workers as a whole, rather than individually; and also warned that Sun Valley unilaterally "reserve[d] the right to completely do away with the piece rate all together," apparently without notice to the workers. Compare Tr. 252:1–13, 709:1–18 (group-based piece rate), with JX-1, at 11–12 ¶ 17 (Job Order).

"yelling" and "pushed" a worker); PX-11, at 292:11–18 (Hector Mishel Garcia Dominguez: "instead of asking us what is going on or how we felt . . . he was very upset and he was aggressive and he was shouting"). As Russell Jr. admitted, he already had his mind made up that the workers did not want to continue working and had demanded to return home. Tr. 766:5–14. Whether because of his anger, his mistaken belief that he already understood the situation, or because of translation or language barriers, he did not afford the workers the opportunity to explain their complaints; the "opportunity didn't come." Tr. 36:3–5, 107:5–7.

Instead, Russell Jr. fired the workers right then, even though they wanted to stay and keep working. As Marco Giovanny Maldonado explained, Russell Jr. "said [they] should leave." Tr. 39:8–10. In Gustavo Marquez Perez's words, Russell Jr. "said that [we] weren't necessary, that he didn't need [us], and there were other people with visas." Tr. 107:18–20. The workers understood clearly that there was no "opportunity to keep working at Sun Valley after that meeting." Tr. 125:11–13, 125:21–23, 129:1–12; id. at 65:16–17, 80:24–81:3 (Maldonado "understood that [they] needed to leave" because Russell Jr. "practically fired" the whole group). See also PX-9, at 232:20–21, 233:12–15, 258:17–23 (Cinta Tegoma: Russell Jr. instructed workers to "go back to Mexico" because they "were lazy" and "didn't like to work"; no "option of staying"); PX-11, at 305:6–8 (Garcia Dominguez: Russell Jr. had "decided that [they] were not worth[y] for the job"); PX-3, at 101:16 (Cervantes Ramirez: Russell Jr. told the workers that they "had been fired").[12]

[12] Workers' testimony that they wanted to keep working is overwhelming:

- Maldonado: the workers' "intention was to continue working." "[W]e weren't going to stop working" and did not say otherwise. "We just wanted to talk to him about things that we were unhappy about" and did not want to leave. Tr. 64:23-24; see id. at 40:18–19.

After the short meeting, Russell Jr. left the dormitory compound and "started the process of letting the guys go," as he put the point. Tr. 768:9–11. After consulting with Sun Valley's H-2A agent, Mr. Marino prepared to distribute forms falsely memorializing that the workers were resigning. E.g., JX-8, at 89 ("I do hereby resign my job."); Tr. 732:10–12, 768:24–769:4; see ALJ Ex. 1 ¶¶ 30, 33. He signed his name as "witness," and dated the forms, before even distributing the forms. Tr. 80:8–9, 80:13–15, 149:13–14; see id. at 128:23–24.

Russell Jr. and Agustin brought those forms back to the worker housing area. Tr. 83:10–13, 108:7–11, 149:13–14, 225:23–25, 732:15–16, 768:24–769:1, 769:13–20. Together, Russell Jr. and Agustin ensured that the nineteen workers all filled out the forms, explaining that the forms were mandatory to receive transportation to Mexico, "in order for [the workers] not to have any problems," and to prevent "caus[ing] . . . trouble to the company," as Cheguez Baltazar testified. Tr. 149:4–6; see Tr. 108:18–19, 769:21–23; PX-15, at 464:6–8 (Russell Jr.) ("Q: And did you tell the workers they had to fill out these forms? A. Well, it's required."); PX-11, at 304:18–305:2; PX-9, at 233:18–234:8 (signing was "the only option" for workers to receive return transportation to Mexico).

- Marquez Perez: "willing to remain at Sun Valley working," even "bent over" in the fields, Tr. 125:6–10.
- Cheguez Baltazar: "Every one of us wanted to stay. We all wanted to stay." Tr. 151:6–7; see id. at 150:20–25 ("of course" willing to stay to honor the contract).
- Cinta Tegoma: workers asked Russell Jr. to reconsider their termination "because [they] were there for work" and wanted to continue, but Russell Jr. said "no." PX-9, at 259:2–3.
- Garcia Dominguez: willing to remain at Sun Valley and continue cutting asparagus for at least 40 hours a week, the amount listed in the Job Order. PX-11, at 324:20–325:3.
- Cervantes Ramirez: willing to "stay[] at Sun Valley and ke[ep] picking asparagus." PX-3, at 112:24–113:3.

The forms presented workers with a handful of ways to document their supposed voluntary resignation. In light of the inapposite and false choices, some workers attempted to pick the least inaccurate option. For example, Marco Giovanny Maldonado indicated that he was leaving "because a family member is sick or injured or has died," because he did not want to choose an option that would have inaccurately "indicated that [he] didn't want to work or [he] didn't like the work," because "that's not why [he] was leaving." Tr. 85:10–12; see JX-8, at 91.

Others followed Sun Valley's advice in selecting which boxes to choose. Russell Jr. admitted that he personally guided some workers in how to fill out the form. Tr. 769:21–23, 781:2–8. Baltazar Cheguez checked the same box as Maldonado because, as Hernandez had translated on Russell Jr.'s behalf, "Mr. Russell had said that in order for [them] not to have any problems, [they] needed to sign a paper . . . that we were returning because a family member had had an accident and that was for us not to be in trouble and for him also not to get in trouble." Tr. 149:4–9, 155:15–19; JX-8, at 92. Russell Jr. and Hernandez told yet other workers that they should indicate they "need[ed] to return" to their "home country because of personal reasons." Tr. 109:25–110:15; e.g., JX-8, at 104 (Marquez Perez).[13]

Once they signed the forms, Sun Valley did not give the nineteen workers any more work hours. See ALJ Ex. 1 ¶¶ 27, 35. They returned to Mexico shortly afterwards.

B. Sun Valley's Discharge of Forty-Four Workers in Early August

Sun Valley terminated the second group of workers in August, after a crop failure left too many workers on the payroll for the harvest that remained. Tr. 207:11–14, 746:15–21; ALJ Ex. 1

[13] Ten of the nineteen workers indicated that they had a sick or injured family member. See JX-8, at 89–95, 102, 106, 107; see also PX-3-1, at 115 (Spanish portion corresponding to JX-8, at 94). Of eight other workers who said they needed to leave for personal reasons, three had initially checked the "sick or injured box." JX-8, at 98–100. The final worker seems to have checked both boxes. See id. at 97.

¶ 29. Russell Jr. and Hernandez were both involved in selecting the 44 specific workers to let go, and Hernandez had the final say. Tr. 207:25–208:8, 746:22–24. In exercising his discretion, Hernandez singled out six or seven workers whom he "felt were the troublemakers" on the farm. Tr. 237:10–12. He designated them as "troublemakers" because they raised complaints about Hernandez and the food, among other issues. Tr. 208:7–18, 237:19–22. Nevertheless, Sun Valley has now conceded that it terminated all 44 of the workers in August "without cause." Tr. 754:23–24; see id. at 748:11–14.

Russell Jr. and Hernandez then proceeded to give those 44 workers the same departure forms that the May-terminated workers had signed. Tr. 272:3–10, 274:9–12, 747:3–8; PX-13, at 356:4–6; PX-13-1, at 367; PX-42; see ALJ Ex. 1 ¶¶ 30–32, 34. As in May, the form gave the workers no option to indicate that they had been laid off. See JX-9, at 152; ALJ Ex. 1 ¶ 34. Instead, the forms falsely memorialized that the workers had "resign[ed their] job[s]." Tr. 747:17–20; JX-9, at 152; ALJ Ex. 1 ¶ 34. Nonetheless, Russell Jr. and Hernandez required that the workers sign that inaccurate form; "there was no other choice." Tr. 274:9–12, 21–23. Russell Jr. convinced the workers to do so by explaining that "it was necessary . . . to sign this document so [they] could return to Mexico," as Morales Acosta testified. PX-13, at 357:4–6. Hernandez indicated the specific box that all the workers should sign, Tr. 279:2–7; PX-13, at 357:11–18, namely that the workers were "resign[ing]" because "[w]ork has slowed down, and I would like to return home." E.g., JX-8, at 108–151; PX-42. In fact, the workers had not been offered additional work and did not want to leave, Zavala Almanza testified. Tr. 280:17–24.

C. Sun Valley's False and Incomplete Notifications to Government Agencies of Workers' Departure

Consistent with the false information that the workers filled out at Sun Valley's direction, Sun Valley, through its agent National Agricultural Consultants, sent false notifications to government agencies regarding the groups of workers whose employment ended, in both May and August. These e-mails notified federal government agencies that the workers left voluntarily, rather than after being terminated. PX-39, at 1191–95, 1198–1200; Tr. 409:5–12, 748:20–24, 753:12–754:2; cf. Tr. 754:23–24. However, Sun Valley never sent separate notice that a worked named Jose Islas Larraga stopped working as of June 9, 2015, four months before the end of the Job Order. Tr. 419:16–22, 436:4–10, 558:9–561:10; see ALJ Ex. 1 ¶ 28 (Islas Larraga last worked June 9, 2015).

ARGUMENT

I. Sun Valley's Job Orders and Undisclosed Meal Plan Violated 20 C.F.R. §§ 655.122(g), (p), and (q).

H-2A employers must arrange for their farmworkers to have a way to eat meals, within certain parameters. 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(g). This requirement stems from H-2A workers' extreme vulnerability and dependence on their employer: H-2A workers, such as the ones who worked for Sun Valley, leave their home country and travel hundreds or thousands of miles to rural locations in the United States where they often do not speak the language, where they live on the farm and depend on their employer for transportation and access to the outside world. See, e.g., Rivero v. Montgomery Cnty., No. 16-1186, 2017 WL 1684618, at *14 n.15 (D. Md. May 3, 2017). Accordingly, the H-2A employer is responsible for ensuring that workers receive not only housing, but also access to food. See 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(d), (g); Garcia-Celestino v. Ruiz Harvesting, Inc., 843 F.3d 1276, 1285 (11th Cir. 2016).

The regulations provide an H-2A employer with two options for how it can arrange for its employees to eat. 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(g). It can either:

(1) "provide each worker with three meals a day," and in that instance, state in the job order "the charge, if any, to the worker for such meals"; or

(2) "furnish free and convenient cooking and kitchen facilities to the workers that will enable the workers to prepare their own meals."

20 C.F.R. § 655.122(g).

The meal charge disclosure requirement is so crucial to the integrity of the H-2A program that related provisions appear throughout the regulations. In particular, 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(p)(1) reiterates that the employer's "job offer must specify all deductions not required by law which the employer will make from the worker's paycheck," such as deductions for meals. Subsection (q) goes on to reiterate the disclosure requirement: an H-2A employer must provide workers with a copy of the work contract (here, the job offer, since Sun Valley never entered into a separate written work contract with its workers, see 20 C.F.R. § 655.103; PX-20, at 816–817 ¶ 3), when workers apply for an H-2A visa and when domestic workers arrive at the job. Id. § 655.122(q). "At a minimum, the work contract must contain all of the provisions required by" § 655.122, including disclosure of any meals deductions. Id.

Here, Sun Valley violated § 655.122(g), (p)(1), and (q), by neither providing adequate kitchen access nor properly disclosing the meal plan, and then constructively and impermissibly deducting amounts from workers' pay, each week throughout the 2015 growing season. Accordingly, for each of these violations, Sun Valley is independently liable for back wages in the amount of the meal charges.

A. Sun Valley Violated § 655.122(g) and (q) by Not Providing the Promised Kitchen Access.

In its Job Orders, Sun Valley promised that it would comply with its duty to provide workers with a way to eat meals by assuring workers (and government agencies) that it would furnish workers with free cooking and kitchen facilities, and that there would be no deductions from workers' wages for meal charges. See JX-1 at 2, 9 ¶ 14; JX-3, at 43, 50 ¶ 14. Sun Valley's promise to furnish kitchen access formed part of its contract with workers and was binding on Sun Valley. See 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(g), (q).

Sun Valley plainly failed to live up to its promise to provide workers with access to cooking and kitchen facilities to prepare their own meals. See Tr. 176:4–13, 263:24–264:3; PX-13, at 339:5–340:4; PX-7, at 173:21–174:13. Indeed, Hernandez, the man in charge of the kitchen at Sun Valley, testified that workers could not cook their own meals in the kitchen because it was too small. Tr. 175:22–176:13. As his wife Elia Pinon, who worked in the Sun Valley kitchen explained in her signed statement, "Workers are not allowed to enter the kitchen to cook their own meals." PX-19, at 809.

And all of the workers knew that cooking one's own meals in the kitchen was forbidden. For example, Gustavo Marquez Perez testified that "from the beginning they said the food was sold, you can't just go into the kitchen," and that the kitchen would be locked in the evenings when it wasn't in use. Tr. 92:19–95:3; see also PX-13, at 339:5–340:4 (Dario Morales Acosta). As Miguel Angel Elizondo Soto testified, some employees were told directly that they couldn't use the kitchen: "A few coworkers and I asked . . . once if we could go into the kitchen and fix us our dinner and [Hernandez] said no because that's where he has his store and we should not go into the kitchen." PX-5, at 127:12–17. Others, such as Hector Mishel Garcia Dominguez just figured out that there was no room for workers to prepare their own meals alongside the kitchen staff. PX-11, at 321:9–11 ("we couldn't use the kitchen to cook because the kitchen was always being used by somebody else"). As Jose Silva Lopez underscored, besides the meal plan, "there was no other choice . . . we didn't have another way to fix our meals" PX-7, at 174:11–13.[14]

[14] At trial, counsel for Sun Valley suggested that if the workers had banned together and asked Hernandez to be allowed to cook in shifts, Hernandez might have acceded to such a request. Tr.

Perhaps the most compelling evidence that workers had no access to the kitchen is that the few workers who managed to cook their own meals did so not in the kitchen but on a hot plate that they set up in their dormitory bedroom and bought with their own money. PX-34, at 1103–1106; Tr. 263:24–264:18. Because these workers could not store food in the kitchen refrigerators, all they could cook was canned food stored under the bed. No worker would voluntarily choose such an arrangement if he had access to proper kitchen facilities. Tr. 176:14–20; PX-5, at 126:21–24 (Miguel Angel Elizondo Soto testifying about the makeshift dormitory stove); Tr. 263:24–264:3, 302:8–13 (Zavala Almanza testifying that there was no way for workers to keep food cold, and that Hernandez told him that he should buy a hot plate because he could not cook in the kitchen).

Sun Valley may argue that because its owners personally never explicitly prohibited the farmworkers from preparing their own meals, it complied with § 655.122(g) regardless of whether workers in fact could access the kitchen. See Resp't's Summary Decision Mot. at 20. But an employer who promises to "furnish" cooking and kitchen facilities under § 655.122(g) must actually fulfill that promise, i.e. ensure that the workers actually receive the promised "free and convenient cooking and kitchen facilities." 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(g). This is especially so where, as here, Sun Valley displaced workers from the kitchen by putting Hernandez in charge and telling him he could and should continue to charge workers for meals. Tr. 176:23–177:10.

214:11–13. Although perhaps some kind of strike or other concerted effort might have achieved results, this is plainly not what the regulations require. 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(g). Nor is such an arrangement plausible given the large size of Sun Valley's workforce, the required 12-hour work shifts that made it impossible for workers to have time to cook in turns, and the lack of access to a grocery store. See, e.g., Tr. 774:6–8 (kitchen not big enough for many workers to cook simultaneously), 214:14–18 (same), 175:22–176:6, 804:2–4; PX-7, at 188:23–1896; PX-15, at 447:10–14.

Nor would Sun Valley's strained reading about the adequacy of merely not expressly prohibiting food preparation by workers comply with the plain text of § 655.122(g), which requires that the employer "furnish" cooking and kitchen facilities that are not only "convenient" but also "enable the workers to prepare their own meals." It is axiomatic that to "enable" means "'to make possible, practical, or easy.'" Murphy v. Millennium Radio Grp., No. 08-1743, 2015 WL 419884, at *5 (D.N.J. Jan. 30, 2015) (quoting Webster's Third New International Dictionary 745 (1986)). As Hernandez admitted, workers had "very little" access to the refrigerators, which had "no extra room" for workers to store "anything." Tr. 176:14–22. Since it was not at all "possible," much less "practical," "easy," or "convenient," for workers to use the kitchen for meal preparation, Sun Valley's argument would render the protections of § 655.122(g) meaningless to its workforce. See also Reed v. Chase Home Fin., LLC, 893 F. Supp. 2d 1250, 1257 (S.D. Ala. 2012) ("Something is 'convenient' if it is '[a]ppropriate or favorable to one's comfort, purpose, or needs.'" (quoting Webster's New College Dictionary 252 (3d ed. 2008)).

Accordingly, Sun Valley violated its Job Orders and 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(g) and (q) by failing to provide the promised cooking and kitchen facilities to its workers, and never providing workers with a work contract that accurately disclosed that workers would have no kitchen access but rather would have to participate in and pay for a meal plan. As a direct result of these violations, workers had no real choice but to participate in the meal plan and pay Hernandez the $75–80 weekly meal fee. See supra; ALJ Ex. 1 ¶ 22.[15] [15] In addition, Sun Valley's failure to provide kitchen access directly caused workers to incur other costs such as having to purchase a hot plate for preparing meager canned food. The Administrator is not seeking back wages for such costs.

B. Because Sun Valley Did Not Provide Employees with Kitchen Access, It Was Responsible for Providing Workers with Meals and Disclosing Any Meal Charges. By Failing to Do So, It Violated § 655.122(g) and (q).

Because Sun Valley did not provide its workers with kitchen access, it was responsible for providing meals and disclosing any meal charges in advance. By failing to disclose the $75 to $80 weekly charge in the Job Orders, and by charging workers that weekly fee, Respondent violated § 655.122(g), (p)(1), and (q).

Russell Jr. testified that Sun Valley provided workers with three meals a day through its supervisor Agustin Hernandez. ALJ Ex. 1 ¶ 22; PX-15 at 454:13–15 (referring to the Sun Valley meal plan at issue here as "the meal plan that I provide, that Sun Valley Orchards offers the men on behalf of Sun Valley Orchards"). But Sun Valley did not disclose in advance the meal charges that workers would have to pay, in violation of § 655.122(g). Sun Valley accordingly also violated § 655.122(q), because the Job Offers omitted one of the "provisions required" by § 655.122(g), namely disclosure of the meal charges. As discussed below, Hernandez was operating Sun Valley's kitchen as Sun Valley's agent and collected workers' money in that capacity. But even assuming, as Sun Valley asserts, that Hernandez was instead operating the meal plan as a side business in his private and individual capacity, see Respondent's Summary Decision Mot. at 21–24, Sun Valley as the H-2A employer was still responsible for disclosing the meal charges. 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(g), (q). Any other reading would eviscerate the regulation's disclosure requirement.[16] If an employer chooses to forgo providing the requisite free kitchen access, then however it may choose to discharge its obligation to "provide each [16] Indeed, such a reading would allow an H-2A employer to escape liability for violating many of the H-2A program's other requirements, such as the prohibitions on excessive meal charges (§ 655.173(a)) and charges that include a profit (§ 655.122(p)(2)), and the obligation to provide H-2A workers free housing (§ 655.122(d)), simply by turning over the kitchen or housing to a manager and allowing him to charge workers.

worker with three meals a day," it must disclose the charges.

In any event, even Sun Valley acknowledges that it was responsible for the meal plan, for ensuring that its charges for the meals fell under the regulatory maximum, see § 655.122(g) (incorporating by reference § 655.173)), and for disclosing meal charges, see Tr. 763:5–9 (Russell Jr.: "Q. The job order for 2015 didn't disclose that cost? A. No. It was an oversight."). That is why for the following growing season, Sun Valley disclosed the meal charges even though the meal plan was being administered in the identical manner as it was in 2015. See PX-15–2, at 505, 513 (2016 Job Order); Tr. 763:18–25.

Accordingly, Sun Valley was responsible for disclosing the meal charges, and violated 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(g) and (q) by failing to do so.

C. Because Hernandez Administered the Meal Plan and Charged Workers on Sun Valley's Behalf, i.e. as Its Agent, Sun Valley Also Violated 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(g), (p) and (q) by Not Disclosing These Charges.

Sun Valley also violated the regulations by making undisclosed meal charge deductions from workers' wages through its manager, employee, and agent Hernandez. 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(p); see also 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(g), (q). Because Hernandez was acting as Sun Valley's agent when he charged workers for meals, this deduction needed to be disclosed through the Job Orders or through a separate written work contract to H-2A workers when they applied for visas and to domestic workers when they arrived at the job. See 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(q); PX-20, at 816–817 ¶ 3.

1. A "Charge" is Legally Equivalent to a "Deduction."

The law is clear that a charge to a worker is a "deduction . . . from the worker's paycheck" that must be disclosed, see § 655.122(p)(1), regardless of whether the employer holds funds back from a paycheck, or receives a cash payment from the worker after the worker receives the paycheck. As the Administrative Review Board has put it: "there is no legal difference between an employer directly deducting a cost from a worker's wages, and shifting to the employee a cost that the employer could not lawfully directly deduct from wages." See In re: Weeks Marine, Inc., ARB No. 12-093, 2015 WL 2172482, at *4 (DOL Adm. Rev. Bd. Apr. 29, 2015) ("Weeks Marine I"); In re: Weeks Marine, Inc., 2009-DBA-00006, slip op. at *6 (OALJ Aug. 7, 2017) (Timlin, J.) ("Weeks Marine II") (ordering an employer to reimburse workers for improper lodging charges imposed by third parties); Arriaga v. Fla. Pac. Farms, 305 F.3d 1228, 1236 (11th Cir. 2002). This principle applies uniformly across several wage statutes, including the Davis Bacon Act, the Fair Labor Standards Act, MSPA, and the H-2A program. E.g., Wage and Hour Division, Field Assistance Bulletin ("WHD Bulletin") No. 2012-3, at 1 (May 17, 2012) (explaining that this principle applies in the H-2A program context).[17]

Deductions and after-the-fact charges are equivalent because "[s]hifting a cost to the employee that cannot be lawfully deducted directly from or credited against the employee's wages constitutes an unlawful de facto deduction that impermissibly drives the employee's pay below the required prevailing wage." Weeks Marine I, 2015 WL 2172482, at *4; 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(p)(2) (incorporating by reference into H-2A regulations FLSA standards for permissibility of deductions). As one court explained this principle in the context of the Migrant and Seasonal Agricultural Workers Protection Act (also often referred to as AWPA or MSPA):

> One of the purposes of the statute is to prevent the exploitation of migrant farm workers' labor by farm labor contractors or agricultural employers, who deduct from their pay exorbitant amounts of money for daily necessities such as housing, food, and electricity but who refuse to account for the exact amount charged or consumed. To make a technical distinction between money deducted before paychecks are issued and money requested after paychecks are issued is to disregard the purpose of the AWPA.

Escobar v. Baker, 814 F. Supp. 1491, 1506 (W.D. Wash. 1993) (emphasis in original).

2. Because Hernandez Was Sun Valley's Manager and Agent, the Money He Charged Workers Were Effectively Sun Valley Deductions.

Sun Valley is responsible for the charges and deductions made by its agent Hernandez. "[T]hat Congress has created a statutory framework of protections for migrant workers in no way exempts agricultural employers, recruiters, and overseers from common law agency principles." Castillo v. Case Farms of Ohio, Inc., 96 F. Supp. 2d 578, 593 (W.D. Tex. 1999). This is because the agency principle of vicarious liability applies to federal statutes unless the statute in question directly speaks to displace these principles. See Arriaga, 305 F.3d at 1245 & n.24.

Thus a charge to an H-2A worker is a deduction regardless of whether the employer's payroll office takes it directly from a worker's paycheck or a different agent of the employer makes the deduction in some other way. This conclusion is compelled not only by the structure of the H-2A program but also by common law principles of agency, under which a principal is liable on a contract[18] made by the principal's agent if the agent has actual or apparent authority. See Restatement (Third) of Agency ("Restatement") § 6.01; Ramos-Barrientos v. Bland, 661 F.3d 587, 601 (11th Cir. 2011) (H-2A case relying on the Restatement); Arriaga, 305 F.3d at 1242.

An agent has actual authority "when, at the time of taking action that has legal consequences for the principal, the agent reasonably believes, in accordance with the principal's manifestations to the agent, that the principal wishes the agent so to act." Restatement § 2.01. And an actor has apparent authority to act on a principal's behalf when "a third party reasonably believes the actor has authority to act on behalf of the principal and that belief is traceable to the principal's manifestations." Id. § 2.03. As discussed below, Hernandez had both actual and apparent authority to act on Sun Valley's behalf to provide and charge workers for Sun Valley's meals in 2015. Accordingly, Sun Valley violated 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(g), (p)(1) and (q) by constructively deducting the meal charges from workers' wages, without having disclosed the meal plan charges in the Job Orders.

Actual Authority — There is overwhelming evidence that the charges Hernandez took from workers for the meal plan were made on Sun Valley's behalf. Since the Sun Valley kitchen was too small for workers to cook for themselves, Sun Valley's longstanding practice was to have farmworkers get their food by paying Hernandez for meals. See Tr. 175:22–176:13, 743:25–744:8 (small size of kitchen), 252:14–23, 808:4–5, 874:20–875:3 (past practice).

When Sun Valley entered the H-2A program in 2015, the Marinos knew that they needed to continue ensuring farmworkers would have a way to eat, and that in light of the kitchen's small size, the best way to do this was to continue having Hernandez provide workers with meals and charge them for it. Tr. 713:15–25, 742:22–743:11, 808:12–15. Accordingly, before the H-2A workers arrived, the Marinos instructed Hernandez to continue operating the meal plan generally as he had before, charging workers for meals, maintaining records of charges, not charging a profit, and not charging above H-2A program limits. See Tr. 176:23–177:10, 186:25–187:2, 738:10–12, 742:22–743:8, 808:8–15.

And during the growing season Sun Valley's owners reaffirmed their meal plan instructions by attending and permitting orientation sessions where Hernandez would tell workers about meal charges, paying a worker directly to help take groceries into the kitchen to be used in the meal plan, and following up with Hernandez to make sure that he was complying with Sun Valley's meal charge instructions. PX-15, at 401:15–17, 403:8–14; Tr. 51:1–2, 174:19–23, 175:12–24, 773:8–12 (orientation), 187:7–10 (follow-up), 776:20. The Marinos also facilitated Hernandez's collection of the Sun Valley meal charges and other items by arranging for him to go to the bank to deposit worker paychecks and distribute cash for workers; Hernandez would receive payments for meals right after workers received their pay. Tr. 211:24–212:9, 686:21–687:11 (check cashing process), 186:14–24 (Hernandez testifying that workers would receive their pay and pay for meals on Friday afternoons), 22:21–25.

The evidence is clear that Hernandez was assessing the meal charge and administering the meal plan "in accordance with the principal's manifestations to the agent, that the principal wishes the agent to so act." Restatement § 2.01. Sun Valley's argument that because Hernandez was in charge of the kitchen and in charge of setting the rate employees would pay for the meal plan, he was not acting as an agent, ignores reality. Hernandez oversaw the kitchen and meal plan only because Sun Valley put him in charge of it so that Sun Valley's workforce could eat. That the Marinos capped the meals charge, rather than fixing the amount themselves, is irrelevant because Hernandez administered the meal plan on Sun Valley's behalf. Id. Indeed, the discretion Sun Valley gave Hernandez to run the kitchen is consistent with the discretion Hernandez had to carry out his other management responsibilities on behalf of Sun Valley, with little ongoing supervision. PX-15, at 407:1–11, 416:12–418:5.

Apparent Authority — There is also overwhelming evidence that Hernandez had apparent authority to administer the meal plan, as Sun Valley's workers had every reason to believe that he was administering the meal plan on Sun Valley's behalf. See Restatement § 2.03 (apparent authority exists where third parties, such as Sun Valley's workers, "reasonably believe[] the actor has authority to act on behalf of the principal and that belief is traceable to the principal's manifestations").

Russell Jr.'s attendance at orientation sessions where he and Hernandez explained the meal plan and charges, and his participation in the plan by regularly eating the meals with workers, would have made clear to any worker that this was the Sun Valley meal plan. See PX-15, at 401:15–17, 403:8–14 (R. Marino: he or Hernandez would tell workers at their orientation "you get three squares a day"); Tr. 722:10–11; PX-15, at 390:22–24 (Russell Jr. regularly ate Sun Valley's meals); Tr. 51:1–2, 175:12–24, 174:19–23, 773:8–12 (orientation).

That this was Sun Valley's meal plan was further cemented by the fact that when workers paid for meals, they were required to sign Sun Valley payroll forms with Sun Valley's name at the top. PX-17-2, at 799–800 (Sun Valley meal plan printout); Tr. 182:5–12 (Hernandez testimony about these printouts).

And finally, since Hernandez was the intermediary between workers and Sun Valley and was their supervisor in every aspect of their lives at Sun Valley, it would be clear to any worker that Hernandez was administering the meal plan and charging workers for it on behalf of Sun Valley. No worker would have any reason to believe that Hernandez was doing all of this outside of the scope of his employment. See, e.g., PX-7, at 173:12–13 (Garcia Dominguez testimony that Hernandez told workers "he was the one in charge for food and that 80 U.S. needed to be paid there"); Tr. 61:14–22, 172:14–21, 825:4–6 (Hernandez's role as intermediary), 173:24–174:24, 172:9–13, 211:24–212:9, 236:22–237:12 (Hernandez recruited, oriented, supervised, paid, and terminated farmworkers).

II. Sun Valley Is Liable for Hernandez's Operation of a Company Store that Illegally Sold Beer and Soft Drinks at a Profit, in Violation of 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(p)(2).

Because of H-2A workers' geographic isolation and vulnerability, the H-2A regulations include special provisions to ensure that persons affiliated with H-2A employers do not exploit farmworkers by improperly reducing their wages, including through profiteering. 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(p)(2). Thus charges or deductions from workers' wages by employers or "affiliated persons" are allowed only if they are "reasonable." Id.; 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(p)(1). An employer is liable for back wages when where, as here, a prohibited charge or deduction "reduce[s] the wage payment . . . below the minimum amounts required," i.e. the wage promised in the job offer. See 20 C.F.R. § 655.120; id. § 655.122(l), (p)(2); 29 C.F.R. § 501.16(a)(2).

The term "affiliated person" is defined broadly to include employees, agents, and virtually "any person . . . who has an interest in the employment relationship." WHD Bulletin No. 2012-3. FLSA regulations, which the H-2A regulations incorporate by reference to determine "the permissibility of deductions for payment to third persons," provide one particularly relevant example of an affiliated person: "an employee in the employer company" or "an agent of the employer" who "operate[s] company stores or commissaries." See 29 C.F.R. § 531.33(b) (FLSA regulation); 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(p)(2) (incorporating by reference 29 C.F.R. Part 531).

Under § 655.122(p)(2), there are at least two circumstances where deductions or charges are unreasonable and therefore prohibited. First, "[a] deduction is not reasonable if it includes a profit to the employer or to any affiliated person." Id. § 655.122(p)(2).[19] It is the employer's burden to demonstrate that charges do not include a profit and are therefore reasonable. Ortiz v. Paramo, No. 06-3062, 2008 WL 4378373, at *6 (D.N.J. Sept. 19, 2008) ("Ortiz I") (explaining that the "employer must also maintain records reflecting additions or deductions from wages for services such as meals," and granting summary judgment to employees for unlawful meal charges given employer's failure to meet its burden); Ortiz v. Paramo, No. 06-3062, 2009 WL 4575618, at *3–4 (D.N.J. Dec. 1, 2009) ("Ortiz II") (trial verdict for plaintiffs in the full amount of charges for various items given employer's lack of records regarding cost).

[19] These prohibitions on profiteering have particular salience in the agricultural context, where there is a long history of agricultural employers and crewleaders alike taking advantage of workers' geographic isolation to charge them for basic goods at a profit. See, e.g., Migratory Labor Hearings: Hearings Before the Subcomm. on Labor & Labor-Mgmt. Relations of the S. Comm. on Labor & Pub. Welfare, 82nd Cong. 461 (1952) (statement of Cyrus H. Karraker on conditions of migrant workers in Pennsylvania: "At one camp . . . he was selling to them from his company store the necessities of life at twice the market price from which the laborers had no escape because they quit work at dark and the nearest stores were 8 miles distant to which they

Second, a charge or deduction is unreasonable and prohibited if it is made for items sold "in violation of any Federal, State, or local law." See 29 C.F.R. § 531.31; 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(p)(2) (incorporating by reference 29 C.F.R. Part 531 for when deductions are reasonable); cf. Ortiz II, 2009 WL 4575618, at *4 (disallowing FLSA § 3(m) credits for beer because employer was prohibited under New Jersey law from selling alcohol without a license).

Here, as the lead manager and crew leader running the company commissary, Hernandez fits squarely into the definition of an affiliated person. 29 C.F.R. § 531.33(b); Tr. 223:25–224:1. He was also Sun Valley's agent in every relevant respect, including in his role supervising Sun Valley's farmworkers in virtually all aspects of their lives and work at Sun Valley, and serving as the intermediary between Sun Valley's workers and the Marinos. See Tr. 61:14–22, 172:14–21, 825:4–6 (role as intermediary), 172:9–13, 173:24–174:24, 211:24–212:9, 236:22–237:12 would have had to walk; he sold liquor at his store . . . and kept no itemized accounts of his financial transactions with the laborers . . . ."); Migratory Labor: Hearings Before the Subcomm. on Migratory Labor of the S. Comm. on Labor & Pub. Welfare, 86th Cong. 56 (1959) (statement of Joseph Clark, U.S. Senator: "overcharging for meals and commissary food, trading in illicit wines and liquors . . . are all too often sideline activities of crew leaders."). Congressional outrage over such practices led both to the passage of the Farm Labor Contractor Registration Act (MSPA's predecessor) in 1963 and the expansion of certain provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act in 1966 — including the minimum wage and related prohibitions on deductions — to cover agricultural workers.

(Hernandez recruited, oriented, supervised, paid, and terminated workers). He also worked for the company without pause for twenty-seven years. Tr. 171:2. It is hard to envision an agent or supervisor more closely affiliated with Sun Valley and having a greater "interest in the employment relationship" between Sun Valley and its farmworkers. WHD Bulletin No. 2012-3.

As an affiliated person, Hernandez was prohibited from profiting off of the Sun Valley workforce, but he did so anyway, selling drinks and beer at a profit. The burden of demonstrating that Hernandez's sales of these items was not at a profit was on Sun Valley, see Ortiz I, 2008 WL 4378373, at *6; Ortiz II, 2009 WL 4575618, at *3–4, but the company failed to require Hernandez to keep records of the prices of drinks that he bought and re-sold. See also Donovan v. New Floridian Hotel, Inc., 676 F.2d 468, 474 (11th Cir. 1982) (strictly holding an employer to its burden). Nor did Hernandez keep such records. See PX-15, at 452:15–453:9 (R. Marino knew Gatorades, chips, and pastries were being sold); RX-23, at 325 (Sun Valley knew Hernandez charged inflated prices as recently as 2013); Tr. 209:18–21 (Hernandez testifying that he retained no records of drink sales); Tr. 361:22–24, 371:12–16 (Hernandez was unable to provide the Administrator with receipts from purchases of drinks, as Russell Jr. had told Hernandez that he didn't need to keep such receipts). In fact, although Hernandez kept track of many of his sales in a notebook throughout the season, for just enough time so that he could deduct those sales from workers' pay, Tr. 22:3–6, 22:17–25, 77:16–78:1, 209:3–8, he did not maintain that notebook, and he never produced it during the investigation or during this litigation. See Tr. 209:18–21.

Even absent records of drink sales, there can be no dispute that Hernandez profited off of Sun Valley's workforce; even Hernandez's own testimony shows that he made a profit from each drink sale. See Tr. 195:11–196:8.[20] The only question is how much profit was earned.

Finally, it is undisputed that Hernandez sold H-2A workers beer without a license, in violation of state law. N.J. Stat. Ann. § 33:1-2(a) (license required to sell beer in New Jersey). Because Hernandez was an affiliated person, Sun Valley is responsible for his profiteering. See 29 C.F.R. § 531.33(b) (FLSA prohibition); 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(p)(2) (incorporating 29 C.F.R. Part 531 by reference); 29 C.F.R. § 501.16(a)(2) (H-2A employer liability); infra Appendix B (summarizing worker testimony about Hernandez's beer sales at Sun Valley).

Sun Valley's assertion that Hernandez's sales are "no different than workers buying . . . drinks from a Wawa," Resp't's Summary Decision Mot. at 3, entirely fails to take into account that Hernandez was an affiliated person selling drinks from a store located on Sun Valley's premises, and kept cold in refrigerators that workers were denied access to, using electricity that Sun Valley was paying for. See Tr. 176:14–16, 302:8–13 (no room in refrigerators); ALJ Ex. 1 ¶ 21; PX-32, at 1076–77. Given § 655.122(p)(2)'s standard, it does not matter whether someone at Sun Valley other than Hernandez also improperly profited off of Sun Valley's workforce. The

---

[20] Hernandez testified that he bought 24-packs of

- Red Bulls for $30 or $31, i.e. $1.27 per can, and sold them for $1.50, turning a 33¢ profit from each can;
- Monsters for $32, i.e. $1.33 per Monster, and sold them for $1.50, making 17¢ from each bottle;
- soda for $13 or $14, i.e. 54¢ or 58¢ per soda, and re-sold them for 75¢ or $1, making 17¢ to 46¢ from each can.

195:12–196:8. Workers generally testified that Hernandez sold drinks at higher prices. E.g., Tr. 267:12–15; PX-3, at 75:11–16; PX-9, at 222:14–23; PX-7, at 176:15–177:6; PX-13, at 343:4–5.

Administrator need not meet the irrelevant burden of proving that Hernandez also shared money he obtained from workers with Sun Valley's owners. Id.

Sun Valley's assertion that it has not claimed a credit under Section 3(m) of the FLSA also misses the point: because a deduction is equivalent to a charge, see supra Section I.C.1, the hidden meal charges and the drink charges that include a profit are directly prohibited by the H-2A regulations, and the illegal charges for beer are prohibited under FLSA Section 3(m) principles that the H-2A regulations explicitly incorporate. Indeed, courts use these Section 3(m) principles to prohibit both deductions and improper charges such as those at issue here. See, e.g., Ortiz II, 2009 WL 4575618, at *3–4 (using 3(m) principles to hold an employer liable for having improperly charged workers for cigarettes); Weeks Marine I, 2015 WL 2172482, at *5–9 (applying 3(m) principles to hold an employer responsible for improper charges that third parties had levied against employees); Weeks Marine II, slip op. at 6 (same).

Because Hernandez was an affiliated person and he exploited isolated farmworkers by selling them drinks in violation of state law and at a profit, Sun Valley is liable. Particularly given that Hernandez's sales occurred on Sun Valley's premises and with Sun Valley's knowledge, and there is no evidence that Sun Valley took any steps to put a stop to Hernandez's profiteering, Respondent's misguided attempt to draw a line between Hernandez's conduct and the rest of Sun Valley's management has no basis in law. See 29 C.F.R. § 501.16(a)(2) (recovery of back wages will be "sought . . . directly from the [H-2A] employer"); cf. Temporary Agricultural Employment of H-2A Aliens in the United States, 75 Fed. Reg. 6884, 6943 (Feb. 2, 2010) ("2010 Final Rule") (an H-2A employer may not be liable for an agent's conduct if the "employer can show that it had a bona fide contractual provision preventing or barring the violative action by its agent").

III. Sun Valley Owes $209,047.69 in Back Wages to Its Farmworkers for Improperly Charging Them for Meals, Drinks, and Beer.

A. Sun Valley Owes Workers Back Wages for the Full Amount of the Improper Charges for Meals and Drinks.

When an H-2A employer or a person affiliated with the employer makes improper charges or deductions from a worker's wages, and these charges or deductions push the worker's wages below the rate promised in the job order,[21] the entire amount of the deductions or charges must be returned to the workers as back wages so that they will have received the promised rate.

Full back wages is the remedy because the H-2A regulations strictly prohibit unreasonable charges or deductions (including charges that are undisclosed, that include a profit, or that are for items sold in violation of state law), and specify that the cost of an item underlying an unreasonable deduction "may not be included in computing wages." See 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(p)(2) ("The wage requirements of § 655.120 will not be met where undisclosed or unauthorized deductions, rebates, or refunds reduce the wage payment made to the employee below the minimum amounts required"); supra Section I.C.

Indeed any result other than a full return of the undisclosed deductions would eliminate any incentive for an H-2A employer to disclose mandatory meal charges, as the regulations require disclosure regardless of whether there is also proof that the employer profited. Compare [21] Sun Valley promised to pay workers the Adverse Effect Wage Rate of $11.29 per hour or a piece rate, whichever was higher. Accordingly, the higher of those two rates for any given worker was the effective "minimum amount[] required" under the regulations. See 20 C.F.R. §§ 655.120, 655.122(l), (p)(2). Workers never earned a greater amount than the $11.29 per hour or the piece rate, so any improper charges to workers pushed their wages below the promised rate. JX-1 (April 13-October 10, 2015 Job Order), at 4 ¶ 18 ("Employer will pay the highest of the AEWR . . . the piece rate . . . or State minimum wage"), 12 (explaining that the AEWR was $11.29 per hour and detailing Sun Valley's piece rate); JX-3 (June 1–October 10, 2015 Job Order), at 45, 53 (same); Tr. 431:1–8 (employees earned $11.29 per hour or the piece rate); PX-24-25 (payroll showing that employees earned either the AEWR or the piece rate).

20 C.F.R. § 655.122(p)(1) (prohibiting undisclosed deductions without regard to the reasonableness of those deductions), with id. § 655.122(p)(2) (separately prohibiting deductions from which the employer or an affiliated person profits).

For example, in Global Horizons, because the H-2A employer failed to disclose meal charges in the job orders, the court correctly ordered full back wages. See In re Global Horizons, Inc., No. 2010-TAE-00002, slip op. at 2 (OALJ Dec. 13, 2011) ("Global Horizons I") (discussing 20 C.F.R. § 655.102(b)(13) (2005), substantially identical pre-2010 H-2A regulation); In re Global Horizons, Inc., No. 2010-TAE-0002, slip op. at 4 (OALJ Dec. 7, 2010) ("Global Horizons II"), aff'd, ARB No. 11-058 (May 31, 2013). The court in Global Horizons I specifically rejected the argument that back wages should be awarded in any amount other than the full deductions, or take into account the cost or fair market value of the meals. See Global Horizons I, slip op. at 2 n.7; see also In re: Seasonal Ag Servs., Inc., No. 2014-TAE-00006, slip op. at 3 (OALJ Dec. 5, 2014) (awarding back wages in the full amount of undisclosed deductions pursuant to § 655.122(p)(1)).[22]

Furthermore, with regard to improper sales of drinks at a profit, where an employer (or affiliated person) has failed to maintain records substantiating the cost of providing lodging, meals, drinks or other items, "courts have routinely denied employer offsets under the FLSA" for the value of the items the employer provided employees. See Severino v. 436 West L.L.C., No. 13-cv-3096, 2015 WL 12559893, at *6 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 19, 2015) (denying an employer credit for having provided employees with free lodging where the employer failed to maintain records of costs); Ortiz II, 2009 WL 4575618, at *3–4 ("Where the employer does not keep records substantiating the cost of the facilities [provided to workers], the employer is not entitled to any credit for providing the facilities") (emphasis added); Marshall v. Hunter, No. 79-958, 1983 WL 2015, at *2–3 (M.D. Fla. May 9, 1983) (providing zero credit where an employer charged workers for food but failed to maintain records of costs).

[22] To the extent Sun Valley may argue that it would be unjust to require it to pay back wages for charges collected by Hernandez, that argument ignores that because (1) Sun Valley did not provide kitchen access to workers, under § 655.122(g) it was responsible for providing meals and disclosing any related meal charges, and (2) Hernandez was acting as Sun Valley's agent in providing meals, so under the venerable agency principles discussed in Section I.C.2, Sun Valley was liable for its agent's actions. See also 29 C.F.R. § 501.16(a)(2) (H-2A employer liability).

Here, Sun Valley owes the full amount of the improper drink charges, without any offset for the actual value of these drinks, because Sun Valley cannot establish the actual cost of these drinks or the amount of profit earned. Respondent cannot establish the actual cost because Hernandez destroyed most of the records of the drinks he purchased and neither he nor Sun Valley put forward credible evidence of the costs. See, e.g., Tr. 361:24–362:17, 371:12–22; see also Tr. 209:18–21. Hernandez's testimony about the drink costs is conflicting and not credible. For example, one of the rare drink receipts that Hernandez did not destroy shows that he sometimes purchased cokes at a local store for 36¢ per can. PX-36, at 1141T (7th line: 36-packs of coke for $13, or 36¢ per coke). At trial, however, Hernandez testified both that he bought 24-packs of coke at the high rate of 54¢ or 58¢ per can and that he bought drinks at Sam's Club where (according to Hernandez) the prices were even lower than at local stores. Tr. 189:8–11, 195:12–15, 213:1–6, 368:15–17. In other words, Hernandez must have often paid even less than 36¢ per can for sodas. Hernandez knew that he should not have sold drinks at a profit and had a strong incentive to overstate the actual cost of drinks and understate the amount of profit earned, further undermining his testimony.[23]

[23] Hernandez was testifying right in front of his current supervisor Joseph Marino. Tr. 5:15–16.

Furthermore, calculating back wages for the entire amount of the soft drinks is particularly appropriate here given that so many workers testified that they purchased drinks from their supervisor not because they wanted to, but because they had no practical alternative. Workers had no real alternative because the water in the fields often ran out or tasted terrible. Workers naturally get thirsty and need to obtain drinks — even if it means spending their low wages on drinks sold at inflated prices — when bending over picking vegetables in the hot sun in the middle of the summer for over ten hours a day, seventy hours per week. See PX-35, at 1107 (photograph of workers bent completely over while working, as required by the job of picking Sun Valley's crops); PX-2 (summary of Sun Valley's voluminous payroll records showing workers routinely working over seventy hours a week); PX-7, at 176:13–14, 177:5–6 (Hernandez sold rehydration beverage / saline solution).

Indeed, workers consistently testified to clean water being unavailable, including all four of the workers who testified during the hearing. For example, Marco Giovanny Maldonado testified about how he complained to Hernandez about the water's bad taste on the first day, Tr. 52:15–19, 60:21–61:7, and Carlos Cervantes Ramirez testified that water would run out "every day," see PX-3, at 73:10–13; see also Tr. 96:4–6, 139:21–22, 141:5–6, 162:8–11 (Jose Manuel Baltazar Cheguez testifying that water was unavailable, and that "if a different truck would drive into the fields to sell . . . beverages to us, [Hernandez] would tell them to go away. We could only purchase from him"); Tr. 261:9–13 (Pedro Zavala Almanza testifying about the water's bad taste); PX-11, at 287:4–7, 291:6–11 (Hector Mishel Garcia Dominguez testifying that the water was not clean); PX-5, at 134:2–4 (Miguel Angel Elizondo Soto testifying that water was not available in the eating area).

Although Hernandez and the Marinos testified that they provided clean water to the workers, their testimony is not as credible as the farmworkers', who surely had a better memory of whether water was available at the specific fields where they worked on the specific days when they worked, and how that water tasted. Although the Administrator does not dispute that potable water was available at some points during the growing season, it was plainly not always available to all workers.[24] Even Hernandez testified that he had received complaints about the quality of the water. Tr. 233:18–20 (mentioning "a couple complaints" he received because there was a "problem with the filter").

Sun Valley has argued that the Court should give Sun Valley credit for some theoretical measure of workers' costs to procure food. E.g., Resp't's Summ. J. Opp. 11–13; see also RX-5, at 39–40; RX-7–8, at 42–43. Such an approach is precluded by the clearly established legal framework that governs deductions, recordkeeping requirements, and remedies under nearly every statute and regulation enforced by the Administrator. Furthermore, providing this kind of ad hoc 3(m) credit for back wages would excuse not only Sun Valley's failure to disclose the meals charges but also its acquiescence to Hernandez's profiteering and lack of recordkeeping.

As to the meals, Respondent has submitted as evidence the Department's Federal Register notice setting the cap on an employer's allowable meals charges, but those allowable charges are only relevant when actually disclosed in the job order. RX-5, at 39–40; see 20 C.F.R. §§ 655.122(g), 655.173. Respondent has also made reference to U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) tables of estimated weekly meals costs, which are even less relevant. RX-7, at 42; RX-8, at 43. Having once failed to convince the Department to consider the relevance of these USDA tables in a separate rulemaking regarding separate, sheepherder-specific H-2A regulations,[25] counsel has suggested that this Court should nonetheless adopt them as a measure of workers' theoretical food costs, as though Sun Valley had not violated its binding promises in the Job Order. But the Department has set a separate meal charge cap relevant to the H-2A workers at issue in this case, 20 C.F.R. § 655.173, and determined that no such charges may be levied absent disclosure, see 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(g). This Court is bound by the rules that have actually been promulgated, and should not permit H-2A employers to accomplish in this litigation what they have failed to accomplish in rulemaking.

As to the drinks, Sun Valley seems to seek refuge in the fact that when the Administrator found Sun Valley liable in 2013 for Hernandez's sale of "beverages" (as well as meals) "to workers at inflated prices," RX-23, at 325, the Administrator exercised its discretion to seek lower back wages. The Administrator's exercise of discretion in a separate case, with separate evidence and records, provides no safe harbor for Sun Valley to ask the Court to disregard the legal framework that governs the actual record in this case. For that matter, given Sun Valley's decision to pay the back wages for these beverages sales in 2013, it can hardly disclaim knowledge of Hernandez's profiteering or that it was on notice that failure to keep adequate records or properly price commissary goods would subject it to further liability. See RX-23, at 325 (Wage Hour cited Sun Valley in 2013 because Hernandez was "found selling meal plan and beverages to workers at inflated prices").

B. Under the Mt. Clemens Framework, Which Applies Here, the Administrator Has Met his Burden of Proof as to the Amount of Back Wages Owed.

1. The Mt. Clemens Framework Applies Here.

Sun Valley was required to maintain records of all charges and deductions, including the improper charges for drinks and meals. 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(j); supra Sections I.C, II. It failed to do so, however, even though it was on notice that it should have.[26] RX-23, at 325; Tr. 808:3–7; JX-2, at 30 ¶ 8, 41 Sec. B ¶¶ 2–3. Indeed, Hernandez admitted that he discarded the records of charges he made to workers. Tr. 209:18–21 (destruction of drink charge records), 722:10–11; PX-15, at 401:15–17, 403:8–14, 453:15–19 (Marinos' knowledge of drink and meal charges).

Where, as here, an employer improperly fails to maintain complete records of hours worked or deductions from wages, the Mt. Clemens burden-shifting framework applies. See In re Greater Mo. Med. Pro-Care Providers, Inc., ARB No. 12-015, 2014 WL 469269, at *16 (DOL Admin. Rev. Bd. Jan. 29, 2014) ("Greater Mo."), overruled on other grounds, 812 F.3d 1132 (8th Cir. 2015); In re Pegasus Consulting Grp., Inc., ARB No. 03-032, 2005 WL 1542545, at *5 (DOL Admin. Rev. Bd. June 30, 2005) (applying Mt. Clemens in the H-1B context), aff'd, No. 05-5161, 2008 WL 920072, at *18 (D.N.J. Mar. 31, 2008).

"[T]here is no reason why the Mt. Clemens burden-shifting approach ought not equally apply to the issue of how often unlawful deductions were made." Hart v. Rick's Cabaret Int'l, Inc., 73 F. Supp. 3d 382, 390 (S.D.N.Y. 2014). So for example, in Weeks Marine II, this court used the Mt. Clemens framework to determine, in the absence of records, the amount of back wages an employer owed to its employees after improperly requiring them to pay a third party for lodging charges they had incurred. Weeks Marine II, slip op. at 19–20. Similarly, in Hart, the court used the Mt. Clemens framework to determine how often workers were made to pay out "tip-out fees" that were deemed improper deductions. Hart, 73 F. Supp. 3d at 390.

[26] Even had Respondent been entirely ignorant of its record-keeping obligations, this would be no excuse. See Abhe & Svoboda, Inc. v. Chao, 508 F.3d 1052, 1060 (D.C. Cir. 2007) ("[P]arties dealing with the government are expected to know the law, and there is no grave injustice in holding parties to a reasonable knowledge of the law").

The Marinos and Hernandez caused Sun Valley's H-2A employees to bear an improper expense which employees had no legal obligation to document; no ability to document (especially when purchasing drinks while working in the fields); and no reason to document, since Hernandez was documenting these charges in a notebook — a notebook he discarded after obtaining the charges from workers. Tr. 22:3–6, 22:17–25, 77:16–78:1, 209:3–8, 209:18–21. "To hold the Administrator to an exacting standard of proof here would unduly penalize the [e]mployees and reward Respondent for . . . failing to record" the charges and violating its recordkeeping obligations. Weeks Marine II, slip op. at 19. It is thus appropriate to determine the amount of back wages owed using the Mt. Clemens framework.

2. The Administrator Has Met His Burden of Proof Under the Mt. Clemens Framework.

Under Mt. Clemens, the Administrator must produce sufficient evidence to show the amount of the improper charges or deductions "as a matter of just and reasonable inference." Weeks Marine II, slip op. at 19. This inference may be established for "non-testifying employees based on representative testimony of a small number of employees." Id.; see also Pegasus Consulting Grp., 2008 WL 920072, at *18 (affirming ARB's reliance on representative evidence to prove back wages for 4 non-testifying workers in an H-1B case).

The burden then shifts to the employer to come forward with evidence to negate "the reasonableness of the inference to be drawn" from the Administrator's evidence. Hart, 73 F. Supp. 3d at 390. "If the employer fails to produce such evidence, the court may then award damages . . . even though the result be only approximate." Id. (quoting Anderson v. Mt. Clemens Pottery Co., 328 U.S. 680, 688 (1946)); Greater Mo., 2014 WL 469269, at *16.

Here, the Administrator has easily met his burden to show "as a matter of just and reasonable inference" the amount of back wages owed for improper charges for meals and drinks. Weeks Marine II, slip op. at 19–20. As discussed further below, the Administrator's calculations are supported not only by the consistent testimony of ten worker witnesses, but also by undisputed evidence about such matters as the amounts charges for meals and the number of workers who were charged for meals and drinks. And Sun Valley has not produced evidence of to "negate the reasonableness of the inference to be drawn" from the Administrator's evidence. See Hart, 73 F. Supp. 3d at 390. Accordingly, the Court should uphold the Administrator's back wage calculations.

3. The Administrator's Back Wage Computations for the Hidden Meal Plan Charges Are Fully Supported by the Evidence at Trial And Should be Upheld.

The Administrator computed the amount of back wages owed for the improper, undisclosed meals charges, in violation of 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(g), (p), and/or (q), as follows:

First, the Administrator reviewed Sun Valley's 2015 weekly payroll records, which list each worker who worked each week (and was paid for that work) during 2015. Tr. 427:15–428:18, 439:12–440:2, 443:13–22; PX-2. Based on these records, the Administrator determined that in addition to Hernandez, 148 workers worked at Sun Valley during the 2015 growing season for at least one week.[27] PX-2. For each of those 148 workers, the Administrator listed, by date, each workweek that a worker worked at Sun Valley in 2015. Id.; Tr. 443:13–22.

[27] The Administrator included both H-2A and domestic workers in these back wage calculations, because Sun Valley's domestic workers were always engaged in corresponding employment within the meaning of 20 C.F.R. § 655.103, as they performed the same duties as Sun Valley's

Then, for all weeks during the 2015 growing season, the Administrator calculated $75 in back wages per week per worker, except for three weeks when the Administrator calculated $80 per week in back wages because Hernandez charged more. Tr. 443:1–12. Finally, the Administrator reduced the back wages for the small number of workers who did not pay the meal fee for certain periods, according to information provided by Hernandez. Tr. 444:3–445:4; supra n.9 (detailing which workers did not pay a meal fee). In addition, the Administrator reduced the back wages for four workers who cooked canned food on a hot plate inside the housing dormitory for the weeks ending July 7 through August 7 instead of participating in the meal plan. PX-2; Tr. 444:20–445:4. The Administrator made this reduction even though these employees were forced into this makeshift, unsafe arrangement after being denied free and open kitchen access. PX-5, at 126:21–24 (Zavala Almanza and Miguel Angel Elizondo Soto testifying about why they had to purchase this hot plate to cook on in the dorm).

The Administrator's calculations are fully supported by the testimony and evidence at trial. The parties have stipulated that the meal fee was $75–$80 per week, and to the fact that 139 workers paid this mandatory fee on a weekly basis. ALJ Ex. 1 ¶ 22. The Administrator's listing

---

H-2A workers. See ALJ Ex. 1 ¶ 15 (stipulation that all fifty-one of Sun Valley's non-H-2A workers were "domestic workers"), ¶ 1 (parties defining "domestic workers" as "employees engaged in corresponding employment"); Tr. 818:1–8 (Joseph Marino testifying about how workers were performing the same tasks).

Accordingly, Sun Valley was required to pay the domestic workers the same wages as the H-2A workers, and was prohibited from charging domestic workers anything that it could not charge H-2A workers. See 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(a) ("The employer's job offer must offer to U.S. workers no less than the same benefits, wages, and working conditions that the employer is offering, intends to offer, or will provide to H-2A workers."); id. § 655.122(p)(1) (prohibiting all undisclosed deductions except those "required by law"); cf. 26 U.S.C. §§ 3121(b)(1), 3306(c)(1)(B) (specific tax withholding exclusions for H-2A but not domestic workers).

of the weeks that workers worked — and thus which weeks workers paid the meal fee — has been admitted as an accurate summary of Sun Valley's payroll records. Tr. 967:13–22.

The Administrator's calculations are a reasonable and conservative reconstruction of the back wages owed. The Administrator only calculated back wages for weeks that workers were on Sun Valley's payroll, even though workers were present at Sun Valley and paid for meals in other weeks. Tr. 531:21–24 (workers arrived one or two weeks before they appeared on Sun Valley's payroll). Similarly, when on occasion workers did not work and went unpaid, the Administrator did not calculate back wages for these workers, Tr. 609:12–16, even though there is reason to believe they continued paying for meals.[28]

In total, Wage Hour calculated that $128,285 in back wages are due to 139 farmworkers for unlawful meals deductions. PX-2, at 32, 61. These calculations are based on undisputed facts of the workers' weeks worked and reasonable calculations of the amounts paid for meals each week. Accordingly, the Administrator's back wage assessment should be upheld.

4. The Administrator's Back Wage Computations for the Sales of Soft Drinks at a Profit Were Also Fully Supported by the Evidence at Trial and Should be Upheld.

In computing the amount of back wages owed for the improper soft drink charges and in the absence of any records from Sun Valley or Hernandez, the Administrator determined based on interviews with Hernandez, his wife, and workers that workers were purchasing 4.42 drinks per day on average, and that workers were paying an average of $1.25 per drink, so that they were spending on average $5.525 per day, or $38.68 per week. Tr. 624:19–21; PX-2.[29] Wage Hour determined that employees were owed $38.68 for each week of the season that they worked, and based the number of weeks worked on Sun Valley's payroll records. Tr. 427:15–428:18, 439:15–24, 443:13–22; PX-2. In total, the Administrator calculated that Sun Valley owed $71,790.08 in back wages for improper soft drink charges. PX-2, at 32, 61.

[28] Moreover, the Administrator calculated that Sun Valley charged workers $75 most weeks for meals, even though Hernandez provided records of what the meal charge was for only a few weeks, PX-37; Tr. 463:10–12, and several witnesses testified that the meal fee was $80 per week, see Tr. 19:18–22, 23:3-9 (Maldonado testifying that meals were $80 per week), 262:16–19 (Zavala Almanza: same); PX-5, at 10:20–21 (Elizondo Soto: same). Hernandez asserted to Wage Hour that workers were charged $80 in only two weeks, but as Hernandez did not maintain records, this statement should be given little weight. See Tr. 443:4-8.

The Administrator's back wage calculations are fully supported by the evidence and testimony at trial. All ten worker witnesses testified to purchasing drinks on a daily basis from their supervisor, and Wage Hour's determination that workers bought an average of 4.42 drinks per day is right in the middle of what workers testified to drinking. See Appendix A (detailing number of drinks each witness testified to purchasing). Indeed, eight of the ten worker witnesses testified to drinking between 3.5 and 5.5 drinks per day, and the other two workers testified to purchasing even more than 5.5 per day. Id. Hernandez did not keep records of the number of drinks workers purchased, Tr. 209:18–21, and his low estimate that workers drank 3–4 drinks per day, Tr. 195:9–18, is less credible than what the ten workers testified to purchasing from him.

Farmworker witnesses also testified that all or practically all of their coworkers purchased drinks from their supervisor Hernandez, and that they purchased roughly the same number of drinks (or an even greater number) as compared to what they bought. See, e.g., PX-9, at 219:13–20 (Hugo Leonel Cinta Tegoma: "Q. Did any of your colleagues not purchase any drinks from Agustin? A. No. Everyone bought from him. We all did."); Tr. 269:15–18 (Pedro Zavala Almanza testifying that "[m]ore or less all drank more or less the same" number of non-alcoholic drinks); PX-11, at 287:2–7 (Hector Mishel Garcia Dominguez).

[29] Workers paid an average of $38.68 per week in drink charges, see PX-2, and purchased 4.42 drinks per week; 4.42 drinks per day x 7 days per week x $1.25 per day = $38.68 per week. Tr. 624:19-21.

It is reasonable to assume that all workers were purchasing drinks, as it was very difficult for workers to obtain transportation to leave the farm to purchase drinks on their own during their 70-plus-hour weeks,[30] and, even if they did, they had no place to store them.[31] It is likely that workers were purchasing roughly the same number of drinks per day because they were all generally working the same schedule, performing the same back-breaking work, and receiving the same number of breaks. See Tr. 818:1–8 (all workers were picking the same crop); PX-7, at 178:18–21 (Jose Silva Lopez testifying that "the workers were all together during the breaks"); Tr. 17:19–22 (Maldonado testifying about how everyone had to work twelve hours per day until Hernandez told them they were finished picking). Workers purchased drinks right in front of each other, so they could observe and credibly estimate the number of drinks that other workers were purchasing at a profit, and so know how many drinks other workers generally bought per day. See, e.g., PX-13, at 344:21–345:4; PX-7, at 178:18–21.

Wage Hour's reconstruction that workers paid $1.25 on average per drink is actually less than what workers estimated at trial; workers testified that sodas cost at least $1 or $1.50, and that energy drinks cost at least $2.00. See, e.g., Tr. 267:12–15 (Zavala Almanza: sodas were $1 or $2 and Monsters were $2); PX-3, at 75:11–16 (Cervantes Ramirez: sodas were $1.50 and Monsters were $3); PX-7, at 176:15–177:6 (Silva Lopez: sodas were $1 and Monsters were $2.00 or $2.50); PX-9, at 222:14–23 (Cinta Tegoma: Monsters were $2 or $3); PX-13, at 343:4–

[30] See Tr. 295:23-25, 296:4-9, 296:14-19, 297:20–298:2 (Zavala Almanza: the only free transportation began late in the season, fit only twenty workers, and was offered only weekly).

[31] Hernandez testified that some workers purchased few or no drinks from him because they purchased drinks at the store. Tr. 196:9–18. Although Hernandez did not elaborate on how many workers fell into that category, given the worker testimony and their isolation and inability to keep drinks cold, Tr. 176:14–16, it seems likely that very few workers purchased no drinks from Hernandez.

7 (Morales Acosta: sodas were $1 and Monsters were $2). The workers' estimates are credible. Hernandez and his wife Elia Pinon gave lower estimates of the amounts that workers were charged for drinks, but these estimates were inconsistent with each other, and even the lowest of these estimates — Hernandez's claim that he sold sodas for $1 or 75 cents, and Red Bulls and Monsters for $1.50 — supports the Administrator's estimate of $1.25 being the average price of drinks that workers purchased. Tr. 195:12–196:8; compare Tr. 196:1, with PX-19, at 809. Accordingly, the Administrator's conclusions as to the likely number of drinks purchased and price of those drinks is fully supported by the trial testimony and are a just and reasonable inference under Mt. Clemens. The Administrator's computations for drinks purchases should therefore be upheld. [32]

5. The Administrator's Revised Computations for the Sales of Beer at a Profit and in Violation of State Law Are Fully Supported by the Evidence at Trial and Should Be Upheld.

In computing the amount of back wages owed for the unlawful sale of beer at a profit, the Administrator reconstructed that Hernandez sold beer for $2 per beer, $1.30 of which was profit, [32] The Administrator's back wage calculations in fact undercount the amount of wages employees paid back to the company store, as the computations do not take into account sales of cigarettes without a license; of toilet paper, soap, and other items sold, likely at a profit; and of work gloves, a cost Sun Valley was required to bear. Tr. 78:17–18 (soap and cigarettes), 145:11–13 (cigarettes sold for $10 per pack), 267:19–268:12 (estimating that eighty workers purchased a roll of toilet paper twice a week throughout the growing season for $1 or $2 per roll); PX-20, at 824 ¶ 24 (Sun Valley admitting that Sun Valley lacked a license to sell cigarettes); PX-20, at 828 ¶ 6 (Hernandez admitting that he lacked such a license); N.J. Stat Ann. § 54:40A-3 (license is required to sell cigarettes in New Jersey); PX-7, at 184:10–185:10 (work gloves sold); Soler v. G. & U., Inc., 833 F.2d 1104, 1109 (2d Cir. 1987) (deductions for uniforms prohibited).

and, based on the evidence at trial, that workers purchased on average of 3.75 beers per week,[33] and accordingly has revised the back wages for beer to $8,972.61. See Appendix B; Appendix C (Administrator's revised back wage computations, attached as a summary of the evidence, as an aid to the Court).

The Administrator's revised back wage calculations are well supported by the evidence and should be upheld. First, all ten worker witnesses testified that Hernandez was selling beer on Sun Valley's premises, and workers credibly testified that almost all workers bought and drank beer at Sun Valley. See, e.g., Tr. 98:12–22, 145:7; PX-3, at 83:14 (Cervantes Ramirez: "90% drank beer"); PX-7, at 202:21 (Silva Lopez: "the great majority" purchased beer); RX-19, at 308:16–18 (Morales Acosta: only a "few" did not purchase beer); PX-9, at 223:11–13 (Cinta Tegoma: "Q. How many of your coworkers purchased beer? A. Most of them did").[34]

---

[33] As the workers testified, most employees drank about 3.75 beers per week. For example:

- Jose Silva Lopez testified to buying 3-6 beers per week; Dario Morales Acosta testified to buying 2–3 beers per week; and Miguel Angel Elizondo Soto testified to drinking two beers per week. See PX-7, at 180:21–181:5; PX-13, 345:21–22; PX-5, at 142:6–7.
- Marco Giovanny Maldonado testified that he purchased a twelve-pack of beer twice during his less than two weeks of work at Sun Valley. Tr. 25:18–26:1
- Carlos Cervantes Ramirez testified that each weekend, he and three other workers would purchase a 24-pack, so in effect he purchased six beers per week. PX-3, at 80:11–82:3.
- Hector Mishel Garcia Dominguez testified that most workers on average bought seven beers per week. PX-11, at 281:9–17.

In addition, in the aid to the Court attached as Appendix C, for workers who testified about how much beer they purchased, the Administrator revised his computations to match the amount of beer that each worker himself testified to purchasing, rather than using the 3.75 weekly average.

[34] Since Hernandez sold beer not just by the can but also in large cases, some workers were not directly involved in the cash transactions with Hernandez, but they nonetheless shared in the cost (which included a profit to Hernandez). Compare PX-11, at 285:14–15, with, PX-5, at 138:6–7; PX-11, at 283:19–21.

Second, the calculation that workers drank on average 3.75 beers per week is fully supported by worker testimony, see Appendix B, and in fact is likely lower than the true figure, as workers were surely hesitant to tell a judge and a group of attorneys about their alcohol habits, and have those habits be recorded as a public record. Indeed, this may be why many workers testified that they were not purchasing as many beers as their co-workers. See, e.g., PX-5, at 142:6–7 (Elizondo Soto).

Moreover, there can be no doubt that Hernandez charged an average of $2 for beer. See PX-5, at 132:7–5; PX-13, at 345:19–20; PX-11, at 281:20–22, 284:1–8 (testimony of Elizondo Soto, Silva Lopez, Morales Acosta, and Garcia Dominguez). Finally, the Administrator's determination that Hernandez paid less than what he sold beer for, i.e. that he made a profit, is supported by the fact that a wholesaler similar to the one where Hernandez shopped was selling beer in 2015 at a rate of only 70 cents per can, well below what Hernandez was re-selling beer for during the growing season. PX-27, at 1044; PX-32, at 1077; Tr. 189:8–14, 625:16–627:23.

Sun Valley may dispute whether Hernandez paid exactly seventy cents per beer, and thereby argue that he did not earn exactly $1.30 in profit per beer.[35] However, such a claim fails, as an employer must "come forward with evidence of the precise amount of work performed" or evidence to negate the reasonable inference due the Administrator's evidence. Mt. Clemens Pottery Co., 328 U.S. at 687–88 (emphasis added); Pythagoras v. Gen. Contracting Corp. v.

[35] The evidence for the price Hernandez paid for beer is indeed based on the price of beer at different wholesaler (Costco rather than Sam's Club) in a different location than where Hernandez was shopping. But these wholesalers likely sell beer at similar prices, and in any event Sun Valley has introduced no evidence that Hernandez paid more than 70¢ per beer, much less that he paid $2 per beer and thus failed to turn a profit. As discussed supra, the burden was on Sun Valley to prove that the beer charges did not include a profit, and Sun Valley did nothing to meet that burden. Ortiz I, 2008 WL 4378373, at *6; Ortiz II, 2009 WL 4575618, at *3–4; Donovan, 676 F.2d at 474.

USDOL, 926 F. Supp. 2d 490, 498–99 (S.D.N.Y. 2013). Sun Valley cannot do so and therefore this court may award back wages to the employees "even though the result may only be approximate." Mt. Clemens Pottery Co., 328 U.S. at 687.[36]

Accordingly, the Court should uphold the Administrator's back wage computations for illegal beer sales at a profit.

IV. The Court Should Uphold the Administrator's Assessment of $198,450 in Civil Money Penalties (CMPs) for Unlawful Deductions for Undisclosed Meals, and for Drinks Sold at a Profit or in Violation of State Law.

At the time of the CMP assessment, for non-willful violations Wage and Hour could assess $1,500 in civil money penalties for "[e]ach failure to pay an individual worker properly or to honor the terms or conditions of a worker's employment required by . . . the regulations." See 29 C.F.R. § 501.19(a), (c) (2016). In determining the amount of the penalty, the mitigating factors that may be considered include, but are not limited to (1) previous history of violations, (2) number of workers affected by the violations, (3) the gravity of the violations, (4) efforts made in good faith to comply, (5) explanation from the person charged with the violations, (6) commitment to future compliance, and (7) the extent to which the violator achieved a financial gain or the "potential financial loss or potential injury to the workers." Id. § 501.19(b).

In assessing CMPs, "the Administrator is vested with enforcement discretion and is able to consider the totality of circumstances in fashioning an appropriate remedy for a violation." In re: Overdevest Nurseries, LP, 2015-TAE-00008, at *18 (OALJ Feb. 18, 2016) (H-2A case)

[36] Indeed, the Administrator's decision to seek back wages only for the profit earned from illegal beer sales is an exercise of discretion. Case law supports full back wages for charges such as these, which were illegal, unrecorded, and at a profit. See Ortiz I, 2008 WL 4378373, at *6; Ortiz II, 2009 WL 4575618, at *3–4; Severino, 2015 WL 12559893, at *6; Marshall, 1983 WL 2015, at *2–3. Because the evidence conclusively demonstrates that Hernandez sold beer illegally and for more than what he paid, any dispute about the exact price Hernandez paid for beer would not undermine the Administrator's reasonable back wage determination.

(relying on In re: Kutty, ARB No. 03-022 (May 31, 2005)). While the Administrator is generally entitled to deference in assessing CMPs, administrative law judges retain the authority to increase the amount of CMPs assessed. See In re: Overdevest Nurseries, LP, slip op. at *18 n.14.

In assessing CMPs for the meals and drink violations, the Administrator considered all of the facts of this case and appropriately applied these mitigating factors when he assessed CMPs for Sun Valley's myriad violations. Accordingly, the decision is entitled to deference and should be upheld.

The Administrator began with $1,500 in civil money penalties for Sun Valley's 147 farmworkers, Tr. 849:10–11, 852:11, all of whom Sun Valley mislead into thinking that they would have kitchen access to prepare their own meals at Sun Valley, and almost all of whom had to pay the hidden weekly meal fee for the entire season.[37]

CMPs were calculated on a per-worker basis because of the seriousness of the violation, as it affected a large number of workers, and as Sun Valley made this false statement on the face of its Job Orders, recruiting workers to travel thousands of miles based in part on false pretenses.[38] Tr. 849:15–23. The violation is also serious given that Sun Valley's false statement

---

[37] A false statement in a Job Order, even one that does not relate to improper charges that reduce an employee's wages, is a proper basis for civil money penalties. See 29 C.F.R. § 501.19 ("A civil money penalty may be assessed . . . for each violation of the work contract"); 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(q) (where there is no separate written contract, the job order is the "work contract").

[38] The seriousness of the violation is also acute because accurate disclosure of the terms and conditions of employment in the job offer is necessary for "regulatory agencies . . . to protect the foreign workers against exploitation." Global Horizons II, slip op. at 8 (Dec. 17, 2010) (complete cite); see also Registration of Interstate Farm Labor Contractors, S. Rep. 88-202, at 3 (1963) (citing U.S. Department of Labor survey finding widespread abuses directed toward migrant agricultural workers including "misrepresentation of . . . anticipated earnings; [and] overcharging for groceries or meals"). The Department of Labor and state workforce agencies need accurate disclosure so that they can discharge their duties to "assur[e] that Congress' prohibition of preferential treatment for [H-2A] workers is enforced." Global Horizons I, slip op. at 2 n.7.

about the kitchen was made knowingly; for years, Sun Valley has been charging workers for meals, and has surely known that there is no room for workers to cook for themselves in the company kitchen.[39] Tr. 175:22–176:6, 808:4–5 (Russell Jr. testifying that "[t]here's always been a food program").

After assessing CMPs for the meal violations, the Administrator appropriately exercised his discretion not to assess CMPs a second time for each worker for the drink violations; similarly, the Administrator appropriately exercised his discretion not to assess CMPs three times for every worker for each section of the regulations that were violated (§ 655.122(g), (p), and (q)). Tr. 854:14–825; JX-10, at 160–161 (June 22, 2016 Determination Letter).

After deciding to assess one civil money penalty for each worker on the basis of the drink and meal violations and the violations of Sections 655.122(g), (p), and (q), the Administrator then considered all of the CMP mitigation factors. Tr. 851:17–21. Although Sun Valley had previously been cited for violations in connection with its meal plan under MSPA, Sun Valley had not previously violated the H-2A meal plan regulations, so the Administrator reduced the [39] Although Sun Valley may argue that it should escape some liability on the ground that at least some of its domestic workers from past seasons returned in 2015 and therefore knew there would be meal charges, e.g. Tr. 807:16–25, actual reliance on the job offer by any individual worker is not an element of the Administrator's claims. Under Section 655.122(g), disclosure is the rule. And courts have rejected the argument that workers' consent to — or even a request for — an undisclosed meals deduction immunizes the employer from liability. See Global Horizons II, slip op. at 8 (employer violated § 655.122(g) even when workers voluntarily signed written agreement authorizing meals charges after their arrival at a farm); cf. Vallies v. Sky Bank, 591 F.3d 152, 158 (3d Cir. 2009) (absent any individual reliance, damages still available for violation of federal statute requiring disclosures). It is therefore irrelevant whether a particular returning domestic worker might have believed that Sun Valley was continuing its past practice of charging workers some amount for meals. This is all the more important because the amount of the meals charge was subject to change, and did change in 2015 by $20 per week, a significant increase. Tr. 252:14-23; ALJ Ex. 1 ¶ 22. In any event, any purported understanding or oral communication between the farmworkers and Sun Valley was insufficient; the meal charges had to be disclosed in the Job Orders. See PX-20, at 816–817 ¶ 3; 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(q).

CMPs for factor 1, previous history of violations. Tr. 852:3–854:3, 874:20–23 (Director Rachor discussing Sun Valley's previous meals and drink violations).

The Administrator found that the other mitigation factors were inapplicable, as Sun Valley's meal violations:

- Injured a large number of workers (factor 2). Tr. 852:8–11;
- Involved a direct false statement to employees in the job offer, a serious violation (factor 3). Tr. 852:12–18;
- Were committed knowingly, as Sun Valley had a meal plan in place for years and planned to have Hernandez make undisclosed meal charges, so Sun Valley made no effort to comply with the applicable regulations, had no reasonable explanation for the violation, and was not committed to future compliance (factors 4–6). Tr. 852:19–853:8; and
- Caused workers to suffer a financial loss by having to pay money to Sun Valley's lead manager for the meal plan (factor 7). Tr. 853:9–854:2.

The Administrator's application of these factors was reasonable and entitled to deference. For example, regarding factor 7, there was a "financial loss . . . to workers" due to the violation, as had workers been able to cook for themselves, they would have saved money by not having to pay for the cooks' salaries and by purchasing less expensive ingredients. Tr. 252:14–23 (Hernandez testifying that the meal plan rate increased from $55 or $60, apparently because Hernandez now had to pay the cooks' wages). As Pedro Zavala Almanza testified, it would have been cheaper for the workers to buy their food at Wal-Mart than participating in the meal plan. Tr. 264:19–20. Thus there was a financial loss to employees as a result of Sun Valley's violation (regardless of whether Hernandez also profited when he collected the meal charges from workers).

Furthermore, it's clear that Hernandez collected surplus funds from the meal charges: he collected enough money to provide a full-time job to his spouse as a cook in the kitchen, to provide free meals to Russell Jr. on a regular basis, and to provide free meals to eight workers seven days a week.[40] These were all costs that added to the financial loss that the farmworkers had to bear as a result of Sun Valley's violation. Tr. 229:19–23, 721:10–11, 742:13–21.

Regarding Factor 6, commitment to future compliance, when Wage Hour told Sun Valley about the meal violations, the Marinos simply denied that there was any violation, falsely asserting that "workers had access to the kitchen facilities if they wanted to." Tr. 455:15–19 (testimony of Investigator Perez). This insistence that it had done nothing wrong carried with it the implication that Sun Valley would not be changing its approach going forward, i.e. had no commitment to future compliance. Although Sun Valley appears to have subsequently complied with the disclosure requirements — Sun Valley did disclose the meal charges in its Job Orders for the next growing season, PX-15-2, at 505 — denying the violation during the investigation, without giving any indication of the possibility of future compliance, is precisely the opposite of committing to comply. See Tr. 929:8–25.

In the alternative, the Administrator's CMP assessment is appropriate in light of Sun Valley's soft drink and beer violations. Although the Administrator assessed all CMPs under the "Failure to comply with the 'meals' requirement(s)" of 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(g), see JX-10, at 160, the sale of drinks at a profit in violation of 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(p) was an alternative basis for the assessment. See Tr. 884:17–22, 855:8–15; JX-10, at 153, 160–61.

The CMP mitigation factors apply to Sun Valley's violations in the same way for the drink violations as for the meal violations: Sun Valley had no prior history with the H-2A

[40] A profit obtained by Sun Valley's management is also effectively a "financial gain" to Sun Valley, insofar as Sun Valley had less need to provide other forms of compensation to Hernandez as a manager given the illegal deductions that he was collecting from Sun Valley's workforce.

program (factor 1), a significant number of workers were affected by Sun Valley's serious meal violations (factors 2–3), Sun Valley made no effort to comply with respect to its agent's drink sales (factor 4), had no reasonable explanation for the meal violations (factor 5), was not committed to future compliance (factor 6), and workers suffered a financial loss (factor 7).

The Administrator's CMP assessment is consistent with the Global Horizons case, in which the ALJ declined to assess civil money penalties. In that case, the workers specifically requested that the employer provide a meal plan, after they arrived at a farm. At the time the respondent in that case submitted the job offer, there was no meal plan in place, and in fact the respondent provided meals for no charge for the first two meals. Global Horizons I, slip op. at 12. In contrast, Sun Valley had a longstanding meal plan at the time it submitted the Job Orders, and Russell Marino, Jr. personally reviewed the false Job Orders before signing. Tr. 739:23–741:7. Furthermore, in Global Horizons, there was no proof that any charges to workers included a profit. Global Horizons I, slip op. at 9. In these ways, Sun Valley's violations are more deserving of CMPs than the employer's conduct was in Global Horizons.

Accordingly, Sun Valley's failure to disclose the meal plan, its false statements directed both at the workforce and state and federal agencies, and its allowing an affiliated person to profit off of its workforce through sale of drinks and other items, warrants $198,450 in CMPs. The Administrator's assessment of CMPs is fully supported.

V. Sun Valley Violated the Three-Fourths Guarantee By Discharging Twenty-Four Workers Without Paying Compensation Due.

Adding grievous insult to the injury that Sun Valley's workers had already suffered during their time working for the farm in 2015, Sun Valley terminated or constructively discharged dozens of workers in 2015, leaving twenty-four of them with a wage shortfall.

The H-2A regulations impose strict pay and recordkeeping requirements on employers, to ensure that workers are offered work for at least three-fourths of the hours in the job order. As with the other regulations that Sun Valley violated, the three-fourths guarantee requirements are a "fundamental and longstanding" requirement of the H-2A program. 2010 Final Rule, 75 Fed. Reg. at 6913. "[T]he rule provides essential protection for both U.S. and H-2A workers, in that it ensures their commitment to a particular employer will result in real jobs that meet their reasonable expectations." Temporary Agricultural Employment of H-2A Aliens in the United States, 73 Fed. Reg. 77,110, 77,152 (Dec. 18, 2008) ("2008 Final Rule); accord 2010 Final Rule, 75 Fed. Reg. at 6914 (substantially same guarantee). In other words, after workers invest considerable time in travel to the United States and pass up other work opportunities, an employer is prohibited from unilaterally cutting short the work season. The three-fourths guarantee provides a crucial backstop for workers.

The only exception to an employer's obligation to pay the guarantee is if: (1) a worker voluntarily abandons his employment or is terminated for cause and (2) the employer follows proper procedures for notifying government agencies of those circumstances.[41] Neither [41] There is also a modified, essentially discounted three-fourths guarantee applicable in instances of "contract impossibility." That provision is not applicable here, notwithstanding the rainstorms that precipitated Sun Valley's mass layoff. To claim that safe harbor from the three-fourths guarantee, an employer must follow several steps that Sun Valley never did, such as "mak[ing] efforts to transfer the worker[s] to other comparable employment acceptable to the worker, consistent with existing immigration law." 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(o); see In re Global Horizons, Inc., No. 2005-TAE-00001, slip op. at 76 (OALJ May 6, 2011) ("Global Horizons III") (rejecting a respondent's belated attempt to assert an "impossibility" defense for the first time in litigation). Moreover, Sun Valley would have had to actually notify the Department of the weather circumstances and claim reliance on those conditions for its layoffs — neither of which Respondent ever did. Instead, Sun Valley falsely notified the Department that the 44 workers all left for "personal reasons." PX-39, at 1191–95. Having failed to follow any of these requirements and taken affirmative steps to mislead the government, Sun Valley should not be heard to complain that it is being penalized for a weather-related issue.

exception applies here. Sun Valley violated the three-fourths guarantee with respect to twenty-four workers: (1) four workers whom Sun Valley concedes it terminated in August 2015 without cause; (2) the nineteen workers discharged in May 2015; and (3) one worker for whom Sun Valley never notified government agencies of the reasons for his departure in June 2015, who was also constructively discharged.

A. The Three-Fourths Guarantee and Related Recordkeeping and Notice Requirements

Compliance with the three-fourths guarantee is "based on a simple mathematical calculation," determined by a handful of variables. 2008 Final Rule, 73 Fed. Reg. at 77,152. Specifically, an "employer must guarantee to offer" its workers "employment for a total number of work hours equal to at least three-fourths of the workdays of the total period beginning with the first workday after the arrival of the worker at the place of employment . . . and ending on the expiration date specified in the work contract." 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(i)(1). If the employer "affords [a] U.S. or H-2A worker less employment than that required under" the guarantee, "the employer must pay such worker the amount the worker would have earned had the worker, in fact, worked for the guaranteed number of days." Id. § 655.122(i)(1)(iv).

Workdays, Hours Worked, and Hours Offered. The regulations also set forth detailed rules that the employer must use to calculate which hours can count toward the guarantee. For example, "a workday means the number of hours in a workday as stated in the job order and excludes . . . [f]ederal holidays." Id. § 655.122(i)(1)(i). An employer may claim credit toward the guarantee by offering "more than the specified hours of work on a single workday" — but only to the extent that the worker, at his sole discretion, actually works such overtime hours that day. Id. § 655.122(i)(1)(iv). An employer may also claim credit toward the guarantee on a given day when the employer "offer[s]" that worker "an opportunity to work," if the "worker fails to work, up to a maximum of the number of hours specified in the job order for a workday" — but only to the extent that the employer maintains specific corroborating payroll records. Id. § 655.122(i)(3); see id. § 655.122(j).

Required Records. The employer must keep "records showing . . . the number of hours of work offered each day by the employer (broken out by hours offered both in accordance with and over and above the three-fourths guarantee . . .)." Id. § 655.122(j)(1). "[I]f the number of hours worked by [a] worker on a day during the work contract period is less than the number of hours offered, as specified in the job offer," the employer's payroll "records must state the reason or reasons therefore." Id. § 655.122(j)(3).

Required Notifications of Voluntary Departure or Termination for Cause. When an employer fails to satisfy the hours guarantee, it is only excused from supplementing workers' wages under narrow circumstances. If a worker "voluntarily abandons employment" or is "terminated for cause," and the employer also timely and properly notifies federal agencies, the employer may be relieved of the three-fourths guarantee. Id. § 655.122(n); see Information about the DOL Notification Process for Worker Abandonment or Termination for Cause for H-2A Temporary Agricultural Certifications, 76 Fed. Reg. 21,041 (Apr. 14, 2011) ("DOL Notification Process") (required notifications to Department of Labor); see also 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(5)(vi)(B)(1); H-2A Petitioner's Employment-Related or Fee-Related Notification, 73 Fed. Reg. 77,047 (Dec. 18, 2008) ("USCIS Notification") (required notifications to Department of Homeland Security). However, the "factual basis underlying any notification provided" by an employer regarding a worker's departure "is subject to review during an audit or investigation," for "fraud, misrepresentation or other violations." 2010 Final Rule, 75 Fed. Reg. at 6914.

B. As Sun Valley Concedes, It Owes a Three-Fourths Guarantee to Four Workers Terminated in August.

Of the 44 workers Sun Valley terminated in August 2015, the Administrator determined that Sun Valley violated the three-fourths guarantee with respect to four of those workers: Luna Gonzalez, Elizondo Soto, Raya Tapia, and Morales Acosta. PX-1, at 1; see Tr. 426:22–25, 639:14–25, 642:18–644:4. As Sun Valley belatedly and correctly conceded only after calling a "rebuttal" witness at trial, the Administrator's calculations are in fact, correct. Tr. 702:20–25, 704:1–5. Accordingly, Sun Valley owes $4,386.18 in back wages for these workers.

C. Sun Valley Owes a Three-Fourths Guarantee to the Nineteen Workers Who Involuntarily Departed in May After Sun Valley Discharged Them.

1. Sun Valley Terminated, or Alternately Constructively Discharged These Workers.

As all six of the relevant testifying worker witnesses made plain, Sun Valley terminated the group of nineteen workers who dared to speak out about their working conditions in early May 2015. Having already faced threats from Hernandez during their first days on the job that they would be sent home to Mexico, Sun Valley made good on that promise by firing them after they asked for an audience with Russell Marino, Jr.[42] Tr. 39:8–10, 65:16–17, 80:24–81:3, 107:18–20, 125:11–13, 125:21–23, 129:1–12; PX-3, at 101:16; PX-9, at 232:20–21, 233:12–15, [42] Sun Valley has made great hay out of the workers' testimony that Joe Marino was not present. Tr. 62:2–4, 111:8–16. The workers' consistent testimony is unsurprising since Joe arrived late, Tr. 222:9, 724:3, and did not speak, Tr. 241:1–6. Sun Valley's point is particularly poorly raised since Russell Jr. previously testified at his deposition that Joe "was not there" at all. RX-12, at 137:17–23. Joe Marino's presence was surely unmemorable. As for Joe Marino's own testimony about the May meeting, it is patently not credible given his sudden recollection at trial after testifying at his deposition at length about his lack of recollection of the meeting, repeatedly and vehemently denying any specific memory. See Tr. 825:14–829:23.

258:17–23; PX-11, at 305:6–8.[43] As Marco Giovanny Maldonado, Gustavo Marquez Perez, and several others testified, at the end of the short meeting, the workers understood that Russell Jr. had decided that they were no longer necessary, would not be allowed to continue working, and "needed to leave."[44] Tr. 81:3, 107:21–108:1.

Accordingly, Sun Valley is liable to these nineteen workers in the amounts listed in PX-1, based on the damages methodology described above.

However, even if the Court determines that the workers were not formally discharged, Sun Valley is still liable for the three-fourths guarantee because these nineteen workers' were constructively discharged, given the objectively intolerable work and living conditions that they faced. See Chertkova v. Conn. Gen. Life Ins. Co., 92 F.3d 81, 89 (2d Cir. 1996) (considering

---

[43] Sun Valley's defense that the workers departed voluntarily lacks credibility given Sun Valley's contemporaneous memorialization of patently false reasons for more than half of the workers' departure, on the supposed ground that they had a sick or injured family member, which all parties agree is not true. See JX-8, at 89–95, 102, 106, 107; PX-3-1, at 115; see also JX-8, at 98–100. Sun Valley's admittedly false notifications to government agencies of the reasons for other workers' departures in August cast further doubt on Sun Valley's account of the May workers' departure.

[44] Despite his "questionable" Spanish and his inability to speak with the most elemental grammar such as conjugation, Russell Marino, Jr. maintains that he spoke Spanish throughout this crucial meeting, and Hernandez claims not to have translated at all. Tr. 225:7–8, 225:14, 240:20–25, 724:22–24, 767:5–20; PX-15, at 456:15–22, 457:10–20. Even if there was a miscommunication caused by a language barrier, Respondent is liable for the impression it caused. Courts have held employers liable for terminating workers who raised complaints about terms and conditions of employment even absent employers' subjective intent to fire their workers, when miscommunications resulted in the terminations. E.g. Sup. Farming Co. v. Ag. Labor Relations Bd., 198 Cal. Rptr. 608, 618 (Ct. App. 1984).

The Court need not definitively determine whether Sun Valley fired the workers intentionally, without knowing it because of a miscommunication, or through creating objectively unreasonable work conditions. See Tr. 538:13–25 (Investigator Perez testimony that in earlier interviews, some workers explained that they were terminated and others explained that they were constructively discharged). In any of these scenarios, the workers were discharged and are owed the back wages that the Administrator has computed for Sun Valley's violation of the three-fourths guarantee. See Chertkova, 92 F.3d at 96.

actual discharge and constructive discharge as alternative arguments and concluding that a reasonable factfinder could conclude that workers were discharged under either framework).

"Under the constructive discharge doctrine, an employee's reasonable decision to resign because of unendurable working conditions is assimilated to a formal discharge for remedial purposes." Pa. State Police v. Suders, 542 U.S. 129, 141 (2004). "The inquiry is objective: Did working conditions become so intolerable that a reasonable person in the employee's position would have felt compelled to resign?" Id.; see WHD Bulletin No. 2012-1 (Feb. 28, 2012) (applying constructive discharge doctrine to H-2A context).[45]

Sun Valley subjected these nineteen workers to "unendurable working conditions." Suders, 542 U.S. at 141. First, although the Job Orders stated that the workday was seven hours on weekdays and only five hours per weekend and that workers would "not be required to" work additional hours, JX-1, at 1, 9 ¶ 11; JX-3, at 42, 50 ¶ 11, Sun Valley required the asparagus pickers to work, continuously "crouched," upwards of ten to twelve hours most days, often without rest periods. Tr. 17:5–25, 90:8–12, 91:2–4, 139:5–8, 139:9–15, 238:23–239:2, 257:6–9; PX-3, at 68:22–70:1, 70:14–71:1. Sun Valley regularly denied them breaks, and even penalized their requests for breaks by threatening to send them back to Mexico if they did not pick up their work pace. Tr. 138:11–19, 148:10–16; PX-5, at 125:9–13. For their part, the workers had no objection to working the 40 weekly hours specified in the Job Orders, or more, performing the same asparagus work they had been assigned, but some had concerns about being forced to work "extra overtime" given the physical demands. PX-11, at 301:4–5; see id. at 324:20–325:3 ("Q: How many hours a week were you willing to work cutting asparagus at Sun Valley? A: At least 40 hours.").

[45] https://www.dol.gov/whd/FieldBulletins/fab2012_1.pdf.

Moreover, many of the housing and field sanitation conditions were "intolerable and violate[d] applicable safety and health standards," particularly during the short period the nineteen workers labored in late early and early May. See WHD Bulletin No. 2012-1, at 5. During that time, there were no bathroom facilities whatsoever in Sun Valley's fields. Tr. 18:17–19, 91:9–10, 139:16–17; see PX-3, at 91:12–23; PX-9, 216:5–10, 220:24.[46] As a result, workers had to "hold it or run towards the trees" to urinate or defecate in or near the fields, a "complete odyssey." PX-9, at 212:3–9, 216:5–10; PX-11, at 274:19–24. Other workers such as Jose Manuel Baltazar Cheguez felt they "couldn't leave the field at all" to take the time to relieve themselves, so "had to wait until [they] were finished" working entirely to use the bathroom. Tr. 139:16–17. Adding to the grueling environment, the workers also endured periods when Sun Valley provided no drinking water. Tr. 19:5–7, 139:21–22; see also PX-5, at 19:12–15; PX-9, at 216:11–12; PX-3, at 73:5–13. Such conditions violated basic field sanitation requirements for potable drinking water and toilet and handwashing facilities. 29 C.F.R. § 1928.110(c)(1)–(2).

When Sun Valley's workers retired at the end of each day, having been exposed to long hours in the sun, dirt, and around pesticides, they did so in a housing facility that Sun Valley maintained in miserable conditions. In addition to the broken screens and uncovered cans that encouraged the presence of insects in the dorm rooms and bathroom, the unclean mattresses on the floor, and the inadequate hot water, see infra Section VII, the bathrooms were in the "worst condition," PX-9, at 226:20–21.

> There was shit on the walls and on the toilets like rubbed on the walls --- on the toilets. There was toilet paper everywhere, dirty toilet paper everywhere. Some would piss outside of the toilets. In the showers there was even dirt, mud, hair, [46] Although Sun Valley disputes this point, Tr. 720:5–6, the workers' testimony to the contrary is simply overwhelming.

> human hair everywhere. Where you would wash your hands, the sinks were all tarnished. There was also like water everywhere. Water and hair everywhere.

PX-5, at 142:21–143:5. Structurally, the toilets were unstable; "they were tilted and they moved." Tr. 103:20–23. Moreover, there was little to no privacy; there were no doors separating the toilets, and some did not even have any separation, let alone a plastic curtain in between. Tr. 29:25–30:2, 163:23–25. Such deplorable conditions violated Sun Valley's obligation to provide "clean and sanitary" bathing and handwashing facilities." 20 C.F.R. § 654.412(a). And when the workers were transported in vehicles between the dorm and fields, they were further exposed to unsafe conditions, in violation of applicable safety standards. See infra Section VIII. It is simply unreasonable to expect workers to remain and work under such "intolerable" conditions. See WHD Bulletin No. 2012-1, at 5. Accordingly, separate and apart from the mandatory overtime, these conditions establish a constructive discharge.

What's more, Sun Valley's workers made diligent efforts to present their concerns about many of these unreasonable conditions to Sun Valley, in an effort to provide Sun Valley the opportunity to ameliorate the deplorable conditions. Tr. 33:23–34:6 (Maldonado), 90:16–91:1, 106:18–107:4, 122:7–13 (Marquez Perez), 147:9–15 (Baltazar Cheguez), 303:11–21 (Zavala Almanza); PX-3, at 99:19–100:2 (Cervantes Ramirez); PX-11, at 319:11–320:2 (Garcia Dominguez). Although not a necessary element of a constructive discharge claim, employees' complaints to management are often considered "significant" probative evidence of such a claim. See Clowes v. Allegheny Valley Hosp., 991 F.2d 1159, 1161 & n.6 (3d Cir. 1993) (explaining that reasonable employees tend to raise complaints under objectively intolerable conditions).

While Sun Valley repeatedly emphasized at trial that another approximately twenty workers remained working in the miserable conditions at Sun Valley after the nineteen were discharged, see Tr. 63:16, 223:20–21, this argument is misplaced. The constructive discharge inquiry is an objective one, Suders, 542 U.S. at 141, and does not look to whether some workers decided to endure awful conditions, for instance out of economic pressure to earn a better wage than they could have in Mexico. What matters is whether the workers who actually departed did so after enduring objectively intolerable conditions. See Suders, 542 U.S. at 141. Moreover, it makes perfect sense that the nineteen workers were the only ones to depart in May, as they were the ones who actually raised concerns about their working conditions, sought the meeting with the Marinos, and attended the meeting, and had their complaints ignored.

Whether formally terminated or constructively discharged, none of the nineteen workers who departed Sun Valley in May 2015 "voluntarily abandon[ed] employment" or were "terminated for cause." See 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(i)(5). Accordingly, Sun Valley is liable for back wages in the amounts listed at PX-1. See also JX-7, at 88 (listing the 19 discharged workers).

2. The Administrator's Back-Wage Computations for the Discharged May Workers Are Reasonable.

The Administrator's back wage calculations are reasonable and should be upheld. Investigator Perez followed a uniform method for calculating back wages for all workers owed the three-fourths guarantee. Tr. 430:1–3.[47] Based exclusively on Sun Valley's own weekly payroll records, which set forth the number of daily and weekly hours worked by each employee in question, Investigator Perez determined the employees for which Sun Valley did not satisfy the three-fourths guarantee in the following manner. Tr. 438:12–21; see generally Tr. 310:24–311:14, 419:23–420:15, 438:12–21, 628:9–25; PX-41, at 1227.

[47] The Court admitted PX-1, as well as PX-2, as summaries of voluminous records pursuant to Federal Rule of Evidence 1006 and 29 C.F.R. § 18.1006, Tr. 584:23-585:14, and Respondent failed to introduce any evidence rebutting the accuracy of these summaries, Tr. 968:13-24.

First, to determine the "total period," § 655.122(i)(1), on which the guarantee was based for each H-2A worker employed by Sun Valley in 2015, Investigator Perez determined the start date of the first weekly pay period in which a worker was paid in 2015. Tr. 428:15–16; PX-1 ("Start of First Pay Period" column). Investigator Perez used that date as a consistent, reasonable estimate of the worker's start date because Sun Valley's payroll records did not list workers' actual arrival dates, and because many workers had several idle days after their arrival at the farm before they began working (and being paid). Tr. 525:16–17, 531:21–24, 610:21–611:14, 634:23–635:22; see id. at 43:9–11, 81:13–16 (Maldonado testimony).[48]

Next, he used Sun Valley's job orders to determine the length of the workdays (7 hours on weekdays and 5 hours on weekends), for a total of 40 work hours per week, and to determine the end of the guarantee period (October 10, 2015).[49] Tr. 420:16–20, 523:15–16; see JX-1, at 1, 9 ¶ 11; JX-3, at 42, 50 ¶ 11; see also 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(i)(1) (defining "workday" with reference to the "number of hours in a workday as stated in the job order"). Then, for each worker, Investigator Perez computed the total number of weeks from the start to the end of the guarantee period, expressed as a number of hours. Tr. 428:19–23; PX-1 ("Weeks" column).[50] Before converting the number of workday weeks to a number of workday hours, he determined which [48] The H-2A regulations provide that the "total period" for three-fourths-guarantee purposes starts with "the first workday after the arrival of the worker at the place of employment or the advertised contractual first date of need, whichever is later." 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(i)(1).

[49] One page of each Job Order stated that Saturday was a five-hour workday (with no work required on Sunday), JX-1, at 9; JX-3, at 50, but another page of each of the same job orders stated that Sunday was a five-hour workday (with no work required on Saturday), JX-1, at 1; JX-3, at 42. This inconsistency in Sun Valley's Job Orders is immaterial to Sun Valley's liability.

[50] For each worker, the number of weeks ends in a fraction of 0.525 (21/40 hours) because Sun Valley's pay period began on a Wednesday, and the last day of the job order was Saturday, October 10, 2015, which Investigator Perez treated as a non-workday. Tr. 523:10–24, 524:3-5; see JX-1, at 1; JX-3, at 42 (job orders specified that Saturday was not a workday).

federal holidays fell within the workers' contract period and should be excluded from the guarantee period. See 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(i)(1)(i), (iii); Tr. 428:23–429:1.[51] He then multiplied the "Weeks" column by the "Job Offer Hours per Week" column, before subtracting the "Federal Holiday(s) Hours" column, to yield the "Total Workday Hours Between First Pay Period and Contract End." PX-1; see Tr. 429:2–4. That column, multiplied by 75%, yields the number of work hours Sun Valley agreed to guarantee each worker in 2015, and appears in the "3/4 Guarantee" column in PX-1. Tr. 429:4–9.

Based on Sun Valley's payroll and time records, Investigator Perez copied the total number of hours each employee worked all season into the "Hrs Wrked" column on PX-1. Tr. 429:13–15, 438:17–439:5.[52] For each of the workers listed on PX-1, the "Hrs Wrked" column falls below the "3/4 Guarantee" column by the number of hours shown in the "Variance" column. Tr. 429:13–15. In other words, Sun Valley violated the three-fourths guarantee by that number of hours, for each of the workers shown in PX-1. The corresponding back wages for [51] For workers who arrived at Sun Valley before Memorial Day, Monday May 25, 2015, 7 federal holiday hours were excluded from the total guarantee period. For these and all other workers, 7 federal holiday hours were excluded from the total guarantee period for Labor Day, Monday, September 7. 20 C.F.R. § 655.103 (defining Federal holiday) (citing 5 U.S.C. § 6103).

---

[52] Sun Valley maintained two separate types of payroll records: "payroll run inquiry check view," of which PX-23 are a sample, Tr. 422:2–21, 633:10–14, and "payroll summary" records, of which PX-24 and PX-25 are a sample, Tr. 634:1–4. Sun Valley did not produce complete sets of either type of record, so Investigator Perez used a combination of these payroll records. When Investigator Perez reviewed the "check view" records, he used the "hours column" to determine the number of hours employees worked on each day. Tr. 634:7–10. When he reviewed the "payroll summary" records, he used the "REG" column to determine the number of hours employees worked each day. Tr. 634:11–17. Sun Valley's own payroll witness confirmed that Investigator Perez reviewed the correct columns of the payroll records and correctly disregarded the confusingly named "total time" column, which on occasion reflected fewer hours than employees actually worked because of a "glitch." Tr. 689:19–691:1; see also PX-22, at 847–849 ¶¶ 4–7 (Respondent's interrogatories explained that total hours worked appear in the "hours column" and "REG" columns of the respective payroll records).

each worker are the number of hours in the "Variance" column multiplied by $11.29, the minimum hourly wage Sun Valley was required to pay its H-2A and corresponding workers in 2015 for periods that workers were paid on an hourly basis. Tr. 430:4–13.[53]

Sun Valley's suggestion that the guarantee here should be based on estimated offers of work rather than actual work is meritless. Initially, Sun Valley did not keep any records of hours of work allegedly offered to its employees, or the reasons that employees did not work on particular days, as Sun Valley's witnesses admitted at trial. Tr. 683:22–684:9, 705:13–706:1, 706:8–13; see Tr. 585:16–21, 645:24–646:3, 648:16–649:5. In fact, Sun Valley did not use its ostensibly state-of-the-art payroll system to keep track of such information. Tr. 683:22–684:9, 705:13–706:1, 706:8–13. Accordingly, pursuant to the H-2A regulations, the Administrator measured Sun Valley's three-fourths guarantee liability based on the number of hours employees actually worked, rather than the hours Sun Valley "offered." See Tr. 431:9–16, 432:19–23; 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(i)(3) ("An employer seeking to calculate whether the number of [guarantee] hours has been met must maintain the payroll records in accordance with this subpart."); id. § 655.122(j) (enumerating required records, including of "the number of hours offered each day by the employer (broken out by hours offered both in accordance with and over and above the three-fourths guarantee . . ."); Global Horizons III, slip op. at 40–41, 63, 77, 88–92 (basing three-fourths guarantee liability on records of "hours actually worked" where an employer's records

[53] In fact, given Sun Valley's hybrid hourly/piece rate system, the Administrator could have used a higher rate to calculate the three-fourths guarantee. That is so because for piece rate workers, an "employer must use the worker's average hourly piece rate earnings or the required hourly wage rate, whichever is higher, to calculate the amount due under the guarantee." 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(i)(2); see ALJ Ex. 1 ¶ 16 ("Sun Valley promised to pay [its] employees $11.29 per hour or at a piece rate, whichever was higher") (emphasis added); see also, e.g., PX-24, at 929 (payroll showing higher piece rate earnings that could have been used to determine amounts average hourly earnings due pursuant to the guarantee).

"failed to identify the number of hours offered broken out by offers in accordance with and over the three-quarters guarantee").

Given Sun Valley's failure to maintain accurate and complete records of hours offered pursuant to the regulations, it is of no moment that some workers may have missed work because they caught chicken pox from unclean mattresses at Sun Valley, Tr. 554:20–555:1; PX-7, at 170:12–15, or suffered injuries on the job, Tr. 555:2–21. The regulations required Sun Valley to document any such reasons as part of its payroll records in 2015. 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(j)(3) ("To assist in determining whether the three-fourths guarantee . . . has been met, if the number of hours worked by the worker on a day during the work contract period is less than the number of hours offered, as specified in the job offer, the records must state the reason or reasons therefore."); see id. § 655.122(j)(1), 655.122(i)(3). Having failed to keep the records, Sun Valley cannot now be heard to complain that its compliance can be inferred from looking at other workers' hours. Tr. 556:9–557:16, 585:16–21. No inference from other workers' payroll can be made, in the absence of the required records. 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(i)(3).

Equally in bad faith is Sun Valley's suggestion that it kept all required records but the Administrator's representatives simply failed to use magic words to request those records during the investigation. Tr. 649:20–22. Respondent's insinuation is particularly disingenuous given the admissions of not only Sun Valley's own payroll specialist, but of Joe Marino, that no records of hours offered ever existed. Tr. 833:22–834:8. Respondent had the opportunity and the obligation to produce such records during the investigation and during this litigation, and never did so despite repeated requests. See Tr. 650:3–6; PX-41, at 1227–28 (requesting all time and payroll records); PX-20, at 818–19 ¶¶ 7–8.

D. Sun Valley Also Owes a Three-Fourths Guarantee to Jose Islas Larraga.

The Administrator also determined that Sun Valley owes $2,751.94 in back wages to Jose Islas Larraga, whose last date of work at Sun Valley was June 9, 2015. PX-1. Sun Valley owes this worker the unpaid three-fourths guarantee for two reasons.

First, the company never provided the required notice to government agencies that Mr. Islas Larraga was no longer working at Sun Valley. Tr. 419:12–21, 436:4–10; see PX-39, at 1189–1216 (Islas Larraga absent from full set of notifications). If, as Sun Valley again wildly speculates, Tr. 558:21–561:10, Mr. Islas Larraga had in fact "voluntarily abandon[ed] employment before the end of the contract period, or [wa]s terminated for cause,"[54] Sun Valley would have been relieved of paying the guarantee had the company also provided timely notice to the Departments of Labor and of Homeland Security, including of the accurate reasons for his departure. 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(n); DOL Notification Process, 76 Fed. Reg. at 21,041. But Sun Valley did not provide this required notice — not late, and not ever. No amount of inadmissible speculation for the reasons Mr. Islas Larraga stopped working can overcome Sun Valley's failure to advise the Department of the fact of Mr. Islas Larraga's departure, and the reasons therefor.

Second, Mr. Islas Larraga's short time at Sun Valley overlapped with the nineteen workers discharged in May, and he suffered under the same objectively unreasonable working conditions. See PX-1, at 1 (Islas Larraga worked from April 29 to June 9). Accordingly, even [54] Further undermining Sun Valley's position, in response to the Administrator's interrogatories regarding any workers who resigned voluntarily or were terminated for cause, Sun Valley did not identify Mr. Islas Larraga. PX-21, at 836–837 ¶¶ 9–10.

assuming that he left of his own accord, it is only reasonable to conclude that he was constructively discharged.[55]

E. A Civil Money Penalty of $1,350 for Sun Valley's Pattern of Three-Fourths Guarantee Violations is Eminently Reasonable

The Administrator assessed a single $1,350 civil money penalty for each of Sun Valley's failures to satisfy the three-fourths guarantee during the 2015 season. JX-10, at 161. This penalty was based on the Administrator's reasoned consideration of all applicable factors. See Tr. 856:4–857:21, 935:21–937:2. The Administrative Review Board has upheld a substantially larger penalty assessment, issued on a per-worker basis for three-fourths guarantee violations. See Global Horizons III, slip op. at 136–137 (upholding a $32,500 penalty calculated on a per-worker basis). Given Sun Valley's three separate failures to meet the three-fourths guarantee with respect to twenty-four workers, the $1,350 penalty is more than reasonable and independently supported by each instance of Sun Valley's three-fourths guarantee violations — including the violation for the August-terminated workers that Sun Valley has finally conceded.

Although Sun Valley has emphasized its efforts to upgrade its payroll system, e.g., Tr. 798:3–21, the Administrator was well within his discretion to determine that Sun Valley was not entitled to application of mitigating factor 4 for any efforts to comply in good faith with the three-fourths guarantee regulation. Tr. 857:15–23. While Joe Marino testified about the "pretty slick" and "very awesome" computer upgrade, Tr. 795:22–796:4, 798:4–5, Sun Valley's payroll specialist admitted that the system did not track hours offered and reasons that workers did not perform work on particular days as required by the regulations. Tr. 705:13–706:13; see Tr. 825:1–3. Nor did Sun Valley present any evidence, whether at the final conference or at trial, that its computer upgrades were designed to track compliance with any aspect of calculating the three-fourths guarantee or related recordkeeping requirements.

[55] Unlike in In re Peroulis & Sons Sheep, Inc., there is ample evidence that Islas Larraga did not "voluntarily" abandon his employment, and the Administrator therefore does not seek back wages "solely because [Sun Valley] failed to give written and timely notice" of Islas Larraga's departure. See In re Peroulis & Sons Sheep, Inc., ARB Case No. 2013-0083, at 5–6 (DOL Admin. Rev. Bd. June 16, 2015). The Administrator's approach here is consistent with Peroulis & Sons Sheep, Inc. and the WHD Bulletin No. 2012-1 discussed therein.

Moreover, Sun Valley utterly failed to offer a valid explanation for its three-fourths guarantee violations, and the Administrator was within his discretion not to reduce the penalty based on mitigating factor 5. Indeed, through the final day of trial, when counsel finally conceded some of the three-fourths guarantee violations, Sun Valley vigorously asserted that it had complied with the three-fourths guarantee with respect to the terminated August workers, even after being presented with overwhelming evidence to the contrary during discovery and through summary judgment briefing. Similarly, Sun Valley has continued to deny responsibility for the three-fourths guarantee violation for the discharged May workers. For these reasons, whether Sun Valley also pointed to the false departure forms should not affect the calculation of this separate civil money penalty for the three-fourths guarantee. Cf. Tr. 918:14–15.

VI. Sun Valley Attempted to Coerce Workers to Waive Their Rights by Signing False Forms, Warranting $1,350 in Civil Money Penalties.

Sun Valley sought to have workers waive their rights to the three-fourths guarantee when Sun Valley terminated workers in May and again in August 2015. In particular, Sun Valley created false records of the workers' departure, in an attempt to immunize the company from three-fourths guarantee liability. In doing so, Sun Valley violated 29 C.F.R. § 501.5, which prohibits any "person" from "seek[ing] to have" any H-2A worker waive rights pursuant to 20 C.F.R. part 655, subpart B, including § 655.122(i).[56]

As described above, Sun Valley provided both the May- and August-terminated workers with forms falsely memorializing that the workers "do hereby resign [their] job[s]." For both groups, Russell Marino, Jr. and Hernandez personally brought the forms to the workers and demanded that they sign, even though many of the workers were hesitant to do so. Tr. 83:10–13, 108:7–11, 109:25–110:15, 149:13–14, 225:23–25, 274:9–12, 21–23, 732:15–16, 768:24–769:4, 769:13–20. To convince them to pick one of the inapposite and false choices, Russell Jr. and Hernandez misrepresented that signing the form "was for [Sun Valley] not to be in trouble and for [the workers] also not to get in trouble." Tr. 149:4–9, 155:15–19; PX-11, at 304:18–305:12; PX-13, at 357:4–6. The illogical checked boxes throughout JX-8, including that the majority of the workers left because of an ill or dead relative, are the result of Russell Jr.'s and Hernandez's heavy hands: first in deciding to distribute predicated on an inaccurate premise (that workers were resigning in the first place), and then introducing a further falsity by guiding many of the workers to indicate nonsensical reasons for their departure.

Consistent with the false information that the workers filled out at Sun Valley's direction, Sun Valley, through its agent National Agricultural Consultants, sent false notifications to government agencies regarding the groups of workers whose employment ended, in both May and August. These e-mails official notified the U.S. Departments of Labor and Homeland Security that the workers left voluntarily, rather than after being terminated. PX-39, at 1191–95, [56] Because the Administrator need prove only that Sun Valley sought to have any workers waive their rights, see § 501.5, the Administrator is entitled to judgment in his favor on this claim as long as the Court determines that Sun Valley violated the regulation as to a single worker.

1198–1200 (notifications); Tr. 409:5–12, 748:20–24, 753:12–754:2; cf. Tr. 754:23–24 (concession that the August workers were "terminated without cause").

By securing the workers' signatures on the false forms, and then submitting information to government agencies founded on those forms' content, Sun Valley succeeded in obtaining so-called "proof" "[t]o cover, so [the Marinos were] covered . . . to protect against" litigation, as Russell Jr. put the point. PX-15, at 475:1–8. Indeed, the forms had no other purpose. There was nothing standard or required under relevant law about the options that Sun Valley listed on the forms, let alone requiring workers to complete any form. See 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(5)(vi)(B)(1) (no form required), 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(n) (same), DOL Notification Process, 76 Fed. Reg. 21,041 (same), USCIS Notification, 73 Fed. Reg. 77,047 (same). For that reason, Sun Valley's protest that National Agricultural Consultants, its agent, created the form cannot insulate Respondent from liability. Tr. 732:7–12. Not only is Sun Valley responsible for its agent's conduct, it is also responsible for tailoring any documents provided by its agent to the actual circumstances at issue. JX-2, at 31 ("I take full responsibility for the accuracy of any representations made by my agent . . . .") (emphasis in the original); JX-4, at 70 (same); see JX-2, at 39–41; 20 C.F.R. § 655.135. Moreover, whether Sun Valley actually proceeded to rely on the signed forms at the final conference to defend against the separate three-fourths guarantee violation, Tr. 549:2–550:2, 920:19–921:7, is also entirely beside the point. Because 29 C.F.R. § 501.5 prohibits attempts to coerce workers to waive their rights, the violation was complete when Sun Valley convinced the workers to sign the form.

For the coercion violation, the Administrator assessed $1,350 in civil money penalties. JX-10, at 162. Having given due consideration to all relevant facts and circumstances, the Administrator determined that only the first mitigating factor should be applied, since this was

Sun Valley's first coercion violation under the H-2A regulations. Tr. 858:22–861:16. This assessment should be upheld as reasonable, given the serious nature of Sun Valley's attempt to induce workers to sign forms that were "not an accurate description or not an accurate portrayal of . . . the actual circumstances" of the workers' departure. Tr. 861:13–16.

VII. Sun Valley's Substandard Housing Violated 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(d)(1)(i), and the Administrator's Reasonable $3,600 CMP Assessment Should Be Upheld.

During its investigation of Sun Valley in late July 2015, the Wage and Hour Division found five specific housing violations, each of which exposed Sun Valley's vulnerable migrant workers to unacceptable health and safety risks. The evidence presented at the hearing establishes the company's liability for these violations pursuant to the H-2A regulations.

Sun Valley was required to provide housing to its H-2A and domestic workers that was compliant with Employment and Training Administration housing standards, codified at 29 C.F.R. §§ 654.404 through 654.417. See 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(d)(1)(i).[57] These very basic standards date to 1951 and have not been significantly updated since 1968. Workforce Innovation and Opportunity Act (Notice of Proposed Rulemaking), 80 Fed. Reg. 20,690, 20,812 (Apr. 16, 2015). Significantly, housing built since early 1980 must comply with more recent and "more modern" OSHA standards, which "provide for superior standards of safety and habitability." Id.; see 20 C.F.R. §§ 655.122(d)(1)(i), 654.401(a).[58]

[57] The ETA standards were revised slightly in 2016, solely to "updat[e] outdated terminology." Workforce Innovation and Opportunity Act, 81 Fed. Reg. 56,072, 56,280 (Aug. 19, 2016). This brief cites to the version of the ETA regulations in effect in 2015.

[58] The parties agree that the older, less stringent ETA standards apply in this case. Tr. 597:4-12; ALJ Ex. 1 ¶ 20. Although the Department has proposed eliminating the grandfathering provisions for the ETA regulations, the most recent rulemaking left the ETA standards in place for pre-1980 housing. Workforce Innovation and Opportunity Act, 81 Fed. Reg. at 56,281.

The older ETA standards, applicable here, were issued after a legislative and rulemaking process finding that farmworker housing had "frequently been overcrowded, unsanitary, lacking beds and bedding, unheated, and a fire hazard." U.S. Att'y Gen. Op., Migrant Farm Labor – Wagner-Peyser Act, 1959 WL 3714, at *2 (July 2, 1959). The ETA standards represent the Department's earliest attempt to address "the experiences of the [state workforce] agencies [that] indicate that employees . . . have on many occasions been provided with inadequate, unsafe, and unsanitary housing conditions." 20 C.F.R. § 654.400(a).

The evidence at the hearing establishes that Sun Valley committed each of the five housing violations for which the Wage and Hour Division issued a specific citation.[59]

A. The Unscreened Bathroom Windows Exposed Farmworkers to Insects.

The ETA regulations require that "[a]ll outside openings" in Sun Valley's housing facility "be protected with screening of not less than 16 mesh." 20 C.F.R. § 654.408(a).

Sun Valley admitted this violation at the hearing. Hernandez agreed that the bathroom "windows don't have screens," so when the windows are open, "there's nothing preventing anything from going in and out from the window." Tr. 202:20–203:1. That was precisely the state in which WHD Investigators found Sun Valley's bathroom windows, one of which they photographed during the investigation. Tr. 324:3–4, 330:23–331:24; PX-28, at 1046–47. Not surprisingly, both WHD and workers observed considerable flying insects in the bathrooms. Tr. 30:6–7, 330:9–11.

Sun Valley's missing window screens plainly violated § 654.408(a).

[59] In addition to the specific violations that WHD cited, the Administrator adduced additional testimony from workers regarding unsanitary housing conditions, particularly during April and May 2015, a few months before WHD's July 21–22 investigation. Although WHD did not uncover or cite these violations during its investigation, the additional housing conditions are relevant to the three-fourths guarantee violation that WHD cited. See supra Section V.C.1.

B. The Ripped Dormitory Screen Doors Also Exposed Workers to Vermin.

Similarly, the ETA regulations require that "[a]ll screen doors . . . be tight fitting, in good repair, and equipped with self-closing devices." 20 C.F.R. § 654.408(b). As proven by several contemporaneous photographs and confirmed by Investigator Perez's testimony, at least two dormitory screen doors were ripped or had holes. PX-28, at 1048–52; Tr. 324:3–5. When Investigators Perez and Crudup inspected the worker housing, they found that some of the screens had become so separated from the door frames that their clipboard and pen easily passed through the gaps. Tr. 326:4–328:9; PX-28, at 1050–52. The doors also did not fully close. PX-28, at 1048–1050, 1054; see Tr. 326:8–13. These broken screens were a longstanding problem at Sun Valley, for which the Wage and Hour Division had previously cited a housing-related safety violation in 2013, Tr. 332:14–19, 599:6–12, among other years. While Sun Valley asserts that it had a regular maintenance practice, Tr. 173:3–17, 777:2–8, it clearly was not directed at these housing conditions.

There can be no question that Sun Valley was in violation of § 654.408(b) with respect to each of the torn or ripped screens, as well as the door's failure to close, on the date of WHD's housing inspection, July 21, 2015. Tr. 328:8–9.

Nonetheless, in attempt to deflect responsibility for this violation, Sun Valley has speculated that the workers must have torn the screens, Tr. 499:1–2, since the housing passed the New Jersey Department of Labor's inspection five months early, on February 25, 2015, RX-2, at 13; see Tr. 498:11–16. Respondent's "blame the workers" theory fails as a matter of law and as a matter of common sense.[60]

[60] Sun Valley has presented no evidence — nothing but wild speculation — that any workers caused any particular damage, or anything beyond normal wear and tear.

First, Sun Valley remained responsible for ensuring compliance with housing safety and health standards during the full growing season. It is precisely for that reason that the Department conducts post-certification inspections of H-2A employers once worker housing is occupied, a practice that "ensur[e]s H-2A employers provide housing meeting applicable standards to their workers." See 2010 Final Rule, 75 Fed. Reg. at 6910. Similarly, Russell Marino, Jr. personally promised that "during the period of employment" as a whole, Sun Valley would "provide for or secure housing for workers . . . that complies with the applicable local, state, or Federal standards and guidelines for housing." JX-2, at 30 ¶ 8(ii); see JX-2, at 31, 39; JX-4, at 69 ¶ 8(ii), 70, 78. The employer's obligation is an ongoing one, and any suggestion to the contrary is simply "ludicrous." See Howard v. Malcolm, 658 F. Supp. 423, 433 (E.D.N.C. 1987) (construing parallel MSPA provision); 20 C.F.R. § 655.135(e) (requiring that "[d]uring the period of employment," the employer shall "comply with all applicable Federal, State and local laws and regulations, including health and safety laws").

Second, it strains credulity that such extensive damage could have accumulated during the 2015 season without Sun Valley becoming aware of the problem. Sun Valley was on notice of the recurring torn screen problem since WHD issued a citation for the same violation in 2013. Tr. 332:14–19, 599:6–12; RX-23, at 325 ("screen doors need fixing, gaps in screen doors"). If, as Sun Valley asserts, Hernandez and other employees inspected the exterior of the housing facility once or twice a week, Tr. 173:3–17, 777:2–8, Respondent surely would have become aware of the torn screens and non-closing door. Nonetheless, Sun Valley took no meaningful steps to remedy the problem in the three months that workers occupied the housing before the July 21, 2015 investigation. Whatever efforts Sun Valley made to maintain other aspects of the worker housing, the company certainly turned a blind eye to the screens and doors.

Third, it does not make sense for an employer to escape liability for exposing workers to unsanitary conditions throughout the entire season simply because wear and tear might be a contributing factor. The regulations themselves contemplate that under appropriate circumstances, employers may charge workers for "damage caused to housing . . . not the result of normal wear and tear related to habitation." 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(d)(3). But that does not relieve the employer of the responsibility to protect its entire workforce from unsanitary conditions by "provid[ing] housing" that "meet[s] the full set of" applicable standards, 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(d)(1), and ensuring compliance throughout "the period of employment," JX-2, at 30 ¶ 8(ii); see JX-2, at 31, 39; JX-4, at 69 ¶ 8(ii), 70, 78.

C. The Exposed Refuse Bins Exacerbated the Unsanitary Conditions.

The ETA regulations further required that Sun Valley maintain "fly-tight, clean containers in good condition" near the worker housing. 20 C.F.R. § 654.414(a).

In 2015 Sun Valley provided large refuse containers but left them completely uncovered, without any lids whatsoever. Tr. 324:12–15, 329:1–10, 332:1–6; PX-28, at 1053–55. When Investigators Perez and Crudup conducted their housing inspection, they found no lids anywhere in sight of the garbage bins, which themselves were filled with some of the hundreds of empty cans of beverages workers consumed each day. Tr. 332:1–6; see also PX-33, at 1094; Tr. 603:15–604:12; Appendix A. The absence of lids violated the requirement that such containers be "fly-tight." 20 C.F.R. § 654.414(a); see Howard, 658 F. Supp. at 427 & n.10 ("garbage cans . . . without tops" violated OSHA's comparable "fly-tight" container requirement).

D. Sun Valley Also Failed to Provide Workers with Adequate Hot Water for Bathing and Handwashing.

Sun Valley was required to provide "all occupants" with "[b]athing and hand washing facilities, supplied with hot and cold water under pressure." 20 C.F.R. § 654.412(a). Adequate bathing facilities are particularly important to protect farmworker health, given the "dust, dirt and pesticides" to which workers are generally exposed during long hours in the field each day. See Migrant and Seasonal Farmworker Powerlessness, Hearings before the Subcomm. on Migratory Labor of the S. Comm. on Labor & Pub. Welfare, 91st Cong. 4877 (1970).

Instead, Sun Valley's workers frequently found themselves without hot water to shower, leaving them with no option but to take cold showers. Tr. 30:8–11, 103:24–104:5; see PX-7, at 189:2–6; PX-11, at 288:2–6. Further limiting workers' handwashing access, two of the seven or eight sinks were entirely broken, as Hernandez even admitted. Tr. 199:22–200:2, 200:25–201:1. Hernandez further admitted that Sun Valley's hot water system could not accommodate all workers, but suggested that the workers could wait after the hot water ran out, to shower in successive turns. Tr. 203:2–6. Given that up to 100 workers would arrive back at the housing facility after 12-hour workdays, Sun Valley's further "blame the workers" approach to the inadequate hot water system is particularly misplaced here. It was entirely foreseeable — indeed, it was the design of Sun Valley's work schedule and mandatory meal plan — that workers would have limited time to shower between the end of work and meal time. Moreover, Investigator Perez found a lack of hot water in the sinks even outside of the afternoon shower rush. Tr. 330:14–22 (no hot water even after letting tap run for 2 to 3 minutes).

E. Sun Valley Failed to Provide Clean Mattresses to Two Workers.

Finally, the hearing evidence also supports WHD's citation of Sun Valley failing to provide appropriate "[s]leeping facilities . . . for each person . . . consist[ing] of comfortable beds, cots, or bunks, provided with clean mattresses." 20 C.F.R. § 654.416(a). "Any bedding provided by the housing operator shall be clean and sanitary." Id. § 654.416(b). During its investigation, WHD found that two workers were sleeping on mattresses placed directly on the floor, an unsanitary location with "a lot of dirt [the workers] had to clean" themselves. Tr. 324:8–9, 329:11–330:3; PX-7, at 187:21–188:3; see PX-28, at 1056 (photograph). Sun Valley again speculates that the workers are to blame, and that they chose to move their mattresses from a bunk onto the crowded dormitory room floor. Tr. 494:16–20. Such speculation is not supported by any record evidence, and even assuming it were true, calls into question the adequacy of the bunks themselves. 20 C.F.R. § 654.416(a) (requiring that bunks be "comfortable"). In fact, worker testimony supports the Administrator's finding regarding the unsanitary conditions: some workers "got very sick with chicken pox," apparently "because the beds were very dirty." PX-7, at 170:13–19 (Silva Lopez testimony). The only reasonable conclusion from the credible evidence admitted at trial is that Sun Valley failed to provide an appropriate, clean, and comfortable place for at least two workers to sleep during the height of the season.

F. Sun Valley Is Liable for $3,600 in Civil Money Penalties for Its Housing Violations.

Pursuant to 29 C.F.R. § 501.19 (2016), the Administrator assessed a total of $3,600 in civil money penalties for Sun Valley's housing violations: $900 for the unscreened bathroom windows, $900 for the faulty dorm screen windows and doors; $900 for the uncovered garbage cans; $450 for the hot water shortage; and $450 for the unclean mattresses on the floor. JX-10, at 160; Tr. 861:18–862:6, 862:25–863:5, 938:20–939:13. The assessment of each of these penalties was well within the Administrator's discretion and should be affirmed.

For each of the housing violations, the Administrator determined that the CMPs should be calculated on a per-requirement basis, beginning with $1,500 as a starting point for each of the five cited violations. Tr. 862:11–13, 862:17–20. The Administrator then considered all seven factors enumerated in § 501.19, as well as the totality of the circumstances, and significantly reduced each penalty below the maximum. Tr. 862:13–16; see generally Tr. 862:17–866:23, 937:3–942:2, 943:22–945:8. Even though Sun Valley had violated some of the identical standards in a past MSPA investigation, the Administrator did not penalize Sun Valley for the repeated violation and applied the first mitigating factor, for a lack of history of violations specifically under the H-2A program. Tr. 863:17–19, 941:1–2. The Administrator also applied mitigating factors 6 (commitment to future compliance)[61] and 7 (no financial gain), even though Sun Valley had previously not remedied similar violations and saved money by failing to engage in regular maintenance. Tr. 864:11–16, 865:4–73, 866:1–5.

For the bathroom, dorm screen, and garbage can violations, the Administrator also exercised his discretion to further reduce the CMPs by 10% because there was no evidence that workers ultimately contracted a communicable disease from the conditions that contributed to the presence of insects. Tr. 864:16–25.

For the hot water and mattress violations, the Administrator also applied considerable leniency and found that factors 3 (gravity), 4 (efforts to comply), and the final, catch-all factor all mitigated the penalties. Tr. 865:15–19, 866:5–6, 941:3–6. In addition, mitigating factor 2 (number of workers) applied to the mattress violation, Tr. 865:9–12, and mitigating factor 5 (Respondent's explanation) applied to the hot water violation, see Tr. 456:13–25, 937:15–22, 941:15–942:2.

Given the severity of each of these violations, the reasonableness of the assessed penalties, and the Administrator's consideration of all the factors, the penalties should be upheld.

---

[61] While Sun Valley takes issue with the fact that WHD did not allocate its scarce resources to a never-ending investigation of Sun Valley's housing throughout the summer of 2015 to determine whether its housing may ultimately have come into compliance, Tr. 925:15–25, the Administrator in fact gave Sun Valley the benefit of the doubt here and assumed that it would remedy the problems, Tr. 864:11–13, 866:1–2, 925:1–5. That was the basis of applying the sixth mitigating factor. For that reason, Sun Valley has no basis to complain that further investigations of its housing could have led to any further CMP reduction.

See In re Urbina, No. 2000-MSP-0010, slip op. at 12–13, 16 (OALJ Dec. 12, 2001) (upholding similar penalties for many similar violations of the same ETA standards, under former MSPA regulations with a lower, $1,000 maximum per violation).

VIII. Sun Valley's Unsafe Transportation Violated 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(h)(4), Warranting $7,500 in CMPs.

Pursuant to 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(h)(4), "[a]ll employer-provided transportation" at Sun Valley was required to "comply with all applicable Federal, State or local laws and regulations, and" had to "provide, at a minimum, the same transportation safety standards . . . as required under 29 U.S.C. 1841 and 29 CFR 500.105." In addition to this obligation imposed by law, Russell Marino, Jr. personally assured compliance with these standards when he signed the TECs. JX-2, at 30 ¶ 8(v), 31, 39; JX-4, 69 ¶ 8(v), 70, 78; 20 C.F.R. § 655.135(e) (requiring that "[d]uring the period of employment," the employer shall "comply with all applicable Federal, State and local laws and regulations, including health and safety laws").

A. Unlicensed Drivers

Federal law requires that drivers of H-2A-employer-provided transportation have a "valid permit qualifying the driver to operate the type of vehicle driven by him in the jurisdiction by which the permit is issued." 29 C.F.R. § 500.105(b)(1)(iii) (incorporated by reference in 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(h)(4)). New Jersey law, in turn, prohibits driving on a "public highway" in New Jersey absent a license, permit, or supervision while enrolled in a driver's education course.[62] N.J. Stat. Ann. § 39:3-10 (2015); Dep't of Law & Pub. Safety v. Bigham, 119 N.J. 646, 648 (1990). New Jersey also specifically prohibits transporting migrant farmworkers by drivers who are not licensed in the United States or Canada: "[n]o person shall drive any motor vehicle, [62] Sun Valley's vehicles operated outside of the farm property, on public roads. Tr. 606:3-16.

truck, truck-trailer or farm tractor or bus on or across any public highway unless he is the holder of a valid driver license from this State or any other state, territory, Federal District or Province of Canada wherein he is a legal resident and entitled to operate a motor vehicle." N.J. Admin. Code § 13:21-13.2.[63] The state regulation also requires that such drivers be 21 years old. Id.

Sun Valley violated these licensing provisions, causing unlicensed drivers to transport their coworkers for up to an hour a day, in fifteen-person passenger buses. During Wage and Hour's inspection in late July 2015, Investigator Perez requested that each driver provide his license for review, both directly from the drivers and from Hernandez. Tr. 392:1–18, 398:25–399:11. None presented U.S. or Canadian licenses. Tr. 401:4–14. Instead, two had only Mexican licenses. Tr. 391:23–25, 393:12–395:7; PX-30, at 1066, 1070–71. A third had only an expired Mexican license. Tr. 383:12–22, 390:17–391:10; PX-30, at 1064. The remaining two workers whom Wage and Hour observed transporting other workers in the school buses had no licenses at all — and admitted as much. Tr. 400:14–17.

Sun Valley insinuates that some of the five drivers might have had valid licenses in New Jersey but this suggestion flies in the face of the actual evidence: that when asked for their licenses, Hernandez and the drivers complied with Wage and Hour's requests and provided the only licenses they had. Tr. 383:18–22, 384:12–14, 391:11–13, 391:21–393:8. Certainly, Sun Valley had an incentive to provide the drivers' licenses at the time of the investigation, or even [63] Sun Valley's farmworkers are all considered "migrant farm workers" in this sense, as they are "nonresident individual[s] who engage[d] in seasonal employment as a farm . . . worker during [a] period of seasonal employment." N.J. Admin. Code § 13:21-13.1. This regulation also overrides the more general New Jersey law that permits drivers to non-migrant farm workers to drive for up to a year within moving to New Jersey, if licensed in their home country. N.J. Admin. Code § 13:21-8.2(f).

subsequently, to demonstrate its compliance. The obvious explanation for the absence of any other proof of licensure is that there simply was none.

B. Broken Lights and Bald Tires

Sun Valley also committed another violation by transporting workers in a bus with a shattered rear turn signaling light, which did not operate when tested by the WHD Investigators, leaving no operational turn signals on the right rear side of the vehicle, in violation of federal and state law. Tr. 404:13–406:16; PX-29, at 1057. Under 29 C.F.R. § 500.105(b)(3)(ii), each of Sun Valley's vehicles was required to have "lighting devices," that included one "turn signal (rear)" on each side of the vehicle, 49 C.F.R. § 393.11.[64] Similarly, New Jersey law required two turn signals on the rear of each vehicle. N.J. Stat. Ann. § 39:3-61(a).

Additionally, as discussed above, three of Sun Valley's vehicles each had a worn-out tire, undermining the vehicles' traction and leaving them vulnerable to skidding off the road. Tr. 588:3–6, 607:9–11, 608:8–13; PX-29, at 1058–1063. Specifically, these tires' tread were worn so smooth that the tip of a ballpoint pen could not be inserted into the groove. Tr. 403:14–404:12; see PX-29, at 1059. These tires fell below minimum federal and state standards, which each prohibit the operator of motor vehicles with "tires which have been worn so smooth as to expose any tread fabric or which have any other defect likely to cause failure." 29 C.F.R. § 500.105(b)(3)(v); N.J. Admin. Code § 13:21–13.11(b) (nearly identical wording).

[64] For transportation safety standards related to lighting devices, the H-2A regulations incorporate by reference 49 U.S.C. § 3102, which has been renumbered as 49 U.S.C. § 31502. See 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(h)(4); 29 C.F.R. § 500.105(b)(3)(ii); Pub. L. 103-272 § 1(c), (e) (July 5, 1994); see also McGuiggan v. CPC Int'l, Inc., 84 F. Supp. 2d 470, 480 (S.D.N.Y. 2000). Pursuant to 49 U.S.C. § 31502, the Secretary of Transportation promulgated 49 C.F.R. § 398.5. Section 398.5(b), in turn, provides that the relevant regulations regarding lighting devices are found at 49 C.F.R. Part 393 Subpart B, namely 49 C.F.R. § 393.11.

Although Sun Valley takes issue with whether WHD Investigators measured the exact depth of the tread, Tr. 535:9–10, 536:10–11, that is beside the point. In an effort to create confusion regarding the thorough investigation conducted in this case, Respondent seems to have confused the separate standard for tread depth under MSPA, 29 C.F.R. § 500.104(c) ("2/32 inch tread depth"), with the relevant federal and standards met here ("worn so smooth as to expose any tread fabric" or "any other defect likely to cause failure"). It was well within WHD's discretion to use a common-sense instrument such as a pen to document the tread's generally worn condition. E.g., U.S. Dep't of Labor, Cultivating Compliance: An Agricultural Guide to Federal Labor Law 19 (using a penny to document "inadequate tire tread").[65]

C. The Court Should Uphold the Administrator's Reasonable and Considered Decision to Assess $7,500 in CMPs for Sun Valley's Transportation Safety Violations.

The Administrator assessed a total of $7,500 in civil money penalties for Sun Valley's transportation violations: $750 for each of three bald tires, $900 for each of five unlicensed drivers, and $750 for the broken rear turn signal. JX-10, at 160; Tr. 867:1–19, 870:14–15, 872:1–4. These penalties were reasonable under 29 C.F.R. § 501.19 and should be upheld as an appropriate exercise of the Administrator's discretion.

The Administrator considered all relevant factors, and as with the housing violations, reduced each penalty substantially below the regulatory maximum. See generally Tr. 867:1–873:15. Despite Sun Valley's prior transportation safety violations pursuant to the same substantive standards, the Administrator applied the first mitigating factor to all the transportation violations in 2015, since Sun Valley had not previously participated in the H-2A program. Tr. 868:13–16, 870:23–24, 872:10–11, 874:19–20. The Administrator applied the second mitigating factor, notwithstanding that the tire and driver license issues caused most if not all of Sun Valley's workers to be transported in unsafe buses. Tr. 868:17–22, 870:25–871:4, 872:10–11. The Administrator found the third mitigating factor applicable to the tire and light violations (but not the unlicensed drivers), even though even a single, partly worn tire would affect each vehicle's stability. Tr. 588:17–589:2, 871:5–10, 872:10–11. The Administrator also applied the sixth and seventh mitigating factors to each of the violations and reduced the penalties accordingly. Tr. 869:11–17, 871:17–23, 872:10–11.

These penalties are particularly reasonable in light of Hernandez's admissions regarding the continuing violations, Tr. 207:8–10, Sun Valley's longstanding practice of turning a blind eye to the unlicensed drivers, Tr. 205:16–23, 456:7–12, and Sun Valley's predecessor's past payment of CMPs for similar violations, Tr. 874:19–875:3.[66]

CONCLUSION

The credible testimony and evidence admitted at the hearing establishes overwhelmingly that Sun Valley violated numerous H-2A program requirements, notwithstanding its promises to comply. Most significantly, Sun Valley exploited its workforce by charging employees for undisclosed meals and allowing its supervisor to operate a company store and sell goods to its captive workforce at a profit. Accordingly, for all the reasons discussed above, the Court should find that Sun Valley:

[66] Because Sun Valley's vehicles were not being used to transport workers during the 2013 investigation, there is no evidence of whether Sun Valley used unlicensed drivers that year. No inference can be drawn in Sun Valley's favor from the lack of a citation during that investigation. Tr. 406:21–407:2.

(a) Violated 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(g), (p), and (q) by making false promises about kitchen access and failing to disclose the meal charges, and accordingly, for each of these violations independently, owes $128,285 in back wages;

(b) Violated 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(p) through Hernandez's sales of drinks and other items at a profit or in violation of state law, and accordingly owes $80,762.69 in back wages;

(c) Owes $ 198,450.00 in CMPs for its violations of § 655.122(g), (p), and (q);

(d) Violated 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(i) by discharging three groups of workers without paying the three-fourths guarantee, and therefore owes $142,728.22 in back wages and $1,350 in CMPs;

(e) Violated 29 C.F.R. § 501.5 by attempting to cause workers to waive the three-fourths guarantee, and accordingly owes $1,350 in CMPs;

(f) Violated 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(d) through its inadequate housing, warranting $3,600 in CMPs; and

(g) Violated 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(h)(4) through its substandard transportation and unlicensed drivers, warranting $7,500 in CMPs.

Appendix B - Illegal Beer Sales at a Profit

	Number of beers purchased per day		Testimony
1	Dario Morales Acosta	2.5 per week. Other workers: twenty per week.	He would purchase "Two to three Cerveza Modelo" per week. PX-13, 345:21–22. Other workers would purchase "Maybe 20 throughout the week." PX-13, at 347:19–22.
2	Jose Manuel Baltazar Cheguez	No estimate.	Tr. 145:7 ("They also sold beer."). See also Tr. 162:12–15.
3	Carlos Cervantes Ramirez	6 per week. (He would split a 24-pack four ways.)	"[T]he beer that you bought on the weekends . . . was that also purchased from Agustin? A. Yes. Q. How much did those beers cost? A. I think it was $20. 24 beers. . . . Q. Mr. Cervantes, when you paid $20 for beer, how many beers did that include? A. It was 24 beers. . . . We all bought those beers, we would give $5 each and we bought it together." PX-3, at 80:11–82:3.
4	Hugo Leonel Cinta Tegoma	Zero.	"I saw that other people would buy beer from him, but I didn't buy any." PX-9, at 219:10–12.
5	Miguel Angel Elizondo Soto	2 per week.	"I wasn't drinking a lot. I would buy approximately two beers a week." PX-5, at 142:6–7.
6	Hector Mishel Garcia Dominguez	Other workers: 7 per week.	Workers would purchase "One beer per night" PX-11, at 281:9–17; but see PX-11, at 283:13–16 (testifying that some would purchase 3–5 beers per weeknight).
7	Marco Giovanny Maldonado	12 per week.	He purchased beer twice — "A 12-pack of beer" (presumably both times he purchased beer) in his less than two weeks at Sun Valley. Tr. 25:18–26:1.
8	Jose Luis Silva Lopez	4.5 per week. Other workers: more than 4.5 per week.	He bought beer "about three days a week," and "one or two" per day. PX-7, at 180:21–181:5. Coworkers bought "more beer than I did." PX-7, at 182:7–21.
9	Gustavo Marquez Perez	Zero.	"No." Tr. 98:13–14.
10	Pedro Zavala Almanza	Practically zero.	"Only once I bought something, one beer." Tr. 269:6.

[67] "Number of weeks" is pulled directly from PX-2.

[68] Numbers in the "Profit per week" column was calculated by multiplying the $1.30 profit per beer, times:

- for testifying workers, the number of beers the worker testified to purchasing per week; and
- for non-testifying workers, the revised average of 3.75 beers purchased per week, based on employee testimony.

[69] "Total profit" is calculated by multiplying the number of weeks times the profit per week.

[70] The Administrator is not seeking back wages for illegal beer charges for employees who testified that they personally did not pay these charges.

Respondent, Sun Valley Orchards, LLC ("Sun Valley" or "Respondent"), respectfully submits this post-hearing brief pursuant to 29 C.F.R. § 18.91. After months of extensive pre-hearing motions practice and a full evidentiary hearing, the Court is certainly familiar with every detail and nuance of this case. As such, Respondent's Brief will strive to be exactly that, focusing on the key questions to be resolved by the Court.

From the testimony at trial, the Court was able to see first-hand the efforts that Sun Valley undertook to meet its duties under the regulations and, far more importantly, to provide for its farmworker employees. These workers are the core of this and any other farm; without their effort and dedication, there would be no fruits or vegetables to grow, harvest, and bring to America's dinner tables.

Were an outsider to hear only the Administrator's version of those same events or know only that hundreds of thousands of dollars were demanded for back wages and civil money penalties, however, they might leave with the impression that this case involved outrageous abuses, workers placed in grave physical peril, or some hideous form of modern slavery. They would likely be surprised to learn that, no, the alleged mistreatment here was having meals prepared for them for less than it would cost to prepare their own, a coworker would provide them with beer or soft drinks if they wanted them, and if a worker decided that the work was more than they wanted to do, they would get an all-expenses-paid trip back home whenever they wanted.

Nothing about this case suggests that the better part of $1 million should be paid by this farm as one of the highest penalties ever sought in the H-2A program. At worst, the core allegations in the case amount to misunderstandings between first-time H-2A workers and a first-time H-2A employer. There is no credible argument that Sun Valley profited by one cent from any of the alleged violations – more than 100 workers, earning a combination of hourly pay and multiple different piece rates over the course of several months, and the Wage & Hour investigation failed to uncover a single gap in the amounts paid. That is truly astonishing in Wage & Hour investigations, particularly those involving agricultural employers. Instead, the "back wages" sought relate solely to meals purchased and eaten, drinks purchased and consumed, and pay for months of work after workers had already quit the job. Every penny earned for work was paid in full.

The Solicitor's Office will likely offer sensational claims of exploitation and abuse that are absolutely not borne out by the facts of the case. Workers testified that they never asked to use the kitchen, nor for other meal options. They testified that they preferred drinks other than water and bought them with their own money from a fellow employee acting on his own. None testified that they paid any money to Sun Valley, whatsoever. None. Yet, the Administrator now demands that Sun Valley – to be clear, the Marino family – pay workers more than $200,000 as the full amount paid for meals, essentially providing them months of completely free prepared meals and all of the free soft drinks they can drink.

Others described deciding to leave the job early in the season, citing a lack of experience in harvesting asparagus and frustration with how difficult the work they had chosen to do actually was. The Administrator will try to muddy the issue by offering any number of alternative theories, without landing on a single credible one – the workers were actually terminated, or maybe they were constructively terminated, or maybe they were not terminated at all but believed that they had been, or maybe something else happened altogether. Reality is far simpler. Sun Valley badly needed these workers to remain with them in New Jersey and continue harvesting asparagus, before moving on to other crops later in the season. Period. If the workers were unwilling to do the job, Sun Valley had no options for compelling them to work. Although the workers voluntarily terminated their employment – breaking their promise to perform this work and causing significant hardship and cost to Sun Valley – the farm did far more than the H-2A rules require, providing the workers with free return transportation and meals back to their homes. In return, the Administrator now comes back and demands more than $135,000 from Sun Valley for the workers for the work that they never performed – coming on top of the additional application filing costs, transportation costs, and wages to replacement workers to do the work the group of quitters was supposed to do.

Perhaps the damning evidence of the villainous treatment suggested by the Administrator is in the secret evidence that the government fought vigorously to keep from Sun Valley. For reasons never convincingly offered, allowing Sun Valley to know who (if anyone) complained about their employment with the farm and what those specific complaints were would have jeopardized some government interest. Any information about these sensitive "informants" must be kept from Sun Valley at all costs. Regardless of what might be in those heavily redacted or withheld notes, interview statements, or other evidence, the evidence that came out at trial absolutely does not support the claims for back wages or CMPs advanced by the Administrator in this case.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The Administrator seeks nearly $600,000 in "back wages" and civil money penalties ("CMPs") from Sun Valley for the 2015 growing season. That 2015 season was Sun Valley's first year using the H-2A temporary agricultural visa program. Nearly three-fourths of the amount sought, $435,529.28, relates to an allegation that Sun Valley failed to comply with the "meals" requirement in 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(g) of the H-2A regulations. Most of the remaining amount, more than $135,000, relates to a "back wage" claim based on a three-fourths guarantee allegation under 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(i) for workers leaving before the end of the season. Other allegations seek CMPs only: housing conditions ($3,600); local transportation ($7,500), and "coercion to waive rights" ($1,350). These claims are addressed separately below, but Sun Valley continues to assert its innocence as to these charges and asks the Court to dismiss the claims outright or, at the very least, significantly reduce the amounts requested.

The amount of money that the Administrator seeks to extract from Sun Valley would cripple or destroy this four-generation farming operation. The size of the penalties assessed dwarf those in the two Golden Horizons cases prosecuted by the Administrator (2005-TAE-0001 and 2010-TAE-0002). Those cases involved rampant wage theft, an employer pocketing employees' wages or being paid cash kick-backs by the workers, and workers being aggressively mistreated and fed starvation-level rations. Id. The employer was debarred from the H-2A program for the maximum period possible under the regulations, but the wage demand and penalties assessed against Sun Valley make that case look like a slap on the wrist.[1]

No penalties or back wages are owed in this case but, even if the Court were to find some violations among the Administrator's allegations and rhetoric, the amounts claimed are extremely out of line with technical violations by a first-time H-2A program participant. Outreach and education as to compliance issues would be the best policy or, failing that, at least alerting an employer to possible violations at a time when changes might be made rather than months later when the contract is over. Instead, the Administrator has apparently decided to "make an example of" Sun Valley, with staff in the local Wage & Hour Division and Solicitor's Office all too eager to advance their careers on the back of this family. Had the Wage & Hour office been truly interested in "protecting" these disadvantaged and exploited workers, they would have raised the issues of meals and drinks to Sun Valley in July 2015 rather than February 2016, long after the workers had returned home after the season but, critically to WHD, after hundreds of thousands of additional monetary exposure had been allowed to accumulate through their unexplained, months-long silence.

It cannot be repeated often enough – this case does not involve one penny in wages earned but not paid to workers, nor one penny in profit to the employer from these allegations. The effect of the relief sought by the Administrator would be to require a farm to provide meals and soft drinks entirely free of charge for its entire workforce for an entire growing season and cold beer at wholesale prices. Workers would be allowed to quit a job that they did not like but then be paid for months and months afterwards for work they never performed, while the employer was left to suffer debilitating crop losses and scramble to find replacement workers without notice. If the Court finds any violations that occurred during that first H-2A season of 2015, Sun Valley would ask only that the Court exercise mercy in its judgment and craft an award that achieves the purposes of the regulations rather than the maximum-possible-dollar strategy pursued by the Administrator.

[1] The EEOC won judgments totaling $20 million for the outrageous treatment to which Golden Horizons subjected its workers but, apparently, the Administrator believes that this case involving hot meals, cold drinks, and abandoning work that is considered difficult is worse than that. See https://www.eeoc.gov/eeoc/newsroom/release/5-2-16.cfm

Briefly, the claims advanced can be summarized as follows:

- A group of 19 H-2A workers were not happy that the work harvesting asparagus, which they admit was disclosed in the job order, was more difficult than anticipated. They chose, as a group, to return home after working for a week to a week-and-a-half, leaving Sun Valley in the lurch for their asparagus harvest. Most of the three-fourths guarantee claim arises from these workers who voluntarily departed just a few short days after arriving at the farm.

- The remaining three-fourths guarantee claim arises from a particularly rainy period in the summer of 2015, which caused Sun Valley's pepper crop to fail. Without a crop to harvest, there was not enough work for the entire crew, so Sun Valley calculated the number of hours already worked by its H-2A employees, and sent home approximately 44 workers who had already met their three-fourths guarantee target. The Administrator seeks back wages for a small handful of that group, most of whom had been sick or injured at some point in the season, leaving their hours worked below the 3/4 threshold, but their hours offered (as required in the rules) above that line.

- The bulk of the Administrator's claim rests on payments made by the workers to Agustin Hernandez, who wears two hats in this case. He acted as a "crew leader" for Sun Valley with respect to helping train the workers and tracking their work in the fields. Completely outside the employment relationship with Sun Valley, however, he also sold prepared meals, drinks, and other items to workers, at their discretion, and his own cost. No money was ever deducted from workers' paychecks, no money ever went to Sun Valley, and no one at Sun Valley directed or otherwise controlled these sales. For purposes of the H-2A employment relationship between the workers and Sun Valley, the payments by the workers to Mr. Hernandez were no different than workers buying meals from a McDonald's or drinks from a Wawa or a ShopRite. Even if Sun Valley had any legal liability for these third-party purchases, the Administrator's calculations are arbitrary and extremely inflate.

At most, this case involves misunderstandings by some of the new H-2A workers about their employment with Sun Valley. But even viewing the facts through the worst-case prism, this is not the monstrous employer that the Administrator attempts to portray here, and pursuing $600,000 in recovery from them will destroy a family farm and a legacy of honest hard work built over generations. Sun Valley Orchards and the Marino family respectfully ask the Court to look past the overheated and intentionally outrageous rhetoric from the Administrator and consider the testimony of the workers themselves and the pure facts of the case, and then to dismiss these claims and allow this farm to put this nightmare behind it and go back to producing food.

ARGUMENTS

I. Meals

A. Kitchen Facilities Were Available

Sun Valley indisputably maintained a kitchen at the housing facility used by its farmworkers. While the testimony at trial was inconsistent as to how many workers could use the kitchen at any one time or the feasibility of cooking in "shifts" at meal times, several of the former employees testified that they had never asked to use the kitchen, much less asked and been denied permission. TR 50:24-51:15[2] (never asked to use refrigerator or kitchen, never tried to purchase food at store that sold it). Others testified that workers were allowed to and actually did use the kitchen to store and prepare food. TR 176:17-20. Mr. Hernandez testified that some workers opted out of the meal plan, without consequence to them from the farm, and that workers did not ask him to use the refrigerators or stove, but if they had, "we could make arrangement[s]" to prepare food in shifts or via some other accommodation, had they asked. TR 213:19-214:18. At the very least, there is a factual question as to whether some or all of the workers could have prepared their own meals in Sun Valley's kitchen.

B. The Workers Paid Mr. Hernandez, Not Sun Valley

Not one of the workers testified that they paid money to Sun Valley for meals; each testifying unequivocally that they purchased their meals from Agustin Hernandez. Under questioning from the Court, Mr. Hernandez explained that he bore weekly losses in the early part of the season, only recouping those amounts later in the year, but not making a profit on the venture. TR 234:19-235:7. Just before leaving the witness stand, Mr. Hernandez reiterated for the Court that he had been involved with meals for years without complaint, and did so without making a profit. TR 256:24-257-5. He testified that he used the money that he personally collected from the workers in case (not by way of any "deduction" from wages, but paid for in-hand by workers to him directly) to purchase food, pay the kitchen staff, and to buy additional appliances for the kitchen as needed. Sun Valley took no action against any employees who opted out of the meal plan (they would not have any reason to even know that this had happened or not), and made no more or less in profit based on what the workers did or did not pay Mr. Hernandez. The entire kitchen operation was handled by Mr. Hernandez at his own financial risk and independently from Sun Valley's operations.

C. Disclosure / Decision to Accept Employment

Although no penalties have ever been assessed for submitting an inaccurate job order to the Department on ETA Form 790 or ETA Form 9142, the Administrator rests the meal claim – by far the largest in the case and one of the largest single-issue assessments in H-2A history – on a theory that the job order did not accurately disclose that workers could pay Mr. Hernandez $75 or $80 per week for prepared meals. Implicit in their arguments is the notion that, had language been included in the job order (as it has in all subsequent job orders) describing that arrangement, then no back wages or CMPs would have arisen. Central to that theory is that workers choosing to apply for the position with Sun Valley were somehow misled or might have decided not to accept employment with the farm.

Counsel for the Solicitor argued that "many workers" did not want the meal plan (TR 11:18-19), but the Administrator never bothered to establish this through worker testimony, nor any other evidence. In fact, several of the farmworker witnesses specifically testified that: (1) they would have come to New Jersey to work for Sun Valley if the job order had described the meal charge; and (2) they did not object to the prepared meals. See, e.g., TR 62:10-12 ("If you had known about the meal charge, would you still have come to work at Sun Valley? Yes.").[3]

Nothing in the regulations dictates the remedy for non-disclosure of meals charges. The only other case identified by counsel on this issue is one of the aforementioned Golden Horizons cases, specifically the 2010 case. There, the

[3] This witness, Mr. Maldonado, further testified under questioning from Counsel for the Administrator that he did not remember whether his 2014 H-2A contract to pick apples in Michigan had said anything about kitchen access vs. prepared meals – "No, it doesn't specify." TR 73:25-74:2.

Administrator's argument was not that the disclosure needed to be to the workers, who might have made a different decision about accepting the ill-fated job with that employer but, rather, to the Department of Labor's Office of Foreign Labor Certification as part of the H-2A application process. Judge Berlin interpreted the basis for the undisclosed-meal claim as sounding in the lack of disclosure in the job order:

> The purpose of the disclosure is to allow the regulating federal agencies to assure that foreign workers are not being brought into the country to do work at wages below the prevailing wage that would be paid to U.S. citizens and others living in this country with the right to work here. See generally 20 C.F.R. § 655.103(a) (ensure that U.S. workers are not adversely effected); see also, 20 C.F.R. §655.122(a) (preferential treatment of aliens prohibited). If workers agree to meal prices that afford a profit to the employer, the effect is the same as if the employer paid below-market wages.

2010-TAE-0002 (Dec. 17, 2010) (Order on Partial Summary Decision) at 8. In Global Horizons, the employer itself collected the meal charge, purchased the food, and provided the meals to the H-2A workers. Id. Unlike the current case, no third-party was responsible for or bore the financial risk of collecting the meal charges in the Global Horizons case.

The Administrator attempts to conflate the "disclosure" questions – disclosure to potential job applicants and/or disclosure to the Certifying Officer at OFLC on the H-2A application. Since neither theory avails, there is no need to resolve the question today of which is the true purpose. Judge Berlin's opinion offers a compelling explanation for the need to alert certifying officers about meal prices, so that profit to the employer that results in "below-market wages" and, thus, "adversely affect[s]" U.S. workers similarly employed, can be avoided as required by statute. 8 U.S.C. § 1188. There is no genuine dispute that Sun Valley saw zero profit from the meal charges paid by some of the workers to Mr. Hernandez, and the wages paid to the workers by Sun Valley were in no way reduced below the Adverse Effect Wage Rate level, whether the workers purchased meals or did not.[4] Thus, in the only other case in which this issue has apparently been litigated, the single rationale offered for the disclosure is absolutely absent in this case. Thus, no liability should accrue for the alleged nondisclosure.

To the extent that the Administrator were to assert that nondisclosure at issue was to the potential job applicants – as described above, several of the workers explicitly testified that they would have taken the job even if they knew precisely what the terms of the Hernandez-offered meal plan included. The Administrator has certainly failed to show that all of the 2015 workers would have made a different decision based on a different disclosure, but yet seeks to recover hundreds and hundreds of thousands of dollars to cover each and every single employee for that year.

Here, as discussed throughout this brief, the undisputed facts demonstrate that Agustin Hernandez performed each of those roles, and Sun Valley neither deducted money from the workers' pay checks nor collected money from them later. Not a single cent was paid to Sun Valley with respect to meals (much less for the separate sales of drinks, snacks, or beer). Thus, even under the holding in Golden Horizons, the concern that non-disclosure might result in profit-taking by an employer that, in effect, could lower wages below the Adverse Effect Wage Rate is completely absent here. The better analogy is workers taking their own wages and going out to purchase food on their own.

---

[4] To the extent that the Administrator seeks to argue in its brief that Sun Valley somehow benefited by not building a much larger kitchen, that claim merits only the briefest of mentions here. First, the alternative is not constructing a new kitchen but, rather, checking the other box on the job order to explain the meal charges. Second, even that hypothetical "saving" in no way reduced the amount of money paid to workers as wages, certainly not reducing them to "below-market wages" as concerned Judge Berlin.

No profit accrues to the employer and the integrity of the wage-setting process remains perfectly intact.

The Administrator does not seek to recoup any profit earned by Sun Valley related to meals charges (there was none; Sun Valley never received a single penny related to meals), nor any profit earned by Mr. Hernandez as the difference between what he paid for meals and what the workers chose to pay him. Likewise, the Administrator specifically seeks $0.00 in CMPs for Sun Valley allegedly failing to disclose the meal plan vs. free kitchen/transportation. So, no money is claimed for the allegedly misleading job order, no money is claimed from Mr. Hernandez for receiving that money (whether in total or in any potential excess above actual cost), but the Administrator seeks to collect more than $430,000 from an employer who never received any of that money and paid everything owed in wages already.

D. Golden Horizons and Double-Dipping Remedies

The Court in Golden Horizons explicitly rejected the Administrator's proposed remedy of back wages based on the employer's profit from selling meals to its own workers and civil money penalties for the disclosure violation (an argument advanced once again in this case, hoping that this Court will go where that one did not). Judge Berlin cited concerns that employers might profit by collecting meal charges, thus lowering the effective hourly wage rate to H-2A workers below the adverse effect rate, making them more attractive than employing U.S. workers.

The Administrator sought $24,000 in CMPs against Golden Horizon in connection with the meal disclosures (less than one-eighth of the CMPs sought here), but Judge Berlin granted summary judgment to the employer, finding that, despite the lack of disclosure, "there is no indication that the Company in fact exploited the workers (or gained an advantage by hiring them rather than U.S. workers) by overcharging for meals." Id. at 9 (further stating that "[m]ost important" is the lack of proof that the employer profited from the preparation and sale of the food). Likewise here, there is no proof whatsoever that Sun Valley gained any advantage in employing H-2A workers rather than U.S. workers, nor that they "profited from the preparation and sale of the food"; namely, because Sun Valley had nothing at all to do with the preparation and sale of the food. In the final Decision and Order following trial, the Court awarded back wages of $109,218 with $0 in civil money penalties. See 2010-TAE-0002 (December 13, 2011) (Order and Decision) at 19. That award is less than a quarter of the amount at issue in the current case. For the reasons discussed above, back wages are not appropriate because no profit went to Sun Valley in this case and that was considered the critical factor in awarding back wages in Golden Horizon, but for the additional reason that a lack of proof of "exploitation" and "profit" resulted in $0 in CMPs, the same result on CMPs should apply here with greater force than in that case.

E. Agency Theory Does Not Apply Here

The Administrator's potential argument that Mr. Hernandez acted as Sun Valley's "agent" in receiving meal charge payments and, therefore, breaching Sun Valley's contract with the government and with its H-2A workers makes no sense. See, e.g., Young v. Bethlehem Area Vo-Tech Sch., 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13531, *39 (E.D. Pa. Feb. 28, 2007) (dismissing breach of contract claim resting on respondeat superior theory, as "it would make no sense to involve the doctrine of respondeat superior (which establishes vicarious liability for negligence) in a claim for breach of contract.").

If the allegation against Sun Valley involved tortious conduct rather than the funds collected by Mr. Hernandez, then his role as an employee might be relevant. Even in such a case – which is clearly not presented here – the vicarious liability is limited to situations where the employee is acting within the scope of his or her employment. See, generally, CBS Corp. v. FCC, 535 F.3d 167, 190 (3d Cir. 2008), vacated on other grounds by FCC v. CBS Corp., 556 U.S. 1218 (2009).

Likewise, if Mr. Hernandez and Sun Valley were "joint employers" of the H-2A workers, under a farm labor contractor theory, then his conduct with respect to meal charges might be relevant to Sun Valley. See, e.g., Ramos Ortiz v. Paramo, Civ. Action 06-3062, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 72387 (D.N.J. Sept. 19, 2008). In Ramos Ortiz, the plaintiffs were domestic agricultural workers from Puerto Rico, living in a farm labor camp operated by defendant Carmen Paramo in nearby Monroeville, NJ, while working at the defendant farm, Martin J. Catalano Farms, LLC, in Pilesgrove, NJ. Plaintiffs brought FLSA and MSPA claims against Ms. Paramo as a farm labor contractor and against Catalano Farms on a "joint-employment" theory, arising from charges paid by the plaintiff-workers to Ms. Paramo for meals and drinks. These charges allegedly brought their wages below the FLSA minimum, and the MSPA claims arose from Ms. Paramo's recruitment, housing, and transportation of the workers.

Judge Kugler, in assessing whether Catalano Farms might be liable for the actions of Ms. Paramo, particularly with respect to the FLSA claims for meal and drink charges, began from the logical starting questions of: (1) who was the "employer" of the plaintiffs, since the FLSA's duties are those of the employer; and (2) whether the defendants were "joint-employers" such that the violations of one employer (Ms.

Paramo) could legally be attributable to the other employer (Catalano Farms). This analysis involved multiple steps and application of common-law joint-employment principles spanning several pages of the thorough decision. Luckily for all of us in this case, the Administrator has spared everyone that process by admitting (as she must, under the undisputed facts of the case) that "[Mr.] Hernandez was not an employer in 2015 within the meaning of the H-2A regulations." Admr. Resp. to Request for Admission 23. While Mr. Hernandez was originally charged with MSPA violations as a separate farm labor contractor, the Administrator has long since abandoned this theory, dismissed all claims against Mr. Hernandez as an FLC, and stated multiple times in Responses to Requests for Admissions that Mr. Hernandez is and "was at all relevant times Sun Valley's employee, agent, and manager." Id.

In Ramos Ortiz, the plaintiffs were in an employment relationship with the party who collected the meal and drink charges from them that reduced their wages below the FLSA minimum. There is no such relationship between the workers at issue in the current case and Mr. Hernandez. Nor is there any joint-employment relationship between Mr. Hernandez and Sun Valley that would make his collection of meal and drink charges from the workers the responsibility of Sun Valley, unlike the situation of Catalano Farms in Ramos Ortiz.

The H-2A regulations specifically define "employer" in 20 C.F.R. § 655.103(b) as follows:

> Employer. A person (including any individual, partnership, association, corporation, cooperative, firm, joint stock company, trust, or other organization with legal rights and duties) that:
> (1) Has a place of business (physical location) in the U.S. and a means by which it may be contacted for employment;

> (2) Has an employer relationship (such as the ability to hire, pay, fire, supervise or otherwise control the work of employee) with respect to an H–2A worker or a worker in corresponding employment; and
> (3) Possesses, for purposes of filing an Application for Temporary Employment Certification, a valid Federal Employer Identification Number (FEIN).

Sun Valley is the only employer here, and the Administrator has not shown that Sun Valley received any payments from workers for meals nor for anything else. Those payments went to Mr. Hernandez in his individual capacity; the Administrator has similarly no evidence that Sun Valley: (1) directed Mr. Hernandez to collect those amounts; (2) approved of Mr. Hernandez doing so; nor (3) even knew that this was happening. This was clearly outside the scope of his job duties for Sun Valley, so no employer-agent theory of attributing liability to Sun Valley for his actions would possibly apply here.

F. The Hernandez Meal Plan Was Reasonable

The $75-$80 per week paid by workers to Agustin Hernandez for three prepared meals per day was consistently below the DOL-allowed daily meal charges for H-2A workers - $75-$80/week vs. $83.02/week ($11.86/day x 7 days/week). 80 Fed. Reg. 9482 (Feb. 23, 2015). At no point did Mr. Hernandez collect meal charges in excess of that $83.02/week ceiling.

Payment of 100% of the meal charges is not warranted on the merits and vastly overstates any claimed "harm" to the workers in 2015. Had Sun Valley's filing agent stated that a meal charge of $75 or $80 per week was to be collected, no payment would be required at all. Even if H-2A workers decided that they did not wish to purchase those meals, the H-2A regulations would leave them to their own devices to procure and/or prepare their own meals, bearing the full cost of doing so. Likewise, H-2A employers are legally allowed to charge workers receiving prepared meals a set rate, approved annually by the Department of Labor. See 20 C.F.R. §§ 655.122(g) and 655.173. For 2015, the Department approved a daily rate of $11.86. 80 Fed. Reg. 9482 (Feb. 23, 2015) (Respondent's Exhibit 5).

Conversely, had an H-2A employer provided kitchen facilities in which the full contingent of workers could prepare meals simultaneously, the workers would still be responsible for purchasing their own food and preparing that food. There is no alternative in which the workers would ever receive completely free food from their employer – the only H-2A occupation in which that is the case is the range production of livestock, because the work is performed in remote mountainous locations away from opportunities to purchase food. See 80 Fed. Reg. 62958, 63067 (Oct. 16, 2015) (20 C.F.R. § 655.210(e)(1)). The U.S. Department of Agriculture ("USDA") publishes monthly data reflecting the average cost of preparing meals at home. See Respondent's Exhibits 7 & 8. In April 2015, USDA calculated the weekly cost of food at home for a male, age 19-50 years old, as ranging from $43.10 for a "thrifty plan" to $86.30 for a "liberal plan." The differences in those plans are explained in other USDA documents, but essentially, young men engaging in vigorous physical activity would be expected to consume calories in line with the "liberal plan." For September 2015, those numbers changed only slightly, to $43.40 and $86.50 per week. Sun Valley would certainly argue for credit for the full amount – which at all times exceeded the amounts paid by workers for prepared meals – but should, at the absolutely minimum, get credit for part of the value of the food, even at the "thrifty" level.[5]

G. Estoppel / Laches / Mitigation

The Wage & Hour Investigators knew what the 2015 job order stated regarding meals and knew when they arrived on July 21, 2015. TR 312:3. They spoke with workers when they arrived and they spoke with Agustin Hernandez and his wife, who operated the kitchen. The Investigators did not raise any concerns with meal charges to Sun Valley in July 2015, nor on their subsequent visits in August or September 2015, saying nothing about this until early 2016, months after the 2015 season was over and long after any changes could be made to how meals were handled. The general duty to mitigate harm should apply here, or at least equitable principles should be considered by the Court, and Wage & Hour's inexplicable delay in raising what they now consider such a serious issue should not result in tens or hundreds of thousands of additional liability for Sun Valley based on that silence.

Courts have at least entertained the idea that WHD inaction might give rise to an estoppel argument in subsequent enforcement actions, although the facts of that case did not ultimately support the argument. See Adminstrator v. John Peroulis & Sons Sheep, Inc., 2012-TAE-0004 (October 23, 2013) (Decision and Order) at 33. In that case, the employer was fully aware of the issues giving rise to the eventual determination of violation by the Division, the issue was whether WHD had acquiesced to such known violations. Id. Here, by contrast, the Investigator failed to speak up to advise the employer of his findings in a timely manner. Clearly, H-2A employers are responsible for ensuring their own compliance with the countless applicable regulations, but if nothing else, the prolonged delay in raising this issue should call into question the Administrator's later claim as to the urgency and seriousness of the alleged violation.

[5] By way of corroborating these amounts, Mr. Maldonado testified that he had worked as an H-2A apple picker in 2014 in Michigan, and paid $35-$40 per week to prepare food as a group with 4 other men. TR 48:18-24; 81:17-20.

II. Drinks

The Administrator seeks $70,000+ from Sun Valley to provide the 2015 workers with entirely free soft drinks and energy drinks and another $33,000+ so that the beer purchased by some of those workers would be "at cost" to them. Absolutely nothing in the H-2A regulations requires or supports such a finding, and the Court should reject this prosecutorial overreach in its entirety.

A. H-2A Does Not Require Free Soft Drinks

The testimony was clear that water was available to workers at meals and at all times in the field during work - the Court questioned Mr. Hernandez on the subject of the availability of drinking water during the day, the fact that workers never complained about the water in 2015, the use of a filter for the water, and how he kept the water cool for the workers. TR 236:8-237:11. One after another, workers testified that there was, in fact, drinking water available to them in the fields. See, e.g., TR 265:4-5. Some testified that they preferred the taste of bottled or canned beverages over the water, but there was no testimony nor any other evidence that there was anything wrong with the water. In fact, the water was tested prior to the 2015 season (as it is prior to every season), and found to meet all applicable standards for potability. TR 717:21-718:4; 718:20-25.

Mr. Hernandez' decision to sell drinks that he purchased was purely between himself and the workers. No money transferred from workers to Sun Valley. None.

Counsel for the Administrator made deliberate and repeated reference to a "company store" in a ham-handed attempt to be inflammatory, but their own Investigator clearly testified that drinks were purchased from Mr. Hernandez and not from Sun Valley. TR 561:20-21; see also TR 162:4-6 (questioning from the Court about "Whose store was it?" and "Who had the store, who owned the store?" "Mr. Agustin.").

Water was available – free, cold, and government approved – the workers understood that they were purchasing drinks from "Mr. Agustin" and not from Sun Valley, no action was taken against workers by Sun Valley for drinking more, less, or no soft drinks, and nothing about Mr. Hernandez's drink sales had any impact on Sun Valley's bottom-line, either profit or loss. The workers were entirely free to purchase some drinks or no drinks at all. Furthermore, it would set a dangerous precedent to require an employer to provide unlimited free energy drinks to its workers. Obviously, the H-2A regulations do not require employers to do that, but in the interest of preserving the health of workers, that would be a disastrous thing to require here.

Investigator Perez stated with certainty and clarity that "The workers weren't purchasing the drinks from Sun Valley." TR 561:20-21. He testified with far less clarity when asked if purchasing drinks from someone other than one's employer in any way increased or decreased the employer's duty to pay wages to the worker. TR 561:23-566:14. Nor was he able to explain why the Administrator was seeking to require Sun Valley to pay the workers based on Mr. Hernandez's estimated profit for beer purchased and consumed by the workers but was seeking the full cost paid for non-alcoholic drinks, including energy drinks like Monster and Red Bull. TR 566:15-23.

He offered only that energy drinks like Monster were "necessarily required for subsistence" because "it is probably water-based." TR 566:20-567:13. In his opinion, Red Bull was "possibly" required for subsistence, although he acknowledged that he did not personally consume it but somehow survived the deprivation. TR 567:17-568:21. He further conceded that water was available to workers at all times, but agreed that "people can choose drinks that they want" other than water, even when water is "readily available." TR 566:24-567:10, 569:4-7. No testimony was presented by the Administrator for why it was necessary for workers to purchase any beer or soft drinks if they did not wish to do so, and workers testified that they purchased their own drinks at wholesale prices when Sun Valley took them to the nearby store (free-of-charge).

In all, Sun Valley complied in full with its duty to provide free, cool, potable water to its workers. Nothing in the H-2A regulations (nor in FLSA, OSHA, or any other Departmental regulation) justifies this request for free soft drinks and energy drinks. The Court should reject the Administrator's overreach and dismiss this portion of the claim for back wages and CMPs.

B. Investigator Perez's "Creative" Calculations

The Administrator has also taken liberties with its "back wage" calculations related to drinks purchased from Mr. Hernandez. Using estimates based on a sampling of workers' post hoc recollections of how many drinks they purchased per day and how much they paid for these drinks, results in a fundamentally unreliable estimate for the total amount paid to Mr. Hernandez for such drinks. The Investigator's estimates are "uncertain" to be charitable and complete fiction to be more accurate.[6] He then compounded this error by using prices for drinks from a store to which Mr. Hernandez explicitly told him he never shopped, simply because it was easier for him to do so than to be accurate. TR 450:3-19 (chose Costco because "that's the only membership I have for [a] wholesaler that sells alcohol."); TR 508:17-509:6 (visited a Costco near his home in another part of the state; there is no Costco near the farm); TR 627:21-23 (Mr. Hernandez shopped at a Sam's Club).

Even though workers told him that they drank Budweiser, Corona, and Modelo, he had no idea whether imported beer cost more than domestic light beer, and based his entire calculation the price of Coors Light on the other side of the state:

> Q: So you went to a store that was not the store they went to and got the price for something that nobody bought.
> A: Um-hum.
>
> Q: And based on that, you assessed tens of thousands of dollars in back wages?
>
> A: Yes.

TR 510:9-24. While absolute certainty in recreating past events is not always possible, we should expect more from a $14 billion Federal agency when it delivers a demand for

---

[6] The employees' ability to testify confidently in July 2017 about the precise number of soft drinks consumed on a daily basis and the prices paid for such drinks more than two years prior, not only by themselves, but by each of their co-workers, is in every sense of the word, incredible. The Court's experience may be different, but undersigned counsel could not confidently state under penalty of perjury the price paid for a bottle of Coke purchased at a rest area on I-95 returning home from the trial of this matter. Investigator Perez's use of spreadsheets and calculations implies a degree of precision that is not supported by the underlying information on which his calculations rest.

tens of thousands of dollars to a family farm. Mr. Perez needed to do more than say "close enough" before arriving at a back wage demand on this issue.

Moreover, although there can be no confidence in the Administrator's calculation of any alleged "profit" to Mr. Hernandez, there is absolute certainty as to the amount of money received by Sun Valley from workers for those same drinks - $0.00. Not one witness – no workers, no Wage & Hour personnel, no one – testified that Sun Valley received any money whatsoever from the purchase of these drinks, and the Administrator has been forced to pivot away from this argument in concession of this fact.

II. Three-Fourths Guarantee Claims

The Administrator raises two separate three-fourths guarantee claims against Sun Valley for workers departing early in 2015 – a group of 19 who quit the job in May and a small number of workers who were part of a larger contingent of workers let go in August after wet weather and bacteria ruined the pepper harvest. The overwhelming majority of this $135,000-plus claim, however, arises from 19 workers who departed early in the season, in May 2015.

A. Voluntary Abandonment of Work Voids the 3/4 Guarantee

Apart from the typical one or two early-departing or absconding workers that any H-2A employer experiences, there were two times during the 2015 growing season when significant groups of H-2A workers departed from Sun Valley early. The first group, approximately 19 workers, decided as a group that harvesting asparagus was more difficult than they wished, stopped working en masse, and despite pleas from Joe Marino and Russell Jr. for the workers to stay at Sun Valley and go back to work so that the asparagus harvest wouldn't be lost, chose instead to return home to Mexico after working for less than 2 weeks of a 6-month job order. This departure occurred during the first week of May 2015.

Witnesses from among this group of 19 workers testified that they had not picked asparagus before and found the work difficult. TR 49:25-50:8; 123:4-5. They also testified that asparagus picking was in the job order they received before deciding to accept the job with Sun Valley. TR 50:9-12. In all, the workers were in New Jersey for only approximately two weeks performing this work, before they walked off the job and demanded a meeting with the Marinos. TR 723:7-13. While the workers' recollection of the events of that meeting vary dramatically – several testified that they were the primary speaker and that no one else spoke, some believed there had been physical violence of the meeting, no two accounts resemble one another – Joe Marino and Russell Marino, Jr. testified consistently that one or two members of the group of 19 spoke and it was clear from the group that they had decided to leave before the meeting began. TR 724:6-9; 726:12-727:4; 809:6-811:21. Some of the workers suggested that they had let the Marinos down, and stated specifically that the work was hard and they were concerned that they could not do it. TR 726:12-18; 810:22-23. One told them "this work, plain and simple, this is for real men." TR 726:20. The workers primarily discussed the difficulty of the work and did not raise other issues. TR 728: 7-10. Mr. Hernandez recalled that the workers were not "country guys, country workers, they were like more like city workers and they couldn't stand the – they couldn't perform the work." TR 218:17-19. Russell Marino, Jr. asked them twice as a group if they were leaving, and they all answered that they had made a decision and they were leaving as a group. TR 811:22-812:3.

This account matches multiple points of testimony by members of the group of 19 workers. One worker who had been present at that meeting recalled that the workers told Russell Marino, Jr. that they had complaints about transportation and cooking and bathroom facilities, but primarily, their complaint was that "as far as work, we needed more time to learn how to harvest asparagus." TR 122:9-13. When asked if anyone ever told the workers that they were fired, could not work there anymore, and must leave, they testified no, no one had told them that. TR 126:2-5. When asked if he would have stayed on at Sun Valley if the work had been easier, he answered it "depends." TR 126:6-8.

Mr. Maldonado referred to the day of the meeting as "the day I decided to leave." TR 34:14. His testimony is telling on the critical issue of whether the workers were told that they could leave if they chose to or were told that they must leave and had been terminated without case. He testified that:

> [Russell Marino, Jr.] told us he did not need us and we could leave.
>
> Q. You could leave?
>
> A. Yes.
>
> Q. Did he say you could not come back to work?
>
> A. He practically fired us.
>
> Q. Did he actually fire you?
>
> A. We did not want to have this conversation in order to leave. We wanted to have a conversation with him to explain the things we were unhappy about, but that we were not able to do that.
>
> ...
>
> Q. Okay. Did he tell you you couldn't come back to work.
> A. He told us he didn't need us and if we wanted to leave we could leave and we opted to leave.

TR 66:12-67:8. This is not a distinction without a difference – the H-2A regulations and, in particular, the three-fourths guarantee requirement, draws a crucial distinction between a worker terminated without cause and a worker voluntarily abandoning employment. In the former case, three-fourths guarantee liability ensues (to the tune of six-figure liability here), and in the latter case, no liability whatsoever results. The testimony of these workers conveys strong emotions at the critical meeting, frustration with the work required (and disclosed) by the contract, and wounded pride over this. It does not rise to the level of actual termination rather than a decision to abandon employment voluntarily.

The workers consistently testified that asparagus grew quickly and, if it were not cut soon enough, would not be any good and would be lost. TR 66:9-14 122:23-1233:3; 154:16-155:9. They further admitted that it would be, at best "difficult" for the workers who did not leave with them to be able to harvest asparagus without these 19 workers. TR 68:23-69:5; 124:15-17. This undercuts the Administrator's unsupported theory that Sun Valley made the decision to fire these 19 workers without cause. That notion is simply preposterous. Joe Marino testified at length about the crop losses that directly resulted from losing these workers without notice and, moreover, how they had expressed this concern about losses to the group of workers to try to convince them to remain. TR 811:6-10; 812:10-813:25.

Ms. Rachor offered unspecified hearsay testimony from unnamed sources that "they" "had complained about poor working conditions, poor housing conditions, and general issues with how they were treated, and they were constructively terminated." TR 859:5-7. Setting aside, for the moment, that many of the workers who testified did not state that they had raised these complaints and no one from Sun Valley testified that they had received any such complaints, the legal conclusion as to "constructive termination" is offered with no support at all or analysis.

Constructive discharge is necessarily measured on an objective standard. Were the working conditions "so unpleasant or difficult that a reasonable person would have felt compelled to resign"? Stucke v. City of Philadelphia, 685 Fed. Appx. 150, 155 (3d Cir., Apr. 12, 2017) (reasonable person would not have felt so); see also, Duffy v. Paper Magic Group, 265 F.3d 163, 169 (3d Cir. 2001) (rejecting "constructive termination" claim where "the alleged conduct would not compel a reasonable person to resign"). While it became clear to all involved during the May 2015 meeting that the 19 workers had decided that they were unable and/or unwilling to perform the agricultural work for which they were hired, it cannot be said that "a reasonable person would have felt compelled to resign" under the circumstances.

We know this because the vast majority of Sun Valley's employees worked under precisely the same conditions as these 19 workers and not one of them felt so compelled to walk off the job. TR 817:17-818:19; see also TR 65:10-17 (workers who stayed had the same experience at Sun Valley as those who left in May 2015). Indeed, none of the other workers even raised a concern to Mr. Hernandez, Joe or Russell Marino, or anyone else at Sun Valley. Id.

In fact, most of the workers who remained at Sun Valley have returned to work under the same conditions in 2016 and 2017 and expect to return in 2018, including workers for whom back wages are sought by the Administrator in this case. TR 818:20-819:9; see also TR 223:20-224:4 (remaining workers doing the same asparagus harvesting, living in the same housing, and eating meals on the same plan). Thus, to the extent to which the Administrator continues to rely on this "constructive termination" or "constructive discharge" theory, that is entitled to no weight whatsoever, and the Court should rightly reject such a theory as unsupported by the facts or the applicable legal standards.

B. The Later Departures Fail to Account for Hours Offered

There is no dispute that a hail storm was followed by wet weather that caused a bacterial infection of Sun Valley's pepper plants during the Summer of 2015. TR 816:12-18. Peppers are the single largest volume crop produced by Sun Valley, involving 200 acres in production, and the crop loss meant both financial hardship but also a decrease in the farm's labor needs as there were no peppers to be hand-harvested by the workers. TR 816:18-817:9. Because of the loss of peppers and resulting loss of work, the decision was made to let go a group of workers. Given that this occurred fairly late in the season, Sun Valley worked with their H-2A filing agent and payroll staff to identify workers who had already met the three-fourths guarantee for the season. TR 779:2-19.

Of the workers let go and returned to Mexico in August, the Administrator asserts that 4 are owed back wages on a three-fourths guarantee claim. Of those workers, however, the Administrator considered only the hours worked and not the hours offered as required in the three-fourths guarantee regulations. See 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(i) ("The employer must guarantee to offer the worker employment…"). In most cases, hours offered and hours worked will match perfectly but, in some cases, where a worker is sick or injured and offered work that he or she is unable to perform or chooses not to perform for some other reason, then the employer must still be credited for the hours offered. Lisa Justice testified that Sun Valley's state-of-the-art I.D. scanning technology, P.E.T. Tiger, would not capture an entry for a worker who was sick, injured, or otherwise not working, since they would not have "scanned in" to start the work day. TR 683:8-684:4. Joe Marino seconded this in questioning by the Court. TR 833:22-834:13.

Despite his confident memory regarding soft drink consumption, the price of a case of beer, and whether a trash can lid was in place years ago, Investigator Perez was less sure of whether he had ever spoken with workers who told him that they had been sick or injured enough to miss several days of work. TR 554:5-555:19. He admitted that he might have spoken with a worker with a foot injury, and grudgingly conceded that the H-2A regulations provide that workers would get credit for hours offered to them while they were injured. TR 555:3-21; 555:22-558:8; cf. 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(i)(3) (crediting the employer for "hours offered" for any hours the worker fails to work, for purposes of the three-fourths guarantee). Despite spending several days at the farm and reviewing hundreds of pages of records, he specifically testified that he never even asked Sun Valley for any documents about hours or days when a worker was sick and did not appear on the P.E.T. Tiger-generated payroll report. TR 649:16-22.

As discussed above, with respect to the 19 workers who left early in the season, if a worker is terminated for cause or voluntarily abandons the position before the end of the period set forth in the job order, the three-fourths guarantee does not apply. See 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(n). Investigator Perez testified that, while he could tell that one of the later-season individuals for whom back wages are sought ($2,751.94), Mr. Islas Larraga, was no longer employed after June 9, 2015, he had no idea why Mr. Islas Larraga stopped working. TR 558:9-561:6. Critically, he had no idea if he had been terminated for cause or voluntarily abandoned employment. Id. In fact, he had absconded from the job mid-season, voluntarily abandoning his employment.

C. Early Departure Notifications to DOL and DHS

The Administrator seeks to impose additional CMPs of $1,350 on a theory of an attempted "waiver of rights" based on forms the workers completed upon their departure during the 2015 season. Under 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(n), an H-2A employer has two days to file a report with DOL's Chicago National Processing Center and DHS if a worker abandons employment. In consultation with Sun Valley's filing agent, Theresa Ward at National Agriculture Consultants, LLC ("NAC"), Russell Marino, Jr. printed out standard abandonment/early departure forms in which the 19 workers could report that they were terminating their employment. TR 731:14-733:16; 812:3-5. It was Ms. Ward who advised Russell that, in her numerous years of experience with H-2A employment, workers were sometimes concerned that if they could not perform a job and voluntarily terminated employment, that might reflect badly on them in seeking future employment. TR 733:5-16.

The workers were provided with blank forms and were allowed to complete them themselves, as best suited their particular circumstances. Russell Marino, Jr. was not there when the workers received, completed, or returned the forms, Mr. Hernandez handled that himself. TR 225:23-25; 227:7-12. When asked if he ever saw Russell tell the departing workers which box to check on the form, he clearly testified that Russell had told them "that they could mark whatever box was best for them," and added that some of the group of 19 workers had spoken on the phone to an agent in Mexico about the best way to complete the form to ensure future H-2A employment in the U.S. and asked "whether this would compromise their position if they left because the work was very heavy." TR 227:16-19, 228:3-12.

Sun Valley has never used these forms as a defense to the three-fourths guarantee claims raised by the Administrator, nor to any other claims. There is no argument that the workers completed the forms accurately – the reasons for their departures in May and August 2015 were not, as a rule, because of sick or deceased family members. But, as described above, that decision was between the group of workers and between the workers and their contact back in Mexico. The testimony was not that Russell Marino, Jr. strong-armed anyone or in any way directed the departing workers to complete the form in any particular way. The claim for an additional $1,350 in CMPs for that theory was not supported at trial and should be dismissed.

Thus, there was no "coercion" to complete the forms, and there can be no waiver of rights where a right did not exist. None of the forms purport to surrender a right held by any of the workers – as to wages, other compensation, nor any other right. Cf. United States v. Castillo, 496 F.3d 947, 961 (9th Cir. 2007) (en banc) (dissent) (party "cannot waive a right that does not exist"); United States v. Burns, 433 F.3d 442, 444 (5th Cir. 2005) (party "cannot waive a right that did not exist at the time of the supposed waiver"); see also Connecticut v. Barrett, 479 U.S. 523, 532 n.2 (1987) ("I do not accept that a defendant could voluntarily, knowingly, or intelligently waive a right that he or she does not understand to exist.").

IV. Housing

The Administrator has assessed $3,600 in CMPs for alleged housing violations. The photographs of torn screens and missing trash can lids speak for themselves, but also shows that Sun Valley corrected the issues immediately but Investigator Perez never followed up to see if the corrections had been made. At the very least, the level of CMPs should be significantly reduced to reflect the immediate repairs and corrections made as soon as the Inspector identified the issues. Portions of the claim, particularly those related to the mattress on the floor, should be dismissed entirely.

Mr. Hernandez testified that he personally inspected the housing twice a week and arranged for it to be cleaned. TR 176:3-20. Russell Marino, Jr. testified further that, if any maintenance needs to be performed on the housing during the season, or if any worker raises a concern about the housing, he would confer with Mr. Hernandez and they would either make the repairs themselves or hire a carpenter, plumber, or electrician if needed for certain repairs. TR 782:19-25.

Investigator Perez testified that he alerted Sun Valley about his concerns with screens on doors and windows, missing trash can lids, and the overall cleanliness of the housing on July 22, 2015, but then testified that he never looked at the housing during multiple return trips to Sun Valley later that Summer, including on August 6, 2015, to confirm that the repairs had been made. TR 497:21-498:10; 499:8-15. He noted that Russell Marino, Jr. told him in July "that he would remedy the issues right away, particularly with, you know, the hot water and the screens that were torn." TR 498:8-10. When it suits them, the Administrator considers post-investigation actions for purposes of arguing for higher CMPs but where, as here, repairs are made immediately to address screens and trash can lids, etc., no such consideration is provided.

Part of the CMP calculation involves not enough beds for the number of workers occupying the housing. TR 862:1-2. The only "proof" of this violation is a photograph of a mattress that one of the workers had placed on the floor prior to the Wage & Hour Investigators' visit, and this alleged violation triggered a $450 CMP. TR 863:3-5; TR 865:1-866:23. Ms. Rachor conceded, however, that the requirement was to provide a bed, not to prevent workers from moving mattresses from a provided bed onto the floor. TR 923:14-924:3; cf. 20 C.F.R. § 654.416(a) (requirement to provide "comfortable beds, cots, or bunks, provided with clean mattresses").

In the pre-occupancy housing inspection performed by the New Jersey Department of Labor, the housing unit was certified for 136 workers. TR 803:9-15; TR 803:24-804:1; Respondent's Exhibit 2, p.13. The maximum number of workers living in the housing never exceeded 118 during the 2015 season. TR 804:2-11. Part of the pre-occupancy inspection involves counting the number of available beds (and mattresses) to ensure that a sufficient number is provided for the proposed occupancy. This standard was clearly met, and the decision by a worker to move his mattress from the employer-provided bed to the floor does not support a CMP assessment.

V. Transportation

The Administrator seeks CMPs of $7,500 for alleged transportation violations under 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(h)(4) (Joint Exhibit 10, p.160-161). These violations fall into two categories: (1) the tread depth and turn signal on employer-provided vans and busses; and (2) the driver's licenses held by 3 of the employees operating the vans and busses. The latter allegation is the more serious, and since learning of this issue during the course of the 2015 investigation, has taken steps to prevent this from ever happening again, including internal protocols for checking for valid New Jersey driver's licenses from any employee operating a van or bus at the farm. The problem has been resolved, and while this is clearly a serious issue, it does not support the full CMP assessment pursued by the Administrator in this case.

Regarding the tires, Inspector Perez offered photographs and his own recollection of a visual inspection of the condition of the tires. He loosely used the term "bald" for the tires, whereas the photographs clearly showed grooves in the tread. He admitted that he had no idea how professional safety inspections were performed including, defying all credibility, claiming to not now if professional mechanics used ballpoint pens instead of micrometers to measure tread depth. TR 533:12-22. He defined "bald" as "no tread" on the tire. TR 533:23-534:1. Looking back at his own pictures, however, he admitted that there were "tread marks" on the tires in question. TR 534:6-18. He then acknowledged that "[t]here's slight tread, I mean, I guess you can say." TR 535:8. The MSPA standard that he claimed to be applying was 1/32 of an inch of tread (TR 535:9-10), but he was utterly incapable of saying whether the tires in question met that standard. TR 535:11-15; 536:3-537:8; 502:19-20.

Applying the same scientific precision to his eyeball measurements as he did to his beer estimates, Investigator Perez could not clearly state whether the tires pictured met the MSPA safety standard or not apart from his own gut feeling on the subject. Obviously, this cannot be the standard a reasonable government applies in demanding payment from its citizens. The Administrator seeks $750 per vehicle based on the issue of perceived tread depth. That assessment should be dismissed in its entirety.

VI. The CMP Calculations Are Rife With Errors and Overstated

Ms. Rachor testified at length regarding her calculation of civil money penalties against Sun Valley. Over and over again, she noted mitigation factors that should have been considered but were not, and places where the assessed CMPs were overstated. Beyond the problem with starting at the maximum allowable penalty and working back, which the regulations do not require, the Administrator seemed more interested in racking up penalty figures than in working with Sun Valley to address issues identified during the investigation – either at the time or even at the final conference.

The Administrator asserted at trial that one of the issues regarding the appropriateness of CMPs is Sun Valley's commitment to compliance and subsequent, post-investigation efforts to reform practices and procedures to better comply with the regulations. TR 759:7-9. In the 2016 and 2017 season, Sun Valley has demonstrated this commitment and made all of the changes identified in the determination. Piling on nearly a quarter of a million in CMPs now would serve no function to deter or improve compliance behavior but would simply threaten the destruction of this family farm.

Sun Valley respectfully asks the Court to exercise its discretion to apply its own review of the applicable factors and the underlying public policy undergirding these regulations in dismissing some or all of the CMPs for the reasons stated above but, as importantly, setting any remaining CMPs at a reasonable level commensurate with the facts of the case.

CONCLUSION

Despite the Administrator's best efforts to paint the Marino family and Sun Valley Orchards as exploiters of workers on a massive scale, the testimony and exhibits adduced at trial paint a vastly different picture. In its first season in the H-2A program, this family and this farm weathered a "perfect storm" of workers abandoning the crops in the field, weather and disease ruining remaining crops, and most devastating of all and posing the greatest threat to the future viability of the family farm, the Wage & Hour Division levying hundreds and hundreds of thousands of dollars in "back wages" and CMPs against them. These unsupported and unjustified demands seek to compel not only compliance with the actual regulations – that would be fair – but to require provision of free meals, free soft drinks, and cheap beer, none of which is contemplated by the rules or supported by H-2A jurisprudence.

Any payment by a worker for food or drinks was to Agustin Hernandez. Not one single penny went to Sun Valley. It stands to reason that this should matter, but the Administrator will likely offer page after page of argument as to why it does not.

The 19 workers departing after less than two weeks in early May 2015 decided that the work was too difficult for them and left Sun Valley in dire straits with respect to the asparagus harvest. The group of workers departing in August 2015 after the pepper crop failure had all met their three-fourths guarantee levels. No worker was threatened or coerced into signing anything, much less into any effort to waive their H-2A rights. At its heart, the facts and reality simply do not match the rhetoric. Sun Valley respectfully asks that the Court to enter judgment in its favor on all charges.

In the Matter of

ADMINISTRATOR, WAGE AND HOUR DIVISION, U.S. DEPARTMENT OF LABOR Plaintiff

v.

SUN VALLEY ORCHARDS, LLC
Respondent

DECISION AND ORDER AFFIRMING IN PART AND MODIFYING IN PART THE ADMINISTRATOR'S FINDINGS

This matter arises under the H-2A provision of the Immigration and Nationality Act ("INA" or "the Act"), as amended, 8 U.S.C. §§ 1101(a) and 1188(c), and the U.S. Department of Labor's ("DOL") implementing regulations found at 20 C.F.R. Part 655, subpart B, and 29 C.F.R. Part 501 ("the H-2A regulations" or "the [governing] regulations").

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The Administrator, Wage and Hour Division, U.S. Department of Labor ("Administrator") filed a Notice of Determination on June 22, 2016, alleging multiple violations of the H-2A program against Sun Valley Orchards, LLC's ("Respondent"). See JX 10 (December 23, 2006 Order of Reference and Summary of Violations). The Administrator assessed back pay and civil money penalties ("CMPs") totaling $564,026. See Administrator's Brief at 91.

On December 23, 2016, the Administrator issued an Order of Reference, which referred the matter to the Office of Administrative Law Judges ("OALJ"). On January 11, 2017, the undersigned received the assignment of this case. On January 18, 2017, the undersigned issued an Initial Notice of Hearing and Pre-Hearing Order scheduling the hearing to begin on February 16, 2017 in Cherry Hill, New Jersey. At a February 2, 2017 telephonic pre-hearing conference, the Parties petitioned the undersigned for a revised hearing schedule. A February 7, 2017 Order granted the Parties' joint motion for a revised hearing schedule, and scheduled the hearing to begin on July 18, 2017.

On May 23, 2017, by facsimile, Respondent's counsel filed an Emergency Motion for Revised Schedule proposing to move the filing of motions for summary decision deadline to June 9, 2017. By facsimile dated May 24, 2017, the Administrator filed her Opposition to Respondent's Motion for a Third Extension to the Summary Decision Deadline. Respondent submitted, by facsimile on May 24, 2017, Respondent's Reply in Further Support of Emergency Motion for Revised Schedule.

A May 25, 2017 Order Granting Respondent's Emergency Motion for Revised Schedule afforded the parties a one-week extension to file motions for summary decision. Further, the Order advised the parties that no other deadlines would change and the hearing remained scheduled for July 18, 2017 in Cherry Hill, New Jersey. The undersigned received both the Administrator's Motion for Partial Summary Decision and Respondent's Motion for Summary Decision on June 2, 2017.

On June 6, 2017, by facsimile, the Administrator filed a Joint Motion to Extend by One Week Certain Pre-Hearing Deadlines. The parties jointly requested that the undersigned set June 16, 2017 as the deadline to file summary decision oppositions, extend the deadline for pre-hearing disclosures and exchanges to June 19, 2017, and extend the deadline for the pre-hearing statements to June 23, 2017. A June 8, 2017 Order granted the parties' joint motion to extend the foregoing deadlines. A July 7, 2017 Order denied the parties' motions for summary decision.

On July 18, 2017, the hearing commenced in Cherry Hill, New Jersey. At the conclusion of the hearing, on July 21, 2017,[1] the undersigned directed the parties to meet and confer regarding a briefing schedule. On September 25, 2017, by facsimile letter, the parties filed a Joint Motion to Set Post Hearing Briefing Schedule. An October 5, 2017 Order granted the parties' joint motion and extended the deadline to submit post-hearing briefs to December 15, 2017. Both parties submitted briefs on December 15, 2017.

ISSUES

1. Did Respondent violate 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(g), (p), and (q) by making false promises about kitchen access and failing to disclose meal charges?
   a. If so, did the Administrator properly assess $128,285 in back wages?
   b. If so, did the Administrator properly assess $198,450 in civil money penalties ("CMPs")?
2. Did Respondent violate 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(p) through Agustin Hernandez's sale of drinks and other items at a profit or in violation of state law?
   a. If so, did the Administrator properly assess $80,762.69 in back wages?

[1] At the hearing, the undersigned admitted the following exhibits: Administrative Law Judge's Exhibit ("ALJX") 1; Joint Exhibits ("JX") 1–JX 10; Prosecuting Party's Exhibits ("PX") 1; PX 2; PX 3; PX 15–PX 15-2; PX 16; PX 16-1; PX 17-1; PX 17-2; PX 17-3; PX 19; PX 20; PX 21; PX 22; PX 23; PX 24; PX 25; PX 28; PX 29; PX 30; PX 32; PX 33; PX 34; PX 35; PX 36; PX 37; PX 39; PX 41; and PX 42; Respondent's Exhibits ("RX") 1; RX 2; RX 5; RX 7; RX 9; and RX 12–RX 19.

3. Did Respondent violate 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(i) by discharging certain workers prior to such workers meeting the three-fourths wages guarantee?
   a. If so, did the Administrator properly assess $142,728.22 in back wages?
   b. If so, did the Administrator properly assess $1,350.00 in CMPs?
4. Did Respondent violate 29 C.F.R. § 501.5 by attempting to cause workers to waive the three-fourths guarantee at 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(i)?
   a. If so, did the Administrator properly assess $1,350.00 in CMPs?
5. Did Respondent violate 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(d) by providing inadequate housing?
   a. If so, did the Administrator properly assess $3,600.00 in CMPs?
6. Did Respondent violate 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(h)(4) through providing substandard transportation and unlicensed drivers?
   a. If so, did the Administrator properly assess $7,500.00 in CMPs?

STIPULATIONS OF FACT

The Parties agree to the following stipulations, provided in full:[2]

1. Respondent, a New Jersey farm, employs both foreign nationals working on H-2A visas ("H-2A workers") as well as a number of non-H-2A employees, including non-H-2A employees engaged in corresponding employment ("domestic workers").[3] The workers' duties include picking asparagus, peppers, and other crops.

2. Respondent was founded as a limited liability corporation in 2012 and is owned by Russell Marino Jr.; Joseph Marino, Harry Marino; and Russell Marino, Sr.

3. Respondent took over the farming operation formerly known as Marino Brothers, Inc.

4. Marino Brothers, Inc. did business under the trade name "Sun Valley Orchards."

5. Russell Marino, Sr.; Sebastien Marino; and Harry Marino owned Marino Brothers, Inc.

6. Marino Brothers, Inc. employed Agustin Hernandez ("Hernandez") and Russell Marino, Jr. (among others).

7. To obtain workers for the period of April 13, 2015 to October 10, 2015 (the "2015 growing season"), Respondent filed two applications for Temporary Employment Certification ETA Form 9142 ("TEC") and two Agricultural and Food Processing Clearance Orders (ETA Form 790) ("job orders").

---

[2] The undersigned has made minor grammatical changes to the Parties' stipulations.

[3] Where necessary and appropriate, the undersigned will use the term "farmworkers" to denote both H-2A workers and non H-2A domestic workers.

8. Respondent filed a job order for the period of April 13, 2015 to October 10, 2015. The Department of Labor subsequently approved this job order. JX 1 contains a true and accurate copy of that job order.

9. Respondent also filed a TEC for this same time period. The Department subsequently approved this TEC. JX 2 is a true and accurate copy of that TEC.

10. Respondent also filed a job order for the period of June 1, 2015 to October 10, 2015. The Department subsequently approved this job order. JX 3 is a true and accurate copy of that job order.

11. Respondent also filed a TEC for the period of June 1, 2015 to October 10, 2015. The Department subsequently approved this TEC. JX 4 is a true and accurate copy of that TEC.

12. After the Department of Labor approved these TECs and job orders, Respondent hired H-2A workers.

13. During 2015, Respondent qualified as an employer within the definition of 20 C.F.R. § 655.103(b).

14. During 2015, Hernandez was not an employer within the definition of 20 C.F.R. § 655.103(b).

15. JX 5 is a chart listing the ninety-six H-2A workers and fifty-one domestic workers that Respondent employed during the 2015 growing season.

16. In the job orders, Respondent promised to pay these employees $11.29 per hour or at a piece rate, whichever was higher.

17. JX 6 is a true and accurate copy of Respondent's employee roster for the 2015 growing season.

18. During the 2015 growing season, Hernandez supervised Respondent's H-2A and domestic workers and selected the drivers to transport Respondent's H-2A and domestic workers from the housing facility to the agricultural fields.

19. During the 2015 growing season, Respondent's H-2A workers, and many of its domestic workers, lived at Respondent's housing facility, which is located at 1321 Route 45 South, Swedesboro, NJ 08085.

20. This housing facility was built before April 3, 1980, and includes (among other things) bedrooms, a bathroom facility, and (in an adjacent building with a separate entrance) a kitchen.

21. During the 2015 growing season, Respondent paid for the utilities for this kitchen (including gas, electricity, and water), and provided various appliances for the kitchen, including stoves, freezers, a microwave, and refrigerators.

22. During the 2015 growing season, 139 of Respondent's H-2A and domestic workers purchased meals prepared in Respondent's kitchen and paid Hernandez between $75 and $80 a week for these meals.

23. During the 2015 growing season, many of Respondent's H-2A and domestic workers paid Hernandez for soft drinks, energy drinks, and snacks, among other things.

24. During the 2015 growing season, to the parties' knowledge, Respondent withheld no money from any H-2A or domestic worker's paychecks for meals, drinks, or any other items.

25. Other than payments to Hernandez, to the parties' knowledge, none of the H-2A workers or domestic workers paid Respondent for meals, drinks, or any other items.

26. During the 2015 growing season, Hernandez did not have a license to sell beer or cigarettes.

27. The chart at JX 7 lists workers who last worked at Respondent on or before May 7, 2015.[4]

28. Jose D. Islas Larraga last worked for Respondent on June 9, 2015.[5]

29. On or about August 8, 2015, Respondent terminated the employment of Miguel A. Elizondo Soto, Luis A. Luna Gonzalez, Jose L. Silva Lopez, Dario Morales Acosta, and Rodrigo Raya Tapia. These workers' last day of work occurred on or before August 4, 2015.

30. Respondent asked workers whose work ended before the end of the season to complete a worker departure form.

31. The top half of this form was in English and the bottom half was in Spanish.

32. The workers were instructed to retain the bottom half and to return the top half.

33. JX 8 contains true and accurate copies of the English portions of the worker departure forms signed by Respondent's workers around the time that their work was ending.

---

[4] The parties dispute whether the workers' employment ended because Respondent constructively discharged or terminated them, or because they voluntarily quit.

[5] The parties also dispute the reasons that this worker stopped working for Respondent.

34. Attached, as JX 9 is a true and accurate copy of a worker departure form, including English and Spanish portions, dated August 8, 2015.

35. Worker departure forms were distributed to H-2A workers who departed before the end of the season around the time that these workers' work ended.

36. During the 2015 growing season, the Wage and Hour Division of the U.S. Department of Labor, including Wage Hour Investigators ("WHI") John Crudup and Jose Perez, investigated Respondent to determine (among other things) whether the farm was in compliance with H-2A regulations.

37. During their investigation, [the Administrator] inspected the housing facility and five of Respondent's buses, interviewed Respondent's workers and drivers, and met with Respondent's owners and with Hernandez.

38. On June 22, 2016, the Administrator issued a determination letter alleging that Respondent violated certain H-2A regulations and assessing $369,703.22 in back wages and $212,250.00 in CMPs against Respondent.

39. On July 20, 2016, Respondent filed a timely hearing request.

40. On December 23, 2016, the Administrator filed an Order of Reference referring the matter to OALJ. The Administrator also amended the determination letter by adjusting the amounts sought to $376,697.61 in back wages and $212,250.00 in CMPs, and added additional findings and bases for the Administrator's back wage and CMP assessment.

41. Attached, as JX 10 is a true and accurate copy of the Order of Reference, which includes true and accurate copies of the underlying determination letter and hearing request referenced in paragraphs 38-40.

42. During the course of discovery in this matter, the Administrator took depositions of six H-2A workers. In accordance with 29 C.F.R. § 18.55(a), the Parties stipulate that true and accurate transcripts or videos of the depositions, or portions thereof, may be used at the hearing to the extent that doing so would be admissible under the applicable rules of evidence as if the deponent were present and testifying at the hearing.

See ALJX 1 ("Joint Stipulation of Agreed Facts").

FINDINGS OF FACT[6]

Bathroom Conditions

The bathrooms at Respondent's dormitories lacked sufficient hot water.[7] Two of the sinks were completely broken.[8] The bathrooms contained windows without screens, which allowed entry to pests.[9] Relatedly, when workers first arrived, there were no bathrooms in the fields.[10]

[6] For the sake of readability only, the undersigned has grouped the findings of fact in alphabetical order, and used footnote citations.

Beer Sales

Hernandez sold beer to the farmworkers; however, he did not have a license from the State of New Jersey to do so.[11] Hernandez did not keep a record of the amount of beers sold to the farmworkers. As a result, WHI Perez created the reconstruction at PX 2, which attempted to calculate Hernandez's "estimated profit."[12] The evidence of record reasonably establishes that the workers bought three and three-quarter cans of beer per week; however, some workers bought more per week and some did not buy any beer at all.[13] To determine the price of beers, WHI Perez went to Costco and obtained a price of $20.99 for a thirty-pack of Coors Light.[14] The Administrator reasonably estimated that the wholesale price for a can of beer was seventy cents.[15] WHI Perez went to Costco, because Elia Pinon, Hernandez's wife, told him that she and Hernandez bought their beer at another wholesaler, Sam's Club.[16] Hernandez sold Corona,

Coors Light, Budweiser, Modelo, and Coors Light.[17] Thus, it was reasonable for WHI Perez to determine the per-can cost through comparison of Coors Light sold at a wholesale club, here Costco. The Administrator decided to reimburse those farmworkers who bought beer for the amount of Hernandez's profit, which it reasonably determined was $1.30 per can (the beers cost seventy cents and Hernandez sold the beers for $2).[18] Perez provided a reasonable calculation that Respondent owed each worker $18.20 per week in back wages.[19]

Buses

Respondent used buses to transport the farmworkers from its dormitory to the fields; one field was a fifteen-minute drive from the dormitory area.[20] Hernandez chose bus drivers from amongst its farmworkers.[21] Of the five buses WHI Perez inspected, three had worn, unsafe tires.[22] One bus had a broken rear turn signal.[23]

Deductions from Pay

The farmworkers never paid in cash for either the meals or the beverages Hernandez sold.[24] Hernandez would take workers' checks to the bank to cash them and then return the money to the workers, minus any money owed for meals and beverages.[25] Russel Marino, Jr. told Hernandez to keep track of the farmworkers' payments in this way.[26]

Drivers

Hernandez selected bus drivers from within Respondent's pool of workers.[27] Hernandez would allow any such worker to drive if the worker had a Mexican driver's license or driving experience.[28] In response to WHI Perez's request, none of the five workers WHI Perez observed driving the buses could provide him with a U.S. driver's license.[29] Hernandez only provided drivers' licenses to WHI Perez for three of the five drivers WHI Perez observed.[30] Two had Mexican driver's licenses, one had an expired Mexican driver's license, and two had no licenses.[31] Russel Marino, Jr. told WHI Perez that he could not control who drives the bus on any given day.[32]

Hard Work

The farmworkers engaged in "hard work."[33] The workers worked twelve hours per day with only one one-hour break.[34] Some of the workers had prior experience working in a bent over posture.[35]

Hernandez's Working Relationship with Respondent

Hernandez has worked for Respondent or its predecessor companies for twenty-seven years.[36] His father worked for Respondent, his son currently drives a bus for Respondent, and his wife works in Respondent's kitchen.[37] Hernandez receives all of his pay from Respondent; Respondent provides him with an hourly pay rate plus commission for the amount of product that is packaged.[38] For example, if the farmworkers packaged more asparagus, Hernandez would receive more money in the form of a commission.[39]

In 2015, Hernandez helped facilitate Respondent's engagement in the H-2A program.[40] Hernandez operated the meal plan that fed the farmworkers. Although Hernandez utilized Respondent's kitchen to do so, he paid the cooks, and bought groceries and certain appliances, as needed, to cook the meals.[41] Hernandez's wife, Elia Pinon, worked in the kitchen.[42] After Respondent decided to utilize the H-2A program in 2015, Respondent told Hernandez that he could keep charging for meals but that Hernandez—not Respondent—would be responsible for paying the kitchen staff's wages.[43]

Concerning kitchen access, Russel Marino, Jr. told Hernandez to "accommodate the guys however he had to."[44] Respondent paid the kitchen's utility bills.[45] Respondent did not pick the menu or otherwise tell Hernandez how to run the kitchen or set prices.[46] Hernandez told Respondent how much he planned to charge for the meals.[47] Respondent told Hernandez to keep track of the workers' payments for the meal plan.[48] Respondent took Hernandez to a meeting with the Department to ensure he understood the regulatory parameters concerning meal plans.[49] Respondent told Hernandez "for years" to keep his receipts, "because you cannot make a profit on the men."[50] Hernandez charged workers seventy-five to eighty dollars per week to participate in the meal plan and kept track of the workers' participation.[51] Hernandez also sold beverages, including beer, to the farmworkers.[52] Respondent did not receive money from Hernandez or otherwise tell him how much to sell the drinks.[53] Hernandez kept a "store" in Respondent's kitchen, where he would sell drinks, snacks, and beer.[54]

When workers arrived at the camp, Hernandez said that he would orient them about housing, the "rules of the camp," keeping the bathrooms clean, hours of work, pay, kitchen access, and cost of meals.[55] Hernandez told the workers when to work; the workers did not have a choice as to their hours.[56] Russel Marino, Jr. only "sometimes" was present for the workers' orientation.[57] "Several times a day," Russel Marino, Jr. would check in with Hernandez concerning the farm's "day-to-day happenings."[58] Russel Marino, Jr. did not explain the meal cost because "that's in the contract."[59] When the farmworkers paid Hernandez, the workers signed a form to indicate they "agreed that they received the meal and" paid for the meal plan; Respondent's name appears at the top of the form.[60]

Hernandez also maintained the sleeping quarters and bathroom facilities at Respondent's dormitory site.[61] Hernandez was responsible for transporting the farmworkers from the dormitory area to the fields.[62] Respondent tasked Hernandez with ensuring that the workers had water in the fields.[63] Workers paid Hernandez for meals, drinks, housing, and transportation; they did not pay Respondent directly.[64]

Although the dormitory-area had a kitchen, workers did not have access to the kitchen. The workers could not make their own meals.[65] Except for a refrigerator Hernandez added to keep cool the beverages he sold, Respondent owned the kitchen, all of its major appliances, and paid for all utilities.[66] The workers never asked to use the kitchen facilities.[67] Cheguez testified that the farmworkers "were sure that they were going to say no because . . . we couldn't . . . do our own cooking there."[68] The kitchen was large, but not large enough for "many workers to cook simultaneously."[69]

Layoffs and Three-fourths Guarantee

In August 2015, Respondent's pepper crop became diseased and Respondent had to lay off forty-four workers due to lack of work.[70] Hernandez chose "troublemakers" to lay off because no workers initially volunteered for the layoff.[71] The "troublemakers" were those employees who refused to work on the weekend.[72] Russel Marino, Jr. did not know the names of the laid-off workers.[73] Of the workers who left in August 2015, Respondent only failed to fulfill its three-fourths requirement concerning four such workers.[74]

Russel Marino, Jr. said that Lisa Justice, Respondent's payroll manager,[75] ensured that Respondent fulfilled the three-fourths guarantee for any laid off worker.[76] WHI Perez understood the H-2A regulations to mean that the employer is required to pay three-fourths of the hours offered, "based on the beginning and ending date" of the worker being available for work at the site.[77] Perez said that the "clock" starting running the day after the employee arrived at the property.[78]

May 2015 Argument

In May 2015,[90] a meeting occurred between Respondent—represented by Hernandez, Russel Marino, Jr., and Joseph Marino—and nineteen of the farmworkers.[91] The nineteen workers were upset at the working and living conditions, and wanted to share their concerns with Respondent.[92] During the May 2015 meeting, Russel Marino, Jr. became angry with the workers.[93] A number of the nineteen workers left the argument thinking that Respondent had

Meals

JX 1 is the ETA Form 790 Job Order, which requested forty workers for the period of April 13, 2015 to October 10, 2015. On December 12, 2014, Russel Marino, Jr. signed the Job Order.[96] The Job Order at JX 1 states:

> Employers will furnish free cooking and kitchen facilities to those workers who are entitled to live in the employer's housing so that workers may prepare their own meals . . . . Once a week the employers will offer to provide (on a voluntary basis by the workers) free transportation to assure workers access to the closest store where they can purchase groceries.[97]

JX 3, the ETA Form 790 Job Order concerning the period June 1, 2015 to October 10, 2015, contained the same or substantially similar language.[98]

Respondent hired a company called National Agricultural Consultants to help complete the 2015 H-2A job orders.[99] Russel Marino, Jr. said that he conducted research and sought advice from other farmers concerning Respondent's participation in the H-2A program.[100]

Upon arrival at Respondent's dormitory, Hernandez informed the farmworkers about the existence of a meal plan, which cost between $75 and $80 per week.[101] Russel Marino, Jr.

testified that in 2015 Respondent indeed furnished the "facilities" to allow the farmworkers to cook their own meals.[102] Although in both 2015 and 2016, Respondent provided meals "at cost" to the farmworkers, Russel Marino, Jr. recognized that the 2015 job order failed to mention that fact.[103]

Non-alcoholic Beverages and Other Items Sold to the Farmworkers

Hernandez sold a variety of items to the farmworkers, including soda, energy drinks, beer, Gatorade, cookies, toilet paper, and soup.[104] The Administrator decided to enforce back wages and CMPs against Respondent only for the beverages it sold to the farmworkers; the Administrator did not enforce back wages and CMPs for any violations resulting from the selling of cookies, toilet paper, and soup. Hernandez sold the beverages in the fields and out of Respondent's kitchen.[105] The Administrator had to reconstruct the amount of non-alcoholic drinks sold because Hernandez either destroyed or otherwise could not produce his records as to the workers' purchase of drinks in the summer of 2015.[106] The preponderant evidence of record demonstrates that each farmworker purchased from Hernandez, on average, four non-alcoholic drinks per day.[107] By contrast, the Administrator considered a 4.4 drinks-per-day figure. The Administrator applied a price of $1.25 per drink, even though the Administrator determined that was likely a conservative estimate.[108]

Hernandez could not provide all receipts for the beverages sold because Russel Marino, Jr. told him he did not need to keep such receipts.[109] PX 36, page 1141, is a July 2015 receipt for thirty-six cans of Coke, which Pinon and Hernandez purchased for thirteen dollars. Pinon said that she and Hernandez purchased the sodas and energy drinks from a Sam's Club in Deptford, New Jersey.[110] When determining the prices of soda and Gatorade WHI Perez perused the website for the Deptford, New Jersey Sam's Club.[111]

Respondent's Business, Generally

The same family has owned Respondent's farm for four generations.[112] Respondent is owned in equal parts by Joseph Marino, Russel Marino, Jr., Russel Marino—their father—and Harry Marino—their uncle.[113] Russel Marino, Jr. and Joseph Marino perform most of the day-to-day operations. (Id.) In 2014, Respondent's I-129 petition stated a "gross annual income of $7,500,000."[114]

Labor is "essential" to Respondent's business.[115] Although Respondent always used migrant labor, after 2014, Respondent decided to participate in the H-2A program.[116] In May 2015, the farmworkers picked asparagus. The asparagus harvest occurs within a six to eight week period.[117] The workers perform other tasks during the asparagus harvest.[118] In May 2015, Respondent needed the workers' labor and did not want them to leave.[119] It cost Respondent $1,000 to bring in each H-2A worker.[120] Respondent replaced the nineteen workers who left after the May 2015 argument with other H-2A workers.[121]

It states, "[o]nce a week the employers will offer to provide (on a voluntary basis) free transportation to assure workers access to the closest store where they can purchase groceries."[122] However, Respondent either charged its farmworkers for transportation or did not offer such transportation.[123] Russel Marino, Jr. admitted the Respondent did not "formally" tell the farmworkers about transportation, but said "when the bus was getting ready to leave to go into the town, they said, okay, whoever wants to go, get on the bus, we're going to the town just like your contract says that every one of you have a copy of."[124]

Screens

The screens on the windows of Respondent's dormitory were ripped or missing.[125] The windows of Respondent's bathroom were also missing screens.[126] Some garbage cans did not have lids and WHI Perez noted the presence of flies around such lidless garbage cans.[127]

Water

Water was available to workers during mealtime.[128] The water had "a bad taste to it."[129] Hernandez recognized that, in the past, the water had a bad taste to it; however, Respondent replaced the filter and fixed the problem.[130] At first, the water in the fields was either missing or dirty.[131] At the time of WHI Perez's first visit, water was available in the fields, and the water did not have a smell.[132] Respondent provided the farmworkers with potable water, although not at all times.

Worker Departure Forms

Following the May 2015 argument about the working and living conditions at Respondent's farm, Hernandez handed out worker departure forms to the nineteen farmworkers who participated in that conversation.[133] The worker departure forms were written in both English and Spanish.[134] The worker departure forms stated that the workers were voluntarily leaving due to personal issues, like a sick or dying loved one.[135] The worker departure forms misrepresented the true reason for the workers' departure.[136] The worker departure forms stated that Respondent offered the farmworkers workers additional work for the remainder of the contract, but Respondent offered no such work.[137] Before handing the worker departure forms to the farmworkers, Russel Marino, Jr. signed the forms; he stated at his deposition that the purpose of the worker departure forms was to "protect against . . . this lawsuit."[138]

138 PX 15 at 475 (Russel Marino, Jr.'s deposition).

Russel Marino, Jr. testified that Theresa Ward, a manager with National Agricultural Consulting, created the form.[139] National Agricultural Consultants sent the false notification to the Department.[140] Ward advised Russel Marino, Jr. that the option was:

> the right thing to do for them for their future employment. Because fieldwork may not have been for them, they may have been able to do warehouse working or something else. And I didn't want to, you know, put a little mark on their form, saying that, okay, this guy can't -- I had to fire this guy. I didn't want to say that, not that I was firing them anyway. But I gave them the option to personal reasons [sic] for that reason just so in the future they wouldn't have any problem getting picked off a list for future work.[141]

Russel Marino, Jr. noted that the worker departure forms did not allow the farmworkers the possibility to suggest that the workers were fired.[142] He recognized, however, that "[a]s a technicality, I guess" the workers did not resign; "they were terminated."[143]

NARRATIVE FINDINGS OF FACT

Respondent is a large, family owned, agricultural producer located in southern New Jersey. Although Respondent always used migrant labor, 2015 was the first year that it decided to engage with the H-2A program. The job orders Respondent issued informed putative H-2A farmworkers that Respondent would provide the workers with kitchen access. Upon arrival at Respondent's dormitories, however, Respondent informed the farmworkers that rather than kitchen access, they could purchase a meal plan costing between $75 and $80 each week. Kitchen access was unavailable or otherwise denied. Along with the meal plan, Respondent sold the farmworkers drinks, including beer.

The farmworkers engaged in hard work, including, inter alia, the harvesting of asparagus and peppers. Potable water and clean bathroom facilities were only sporadically available, especially in the fields. The farmworkers were upset with these conditions and wanted Respondent to address their concerns. An argument occurred sometime in May 2015 between nineteen farmworkers and owners Russel Marino, Jr. and Joseph Marino and Respondent's foreman, Hernandez. This argument led directly to Respondent's firing of the nineteen workers. Respondent provided the affected farmworkers with worker departure forms that mischaracterized the reasons for their leaving as needing to return home to care for a sick or dying loved one. In August 2015, Respondent laid off another cohort of workers and had that group sign similar forms.

Respondent provided inadequate housing to the farmworkers. The dormitory included dirty bathrooms without hot water and screens on the windows, other windows with broken or missing screen, and uncovered garbage cans. Respondent transported the workers from the dormitory area to the fields in unsafe vehicles with unlicensed drivers.

After a full investigation, the Administrator found various violations of the Act, and assessed $351,775.90 in back wages and $212,250.00 in CMPs.

POSITIONS OF THE PARTIES

The Administrator's Brief

The Administrator argued that Respondent violated § 655.122(g), (p)(1), and (q), because it did not disclose the existence of the meal plan on the job order it provided to prospective H-2A workers; it otherwise did not provide kitchen access to the workers. See Administrator's Brief at 22 (citing JX 1 at 2). Respondent also allegedly made impermissible deductions to the farmworkers' pay when it charged for meals. Id. The Administrator wrote that, to fulfill its duties under the job order, Respondent must have actually "furnish[ed]" kitchen access; the fact that Respondent did not affirmatively deny kitchen access to any employees' request is not enough. See Administrator's Brief at 24–25 (citing 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(g)).

As a corollary, the Administrator argued that because Respondent did not provide its farmworkers with kitchen access, it was responsible for providing workers with meals free of charge. See Administrator's Brief at 26. Additionally, because Respondent did not disclose the required meal charges, it violated § 655.122(g). It violated § 655.122(q) because it omitted from the job offer "one of the 'provisions required' by § 655.122(g), namely disclosure of the meal charges." (Id.) That Hernandez operated the meal plan does not absolve Respondent from liability, because Respondent was still the party responsible for disclosing the meal charges, which it failed to do. Allowing an employer to deflect liability in this way would open a loophole, which would "eviscerate" other aspects of the program's requirements, such as "prohibitions on excessive meal charges (§ 655.173(a)) and charges that include a profit (§ 655.122(p)(2)), and the obligation to provide [farmworkers] free housing (§ 655.122(d))." Id. n.16.

The Administrator continued, stating Respondent violated the regulations through the actions of its "agent Hernandez." See Administrator's Brief at 27. In order not to violate the regulations, the job order must have disclosed any "deductions" Hernandez made for the meal plan. See id. (citing § 655.122(q)). The law allegedly makes no distinction between a deduction from wages and "shifting to the employee a cost that the employer could not lawfully directly deduct from wages." See id. (citing In re: Weeks Marine, Inc., ARB No. 12-093, 2015 WL 2172482, at *4 (Apr. 29, 2015)).

The Act's protections for migrant laborers do not exempt agricultural employers from common law agency principles. Therefore, the Administrator argued, Hernandez's act of charging workers for the meal plan was equivalent to Respondent charging its workers for the meal plan. See Administrator's Brief at 29 (citing Castillo v. Case Farms of Ohio, Inc., 96 F. Supp. 2d 578, 593 (W.D. Tex. 1999); Restatement (Third) of Agency ("Restatement") § 6.01) ("This section states the basic principle that when an agent enters into a contract on behalf of a disclosed principal, the principal and the third party are parties to the contract."). The Administrator stated that because Hernandez had either "actual authority," "apparent authority," or both, to act on Respondent's behalf to charge Respondent's farmworkers for the meal plan, Respondent violated "20 C.F.R. § 655.122(g), (p)(1) and (q) by constructively deducting the meal charges from workers' wages, without having disclosed the meal plan charges in the Job Orders." See Administrator's Brief at 30.

Section 2.01 of the Restatement posits that actual authority exists "when, at the time of taking action that has legal consequences for the principal, the agent reasonably believes, in accordance with the principal's manifestations to the agent, that the principal wishes the agent so to act." See Administrator's Brief at 29. Due to the kitchen's size, Respondent's "longstanding practice" was to require farmworkers to purchase meal plans from Hernandez. See Administrator's Brief at 30 (citing Tr. 176–77, 186–87, 738, 742–43, 808). Respondent showed its authority over Hernandez by having Hernandez attend Departmental training sessions concerning meal plans, and following up with Hernandez to ensure compliance. See Administrator's Brief at 30–31 (citing PX 15 at 401–03; Tr. 51, 174–75, 773 (orientation), 187 (follow-up), 776).

Apparent authority exists when "a third party reasonably believes the actor has authority to act on behalf of the principal and that belief is traceable to the principal's manifestations." See Administrator's Brief at 30–32 (Restatement § 2.03). The Administrator argued that Respondent's workers held a reasonable belief that Hernandez had apparent authority to act on Respondent's behalf for several reasons. First, Russel Marino, Jr. told the workers that Hernandez would feed them "three squares a day". In addition, the workers recorded their payment for the meal plan using a form bearing Respondent's name. Finally, "Hernandez was the intermediary between workers and [Respondent] and [Hernandez] was their supervisor in every aspect of their lives." See Administrator's Brief at 32 (citing PX 7 at 173; PX 15 at 401–03; PX 17-2 at 799–800, Tr. at 51, 61, 172–75, 182, 211, 236–37, 773, 825).

The H-2A regulations prohibit profiteering, because such actions would improperly reduce workers' wages. See Administrator's Brief at 33 (citing 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(p)(2)). An H-2A employer or "any affiliated person" may deduct wages, but "all deductions must be reasonable." 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(p)(1), (2).

> The wage requirements of § 655.120 will not be met where undisclosed or unauthorized deductions, rebates, or refunds reduce the wage payment made to the employee below the minimum amounts required under this subpart, or where the employee fails to receive such amounts free and clear because the employee kicks back directly or indirectly to the employer or to another person for the employer's benefit the whole or part of the wage delivered to the employee.

20 C.F.R. § 655.122(p)(2). The term "'affiliated person' includes but is not limited to . . . any person acting in the employer's behalf or interest (directly or indirectly), or who has an interest in the employment relationship." See Administrator's Brief at 33 (quoting WHD Bulletin No. 2012-3). If a prohibited charge "reduce[s] the wage payment . . . below the minimum amounts required," an employer owes back wages to any effected farmworkers. See Administrator's Brief at 33 (citing 20 C.F.R. § 655.120 § 655.122(l), (p)(2); 29 C.F.R. § 501.16(a)(2)).

The governing regulations prohibit any charge or deduction that either: (1) "includes a profit to the employer or to any affiliated person," 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(p)(2); or (2) involves items sold in violation of any federal, state, or local law, see 29 C.F.R. § 531.31 (which § 655.122(p)(2) incorporates by reference). See Administrator's Brief at 33–34. The Administrator continued that it is Respondent's duty to prove that the products sold did not include a profit or were otherwise reasonable. See Administrator's Brief at 33 (citing Ortiz v. Paramo, No. 06-3062, 2008 WL 4378373, at *6 (D.N.J. Sept. 19, 2008)).

The Administrator argued that Hernandez fits the definition of an affiliated person. See Administrator's Brief at 34–35. As such, the regulations prohibit Hernandez from profiteering from Respondent's workers; neither Respondent nor Hernandez kept receipts to determine whether Hernandez obtained any profit. Id. (citing Tr. at 209, 361, 371, 452–53). Hernandez also sold beer without a license. See Administrator's Brief at 36 (citing N.J. Stat. Ann. § 33:1-2(a) (requiring a license to sell beer in New Jersey)).

The Administrator asserted that Respondent owes $209,047.69 in back pay to the summer 2015 workers. See Administrator's Brief at 38. The $209,047.69 figure represents the full amount of improper charges made to Respondent's farmworkers for meals and drinks. Back pay for the full amount charged is appropriate, the Administrator asserted, because the regulations require disclosure of meal costs regardless of whether an employer profited, so absent a full back pay requirement, an employer would have no incentive to disclose meal costs. See Administrator's Brief at 38–39 (citing In re Global Horizons, Inc., No. 2010-TAE-00002, slip op. at 2 (OALJ Dec. 13, 2011). The job order Respondent issued told the prospective farmworkers that Respondent would pay either $11.29 per hour or the piece rate, whichever is greater. The piece rate or $11.29 per hour became the "minimum amount[] required" under 20 C.F.R. §§ 655.120, 122(l), and (p)(2). Therefore, Administrator argued, "any improper charges to workers pushed their wages below the promised rate." See Administrator's Brief at 38 n.21.

Concerning drinks, because Hernandez did not keep records as to the costs of and profits from the drinks he sold to Respondent's workers, such costs should not offset the back pay award. See Administrator's Brief at 39–40 (citing various cases arising under the Fair Labor Standards Act ("FLSA")). Calculating back wages for drinks is appropriate here, the Administrator continued, because the water in the fields tasted bad, the work was long and hard, and the workers "had no practical alternative." See Administrator's Brief at 40–41.

When an H-2A employer fails to keep records of deductions, the Anderson v. Mt. Clemens Pottery Co. burden-shifting framework applies. See Administrator's Brief at 44 (citing Anderson v. Mt. Clemens Pottery Co., 328 U.S. 680 (1946); Hart v. Rick's Cabaret Int'l, Inc., 73

F. Supp. 3d 382, 390 (S.D.N.Y. 2014)). The Administrator argues here that, because the workers had no legal obligation to document such expenses, and were otherwise unable to document the expenses while working in the fields, the burden should fall on Respondent to account for all charges incurred. See Administrator's Brief at 44–45 (citing Tr. 22, 77–78, 209).

The Mt. Clemens standard requires the Administrator to produce sufficient evidence to show the amount of the improper charges or deductions "as a matter of just and reasonable inference." See Administrator's Brief at 45 (citing Weeks Marine II, slip op. at 19). At that point, the burden switches to Respondent to negate the reasonableness of any inferences drawn from the Administrator's evidence. See id. (citing Hart, 73 F. Supp. 3d at 390). If the Respondent is unable to negate the reasonableness, a court may award damages, though approximate. See Administrator's Brief at 45–46 (citing Anderson v. Mt. Clemens Pottery Co., 328 U.S. 680, 688 (1946)); In re Greater Mo. Med. Pro-Care Providers, Inc., ARB No. 12-015, 2014 WL 469269 (ARB Jan. 29, 2014), at *16). Because the Administrator's evidence is reasonable, and Respondent is unable to negate that reasonableness, the undersigned should uphold the back wage calculations for drinks Respondent sold in 2015. See Administrator's Brief at 46.

The Administrator also calculated that Respondent owed $128,285 in back wages to 139 workers for the unlawful meal deductions. See Administrator's Brief at 46–48. The Administrator discussed the calculations leading to the $128,285 back wage figure. PX 2 is a document the Administrator created to show Respondent's summer 2015 weekly payroll records. Based on these records, the Administrator determined that Respondent employed 148 separate workers during the 2015 growing season for at least one week. See Administrator's Brief at 46. Except for three weeks where Respondent charged $80 per week, the Administrator determined that Respondent charged $75 per week for the meals. See Administrator's Brief at 47 (citing Tr. at 443.) The Administrator reduced the back wages for those workers who did not pay for the meal plan. See Administrator's Brief at 47 (citing Tr. at 444–45.) The Administrator noted that the parties stipulated that the meal plan cost between $75 and $80 per week and that 139 workers paid for the meal plan each week. See Administrator's Brief at 47. The Administrator called the $128,285 back wage figure a "conservative reconstruction of the back wages owed." See Administrator's Brief at 48.

The Administrator further determined that Respondent owed $71,790.08 in back wages for improper soft drink charges. See Administrator's Brief at 48–51 (citing PX 2 at 32, 61). Respondent's farmworkers allegedly purchased an average of 4.42 drinks per day and paid $1.25 per drink, on average, for a total of $38.68 per week. See Administrator's Brief at 48 (citing Tr. at 427–28, 439, 443, 624). Hernandez's testimony allegedly supports the Administrator's determination that workers paid on average $1.25 per drink. See Administrator's Brief at 51 (comparing Tr. at 195–96, with PX 19 at 809). Hernandez did not keep records of the number of drinks the farmworkers purchased, and the Administrator said that Hernandez's estimate of three to four drinks per day was low and less credible than the workers' testimony. See Administrator's Brief at 49 (citing Tr. at 195, 209; Appendix A to Administrator's Brief).

The Administrator also sought back wages for $8,972.61 for the beer Hernandez sold to the farmworkers. See Administrator's Brief at 51–54. Hernandez allegedly sold beer for two dollars, $1.30 of which was profit. See Administrator's Brief at 51. The Administrator also argued that "almost all" workers bought beer. See Administrator's Brief at 52 (citing Tr. at 98, 145; PX 3 at 83; PX 7 at 202; PX 19 at 308; PX 9 at 223). The workers bought beer at an average rate of three and three-quarter cans per week. See Administrator's Brief at 52 (citing PX 7 at 180-81; PX 13, 345; PX 5 at 142; Tr. 25–26; PX 3 at 80–82; PX 11 at 281; Appendix C to Administrator's Brief). A local wholesaler sold beer at seventy cents per can. See Administrator's Brief at 53–54 (citing PX 27 at 1044; PX 32 at 1077; Tr. at 189, 625–27).

In addition to back wages, the Administrator assessed $198,450 in CMPs for unlawful deductions for undisclosed meals and drinks sold at a profit or in violation of state law, and explained how it assessed such penalties. See Administrator's Brief at 54–59. At the time of the assessment, the governing regulations allowed the Administrator to assess $1,500 in civil money penalties for "[e]ach failure to pay an individual worker properly or to honor the terms or conditions of a worker's employment." See Administrator's Brief at 54 (quoting 29 C.F.R. § 501.19(a),(c)(2016). The regulations also enumerate the following paraphrased mitigating factors:

> (1) previous history of violations, (2) number of workers affected by the violations, (3) the gravity of the violations, (4) efforts made in good faith to comply, (5) explanation from the person charged with the violations, (6) commitment to future compliance, and (7) the extent to which the violator achieved a financial gain or the potential financial loss or potential injury to the workers.

§ 501.19(b).

The Administrator argued that she reasonably considered the evidence of record and applied the foregoing mitigation factors concerning the allegedly unlawful deductions for the meal plan and drinks. See Administrator's Brief at 55 (citing District Director Rachor's testimony at Tr. at 849–54). Due to the "seriousness of the violation", concerning the false statement in the job order about kitchen access, the Administrator initially assessed a $1,500 CMP for each of the 147 affected workers. The Administrator did not assess a second set of CMPs for each worker for the purported drink violations. See Administrator's Brief at 56. Rather, the Administrator used her discretion to apply one CMP for all violations §§ 655.122(g), (p), and (q). The Administrator reduced the CMP based on mitigation factor one, because Respondent did not have a history of H-2A violations. See Administrator's Brief at 56–57. Thus, the Administrator assessed a $1,350 CMP for the 147 affected farmworkers. The Administrator discussed why she did not apply the remaining mitigation factors. See Administrator's Brief at 57–58 (noting that the violation injured a large volume of workers, involved false statements to employees and so constituted a serious violation, was committed knowingly, and caused financial loss to the farmworkers).

The Administrator imposed additional CMPs and back pay because Respondent allegedly "terminated or constructively discharged" twenty-four workers, leaving them with a "wage shortfall." See Administrator's Brief at 59. The twenty-four workers allegedly discharged in violation of the three-fourths guarantee[144] included four workers terminated in August 2015 without cause, nineteen workers discharged in May 2015, and one worker for whom Respondent failed to notify government agencies of the reasons for his departure in June 2015.[145] See Administrator's Brief at 60–61. Concerning the first set of workers, Respondent has conceded it violated the three-fourths guarantee and owes that cohort $4,386.18 in total back pay. See Administrator's Brief at 63 (citing PX 1; Tr. at 426, 639, 642–44). The regulations only relieve employers from the three-fourths guarantee when a worker "voluntarily abandons employment" or is "terminated for cause," and the employer also timely and properly notifies the appropriate federal agencies. See Administrator's Brief at 62 (citing § 655.122(n)).

The Administrator argued that, despite what Respondent communicated to the Department on the worker departure forms, Respondent terminated the nineteen workers that left in May 2015. See Administrator's Brief at 63–64 (citing Tr. 39, 65, 80–81, 107–08, 125, 129; PX 3 at 101; PX 9 at 232–33, 258; PX 11 at 305). The Administrator asserted that Respondent could not defend itself through its "false notifications to government agencies" concerning the worker departure forms the workers signed stating that they had sick or injured family members. See Administrator's Brief at 64 n.43 (citing See JX 8 at 89–95, 102, 106, 107; PX 3-1 at 115; see also JX 8 at 98–100).

Even if Respondent did not terminate the nineteen workers in May 2015, the Administrator argued in the alternative that Respondent constructively discharged the workers. See Administrator's Brief at 64–68. Respondent constructively discharged the workers based on the "intolerable work and living conditions that they faced." See Administrator's Brief at 64 (citing Chertkova v. Conn. Gen. Life Ins. Co., 92 F.3d 81, 89 (2d Cir. 1996)). Constructive discharge operates under an objective standard: "Did working conditions become so intolerable that a reasonable person in the employee's position would have felt compelled to resign?" See Administrator's Brief at 65 (quoting Pa. State Police v. Suders, 542 U.S. 129, 141 (2004)). The Administrator said that the asparagus picking conditions were unendurable, because Respondent required the pickers to work in a crouched position for ten to twelve hours most days without rest. See Administrator's Brief at 65 (citing Tr. 17, 90–91, 139, 238–39, 257; PX 3 at 68–71). The field conditions were also intolerable as, in May 2015, the fields lacked bathrooms or were in disrepair. See Administrator's Brief at 66 (citing Tr. 18–19, 91, 139; PX 3 at 91; PX 9 at 216, 220) and Administrator's Brief at 67 (citing PX 5 at 142–43; Tr. at 39, 103, 163). At times, the fields also lacked drinking water. See Administrator's Brief at 66 (citing Tr. 19, 139; PX 5 at 19; PX 9 at 216; PX 3 at 73).

144 "The employer must guarantee to offer the worker employment for a total number of work hours equal to at least three-fourths of the workdays of the total period beginning with the first workday after the arrival of the worker at the place of employment or the advertised contractual first date of need, whichever is later, and ending on the expiration date specified in the work contract or in its extensions, if any." 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(i)(1).

145 The name of the lone worker is Jose Islas Larraga. See Administrator's Brief at 73–74. Respondent owes back pay to Islas Larraga in the amount of $2,751.94 because, contrary to the regulatory requirements, Respondent never provided notice that Islas Larraga no longer worked for Respondent. Id. (Tr. 419, 436; PX 39 at 1189-1216 (Islas Larraga absent from full set of notifications)).

The Administrator next described her back wages calculations and argued that such calculations were "reasonable." See Administrator's Brief at 68. The Administrator relied on Respondent's payroll records at PX 1 and PX 2, and noted that the undersigned admitted both exhibits as "summaries of voluminous records pursuant to Federal Rule of Evidence 1006 and 29 C.F.R. § 18.1006." See Administrator's Brief at 68 n.47 (citing Tr. at 584–85, 968).

First, the Administrator determined the "total period," § 655.122(i)(1), on which Respondent based its three-fourths guarantee. The Administrator determined the start date of the first weekly pay period in which a worker was paid in 2015. See Administrator's Brief at 69 (citing Tr. at 428; PX 1.) The Administrator calculated the length of the workdays (seven hours on weekdays and five hours on weekends), and used the length of the workdays to determine the ending date of the guarantee period (October 10, 2015). See Administrator's Brief at 69 (citing Tr. 420, 523; see JX 1 at 1, 9 11; JX 3 at 42, 50). The Administrator then found the number of weeks (expressed as hours) from the start of the first pay period to the end of the guarantee period. See Administrator's Brief at 69 (citing Tr. at 428; PX 1).

To yield the data contained in the "total workday hours between first pay period and contract end" column of PX 1, the Administrator multiplied the "weeks" column and the "job offer hours per week" column; the Administrator then subtracted the "federal holiday(s) hours" column from this product. See Administrator's Brief at 70. The Administrator created the three-fourths guarantee column by multiplying the "total workday hours between first pay period and contract end" column by three-fourths. Id. The "variance" column shows the difference between the "3/4 guarantee" column and the "hrs wrked" column. Id. To determine the amount of back pay owed, the Administrator multiplied the figure in the "variance" column by $11.29, the minimum hourly wage the Respondent pledged to pay its farmworkers in 2015. See Administrator's Brief at 70. In this way, the Administrator calculated both the number of hours for each worker that Respondent violated the three-fourths guarantee and the back pay due. See id. Because Respondent did not keep any records of hours offered to the employees, in violation of § 655.122(j), the Administrator argued that the undersigned should not use hours offered as a relevant factor. See Administrator's Brief at 71–72 (citing In re: Global Horizons, Inc., No. 2005-TAE-00001 slip op. at 40–41, 63, 77, 88–92) ("Global Horizons III").

The Administrator also assessed a $1,350 CMP for Respondent's alleged violation of the three-fourths guarantee concerning twenty-four of the affected farmworkers. See Administrator's Brief at 74–75 (citing Tr. at 856–57 (allowing a ten percent reduction for Respondent's lack of H-2A history, but finding that reductions were not warranted for the number of workers involved, the gravity of the situation, the commitment for future compliance, or financial gain to the Respondent), 935–37). Mitigation factors four and five do not apply, because Respondent's hours tracking program did not track hours offered and because Respondent continues to deny liability for some of the three-fourths guarantee issues. Id.

The Administrator assessed an additional $1,350 CMP for Respondent's alleged violation of 29 C.F.R. § 501.5, which "prohibits any 'person' from 'seek[ing] to have' any H-2A worker waive rights pursuant to 20 C.F.R. part 655, subpart B," including the three-fourths guarantee at § 655.122(i). See Administrator's Brief at 75–78. The Administrator referred to this as a "coercion violation." See Administrator's Brief at 78. Respondent provided the workers who left in May and August worker departure forms stating that the workers "resign[ed]" their jobs. See Administrator's Brief at 76 (citing Tr. 83, 108–110, 149, 225, 274, 732, 768–69). Respondent allegedly violated 29 C.F.R. § 501.5 by first requiring the workers to sign worker departure forms stating that they resign; second, by having the workers falsely state that they have ill or deceased relatives. See Administrator's Brief at 76. Russel Marino, Jr. stated at deposition that the purpose of the worker departure forms was to protect against litigation. See Administrator's Brief at 77 (citing PX 15 at 475). Respondent's agent, National Agricultural Consultants, also sent false notifications to the Department. See id. (citing PX 39 at 1191–95, 1198–1200; Tr. 409, 748, 753–54). The Administrator stated that Respondent is responsible for its agent's actions. See Administrator's Brief at 77 (citing JX 2 at 31, 39–41; JX 4 at 70; 20 C.F.R. § 655.135). On page 754 of the hearing transcript, the Respondent allegedly conceded the August workers were terminated without cause. Id. The Administrator considered all seven mitigation factors, and applied only the first one due to Respondent's lack of past noncompliance. See Administrator's Brief at 77–78 (citing Tr. at 858–61.)

The Administrator assessed $3,600 in CMPs for five alleged violations of 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(d)(1)(i), which concerns housing violations. See Administrator's Brief at 78–86. Specifically, the Administrator assessed the following CMPs:

> $900 for the unscreened bathroom windows; $900 for the faulty dormitory screen windows and doors; $900 for the uncovered garbage cans; $450 for the hot water shortage; and $450 for the unclean mattresses on the floor.

See Administrator's Brief at 84 (citing JX 10 at 160; Tr. 861–63, 938–39).

Because Respondent's dormitories were built prior to 1980, the applicable regulations are the Employment and Training Administration Housing Standards codified at 20 C.F.R. §§ 654.404–654.417. Section 654.408(a) mandates that "all outside openings . . . be protected with screening of not less than [sixteen] mesh." See Administrator's Brief at 78 (citing 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(d)(l)(i)). The Administrator argued that Respondent violated this requirement because its dormitory contained ripped or missing window screens. See Administrator's Brief at 78–79 (citing Tr. at 202–03, 324, 330–31; PX 28 at 1046–47). The ETA regulations require that "[a]ll screen doors . . . be tight fitting, in good repair, and equipped with self-closing devices." 20 C.F.R. § 654.408(b). The Administrator averred that Respondent violated this requirement, as well; some screens were ripped and some doors did not close. See Administrator's Brief at 80–82 (citing PX 28 at 1048–52; Tr. 324–28). Respondent is obliged to maintain housing in compliance with federal standards throughout the growing season. See Administrator's Brief at 81 (citing JX 2 at 30–31, 39; JX 4 at 69–70, 78).

Concerning garbage receptacles, the ETA regulations require that Respondent maintain "fly-tight, clean containers in good condition" near the dormitory. 20 C.F.R. § 654.414(a). The Administrator argued that the condition of Respondent's refuse containers violated the regulations. It even kept open piles of refuse near the dormitory. See Administrator's Brief at 82 (citing Tr. at 324, 329, 332, 603–04; PX 28 at 1053–55; PX 33 at 1094).

Another alleged violation of 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(d)(1)(i) stemmed from Respondent's failure to provide its workers with adequate hot water for bathing and handwashing. See Administrator's Brief at 82–83. Section 654.412(a) requires Respondent to provide its workers with bathing and hand washing facilities with both hot and cold water. Two of the sinks in the bathroom were broken and workers went without hot water at times. See Administrator's Brief at 83 (citing Tr. 30, 103–04, 199–201, 330; PX 7 at 189; PX 11 at 288).

Finally, the Administrator alleged that Respondent failed to provide certain farmworkers with clean mattresses. See Administrator's Brief at 83–84 (citing 20 C.F.R. § 654.416(a)–(b)). The Administrator found that two workers were sleeping on mattresses on the ground in an unsanitary location. See id. (Tr. 324, 329–30; PX 7 at 187–88; PX 28 at 1056).

For each of the five housing violations, the Administrator considered all of the mitigation factors enumerated at § 501.19(b) to reduce the penalty below the $1,500 maximum. See Administrator's Brief at 84–86 (citing Tr. at 862–66, 937–45). The Administrator applied the first, sixth, and seventh mitigating factors. See Administrator's Brief at 84–85. Specific to the bathroom, dormitory screen, and garbage violations, the Administrator further reduced the CMP because there was no evidence that any worker contracted a communicable disease due to the cited issues. See Administrator's Brief at 85 (citing Tr. at 864). For the hot water and mattress violations, the Administrator also applied mitigation factors three, four and the final factor. Id. (citing Tr. at 865–66, 941). Additionally, mitigation factor two applied to the mattress violation, and mitigation factor five applied to the hot water violation. Id. (citing Tr. at 456, 865, 937, 941).

The Administrator assessed a $7,500 CMP for Respondent's alleged unsafe transportation of farmworkers in violation of § 655.122(h)(4). See Administrator's Brief at 86–90. Twenty C.F.R. § 655.122(h)(4) requires "[a]ll employer-provided transportation" to "comply with all applicable Federal, State or local laws and regulations." The Administrator first cited Respondent for the use of unlicensed drivers. The laws of the State of New Jersey prohibit driving on "public highways" without a driver's license. See Administrator's Brief at 86 (citing N.J. Stat. Ann. § 39:3-10). Additionally, the H-2A regulations require drivers to hold a "valid permit qualifying the driver to operate the type of vehicle driven by him in the jurisdiction by which the permit is issued." Id. (citing 29 C.F.R. § 500.105(b)(1)(iii) (incorporated by reference in 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(h)(4)). New Jersey also prohibits the transportation of migrant farmworkers by drivers who are not licensed in the United States or Canada. See Administrator's Brief at 86–87 (citing N.J. Admin. Code § 13:21-13.2). Here, the Administrator avers that of the five drivers interviewed by WHI Perez, two had Mexican driver's licenses, one had an expired Mexican driver's license, and two had no licenses, whatsoever. See Administrator's Brief at 87 (citing 383–400; PX 30 at 1064–66, 1070–71).

In addition to the purported driver's license issue, the Administrator alleged that CMPs are due because Respondent operated vehicles with worn tires and one vehicle had a broken rear tail light. See Administrator's Brief at 88–89 (citing Tr. 404–06; PX 29 at 1057). This broken tail light showed that Respondent was in violation of both federal laws and state laws. See id. (citing 29 C.F.R. § 500.105(b)(3)(ii); 49 C.F.R. § 393.11; N.J. Stat. Ann. § 39:3-61(a)). Three of the buses had worn tires. See Administrator's Brief at 88–89. The Administrator argued that the tires fell below minimum federal and state standards. Such standards prohibits the operation of vehicles with "tires which have been worn so smooth as to expose any tread fabric or which have any other defect likely to cause failure." Id. (citing 29 C.F.R. § 500.105(b)(3)(v); N.J. Admin. Code § 13:21-13.11(b)). The Administrator said that the investigator used "a common sense instrument," a pen, to illustrate the depth of the tread. See Administrator's Brief at 89.

The Administrator argued that it was reasonable for the Administrator to impose CMPs, as follows: $750 for each of three bald tires, $900 for each of five unlicensed drivers, and $750 for the broken rear turn signal. See Administrator's Brief at 89–90 (citing JX 10 at 160; Tr. 867, 870–72). The Administrator reduced the CMPs in light of the seven mitigation factors at § 501.19(b). See id. The Administrator applied the first, second, sixth, and seventh mitigation factors to each of the transportation violations; it did not apply the fourth or fifth factors. Id. The Administrator found the third mitigation factor applicable to the tire and rear turn signal issues, but not to the unlicensed drivers. Id.

The Respondent's Brief

In its "statement of the case," Respondent recognized that the Administrator assessed "nearly $600,000" in back wages and CMPs for the 2015 growing season. See Respondent's Brief at 4. Three-fourths of the back wages relate to allegations of Employer's failure to comply with the requirements at 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(g) (i.e., meal charges); $135,000 in back wages relates to the allegations of Employer's violations of the three-fourths guarantee. The remaining assessment involves various CMPs. Id. Respondent professed its "innocence" to such "charges" and asked the undersigned "to dismiss the claims outright or, at the very least, significantly reduce the amounts requested." Id. Respondent noted that the penalties "dwarf those" assessed in the Global Horizons cases, 2005-TAE-0001 and 2010-TAE-0002, which involved "rampant wage theft" and employers receiving kickbacks from the workers. Id. Respondent asked the undersigned to "look past the overheated and intentionally outrageous rhetoric from the Administrator and consider the testimony of the workers themselves and the pure facts of the case, and then to dismiss these claims and allow this farm to put this nightmare behind it and go back to producing food." See Respondent's Brief at 7.

Concerning meals, Respondent argued that many of the farmworkers never asked to use the kitchen facilities, and Respondent never denied them permission. See Respondent's Brief at 7–8 (citing 50–51, 176, 213–14). Respondent argued that the hearing testimony was "inconsistent" as to the number of workers who could cook at once or whether it was feasible to cook in shifts. Id.

Respondent's farmworkers paid Hernandez, not Respondent. Hernandez took a loss on the meal plans early in the season and recouped it later. See Respondent's Brief at 8 (citing Tr. at 234–37). Hernandez used any surplus from the meal plan to purchase food, pay the kitchen staff, and to buy additional appliances for the kitchen. Id. Respondent did not "profit based on what the workers did or did not pay [Hernandez]." Id.

Respondent continued that the Administrator's case relies on the position that the inaccurate job order misled Respondent's farmworkers. See Respondent's Brief at 9–12.

Respondent countered that some of the workers still would have worked if the job order had described the meal charge and otherwise did not object to the meal plan. See Respondent's Brief at 9 (citing Tr. at 62). The Administrator allegedly failed to show that "all" of the farmworkers would have made a different decision if Respondent had disclosed the meal plan in the job order. See Respondent's Brief at 10 (emphasis in the original).

Respondent argued that the regulations do not disclose a remedy for "non-disclosure of meal charges." Id. Respondent attempted to distinguish the current case from the Global Horizons case, where "the employer itself collected the meal charge, purchased the food, and provided the meals to the [farmworkers]." See Respondent's Brief at 10 (citing 2010-TAE-00002 (Dec. 17, 2010) (Order on Part. Summ. Dec. at 8)). Respondent quoted from Global Horizons for the principle that an employer profiting from meal charges is equivalent to paying the employees below-market wages. Id. Because Respondent did not profit from the meal charges, and Respondent did not reduce the farmworkers' wages below market level, the rationale applied in Global Horizons does not control. See Respondent's Brief at 10–11. Here, Respondent neither deducted money from the farmworkers' paychecks, nor did the farmworkers pay Respondent for meals. See Respondent's Brief at 11. Thus, "the integrity of the wage setting process remain[ed] perfectly intact." See Respondent's Brief at 12. Respondent again compared the current case to Global Horizons, where the administrative law judge granted summary decision in favor of the employer because "there [was] no indication that the Company in fact exploited the workers . . . by overcharging for meals." See Respondent's Brief at 12–13 (citing Global Horizons, at 9). Because Respondent "had nothing at all to do with the preparation and sale of the food," and because Respondent did not profit from the meal plan, Respondent argued that Global Horizons did not provide controlling authority. See Respondent's Brief at 13.

The Administrator's argument that Hernandez acted as Respondent's agent "makes no sense," according to Respondent. See Respondent's Brief at 13–16. Agency theory does not apply to a breach of Respondent's contract with the government and the farmworkers. See Respondent's Brief at 13 (citing Young v. Bethlehem Area Vo-Tech Sch., 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13531, *39 (E.D. Pa. Feb. 28, 2007) for the principle that respondeat superior does not apply in breach of contract claims)). Hernandez and Respondent were not the farmworkers' joint employers, either. See Respondent's Brief at 14–15 (discussing Ramos Ortiz v. Paramo, Civ. Action 06-3062, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 72387 (D.N.J. Sept. 19, 2008). Because Hernandez did not fit under the regulatory definition of the term "employer," 20 C.F.R. § 655.103(b), the Administrator allegedly could not show that Respondent "received any payments from workers for meals nor for anything else." See Respondent's Brief at 16. Such payments went to Hernandez "in his individual capacity." Id. Respondent did not direct Hernandez to collect the money, did not approve of Hernandez's actions, and Respondent did not "even [know] that this was happening." Id. Thus, the Administrator is unable to attribute any "employer-agent theory" of liability to Hernandez.

Respondent continued that Hernandez's meal plan was "reasonable." See Respondent's Brief at 16–18 (citing 80 FED. REG. 9482 (Feb. 23, 2015)) for the principle that the "DOL-allowed daily meal charge for H-2A workers is $83.02 per week). Repayment of "100% of the meal charges is not warranted" here because it "vastly overstates any claimed 'harm' to the workers in 2015."[146] See Respondent's Brief at 16. Additionally, Respondent argued that but for the meal plan, the workers would still have to pay their own money and spend their own time preparing their food. Id. According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, the weekly cost of food ranges from $43.10 to $86.30. Id. Respondent requested "credit for the full amount" of what the workers would have paid if they prepared their own food. See Respondent's Brief at 17–18.

Respondent continued that "absolutely nothing in the H-2A regulations" supports the Administrator's decision to charge CMPs and back pay concerning the drinks and beer sold to the farmworkers. See Respondent's Brief at 19. Respondent said that water was available "at all times" in the fields. Id. (citing Tr. at 236–37, 265). The water was tested for potability early in 2015 and passed inspection. Id. (citing Tr. at 717–18). Hernandez sold soft drinks and beer to the farmworkers, but no money transferred to Respondent; Respondent did not run a company store. See Respondent's Brief at 19–20 (citing Tr. at 162, 561). "Nothing about [Hernandez's] drink sales had any impact on [Respondent's] bottom-line, either profit or loss." See Respondent's Brief at 20. Respondent emphasized that WHI Perez said that "the workers weren't purchasing the drinks from [Respondent]." Id. (citing Tr. at 561.) WHI Perez, according to Respondent, was unable to explain why the Administrator required Respondent to remit the full costs of non-alcoholic drinks, but only Hernandez's profit from the beer. Id. (citing Tr. at 566.) Respondent reiterated that the H-2A regulations do not require free soft drinks and asked the undersigned to dismiss all back pay and CMPs based on the drinks Hernandez sold to the farmworkers. See Respondent's Brief at 21.

Respondent called WHI Perez's back wage calculations "creative." See Respondent's Brief at 21–22. The Administrator allegedly had an "unreliable estimate" of the amount paid to Hernandez for the drinks, because the estimate relied on "post hoc recollections." Id.; see Respondent's Brief at 22 n.6 ("Investigator Perez's use of spreadsheets and calculations implies a degree of precision that is not supported by the underlying information on which his calculations rest."). The Administrator also relied on prices obtained from Costco, even though the record establishes that Hernandez shopped at Sam's Club. See Respondent's Brief at 22 (citing Tr. at 430, 508–09, 627). Additionally, the Administrator used prices for Coors Light when "nobody bought" it. See Respondent's Brief at 22–23.

The Respondent recognized that the Administrator assessed two separate three-fourths guarantee violations against Respondent. One violation involved the group of nineteen workers who left in May 2015; one involved a group who Respondent "let go in August after wet weather and bacteria ruined the pepper harvest." See Respondent's Brief at 23.

Concerning the former group, Respondent argued that voluntary abandonment of work voids the three-fourths guarantee. See Respondent's Brief at 23–28. As Respondent put it, the workers decided together that harvesting asparagus was "more difficult than they wished, [and] stopped working en masse." See Respondent's Brief at 23. Because the asparagus harvest would otherwise be ruined, Joseph Marino and Russel Marino, Jr. pleaded for the workers to stay. Id. Respondent noted witness testimony that the asparagus crop was difficult to harvest. See Respondent's Brief at 24–25 (citing Tr. at 49, 50, 122–16, 723–27, 809–12). Additionally, Respondent never told the nineteen workers they "must" leave work and that the workers were terminated without cause. See Respondent's Brief at 25–26 (citing Tr. at 66–67) (emphasis in the original). For purposes of calculating the three-fourths guarantee, the regulations "draw[] a crucial distinction between a worker terminated without cause and a worker voluntarily abandoning employment." See Respondent's Brief at 26. The latter employee does not deserve back pay for violations of the three-fourths guarantee. Id. Respondent argued that the workers in question voluntarily abandoned their employment. Id. It was "simply preposterous" that Respondent would fire the workers, since asparagus requires such a quick harvest. Id.

[146] Respondent further requested application of the doctrines of estoppel and laches, because the Administrator knew of the meals situation on July 21, 2015, but did not "raise any concerns" until early 2016. See Respondent's Brief at 18–19.

Additionally, the Administrator is allegedly unable to establish the objective standard constituting constructive discharge. See Respondent's Brief at 26–27 (citing Stucke v. City of Philadelphia, 685 Fed. Appx. 150, 155 (3d Cir. Apr. 12, 2017); Duffy v. Paper Magic Group, 265 F.3d 163, 169 (3d Cir. 2001)). Because a "reasonable person" would not have felt compelled to resign, the Respondent argued that Respondent did not constructively discharge the nineteen-workers. See Respondent's Brief at 27. As proof, Respondent asserted that the "vast majority" of farmworkers that worked under the same conditions did not feel "so compelled to walk off the job." Id. (citing Tr. at 65, 817–18).

Concerning the group that left Respondent's employ in August 2015, Respondent said that the Administrator did not account for the hours Respondent offered this cohort. See Respondent's Brief at 28–30. Twenty C.F.R. § 655.122(i) requires only that an employer offer the worker employment; it does not require the employee to have actually worked to meet the three-fourths guarantee. See Respondent's Brief at 28. The P.E.T. Tiger technology Respondent used to track the farmworkers' work would not capture if a worker were sick, injured, or otherwise declined work because the worker was not "scanned in" to start the day. See Respondent's Brief at 29 (citing Tr. at 683–84, 833–34). WHI Perez allegedly did not ask Respondent about hours that it offered the farmworkers. Id. (citing Tr. at 554–58, 649). Respondent argued that the three-fourths guarantee did not apply to Islas Larraga because he had "absconded" from the job mid-season, and so voluntarily quit. See Respondent's Brief at 29–30.

Respondent next discussed the $1,350 CMP for Respondent's alleged attempt to have the workers waive their rights on the worker departure forms. See Respondent's Brief at 30–31. Respondent explained that Theresa Ward of National Agriculture Consultants told Russel Marino, Jr. that workers were concerned that if they could not perform a job and abandoned employment, it would reflect badly on their ability to secure future employment. See Respondent's Brief at 30 (citing Tr. at 731–33, 812). Hernandez provided the blank worker departure forms to the workers. Id. (citing Tr. at 225, 227). Respondent conceded that the workers did not have sick or deceased family members, as the form indicates, but said, "that decision was between the group of workers and between the workers and their contact back in Mexico." See Respondent's Brief at 31. Respondent did not coerce the workers to give up any right, because "none of the forms purport to surrender a right held by any of the workers." See id.

Respondent continued that the undersigned should reduce the $3,600 CMP for the housing violations. See Respondent's Brief at 31–33. Respondent allegedly made "immediate repairs and corrections," but WHI never followed up to account for those remedies. See Respondent's Brief at 32 (citing Tr. at 497–99). Hernandez inspected housing conditions twice per week and Russel Marino, Jr. said that workers could raise concerns about housing and then Respondent would make the necessary repairs. Id. (citing Tr. at 176, 782). As to the $450 mattress violation, District Director Rachor allegedly "conceded" that the requirement was to provide a bed, "not to prevent workers from moving mattresses from a provided bed onto the floor." See Respondent's Brief at 33 (citing Tr. at 923; 20 C.F.R. § 654.416(a)). Respondent emphasized that the New Jersey Department of Labor certified the dormitory for 136 workers and the housing population never exceed 118 during the 2015 season. Id. (citing Tr. at 803–04; RX 2 at 13).

Respondent further stated that the alleged transportation violations do "not support the full CMP assessment pursued by the Administrator in this case." See Respondent's Brief at 33–34. Respondent allegedly "resolved" the driver's license issue through the addition of internal protocols. See id. Concerning the tire tread, Respondent argued that the Administrator merely used "eyeball measurement" to determine that the tire was "bald." See Respondent's Brief at 34. WHI Perez reviewed the pictures he took and purportedly "admitted that there were 'tread marks' on the tires in question." See Respondent's Brief at 34 (citing Tr. at 533–36). Because Respondent has generally addressed and remediated the issues for which the Administrator seeks CMPs, Respondent requested the undersigned to "set[] any remaining CMPs at a reasonable level commensurate with the facts of the case." Id.

DISCUSSION

The modern H-2A visa program arose out the 1986 amendment to the INA. See generally Staff of House Comm. On Education and Labor, 102d Cong., 1st Sess., Report on the Use of Temporary Foreign Workers in the Florida Sugar Cane Industry 3-4 (Comm. Print 1991). The Administrator enforces the attestations an employer makes in a temporary agricultural labor certification application, as well as the regulations that implement the H-2A program. See 29 C.F.R. §§ 501.1, 501.5, 501.16, 501.17. An "employer's job offer must offer to U.S. workers no less than the same benefits, wages, and working conditions that the employer is offering, intends to offer, or will provide to H-2A workers." 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(a). Thus, the H-2A regulations prohibit any discrimination between H-2A workers and domestic workers. Id. The Administrator may penalize an employer who fails to abide by the governing H-2A regulations through the imposition of monetary penalties, debarment from filing other H-2A certification applications, and instituting proceedings for specific performance, injunctive, or other equitable relief. See In re: Global Horizons, Inc., 2006-TLC-00013, slip op. at 4 (ALJ Nov. 30, 2006).

The Administrator may assess CMPs against a violating employer for each violation of the work contract or the governing regulations. 29 C.F.R. § 501.19(a) (2010). In determining the amount of such penalty, "the WHD Administrator considers the type of violation committed and other relevant factors[,]" including:

1. Previous history of violation or violations of the H-2A provisions of the Act and these regulations;
2. The number of workers affected by the violation or violations;
3. The gravity of the violation or violations;
4. Efforts made in good faith to comply with the H-2A provisions of the Act and these regulations;
5. Explanation of person charged with the violation or violations;
6. Commitment to future compliance, taking into account the public health, interest or safety, and whether the person has previously violated the H-2A provision of the Act; and
7. The extent to which the violator achieved a financial gain due to the violation, or the potential financial loss or potential injury to the workers.

29 C.F.R. §501.19(b).

A party has a right to a de novo hearing before an administrative law judge, who may affirm, deny, reverse, or modify in whole or in part the decision of the Administrator. See, e.g., Three D. Farms, LLC d/b/a Three D Farms, 2016-TAE-00003 (Aug. 18, 2016); Seasonal Ag Services, Inc., 2014-TAE-00006, slip op. at 12 (Dec. 5, 2014).

I. The Administrator properly found violations of 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(g), (p), and (q) concerning improper deductions Respondent's agent, Hernandez, made concerning meals, non-alcoholic beverages, and alcoholic beverages. Back pay and the imposition of CMPs, therefore, are warranted.

Twenty C.F.R. § 655.122(g) requires an employer to provide H-2A workers either "three meals a day or [to] furnish free and convenient cooking and kitchen facilities." If the employer requires workers to pay for their meals, the employer must state the charge on the job offer. (Id.) The regulations also require the employer to provide a prospective H-2A worker a copy of the work contract prior to the worker's application for a visa. § 655.122(q). The work contract must contain, inter alia, terms concerning whether the employer will provide meals or kitchen access, as stated in § 655.122(g). Here, Respondent filed two job orders. The first concerned the period April 13, 2015 to October 10, 2015; the second concerned June 1, 2015 to October 10, 2015. See JX 1; JX 3 (respectively). Section 14 of the job order requires the employer to "describe how [it] intends to provide either [three] meals to each worker or furnish free and convenient cooking and kitchen facilities." In both JX 1 and JX 3, Respondent informed the Department—as well as prospective H-2A workers—that it "will furnish free cooking and kitchen facilities . . . so that workers may prepare their own meals." Russel Marino, Jr. signed both forms in his role as Respondent's "owner/manager." (Id.) Despite Respondent's assurances, however, the workers who arrived at Respondent's New Jersey dormitory were greeted with news that Respondent planned to feed them not with free kitchen access, but through a meal plan costing each worker $75 to $80 per week.[147] In this way, Respondent immediately breached a material

[147] See Tr. at 20 (Maldonado's testimony), 92, 140–41 (Gustavo Perez saying that he had no choice but to pay Hernandez for the meal plan, even though he would have rather prepared his own food), 176 (Hernandez stating that workers who did not wish to participate in the meal plan had to "eat outside or to order a delivery meal"), 178–80 (discussing PX 17-1 and PX 17-2, where Hernandez tracked the workers who participated in the meal plans), 262 term of the job order; the contract that cemented the working relationship between Respondent and farmworkers who traveled often thousands of miles to work in Respondent's fields.

Respondent's counterargument that none of the workers requested access to Respondent's kitchen facilities and some did not object to the meal plan, see Respondent's Brief at 7–9, is unavailing. The express terms of the job orders at JX 1 and JX 3—the employment contracts between the farmworkers and Respondent—were clearly not in line with the realities facing the farmworkers upon arrival at Respondent's dormitory. Respondent, therefore, violated 20 C.F.R. §§ 655.122(g), and (q).

Respondent also attempts to deflect liability concerning its violation of the regulations concerning proper deductions from the farmworkers' pay. See 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(p) ("The job offer must specify all deductions not required by law which the employer will make from the worker's paycheck . . . . A deduction is not reasonable if it includes a profit to the employer or to any affiliated person."). Respondent argues that all deductions from pay, if any, occurred due to the actions of Hernandez, not Respondent. Therefore, to the undersigned must first determine whether Hernandez acted as Respondent's agent, and second if any deductions occurred.

A. At all relevant times, Hernandez acted as Respondent's agent.

Hernandez held both actual authority and apparent authority over the farmworkers. The actions of Hernandez, therefore, are legally equivalent to the actions of Respondent. See Restatement (Third) Of Agency Intro. (2006). Contrary to Respondent's assertion, see Respondent's Brief at 13–16, common law agency principles do apply to violations arising under the INA. See Castillo v. Case Farms of Ohio, Inc., 96 F. Supp. 2d 578, 593 (W.D. Tex. 1999) (citing Montelongo v. Meese, 803 F.2d 1341, 1349 (5th Cir.1986)); Escobar v. Baker, 814 F. Supp. 1491, 1503–04 (W.D. Wash. 1993); Bueno v. Mattner, 829 F.2d 1380, 1384 (6th Cir. 1987). The Restatement (Third) of Agency, therefore, is instructive as to the definitions of actual authority and apparent authority.

Hernandez acted with Respondent's actual authority. "An agent acts with actual authority when, at the time of taking action that has legal consequences for the principal, the agent reasonably believes, in accordance with the principal's manifestations to the agent, that the principal wishes the agent so to act." Restatement (Third) Of Agency § 2.01 (2006). An agent's belief is reasonable where it is "grounded in a manifestation of the principal." Restatement (Third) Of Agency § 2.02 cmt. c (2006).

Here, Respondent had a legal duty to feed the farmworkers it hired and housed in its dormitory. Although Respondent promised kitchen access to the farmworkers, see JX 1 and JX 3, it tasked Hernandez with operation of the meal plan that ultimately fed the farmworkers. Although Hernandez utilized Respondent's kitchen to do so, he paid the cooks, bought the groceries, and appliances as needed to cook the meals. See Tr. at 177–78, 229, 244, 252, and 793. For its part, Respondent owned the kitchen, all of the major appliances therein, and paid for the kitchen's utilities. See ALJX 1 at ¶ 21. After Respondent decided to utilize the H-2A program in 2015, Respondent told Hernandez that he could keep charging for meals but that Hernandez—not Respondent—would be responsible for paying the cooks' wages. See Tr. at 177. Respondent spoke with Hernandez concerning the amount he intended to charge the farmworkers for meals, and Respondent took Hernandez to a meeting with the Department to ensure he understood the regulatory limits of the meal plan. See Tr. at 187–88, 738, and 742–43. Russel Marino, Jr. told Hernandez "for years" to keep his food and beverage receipts, "because you cannot make a profit on the men." See Tr. at 808. Russel Marino, Jr. told Hernandez to keep track of the farmworkers' payments through deductions of their pay. Respondent also allowed Hernandez to choose the drivers that operated Respondent's busses, which transported the farmworkers from the dormitory to the fields. See Tr. at 205, 390–401. Hernandez has worked for Respondent for twenty-seven years, and receives an hourly rate plus commission based on the amount of crops harvested. See Tr. at 171, 230. Finally, the parties stipulated that during the 2015 growing season, Hernandez supervised the farmworkers. See ALJX 1 at ¶ 18. The preponderant evidence establishes, therefore, that, in all of his duties—and especially concerning the operation of the meal plan—Hernandez acted with Respondent's actual authority. Hernandez also reasonably believed that the Respondent wished him to operate the meal plan; Respondent's statements to Hernandez and actions in taking him to a meeting with the Department demonstrate that Hernandez's belief was reasonable. Hernandez, therefore, acted with the actual authority of the Respondent, and served as Respondent's agent at all relevant times.

Assuming, arguendo, Hernandez did not act under Respondent's actual authority, he acted with Respondent's apparent authority. Put another way, the farmworkers reasonably believed that Hernandez was Respondent's agent. Therefore, his actions are imputed to Respondent. See Restatement (Third) Of Agency § 2.03 cmt. c. Restatement (Third) Of Agency § 2.03 defines apparent authority as, "the power held by an agent or other actor to affect a principal's legal relations with third parties when a third party reasonably believes the actor has authority to act on behalf of the principal and that belief is traceable to the principal's manifestations." At all relevant times, Hernandez supervised the farmworkers. See ALJX 1 at ¶ 18. When workers arrived at the camp, Hernandez said that he would orient them about housing, the "rules of the camp," keeping the bathrooms clean, hours of work, pay, kitchen access, and cost of meals.[148] When the farmworkers paid Hernandez, the workers signed a form to indicate they "agreed that they received the meal and" paid for the meal plan; Respondent's name appears on the top of the form.[149] Russel Marino, Jr. only "sometimes" attended the workers' orientation. (PX 15 at 401.) "Several times a day" Russel Marino, Jr. would check in with Hernandez—not the workers—concerning the operation of the farm. (Tr. at 719.) If workers had problems, they would tell Hernandez because, according to Russel Marino, Jr., that was the "chain of command." (Tr. at 825.) Hernandez told the workers when to work; the workers did not have a choice as to their hours. (Tr. at 17, 90–91, 139, 257; PX 3 at 68–69.) Hernandez also chose the drivers who transported the workers from the dormitory to the fields. See Tr. at 205, 390–401. When work slowed, Hernandez chose the "troublemakers" in determining which workers to lay off. (Tr. at 208.) Finally, Hernandez maintained the sleeping quarters and bathroom facilities at Respondent's dormitory site. (Tr. at 199–205.) In all of these aspects, the farmworkers held reasonable beliefs that Hernandez had authority to act on Respondent's behalf. Because Hernandez acted under Hernandez's apparently authority, he worked as Respondent's agent, and any legal effect of his actions are imputed to Respondent.

[148] See Tr. at 61 (Maldonado stating that Hernandez was "in charge" and he never spoke with anyone from the Marino family); 174–175 (Hernandez's testimony); 773 (Russel Marino, Jr. stating that Hernandez "primarily" oriented the workers); 825 (Russel Marino, Jr. stating that the workers complained to Hernandez because Russel Marino, Jr. does not speak Spanish and "that's the chain of command"); PX 3 at 101 (Cervantes Ramirez stating on deposition that Hernandez was "in charge").

[149] PX 17 at 764 (Hernandez's deposition testimony, discussing PX 17-2 at 799 (the meal payment form); Tr. at 182–86 (Hernandez testifying he would use the form at PX 17-2—a document Respondent created in its office—to keep track of the workers who paid for meals).

B. Respondent unlawfully deducted or otherwise profited from the farmworkers' payments for meal and beverage costs; its agent, Hernandez, also sold beer in violation of state law. Back pay, therefore, is required for the meals, non-alcoholic drinks, and beer the farmworkers purchased.

As Respondent's agent, Hernandez was an "affiliated person." See WHD Bulletin No. 2012-3 ("The term 'affiliated person' includes but is not limited to agents. . . . any person acting in the employer's behalf or interest (directly or indirectly), or who has an interest in the employment relationship."). The regulations therefore prohibit Hernandez from charging any deduction not listed on Respondent's job order. See 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(p)(2). The regulations separately prohibited Hernandez from profiting off any items sold in violation of any law. See id. (specifically incorporating the FLSA regulations at 29 C.F.R. Part 531). To determine whether an employer has met the FLSA's minimum wage requirements, 29 C.F.R. § 531.27 credits an employer for "the reasonable cost . . . of board, lodging, or other facilities customarily furnished . . . to his employees when the cost of such board, lodging, or other facilities is not excluded from wages paid to such employees." The regulations define the term "facilities customarily furnished" and exclude from that definition "[f]acilities furnished in violation of any Federal, State or local law." § 531.31. "Items such as alcohol and cigarettes constitute 'other facilities' under the law." Ortiz v. Paramo, No. CIV. 06-3062 RBK/AMD, 2009 WL 4575618, at *3 (D.N.J. Dec. 1, 2009) (citing Leach v. Johnston, 812 F. Supp. 1198, 1204 (M.D. Fla. 1992), disapproved of on other grounds by Aimable v. Long and Scott Farms, 20 F.3d 434, 441 (11th Cir.1994)). Therefore, Hernandez and Respondent were unable to make deductions not contemplated by the job order; they were also unable to profit from the selling of any illegal facilities. Concerning the latter prohibition, the parties stipulate that Hernandez sold beer to the farmworkers without a license to do so in violation of New Jersey law. See ALJX 1 at ¶ 26; N.J. Stat. Ann. § 33:1-2(a) (mandating that a license is required to sell beer)). Thus, Respondent was unable to profit from the sale of beer, an illegal activity, warranting the remittal of back pay in the amount of Hernandez's profit.

The undersigned must also determine whether Respondent made impermissible deductions when it collected money for the meal plan and non-alcoholic beverages, which were not included in the job order.

1. Respondent's failure to provide kitchen access or otherwise to disclose meal charges constituted violations of 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(g), (p), and (q).

The Administrator properly assessed $128,285 in back wages for the meals the farmworkers purchased.

Because Respondent made deductions of the farmworkers' pay for the meals and non-alcoholic beverages, Respondent is required to provide back pay to the effected farmworkers. See § 655.122(p)(1) (requiring the job offer to include any deduction "not required by law which the employer will make form the worker's paycheck); Global Horizons, Inc., OALJ Case No.: 2010-TAE-00002, slip op. at 2 n.7 (ALJ Dec. 13, 2011) (recognizing that, although the meals deduction of $6.00 per day was a "favorable rate[]," it does not "negate the violation, as the deductions thwarted the regulatory scheme."). That Hernandez did not allow the farmworkers to pay him in cash, but took money out of their pay, does not establish that a deduction did not occur. Regardless of the mechanism by which Hernandez deducted the meal and drink purchases, deductions of the farmworkers' pay—constructive or actual—still occurred, and so Respondent is required to reimburse the farmworkers. See In re: Weeks Marine, Inc., ARB No. 12-093, 2015 WL 2172482, at *4 (Apr. 29, 2015) (citing Arriaga v. Fl. Pacific Farms, 305 F.3d 1228, 1236 (11th Cir. 2002); Salazar-Martinez v. Fowler Bros., 781 F. Supp. 2d 183, 191 n.5 (W.D.N.Y. 2011)).

A less severe consequence would deny the farmworkers their contractual right to the $11.29 per hour minimum wage promised on the job order. See JX 1; JX 3; 20 C.F.R. §§ 655.120, 122(l), (p)(2). A less severe consequence, furthermore, would provide a decreased deterrent effect to future employers who may also attempt to alter the terms of the job order upon the workers' arrival. The violation consists of the deduction itself—not the purported reasonableness of the deduction—so Respondent's argument concerning the "reasonable" price of meals, see Respondent's Brief at 16–18; RX 5; RX 7; RX 8, is inapposite.

Respondent's argument that some of the workers approved of the meal plan, see Respondent's Brief at 9–12, is also unavailing; the operative job orders—the contracts between Respondent and its workers—allow for kitchen access only. See JX 1, JX 3. The governing regulations require the "job offer [to] specify all deductions not required by law which the employer will make from the worker's paycheck." 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(p), (g), (q). Respondent's unilateral substitution of the meal plan for the agreed upon kitchen access is in violation of the regulations, per se. Respondent's reliance on Global Horizon as negative authority is not compelling, because, contrary to Respondent's assertion, Hernandez acted as Respondent's agent. The practical effect of this agency relationship is that when the workers paid Hernandez for the meal plan, it was as if they paid Respondent. See Respondent's Brief at 11. In other words, "the integrity of the wage setting process" in fact, did not remain "perfect intact." Id. at 12. Respondent's additional argument that, unlike the employer in Global Horizons, Respondent did not profit from the meal plan is also unavailing. See id. at 13. Profit can take many forms. Although some profit was certainly quantifiable—like the profit Hernandez made for the beers and non-alcoholic beverages he sold, and the fact that Pinon, Hernandez's wife, received employment in Respondent's kitchen—some forms of profit are less quantifiable. For example, Hernandez's meal plan made unnecessary any costly expansion of Respondent's kitchen facilities, which Respondent would have had to undertake to fulfill the terms the job orders at JX 1 and JX 3. See Tr. at 175–76 (Hernandez testifying that the kitchen was not large enough "for everyone to cook"). To argue, therefore, as Respondent does, that it did not profit from the meal plan because no ready financial gain is apparent is not persuasive. Respondent did in fact profit from the sale of meals, so back pay is required. See Admin. v. Global Horizons, 2010-TAE-00002, slip op. at 9 (ALJ Dec. 17, 2010); see also PROFIT, Black's Law Dictionary (11th ed. 2019) ("The excess of revenues over expenditures in a business transaction.")

Finally, Respondent's argument that the Administrator's back pay award "overstates any claimed 'harm'" misses the point. See Respondent's Brief at 16. When Respondent provided a meal plan to its workers, rather than kitchen access, Respondent changed a material term of the job order. This contractual agreement codified a working relationship, which involves one party traveling sometimes thousands of miles from home, often with limited language skills. See "Temporary Agricultural Employment of H-2A Aliens in the United States," 29 FED. REG. 6884, 6894 (Feb. 12, 2010) ("There is ample evidence that agricultural workers are a particularly vulnerable population.") A material change to the terms of that contract necessarily provides "harm" to both the workers' reliance on the H-2A program to ensure that their rights are protected, as well as the overall integrity of the program itself. To deter such harm from occurring in the future, the equities of the case require back pay at the meal plan's full amount.

The Administrator, therefore, reasonably imposed a $128,285 back pay requirement, see PX 2, for the meal plan violations outlined above. WHI Perez authored the back wage assessment in PX 2; he is highly qualified to do so and credibly testified to the methodology he used in arriving at the $128,285 back pay figure. See Tr. at 305–08, 439–61. Respondent improperly deducted meals concerning ninety-six of its H-2A workers and fifty-one of its domestic workers.[150] For each worker, PX 2 lists the week worked ("payroll week ending" date) and how much the worker paid for, inter alia, meals. The parties stipulated that Hernandez charged between $75 and $80 per week; the Administrator accounted for this variance in her calculations in PX 2. The Administrator also subtracted those workers that did not engage in the meal plan from the back wage calculation. The Administrator's calculations, as expressed in PX 2, are reasonable and support her requirement for Respondent to provide back pay in the amount of $128,285.

2. Although back pay is required, the Administrator did not reasonably calculate the back pay owed to Respondent's workers for non-alcoholic drinks purchased during the summer of 2015. Respondent is liable to pay $64,960 in back wages for the non-alcoholic drinks the farmworkers purchased.

Hernandez—Respondent's agent—sold workers non-alcoholic drinks throughout the day; either in the fields or at the company store. See ALJX 1 at ¶ 23; Tr. at 22–23, 24–27, 96–97, 189–90, 193–97, 266–67, 360, 502. The money paid for the non-alcoholic drinks was an [150] WHI Perez reasonably testified that the H-2A regulations do not allow an employer to discriminate between the treatment of H-2A workers and domestic workers. This explains why the Administrator charged Respondent for any meal plan violations concerning both the domestic and H-2A workers Respondent employed during the summer of 2015. See 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(a) ("The employer's job offer must offer to U.S. workers no less than the same benefits, wages, and working conditions that the employer is offering, intends to offer, or will provide to H-2A workers.").

unlawful deduction, because it reduced the workers' pay below the required $11.29 per hour threshold. ALJX 1 at ¶ 16; 20 C.F.R. §§ 655.120, 122(l), (p)(2). Because the farmworkers' access to clean water was sporadic—and the farmworkers had no other access to drinks aside from Respondent—it is appropriate to calculate back wages for the various drinks Hernandez sold.

Contrary to Respondent's argument, see Respondent's Brief at 20, allowing Hernandez to profit from non-alcoholic drink sales, indeed, would affect Respondent's "bottom-line," since such profit is reasonably viewed as a fringe benefit for Hernandez's continued employment. In other words, Respondent may have had to pay more to Hernandez absent the profits accrued from the non-alcoholic drinks he sold, thereby affecting Respondent's "bottom-line."

The Administrator attempted to reconstruct the amount of non-alcoholic drinks sold; Hernandez either destroyed or otherwise could not produce his records as to the workers' purchase of drinks in the summer of 2015. See Tr. at 209 (Hernandez's testimony), 361 (WHI Perez stating that Hernandez "did not have purchase receipts for drinks," even though he had such receipts for meals). In doing so, the Administrator reasonably followed the standard propounded in Anderson v. Mt. Clemens Pottery Co., where the Supreme Court determined that, in an action to recover unpaid wages under the FLSA, an employee is required to provide exact evidence of unpaid wages. 328 U.S. 680, 686–89 (1946); see Administrator v. Fernandez Farms, Inc., 2014-TAE-00008, slip op. at 35 (ALJ Aug. 25, 2016) (applying the Mt. Clemens standard within a TAE context)). Rather, where an employer fails to keep records documenting unpaid wages, the Supreme Court applies a burden-shifting standard, which first requires the employer to account for the charges. Id. at 687. If an employer does not provide accurate records, the burden shifts to the employee to provide "sufficient evidence to show the amount and extent of that work as a matter of just and reasonable inference." Id. At that point, the burden shifts back to the employer to rebut the scope and size of the alleged violations. Id. at 687–88.

The Mt. Clemens standard applies here, as the FLSA has similar records retention requirements as the H-2A program. Twenty C.F.R. § 655.122(j), titled "Earnings Records," requires employers under the Act "to keep accurate and adequate records with respect to the workers' earnings, including but not limited to . . . records showing . . . the rate of pay (both piece rate and hourly, if applicable); the workers' earnings per pay period . . . ." Cf. 29 U.S.C.A. § 211 (c); 29 C.F.R. Part 516 (providing similar requirements under the FLSA). From a prudential standpoint, application of the Mt. Clemens test is reasonable here because, in both the FLSA and H-2A contexts, "[e]mployees seldom keep such records themselves; even if they do, the records may be and frequently are untrustworthy." 328 U.S. at 687. Accordingly, the Mt. Clemens burden-shifting construct applies to determine the amount of back pay owed to Respondent's workers for the sale of non-alcoholic drinks.

Here, the Administrator reviewed the entirety of the record and concluded that each of Respondent's workers purchased, on average, 4.42 drinks per day. The preponderant evidence of record, however, establishes that the workers purchased an average of only four, not 4.42, non-alcoholic drinks per day. It was reasonable, however, and likely in Employer's favor, to assume that Respondent sold the drinks for an average of $1.25 per can.[151] The weekly cost to an average worker for drink purchases in the summer of 2015 was $35.00.[152] The Administrator considered 1,856 separate weeks[153] in finding the total amount of non-alcoholic drinks consumed in the summer of 2015. Thus, Respondent owes $64,960—not $71,790.08, as the Administrator recommended—in back pay for non-alcoholic drinks.[154]

3. The Administrator reasonably calculated the back pay owed to the farmworkers for beer purchased during the summer of 2015. Respondent, therefore, owes $8,972.61 in back pay for the profit Hernandez made on beer.

Similar to the non-alcoholic drinks issue, Hernandez did not keep accurate records as to the amount of beer sold to Respondent's workers. Therefore, the Mt. Clemens burden-shifting standard, again, applies. Appendix C to the Administrator's brief titled "Revised Back Wage Computations as to Illegal Beer Sales at a Profit." The Administrator revised her initial back pay assessment for the illicit beer purchases, see JX 10 (Order of Reference), after taking witness testimony at the hearing. Appendix C lists the worker's name, the number of weeks they were on Respondent's payroll during the summer of 2015, as well as the total profit Respondent obtained from selling the worker beer. For most workers (some did not imbibe), the Administrator utilized a profit per week of $4.87, based on its conclusion that the workers drank 3.75 beers per week and Hernandez made $1.30 profit per can. Because Hernandez unlawfully sold alcohol without a license, ALJX 1 at ¶ 26, the regulations do not permit him to make a profit off such sales. See 29 C.F.R. § 531.31. Therefore, the Administrator reasonably charged Respondent for Hernandez's profit. Respondent is unable to rebut the Administrator's calculations as unreasonable. As discussed, supra, the Administrator's estimates as to the number of beers consumed per week and Hernandez's profits were reasonable.

4. The Administrator reasonably assessed $198,450 in CMPs concerning Respondent's violations of 20 C.F.R. §§ 655.122(g), (p), and (q).

Although it was likely within the Administrator's reasonable discretion to assess separate CMPs for each violation of 20 C.F.R. §§ 655.122(g), (p), and (q), the Administrator decided to assess one $1,350 CMP for the entirety of the violations of § 655.122. The Administrator reasonably assessed the $1,350 CMP for each of the 147 effected workers, which amounts to a $198,450 CMP. District Director Rachor explained that the Administrator assessed the CMP in 151 Because the Mt. Clemens standard only requires estimates, it is irrelevant whether the Administrator calculated prices using numbers derived from Costco rather than Sam's Club, where Hernandez shopped. See Respondent's Brief at 22. Both are wholesale clubs and likely sell products at similar prices; precision is not required.

---

152 Four drinks per day bought at $1.25 per drink over a weekly period of seven days.

153 The total amount of non-alcoholic drinks the Administrator found was $71,790.08. That figure divided by the weekly amount it considered ($38.68) shows the total number of weeks (1,856 weeks) the Administrator considered. See PX 2.

154 $35.00 per week multiplied by 1,856 separate weeks.

this way due to the seriousness of the violation and the "large amount of workers affected." (Tr. at 849.) The Administrator's assessment of a $1,350 CMP for each worker was reasonable, because she reviewed each of the mitigation criteria at 29 C.F.R. § 501.19(b). (Tr. at 849–54) The Administrator allowed a ten percent reduction in the CMP, due to the fact that Respondent had no prior history with the H-2A program. (Tr. at 852.) That assessment is accurate and reasonable. Because of the large amount of workers affected, the Administrator reasonably did not allow a reduction for the second mitigation factor. The Administrator rationally viewed the violation as serious, and so appropriately did not provide a reduction for the third factor. Concerning the fourth factor, whether Respondent made good faith efforts to comply, the Administrator reasonably did not make a reduction; even throughout the hearing, Russel Marino, Jr. continued to argue that Respondent complied with its requirement to provide the workers with kitchen access. See Tr. at 772. The Administrator did not allow for a reduction for factor five because Respondent never provided a good explanation for not abiding by the job order. That consideration was rational. Because Respondent did not commit to future compliance, the Administrator reasonably did not apply the sixth factor. Finally, the Administrator appropriately recognized the financial gain to Respondent from the meal plan and other items sold to the farmworkers and declined to apply the final mitigation factor. Because the Administrator rationally considered all of the § 501.19(b) mitigation factors, the $198,450 CMP for violations of 20 C.F.R. §§ 655.122(g), (p), and (q) is appropriate.

II. Respondent violated 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(i)(1) in discharging twenty-four total workers before they had worked for at least three-fourths of the workdays of the total period specified in the work contract. The Administrator properly found that $142,728.22 in total back wages are due and reasonably assessed $1,350 in CMPs.

The H-2A regulations require employers "to offer the worker employment for a total number of work hours equal to at least three-fourths of the workdays of the total period . . . specified in the work contract." 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(i)(1). The Administrator assessed back wages and CMPs concerning Respondent's violation of the three-fourths requirement to three discrete groups of workers. The first set involves the nineteen workers that Respondent terminated after the May 2015 argument. See Administrator's Brief at 63–73. The second set concerns four workers—Luna Gonzales, Elizondo Soto, Raya Tapia, and Morales Acosta—whom Respondent laid off in August 2019. See Administrator's Brief at 63. The final set concerns a single worker, Islas Larraga, who last worked for Respondent on June 9, 2015. See Administrator's Brief at 73. Application of the governing law establishes that Respondent terminated or otherwise constructively discharged each of the twenty-four workers, and that the Administrator reasonably assessed back wages and CMPs for violation of the § 655.122(i) three-fourths requirement.

A. After the May 2015 argument, Respondent terminated nineteen workers without cause. Back pay is therefore due.

Upon arrival at the camp, Hernandez was openly hostile to the workers. Cheguez testified that Hernandez was a "bad" supervisor and threatened the workers with deportation if they did not work faster. (Tr. at 138–39.) Elizondo Soto's deposition testimony supports Cheguez's recollection. See PX 5 at 125. Additionally, the workers arrived at the camp and encountered the working and housing conditions from which the current litigation arises. As discussed throughout this Decision and Order, those conditions were oftentimes in violation of the governing federal regulations, state law, or both. It was within this context that the nineteen workers engaged with Hernandez and Russel Marino, Jr., which lead to the May 2015 argument that ended in their termination. Cf. Tr. at 106–7 (Gustavo Perez stating that the argument represented the workers' attempt at fixing the foregoing problems with Respondent). During the conversation, Russel Marino, Jr. became upset and became verbally and, perhaps even, physically abusive. See Tr. at 107–08 (Gustavo Perez stating that Russel Marino, Jr. was very upset and cursed at the farmworkers, and feeling like he could not continue working), 147 (Cheguez remembering that Russel Marino, Jr. "scream[ed] and yell[ed] in an arrogant way"), 222 (Hernandez stating that Russel Marino, Jr. "was a little bit upset"); PX 9 at 232, 258 (Hugo Leonel Cinta Tegoma recalling during deposition that Russel Marino, Jr. tried to hit him). In his anger, Russel Marino, Jr. terminated the nineteen workers. See Tr. at 39–40, 65 (Maldonado stating that Russel Marino, Jr. had "practically fired us"), 80–83 (Maldonado recalling that Russel Marino, Jr. said that the workers "could leave" if they did not like the conditions and that Russel Marino, Jr. "practically fired [the farmworkers]" during the argument, and that he felt like he "needed to leave"; he left due to problems "with my boss"), 107–08, 125–29 (Gustavo Perez recalling that Russel Marino, Jr. was upset at the farmworkers and said "we weren't necessary" during the argument, that he did not have the opportunity to continue working for Respondent due to the conversation, and that Hernandez told him he "must leave"). Respondent argues that, given the status of the asparagus crop as ripe for harvesting, it makes no logical sense for Russel Marino, Jr. to fire the nineteen workers. See Respondent's Brief at 24–26.

However, the employee witnesses were consistent in describing the heated events at the meeting while Joseph Marino was unable to remember specifically what was said. During his deposition, Joseph Marino testified that he that he did not recall what was said at the argument; at the hearing, Joseph Marino said he recalled "part of what [Russel Marino, Jr.] said." (Tr. at 825–29.) Joseph Marino's testimony, compared to the employees, lacks credibility. The facts, as presented at the hearing, are that the employees arrived at the worksite to find a difficult supervisor in Hernandez, grueling work picking asparagus, and living conditions that were not as promised in their contract. They asked for a meeting to try to address the issues with management; this angered management, who felt pressure to get their crop harvested. Management made a decision, albeit a rash, and perhaps illogical, decision, to terminate this group of workers and then quickly replace the terminated workers. See JX 2, JX 6 (showing a number of H-2A workers hired at the end of May 2015). Considering the entirety of the evidence, Respondent terminated the nineteen workers that left in May 2015 before they worked the guaranteed three-fourths of the hours promised in their contracts, and is liable for any back pay due because of such termination.

1. Assuming, arguendo, Respondent did not terminate the workers in May 2015; it constructively discharged such workers. Back pay, therefore, is due.

To find constructive discharge, a plaintiff must "show working conditions so intolerable that a reasonable person would have felt compelled to resign." Pennsylvania State Police v. Suders, 542 U.S. 129, 147 (2004); WHD Bulletin No. 2012-1 (Feb. 28, 2012) ("If a worker departs employment because working conditions have become so intolerable that a reasonable person in the worker's position would not stay, the worker's departure may constitute a constructive discharge and not abandonment"). The Administrative Review Board emphasizes that the analysis turns on the employee's "reasonable inferences" drawn from the statements and conduct of the employer. Jackson v. Protein Express, 95-STA-38 (Jan. 9, 1997). The Third Circuit[155] instructs finders of fact to review the following nonexclusive factors: "(1) a threat of discharge; (2) suggestions or encouragement of resignation; (3) a demotion or reduction of pay or benefits; (4) involuntary transfer to a less desirable position; (5) alteration of job responsibilities; (6) unsatisfactory job evaluations." Nuness v. Simon & Schuster, Inc., 325 F. Supp. 3d 535, 560 (D.N.J. 2018) (summarizing Clowes v. Allegheny Valley Hosp., 991 F.2d 1159, 1161 (3d Cir. 1993)); WHD Bulletin No. 2012-1 ("the terms and conditions of the worker's employment must have been effectively altered by the employer's conduct," and intolerable housing and working conditions can demonstrate a constructive discharge claim). In Clowes, the Third Circuit reversed a finding of constructive discharge, in part, when the plaintiff "was never threatened with discharge; nor did her employer ever urge or suggest that she resign or retire." 991 F.2d at 1161. The Wage and Hour Division advises that a worker who quits because the worker is "unhappy with the general nature of work assignments" is not constructively discharged.

Assuming it did not fire the workers outright, the preponderant evidence demonstrates that Respondent constructively discharged the nineteen workers who left in May 2015. The first Clowes factor is satisfied. Hernandez threatened the workers with discharge, and Russel Marino, Jr. likely fired the workers during the May 2019 argument. See supra. Therefore, unlike the plaintiff in Clowes, here Respondent actually threatened the workers with discharge, or the workers reasonably inferred such a threat, or both. 991 F.2d at 1161. Indeed, Respondent likely outright fired the nineteen farmworkers. The first Clowes factor weighs considerably toward a finding of a constructive discharge; the deplorable situation in which the workers found themselves upon arrival at Respondent's farm compounds the significance of this consideration.

Another Clowes factor fulfilled here is that Respondent's actions materially reduced the workers' benefits. Despite the assurances Respondent made on the job order—the employment agreement both sides agreed upon prior to the summer 2015 growing season—the workers arrived at Respondent's camp to learn not only that they did not have kitchen access, but also that Employer expected them to pay for a meal plan costing between seventy-five and eighty-dollars per week. This arrangement caused a quantifiable reduction in the benefits the workers reasonably relied upon when agreeing to travel to the United States to work in Respondent's fields.

[155] As this case arose in New Jersey, the undersigned will apply the law of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit. In a case arising within the State of California, an administrative law judge applied Ninth Circuit law. Without passing specific judgment on the ALJ's decision to do so, the Administrative Review Board affirmed in full the administrative law judge's Decision and Order. See Global Horizons, ARB Case No. 09-016, ALJ Case No. 2008-TAE-00003, 11 (Dec. 21, 2010); Delegation of Authority and Assignment of Responsibility to the Administrative Review Board, 77 FED. REG. 69378, 69378–80 (Nov. 16, 2012) (declining to provide any discussion as to which circuit law applies to the Administrative Review Board's review of an administrative law judge's decision and order in a TAE matter).

Finally, Hernandez changed the terms and conditions of the workers' responsibilities. Contrary to the job order, the workers regularly worked twelve-hour days in extreme weather conditions. The job order stated that they would work between five and seven hours per day (except one day per week), see JX 1 and JX 3; however, the workers testified to regularly working twelve-hour days. Although the job orders stated that workers "may be requested" to work additional hours, see id., the corroborative testimony of numerous workers establishes that Hernandez told the workers where, when, and how long to work and that he often directed them to work twelve hour days. This was a material change to the workers' responsibilities as listed on the job orders, and so the fifth Clowes factor applies.

Thus, the evidence of record establishes many of the Clowes factors, including threat of discharge, reduction of benefits, and alteration of job responsibilities. Although the other factors—suggestions or encouragement of resignation, involuntary transfer, and unsatisfactory job evaluations—are not satisfied, those factors do not necessary apply to the exigencies of the working situation at Respondent's farm. Weighing the Clowes factors in the totality, the Administrator has preponderantly established that Respondent constructively discharged nineteen farmworkers after the May 2015 argument.

Aside from the Clowes factors, the WHD Bulletin provides additional guidance that compels a finding that Respondent constructively discharged the workers who left in May 2015. See WHD Bulletin No. 2012-1 ("Constructive discharge may exist when a worker leaves the job because the housing conditions in which the worker is required to live are intolerable and violate applicable safety and health standards (i.e., grossly inadequate heating during the winter, lack of running water, exposure of bare electrical wires)." As demonstrated, infra, Respondent is liable for numerous violations of the regulations concerning the proper housing and transportation of H-2A workers. The workers' housing conditions involved broken screens, which allowed in flies and other pests. The dormitory area also had litter strewn on the ground and trashcans without lids; the bathrooms lacked sufficient hot water. Respondent also provided unsafe transportation to its workers. When the workers initially arrived, the fields lacked bathrooms and access to water. All of these violations further demonstrate that Respondent committed a constructive discharge of the nineteen workers who left after the May 2015 argument.

The nineteen terminated or otherwise constructively discharged workers, therefore, did not abandon their positions. See 655.122(n) (providing that the three-fourths guarantee does not apply to workers who voluntarily abandon their jobs); WHD Bulletin No. 2012-1 (stating that a constructively discharged worker does not commit the act of abandonment). Although the WHD Bulletin states that constructive discharge does not apply to workers who are merely unhappy with their work assignment; that provision does not apply here. The facts establish that the workers engaged with Hernandez and Russel Marino, Jr., because the workers wanted to work but were unhappy with the working and living conditions. The workers' concerns were not subjective; they related to the actual living and working conditions they faced while working for Respondent. The fact that other workers stayed while the nineteen workers left, see Respondent's Brief at 27, does nothing to dispel the unacceptable—and at times unlawful—conditions to which Respondent subjected the farmworkers. Because Respondent terminated or otherwise constructively discharged the nineteen workers after the May 2015 argument, the Administrator has established a three-fourths violation concerning such workers.

2. Respondent violated the three-fourths guarantee concerning four of the forty-four workers it laid off in August 2015. Therefore, back pay is warranted.

Respondent laid off forty-four workers in August 2015 due to inclement weather and lack of work. Respondent did not meet the three-fourths guarantee for four such workers: Luna Gonzalez, Elizondo Soto, Raya Tapia, and Morales Acosta. See PX 1; Tr. at 702–04. At the hearing, Respondent withdrew RX 4, which—according to "Respondent's Exhibit List"—contained a "calculation of hours worked for [six] workers." See "Respondent's Exhibit List; see also Tr. at 702–04. Respondent's counsel stated "I was wrong" about the contents of RX 4, and agreed that the Administrator provided accurate calculations as to Respondent's three-fourths violations concerning Luna Gonzalez, Elizondo Soto, Raya Tapia, and Morales Acosta. (Tr. at 704.) In its brief, Respondent did not discuss or otherwise defend against the alleged three-fourths guarantee violation concerning these four workers. Accordingly, the undersigned finds that Respondent does not controvert the violation of the three-fourths guarantee concerning Luna Gonzalez, Elizondo Soto, Raya Tapia, and Morales Acosta. Review of the evidence of record further establishes that fact.

3. Respondent violated the three-fourths guarantee concerning Jose Islas Larraga, and he deserves back pay.

According to the information Respondent provided to the Administrator, Islas Larraga last worked for Respondent on June 9, 2015. See PX 1. The regulations only absolve an employer from liability for a worker's three-fourths guarantee when the worker abandons the job or is otherwise terminated for cause. 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(n). The record contains no evidence to establish that Islas Larraga abandoned his job. Assuming, arguendo, he did abandon his job, the regulations would only relieve Respondent of three-fourths guarantee liability if it provided timely notice to the Department. See id. (referring to the DOL Notification Process at 76 FED. REG. 21,041). Respondent provided no notice to the Department concerning the end of Islas Larraga's employment. Therefore, Respondent violated the three-fourths guarantee concerning Islas Larraga, as well.

4. The Administrator reasonably computed back wages for the twenty-four workers discussed in this section.

WHI Perez has worked as an investigator for U.S. Department of Labor, the Wage and Hour Division for six years. (Tr. at 305–06.) Of the 200 cases he has helped investigate during his tenure with the Department, WHI Perez has worked on between five and ten cases concerning violations of the H-2A regulations. (Tr. at 306.) WHI Perez created the table at PX 1, which calculated the three-fourths guarantee for the twenty-four workers for whom Respondent is required to remit back pay. The undersigned admitted PX 1 as a summary of voluminous records under 29 C.F.R. § 18.1006. The voluminous records that PX 1 summarizes are Respondent's weekly payroll records, which are contained in the record at PX 23. See Tr. at 420–21. Charlene Rachor is the "District Director of the Southern New Jersey District Office for the Wage and Hour Division." (Tr. at 845.) In that capacity, District Director Rachor oversees investigations, supervises investigators, and issues letters regarding findings of investigations including H-2A determination letters. (Id.) Although District Director Rachor was not WHI Perez's supervisor, she supported the quality of WHI Perez's work product and stated that "he would do the back wages as accurately as possible." (Tr. at 897–98.) District Director Rachor said that WHI Perez's supervisor would have reviewed his back wages calculations. (Tr. at 898.) WHI Perez described the methodology he employed to determine back wages due, (Tr. at 420–30); his testimony was reasonable based on the evidence of record. Aside from arguing that voluntary abandonment voids the three-fourth guarantee, Respondent did not criticize WHI Perez's calculations or the methodology he applied in PX 1 concerning either the nineteen workers terminated in May 2015 or Islas Larraga. See Respondent's Brief at 23–28. Review of PX 1 shows that WHI Perez reasonably determined not only that a three-fourths violation occurred, but also the back wages Respondent owes, because of such underpayment.

Respondent, however, alleged that WHI Perez failed to account for the hours Respondent offered to the four workers whom it laid off in August 2015, and for whom the Administrator asserted violations of the three-fourths guarantee. See Respondent's Brief at 28–30. Respondent noted that its tracking system was incapable of capturing any time, for example, where Respondent offered hours to a worker, but the worker was sick or otherwise unable to take the hours. Id. Respondent's argument is unpersuasive, as the governing regulations require it to "keep accurate and adequate records with respect to the workers earnings, including but not limited to . . . records showing . . . the number of hours of work offered each day . . . ." 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(j)(1) (emphasis added); see § 655.122(j)(3). Although Respondent took ample testimony about the immoderate costs and general capabilities concerning its record keeping system, see Tr. at 682–86, 706, 798, Respondent is unable to argue persuasively that the Administrator's calculations are unreasonable when Respondent's tracking system does not comport with the regulatory requirements. The Administrator, therefore, reasonably calculated the back wages owed to the four workers laid off in August 2015.

In sum, the Administrator reasonably assessed a combined $142,728.22 in back wages for Respondent's three-fourths guarantee violations concerning the nineteen farmworkers terminated in May 2015, the four farmworkers laid off in August 2015, and Islas Larraga.

5. The Administrator reasonably assessed a single $1,350 CMP for the violations discussed in this section.

Additionally, the Administrator assessed a reasonable CMP of $1,350,[156] total, for Respondent's various three-fourths guarantee violations. The Administrator reasonably considered all of the mitigation factors. See Tr. at 856–58, 935–37. District Director Rachor explained the importance of the three-fourths guarantee:

> Well, as I said, we have a situation where, you know, workers are -- H-2A allows an employer to bring over farmer workers, non-immigrant workers by laying out [156] At the time of the assessment, the governing regulations allowed the Administrator to assess $1,500 in civil money penalties for "[e]ach failure to pay an individual worker properly or to honor the terms or conditions of a worker's employment." 29 C.F.R. § 501.19(a), (c) (2016).

> terms and conditions of employment basically in the form of a contract. The workers are provided a copy of that so they can see, okay, this is the money I'm going to earn. If they come here and they are terminated, forced to resign, and they don't receive that three-[fourths] guarantee, now that's wages that they've lost and perhaps they wouldn't have come.

(Tr. at 858.) The undersigned finds compelling District Director Rachor's explanation of the rationale behind the Administrator's decision to apply CMPs for the three-fourths guarantee violations. District Director Rachor also rationally explained the Administrator's decision to apply only the mitigation factor concerning Respondent's lack of a history of violations. See Tr. at 856–57. The undersigned agrees with the Administrator's decision not to apply the remaining mitigation factors. The Administrator, therefore, reasonably assessed one $1,350 CMP for Respondent's twenty-four three-fourths guarantee violations.

III. The Administrator reasonably decided to assess a $1,350 CMP for Respondent's attempt to cause its workers to waive the three-fourths guarantee.

A $1,350 CMP for Employer's attempt to cause its workers to waive the three-fourths guarantee is reasonable. Twenty-nine C.F.R. § 501.5 mandates, "[a] person may not seek to have an H-2A worker . . . or a U.S. worker . . . waive any rights conferred under 8 U.S.C. 1188, 20 C.F.R. part 655, subpart B." Under 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(i), employers are required "to offer the worker employment for a total number of work hours equal to at least three-fourths of the workdays of the total period . . . ." Here, Employer provided worker departure forms to the nineteen farmworkers that left in May 2015. The worker departure forms stated that the farmworkers voluntarily left their jobs due to personal issues.[157] The regulations consider such an act "abandonment," the practical effect of which is to forego a farmworker's three-fourths guarantee." See § 655.122(n). The worker departure forms Respondent provided did not allow the farmworkers to state the true reasons they left. Respondent affirmatively provided the worker departure forms to the Department and other government agencies. This was a misrepresentation, as Respondent terminated or otherwise constructively discharged the workers. Further, Respondent admitted in its brief that the workers had no sick or deceased family members. See Respondent's Brief at 31; PX 15 at 475 (Russel Marino, Jr. stating that the purpose of the worker departure forms was to "protect against . . . this lawsuit"). That a third party may have advised the workers to sign the form as written does not absolve Respondent's liability from first, affirmatively providing forms with false information to the workers and second providing such documents to the Department.

Although the worker departure forms do not specifically state that the workers would give up their three-fourths guarantee, a proximate result of the misrepresentation is that the workers would forfeit their right to the three-fourths guarantee. The forms averred that [157] See Tr. at 37 (Maldonado's testimony), 108–110, 149–50 (Cheguez's testimony), 225 (Hernandez's testimony), 272–74 (Almanza testifying that Hernandez gave the workers a form "and asked us to sign the paper because 'there was no other choice'" and "we couldn't do anything about it"), 409–10 (WHI Perez's testimony), 732–34 (Russel Marino, Jr. saying that he gave the worker "the option to check off the box that said they were returning home because of personal reasons"), 769 (Russel Marino, Jr. recalling that he brought forms for the workers to sign stating that they were "resigning").

Respondent offered the worker additional work sufficient to complete the three-fourths guarantee; however, Respondent never made such a representation to the workers. Russel Marino, Jr. said that he did not want to have the workers sign a form saying that they were terminated, so he "gave them the option" to say that they quit for personal reasons. (Tr. at 733.) The fact that Respondent did not allow the workers to attest to the exact reason they left Respondent's employ renders moot Respondent's argument that it did not seek to have the employees waive any right. See Respondent's Brief at 31. Here, the worker departure forms effectively waived the farmworkers' right to the three-fourths guarantee; Respondent coerced the farmworkers into doing so.

To arrive at the $1,350 CMP, the Administrator decided against instituting the penalty per violation; rather the Administrator applied one $1,500 CMP, which included a $150 deduction because Respondent had no prior violations. See Tr. at 856–58. The Administrator made the $150 deduction after reviewing all mitigation factors. (Id.) Based on review of the record and the findings of fact made herein—including Respondent's limited experience with the H-2A program—the Administrator's decision to impose a $1,350 CMP for Respondent's violation of 29 C.F.R. 501.5 is reasonable.

IV. Respondent violated 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(d)(1) by providing inadequate housing, but the Administrator did not impose a reasonable $3,600 CMP. Rather, a $3,150 CMP is reasonable to assess.

As discussed below, the Administrator has successfully established violations for the bathroom windows with missing or broken screens, dormitory windows with missing or broken screens, uncovered garbage cans, and a shortage of hot water. However, the Administrator is unable to demonstrate that Employer committed a violation due to the provision of any unclean mattresses. A separate CMP for any mattress violation, therefore, is not warranted.

A. The Administrator assessed a reasonable $3,150 CMP resulting from Respondent's housing violations concerning missing or broken screens, uncovered garbage cans, and a shortage of hot water

The Administrator assessed $3,150 in CMPs for four violations of 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(d)(1), as follows: $900 for the unscreened bathroom windows; $900 for the faulty dormitory screen windows and doors; $900 for the uncovered garbage cans; and $450 for the hot water shortage. See Administrator's Brief at 84 (citing JX 10 at 160; Tr. 861–65, 938–39). Because Respondent's dormitories were built prior to 1980, the applicable regulations are the Employment and Training Administration Housing Standards codified at 20 C.F.R. §§ 654.404 through 654.417. The Administrator assessed reasonable CMPs because of Respondent's four discrete violations of § 655.122(d)(1). First, the record clearly shows unscreened bathroom windows. See Tr. at 331; PX 28, pages 1046–47. Section 654.408(a) mandates that "all outside opening . . . be protected with screening of not less than [sixteen] mesh." The Administrator, therefore, has successfully established a violation of § 655.122(d)(1). Second, the record shows obviously broken screens on the windows and doors of the dormitory in violation of § 654.408(a). See Tr. at 201–03 (Hernandez's testimony); PX 28, pages 1049–55. WHI Perez recalled the presence of flies in the dormitory. (Tr. at 323–28.) Third, the grounds surrounding Respondent's dormitory also contained uncovered trash cans. Section 654.414 requires employers to provide "fly tight, clean containers . . . adjacent to each housing unit for the storage of garbage or other refuse." Here, some of the garbage cans surrounding the dormitory did not have lids and WHI Perez noted the presence of flies around such lidless garbage cans. See Tr. at 324, 332. PX 33, page 1094, is a photograph of an open pile of discarded cans of soda and beer. See Tr. at 374–75, 603–04. The pile of discarded cans is located "directly across from the dormitory housing." (Tr. at 375.) PX 33, pages 1095 through 1102, are more photographs of the discarded cans. (Id.) The Administrator, therefore, has established a violation of § 654.414. Fourth, the Administrator reasonably assessed $450 in CMPs for the shortage of hot water. According to § 654.412, "[b]athing and hand washing facilities, supplied with hot and cold water under pressure, must be provided for the use of all occupants." Here, the bathrooms at Respondent's dormitory lacked sufficient hot water. See Tr. at 30, 59–60 (Maldonado's testimony), 103–04 (Gustavo Perez's testimony), 330 (WHI Perez's testimony that he had to wait two to three minutes "to determine that there was no hot water present"); PX 7 at 189 (Silva Lopez recalling that, at times, he took cold showers); PX 11 at 288 (Hector Mishel Garcia Dominguez stating in his deposition that there was only enough hot water for ten people to shower before it ran out). Cf. 203, 215 (Hernandez's testimony that workers had to "wait a little bit" for hot water). Respondent, therefore, violated the hot water requirement at § 654.412. The Administrator reviewed and applied the various mitigation factors at 29 C.F.R. § 501.19(b) to the facts surrounding the violation and reasonably reduced the CMPs to $3,150.[158] See Tr. at 862–66.

Finally, Respondent argued that the Administrator did not attempt to determine whether Respondent addressed the housing violations WHI Perez observed. See Respondent's Brief at 31–33. This argument is unavailing, because the record does not establish that Respondent ever contacted the Administrator to inform her that it made such repairs. Therefore, the Administrator reasonably reviewed the mitigating factors at 29 C.F.R. §501.19(b), and rationally assessed CMPs for the foregoing housing violations.

B. The CMP assessed for the unclean mattress violation is unreasonable.

[158] Concerning the bathroom screens, screen doors, and garbage cans, the Administrator applied the same mitigation factors and for the same reasons. The Administrator allowed a ten percent reduction because Respondent lacked a history of violations. However, the Administrator did not allow a reduction due to the number of workers affected, because of the gravity of the violation, because Respondent did not correct the violations immediately, and because Respondent provided no good explanation for the violations. See Tr. at 863–64. The Administrator applied the various mitigation factors at 29 C.F.R. § 501.19(b) to the facts surrounding the violation and reasonably reduced the CMP from a base penalty of $1,500 to $450. See Tr. at 865–66. The Administrator applied a ten percent deduction due to Respondent's commitment to future compliance and another ten percent deduction because the profit and loss component did not apply. Id.

Concerning the hot water violation, the Administrator did not apply mitigation factor number two, because the lack of hot water affected a large number of workers. The Administrator applied the mitigation factors for the gravity of the violation, because nobody was injured; she applied mitigation factor number five because Respondent provided a good explanation in that it did not know of the violation. The Administrator also applied mitigation factor six for a commitment to future compliance and another ten percent reduction because the Respondent did not stand to make any financial gain. Tr. at 865–66; see also Tr. at 937 (stating that the Administrator applied the same mitigation factors for the hot water and purported mattress violations, except the Administrator did not apply mitigation factor two). All of the Administrator's decision are reasonable based on the factual record.

The Administrator assessed a $450 CMP for unclean mattresses, which WHI Perez observed and photographed. See Administrator's Brief at 84 (citing JX 10 at 160; Tr. 862–66, 938–39). The CMP is unreasonable. The Administrator assessed the CMP due to a purported violation of 20 C.F.R. § 654.416, which requires an employer to "provide[]" H-2A workers with facilities consisting of, inter alia, "bunks, provided with clean mattresses." Here, WHI Perez assessed the violation, even though he "assumed" each worker had a mattress, and he could not recall if he observed any bunkbeds that were missing mattresses. See Tr. at 599; see also Tr. at 493. WHI Perez observed and photographed mattresses on the floor. See Tr. at 329; PX 28 at 1056. However, the photograph and WHI Perez's testimony does not preponderantly establish that Employer was in violation of § 654.416. The mattresses in the photograph are covered in bedsheets and other belongings, and so do not reasonably show the cleanliness of the employer-provided mattress. Although it is possible that the floor is unclean, thereby making the mattress unclean, neither the photographic nor the testimonial evidence proves this point. The Administrator did not successfully establish that Respondent did not "provide[]" its workers with "clean mattresses." § 654.416. Accordingly, the $450 CMP for unclean mattresses is not a reasonable penalty.

V. Respondent violated 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(h)(4) through its use of substandard transportation and use of unlicensed drivers. The Administrator imposed a reasonable $7,500 in CMPs.

Twenty C.F.R. § 655.122(h)(4) requires "[a]ll employer-provided transportation" to "comply with all applicable Federal, State or local laws and regulations." The Administrator reasonably assessed CMPs against Respondent because it used drivers without proper licenses, and because it transported its farmworkers using buses that fell below state and federal safety standards.

A. The $7,500 total CMP the Administrator imposed for transportation violations (20 C.F.R. § 655.122(h)(4)) was reasonable considering Respondent's violation for using unlicensed bus drivers.

The laws of the State of New Jersey prohibit driving on "public highways" without a driver's license. See N.J. Stat. Ann. § 39:3-10). New Jersey also prohibits the transportation of migrant farmworkers by drivers who are not licensed in the United States or Canada. See Administrator's Brief at 86–87 (citing N.J. Admin. Code § 13:21-13.2). Additionally, the H-2A regulations require drivers to possess a "valid permit qualifying the driver to operate the type of vehicle driven by him in the jurisdiction by which the permit is issued." 29 C.F.R. § 500.105(b)(1)(iii) (incorporated by reference in 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(h)(4)).

Here, in response to WHI Perez's request, none of the five workers WHI Perez observed driving the buses provided him with acceptable driver's licenses. See Tr. at 393, 399–400. Hernandez only provided driver's licenses to WHI Perez for three of the five drivers WHI Perez observed. (Tr. at 400.) Two had Mexican driver's licenses and one had an expired Mexican driver's license; the other two drivers had no licenses. See 390–401; PX 30 at 1064–72. The Administrator, therefore, has reasonably proven a violation of § 655.122(h)(4). The Administrator reviewed the mitigation factors at 29 C.F.R. § 501.19(b), and reasonably assessed reductions of the CMPs. See Tr. at 868–70.[159]

B. The $7,500 total CMP the Administrator imposed for transportation violations (20 C.F.R. § 655.122(h)(4)) was also reasonable considering Respondent's violation for using unsafe vehicles.

The Administrator reasonably found two violations concerning the vehicles Respondent used to transport its farmworkers. One of the buses Respondent used to transport its farmworkers had a broken rear tail light. See Tr. at 405; PX 29 at 1057 (showing that bus number 205 has a broken right rear turn signal). The obviously broken tail light put Respondent in violation of federal and state motor vehicle laws. See, e.g., 29 C.F.R. § 500.105(b)(3)(ii) (incorporating the lighting devices required under 49 U.S.C. 3102(c)); 49 C.F.R. § 393.11 (titled "Parts and Accessories Necessary For Safe Operation," specifically concerning commercial vehicles); N.J. Stat. Ann. § 39:3-61(a) (titled "Lamps and Reflectors Required on Particular Vehicles."). The CMP was reasonable, as it took into account the violation and the Administrator's review of the mitigation factors at 29 C.F.R. § 501.19(b).

The Administrator also rationally proved that the Respondent committed a violation by operating three buses with worn tires. Regardless of the instrument by which the investigator measured the tread on the tires, it is plainly evident that the Respondent operated buses with bald, unsafe tires. See Tr. at 402–06, 607–08; PX 29, pages 1058–63 (showing three tires that are clearly unsafe for road use due to the condition of the tire as worn, cracked, or both). Respondent did so in violation of federal and state laws. See 29 C.F.R. § 500.105(b)(3)(v); N.J. Admin. Code § 13:21-13.11(b) (prohibiting motor vehicles from transferring migrant workers with "tires which have been worn so smooth as to expose the tire fabric or which shall have any other defect likely to cause failure of the tire."). Respondent's actions also put lives at risk. The Administrator reviewed the mitigation factors at 29 C.F.R. § 501.19(b) and reasonably assessed a CMP of $750 per vehicle. See Tr. at 870–71. The gravity of the violation—involving a threat to the health and safety of Respondent's workers—is such that the Administrator's decision to apply any of the mitigation factors whatsoever represents a lenient decision. See Tr. at 868–74.

VI. Conclusion

This Decision modifies, in part, the Administrator's findings. Nevertheless, the preponderant evidence of record establishes that Respondent must remit $344,945.80[160] in back

---

[159] The Administrator reasonably allowed a ten percent reduction due to Respondent's lack of history with the H-2A program; her decisions to allow additional ten percent reductions due to the number of workers involved, and Respondent's commitment to future compliance, financial gain to the Respondent, and the catch all factor were also correct based on the record. (Tr. at 868–69.) The Administrator reasonably explained why it did not provide reductions for the gravity of the violation—unlicensed drivers are a safety hazard—as well as Respondent's efforts to comply in good faith and its explanation for the violation. (Id.) Respondent's practice of using unlicensed drivers demonstrates its general disregard for the safety and wellbeing of not only the guest farmworkers in its employ, but also for other motorists.

[160] $128,285 in back wages for meals; $64,960 in back wages for non-alcoholic drinks; $8,972.61 for beer; $142,728.22 for the various three-fourths guarantee violations.

wages and $211,800[161] in civil money penalties. The undersigned found the Administrator's assessments to be reasonable and accurate, except for the back wages owed for non-alcoholic drinks, and the CMP assessed for the non-existent mattress violation.

In its brief, Respondent noted that the penalties "dwarf those"[162] assessed in the Global Horizons cases, 2005-TAE-0001 and 2010-TAE-0002, which involved "rampant wage theft" and employers being paid kickbacks from the workers. Respondent's Brief at 4. There, the Administrator sought $350,000 in civil money penalties. Here, the Administrator has established $212,250.00 in CMPs. The scale of the CMPs is due to no reason aside from the sheer numbers of farmworkers affected by Respondent's violations. Additionally, the Administrator utilized conservative estimates to calculate the required back pay. The Administrator showed further restraint when deciding to apply one CMP for all of the violations of §§ 655.122(g), (p), and (q); she was well within her rights to have required Respondent to pay for each violation separately. Moreover, the governing regulations allow the Administrator to debar the Respondent from further certification, among other penalties. The Administrator showed further restraint in her decision not to apply those remedies, as well.

The Administrator's findings, modified in part herein, illustrate the truism that serious violations call for serious penalties. Respondent engaged in serious violations of the Act, and committed such violations against 147 farmworkers who in good faith engaged with the H-2A program.

THEREFORE, the undersigned finds:

1. Respondent violated 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(g), (p), and (q) by making false promises about kitchen access and failing to disclose meal charges. As a result, it owes $128,285 in back wages, and $198,450 in CMPs.
2. Respondent violated 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(p) through the sale of drinks and other items at a profit or in violation of state law. As a result, it owes $64,960 in back wages for non-alcoholic drinks sold and $8,972.61 for the profit it made from the beer it sold.
3. Respondent violated 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(i) in discharging certain workers prior to such workers meeting the three-fourths guarantee. As a result, it owes $142,728.22 in back wages, and $1,350 in CMPs.

[161] $198,450 for violations of 20 C.F.R. §§ 655.122(g), (p), (q); $1,350 for the three-fourths guarantee violations; $1,350 for coercing the waiver of the three-fourths guarantee; $3,150 for the various housing violations; and $7,500 for violations concerning the use of unsafe vehicles.

[162] Respondent's laches and estoppel arguments, see Respondent's Brief at 18–19, are also denied as there is no indication that the Administrator engaged in a prolonged delay in enforcement. WHI Perez arrived at Respondent's dormitory in July 2015 in an investigatory capacity, only. ALJX 1 ¶ 36. The Administrator did not make a formal conclusion as to whether Respondent committed any violations until the June 22, 2016 determination letter. See ALJX 1 at ¶ 38. Because any delay was not unreasonable, the undersigned denies Respondent's estoppel and laches arguments.

4. Respondent violated 29 C.F.R. § 501.5 by attempting to cause workers to waive the three-fourths guarantee at 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(i). As a result, it owes $1,350 in CMPs
5. Respondent violated 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(d) through the provision of inadequate housing. As a result, it owes $3,150 in CMPs.
6. Respondent violated 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(h)(4) through substandard transportation and unlicensed drivers. As a result, it owes $7,500 in CMPs.

SO ORDERED.

NOTICE OF APPEAL RIGHTS: Any party seeking review of this decision, including judicial review, shall file a Petition for Review (§Petition§) with the Administrative Review Board (§ARB§) within 30 days of the date of this decision. 29 C.F.R. § 501.42. The Board's address is: Administrative Review Board, U.S. Department of Labor, Suite S-5220, 200 Constitution Avenue, NW, Washington DC 20210, for traditional paper filing. Alternatively, the Board offers an Electronic File and Service Request (EFSR) system. The EFSR for electronic filing (eFile) permits the submission of forms and documents to the Board through the Internet instead of using postal mail and fax. The EFSR portal allows parties to file new appeals electronically, receive electronic service of Board issuances, file briefs and motions electronically, and check the status of existing appeals via a web-based interface accessible 24 hours every day. No paper copies need be filed. An e-Filer must register as a user, by filing an online registration form. To register, the e-Filer must have a valid e-mail address. The Board must validate the e-Filer before he or she may file any e-Filed document. After the Board has accepted an e-Filing, it is handled just as it would be had it been filed in a more traditional manner. e-Filers will also have access to electronic service (eService), which is simply a way to receive documents, issued by the Board, through the Internet instead of mailing paper notices/documents. Information regarding registration for access to the EFSR system, as well as a step by step user guide and FAQs can be found at: https://dol-appeals.entellitrak.com. If you have any questions or comments, please contact: Boards-EFSR-Help@dol.gov
If filing paper copies, you must file an original and four copies of the petition for review with the Board, together with one copy of this decision. If you e-File your petition, only one copy need be uploaded. Copies of the Petition should be served on all parties and on the undersigned Administrative Law Judge. If the ARB does not receive the Petition within 30 days of the date of this decision, or if the ARB does not issue a notice accepting a timely filed Petition within 30 days of its receipt of the Petition, this decision shall be deemed the final agency action. 29 C.F.R. §501.42(a).

I. Introduction

The decision on appeal represents a radical expansion of the existing H-2A requirements for employers; creating new law that requires employers to provide free hot meals, all the soft drinks an employee can drink for free, cold beer for wholesale prices, and pay for months of work after employees quit because it was more difficult than they expected. This workers' paradise sounds like a fantasy, but it is precisely what the Department is creating here. A family farm that did not gain one single penny from the alleged violations is being forced to pay more than half a million dollars to fund that fantasy. They come before this Court seeking review, to put right what has been made wrong, and to return to the H-2A regulations as they were actually written.

Petitioner, Sun Valley Orchards, LLC ("Sun Valley" or "SVO" or "Petitioner"), respectfully petitions the Administrative Review Board ("ARB") for review, pursuant to 29 C.F.R. § 501.42, of a Decision and Order Affirming in Part and Modifying in Part the Administrator's Findings following a July 2017 hearing (the "Decision"), issued by Administrative Law Judge Theresa C. Timlin (the "ALJ") on October 28, 2019. The ALJ's Decision slightly reduced the Administrator's demand for back wages and civil money penalties ("CMPs"), but essentially rubber-stamped the request, ordering Sun Valley to pay $344,945.83 in back wages and $211,800 in CMPs.[1] The Administrator and the ALJ, based on the amounts assessed, would have you believe that this case involves some egregious worker abuse or safety concern. But it isn't true.

In fact, those exorbitant wages and fines are nothing more than misunderstandings between first-time H-2A workers and a first-time H-2A employer, with opportunistic auditors maximizing penalties on novel legal theories. Ultimately, nearly all of those wages and penalties consist of free hot meals (not required by the H-2A rules); all-you-can-drink free soft drinks (not required by the H-2A rules); and pay for months of work never performed by workers who had quit because the work was more challenging than they had expected (obviously, not required by the H-2A rules). Sun Valley paid its workers every single penny earned. Every single penny. From their full-pay earnings, the workers purchased a variety of food items from a co-workers – hot meals offered for less than the allowable daily meal rate set by the Department, and as many soft drinks as they wished. Sun Valley did not receive any proceeds or indirect benefit from those purchases. None. Yet, for these "violations," the Decision orders Sun Valley to pay $391,695. Nearly all of the remaining wages and penalties relates to a group of first-time workers who quit a week or two into the season, deciding that they were not suited for the work. Although this left Sun Valley in a terrible situation – losing the workers needed to harvest their spring asparagus crop – they provided the workers with free transportation home, something the H-2A regulations did not require them to do. For this act of kindness, the Decision demands a further $144,078.22 in wages and penalties.

[1] The combined total of $556,745.83 is 98.7% of the requested $564,026.

The investigators from the Wage and Hour Division ("WHD") came to Sun Valley early in the 2015 season – Sun Valley's first season participating in the H-2A visa program. Sun Valley's owners asked the Investigator multiple times if there were any issues, and the Investigator repeatedly told him that everything seemed fine. Despite being aware of the meal and drink purchases and the early departure of a group of workers, the investigators chose to remain silent about these issues, not disclosing their belief that there were any violations until February 2016 and not sending out a Notice of Determination until June 2016, almost a year after the investigation began. By waiting, the wages and penalties had a full season to grow, resulting in the massive amount claimed and upheld in the Decision.[2]

The amounts that the Department seeks to collect from Sun Valley would destroy this four-generation farming operation. The CMPs, alone, are among the highest ever imposed by the Department. This appeal consists of specific challenges to the factual and legal findings underpinning the Decision on these discrete claims of H-2A "violations"; violations that simply did not occur. The evidence adduced at trial and, more importantly, the existing case law concerning the H-2A program, in no way support this Decision, and Sun Valley respectfully asks this Court to overturn the Decision accordingly.

II. Standard of Review

In an appeal under 29 C.F.R. § 501.42, the Board sits in de novo consideration of the factual and legal conclusions contained in the Administrative Law Judge's decision issued pursuant to 29 C.F.R. § 501.41. See also Secretary of Labor Order No. 02-2012 (Delegation of Authority and Assignment of Responsibility to the Administrative Review Board), 77 Fed. Reg. 69,378 (Nov. 16, 2012). "Under the Administrative Procedure Act, the ARB, as the Secretary of Labor's designee, acts with 'all the powers [the Secretary] would have in making the initial decision … .' 5 U.S.C. § 557(b)." Matter of Administrator v. Three D Farms, LLC, ARB Case 2016-0092, at *9 (Feb. 12, 2019). "The Board will affirm the ALJ's factual findings if supported by substantial evidence but reviews all conclusions of law de novo." Matter of Administrator v. Fernandez Farms, Inc., ARB Case 2016-0097, at *2 (Sept. 16, 2019).

[2] The Administrator continues to "make hay" from this investigation, through misleading press releases and smears in local newspapers against Sun Valley and the Marino family.

III. Meals and Drinks

The workers' purchases from a co-worker of meals and drinks are the single largest source of back wages and CMPs and the most unsupported (factually or legally) claim asserted by the Administrator, so that is the first claim that Sun Valley will address. The Decision includes the following findings-of-fact (citations to page numbers the Decision are as D._):

- Sun Valley employee, Agustin Hernandez, had used the kitchen facilities at Sun Valley's housing prior to the farm's participation in the H-2A program and throughout the 2015 season, including setting menus and employing kitchen staff (D.10);
- Sun Valley paid all utility bills for the kitchen (D.10);
- Mr. Hernandez was instructed to keep records of payments by workers and receipts for food purchases and that he could not make a profit from the meal sales (D.10);
- Mr. Hernandez charged less than the DOL-set meal rate in 2015 (D.10);
- Sun Valley did not receive any money from Mr. Hernandez from his sales of meals or drinks (D.10); and, critically,
- Workers paid Mr. Hernandez for meals and drinks[3]; and did not pay Sun Valley (D.11).

At no point did the ALJ find that Sun Valley received so much as a penny from the meal purchases from Mr. Hernandez. The straw-man argument that Sun Valley might have incurred additional costs if it had decided to expand its kitchen facilities is simply specious. The solution was to refer to the sale of meals in the job order, as Sun Valley did for subsequent H-2A job orders – which highlights that this is a question of disclosure, not of a substantive breach.

The ALJ uncritically adopted the Administrator's novel legal theory that an alleged failure of disclosure (the job orders stated that kitchen facilities would be provided rather than that meals would be provided and charged for) can only be remedied by requiring the employer to provide

---

[3] It is perhaps a minor point but speaks to the larger pattern of factual errors throughout the Decision that the ALJ concluded that workers paid Mr. Hernandez for "housing and transportation." D.11, citing Tr. 211, 233. Page 233 of the transcript deals with the availability of drinking water in the fields, and page 211 is Mr. Hernandez testifying that the workers did not pay Sun Valley for meals, drinks, housing, or transportation. There was no testimony about any worker paying anything for housing to anyone.

100% free meals. Setting aside that the Investigators sat on this theory for month after month while their damage calculations grew rather than raising the issue to anyone at Sun Valley during the Summer of 2015, this creates an outrageous result. The Decision refers to the workers being denied "their contractual right to the $11.29 per hour minimum wage promised on the job order." D.39. But the Decision does not continue with that reasoning by noting that workers, under the Department's H-2A regulations, would still need to use some of those earnings to purchase meals at the Department-set rates or purchase food to prepare their own meals. Nothing in the H-2A regulations requires meals to be provided free-of-charge over and above the AEWR (much less free soft drinks), but that is precisely what the Decision imposes here – to the tune of nearly $200,000 in "back wages."

The Decision referred to the workers' payments to Mr. Hernandez as "deductions" from pay, rather than payments by the workers from their earnings. D.8. Specifically, the ALJ found that "Hernandez would take workers' checks to the bank to cash them and then return the money to the workers, minus any money owed for meals and beverages." D.8. But the citations offered by the ALJ in support of that conclusion (D.8 n.25) specifically contradict that conclusion:

- TR. 100 Gustavo Marquez Perez ("Q. So, I understand correctly, Agustin would case the checks? A. Yes. Q. What happened after that? A. Well, from there we would have to pay for the food and if we had any pending debts for the drinks, then we would have to pay that." (emphasis added));
- TR. 189 Agustin Hernandez ("A. They sign and they handed the checks to me and I go to the bank and cash them. Q. And then you take the cash back and return it to the workers? A. Yes.")[4];
- TR. 339 WHD Investigator Jose Perez ("Q. Did you learn when the workers made those payments in relation to receiving their pay? A. They would receive their pay, which would be cashed out, and they would then pay Agustin Hernandez for the meals, the drinks that they purchased, and also the beer." (emphasis added)).

[4] The ALJ credited and cited this testimony from Mr. Hernandez, but not his testimony a few pages later that the bank provided him sealed envelopes with each worker's name on it, which he handed to the workers, and that he never took money out of the workers' pay. Tr. 212.

There is no dispute that the workers paid Mr. Hernandez for the meals and drinks purchased, but there is a significant legal distinction between Mr. Hernandez deducting money before the wages were paid and the workers paying him money from their 100%-received earnings. The ALJ based her decision on the former; the facts clearly demonstrate the latter. No evidence is cited (and none exists) that Mr. Hernandez paid workers "minus" money he intercepted before paying them (D.8), nor that he "took money out of their pay" (D.39). The entire premise of the Decision as to any payments to Mr. Hernandez is fatally flawed and must be reversed.

Beyond the erroneous assessment of back wages to create free meals, the CMP assessment of $198,450 for the meal-disclosure issue is patently excessive. The back wages were not assessed based on the amounts paid being excessive (the ALJ rejected out of hand any arguments that the meal charges were less than the Department-allowed amounts) but on the underlying failure to disclose that there would be any meal charges whatsoever. D.35-40. But in assessing CMPs, the Administrator and the ALJ assessed a per-worker penalty rather than a single penalty for the same disclosure that was provided to each worker.[5] No penalties should be levied whatsoever, but the nearly $200,000 imposed here are legally invalid, even within the context of the ALJ's findings.

IV. Early Departures

The next largest source of the Administrator's demand for money from Sun Valley involves a group of 19 H-2A workers who walked off the job after only a few days of work at the beginning of the contract period. The workers had been harvesting asparagus and abandoned the worksite and chose to return home. The Decision claims that "the employee witnesses were consistent in describing the heated events at the meeting" that followed their announcement that they were going to stop working. D.44. But the preceding paragraph of the Decision directly undercuts this factual conclusion. Id. One worker claimed that Russel Marino, Jr. "tried to hit him," but none of the other workers at that meeting testified to that – an event that would certainly have been memorable if it had actually happened. Id. The only consistency in the testimony is that the workers chose to stop working, there were raised voices on both sides, and there was a language barrier between the two sides of the discussion. The testimony was far from "consistent" that the workers were actually fired – the ALJ admits that it would have been "illogical" for Sun Valley to do that in the middle of their critical harvesting season. Id. The selection of quotes used in the Decision scrupulously avoids pages of testimony from the workers[6] in which they testify that they said at the meeting that: (1) the work was too difficult for them; (2) they did not have prior experience in agriculture, generally, or in harvesting asparagus, specifically; and (3) they wished to go home.

Acknowledging the weakness of this conclusion as to "actual discharge," the Decision offers some alternative theories regarding "constructive discharge" as well. D.44-46. The main problem with that is that the workers did not testify that they quit because of "housing conditions" or "meal charges." In fact, the housing had just been inspected before the season began and, clearly, had passed that inspection. The broken screens and missing trash can lid identified months later by the WHD Investigator were the result of workers having lived there for months – all of which, by definition, occurred after these 19 workers departed less than 2 weeks into the season. The argument that these conditions (whether off in the future or at the same time) were "so intolerable that a reasonable person would have felt compelled to resign" Pennsylvania State Police v. Suders, 542 U.S. 129, 147 (2004) (cited at D.44), falls apart because the vast majority of Sun Valley's H-2A workers were living under the exact same conditions and performing the exact same work and continued working there for the entire season. That may not be dispositive in every case, but it certainly diminishes the claim that any "reasonable person would have felt compelled" to take this action, and suggests instead, that these workers were "unhappy with the general nature of work assignments," something the Decision concedes is not constructive discharge.

[6] The workers testified from Mexico under the close supervision of an anti-employer group, CDM, which represented to the workers that it was acting as the U.S. Department of Labor. The workers gave contradictory and demonstrably false testimony as to the extent of their interactions with CDM, as did the WHD witnesses regarding any coordination between the group and DOL.

This distinction matters because if the workers left by choice, that would terminate the employer's three-fourths guarantee to them under 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(n). Only if a worker is terminated (and terminated without cause) would the employer be responsible for additional months of pay for work never performed. The Decision puts it well – it would have been "illogical" for Sun Valley to terminate these workers at the peak of harvesting, costing the farm untold thousands of dollars in lost crops. Yet, the Decision concludes that that is what happened and orders Sun Valley to pay $142,728.22 for work never performed. D.54.

A small, but notable, part of the three-fourths guarantee claim relates to five individual workers who departed later in the season. The summer of 2015 was marked by excessive rain that caused an infection in Sun Valley's pepper plants – one of their primary crops. With no peppers to harvest, 44 workers were sent home before the end of the season but after they had been offered three-fourths of the hours set forth in the job order. The five workers in question, for whom the Administrator seeks back pay, had been sick or injured for some period of time – as addressed in testimony at the hearing but not acknowledged in the Decision – meaning that there were hours "offered" that were not hours "worked" under the contract. The Decision simply lumps these workers in with the 19 who quit in increasing the back wages claimed.

V. Remaining Allegations

The remainder of the claims against Sun Valley are a hodge-podge of theories and allegations that will be briefed more fully on appeal but merit a brief discussion here. These issues can be briefed more fully later, with most involving CMPs only and not back wages, except as discussed below.

A. Beer Sales

The Decision bases its claim for Sun Valley to pay workers $8,972.61 for the perceived profit by Mr. Hernandez with respect to the sale of beer. D.42. There is no finding or proof that Mr. Hernandez was acting in an agency capacity with regards to beer sales. The ALJ stated that "Respondent is unable to rebut the Administrator's calculations as unreasonable," without any mention of the arguments made as to why the Administrator's arguments were clearly unreasonable (Investigator admitted using incorrect basis for costs of beer – wrong brand, wrong store, wrong price; vague estimates for number of beers purchased; all of the workers would receive "back wages" despite testimony from workers who did not purchase any beer, etc.). See, e.g., Cross-Examination of WHD Investigator Perez: "Q. What was Sun Valley's profit for the beer? A. They didn't – they weren't the ones selling the beer. Agustin Hernandez was selling the beer." Tr.638. If the Administrator believed that Mr. Hernandez improperly profited through his sale of beer, it should have brought that claim against him rather than dropping its claims against him pre-trial and claiming money from Sun Valley, instead. The finding of almost $9,000 for this "violation" should be reversed and dismissed.

B. Housing & Transportation

There are some CMP-only claims included in the Decision, with respect to the number of bathroom sinks with hot water, torn screens, and van drivers, that will be identified briefly here, and discussed further in Respondent's brief on appeal later. The condition of the housing resulted from lack of care by the workers living there, but more importantly, could have been remedied immediately if the WHD Investigator had been interested in the workers' living conditions rather than in assessing CMPs and raised the issue to Sun Valley in a timely manner.

C. Departure Notices

Pursuant to 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(n), an employer is obligated to report to the Departments of Labor and Homeland Security when a worker terminates employment under an H-2A contract more than 30 days before the end date of need. After consulting with their filing agent, Sun Valley prepared forms for the workers to use to report those early departures in April 2015. Out of concern that the workers would face future repercussions from DHS or Consular Officers if they were reported as having quit the job for which they received a visa only days into the season, the workers were given the option to give some other reason on the form if they chose to. The ALJ and the Administrator construe this as some nefarious effort to have the workers "waive" their three-fourths guarantee. As shown above and throughout the proceedings before the ALJ, at no time did Sun Valley use those forms as proof to the Investigator or the ALJ for why the workers departed early. No attempt was made to secure a "waiver" of the three-fourths guarantee through those documents – there was no three-fourths guarantee at issue because the workers quit the job. In the grand scheme of a case imposing nearly $600,000 in liability, a single $1,350 CMP is fairly small, but this is a particularly preposterous claim.

VI. Conclusion

The ALJ's Decision adopted, nearly without any disagreement, the Administrator's claims in this case. Those claims attempt to bootstrap what was, at worst, a miscommunication regarding meals[7] and a misunderstanding arising from a work stoppage. WHD Investigators appeared at the farm during the Summer of 2015 but did not disclose any concerns with operations until after the season was over. By then, the Administrator could assess nearly $600,000 in "back wages" and CMPs for the Investigator's conclusions. Jump ahead 4 years, and now the ALJ has signed off on the Administrator's theories, across the board, even though they ignore key evidence in the case and create new requirements within the H-2A program that the Department chose not to create when writing those regulations (free meals and free soda, for example). Based on the numerous factual and legal arguments set forth above and to be discussed in their brief on appeal, Sun Valley respectfully urges the Board to reverse the ALJ's Decision and rescind these penalties that will otherwise put this family farm out of business forever.

[7] There was significant testimony at trial (not referenced in the Decision) that workers had access to the kitchen, that several prepared their own meals there, and no worker asked to prepare their own meals and was refused that right. Sun Valley is expressly not waiving those arguments that the job order was accurate but, rather, addressing the errors in the Decision relating to meals purchased by the workers from Mr. Hernandez.

ARB CASE NO. 2020-0018

ALJ CASE NO. 2017-TAE-00003

DATE: DEC - 6 2019

NOTICE OF APPEAL AND ORDER ESTABLISHING BRIEFING SCHEDULE

On November 27, 2019, Respondent filed a petition for review of Administrative Law Judge Theresa Timlin's Decision and Order Affirming in Part and Modifying in Part the Administrator's Findings issued October 28, 2019. This notice constitutes acceptance of the petition for review by the Administrative Review Board (Board or ARB). The Board specifies the following issues for review:

> Whether the ALJ erred as to law and fact by (1) concluding that Respondent violated 20 C.F.R. § 655.122 by making false promises about kitchen access and failing to disclose meal charges, and (2) ordering payment of back wages and civil money penalties?
>
> Whether the ALJ erred as to law and fact by (1) concluding that Respondent violated 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(p) through the sale of items of food and drink at a profit or in violation of state law and (2) ordering payment of back wages and unlawful profit?
> Whether the ALJ erred as to law and fact by (1) concluding that Respondent violated 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(i)(1) by discharging 24 workers before they had worked at least three-fourths of the workdays specified in the work contract and (2) ordering payment of back wages and civil money penalties?

Whether the ALJ erred as to law and fact by concluding that the imposition of civil money penalties for Respondent's attempt to obtain waivers from its employees of the three-fourths guarantee was reasonable?

Whether the ALJ erred as to law and fact by (1) concluding that Respondent violated 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(d)(1) by providing inadequate housing and (2) affirming the imposition of $3,150 in civil money penalties as reasonable?

Whether the ALJ erred as to law and fact by (1) concluding that Respondent violated 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(h)(4) through its use of substandard transportation and use of unlicensed drivers and (2) affirming the imposition of civil money penalties as reasonable?

The Board offers an Electronic File and Service Request (EFSR) system. The EFSR for electronic filing (eFile) permits the submission of forms and documents to the Board through the Internet instead of using postal mail and fax. The EFSR portal allows parties to file new appeals electronically, receive electronic service of Board issuances, file briefs and motions electronically, and check the status of existing appeals via a web-based interface accessible 24 hours every day. No paper copies need be filed.

PARTIES REPRESENTED BY COUNSEL MUST USE E-FILING ABSENT GOOD CAUSE SHOWN.

An e-Filer must register as a user by filing an online registration form. To register, the e-Filer must have a valid e-mail address. The Board must validate the e-Filer before electronically filing any document. After the Board has accepted an e-Filing, it is handled just as it would be had it been filed in a more traditional manner.

e-Filers will also have access to electronic service (eService), which is simply a way to receive documents, issued by the Board, through the Internet instead of mailing paper notices/documents. Information regarding registration for access to the EFSR system, as well as a step-by-step user guide and FAQs can be found at https://dol-appeals.entellitrak.com. Please send any procedural questions or comments to Boards-EFSR-Help@dol.gov.

Mail or deliver paper copies (if e-Filing is not used) of pleadings, including briefs, appendices, motion, and other supporting documentation to the Administrative Review Board, U.S. Department of Labor, 200 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Room S-5220, Washington, D.C., 20210.

This is the briefing schedule for this case:

OPENING BRIEF: Within twenty-eight (28) days of the issuance of this Order, the petitioner must file with the Board a supporting legal brief of points and authorities.

RESPONSE BRIEF: The opposing party must file any response in opposition to the supporting legal brief with the Board within twenty-eight (28) calendar days from the date of service of the petitioner's principal legal brief.

REPLY BRIEF: Within fourteen (14) calendar days of the service of a legal brief in opposition to the petitioner's opening brief, the petitioner may file a reply brief.

ALL BRIEFS: No further briefs may be filed without the permission of the Board. The filer must concurrently serve a copy of the any brief upon the opposing party and file a certification of such service with the Board. Service is effective upon mailing or hand delivery. Except as otherwise specified in this Order, the form of all briefs and other filings shall comply with Federal Rule of Appellate Procedure (FRAP) 32(a). The content of all briefs must comply to the extent practicable with FRAP 28.

OTHER FILINGS

No appendix may be filed without prior permission of the Board and compliance to the extent practicable with FRAP 30. In no case may an appendix be filed earlier than twenty-one (21) days after the response brief is served. The form of any appendix must be consistent with FRAP 32(b).

All motions and other requests for extraordinary action by the Board (including, but not limited to, requests for extensions of time or expansion of page limitations) shall be in the form of a motion appropriately captioned, titled, formatted and signed, consistent with FRAP 27(d).

OTHER MATTERS

All pleadings should include the ARB case number as it appears in this Order.

The Administrative Review Board encourages the parties to consider the alternative dispute resolution (ADR) program administered by the Office of Administrative Law Judges (OALJ). The OALJ offers two types of court-sponsored alternative dispute resolution: settlement judges and mediation services. If all parties agree to use the OALJ ADR program, they should jointly notify the Board of their intention, and the Chair of the Board will refer the matter to the Chief Administrative Law Judge for the limited purpose of appointing a mediator or settlement judge (other than a judge previously involved in the case). Unless the Chief Administrative Law Judge directs otherwise, settlement discussions must be completed within 56 days of the date of referral or the case will be automatically returned to the Board for the issuance of a new briefing schedule on the original grant of the petition for review. If the matter is settled, any agreement or consent findings will be reviewed and approved by the Board.

RESPONDENT'S CONSENT MOTION TO EXTEND BRIEFING SCHEDULING

Respondent-Appellant, Sun Valley Orchards, LLC, respectfully moves to extend the briefing schedule set forth in the Board's December 6, 2019 Order. Under that Order, Respondent's opening brief would be due 28 days from the date of the Order, or January 3, 2020, immediately after the holidays. The Administrator's Response Brief would be due 28 days after service of the opening brief, and the Reply Brief 14 days after that. Respondent has conferred with Counsel for the Solicitor, and the Solicitor consents to Respondent's request to extend the filing deadline for the Opening brief by 28 days, to Friday, January 31, 2020, with the remaining briefs following the same 28-day and 14-day periods following service of that brief.

Respondent respectfully asks the Board to approve this schedule.

Dated: December 11, 2019

Secretary of Labor Order No. 02-2012, 77 Fed. Reg. 69,378 (Nov. 16, 2012) 3

I. Introduction

The decision on appeal represents a radical expansion of the existing H-2A requirements for employers; creating new law that requires employers to provide free hot meals, all the soft drinks an employee can drink for free, cold beer for wholesale prices, and pay for months of work after employees quit a job because it was more difficult than they expected. This workers' paradise sounds like a fantasy, but it is precisely what the Department is creating here. A family farm that did not gain one single penny from the alleged violations is being forced to pay more than half a million dollars to fund that fantasy. They come before this Court seeking review, to put right what has been made wrong, and to return to the H-2A regulations as they were actually written.

Petitioner, Sun Valley Orchards, LLC ("Sun Valley"), respectfully petitions the Administrative Review Board ("ARB"), having accepted this matter for review pursuant to 29 C.F.R. § 501.42(b), to issue a decision pursuant to 29 C.F.R. § 501.45, reversing a Decision and Order Affirming in Part and Modifying in Part the Administrator's Findings following a July 2017 hearing (the "Decision"), issued by Administrative Law Judge Theresa C. Timlin (the "ALJ") on October 28, 2019. The ALJ's Decision almost imperceptibly reduced the Administrator's demand for back wages and civil money penalties ("CMPs"), but essentially rubber-stamped the request in its entirety, ordering Sun Valley to pay $344,945.83 in back wages and $211,800 in CMPs.[1] The Administrator and the ALJ, based on the amounts assessed, would have you believe that this case involves some egregious worker abuse or safety concern. It involves nothing of the sort. This is unprecedented agency overreach, and Sun Valley respectfully urges this Court to overturn this injustice and restore order and fundamental fairness.

[1] The combined total of $556,745.83 is 98.7% of the requested $564,026.

Ultimately, the exorbitant wages and fines assessed are nothing more than a series of misunderstandings between first-time H-2A workers and a first-time H-2A employer, with opportunistic auditors maximizing penalties by sitting on their findings and applying novel legal theories. Ultimately, nearly all of those wages and penalties consist of free hot meals (not required by the H-2A rules); all-you-can-drink free soft drinks (not required by the H-2A rules); and pay for months of work never performed by workers who had quit because the work was more challenging than they had expected (obviously, not required by the H-2A rules). Sun Valley paid its workers every single penny earned. Every single penny. From their full-pay earnings, the workers purchased a variety of food items from a co-worker – hot meals offered for less than the allowable daily meal rate set by the Department, and as many soft drinks (sodas, sports drinks, and energy drinks) as they wished. Sun Valley did not receive any proceeds or indirect benefit from those purchases. None. Yet, for these alleged "violations" of the H-2A regulations, the Decision orders Sun Valley to pay $391,695.

Worse, the Wage and Hour Division ("WHD") investigators were fully aware of the workers' meal and drink purchase arrangements with their co-worker when they visited the farm in July 2015. That year was Sun Valley's first time ever participating in the H-2A program. The Marino family, which is entering its fourth generation of owning and operating this farm, worked with the investigators and repeatedly asked them if there were any issues with complying with the H-2A regulations. Time after time, the investigator replied that everything seemed fine. As the months rolled on, from July to August to September to October, workers continued to purchase meals and drinks every day, but the investigators kept their vow of silence. With each passing day, the claim for back wages and civil money penalties grew and grew. The investigators did not break their silence until February 2016, many months after the season was already over, such that what should have been a simple issue to fix had become a six-figure claim against the farm. The determination notice finally arrived in June 2016, almost a year after the investigation began. By waiting patiently and silently, the investigators ensured that the wages and penalties had a full season to grow, resulting in the massive amount claimed and upheld in the Decision.[2]

Nearly all of the remaining wages and penalties relates to a group of first-time workers who quit a week or two into the season, deciding that they were not suited for the work. Although this left Sun Valley in a terrible situation – losing the workers needed to harvest their spring asparagus crop – they provided the workers with free transportation home, something the H-2A regulations specifically did not require them to do. For this act of kindness, the Decision demands a further $144,078.22 in wages and penalties.

The amounts that the Department seeks to collect from Sun Valley would destroy this four-generation farming operation. The CMPs, alone, are some of the highest ever imposed by the Department. This appeal consists of specific challenges to the factual and legal findings underpinning the Decision on these discrete claims of H-2A "violations"; violations that simply did not occur. The evidence adduced at trial and, more importantly, the existing case law concerning the H-2A program, in no way support this Decision, and Sun Valley respectfully asks this Court to overturn the Decision accordingly.

II. Standard of Review

In an appeal under 29 C.F.R. § 501.42, the Board sits in de novo consideration of the factual and legal conclusions contained in the Administrative Law Judge's decision issued pursuant to 29 C.F.R. § 501.41. See also Secretary of Labor Order No. 02-2012 (Delegation of Authority and Assignment of Responsibility to the Administrative Review Board), 77 Fed. Reg. 69,378 (Nov. 16, 2012). "Under the Administrative Procedure Act, the ARB, as the Secretary of Labor's designee, acts with 'all the powers [the Secretary] would have in making the initial decision ... .' 5 U.S.C. § 557(b)." Matter of Administrator v. Three D Farms, LLC, ARB Case 2016-0092, at *9 (Feb. 12, 2019). "The Board will affirm the ALJ's factual findings if supported by substantial evidence but reviews all conclusions of law de novo." Matter of Administrator v. Fernandez Farms, Inc., ARB Case 2016-0097, at *2 (Sept. 16, 2019).

III. Meals and Drinks

The workers' purchases from a co-worker of meals and drinks are the single largest source of back wages and CMPs and the most unsupported (factually or legally) claim asserted by the Administrator, so that is the first claim that Sun Valley will address. The Decision includes the following findings-of-fact (citations to page numbers the Decision are as D._):

- Sun Valley employee, Agustin Hernandez, had used the kitchen facilities at Sun Valley's housing prior to the farm's participation in the H-2A program and throughout the 2015 season, including setting menus and personally employing kitchen staff (D.10);
- Sun Valley paid all of the utility bills for the kitchen (D.10);
- Mr. Hernandez was instructed to keep records of payments by workers and receipts for food purchases and, specifically, that he could not make a profit from the meal sales (D.10);
- Mr. Hernandez charged less than the DOL-set meal rate in 2015 (D.10);
- Sun Valley did not receive any money from Mr. Hernandez from his sales of meals or drinks (D.10); and, critically,
- Workers paid Mr. Hernandez for meals and drinks[3]; and did not pay Sun Valley (D.11).

[3] It is perhaps a minor point but speaks to the larger pattern of factual errors throughout the Decision that the ALJ concluded that workers paid Mr. Hernandez for "housing and transportation." D.11, citing Tr. 211, 233. Page 233 of the transcript deals with the availability of drinking water in the fields, and page 211 is Mr. Hernandez testifying that the workers did not pay Sun Valley for meals, drinks, housing, or transportation. There was no testimony about any worker paying anything for housing to anyone, much less Mr. Hernandez or Sun Valley.

At no point did the ALJ find that Sun Valley received so much as a penny from the meal purchases from Mr. Hernandez. The straw-man argument that Sun Valley might have incurred additional costs if it had decided to expand its kitchen facilities is entirely specious. The solution was to refer to the sale of meals in the job order, as Sun Valley did for subsequent H-2A job orders – which highlights that this is a question of disclosure, not of a substantive breach. The H-2A rules do not require farms to provide free prepared meals or even free food to prepare meals to H-2A workers,[4] any more than any employer would need to do so for their employees.

A. The Disclosure Allegation Does Not Support the Wages/CMPs Assessed

The ALJ uncritically adopted the Administrator's novel legal theory that an alleged failure of disclosure – checking the box for "kitchen will be available" rather than "meals will be provided" – can only be remedied by requiring the employer to provide 100% free meals. Setting aside that the Investigators sat on this theory for month after month while their damage calculations grew rather than raising the issue to anyone at Sun Valley during the Summer of 2015, this creates an outrageous result. The Decision refers to the workers being denied "their contractual right to the $11.29 per hour minimum wage promised on the job order." D.39. But the Decision does not continue with that reasoning by noting that workers, under the Department's H-2A regulations, would still need to use some of those earnings to purchase meals at the Department-set rates or purchase food to prepare their own meals. See 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(g) ("Meals. The employer either must provide each worker with three meals a day or must furnish free and convenient cooking and kitchen facilities to the workers that will enable the workers to prepare their own meals. Where the employer provides the meals, the job offer must state the charge, if any, to the worker for such meals. The amount of meal charges is governed by §655.173."). Nothing in the H-2A regulations requires meals to be provided free-of-charge over and above the AEWR (much less free soft drinks), but that is precisely what the Decision imposes here – to the tune of nearly $200,000 in "back wages" alone.

[4] The rules for "range livestock" workers (i.e., open-range sheepherders) have such a requirement (20 C.F.R. § 655.210(e)(1)) but no other H-2A employers are required to do so.

The Decision referred to the workers' payments to Mr. Hernandez as "deductions" from pay, rather than payments by the workers from their earnings. D.8. Specifically, the ALJ found that "Hernandez would take workers' checks to the bank to cash them and then return the money to the workers, minus any money owed for meals and beverages." D.8. But the citations offered by the ALJ in support of that conclusion (D.8 n.25) specifically contradict that conclusion[5]:

- TR. 100 Gustavo Marquez Perez ("Q. So, I understand correctly, Agustin would case the checks? A. Yes. Q. What happened after that? A. Well, from there we would have to pay for the food and if we had any pending debts for the drinks, then we would have to pay that." (emphasis added));
- TR. 189 Agustin Hernandez ("A. They sign and they handed the checks to me and I go to the bank and cash them. Q. And then you take the cash back and return it to the workers? A. Yes.")[6];
- TR. 339 WHD Investigator Jose Perez ("Q. Did you learn when the workers made those payments in relation to receiving their pay? A. They would receive their pay, which would be cashed out, and they would then pay Agustin Hernandez for the meals, the drinks that they purchased, and also the beer." (emphasis added)).

---

[5] Transcript citations appear as "TR" followed by the page number of the continuously-paginated four-volume trial transcript and line number(s). To the extent that there are any variations between the Word and PDF editions, all citations herein are to the PDF copy of the transcripts. Trial exhibits admitted into the record are designated Joint Exhibit, Administrator's Exhibit, or Respondent's Exhibit, accordingly.

[6] The ALJ credited and cited this testimony from Mr. Hernandez, a witness for the Administrator, but not his testimony a few pages later that the bank provided him sealed envelopes with each worker's name on it, which he handed to the workers, and that he never took money out of the workers' pay. Tr. 212. While the trier-of-fact has the benefit of seeing and hearing witnesses and making credibility determinations, obviously limited deference is owed to such blatantly inconsistent findings as to credibility.

There is no dispute that the workers paid Mr. Hernandez for the meals and drinks purchased, but there is a significant legal distinction between Mr. Hernandez deducting money before the wages were paid and the workers paying him money from their 100%-received earnings. The ALJ based her decision on the former; the facts clearly demonstrate the latter. No evidence is cited (and none exists) that Mr. Hernandez paid workers "minus" money he intercepted before paying them (D.8), nor that he "took money out of their pay" (D.39). The entire premise of the Decision as to any payments to Mr. Hernandez is fatally flawed and must be reversed.

Purchases by these workers, just like purchases by members of the Court, by counsel, or by any other employee in the U.S., from their take-home pay and at their personal discretion, for items non-work-related items, are not "deductions." They are simply the "cost of living" that each of us bears. DOL certainly could have chosen to require employers to provide free meals to H-2A workers as a program-wide rule. It did so for range herders in 20 C.F.R. § 655.210(e)(1). It already requires that housing be free-of-charge under 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(d)(1). Employers in the H-2B program are not required to provide meals, cooking facilities, or free housing, reflecting the Department's policy decisions there. But, although it could have done so, the Department of Labor has repeatedly decided not to require free food for non-herder H-2A workers. Until now. This ALJ decision requires exactly what the Secretary of Labor has repeatedly declined to do, whether in the 1987, the 2008, or the 2010 final H-2A rules or in the current proposed rule set to be finalized this spring. Sun Valley is the only employer under such a requirement in the entire H-2A program.

Beyond the erroneous assessment of back wages to create free meals, the CMP assessment of $198,450 for the meal-disclosure issue is patently excessive. The back wages were not assessed based on the amounts paid exceeding the Department-approved meal rate but on the underlying failure to disclose that there would be any meal charges whatsoever. D.35-40. But in assessing

CMPs, the Administrator and the ALJ assessed a per-worker penalty rather than a single penalty for the same disclosure that was provided to each worker.[7] The "violation" alleged was the failure to disclose accurately how meals would be made available, not that the workers were not paid properly and fully. No penalties should be levied whatsoever, but the nearly $200,000 imposed here are legally invalid, even within the context of the ALJ's findings.

B. The Evidence Does Not Support the Finding of Any Violation

The meal-related allegations are not supported by the evidence at trial, much less by the citations offered in the Decision. As a matter of de novo review of the record, it is clear that Sun Valley indisputably maintained a kitchen at the housing facility used by its farmworkers. While the testimony at trial was inconsistent as to how many workers could use the kitchen at any one time or the feasibility of cooking in "shifts" at meal times, several of the former employees testified that they had never asked to use the kitchen, much less asked and been denied permission. TR 50:24-51:15 (never asked to use refrigerator or kitchen, never tried to purchase food at store that sold it). Others testified that workers were allowed to and actually did use the kitchen to store and prepare food. TR 176:17-20. Mr. Hernandez testified that some workers opted out of the meal plan, without consequence to them from the farm, and that workers did not ask him to use the refrigerators or stove, but if they had, "we could make arrangement[s]" to prepare food in shifts or via some other accommodation, had they asked. TR 213:19-214:18. At the very least, there is a factual question as to whether some or all of the workers could have prepared their own meals in Sun Valley's kitchen.

---

[7] Cf. D.48-49 ("The Administrator, therefore, reasonably assessed one $1,350 CMP for Respondent's twenty-four three-fourths guarantee violations.")

C. Payments to Mr. Hernandez Were Not Sun Valley "Deductions"

None of the workers testified that they paid money to Sun Valley for meals; each testified unequivocally that they purchased their meals from Agustin Hernandez. Under questioning from the Court, Mr. Hernandez explained that he bore weekly losses in the early part of the season, only recouping those amounts later in the year, but never making a profit on the kitchen operation. TR 234:19-235:7. Just before leaving the witness stand, Mr. Hernandez reiterated for the Court that he had been involved with meals for years without complaint, and did so without making a profit. TR 256:24-257-5. He testified that he used the money that he personally collected from the workers (not by way of any "deduction" from wages, but paid for in-hand by workers to him directly from their paid-in-full wages) to purchase food, pay the kitchen staff, and to buy additional appliances for the kitchen as needed or as requested by the workers (microwave, blender, etc.). Sun Valley took no action against any employees who opted out of the meal plan (they would not have any reason to even know that this had happened or not), and the farm made no more or less in profit based on what the workers did or did not pay Mr. Hernandez. The entire kitchen operation was handled by Mr. Hernandez at his own financial risk and independently from Sun Valley's farming operations.

The Administrator and the ALJ devoted significant time and ink to the idea that Sun Valley's employee, Mr. Hernandez, was acting as the farm's "agent" making his receipt of meal charges from workers somehow attributable to Sun Valley, itself. Since the theory of recovery in this case is breach of contract, this "agency" argument makes no sense. See, e.g., Young v. Bethlehem Area Vo-Tech Sch., 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13531, *39 (E.D. Pa. Feb. 28, 2007) (dismissing breach of contract claim resting on respondeat superior theory, as "it would make no sense to involve the doctrine of respondeat superior (which establishes vicarious liability for negligence) in a claim for breach of contract."). There is no argument that Mr. Hernandez either directly or "jointly" employed any of the workers, nor was he named on the H-2A application filed with the Department of Labor. Nor was there proof that he charged more than his costs for anything other than beer; and there was no testimony at all that his beer sales were "within the scope of his employment" or even known about by Sun Valley.

D. Role of Disclosure

The H-2A disclosure requirements serve two purposes: (1) to inform potential applicants for the position (whether U.S. workers or foreign visa workers) of the terms and conditions of employment, so that they can decide whether or not to take the job; and (2) to permit the State Workforce Agency and the DOL Certifying Officer to determine whether the terms and conditions of the job might "adversely affect" and "similarly employed" U.S. workers. 8 U.S.C. § 1188(a)(1). Since there is no dispute that the amounts paid were consistently below the DOL-approved rate for meals published annually, then there can be no argument that any alleged failure to disclose that rate would have changed the Certifying Officer's position on approving Sun Valley's 2015 application.

The only case cited by the Administrator or the ALJ for imposing these penalties was Matter of Global Horizons, 2010-TAE-0002 (Dec. 17, 2010) (Order on Partial Summary Decision). In that case, Judge Berlin imposed back wages and CMPs for failure to disclose accurately meal charges for H-2A workers, discussing the purpose of such disclosures in the following way:

> The purpose of the disclosure is to allow the regulating federal agencies to assure that foreign workers are not being brought into the country to do work at wages below the prevailing wage that would be paid to U.S. citizens and others living in this country with the right to work here. See generally 20 C.F.R. § 655.103(a) (ensure that U.S. workers are not adversely effected); see also, 20 C.F.R.

§655.122(a) (preferential treatment of aliens prohibited). If workers agree to meal prices that afford a profit to the employer, the effect is the same as if the employer paid below-market wages.

Id. at 8 (emphasis added). Judge Berlin granted summary judgment to the employer on that issue, finding that, despite the employer's erroneous disclosure statement that cooking facilities would be provided rather than prepared meals paid for, "there is no indication that the Company in fact exploited the workers (or gained an advantage by hiring them rather than U.S. workers) by overcharging for meals." Id. at 9 (adding that "[m]ost important" is the lack of proof that the employer profited from the preparation and sale of the food).

As discussed above, Sun Valley paid the full amount of the workers' pay checks and received nothing back for meals. The payments by the workers choosing to purchase meals made to Mr. Hernandez: (1) were made to Mr. Hernandez and never to Sun Valley; (2) were below the DOL-approved daily meal rate; and (3) never resulted in a profit even to Mr. Hernandez, much less to Sun Valley. Thus, the pivotal concern for Judge Berlin – that an employer could "cheat" on paying the adverse effect wage rate by procuring profit from the workers to offset those wages – is entirely absent here. The meal purchases from Mr. Hernandez no more reduced Sun Valley's labor costs than having the workers purchase and prepare their own food; neither had any effect whatsoever on Sun Valley's wage costs or resulted in workers receiving "wages below the prevailing wage." In the only other case in which this issue has ever been litigated, the key factor supporting the imposition of this remedy is missing in the present case.[8]

---

[8] At trial, the Administrator argued, and the ALJ eagerly adopted, the position that Sun Valley "profited" by not undertaking costly renovations to increase the size of the kitchen so that all of the workers could prepare their own food simultaneously. First, the H-2A rules do not require such simultaneous preparation, only that one option for meeting the Section 655.122(g) requirement is access to a kitchen. Second, the Global Horizons ruling did not involve potential savings for the employer by not undertaking additional expenses; the workers there literally paid

Although Counsel for the Solicitor argued that "many workers" did not want the meal plan (TR 11:18-19), the Administrator never bothered to establish this contention through worker testimony, nor through any other evidence. In fact, several of the farmworker witnesses specifically testified that: (1) they would have come to New Jersey to work for Sun Valley if the job order had described the meal charge; and (2) they did not object to the prepared meals. See, e.g., TR 62:10-12 ("If you had known about the meal charge, would you still have come to work at Sun Valley? Yes.").[9] Even if the Administrator had endeavored to show that some of the workers in 2015 might have made a different choice, had they known that meals would be prepared for them, they certainly did not show that all of the workers would have done so. Yet, the back wage and CMP claims are for every single worker there, without exception.

The only departure from the workers' expectations is the Administrator's Determination and the ALJ's decision to uphold that determination. No worker coming to the U.S. for an H-2A position would expect to have all of their meals prepared for them, entirely free of charge. That is not how the H-2A program works. But that windfall, totaling roughly $200,000, is precisely what the Administrator and the ALJ have provided to the H-2A workers who were employed by Sun Valley in 2015. Since Sun Valley's U.S. workers not living at the farm had to buy their own groceries or purchase prepared meals at restaurants, the bizarre effect of the ALJ's Decision is to more for the food provided to them than it cost the employer to purchase/prepare it. The theory of this imaginary "super kitchen" shows how far the Administrator and the ALJ had to go to shoehorn this case into the Global Horizons holding – the alternative scenario here was not building a massive kitchen but simply correcting the mistake as to the disclosure. No argument was ever made that Sun Valley would not have been certified had they simply stated that meals would be provided, at a DOL-approved maximum cost.

[9] This witness, Mr. Maldonado, further testified under questioning from Counsel for the Administrator that he did not remember whether his 2014 H-2A contract to pick apples in Michigan had said anything about kitchen access vs. prepared meals – "No, it doesn't specify." TR 73:25-74:2. He was one of very few workers in 2015 who had ever worked in H-2A before.

create "preferential treatment" in favor of the H-2A workers over the U.S. workers; precisely what the INA and the H-2A regulations most seek to avoid. See, e.g., 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(a).

Clearly, some disclosures would change the analysis for the CO and/or for potential workers. See, e.g., Matter of Kevin Opp and Employment USA, 2014-TAE-00003 (Sept. 1, 2015) (characterizing H-2A work as crop agriculture rather than milking activity in a dairy fundamentally changed analysis of position, thus supporting debarment). But the ALJ's decision to uphold the back wages and penalties related to the kitchen vs. prepared-meal disclosure is not supported by this principle. Instead, the purpose of the disclosure was ignored by the Administrator and the ALJ and the only analysis was whether the statement in the job order accurately matched how the meals were made available, with any disparity elevated from a disclosure requirement to a substantive requirement. The back wages and penalties here would be exactly the same if Sun Valley had proposed to provide prepared meals to the workers, with no kitchen available whatsoever, and then deducted the price of the meals directly from the paychecks and never provided any food whatsoever. That patently outrageous act would have been a clear violation of Section 655.122(g), but the calculation of damages would have been exactly the same as what the Administrator and ALJ imposed here – ordering the employer to pay the entire amount paid by the workers for the meals and imposing a full CMP for each worker. It absolutely defies logic that the same punishment should apply here on a minor technical disclosure issue as in that utterly outrageous scenario. The ALJ's assessment of back wages and CMPs for meal charges should be overturned.

E. Estoppel/Laches/Mitigation

The Wage and Hour Investigators were immediately aware in July 2015 of the meal charges and the disconnect between them and the terms of the job order, based on their interviews with the H-2A workers, Mr. Hernandez, and Mr. Hernandez' wife who operated the kitchen. They were asked repeatedly by Sun Valley's owners if there were any concerns, and repeatedly answered that everything looked fine. They made additional visits in August and September 2015, at which time nothing had changed about the kitchen/meals arrangement. The first time the Investigators raised any concerns about the meal charges was in February 2016 at the "final conference" on the investigation. Fundamental fairness should require more of Wage and Hour Investigators.

Courts have at least entertained the idea that WHD inaction might give rise to an estoppel argument in subsequent enforcement actions, although the facts of that case did not ultimately support the argument. See Adminstrator v. John Peroulis & Sons Sheep, Inc., 2012-TAE-0004 (October 23, 2013) (Decision and Order) at 33. In that case, the employer was fully aware of the issues giving rise to the eventual determination of violation by the Division, the issue was whether WHD had acquiesced to such known violations. Id. Here, by contrast, the Investigator failed to speak up to advise the employer of his findings in a timely manner. Clearly, H-2A employers are responsible for ensuring their own compliance with the countless applicable regulations, but if nothing else, the prolonged delay in raising this issue should call into question the Administrator's later claim as to the urgency and seriousness of the alleged violation.

IV. Soft Drinks

The Decision orders Sun Valley to pay roughly $70,000 in "back wages" to provide free soft drinks. There is no plausible argument that the H-2A rules requires such an outcome. The consistent testimony at trial was that water was available at meals and at all times in the fields during work, with the Court engaging in extensive questioning of the Administrator's witness, Mr. Hernandez on the subject – when it was available, was it filtered, that no one ever complained to him about it, how he kept the water cool with ice and coolers, how he would refill the containers throughout the day, etc. TR 236:8-237:11. One after another, workers testified that there was, in fact, drinking water available to them in the fields. See, e.g., TR 265:4-5. Some testified that they preferred the taste of bottled or canned beverages over the water, but there was no testimony nor any other evidence that there was anything wrong with the water. In fact, the water was tested prior to the 2015 season (as it is prior to every season) and found to meet all applicable standards for potability. TR 717:21-718:4; 718:20-25.

Mr. Hernandez' decision to sell drinks that he purchased was purely between himself and the workers. No money transferred from workers to Sun Valley. None. Counsel for the Administrator made deliberate and repeated reference to a "company store" in a ham-handed attempt to be inflammatory, but their own Investigator clearly testified that drinks were purchased from Mr. Hernandez and not from Sun Valley. TR 561:20-21; see also TR 162:4-6 (questioning from the Court about "Whose store was it?" and "Who had the store, who owned the store?" "Mr. Agustin.").

Water was available – free, cold, and government approved – the workers understood that they were purchasing drinks from "Mr. Agustin" and not from Sun Valley, no action was taken against workers by Sun Valley for drinking more, less, or no soft drinks, and nothing about Mr. Hernandez's drink sales had any impact on Sun Valley's bottom-line, either profit or loss. The workers were entirely free to purchase some drinks or no drinks at all. Furthermore, it would set a dangerous precedent to require an employer to provide unlimited free energy drinks to its workers. Obviously, the H-2A regulations do not require employers to do that, but in the interest of preserving the health of workers, that would be a disastrous thing to require here.

Investigator Perez stated with certainty and clarity that "The workers weren't purchasing the drinks from Sun Valley." TR 561:20-21. He testified with far less clarity when asked if purchasing drinks from someone other than one's employer in any way increased or decreased the employer's duty to pay wages to the worker. TR 561:23-566:14. Nor was he able to explain why the Administrator was seeking to require Sun Valley to pay the workers based on Mr. Hernandez's estimated profit for beer purchased and consumed by the workers but was seeking the full cost paid for non-alcoholic drinks, including energy drinks like Monster and Red Bull. TR 566:15-23.

He offered only that energy drinks like Monster were "necessarily required for subsistence" because "it is probably water-based." TR 566:20-567:13. In his opinion, Red Bull was "possibly" required for subsistence, although he acknowledged that he did not personally consume it but somehow survived the deprivation. TR 567:17-568:21. He further conceded that water was available to workers at all times, but agreed that "people can choose drinks that they want" other than water, even when water is "readily available." TR 566:24-567:10, 569:4-7. No testimony was presented by the Administrator for why it was necessary for workers to purchase any beer or soft drinks if they did not wish to do so, and workers testified that they purchased their own drinks at wholesale prices when Sun Valley took them to the nearby store (free-of-charge).

In all, Sun Valley complied in full with its duty to provide free, cool, potable water to its workers. Nothing in the H-2A regulations (nor in FLSA, OSHA, or any other Departmental regulation) justifies this request for free soft drinks and energy drinks. The Court should reject the Administrator's overreach and dismiss this portion of the claim for back wages and CMPs.

V. Early Departures

The next largest source of the Administrator's demand for money from Sun Valley involves a group of 19 H-2A workers who walked off the job after only a few days of work at the beginning of the contract period. The workers had been harvesting asparagus and abandoned the worksite and chose to return home. The Decision claims that "the employee witnesses were consistent in describing the heated events at the meeting" that followed their announcement that they were going to stop working. D.44. But the preceding paragraph of the Decision directly undercuts this factual conclusion. Id. One worker claimed that Russel Marino, Jr. "tried to hit him," but none of the other workers at that meeting testified to that – an event that would certainly have been memorable if it had actually happened. Id. The only consistency in the testimony is that the workers chose to stop working, there were raised voices on both sides, and there was a language barrier between the two sides of the discussion. The testimony was far from "consistent" that the workers were actually fired – the ALJ admits that it would have been "illogical" for Sun Valley to do that in the middle of their critical harvesting season. Id. The selection of quotes used in the Decision scrupulously avoids pages of testimony from the workers[10] in which they testify that they said at the meeting that: (1) the work was too difficult for them; (2) they did not have prior experience in agriculture, generally, or in harvesting asparagus, specifically; and (3) they wished to go home.

Acknowledging the weakness of this conclusion as to "actual discharge," the Decision offers some alternative theories regarding "constructive discharge" as well. D.44-46. The main problem with that is that the workers did not testify that they quit because of "housing conditions" or "meal charges." In fact, the housing had just been inspected before the season began and, clearly, had passed that inspection. The broken screens and missing trash can lid identified months

[10] The workers testified from Mexico under the close supervision of an anti-employer group, CDM, which represented to the workers that it was acting as the U.S. Department of Labor. The workers gave contradictory and demonstrably false testimony as to the extent of their interactions with CDM, as did the WHD witnesses regarding any coordination between the group and DOL.

later by the WHD Investigator were the result of workers having lived there for months – all of which, by definition, occurred after these 19 workers departed less than 2 weeks into the season.

Constructive discharge is necessarily measured on an objective standard. Were the working conditions "so unpleasant or difficult that a reasonable person would have felt compelled to resign"? Stucke v. City of Philadelphia, 685 Fed. Appx. 150, 155 (3d Cir., Apr. 12, 2017) (reasonable person would not have felt so); see also, Duffy v. Paper Magic Group, 265 F.3d 163, 169 (3d Cir. 2001) (rejecting "constructive termination" claim where "the alleged conduct would not compel a reasonable person to resign"). The argument that the conditions at Sun Valley (whether off in the future or at the same time) were "so intolerable that a reasonable person would have felt compelled to resign" Pennsylvania State Police v. Suders, 542 U.S. 129, 147 (2004) (cited at D.44), falls apart because the vast majority of Sun Valley's H-2A workers were living under the exact same conditions and performing the exact same work and continued working there for the entire season. That may not be dispositive in every case, but it certainly diminishes the claim that any "reasonable person would have felt compelled" to take this action, and suggests instead, that these workers were "unhappy with the general nature of work assignments," something the Decision concedes is not constructive discharge. D.45.

This distinction matters because if the workers left by choice, that would terminate the employer's three-fourths guarantee to them under 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(n). Only if a worker is terminated without cause would the employer be responsible for additional months of pay for work never performed. The Decision puts it well – it would have been "illogical" for Sun Valley to terminate these workers at the peak of harvesting, costing the farm untold thousands of dollars in lost crops. Yet, the Decision concludes that such an "illogical" act is precisely what happened and orders Sun Valley to pay $142,728.22 for work never performed. D.54.

A small, but notable, part of the three-fourths guarantee claim relates to five individual workers who departed later in the season. On top of everything else – the early season walk out and the ongoing Wage and Hour Investigation – the Summer of 2015 was marked by excessive rain that caused an infection in Sun Valley's pepper plants, one of their primary crops. With no peppers to harvest, 44 workers were sent home near the end of the season after they had been offered three-fourths of the hours set forth in the job order. The five workers in question, for whom the Administrator seeks back pay, had been sick or injured for some period of time before that – as addressed in testimony at the hearing but not acknowledged in the Decision – meaning that there were hours "offered" that were not hours "worked" under the contract. The Decision simply lumps these workers in with the 19 who quit in increasing the back wages claimed, failing to account for hours offered but not worked. The three-fourths guarantee requires only that the hours be "offered" not "worked." 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(i). The ALJ failed to consider this and the assessment of back wages and CMPs was erroneous for these 5 workers.

V. Remaining Allegations

The remainder of the claims against Sun Valley are a hodge-podge of theories and allegations that will be briefed more fully on appeal but merit a brief discussion here. These issues can be briefed more fully later, with most involving CMPs only and not back wages, except as discussed below.

A. Beer Sales

The Decision bases its claim for Sun Valley to pay workers $8,972.61 for the perceived profit by Mr. Hernandez with respect to the sale of beer. D.42. There is no finding or proof that Mr. Hernandez was acting in an agency capacity with regards to beer sales. The ALJ stated that "Respondent is unable to rebut the Administrator's calculations as unreasonable," without any mention of the arguments made as to why the Administrator's arguments were clearly unreasonable (Investigator admitted using incorrect basis for costs of beer – wrong brand, wrong store, wrong price; vague estimates for number of beers purchased; all of the workers would receive "back wages" despite testimony from workers who did not purchase any beer, etc.). See, e.g., Cross-Examination of WHD Investigator Perez: "Q. What was Sun Valley's profit for the beer? A. They didn't – they weren't the ones selling the beer. Agustin Hernandez was selling the beer." Tr.638. If the Administrator believed that Mr. Hernandez improperly profited through his sale of beer, it should have brought that claim against him rather than dropping its claims against him pre-trial and claiming money from Sun Valley, instead. The finding of almost $9,000 for this "violation" should be reversed and dismissed.

B. Housing & Transportation

There are some CMP-only claims included in the Decision, with respect to the number of bathroom sinks with hot water, torn screens, and van drivers, that will be identified briefly here, and discussed further in Respondent's brief on appeal later. The condition of the housing resulted from lack of care by the workers living there, but more importantly, could have been remedied immediately if the WHD Investigator had been interested in the workers' living conditions rather than in assessing CMPs and raised the issue to Sun Valley in a timely manner.

C. Departure Notices

Pursuant to 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(n), an employer is obligated to report to the Departments of Labor and Homeland Security when a worker terminates employment under an H-2A contract more than 30 days before the end date of need. After consulting with their filing agent, Sun Valley prepared forms for the workers to use to report those early departures in April 2015. Out of concern that the workers would face future repercussions from DHS or Consular Officers if they were reported as having quit the job for which they received a visa only days into the season, the workers were given the option to give some other reason on the form if they chose to. The ALJ and the Administrator construe this as some nefarious effort to have the workers "waive" their three-fourths guarantee. As shown above and throughout the proceedings before the ALJ, at no time did Sun Valley use those forms as proof to the Investigator or the ALJ for why the workers departed early. No attempt was made to secure a "waiver" of the three-fourths guarantee through those documents – there was no three-fourths guarantee at issue because the workers quit the job. In the grand scheme of a case imposing nearly $600,000 in liability, a single $1,350 CMP is fairly small, but this is a particularly preposterous claim.

VI. Conclusion

The ALJ's Decision adopted, nearly unchallenged and unchanged, the Administrator's claims in this case. Those claims attempt to bootstrap what was, at worst, a miscommunication regarding meals[11] and a misunderstanding arising from a work stoppage. WHD Investigators appeared at the farm during the Summer of 2015 but did not disclose any concerns with operations until long after the season was over. By waiting, the Administrator could assess nearly $600,000 in "back wages" and CMPs for the Investigator's conclusions. Jump ahead 4 years, and now the ALJ has signed off on the Administrator's theories, across the board, even though they ignore key evidence in the case and create new requirements within the H-2A program that the Department chose not to create when writing those regulations (free meals and free soda, for example). Based on the numerous factual and legal arguments set forth above and to be discussed in their brief on appeal, Sun Valley respectfully urges the Board to reverse the ALJ's Decision and rescind these penalties that will otherwise put this family farm out of business forever.

[11] There was significant testimony at trial (not referenced in the Decision) that workers had access to the kitchen, that several prepared their own meals there, and no worker asked to prepare their own meals and was refused that right. Sun Valley is expressly not waiving those arguments that the job order was accurate but, rather, addressing the errors in the Decision relating to meals purchased by the workers from Mr. Hernandez.

ADMINISTRATOR'S MOTION FOR EXTENSION OF TIME

The Administrator of the Wage and Hour Division ("Administrator"), through undersigned counsel, respectfully requests that the Administrative Review Board ("Board") grant an extension of time of 21 days, until March 20, 2020 to file her response brief in the above-captioned matter. In support of this motion, counsel for the Administrator states:

1. The Administrator received the Board's December 6, 2019 Notice of Appeal and Order Establishing Briefing Schedule. On December 11, 2019, Respondent filed a Motion to Extend Briefing Schedule, requesting an additional 28 days in which to file its opening brief. On December 19, 2019, the Board issued an Order Granting Motion for Extension of Time to File Opening Brief granting Respondent's request. As a result of the revised Order, Respondent's opening brief was due January 31, 2020 and the Administrator must file her response brief by February 28, 2020.

2. The Administrator is requesting an extension of time because of regulatory and litigation matters competing for her counsels' time, in addition to unexpected personal leave commitments. In particular, the undersigned attorney faces competing time demands associated with a Department of Labor rulemaking matter. She will also be on leave from February 4, 2020 through February 11, 2020 to attend her mother's funeral.

The Deputy Associate Solicitor for Fair Labor Standards—who is responsible for the first-line review of this brief as she continues to act as a supervisor on appellate cases due to the retirement of the Counsel for Appellate Litigation—is, in addition to handling the numerous duties of her own position, responsible for reviewing the Administrator's response brief in Administrator v. Deggeller Attractions, Inc., ARB Case No. 2020-0004, due on February 6, as well as the Secretary's response brief in Scalia v. State of Alaska, 9th Cir. Case No. 19-35824, due on February 24.

3. This is the first extension of time requested by the Administrator in this matter.

4. Counsel for Respondent consents to this motion.

For these reasons, the undersigned counsel respectfully requests that the Board grant an extension of time of 21 days, until March 20, 2020 for submission of the Administrator's response brief.

SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT 11

ARGUMENT 13

I. THE ALJ CORRECTLY CONCLUDED THAT RESPONDENT VIOLATED 20 C.F.R. 655.122(g), (p), AND (q) BY MAKING FALSE PROMISES ABOUT KITCHEN ACCESS AND FAILING TO DISLCOSE MEAL CHARGES AND, AS A RESULT OF THESE VIOLATIONS, AWARDED BACK WAGES. 13

Page

A. The ALJ Correctly Held That Respondent Violated Sections 655.122(g) and (q) by Not Providing the Promised Kitchen Access. 15

B. The ALJ Correctly Held That Respondent Violated Sections 655.122 (g), (p), and (q) by Falling to Disclose Meal Charges in the Job Orders and Making Undisclosed Deductions for Meals from Workers' Wages. 17

i. The ALJ Correctly Held That Hernandez Acted as Respondent's Agent in Administering the Meal Plan and Charging Workers for the Meals. 18

ii. The ALJ Correctly Held That Hernandez Unlawfully Made Deductions—Either Constructive or Actual—from the Workers' Pay. 21

C. The ALJ Properly Awarded Back Wages of $128,285 for the Meal Plan Disclosure and Deductions Violations. 23

II. THE ALJ CORRECTLY CONCLUDED THAT RESPONDENT VIOLATED 20 C.F.R. 655.122(p) BY SELLING DRINKS AT A PROFIT AND IN VIOLATION OF STATE OF LAW AND, AS A RESULT OF THESE VIOLATIONS, AWARDED BACK WAGES. ... 28

A. The ALJ Correctly Held That Respondent Violated Section 655.122(p) by Deducting Payments for Non-Alcoholic Beverages and Beer from Workers' Wages. 29

B. The ALJ Properly Awarded $64,960 in Back Wages for the Non-Alcoholic Beverages the Farmworkers Purchased. 31

Page

C. The ALJ Properly Awarded $8,972.61 in Back Wages for the Profit Hernandez Made on the Beer Sales. 34

III. THE ALJ PROPERLY ASSESSED CMPs FOR RESPONDENT'S MEAL PLAN AND DRINK VIOLATIONS....36

IV. THE ALJ CORRECTLY CONCLUDED THAT RESPONDENT VIOLATED 20 C.F.R. 655.122(i)(1) BY DISCHARGING TWENTY-FOUR WORKER BEFORE THEY HAD WORKED AT LEAST THREE-FOURTHS OF THE WORKDAYS SPECIFIED IN THE WORK CONTRACT AND, AS A RESULT OF THESE VIOLATIONS AWARDED BACK WAGES AND ASSESSED CMPs....41

A. The ALJ Correctly Held That Because Respondent Terminated or Otherwise Constructively Discharged Nineteen Workers in May 2015, Respondent Violated the Three-Fourths Guarantee for Such Workers....42

i. Substantial Evidence Supports the ALJ's Finding That in May 2015, Respondent Terminated Nineteen Workers Without Cause. 42

ii. Substantial Evidence Supports the ALJ's Finding That Even Assuming, Arguendo, Respondent Did Not Terminate the Workers in May 2015, Respondent Constructively Discharged Such Workers.....44

B. The ALJ Correctly Held That in August 2015, Respondent Laid Off Four Workers Without Meeting the Three-Fourths Guarantee for Such Workers....49

Page

C. The ALJ Correctly Held That Respondent Violated the Three-Fourths Guarantee Concerning Jose Islas Larraga. 50

D. The ALJ Properly Awarded $142,728 in Back Wages and Assessed a Single CMP of $1,350....51

V. THE ALJ CORRECTLY CONCLUDED THAT RESPONDENT VIOLATED 29 C.F.R. 501.5 BY ATTEMPTING TO OBTAIN WAIVERS FROM ITS EMPLOYERS OF THE THREE-FOURTHS GUARANTEE AND, AS A RESULT OF THESE VIOLATIONS, ASSESSED CMPs....52

VI. THE ALJ CORRECTLY CONCLUDED THAT RESPONDENT VIOLATED 20 C.F.R. 655.122(d)(1) BY PROVIDING INADEQUATE HOUSING AND, AS A RESULT OF THESE VIOLATIONS, ASSESSED CMPs....54

A. The ALJ Correctly Held That Respondent Failed to Maintain Worker Housing in the Conditions Required 54

B. The ALJ Properly Assessed $3,150 In CMPs... 56

VII. THE ALJ CORRECTLY CONCLUDED THAT RESPONDENT VIOLATED 20 C.F.R. 655.122(h)(4) THROUGH ITS USE OF SUBSTANDARD TRANSPORTATION AND UNLICENSED DRIVERS AND, AS A RESULT OF THESE VIOLATIONS, ASSESSED CMPs....57

A. The ALJ Properly Held That Respondent Used Substandard Transportation and Unlicensed Drivers....57

B. The ALJ Properly Assessed $7500 in CMPs. 58

ADMINISTRATOR'S RESPONSE BRIEF

This case arises under the H-2A provisions of the Immigration and Nationality Act, 8 U.S.C. 1101(a)(15)(H)(ii)(a), 8 U.S.C. 1188, and the U.S. Department of Labor's ("Department") H-2A regulations, 29 C.F.R. Part 501; 20 C.F.R. Part 655, Subpart B. On October 28, 2019, Administrative Law Judge Theresa Timlin ("the ALJ") issued a Decision and Order ("D&O") affirming in part and modifying in part the Administrator of the Department's Wage and Hour Division's ("Administrator") findings. The ALJ ruled that Respondent, Sun Valley Orchards, LLC, violated six of the H-2A program's requirements and, as a result, Respondent owed back wages and civil money penalties ("CMPs"). The Administrative Review Board ("ARB" or "Board") should affirm the ALJ's decision in its entirety.

JURISDICTION

The Board has jurisdiction to review an ALJ's decision and issue the final determination of the Secretary of Labor under the H-2A program. U.S. Dep't of Labor, Sec'y's Order No. 01-2019 (Feb. 15, 2019), 84 Fed. Reg. 13072, 2019 WL 1453417 (Apr. 3, 2019); 29 C.F.R. 501.42.

ISSUES TO BE REVIEWED[1]

1. Whether the ALJ correctly concluded that Respondent violated 20 C.F.R. 655.122(g), (p), and (q) by making false promises about kitchen access and failing to disclose meal charges and, as a result of these violations, awarded back wages?
2. Whether the ALJ correctly concluded that Respondent violated 20 C.F.R. 655.122(p) by selling drinks at a profit and in violation of state law and, as a result of these violations, awarded back wages?

[1] The issues to be reviewed encompass those identified by the Board in its Notice of Appeal, but are phrased and organized slightly differently.

3. Whether the ALJ correctly assessed CMPs for Respondent's meal and drink violations?
4. Whether the ALJ correctly concluded that Respondent violated 20 C.F.R. 655.122(i)(1) by discharging twenty-four workers before they had worked at least three-fourths of the workdays specified in the work contract and, as a result of these violations, awarded back wages and assessed CMPs?
5. Whether the ALJ correctly concluded that Respondent violated 29 C.F.R. 501.5 by attempting to obtain waivers from its employees of the three-fourths guarantee and, as a result of these violations, assessed CMPs?
6. Whether the ALJ correctly concluded that Respondent violated 20 C.F.R. 655.122(d)(1) by providing inadequate housing and, as a result of these violations, assessed CMPs?
7. Whether the ALJ correctly concluded that Respondent violated 20 C.F.R. 655.122(h)(4) through its use of substandard transportation and unlicensed drivers and, as a result of these violations, assessed CMPs?

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

A. Statement of Facts

Respondent, Sun Valley Orchards, LLC, is one of New Jersey's largest produce growers, with about a dozen fields totaling at least 2,500 acres. PX-15, at 383:23-384:6; JX-1, at 18. Sun Valley is owned and operated by four members of the Marino family: brothers Russell Jr. and Joseph, their uncle Harry, and their father Russell, Sr. Tr. 787:18-21; ALJ Ex. 1 ¶ 2. Sun Valley's management also includes Agustin Hernandez, who is the lead supervisor of Sun Valley's farmworkers and has worked for Sun Valley for twenty-seven years. Tr. 170:24-171:2, 172:9-13, 799:19-23; PX-15, at 425:23-25.

Respondent filed two job orders with the Department to hire 100 H-2A workers in 2015, covering overlapping time periods: April 13, 2015 to October 10, 2015, JX-1, and June 1, 2015 to October 10, 2015, JX-3, (collectively, the "job orders" or "job offers"). The job orders represented to prospective H-2A workers that Respondent would "furnish free cooking and kitchen facilities to those workers who are entitled to live in the employer['s] housing so that workers may prepare their own meals." JX-1, at 2, 9 ¶ 14; JX-3, at 43, 50 ¶ 14. Respondent checked a series of boxes on the job orders identifying whether certain deductions would be made from workers' pay. For the box corresponding to "Meals," Respondent checked "No" to indicate that it would not provide and charge for meals. JX-1, at 4 ¶ 17; JX-3, at 45 ¶ 17. Nowhere in the job orders did Respondent state that it would provide meals and charge workers for the meals, or the amount that it would charge. The Department approved the job orders, and Respondent used them to hire approximately 147 workers during the 2015 growing season.

At Respondent's farm, Hernandez supervised the farmworkers and virtually every aspect of the farmworkers' lives and work. Tr. 172:9-13. Among other duties, Hernandez oriented Respondent's workers when they arrived at the farm and told them the rules, D&O 11; Tr. 174:19-175:24, maintained the workers' housing facilities, D&O 11; Tr. 172:22-173:20, sold Respondent's workers meals and drinks, D&O 11; Tr. 190:24-191:1, 223:25-224:1, oversaw the transportation of workers between Respondent's housing and the fields, D&O 11; Tr. 205:5-15, and distributed pay to Respondent's workers, Tr. 211:24-212:9.

i. Respondent's Inaccessible Kitchen; Undisclosed Meal Plan; and Sale of Drinks to Workers

The kitchen that Respondent promised in its two job orders to furnish to its workers was not large enough to allow for Respondent's large workforce to cook its own meals, D&O 12; Tr. 175:22-176:13, 743:25-744:8, particularly given that workers returned to the dormitories around the same times to eat meals during and after twelve-hour shifts in the fields, Tr. 175:22-176:6, 804:2-4; see also PX-7, at 188:23-189:2-6; PX-15, at 447:10-14. (The workers did not have a choice as to when to work because Hernandez set their work schedules. E.g., Tr. 17:19-22.) Instead of providing the promised kitchen access, Respondent tasked Hernandez with managing a meal plan for the workers. D&O 10. Respondent instructed Hernandez to buy groceries and hire cooks to provide workers with meals for a fee. Id.; see also Tr. 176:24-177:10. Respondent's workers all participated in Respondent's meal plan for at least some of the season. Tr. 263:24-264:18, 444:6-445:5, 804:8-9, 967:13-22. The workers participated in the meal plan because, as Hernandez and his wife and cook Elia Pinon admitted, the workers "cannot cook their own meals in the kitchen." Tr. 176:4-6; see also PX-19, at 809.

While managing the kitchen and providing the meal plan was primarily delegated to Hernandez, Respondent continued to be heavily involved in the meal plan's administration. D&O 10; see also, e.g., Tr. 186:25-187:2, 738:10-12, 742:22-743:8, 808:8. Respondent paid the kitchen's utility bills. D&O 10. To help Hernandez administer the meal plan program, Respondent's payroll office provided him with company payroll sheets (with the header "Sun Valley Orchards LLC") for employees to sign when they paid for meals. PX-17-2, at 799-800; Tr. 181:10-183:3. Moreover, Russell Marino, Jr. followed up with Hernandez during the season to ensure that Hernandez was creating and maintaining these records regarding who participated in the meal plan. Tr. 186:25-187:2, 187:7-10. Hernandez did not, however, maintain any records relating to the meal plan beyond who participated. Tr. 250:11-251:4, 463:7-14.

Hernandez also sold non-alcoholic beverages and beer, along with other small items, to the workers from a store located inside Respondent's kitchen on Respondent's property. D&O 10; Tr. 358:8-359:16. Hernandez also sold soft drinks to workers several times a day while he supervised them in the fields. D&O 16; see also, e.g., PX-7, at 176:7-177:4; Tr. 22:16-22, 139:22, 195:9-11. The workers bought these beverages, in part, because at times Respondent did not provide drinking water and, even when water was available, workers were concerned about the water's taste and cleanliness. D&O 18-19; Tr. 19:5-9, 91:14-21, 139:21-22, 262:6-13. Hernandez also sold beer at the company store, even though neither he nor Respondent had a license to do so. D&O 7-8; Tr. 97:17-21, 145:7; PX-20, at 823 ¶ 21; PX-20, at 828 ¶ 5. Hernandez sold these non-alcoholic drinks and beer to workers at a profit, but did not maintain records of these sales. D&O 16; Tr. 450:20-23.

ii. Respondent's Termination of Workers and False Resignation Forms

The workers engaged in the hard work of harvesting produce. D&0 20. Clean drinking water and clean bathroom facilities were not consistently available to the workers, especially while they were working in the fields. Id. In May, a group of nineteen workers sought a meeting with Respondent's management to raise concerns about their living and working conditions, including the lack of drinking water, accessible kitchen facilities, and transportation to a laundromat or store (the farm is geographically isolated). Tr. 22:23-34:6, 106:18-107:4, 122:7-13, 147:9-15. When Russell Marino, Jr. arrived at the meeting, he was "very angry" and "screaming." Tr. 35:4-5, 21-22. He did not afford the workers the opportunity to explain their concerns, and instead fired them on the spot. E.g., Tr. 39:8-10, 107-18-20, 125:11-13.

Russell Marino, Jr. left the meeting and, as he put it, "started the process of letting the guys go." Tr. 768:9-11. He distributed forms that did not give the workers the option of indicating that they had been fired and, instead, falsely memorialized that the workers were resigning. D&O 20-21; see also Tr. 732:10-12, 768:24-769:4. Russell Marino, Jr. and Hernandez ensured that each of the nineteen workers filled out and signed the forms, explaining that the forms were mandatory to receive transportation to Mexico, "in order for [the workers] not to have any problems," and to prevent "caus[ing] … trouble to the company." Tr. 108:18-19, 149:4-6, 769:21-23. The workers returned to Mexico shortly after signing the forms. ALJ Ex. 1 ¶¶ 27, 35.

In August 2015, Respondent laid off another group of workers after a crop failure reduced the amount of available work. D&O 21; Tr. 207:11-14, 746:15-21, 748:11-14; 754:23-24. Respondent had those workers sign the same departure forms that falsely memorialized that the workers had "resign[ed their] job[s]." JX-9, at 152; see also Tr. 272:3-10, 274:9-12, 747:3-8, 747:17-20.

Consistent with the false information that Respondent directed the workers to provide on the departure forms, Respondent sent required notifications to government agencies that falsely stated the reason that these employees' employment ended. D&O 20; Tr. 409:5-12, 748:20-24, 753:12-754:2. Additionally, Respondent did not send a notice at all for one worker, Jose Islas Larraga, who stopped working as of June 9, 2015, four months before the end of the job order. Tr. 419:16-22, 436:4-10, 558:9-561:10.

iii. Respondent's Substandard Housing and Dangerously Deficient Work Transport

Respondent provided inadequate housing to its workers. The dormitories they lived in had dirty bathrooms without adequate hot water for all the workers. D&O 18-19, 21. The windows and doors lacked screens and the garbage cans lacked lids, causing problems with flies and other pests in the dormitories. Id. Respondent transported the workers from the dormitory area to the fields and shuttled them throughout the fields in unsafe school buses, driven by unlicensed drivers. D&O 8-9, 21; Tr. 104:13-17, 377:1-9, 377:15-21, 380:13-381:1.

B. ALJ Proceedings and Decision

On June 22, 2016, after an investigation by the Wage and Hour Division, the Administrator issued a Notice of Determination against Respondent alleging multiple violations of the H-2A program, assessing back wages and civil money penalties. Respondent timely contested the Notice of Determination and requested a hearing.

On December 23, 2016, the Administrator referred the matter to the Office of Administrative Law Judges for docketing. After a July 2017 evidentiary hearing, the ALJ issued a Decision and Order on October 28, 2019 Affirming in Part and Modifying in Part the Administrator's Findings. The ALJ found the Administrator's determination of violations, back-wage awards, and CMP assessments to be "reasonable and accurate," except for the back-wage calculation for the sale of non-alcoholic beverages, which she reduced slightly, and the CMP assessed for a mattress violation, which she found was not supported by the evidence. D&O 54. Accordingly, the ALJ modified, in part, the Administrator's finding, but held that Respondent owed a total of $344,945.80 in back wages and $211,800 in civil money penalties. D&O 53-54.

On November 27, 2019, Respondent petitioned the Board for review of the ALJ's Decision and Order. On December 6, 2019, the Board granted the petition for review.

STANDARD OF REVIEW

The Board reviews an ALJ's legal conclusions de novo and acts with "all the powers [the Secretary] would have in making the initial decision." 5 U.S.C. 557(b); see also WHD v. Seasonal Ag. Servs., Inc., ARB No. 15-023, 2016 WL 5887688, at *5 (ARB Sept. 30, 2016) ("The Board has plenary power to review an ALJ's legal conclusions de novo[.]"). The Board will affirm an ALJ's factual findings if supported by substantial evidence. WHD v. Fernandez Farms, Inc., ARB No. 2016-0097, 2019 WL 4924120, at *1 (ARB Sept. 16, 2019).

SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

Respondent used the H-2A program to recruit workers to its farm with the promise of free and convenient cooking and kitchen facilities, safe and habitable living conditions, and a guarantee that the workers would be allowed to work and receive pay for at least three-fourths of the growing season. Nearly 150 H-2A and domestic workers relied on the promises in Respondent's job offers. These workers arrived, however, to find no kitchen facilities available, charges for meals, substandard housing conditions, and unsafe transportation. When nineteen of these workers attempted to raise concerns about these living and working conditions to Respondent early in the growing season, they were fired and then instructed to sign forms falsely stating that they had resigned for personal reasons. Respondent also laid off dozens of other workers later in the season and similarly instructed these workers to sign forms falsely stating that they had resigned. Respondent lied to government agencies about the reasons for the workers' departures.

The ALJ properly held that Respondent committed serious violations of the H-2A program. Specifically, Respondent's undisclosed meal charges and false promises about kitchen access violated 20 C.F.R. 655.122(g), (p), and (q); its charges for drinks sold at a profit and in violation of state law violated section 655.122(p); its discharge of workers before they had met their three-fourths guarantee violated section 655.122(i); its attempt to have workers waive that guarantee violated 29 C.F.R. 501.5; its inadequate housing violated section 655.122(d)(1); and its substandard transportation and use of unlicensed drivers violated section 655.122(h)(4). D&O 54-55. The ALJ reasoned, "serious violations call for serious penalties" and properly held that Respondent owed a total of $344,945.80 in back wages and $211,800 in civil money penalties for the above violations. Id. at 53-54. The Board should affirm the ALJ's holdings in full.

ARGUMENT

I. THE ALJ CORRECTLY CONCLUDED THAT RESPONDENT VIOLATED 20 C.F.R. 655.122(g), (p), AND (q) BY MAKING FALSE PROMISES ABOUT KITCHEN ACCESS AND FAILING TO DISCLOSE MEAL CHARGES AND, AS A RESULT OF THESE VIOLATIONS, AWARDED BACK WAGES.

Employers seeking the benefits of the H-2A program must agree to comply with the conditions and requirements of the H-2A program. The H-2A regulations require an employer to either:

(1) "provide each worker with three meals a day"; or

(2) "furnish free and convenient cooking and kitchen facilities to the workers that will enable the workers to prepare their own meals."

20 C.F.R. 655.122(g). In the job order that it submits to the Department for approval and to prospective H-2A workers, the employer must disclose which of these two options it will do. Id. If an employer choses to provide workers with three meals a day, it may charge workers for those meals, but must disclose in the job order "the charge, if any, to the worker for such meals." Id. Relatedly, section 655.122(p)(1) provides that the employer's "job offer must specify all deductions not required by law which the employer will make from the worker's paycheck," such as deductions for meals. Id. at 655.122(p)(1). Section 655.122(q) further provides that the employer must provide workers with a copy of the work contract

(here, the job offer, 20 C.F.R. 655.103; PX-20, at 816-817 ¶ 3), when workers apply for an H-2A visa and when domestic workers arrive at the job. 20 C.F.R. 655.122(q). "At a minimum, the work contract must contain all of the provisions required by" section 655.122, including disclosure of any meals deductions. Id. at 655.122(q). These disclosures ensure that workers have an accurate representation of their pay and benefits before accepting a job and traveling to the United States.

Here, Respondent's two job orders each stated that Respondent "will furnish free cooking and kitchen facilities … so that workers may prepare their own meals." JX 1, JX 3. Russell Marino, Jr. signed both job orders in his role as Respondent's "owner/manager," and the job orders were provided to both the Department and prospective H-2A workers. Id. The substantial evidence shows, however, that Respondent failed to do as it promised in the job orders and instead, through its agent Hernandez, charged workers for meals without having previously disclosed to the workers that it would impose these charges, and deducted the payment for the meals from the workers' pay. Therefore, the ALJ correctly concluded that Respondent violated these regulatory requirements. D&O 35-40. Because these undisclosed meal charges reduced the workers' wages below the applicable minimum wage, the ALJ properly awarded back wages corresponding to the amount of the meal charges. The back-wage award in this amount ensures that the workers earn their applicable minimum wage. Id. at 39. The Board should affirm that holding and back-wage award.

A. The ALJ Correctly Held That Respondent Violated Sections 655.122(g) and (q) by Not Providing the Promised Kitchen Access.

In its job orders, Respondent promised to furnish workers with free and convenient cooking and kitchen facilities. JX-1 at 9, ¶ 14; JX-3, at 43, 50 ¶ 14. This promise satisfied Respondent's regulatory requirement and formed part of its contract with workers, and was therefore binding on Respondent. 20 C.F.R. 655.122(g), (q). However, as the record clearly demonstrates and as the ALJ found, when the workers arrived at Respondent's farm, they discovered that Respondent would not provide them with kitchen access, but instead would provide meals through a meal plan costing each worker $75 to $80 a week. D&O 35; Tr. 176:4-13, 263:24-264:3; PX-13, at 339:5-340:4; PX-7, at 173:21-174:13. Hernandez, in charge of the kitchen for Respondent, testified that workers could not cook their own meals in the kitchen because it was too small. Tr. 175:22-176:13. His wife, Elia Pinon, who worked in Respondent's kitchen, explained that "[w]orkers are not allowed to enter the kitchen to cook their own meals." PX-19, at 809. The workers also understood that cooking their own meals in the kitchen was forbidden. E.g., Tr. 92:19-95:3; PX-13, at 339:5-340:4. Some employees asked to use the kitchen and were specifically told no, PX-5, at 127:12-17; others observed without needing to ask that there was no room for workers to prepare their own meals alongside the kitchen staff preparing meals for the meal plan, PX-11, at 321:9-11. Accordingly, the evidence does not support Respondent's contention, Resp't Br. 8, that the employees had kitchen access but some employees just never asked to use the kitchen.

Respondent's additional attempt to overcome this substantial evidence is equally unavailing. Respondent contends that some workers testified they were "allowed to and actually did use the kitchen to store and prepare food." Resp't Br. 8 (citing Tr. 176:17-20). The evidence in the record, however, tells a different story. The testimony on which Respondent relies for this point is from Hernandez; he testified that workers could only sometimes store very small items in the kitchen, such as a container of milk. Tr. 176:17-22. Moreover, in that same testimony, Hernandez admitted that workers were not allowed to use the kitchen and there was no room in the kitchen refrigerators for the workers to store food. Tr. 175:22-176:22. A few workers testified that they did manage to cook, but on a hot plate set up in their bedroom that they bought with their own money after their requests to use the kitchen were denied. PX-34, at 1103-1106; Tr. 263:24-264:18. Taken together, substantial evidence in the record supports the ALJ's finding that "the express terms of the job orders … were clearly not in line with the realities facing the farmworkers upon arrival at Respondent's dormitory" and, therefore, Respondent failed to provide workers with the kitchen access promised in the job orders. D&O 35-36. Accordingly, the ALJ correctly held that Respondent violated sections 655.122(g) and (q).[2]

B. The ALJ Correctly Held That Respondent Violated Sections 655.122(g), (p), and (q) by Failing to Disclose Meal Charges in the Job Orders and Making Undisclosed Deductions for Meals from Workers' Wages.

Because Respondent did not provide its workers with kitchen access, section 655.122(g) required Respondent to provide meals, and sections 655.122(g), (p), and (q) required Respondent to have disclosed any meal charges or deductions in the job orders. The record shows that Respondent had its supervisor Hernandez, acting as its agent, provide workers with meals and collect payment for the meal plan from the workers. ALJ Ex. 1 ¶ 22; PX-15 at 454:13-15 (Hernandez referring

[2] Respondent also appears to argue, in passing and without citing any evidence, that the workers could have cooked "in shifts" at meal times and that this possibility is sufficient to establish that Respondent provided the promised kitchen access. Resp't Br. 24. Respondent did not offer this arrangement to the workers and even if had, it would not have been the "convenient" cooking and kitchen facilities the regulations require. 20 C.F.R. 655.122(g). Given the large size of Respondent's workforce, the required twelve-hour work shifts and group transportation to and from the fields that made it impossible for workers to have time to cook in shifts, and the lack of access to a grocery store, this arrangement would not have been plausible. E.g., Tr. 774:6-8 (kitchen not big enough for many workers to cook simultaneously), 214:14-18, 175:22-176:6, 804:2-4; PX-7, at 188:23-189:6; PX-15, at 447:10-14.

to Respondent's meal plan as "the meal plan that I provide, that Sun Valley Orchards offers the men on behalf of Sun Valley Orchards"). Respondent did not, however, disclose in the job orders that the workers would have to buy meals from Respondent or how much they would cost. Tr. 763:5-9. Accordingly, the ALJ correctly held that Respondent violated sections 655.122(g), (p), and (q) by failing to disclose the $75 to $80 weekly meal charges in the job orders. D&O 38-40. And, as explained below, Respondent, through its agent Hernandez, violated section 655.122(p) by making undisclosed deductions from the workers' wages for the meals.

i. The ALJ Correctly Held That Hernandez Acted as Respondent's Agent in Administering the Meal Plan and Charging Workers for the Meals.

Respondent is responsible for the charges and deductions made by its agent Hernandez. While Respondent contends, Resp't Br. 9-10, that common law agency principles do not apply in this case, the ALJ correctly concluded that agency principles apply to violations arising under the Immigration and Nationality Act. D&O 36 (citing Castillo v. Case Farms of Ohio, Inc., 96 F. Supp. 2d 578, 593 (W.D. Tex. 1999)); see also Ramos-Barrientos v. Bland, 661 F.3d 587, 601 (11th Cir. 2011). Accordingly, the ALJ properly relied on the Restatement (Third) of Agency as instructive in this case. D&O 36.

The ALJ correctly concluded that Hernandez was Respondent's agent because he acted with Respondent's actual authority. D&O 36-37. An agent has actual authority "when at the time of taking action that has legal consequences for the principal, the agent reasonably believes, in accordance with the principal's manifestations to the agent, that the principal wishes the agent so to act." Restatement 2.01. Respondent had a legal duty to provide kitchen access or three meals a day to its farmworkers. 20 C.F.R. 655.122(g). Because Respondent did not provide the promised kitchen access, it was required to provide the workers with meals. Id. The record shows that to do so, Respondent tasked Hernandez with operating a meal plan. Tr. 713:15-25, 742:22-743:11, 808:12-15. Before the workers arrived, Respondent instructed Hernandez to continue to operate a meal plan generally as he had for years (i.e., before Respondent hired H-2A workers) by charging workers for meals, maintaining records of charges, and not earning a profit on the meals. Tr. 176:23-177:10, 186:25-187:2, 738:10-12, 808:8-15. Now that Respondent was an H-2A employer, Respondent also instructed Hernandez not to charge above H-2A program limits. Tr. 742:22-743:8. Respondent argues that the "entire kitchen operation" was "independent[] from Sun Valley's farming operations" and because Hernandez used the money he collected from workers to purchase food and pay the kitchen staff, he was not acting as an agent of Respondent. Resp't Br. 9. Hernandez oversaw the kitchen and bought food, however, to make the meals because he administered the meal plan on Respondent's behalf and at Respondent's direction and those tasks were a necessary part of administering the meal plan. Moreover, Respondent's farming operations would not meet its legal obligation to provide meals to its workers without Hernandez's "entire kitchen operation." Accordingly, the preponderant evidence supports the ALJ's conclusion that in all of his duties "and especially concerning the operation of the meal plan," Hernandez acted with Respondent's actual authority. D&O 37.

The ALJ also correctly concluded, in the alternative, that Hernandez was Respondent's agent because he acted with Respondent's apparent authority. D&O 37-38. An actor has apparent authority to act on a principal's behalf when "a third party reasonably believes the actor has authority to act on behalf of the principal and that belief is traceable to the principal's manifestations." Restatement 2.03. Here, the farmworkers reasonably believed that Hernandez had authority to act on Respondent's behalf. D&O 37-38. Russell Marino, Jr. attended orientation sessions where he and Hernandez together explained to the workers the meal plan and charges, which would have made clear to any worker that this was Respondent's meal plan and that Hernandez was administering it on Respondent's behalf. E.g., Tr. 403:8-14. When workers paid for their meals, they were required to sign Respondent's payroll forms with Respondent's name at the top. PX-17-2, at 799-800; Tr. 182:5-12. Additionally, Hernandez supervised the workers, oriented them about living and working conditions and rules when they arrived at Respondent's farm, and was generally the intermediary between the workers and Respondent in every aspect of their lives at Respondent's farm. D&O 37. Accordingly, the ALJ properly concluded "the farmworkers held reasonable beliefs that Hernandez had authority to act on Respondent's behalf," and because he acted under Respondent's apparent authority, "he worked as Respondent's agent, and any legal effect of his actions are imputed to Respondent." D&O 38.

ii. The ALJ Correctly Held That Hernandez Unlawfully Made Deductions—Either Constructive or Actual—from the Workers' Pay.

The regulations prohibited Respondent from making any deductions from the workers' paychecks that were not specified on Respondent's job orders. 20 C.F.R. 655.122(p)(1). Neither the fact that workers would be charged for meals, nor the amount to be charged were specified on the job orders. Yet, Respondent does not dispute that Hernandez charged workers for the meal plan. Therefore, when Hernandez, as Respondent's agent, charged the workers for meals, Respondent made undisclosed deductions from the workers' pay in violation of this regulation.

Contrary to Respondent's assertion, Resp't Br. 7, 9, it is irrelevant whether Hernandez deducted the charges directly from workers' paychecks or charged workers for the meal plan after paying them their wages. As the Board has explained, "there is no legal difference between an employer directly deducting a cost from a worker's wages, and shifting to the employee a cost that the employer could not lawfully directly deduct from wages." Weeks Marine, Inc., ARB No. 12-093, 2015 WL 2172482, at 4 (ARB Apr. 29, 2015); see also Arriaga v. Fla. Pac. Farms, L.L.C., 305 F.3d 1228, 1236 (11th Cir. 2002) (finding "no legal difference between deducting a cost directly from the worker's wages and shifting a cost, which they could not deduct, for the employee to bear").[3] Deductions and after-the-fact charges are equivalent because "[s]hifting a cost to the employee that cannot be lawfully deducted directly from … the employee's wages constitutes an unlawful de facto deduction that impermissibly drives the employee's pay below

[3] This principle applies uniformly across several wage statutes, including the Davis Bacon Act, the Fair Labor Standards Act ("FLSA"), the Migrant and Seasonal Agricultural Workers Protection Act ("MPSA"), and the H-2A program. E.g., Wage and Hour Division, Field Assistance Bulletin ("WHD Bulletin") No. 2012-3, at 1 (May 17, 2012). The H-2A regulations specifically incorporate by reference FLSA standards for permissibility of deductions. 20 C.F.R. 655.122(p).

the required prevailing wage." Weeks Marine, 2015 WL 2172482, at *4. As one court explained in the context of MSPA:

> One of the purposes of the statute is to prevent the exploitation of migrant farm workers' labor by farm labor contractors or agricultural employers, who deduct from their pay exorbitant amounts of money for daily necessities such as housing, food, and electricity but who refuse to account for the exact amount charged or consumed. To make a technical distinction between money deducted before paychecks are issued and money requested after paychecks are issued is to disregard the purpose of [MSPA].

Escobar v. Baker, 814 F. Supp. 1491, 1506 (W.D. Wash. 1993) (emphasis in original). Here, because Respondent failed to disclose the meal plan charge or deduction in the job orders, it could not lawfully charge workers or deduct anything from the workers' pay for the meal plan. Thus, the deductions that Hernandez made violated the regulations' disclosure requirements. Accordingly, the ALJ held that "[r]egardless of the mechanism by which Hernandez deducted the meal . . . purchases, deductions of the farmworkers' pay—constructive or actual—still occurred," and because Hernandez made these deductions as Respondent's agent, Respondent violated section 655.122(p). D&O 39.

C. The ALJ Properly Awarded Back Wages of $128,285 for the Meal Plan Disclosure and Deduction Violations.

When an H-2A employer makes improper deductions from a worker's wages and these deductions push the worker's wages below the rate promised in the job order, the amount of the deductions necessary to raise their wages to the required minimum must be returned to the workers as back wages. 20 C.F.R. 655.120, 655.122(p)(2) ("The wage requirements of § 655.120 will not be met where undisclosed or unauthorized deductions, rebates, or refunds reduce the wage payment made to the employee below the minimum amounts required"); 29 C.F.R. 501.16(a)(1) (recovery of back wages "directly from" employer). Here, the undisclosed meal deductions reduced the wages of Respondent's workers below the required minimum wage (i.e., the wage promised in the job offers). Thus, there is no merit to Respondent's argument, Resp't Br. 11, that it already paid the workers' their required minimum wage. The ALJ appropriately held that "because Respondent made deductions of the farmworkers' pay for the meals ... Respondent is required to provide back pay to the [a]ffected farmworkers." D&O 39. As the ALJ explained, "a less severe consequence would deny the farmworkers their contractual right to the ... minimum wage promised in the job order ... and would provide a decreased deterrent effect to future employers who may also attempt to alter the terms of the job order upon the workers' arrival." Id. Accordingly, the ALJ correctly affirmed the Administrator's award of $128,285 in back wages, which is the amount that the workers' wages fell below their contractual minimum wage due to Respondent's undisclosed meal deductions.

Respondent asserts that because the meal deductions did not result in a profit to Respondent, an award for the full amount of the undisclosed deductions is improper. Resp't Br. 11. Respondent's argument reflects a misunderstanding of its obligations when participating in the H-2A program. The regulations require disclosure of meal charges or deductions and separately prohibit an employer from profiting from any deductions (even if the deductions are disclosed). Compare 20 C.F.R. 655.122(p)(1) (prohibiting undisclosed deductions without regard to the reasonableness of those deductions), with id. at 655.122(p)(2) (separately prohibiting deductions from which the employer or an affiliated person profits). Thus, as the ALJ explained, "the violation consists of the deduction itself"; the remedy for such violation is for the employer to return the undisclosed deductions sufficient to pay the workers their required minimum wage. D&O 39. Back wages are owed for the undisclosed deductions regardless of whether the employer profited from the deductions.

Respondent's reliance on WHD v. Global Horizons, Inc., to support its argument on this point, Resp't Br. 10-11, is misplaced. Indeed, Global Horizons supports the ALJ's decision, not Respondent's position. In Global Horizons, the H-2A employer failed to disclose meal charges in the job orders, just as Respondent did here. WHD v. Global Horizons, Inc., No. 2010-TAE-0002, slip op. at 2 (OALJ Dec. 13, 2011) ("Global Horizons II") (discussing 20 C.F.R. 655.102(b)(13) (2005), which is substantially identical to current section 655.122(g)); Global Horizons, Inc., No. 2010-TAE-0002, slip op. at 4 (OALJ Dec. 17, 2010) ("Global Horizons I"), aff'd, ARB No. 11-058 (ARB May 31, 2013). Respondent incorrectly asserts that the court in Global Horizons preconditioned a back-wage award on the employer having profited from the meals. Resp't Br. 11 (citing Global Horizons I, slip op. at 9). In reality, the Global Horizons court acknowledged that the employer did not profit from the meal plan, but still awarded back wages in the full amount of the undisclosed meal charges. Global Horizons I, slip op. 9.[4] Moreover, the Global Horizons court specifically rejected the arguments that an amount less than the full amount of undisclosed deductions would be proper or that the back wages should take into account the cost or fair market value of the meals. Global Horizons II, slip op. at 2 n.7; see also Seasonal Ag. Servs., Inc., No. 2014-TAE-00006, slip op. at 3 (OALJ Dec. 5, 2014) (awarding back wages in the full amount of undisclosed deductions pursuant to section 655.122(p)(1)).

[4] While the court in Global Horizons discussed the significance of an employer's profit from the meal plan, the profit was relevant only to its decision to deny CMPs (discussed in detail infra), not to its back-wage award. Global Horizon I, slip op. at 9.

Respondent further argues that the Administrator improperly awarded back wages to all employees without establishing that the workers would have made a different choice had they known they would not have kitchen access and instead would have to participate in the meal plan. Resp't Br. 12. This argument is likewise misplaced. As discussed above, Respondent's violations were the failure to disclose the meal charges and the undisclosed deductions for the meals. 20 C.F.R. 655.122(g), (p), and (q). All of the workers who Respondent hired received the inaccurate disclosure and all of the workers who participated in the meal plan suffered reduction in their wages below the required minimum as a result of the undisclosed meal charges. The fact that some workers may have decided to come to the United States and work for Respondent had they known they would have to pay for the meal plan has no bearing on whether Respondent did or did not disclose the meal plan charges in the job orders as required or make undisclosed deductions from workers' pay. Thus, Respondent owes back wages to all of those workers.[5] As the ALJ concluded, a less severe consequence would deny the farmworkers

[5] As discussed supra, a few workers cooked on a hot plate in the dormitories and did not participate in the meal plan for a period. The Administrator's back-wage calculations did not include those workers for the periods in which they did not participate in Respondent's meal plan.

their contractual wage and encourage future employers to attempt to alter the terms of a job order upon the workers' arrival. D&O 39.

II. THE ALJ CORRECTLY CONCLUDED THAT RESPONDENT VIOLATED 20 C.F.R. 655.122(p) BY SELLING DRINKS AT A PROFIT AND IN VIOLATION OF STATE LAW AND, AS A RESULT OF THESE VIOLATIONS, AWARDED BACK WAGES.

The H-2A regulations provide that charges or deductions from workers' wages by employers are allowed only if they are "reasonable." 20 C.F.R. 655.122(p)(2). There are at least two circumstances where a deduction or charge is per se unreasonable and therefore prohibited:

(1) "if it includes a profit to the employer or to any affiliated person"; or

(2) if it is made for items sold "in violation of any Federal, State, or local law."

20 C.F.R. 655.122(p)(2) (incorporating by reference 29 C.F.R. Part 531 for determining whether deductions are reasonable); 29 C.F.R. 531.31; cf. Ortiz v. Paramo, No. 06-3062, 2009 WL 4575618, at 4 (D.N.J. Dec. 1, 2009) ("Ortiz II")* (disallowing employer from crediting employees' beer purchases towards employer's FLSA wage obligations because employer was prohibited under New Jersey law from selling alcohol without a license).

Acting as Respondent's agent and affiliated person, Hernandez sold workers non-alcoholic drinks and beer at a profit and sold beer in violation of state law, which made the charges for the drinks and beer unreasonable deductions from the workers' wages in violation of section 655.122(p). These unlawful deductions reduced the workers' wages below their applicable minimum wage. Accordingly, the ALJ correctly concluded that Respondent violated section 655.122(p) and ordered Respondent to pay back wages for the amount charged for the non-alcoholic drinks and the profit from the beer. D&O 54. The Board should affirm the ALJ's holding and back-wage award.

A. The ALJ Correctly Held That Respondent Violated Section 655.122(p) by Deducting Payments for Non-Alcoholic Beverages and Beer from Workers' Wages.

Through its agent Hernandez, Respondent sold non-alcoholic beverages and beer to the workers at a profit, in violation of 20 C.F.R 655.122(p)(2). As discussed supra, Hernandez acted as Respondent's agent and was acting in that agent capacity while selling beverages to Respondent's workers.[6] Even assuming, arguendo, that he was not acting as Respondent's agent when selling beverages, he was clearly an "affiliated person" under the regulations. D&O 38; see also WHD Bulletin No. 2012-3 ("The term 'affiliated person' includes but is not limited to agents, … [and] any person acting in the employer's behalf or interest (directly or indirectly), or who has an interest in the employment relationship."); Tr. 233:25-224:1. Therefore, there is no merit to Respondent's contention, Resp't Br. 16, that because the workers did not purchase drinks directly from Respondent, Respondent was not liable under section 655.122(p)(2) for Hernandez's profiteering.

[6] The ALJ found that Hernandez acted as Respondent's agent at all relevant times. D&O 36-38. The evidence supports the conclusion that Hernandez acted with Respondent's apparent authority, at a minimum, when selling drinks because Hernandez sold drinks stored in Respondent's refrigerators from the company store located in Respondent's kitchen. Tr. 358:8-359:16.

By prohibiting deductions that include a profit to the employer or an affiliated person, the regulation prevents the employer or affiliated person from profiting off the employer's workforce. That is exactly what Hernandez did with the sale of each drink, and he admitted as much. Tr. 195:11-196:8. Moreover, it is the employer's burden to demonstrate that charges do not include a profit and are therefore reasonable. Ortiz v. Paramo, No. 06-3062, 2008 WL 4378373, at *6 (D.N.J. Sept. 19, 2008) ("Ortiz I") (employer failed to meet its burden that meal charges were reasonable because it failed to maintain records regarding those charges); Ortiz II, 2009 WL 4575618, at *3-4 (trial verdict awarding employees the full amount of charges given employer's lack of records regarding cost); see also Donovan v. New Floridian Hotel, Inc., 676 F.2d 468, 474 (11th Cir. 1982) (strictly holding an employer to its burden). Respondent failed to require Hernandez to keep records of the prices of drinks that he bought and re-sold or the number of drinks sold to each of Respondent's workers. Nor did Hernandez keep such records. Tr. 209:18-21, 361:22-24, 371:12-16. Respondent knew, moreover, that Hernandez was profiting from selling its workers drinks. PX-15, at 452:15-453:9; RX-23, at 325.

Hernandez's charges to workers for his sale of beer were also unreasonable under section 655.122(p)(2) because Hernandez sold beer without a license, in violation of state law. N.J. Stat. Ann. 33:1-2(a) (license required to sell beer in New Jersey). This is undisputed. PX-20, at 823 ¶ 21; PX-20, at 828 ¶ 5; see also D&O 7.

Thus, substantial evidence supports the ALJ's finding that Hernandez, acting as Respondent's agent and an affiliated person, sold non-alcoholic beverages and beer to the farmworkers at a profit and sold beer in violation of state law. D&O 7-8, 16, 20, 40-41, 42. Because section 655.122(p)(2) provides that charges or deductions are unreasonable if they include a profit to the employer or affiliated person or if they violate state law, the ALJ correctly concluded that the charges to Respondent's workers for these beverages were unreasonable and, therefore, Respondent violated section 655.122(p)(2). D&O 40-42, 54.

B. The ALJ Properly Awarded $64,960 in Back Wages for the Non-Alcoholic Beverages the Farmworkers Purchased.

As explained supra, when an H-2A employer makes improper charges or deductions that reduce the worker's wages below the rate promised in the job order, the employer is required to pay the workers the amount improperly charged or deducted to raise the workers' wages back to the promised minimum rate. 20 C.F.R. 655.120, 655.122(p)(2); 29 C.F.R. 501.16(a)(2). Respondent challenges the calculation of back wages for the various non-alcoholic drinks that workers bought from Hernandez, arguing that Respondent was not required to "provide unlimited free energy drinks to its workers." Resp't Br. 15. Again, Respondent's argument reflects a fundamental misunderstanding of an H-2A employer's obligations. Nothing in the regulation or the ALJ's decision requires an employer to provide free unlimited drinks to employees. But if an employer does sell drinks to employees, it is prohibited from profiting from the sales (and from violating state law). 20 C.F.R. 655.122(p)(2). If the employer runs afoul of these requirements, through its own actions or those of an affiliated person, the employer is liable for the amount charged to employees for the drinks that reduced the employees' wage below the required minimum.[7]

[7] Furthermore, the employer is not entitled to any credit for the cost of items sold to employees (in this case, the cost of the drinks). The H-2A regulations strictly prohibit unreasonable charges or deductions and specify that "the cost" of an item underlying an unreasonable deduction "may not be included in computing wages." 20 C.F.R. 655.122(p)(2).

Respondent focuses on the availability of water in the fields in arguing that the sale of drinks did not violate the H-2A requirements. Resp't Br. 14-16. This argument is misplaced because Respondent's failure to consistently provide clean, drinkable water to its workers was not the basis for the violation or the back-wage award. Rather, the ALJ's finding regarding the lack of consistent access to clean water simply bolstered the appropriateness of awarding the full amount charged for these non-alcoholic drinks. D&O 40-41.[8] Even if Respondent had consistently provided its workers with clean, drinkable water, Hernandez's sale of beverages at a profit would still have violated the H-2A requirements and, therefore, it would still be proper to award back wages for the full amount of the drink charges that brought the workers' wages below the applicable minimum wage.

[8] Substantial evidence supports the ALJ's finding that the workers did not have access to potable water at certain times. D&O 18-19, 41. Workers consistently testified to clean water being unavailable, including all of the workers who testified before the ALJ. Tr. 52:15-19, 60:21-61:7 (one worker testifying he complained to Hernandez about the water's bad taste on the first day); Tr. 96:4-6, 139:21-22, 141:5-6, 162:8-11 (another worker testifying water was unavailable, and that "if a different truck would drive into the fields to sell…beverages to us, [Hernandez] would tell them to go away. We could only purchase from him."); Tr. 261:9-13 (another worker testifying about the water's bad taste); PX-11, at 287:4-7, 291:6-11 (another worker testifying the water was not clean); PX-5, at 134:2-4 (another worker testifying water was not available in eating area). While the Administrator did not dispute that there was potable water available to workers at some points, the evidence shows that it not always available to all workers.

The ALJ also properly affirmed the Administrator's back-wage calculation for the non-alcoholic drink violations. D&O 41-42. Because Hernandez and Respondent could not produce records of the workers' drink purchases, the Administrator reasonably followed the Mt. Clemens burden-shifting framework to determine the amount of back wages owed for the drink violations. D&O 41 (citing Anderson v. Mt. Clemens Pottery Co., 328 U.S. 680, 686-89 (1946)).[9] Respondent does not appear to challenge the use of the Mt. Clemens framework to calculate the $64,960 that Respondent owes in back wages for non-alcoholic drinks.

C. The ALJ Properly Awarded $8,972.61 in Back Wages for the Profit Hernandez Made on the Beer Sales.

The ALJ correctly held that the Administrator reasonably calculated $8,972.61 in back pay for the profit Hernandez made on the sale of beer to [9] Under the Mt. Clemens burden-shifting framework, when an employer owes back wages to employees but has failed to maintain records, an employee need only produce "sufficient evidence" to show the amount of back wages owed "as a matter of just and reasonable inference[,]" at which point the burden shifts to the employer to produce evidence of the "precise amount" of back wages owed or to negate the reasonableness of the inferences drawn from the employees' evidence. 328 U.S. at 687-88. If the employer fails to meet this burden, the court may award damages based on results that are "only approximate." Id. at 688.

workers. D&O 42.[10] Respondent mounts a passing challenge to the ALJ's conclusion that the Administrator's back-wage calculations regarding the beer sales were reasonable. Resp't Br. 19-20. Specifically, Respondent appears to argue that the Wage and Hour Division Investigator incorrectly calculated the costs of the beer, the number of workers who purchased beer, and the number of beers purchased. Resp't Br. 20. The Board should reject these passing arguments. As with the non-alcoholic drinks, Hernandez and Respondent failed to keep accurate records of the number of beers sold to workers and therefore the Mt. Clemens burden-shifting framework applies. D&O 42. As the ALJ noted, "the Mt. Clemens standard only requires estimates"; "precision is not required." Id. at n.151. For example, the ALJ concluded "it is irrelevant whether the Administrator calculated prices using numbers derived from Costco rather than Sam's Club, where Hernandez shopped" because both are "wholesale clubs and likely sell at similar prices." Id. Additionally, the Administrator did not include back wages for workers who testified that they did not buy beer. D&O 42. The ALJ correctly held that Respondent was unable to rebut the Administrator's calculations, id., and [10] The Administrator exercised her discretion in seeking back wages only for the profit earned from the illegal beer sales. As explained supra, the regulations permit the Administrator discretion to seek full back wages for unreasonable deductions (as the Administrator did for the unreasonable deductions for the non-alcoholic drinks).

on appeal, Respondent fails to point to any evidence or support for its position that the Administrator's calculations were unreasonable.

III. THE ALJ PROPERLY ASSESSED CMPs FOR RESPONDENT'S MEAL PLAN AND DRINK VIOLATIONS.

The H-2A regulations provide the Administrator discretion to assess CMPs "for each violation of the work contract, or the obligations imposed by 8 U.S.C. 1188, 20 C.F.R. Part 655, subpart B .... Each failure to pay an individual worker properly or to honor the terms or conditions of a worker's employment required by 8 U.S.C. 1188, 20 C.F.R. Part 655, subpart B ... constitutes a separate violation." 29 C.F.R. 501.19(a). In determining the amount of CMPs to impose, the regulations direct the Administrator to consider factors including the type and gravity of violation, the employer's history of violations, the number of workers affected, efforts made to comply, commitment to future compliance, and any financial gain to the employer or loss to the workers. Id. at 501.19(b). Thus, in assessing CMPs, "the Administrator is vested with enforcement direction and is able to consider the totality of circumstances in fashioning an appropriate remedy for a violation." Overdevest Nurseries, LP, 2015-TAE-00008, at *18 (OALJ Feb. 18, 2016) (citing WHD v. Kutty, ARB No. 03-022, 2005 WL 1359123 (ARB May 31, 2005)).

The ALJ properly affirmed the Administrator's assessment of CMPs for Respondent's meal- and drink-related violations of section 655.122. D&O 42-43. After considering all the facts and appropriately applying the mitigating factors, the Administrator reasonably assessed one CMP for Respondent's combined meal- and drink-related violations of section 655.122, in the amount of $1,350, for each of Respondent's 147 workers. Indeed, as the ALJ concluded, the Administrator reviewed each of the mitigation criteria at 29 C.F.R. 501.19(b) and allowed a ten percent reduction as Respondent had no prior history with the H-2A program. D&O 43.

The Administrator calculated CMPs on a per-worker basis because of the seriousness of the violations, the large number of workers affected, and because Respondent made a false statement on the face of its job orders, recruiting workers to travel thousands of miles based in part on false pretenses. D&O 42-43; Tr. 849:15-23. Additionally, the Administrator reasonably combined the CMP for the various meal-and drink-related violations of sections 655.122(g), (p), and (q) into one amount per worker. As the ALJ aptly noted, however, "it was likely within the Administrator's reasonable discretion to assess separate CMPs for each violation of 20 C.F.R. 655.122(g), (p), and (q)[.]" D&O 42.

Respondent maintains that the CMP for these violations should not be assessed for each worker because the violation was a single deficient disclosure rather than each worker not being properly paid. Resp't Br. 7-8. Respondent also argues that because the Administrator assessed a single CMP for the twenty-four violations of the three-fourths guarantee, discussed infra, it was unreasonable for the Administrator to assess a single CMP for each worker affected by the meal and drink violations of section 655.122. Resp't Br. 8. Neither argument is persuasive. Respondent violated section 655.122 for each worker to whom it provided a job order that misrepresented how meals would be made available, and from whom undisclosed meal charges were deducted from his pay, reducing his wages below the required minimum. Similarly, Respondent violated section 655.122 for each worker whose wages were reduced below the minimum when they were charged for drinks that included a profit or were sold in violation of state law. Therefore, it was reasonable, and within the Administrator's discretion, to assess a CMP for each affected worker, especially considering the seriousness of the violation and "the large amount of workers affected." D&O 43.[11]

[11] Under a heading of "Estoppel/Laches/Mitigation," Respondent argues that the "prolonged delay" between the time Wage and Hour Investigators first became aware of the meal plan arrangement and the time when the Administrator notified Respondent the meal charges constituted a violation of the H-2A regulations "should call into question the Administrator's later claim as to the urgency and

Respondent also appears to argue that CMPs are improper because, it contends, it did not profit from the meal plan. Resp't Br. 10-11 (citing Global Horizons I, slip op. at 8-9). The court in Global Horizons denied the imposition of CMPs because "nothing on the record show[ed] that Global Horizons profited from" its meal plan. Global Horizons I, slip op. at *9.[12] Here, in contrast, substantial evidence supports the ALJ's finding that Respondent did profit from the meal plan. D&O 39-40. When there were surplus funds from the meal charges, Hernandez, acting as Respondent's agent, retained those funds for himself, thereby permitting Respondent to save money by paying him a lower wage, and seriousness of the alleged violation." Resp't Br. 13-14. This argument has no merit. The H-2A regulations contain no requirement that Respondent be notified the moment the investigator suspects there is a violation. Thus, "the regulatory scheme contemplates a time period in which an employer may continue to violate applicable regulations, and thus accrue liability for violations" while the Administrator completes her investigation. ME Global, Inc., 2013-LCA-00039, at *10 (OALJ Jul. 29, 2016), aff'd by ME Global, Inc., ARB No. 2016-0087 (ARB Mar. 22, 2019). Moreover, the Supreme Court has long recognized that "[a]s a general rule, laches or neglect of duty on the part of officers of the government is no defense to a suit to enforce a public right or protect a public interest." Utah Power & Light Co. v. United States, 243 U.S. 389, 409 (1917); cf. OPM v. Richmond, 496 U.S. 414, 422 (1990) (the Supreme Court has "reversed every finding of estoppel [against the government] that [it has] reviewed").

[12] Respondent incorrectly states in a footnote, without support, that the workers in Global Horizons "paid more for the food provided to them than it cost the employer to purchase/prepare it." Resp't Br. 11-12 n.8. In fact, the court in Global Horizons denied CMPs, in part, precisely because the employer did not profit from the meal plan. Global Horizons I, slip op. 9.

Hernandez's wife received paid employment in Respondent's kitchen. D&O 39; Tr. 229:19-23, 721:10-11, 742:13-21. Moreover, the meal plan allowed Respondent to avoid a costly kitchen expansion that would have been necessary to fulfill the terms of the job orders to provide kitchen access to accommodate Respondent's large number of workers. D&O 39. As the ALJ found, "Respondent did in fact profit from the sale of meals" and the Administrator "appropriately recognized the financial gain to Respondent from the meal plan" in making her CMP calculations. D&O 40, 43.[13]

Accordingly, the ALJ correctly held that the Administrator rationally considered the facts of the violations, the large number of workers affected, and all of the mitigation criteria at 29 C.F.R. 501.19(b) and reasonably assessed a total of $198.450 in CMPs. The Board should affirm this assessment.

[13] The Administrator's CMP assessment is also appropriate in light of Respondent having profited from the sale of drinks and beer.

IV. THE ALJ CORRECTLY CONCLUDED THAT RESPONDENT VIOLATED 20 C.F.R. 655.122(i)(1) BY DISCHARGING TWENTY-FOUR WORKERS BEFORE THEY HAD WORKED AT LEAST THREE-FOURTHS OF THE WORKDAYS SPECIFIED IN THE WORK CONTRACT AND, AS A RESULT OF THESE VIOLATIONS, AWARDED BACK WAGES AND ASSESSED CMPs.

The H-2A regulations require employers "to offer the worker employment for a total number of work hours equal to at least three-fourths of the workdays of the total period … specified in the work contract." 20 C.F.R. 655.122(i)(1). An employer is absolved of liability for the three-fourth's guarantee only when a worker "voluntarily abandons employment" or is "terminated for cause," and the employer timely and properly notifies the Departments of Labor and Homeland Security. 20 C.F.R. 655.122(n); see also Information about the DOL Notification Process for Worker Abandonment or Termination for Cause for H-2A Temporary Agricultural Certifications, 76 Fed. Reg. 21,041, 2011 WL 1397931 (Apr. 14, 2011) (required notifications to Department of Labor).

The ALJ correctly held that Respondent violated the three-fourths requirement with regard to three groups of workers: (1) nineteen workers that Respondent terminated in May 2015; (2) four workers that Respondent laid off in August 2015; and (3) one worker who worked for Respondent until June 9, 2015. D&O 43. The substantial evidence supports the ALJ's finding that Respondent terminated or otherwise discharged these twenty-four employees rather than them voluntarily abandoning their employment or being terminated for cause. Id. Based on this evidence, the ALJ correctly concluded that Respondent violated section 655.122(i), and properly affirmed the Administrator's reasonable assessment of back wages and CMPs. D&O 43. The Board should affirm that conclusion, the back-wage award, and the CMP assessment.

A. The ALJ Correctly Held That Because Respondent Terminated or Otherwise Constructively Discharged Nineteen Workers in May 2015, Respondent Violated the Three-Fourths Guarantee for Such Workers.

i. Substantial Evidence Supports the ALJ's Finding That in May 2015, Respondent Terminated Nineteen Workers Without Cause.

Substantial evidence supports the ALJ's finding that Respondent terminated nineteen workers without cause during a May 2015 meeting between Respondent and the workers. D&O 14, 44. The nineteen workers asked for a meeting with Hernandez, Russell Marino, Jr., and Joseph Marino to share their concerns about their working and living conditions. D&O 14, 43-44. The meeting became "heated" and Russell Marino, Jr. became angry at the workers' concerns and terminated the nineteen workers. D&O 44. While Respondent argues that the testimony about what happened at the May 2015 meeting was inconsistent between the workers and Respondent's witnesses, Resp't Br. 16-18, the ALJ appropriately made a credibility determination and credited the testimony of the workers over the testimony of Respondent's witnesses. D&O 14-15, 43-44.[14] The ALJ explained her rationale for this credibility determination, stating that "the employee witnesses were consistent in describing the heated events at the meeting" while, for example, "Joseph Marino was unable to remember specifically what was said" and his hearing testimony contradicted his deposition testimony. D&O 44.

Respondent further argues that it would have been illogical for it to terminate these nineteen workers "at the peak of harvesting." Resp't Br. 17-18. The ALJ rejected this argument, finding that the evidence established that management got angry during this May 2015 meeting and "made a decision, albeit

---

[14] In a footnote, Respondent falsely states that the workers who testified in Mexico did so "under the close supervision of an anti-employer group," Centro do los Derechos del Migrant ("CDM"). Resp't Br. 17 n.10. The Board should not countenance these spurious accusations. CDM is an independent Mexican workers' advocacy group that helped the Administrator identify and locate certain witnesses. See ALJ Order Granting Motion for Leave to Administer Oaths Remotely in De Bene Esse Depositions, at 3 (Apr. 21, 2017). The ALJ permitted CDM to assist the workers in travelling to deposition sites in Mexico (i.e., conference rooms at a hotel, government office, and co-working space) and to provide technical support for the videoconference technology, but did not allow CDM to be present in the deposition room while the workers testified. Id. For the hearing itself, Respondent consented to the use of the same conditions (with which the Administrator scrupulously complied at all times) for the worker witnesses who testified remotely from Mexico. See Letter to ALJ Timlin from Counsel for Administrator (Jun. 15, 2017). In addition, the first two employees who testified at the hearing were physically present in the courtroom, and CDM had no role in locating these witnesses or facilitating their testimony.

a rash, and perhaps illogical, decision to terminate this group of workers and then quickly replace the terminated workers." D&O 44. Ultimately, "considering the entirety of the evidence," the ALJ found that Respondent terminated the nineteen workers before they had worked the guaranteed three-fourths of the hours promised in their work contracts. Id.

ii. Substantial Evidence Supports the ALJ's Finding That Even Assuming, Arguendo, Respondent Did Not Terminate the Workers in May 2015, Respondent Constructively Discharged Such Workers.

Substantial evidence also supports the ALJ's alternative finding that even assuming, arguendo, Respondent did not terminate the workers in May 2015, Respondent constructively discharged such workers. D&O 44-46. "Under the constructive discharge doctrine, an employee's reasonable decision to resign because of unendurable working conditions is assimilated to a formal discharge for remedial purposes." Pa. State Police v. Suders, 542 U.S. 129, 141 (2004). "The inquiry is objective: Did working conditions become so intolerable that a reasonable person in the employee's position would have felt compelled to resign?" Id. The ALJ properly relied on the Third Circuit's nonexclusive factors from Clowes v. Allegheny Valley Hosp. in finding that the nineteen workers were constructively discharged. 991 F.2d 1159 (3d Cir. 1993). These factors include: "(1) a threat of discharge; (2) suggestions or encouragement of resignation; (3) a demotion or reduction of pay or benefits; (4) involuntary transfer to a less desirable position; (5) alteration of job responsibilities; (6) unsatisfactory job evaluations." Nuness v. Simon & Schuster, Inc., 325 F. Supp. 3d 535, 560 (D.N.J. 2018) (summarizing Clowes, 991 F.2d at 1161).

The ALJ correctly concluded that the first Clowes factor was satisfied because during the workers' first days on the job Hernandez threatened to send the workers home to Mexico and several of the nineteen workers testified that after the May 2015 meeting they understood that Russell Marino, Jr. had decided they would not be allowed to continue working and "needed to leave." Tr. 39:8-10, 65:16-17, 80:24-81:3, 107:18-20, 107:21-108:1, 125:11-13, 125:21-23, 129:1-12; PX-3, at 101:16: PX-9, at 232:20-21, 233:12-15, 258:17-23; PX-11, at 305:6-8. This evidence supports the ALJ's finding that this factor "weighs considerably toward a finding of constructive discharge." D&O 45.

The ALJ also correctly concluded that the third and fifth Clowes factors concerning a reduction of benefits and an alteration of job responsibilities, respectively, were satisfied. D&O 45-46. As outlined supra, the record shows that "[d]espite assurances Respondent made on the job order—the employment agreement both sides agreed upon prior to the summer 2015 growing season," workers did not, in fact, have the promised kitchen access and instead had to pay for a meal plan. D&O 45. Thus, the ALJ concluded that the change to the meal arrangement "materially reduced the workers' benefits[,]" satisfying the third Clowes factor. Id. Furthermore, while the job orders stated that the workday was seven hours on weekdays and only five hours per weekend and that workers would "not be required to" work additional hours, JX-1, at 1, 9 ¶ 11; JX-3, at 42, 50 ¶ 11, Respondent required the workers to regularly work twelve-hour days. D&O 46. Although the job orders did provide that workers "may be requested" to work overtime, the ALJ found that "Hernandez told the workers where, when, and how long to work and … often directed them to work twelve hour days." Id. Accordingly, the ALJ concluded that this "material change to the workers' responsibilities as listed on the job orders" satisfied the fifth Clowes factor. Id.

The ALJ explained that although the other Clowes factors were not satisfied, such as involuntary transfer and unsatisfactory job evaluations, those factors were not applicable to "the working situation at Respondent's farm." D&O 46. Not all Clowes factors have to be satisfied to sustain a finding of constructive discharge, as they are "neither absolute nor comprehensive." Nuness, 325 F. Supp. 3d at 560. Instead, the court should consider the factors relevant to the employee's particular job position when analyzing whether working conditions were so intolerable that a reasonable employee would have felt forced to leave. Here, the ALJ did just that and concluded that the Administrator had "preponderantly established" that Respondent constructively discharged the nineteen workers in May 2015. D&O 46.

In addition to the Clowes factors, the ALJ properly considered Wage and Hour Division guidance on constructive discharge in the H-2A context. D&O 46. WHD Bulletin 2012-1 provides that "[c]onstructive discharge may exist when a worker leaves the job because the housing conditions in which the worker is required to live are intolerable and violate applicable safety and health standards." WHD Bulletin 2012-1, at 5 (Feb. 28, 2012). As explained infra, the ALJ held that Respondent violated numerous provisions of the H-2A regulations concerning housing conditions and transportation safety. The record shows that the nineteen workers' living conditions included broken screens and uncovered trashcans, which encouraged the presence of insects and other pests, and the bathrooms lacked adequate hot water. Additionally, Respondent used unlicensed drivers and unsafe vehicles to transport workers between the dormitories and the fields. The ALJ also found that when the workers first arrived at Respondent's farm, there were no bathrooms facilities in the fields and no drinking water. D&O 46. The ALJ correctly concluded that these "intolerable" conditions violating "applicable safety and health standards" are the type contemplated by the Wage and Hour Division that cause workers to be constructively discharged. Id. (citing WHD Bulletin 2012-1, at 5).

Respondent argues that because some of Respondent's workers endured these same conditions but worked for Respondent for the entire season, a "reasonable person" could not have felt compelled to leave. Resp't Br. 18. The Board should reject this argument. The constructive discharge inquiry is objective, Suders, 542 U.S. at 141, and does not require the court to look to whether some workers decided to endure awful conditions. Instead, the constructive discharge inquiry focuses on whether the workers who actually departed did so after enduring objectively intolerable conditions. Id. Moreover, the nineteen workers were the only workers who actually raised concerns about their working conditions, asked for the May 2015 meeting with Respondent, attended the meeting where Russell Marino, Jr. yelled at them, and had their concerns ignored. Thus, an objective person in those nineteen workers' position would have felt compelled to leave.

Whether formally terminated or constructively discharged, the ALJ correctly found, D&O 46, that none of the nineteen workers who left Respondent's farm in May 2015 "voluntarily abandon[ed] employment" or were "terminated for cause." 20 C.F.R. 655.122(i)(5). Because this termination or constructive discharge occurred in May 2015, just a few weeks into the growing season, the ALJ concluded that Respondent violated section 655.122(i)(1)'s three-fourths guarantee to these workers. D&O 46.

B. The ALJ Correctly Held That in August 2015, Respondent Laid Off Four Workers Without Meeting the Three-Fourths Guarantee for Such Workers.

The ALJ correctly held that of the forty-four workers that Respondent conceded that it laid off in August 2015 "due to inclement weather and lack of work[,]" Respondent did not meet the three-fourths guarantee for four of them. D&O 47; PX 1; Tr. 702-04. As an initial matter, it bears noting that Respondent essentially conceded this violation before the ALJ. At the hearing before the ALJ, Respondent's counsel agreed that "the Administrator provided accurate calculations as to the Respondent's three-fourths violations concerning" the four workers. D&O 47. Because these calculations necessarily encompassed the three-fourths violations themselves, Respondent effectively agreed that it had committed these violations. Further, in its post-hearing brief, Respondent "did not discuss or otherwise defend against the alleged three-fourths guarantee violation concerning these four workers." Id. Accordingly, the ALJ properly held that Respondent violated the three-fourths guarantee concerning four of the forty-four workers it laid off in August 2015 and, therefore, back pay was warranted. Id.

Despite having arguably waived any challenge to this finding of violation, Respondent alleges that these four workers had been sick or injured for some period before August 2015 and thus were offered at least three-fourths of the workdays specified in the contract, but did not work three-fourths of the workdays. Resp't Br. 19. Respondent cites to no evidence, however, to support this contention. Indeed, there is no support in the record for any such contention because Respondent admitted that it did not keep records of "the number of hours of work offered each day by the employer (broken out by hours offered both in accordance with and over and above the three-fourths guarantee)" required to assert this defense. 20 C.F.R. 655.122(j)(1); see also PX-16 (Deposition of Sun Valley Pursuant to Rule 18.64(b)(6)) at 540:21–541:7, 557:25–558:13; Tr. 645:24-646:3, 648:16-649:5, 706:5-13 (neither of Respondent's two payroll systems "keep track of the number of hours that a worker at Sun Valley is offered").

C. The ALJ Correctly Held That Respondent Violated the Three-Fourths Guarantee Concerning Jose Islas Larraga.

The ALJ correctly found that the record contained no evidence that Jose Islas Larraga abandoned his job in June 2015, but even if he did, the ALJ noted that the regulations "would only relieve Respondent of the three-fourths guarantee liability if it provided timely notice to the Department" that Islas Larraga's employment had ended. D&O 47 (citing 20 C.F.R. 655.122(n)). On appeal, Respondent does not specifically address the ALJ's holding that Respondent violated the three-fourths guarantee concerning Islas Larraga. Instead, without naming Islas Larraga specifically, Respondent appears to group him with the four workers laid off in August 2015 and assert the same argument for him that it asserted for the four workers (i.e., that it offered sufficient hours to meet the three-fourths guarantee, but due to illness or injury, the workers did not work all the hours offered). Resp't Br. 19. As with the four laid-off workers, however, Respondent failed to keep the records required to assert that defense.[15] Moreover, the record shows that Respondent did not provide the requisite governmental notice of Islas Larraga's departure. Tr. 419:16-22, 436:4-10, 558:9-561:10. Therefore, the Board should affirm the ALJ's holding that Respondent violated the three-fourths guarantee concerning Islas Larraga.

D. The ALJ Properly Awarded $142,728 in Back Wages and Assessed a Single CMP of $1,350.

The ALJ correctly affirmed the Administrator's reasonable computation of $142.728 in back wages for the twenty-four workers and assessment of a single $1,350 CMP for the violations of the three-fourths guarantee. D&O 47-49. On [15] Additionally, Islas Larraga's last day of work for Respondent was June 9, 2015, not "near the end of the season" as Respondent asserts. Resp't Br. 19. Given this timing, it is unlikely that Islas Larraga was offered sufficient work to satisfy the three-fourths guarantee.

appeal, Respondent challenges only the ALJ's conclusion that Respondent violated the three-fourths guarantee for these twenty-four workers, and not the ALJ's conclusion that the Administrator properly calculated back wages and CMPs. The Board should affirm the ALJ's back-wage award and CMP assessment.

V. THE ALJ CORRECTLY CONCLUDED THAT RESPONDENT VIOLATED 29 C.F.R. 501.5 BY ATTEMPTING TO OBTAIN WAIVERS FROM ITS EMPLOYEES OF THE THREE-FOURTHS GUARANTEE AND, AS A RESULT OF THESE VIOLATIONS, ASSESSED CMPs.

The H-2A regulations prohibit an employer from seeking "to have an H-2A worker … waive any rights conferred under 8 U.S.C. 1188, 20 C.F.R. part 655, subpart B," which includes the three-fourths guarantee provided in section 655.122(i). 29 C.F.R. 501.5. That, however, is exactly what Respondent did. By having the workers sign forms falsely stating that they were voluntarily resigning, Respondent effectively sought to have these workers waive their three-fourths guarantee. Substantial evidence supports the ALJ's finding that after the May 2015 meeting in which Respondent terminated nineteen workers, Respondent had the nineteen workers sign worker departure forms that "mischaracterized the reasons for their leaving as needing to return home to care for a sick or dying loved one." D&O 19-21; see also D&O 49 (noting that Respondent admitted that the workers had no sick or deceased family members). Respondent also had the workers it laid off in August 2015 sign similar forms. D&O 21. The record shows that Respondent did not allow the workers to attest to the true reason they left. D&O 19-20; Tr. 83:10-13, 108:7-11, 109:25-110:15, 149:13-14, 225:23-25, 274:9-12, 21-23, 732:15-16, 768:24-769:4, 769:13-20. Consistent with the false information provided on their forms, Respondent notified the Departments of Labor and Homeland Security that the workers left voluntarily, rather than after being terminated. PX-39, at 1191-95, 1198-1200 (notifications); Tr. 409:5-12, 748:20-24, 753:12-754:2; cf. Tr. 754:23-34 (Respondent conceding that the August workers were "terminated without cause"). Respondent admitted that the purpose of the forms was to absolve itself of the three-fourths guarantee requirement and "to protect against … this lawsuit." D&O 19-20; PX 15 at 475; Tr. 748.

Contrary to Respondent's contention, Resp't Br. 21, it is irrelevant whether Respondent used the forms to prove to the Wage and Hour Division Investigator or the ALJ that the workers voluntarily abandoned their jobs. Because 29 C.F.R. 501.5 prohibits attempting to coerce workers to waive their rights, the violation was complete when Respondent convinced the workers to sign the form. As the ALJ explained, "the worker departure forms effectively waived the farmworkers' right to the three-fourths guarantee; Respondent coerced the farmworkers into doing so." D&O 50. Therefore, the ALJ correctly held that Respondent violated 29 C.F.R. 501.5 by attempting to obtain waivers from the workers of the three-fourths guarantee and that the Administrator's imposition of a single $1,350 CMP was reasonable. D&O 50. The Board should affirm the ALJ's holding.

VI. THE ALJ CORRECTLY CONCLUDED THAT RESPONDENT VIOLATED 20 C.F.R. 655.122(d)(1) BY PROVIDING INADEQUATE HOUSING AND, AS A RESULT OF THESE VIOLATIONS, ASSESSED CMPs.

A. The ALJ Correctly Held That Respondent Failed to Maintain Worker Housing in the Conditions Required.[16]

H-2A employers are required to provide housing to their H-2A workers. 20 C.F.R. 655.122(d)(1). There are specific standards that employer-provided housing must meet. Id. at 655.122(d)(1)(i) (incorporating by reference the housing standards set out at 20 C.F.R 654.404-.417).[17] Respondent failed to provide housing to its workers that was compliant with four of these housing standards.

---

[16] Respondent failed to brief this issue in detail, saying only "[t]here are some CMP-only claims included in the Decision with respect to the number of … torn screens … that will be identified briefly here, and discussed further in Respondent's brief on appeal later." Resp't Br. 20. It devoted one sentence to disputing the housing violation. Id.

[17] The standards were revised slightly in 2016, solely to "update[e] outdated terminology." Workforce Innovation & Opportunity Act, 81 Fed. Reg. 56,072, 56,280 (Aug. 19, 2016). This brief cites to the version of the regulations in effect in 2015.

"All outside openings" in Respondent's housing facility were required to "be protected with screening of not less than 16 mesh," 20 C.F.R. 654.408(a), and "[a]ll screen doors … be tight fitting, in good repair, and equipped with self-closing devices," id. at 654.408(b). The record shows, and Respondent admitted at the hearing, that the bathroom windows lacked screens, Tr. 202:20-203:1, and several photographs and testimony from the Wage and Hour Division Investigator proved that at least two dormitory screen doors were ripped or had holes, PX-28, at 1048-52; Tr. 324:3-5. D&O 18.

The regulations also required Respondent to maintain "fly-tight, clean containers [for garbage and refuse] in good condition" near the worker housing. 20 C.F.R. 654.414(a). The record shows that Respondent failed to maintain "fly-tight, clean containers" as it provided large refuse containers, but then left them completely uncovered and provided no lids. D&O 13, 18; Tr. 324:12-15, 329:1-10, 332:1-6; PX-28, at 1053-55; see also Howard v. Malcolm, 658 F. Supp. 423, 433 (E.D.N.C. 1987) ("garbage cans … without tops" violated Occupational Safety and Health Administration's comparable "fly-tight" container requirement.).

Respondent was also required to provide "all occupants" with "[b]athing and hand washing facilities, supplied with hot and cold water under pressure." 20 C.F.R. 654.412(a). The record shows that Respondent's workers frequently had no hot water with which to shower. D&O 6-7; see also Tr. 30:8-11, 103:24-104:5, 199:22-200:2, 200:25-201:1; PX-7, at 189:2-6; PX-11, at 288:2-6.

The record evidence shows that Respondent failed to provide housing that met the applicable housing standards, and Respondent has pointed to no evidence suggesting otherwise. D&O 50. Accordingly, the ALJ correctly held that Respondent violated 20 C.F.R. 655.122(d)(1). D&O 50-51. The Board should affirm the ALJ's holding.

B. The ALJ Properly Assessed $3,150 In CMPs.

The Administrator assessed $3,150 in CMPs for four violations of 20 C.F.R. 655.122(d)(1)—the unscreened bathroom windows, the faulty dormitory screen windows and doors, the uncovered garbage cans, and the hot water shortage. D&O 50. The ALJ correctly held that the Administrator clearly established each of the four violations and reviewed and applied the various applicable mitigation factors at 29 C.F.R. 501.19(b) and "reasonably reduced the CMPs to $3,150." D&O 50-51. The ALJ correctly affirmed the imposition of $3,150 in CMPs for these four violations and Respondent has pointed to no evidence suggesting otherwise. The Board should accordingly affirm the ALJ's CMP assessment.

VII. THE ALJ CORRECTLY CONCLUDED THAT RESPONDENT VIOLATED 20 C.F.R. 655.122(h)(4) THROUGH ITS USE OF SUBSTANDARD TRANSPORTATION AND UNLICENSED DRIVERS AND, AS A RESULT OF THESE VIOLATIONS, ASSESSED CMPs.

A. The ALJ Properly Held That Respondent Used Substandard Transportation and Unlicensed Drivers.[18]

The H-2A regulations require "[a]ll employer-provided transportation" to "comply with all applicable Federal, State or local laws and regulations." 20 C.F.R. 655.122(h)(4). The ALJ found, and the record supports, that "Respondent transported the workers from the dormitory area to the fields in unsafe vehicles with unlicensed drivers," in violation of state and federal law. D&O 21; 29 C.F.R. 500.105(b)(1)(iii) (drivers of H-2A-employer-provided transportation must have a "valid permit qualifying the driver to operate the type of vehicle driven by him in the jurisdiction by which the permit is issued") (incorporated by reference in 20 C.F.R. 655.122(h)(4)); see also N.J. Stat. Ann. 39:3-10 (2015) (prohibiting driving on a "public highway" in New Jersey absent a license or permit). Specifically, the ALJ found that of the five buses used to transport farmworkers from the dormitories to the fields and that the Wage and Hour Division Investigator [18] Respondent does not address this issue in its opening brief beyond one sentence stating that "[t]here are some CMP-only claims included in the Decision, with respect to … van drivers … that will be identified briefly here, and discussed further in Respondent's brief on appeal later." Resp't Br. 20.

inspected, three had worn, unsafe tires and one had a broken rear turn signal. D&O 8. Substantial evidence also supports the ALJ's finding that Hernandez would allow any of Respondent's workers to drive "if the worker had a Mexican driver's license or driving experience" and that when the Investigator requested the driver's licenses of each driver he observed driving a bus, "none of the five workers … could provide him with a U.S. driver's license." D&O 8-9; Tr. 401:4-14. Accordingly, the ALJ properly held that Respondent used substandard transportation and unlicensed drivers in violation of section 655.122(h)(4) and Respondent has pointed to no evidence suggesting otherwise. D&O 52. The Board should affirm the ALJ's holding.

B. The ALJ Properly Assessed $7,500 in CMPs.

The Administrator assessed $7,500 in CMPs for the transportation violations. The ALJ correctly held that the "Administrator reasonably assessed CMPs against Respondent" given the clear violations and "reasonably assessed reductions of the CMPs" after reviewing the mitigation factors at 29 C.F.R. 501.19(b). D&O 52-53. The ALJ noted that, given the gravity of the vehicle violations "involving a threat to the health and safety of Respondent's workers," the Administrator was "lenient" to apply any of the mitigation factors. D&O 53 (emphasis added). The Board should affirm the ALJ's CMP assessment.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the Administrator respectfully requests that the Board affirm the ALJ's determination that Respondent engaged in six serious violations of the H-2A program and, accordingly, Respondent owes the $344,945.80 in back wages and $211,800 in civil money penalties determined by the ALJ.

DECISION AND ORDER

PER CURIAM. This case arises under the worker protection provisions of the H-2A temporary agricultural worker program of the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA) and the H-2A implementing regulations.[1] The Administrator of the Wage and Hour Division, United States Department of Labor (Administrator), filed a Notice of Determination, finding that Sun Valley Orchards, LLC (Respondent) violated multiple H-2A program regulations through the actions of its agent, Agustin Hernandez. The Administrator assessed back wages and civil money penalties (CMPs) against the Respondent for violating the governing H-2A regulations.

Respondent requested a hearing, and the Administrator referred the matter to the Office of Administrative Law Judges (OALJ). After a hearing, an Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) issued a Decision and Order Affirming in Part and Modifying in Part the Administrator's Findings (D. & O.). The ALJ found that Respondent violated several of the H-2A program requirements and owed a total of $344,945.80 in back wages and $211,800 in CMPs.

Respondent appealed the ALJ's findings to the Administrative Review Board (Board). After considering the record and the parties' arguments, we conclude that the ALJ correctly determined that Respondent committed serious violations of the H-2A program requirements and, as a result of these violations, the ALJ properly awarded back wages and assessed CMPs. Therefore, we affirm the ALJ's decision.

BACKGROUND

Respondent is a New Jersey farm owned by the Marino family, including brothers Russell and Joseph.[2] At all relevant times, Respondent employed Hernandez as its supervisor of the farmworkers.[3] Hernandez supervised the workers in every aspect of their lives and work. Hernandez oriented the workers, maintained their housing facilities, sold them meals and drinks, oversaw transportation, and distributed pay.[4] Workers paid Hernandez for meals, drinks, housing, and transportation.[5]

Respondent filed two job orders with the Department of Labor (Department) to hire H-2A workers to pick produce crops from April 13 to October 10, 2015.[6] It was Respondent's first time utilizing the H-2A program.[7] In these job orders, Respondent represented to the Department and the H-2A workers that it would "furnish free cooking and kitchen facilities to those workers who are entitled to live in the employer housing so that workers may prepare their own meals."[8]

During the 2015 growing season, the H-2A workers, and many of Respondent's domestic workers, lived at Respondent's housing facility.[9] However, the kitchen at the workers' housing facilities was not large enough to allow the workers to cook their own meals after returning from their shifts.[10] Instead, Hernandez managed a meal plan for the workers, as instructed by Respondent, in which Hernandez would provide cooked food for a fee of $75 to $80 per week.[11] All of the H-2A workers participated in the meal plan at some point.[12] Respondent owned the kitchen, paid its utility bills, and directed Hernandez to maintain records of meal purchases and not to make a profit from the meal plan.[13] The workers did not pay Respondent directly for the meal plan. Instead, Hernandez would take the workers' checks to the bank to cash them and then return the remaining money after deducting the amount owed for the meal plan.[14]

The farmworkers harvested asparagus and peppers. The workers' shifts lasted for twelve hours each day with only a single, one-hour, break.[15] Potable drinking water and clean bathroom facilities were not consistently available to the workers while working in the fields.[16]

Many other aspects of the workers' living and working conditions were inadequate. The workers' dormitories had dirty bathrooms without hot water and two broken sinks.[17] The windows and doors lacked screens and garbage cans lacked lids, which attracted flies and other pests.[18] Respondent transported the workers from the dormitories in unsafe school buses that were driven by workers who were not licensed drivers.[19] A Wage and Hour Division (WHD) investigator found that three of the five buses used by Respondent had worn, unsafe tires and one that had a broken rear turn signal.[20]

Hernandez sold non-alcoholic beverages to the workers in the kitchen and while he supervised them in the fields.[21] He also sold beer to the workers from the kitchen, though he did not have a state license to sell alcohol.[22] Hernandez did not maintain records of the drink sales.

In May 2015, nineteen workers sought a meeting with management to raise concerns about their living and working conditions.[23] Workers testified that Russell Marino was very angry at the meeting and fired the workers.[24] Respondent subsequently distributed worker departure forms that falsely stated the workers were resigning because of personal issues, such as a sick family member.[25] Respondent did not allow the workers to state on the forms that they were fired.[26] Respondent provided the forms to Department and other government agencies after the workers signed them.[27] Russell Marino testified that he listed a false reason for the workers' departure because he did not want to make it harder for the workers to find work later with a mark on their record but he also admitted it was to "protect against . . . this lawsuit."[28] Respondent replaced the workers with other H-2A workers.[29]

In August, Respondent laid off another group of forty-four workers because of a pepper crop failure.[30] Respondent had these workers also sign forms falsely stating their reasons for leaving.[31]

The WHD investigated Respondent to ensure compliance with H-2A regulations during the 2015 growing season.[32] On June 22, 2016, the Administrator issued a Notice of Determination after the investigation, alleging multiple violations of the H-2A program and assessing $369,703.22 in back wages and $212,250 in CMPs against Respondent.[33] Respondent requested a hearing before an ALJ, and the Administrator referred the matter to the OALJ.[34]

ALJ DECISION

The ALJ held an evidentiary hearing on July 18 through 21, 2017 and issued her decision on October 28, 2019.[35] The ALJ made several narrative findings of fact, including that "[k]itchen access was unavailable or otherwise denied" to the workers and that Respondent informed the workers that they could purchase a meal plan for $75 to $80 a week.[36] The ALJ also found that potable water and clean bathroom facilities were only sporadically available, especially in the fields, and that the workers' housing was inadequate.[37] Further, the ALJ found that Respondent fired the nineteen workers in May 2015 after the contentious meeting and that Respondent provided the terminated workers with worker departure forms that gave false reasons for leaving.[38]

The ALJ then discussed the Administrator's violation findings and the back wages and CMPs assessed against Respondent. As an initial matter, the ALJ found that Hernandez acted as Respondent's agent at all relevant times with actual and apparent authority.[39] Under 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(p), the ALJ held that the Administrator properly found that Respondent unlawfully deducted from the workers' wages for the meals, non-alcoholic beverages, and beer under 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(g), (p), and (q).[40] Under 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(p), Respondent could not make deductions from the workers' pay that provided a profit or violated any law.

The ALJ found that Respondent was required to remit back pay for the deductions made from the workers' wages for the meals and non-alcoholic beverages.[41] Under 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(p)(1), job orders must list any deduction not required by law. The ALJ found that Respondent failed to note the deductions for the meal plan in the job orders, depriving the workers of the wage promised to them in the job order.[42] The ALJ explained that the assessment of the entire amount deducted from the workers for the meal plan provided them their contractual right to the wage promised in the job orders and provided a deterrent effect to future employers who may also attempt to alter the terms of the job order upon the workers' arrival.[43] Thus, ALJ affirmed the Administrator's $128,285 back wage assessment for the amount that Hernandez deducted for the meal plan. The ALJ also upheld the Administrator's decision to assess one $1,350 CMP per affected worker for all of the meal and drink violations, totaling $198,450.[44]

The ALJ further found that Respondent profited from the sales of the non-alcoholic beverages to the workers. The ALJ approved of the WHD's use of the Anderson v. Mt. Clemens Pottery Co.,[45] method for calculating the back pay, in which an employee need only show a just and reasonable inference of the amount owed if the employer fails to keep records documenting the unpaid wages. However, the ALJ found the preponderance of the evidence established the workers purchased an average of 4 drinks a day rather than the Administrator's finding of 4.42.[46] Therefore, the ALJ modified the back wages from $71,790.08 to $64,960.[47]

The ALJ found that the beer sales were also unlawful deductions because Hernandez sold beer without a license in violation of New Jersey law[48] and ordered Respondent to remit the $8,972.61 of profits from the sales.[49]

The ALJ next found the Administrator properly found that Respondent discharged twenty-four workers before they had been offered work for at least three-fourths of the workdays specified in the job orders in violation of 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(i)(1).[50] For the nineteen workers who left after the meeting with management in May 2015, the ALJ recalled the workers' consistent testimony that Russell Marino became hostile to the workers and terminated their positions in anger.[51] The ALJ credited the workers' testimony over Joseph Marino's testimony regarding the meeting because he "was unable to specifically remember what was said" during the argument.[52] Therefore, the ALJ found that Respondent terminated the nineteen workers' employment before they worked the three-fourths of the hours promised in the job orders and was liable for any back pay because of the terminations.[53]

The ALJ further found that Respondent violated the three-fourths guarantee for four of the workers that were laid off in August 2015 because of a crop failure. The ALJ noted that counsel for Respondent agreed to the Administrator's calculations of the hours given to the four workers at the hearing and did not defend against the alleged violation in its post-hearing brief.[54] The ALJ also found that 48 The parties stipulated that the beer sales violated New Jersey state law. Id. at 38.

Respondent failed to satisfy its guarantee for one worker, Jose Islas Larraga, because the record contained no evidence that he abandoned his job.[55]

The ALJ affirmed the Administrator's $142,728.22 assessment of back wages for the three-fourths violations, noting that Respondent did not contest the calculations for the nineteen workers and Larraga and was unable to prove that the calculations for the four workers were unreasonable.[56] The ALJ further found that the Administrator's assessment of one $1,350 CMP for the violations was reasonable.[57]

Next, the ALJ affirmed the Administrator's single $1,350 CMP for Respondent's unlawful attempts to cause the workers to waive their three-fourths guarantee.[58] The worker departure forms provided by Respondent to the Department falsely stated that the workers left voluntarily for personal reasons, which Respondent admitted was false.[59] Though the forms did not expressly state that they were giving up their three-fourths guarantee, the ALJ noted that the misrepresentation that they left voluntarily would proximately cause the workers to waive the guarantee under 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(n).[60]

The ALJ affirmed the Administrator's $3,150 CMP for Respondent's inadequate housing conditions, including the missing screens, uncovered garbage cans, and shortage of hot water, that violated § 655.122(d)(1).[61] The ALJ also affirmed the Administrator's $7,500 in CMPs for Respondent's use of substandard transportation and unlicensed drivers in violation of § 655.122(h)(4).[62]

In total, the ALJ imposed $344,945.80 in back wages and $211,800 in CMPs against Respondent.[63] Respondent petitioned for review of the decision thereafter.

JURISDICTION AND STANDARD OF REVIEW

The Board has jurisdiction to hear appeals concerning questions of law or fact from ALJ final decisions in cases under the INA's H-2A provisions and its implementing regulations.[64] The Board will affirm the ALJ's factual findings if supported by substantial evidence but reviews all conclusions of law de novo.[65] Substantial evidence is "such relevant evidence as a reasonable mind might accept as adequate to support a conclusion."[66]

DISCUSSION

Respondent presents many arguments against several aspects of the ALJ's decision on appeal. Respondent contests the ALJ's finding that at all relevant times, Hernandez acted as Respondent's agent. Respondent also contests the ALJ's findings against it for the unlawful meal and drink deductions, the three-fourths guarantee violations, and the attempted waiver violation. We shall address each argument in turn.

Respondent contests the ALJ's finding that Hernandez acted as Respondent's agent while operating the meal plan and selling the workers beer, thereby making Respondent liable for his unlawful actions. Respondent claims that the principles of agency do not apply because "the theory in this case is breach of contract" and that Hernandez acted independently when operating the meal plan by using the workers' payments to buy food and compensate kitchen staff. The ALJ found that Hernandez acted as Respondent's agent at all relevant times, with both actual and apparent authority over the workers and, therefore, his actions were "legally equivalent to the actions of Respondent."[67]

First, we conclude that the ALJ correctly held that common law agency principles apply to violations arising under the INA, including the H-2A regulations.[68] Therefore, an H-2A employer is liable for its employee's unlawful actions while acting under actual or apparent authority of the employer.[69]

The ALJ found that Hernandez acted with actual authority when he administered the meal plan. An agent acts with actual authority "when at the time of taking action that has legal consequences for the principal, the agent reasonably believes, in accordance with the principal's manifestations to the agent, that the principal wishes the agent so to act."[70] Here, Respondent told Hernandez to operate the same meal plan that Respondent had used for workers before engaging in the H-2A program. It had Hernandez attend Department training sessions concerning meal plans, and instructed Hernandez to maintain the records of the food and beverage sales and to comply with the H-2A program requirements.[71] Under these instructions, Hernandez operated the meal plan service and collected money from the workers for the food. Without Hernandez's services, Respondent would not have complied with its requirement to provide meals to its workers. This evidence demonstrates Hernandez reasonably believed that he was operating the meal plan under his employer's instructions and not as his own business. Respondent points to no evidence that would support a legal conclusion to the contrary. Thus, we conclude the ALJ correctly found that Hernandez acted with actual authority.[72]

Though the ALJ found that Hernandez acted as Respondent's agent at all relevant times, the ALJ also found that Hernandez was an "affiliated person" of Respondent when selling beer to the workers. An H-2A employer may not make a deduction from an employee's wages that "includes profit to the employer or to any affiliated person."[73] WHD guidance describes an affiliated person as those "who furnish workers, any person acting in the employer's behalf or interest (directly or indirectly), or who has an interest in the employment relationship."[74] At the very least, Hernandez acted indirectly in Respondent's interest when selling the beer to the workers out of Respondent's kitchen. Therefore, the ALJ correctly found Respondent was liable for any unlawful profit that Hernandez made from the sale of beer to the workers.

2. The Workers' Kitchen Facilities

For the period from June 1, 2015 through October 10, 2015, Respondent signed a job order submitted to the Department in which it promised to "furnish free cooking and kitchen facilities to those workers who are entitled to live in the employer's housing so that workers may prepare their own meals" and that "[o]nce a week the employers will offer to provide (on a voluntary basis by the workers) free transportation to assure workers access to the closest store where they can purchase groceries."[75]

[72] The ALJ also correctly found that Hernandez acted with apparent authority when administering the meal plan because the workers reasonably believed that Respondent instructed Hernandez to implement the meal plan. D. & O. at 37-38; see Arriaga, 305 F.3d at 1245. However, we need not discuss this finding in detail because we affirm the ALJ's finding that Hernandez acted with actual authority.

Respondent contends the ALJ's finding that it failed to provide the kitchen facilities contractually promised to the workers is not supported by the evidence in the record. Respondent claims the testimony was "inconsistent" regarding how many workers could simultaneously use the kitchen and that some workers either used the kitchen or never asked to use it. However, Respondent's argument misses the point. Even if there were inconsistencies, they do not undercut the ALJ's finding that Respondent failed to meet its legal obligation to provide the workers with access to its kitchen to prepare meals on their own, nor would they provide an evidentiary basis to disturb the ALJ's findings on this issue. The Administrator points out that Hernandez testified that the kitchen was too small for the workers to prepare their own food. Hernandez's wife, who worked in the kitchen, further explained that workers were not allowed to use the kitchen.[76] Hernandez himself testified that workers were only allowed to store small items in the kitchen, and the workers who were able to cook for themselves purchased and used a hot plate in the dormitories.[77] Thus, we conclude that the ALJ's finding is supported by substantial evidence in the record.

3. The Back Wages and CMPs for the Undisclosed Meal Plan Deductions

Respondent contests the ALJ's order of $128,185 in back wages and $198,450 in CMPs for the deductions made from the workers' wages for the undisclosed meal plan under 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(p). Respondent argues that Hernandez did not deduct the meal plan costs from the workers' pay because the record demonstrated that the workers would pay him after they received their cash, and that the ALJ's decision to assess a per-worker CMP rather than a single CMP is excessive because there was only one violation of failing to disclose the meal charges.

As an initial matter, Respondent fails to accurately describe how the workers paid for the meal plan. As the ALJ observed, the workers never paid in cash for either the meals or the beverages Hernandez sold. Instead, Hernandez would cash the workers' checks at the bank and then return the money to them, minus what was owed for meals and beverages.[78]

Further, the manner in which Hernandez charged the workers for the meal plan is irrelevant because shifting a cost that Respondent could not deduct

"constitutes an unlawful de facto deduction that impermissibly drives the employee's pay below the required prevailing wage."[79] The Board has held that "there is no legal difference between an employer directly deducting a cost from a worker's wages, and shifting to the employee a cost that the employer could not lawfully directly deduct from wages."[80] Here, whether Hernandez took the money before or after providing the workers' pay is a distinction without a difference because the effect would be the same. The workers' would lose $75-80 of their earnings. Thus, the charges Hernandez took out of the workers' pay for the meal plans were deductions.

Respondent's contention that the Administrator can only assess one CMP for its failure to disclose the meal plan is incorrect. H-2A regulations permit the Administrator to assess a CMP "for each violation of the work contract" including each failure to "pay an individual worker properly or to honor the terms or conditions of a worker's employment."[81] Under each worker's job contract, Respondent falsely represented that an adequate kitchen would be provided. Further, Hernandez, acting as Respondent's agent, failed to pay each worker properly by subtracting deductions from each worker's pay that were not disclosed in the job orders. Therefore, Respondent failed to honor the terms of each worker's job contract, resulting in a violation for each worker Respondent employed.

The H-2A regulations incorporate FLSA regulations for the permissibility of deductions. 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(p) ("The principles applied in determining whether deductions are reasonable . . . are explained in more detail in 29 CFR part 531.").

The Administrator is granted discretion in "fashioning an appropriate remedy for a violation" within the limits of the H-2A regulations.[82] The regulations permit the Administrator to assess up to $1,500 per CMP.[83] The Administrator's decision to assess one $1,350 CMP for each worker that was misled by the job order was not an abuse of her discretion.

4. The Impact of the Failure to Disclose the Meal Plan

Respondent argues that the ALJ's order for $128,285 in back wages and $198,450 in CMPs for the unlawful meal plan deductions should be reversed because its failure to disclose the meal plan charges would not have impacted the Department's decision to approve Respondent's H-2A application or the workers' decision to accept the job orders. Respondent claims that the purpose of the H-2A disclosure requirements is: (1) to inform potential workers of the terms of conditions so they can decide whether to accept the job; and (2) to allow the Department to know whether the terms of the job might adversely affect similarly-employed domestic workers. Respondent cites Matter of Global Horizons, in which an ALJ granted partial summary decision to the employer that had failed to accurately disclose meal charges because the employer did not exploit the workers by overcharging for meals.[84] Thus, Respondent claims that the back wages and CMPs are not warranted because Respondent did not profit off of the meal plan.

The deductions were unlawful because they were not disclosed, not because they provided a profit. The H-2A wage requirements are not "met where undisclosed or unauthorized deductions, rebates, or refunds reduce the wage payment made to the employee below the minimum amounts required."[85] Here, the undisclosed deductions for the meal plan reduced the workers' wages below the required wages (i.e. the wages specified in the job orders). Therefore, the back pay award for all meal plan deductions allows the workers to receive the wages that they were contractually promised.[86]

Further, Respondent's citation to Global Horizons does not support its argument because the ALJ in that case ultimately awarded the workers back wages in the full amount of undisclosed meal plan deductions.[87] The ALJ in that case decided to grant summary decision to deny CMPs, not back wages, for the failure to disclose because the employer was "already being penalized the entire cost of buying food and paying cooks to prepare" the food.[88]

Last, whether providing a meal plan instead of cooking facilities would affect any of the workers' decisions to work for Respondent is irrelevant because all workers still received an inaccurate job order and had their wages reduced below the wage promised in the order. Further, Respondent provided inaccurate information to the Department that it relied upon in the application approval process. The Department depends on this information to ensure that the employment of the H-2A workers "will not adversely affect the wages and working conditions of" domestic workers.[89] Therefore, the Administrator appropriately assessed the back wages and CMPs both to provide the workers with the wages they were promised and to deter other H-2A employers from making the same failures to disclose in a potentially exploitative way.

Respondent contests the $64,960 back wages award for Hernandez's soft drink sales to the workers.[90] Respondent claims that testimony established that potable water was available to the workers at all times and that Hernandez's sales had no impact on Respondent's profits. Respondent adds that there was no testimony for why it was necessary for the workers to buy the soft drinks and that the H-2A regulations do not justify an award of free drinks to the workers.

We agree that the regulations generally do not require H-2A employers to provide soft drinks to its workers. However, if an employer or an "affiliated person" does sell them drinks, the regulations prohibit them from profiting from the sales.[91] If an employer or affiliated person does unlawfully sell the workers drinks, the employer is liable for the amount charged that reduced the employee's wages below the amount promised in the job orders.[92] Hernandez, who was acting as Respondent's agent when selling the drinks out of the kitchen or in the fields while supervising the workers, testified that he sold the beverages at a profit.[93] Thus, the soft drink sales were unlawful deductions from the workers' wages.

Further, although Respondent contends that evidence demonstrated that water was available at meals and at all times in the fields, the ALJ did not base her finding on the availability of potable water. Rather, the ALJ relied on her finding that drinkable water was sporadically available[94] to support her decision to award the full amount charged for the soft drinks. Even if Respondent had consistently provided its workers with clean, drinkable water at all times, Hernandez's sale of beverages for a profit still violated the regulations, and therefore, Respondent would be liable for the back wages.

Hernandez also sold beer to the workers from the kitchen, in violation of state law because he did not have a license to sell alcohol.[95] Hernandez did not maintain records of the drink sales, so the Administrator reconstructed the amount of drinks sold to the workers.[96] The Administrator determined that Respondent owed $8,972.61 in back wages for the profit Hernandez earned through his sale of beer in violation of state law.[97]

Respondent claims that the Administrator's calculations of Hernandez's beer sales were incorrect because the investigator based the calculations off of a different brand of beer, store, and price used by Hernandez. However, because Respondent failed to keep records of the beer sold to the workers, the ALJ correctly applied the Anderson v. Mt. Clemens Pottery Co. burden shifting framework, in which the plaintiff only needs to produce sufficient evidence of the wages owed as a matter of just and reasonable inference.[98] The burden then shifts to the employer to produce evidence of the precise amount owed, and if the employer fails to do so, the court may award damages that need only be "approximate."[99]

Because Respondent could not rebut the Administrator's calculations with precise amounts, the ALJ was correct in awarding back wages that were an approximation of Hernandez's profits. The Administrator used the prices for beer at wholesale retailer Costco, while Hernandez had purchased the beer at Sam's Club, another wholesale club likely to sell products at similar prices.[100] Further, the Administrator used the price of Coors Light to calculate the profits, which is one of the brands of beer Hernandez sold.[101] The Mt. Clemens standard only requires estimates; precision is not required. Therefore, the ALJ's finding of $8,972.61 in profits from the beer sales was reasonable.

To calculate Hernandez's estimated profit from the beer sales, a WHD investigator used the price of $20.99 per thirty-pack of Coors Light, which is one brand of beer Hernandez sold, based upon the cost from a wholesale club similar to the one used by Hernandez to buy the beer. The investigator determined that he profited $1.30 per can because Hernandez sold the beer for $2 a can and each beer cost him $.70 to buy. The investigator determined Respondent profited $18.20 off each worker per week based on a reasonable estimation of how much beer each worker bought per week. Id. at 7-8.

6. The Three-Fourths Guarantee Violations and Waiver Attempts

Respondent contests the award of $142,728.22 in back wages and $1,350 in CMPs for the ALJ's findings that Respondent had violated the three-fourths guarantee for several workers.[102] H-2A employers must offer each worker "employment for a total number of work hours equal to at least three-fourths of the workdays" that are "specified in the work contract."[103] A worker that abandons employment or is terminated for cause is not entitled to the guarantee.[104]

For the nineteen workers that left in May 2015, Respondent disputes the ALJ's finding that Respondent terminated the workers without cause and the ALJ's credibility determination that favored the workers over Respondent's witnesses. Respondent cites one worker's uncorroborated testimony that Russell Marino tried to hit him as evidence that the workers' testimony lacked credibility and claims that it would have been illogical to fire the workers during harvest season.

The Board gives ALJ credibility determinations "great deference" if they are not "inherently incredible or patently unreasonable."[105] The Board affords such deference because the ALJ is able to observe the "witnesses' demeanor while testifying" and "the extent to which their testimony is supported or contradicted by other credible evidence."[106] Here, the ALJ noted the consistency of the testimony of several of the workers' regarding the May 2015 meeting and that Joseph Marino's hearing testimony contradicted his deposition. Although one worker's uncorroborated testimony about an alleged assault does not bolster the ALJ's credibility finding, it does not make the determination "inherently incredible or patently unreasonable." The ALJ's credibility determination is substantial evidence that Respondent made "a rash, and perhaps illogical, decision" to fire the workers at that meeting and replace them in violation of their three-fourths guarantee.[107]

The Respondent also disputes the ALJ's finding that Respondent violated the three-fourths guarantee for four workers who were sent home after the pepper crop had become diseased.[108] Respondent claims that the four workers were offered the required hours but were unable to work them because they were sick or injured. However, Respondent waived this argument before the ALJ by agreeing to the Administrator's calculations regarding the three-fourths violations for the four workers and by failing to raise any argument against the alleged violation in its post-hearing brief.[109] Even if it did not waive the argument, Respondent does not cite to any evidence in the record demonstrating that the four workers were offered the required amount of work. Therefore, we affirm the ALJ's three-fourths violation finding concerning these four workers.[110]

Respondent contests the ALJ's finding that it attempted to waive the workers' three-fourths guarantees by falsifying their departure forms to say they Counsel for Respondent withdrew an exhibit containing its own calculations of the hours worked and stated he "was wrong" about its contents. D. & O. at 47.

110 The Administrator claims that Respondent appears to group one worker, Islas Larraga, who left in June 2015, in with the four workers who were dismissed in August. The ALJ made a separate finding that the record contained no evidence that he abandoned his job and that Respondent violated his three-fourths guarantee. D. & O. at 47. Even if he did abandon the job, Respondent still failed to report the end of his employment to the Department as required. 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(n) ("If the worker voluntarily abandons employment . . . and the employer notifies [the Department,] . . . the worker is not entitled to the three-fourths guarantee.").

left voluntarily.[111] Respondent argues that it was not attempting to have the workers waive their three-fourths guarantee because they never presented the forms to WHD investigators to explain their departures. However, H-2A regulations state that an employer may not "seek to have an H-2A worker . . . waive any rights conferred under 8 U.S.C. 1188, 20 CFR part 655, subpart B."[112] Respondent had asked the workers to sign the falsified form. Whether Respondent presented the forms to WHD investigators is irrelevant in this case. Substantial evidence supports the finding that it was attempting to waive their rights because Respondent admitted that no workers had sick or deceased family members and that the purpose of falsifying the forms was "to protect against . . . this lawsuit."

7. Remaining Arguments

Respondent contests the $3,150 in CMPs for the workers' inadequate living conditions, stating that the "condition of the housing resulted from lack of care by the workers living there, but more importantly, could have been remedied immediately if the WHD Investigator had been interested in the workers' living conditions rather than in assessing CMPs and raised the issue to Sun Valley in a timely manner." We are unable to discern any legal argument from this statement, nor do we see any abuse of discretion in the ALJ's order of CMPs for the workers' poor housing conditions.

Last, in a section titled "Estoppel/Laches/Mitigation," Respondent complains that the WHD improperly failed to raise concerns about the meal plan charges and bring an enforcement action in a timely manner. Respondent claims that the WHD knew of the meal plan in July 2015 but did not discuss any issue with Respondent until February 2016. This argument is without merit.[113] Respondent admits that there is no case law that applies the doctrines of laches or estoppel to a government enforcement action and that H-2A employers are ultimately still responsible for complying with the regulations. Indeed, the Administrator notes that there is no [113] We must make the point that participation in the H-2B visa program is voluntary. Respondent was under no compulsion to file a request for visas as a means to fulfill its projected employment needs. However, having received the benefit of government action, Respondent was obliged to tell the truth, and to meet the obligations it had undertaken both to its visa employees and to the federal government. We see no mitigating factors. On the contrary, Respondent appears to have simply violated the law.

regulatory requirement for the WHD to notify an employer the instant a violation is suspected and that the Supreme Court has long recognized that laches is not a defense to a government enforcement action.[114]

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, we agree with the ALJ's following findings, determination of back wages, and CMP assessments:

1. Respondent violated 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(g), (p), and (q) by making false promises about kitchen access and failing to disclose meal charges. As a result, it owes $128,285 in back wages, and $198,450 in CMPs.

2. Respondent violated 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(p) through the sale of drinks and other items at a profit or in violation of state law. As a result, it owes $64,960 in back wages for non-alcoholic drinks sold and $8,972.61 for the profit it made from the beer it sold.

3. Respondent violated 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(i) by discharging certain workers prior to such workers meeting the three-fourths guarantee. As a result, it owes $142,728.22 in back wages, and $1,350 in CMPs.

4. Respondent violated 29 C.F.R. § 501.5 by attempting to cause workers to waive the three-fourths guarantee at 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(i). As a result, it owes $1,350 in CMPs.

5. Respondent violated 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(d) through the provision of inadequate housing. As a result, it owes $3,150 in CMPs.

6. Respondent violated 20 C.F.R. § 655.122(h)(4) through substandard transportation and unlicensed drivers. As a result, it owes $7,500 in CMPs.

Therefore, we AFFIRM the ALJ's Decision and Order Affirming in Part and Modifying in Part the Administrator's Findings.

SO ORDERED.
