UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT

CHARLES MATTHEW ERHART, Plaintiff,

v.

BOFI HOLDING, INC.,
Defendant.

Case No. 15-cv-02287-BAS-NLS consolidated with 15-cv-02353-BAS-NLS

ORDER:

- (1) GRANTING IN PART AND DENYING IN PART BOFI FEDERAL BANK’S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT (ECF No. 127); AND
- (2) GRANTING IN PART AND DENYING IN PART CHARLES ERHART’S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT (ECF No. 137)

And Consolidated Case

INTRODUCTION

Charles Erhart was an internal auditor for BofI Federal Bank. After Erhart discovered conduct he believed to be wrongful, he reported it to BofI’s principal regulator. BofI responded by allegedly defaming and terminating him. Erhart then filed this lawsuit for whistleblower retaliation under state and federal law. The next

1 morning, The New York Times published an article summarizing the lawsuit’s 2 allegations—causing BofI’s stock price to plummet. The Bank quickly commenced 3 a countersuit against Erhart claiming he committed fraud, breached his duty of 4 loyalty, and violated state and federal anti-hacking statutes. The Court consolidated 5 BofI’s countersuit with Erhart’s whistleblower-retaliation action.

6 Now before the Court are the parties’ cross-motions for summary judgment.
7 BofI asks the Court to summarily adjudicate parts of Erhart’s whistleblower 8 retaliation claims. (ECF No. 127.) Erhart, in turn, seeks summary judgment on 9 almost all the Bank’s claims. (ECF No. 137.) The Court held oral argument on the 10 motions. (ECF No. 175.) For the following reasons, the Court GRANTS IN PART 11 and DENIES IN PART each party’s motion.

12 BACKGROUND

13 Charles Erhart graduated from The University of Kansas in 2009 with a degree 14 in finance. (Erhart Prelim. Inj. Decl. ¶ 2, ECF No. 158-4.) After briefly working as 15 a financial support analyst, Erhart served as an examiner for the Financial Industry 16 Regulatory Authority for nearly four years. (Id. ¶ 3.) Then, in September 2013, he 17 started working for BofI at its headquarters in San Diego, California. (Erhart Summ.
18 J. Opp’n Decl. ¶ 2, ECF No. 158-2; Joint Statement of Undisputed Facts (“JSUF”) ¶
19 6, ECF No. 167.)

20 BofI Federal Bank is a federally chartered savings and loan association. (JSUF 21 ¶ 1.) Its holding company, BofI Holding, Inc., is publicly traded under the Securities 22 Exchange Act of 1934.¹ BofI provides financing for residential properties and small-

24 ¹ BofI Holding’s common stock originally traded on The NASDAQ Global Select Market
25 under Section 12(b) of the Exchange Act. See Axos Financial, Inc., Registration of Securities
26 (Form 8-A) (Sept. 13, 2018). Since this lawsuit was filed, BofI Holding and BofI Federal Bank 27 have rebranded as Axos Financial, Inc. and Axos Bank. (Tolla Decl. ¶ 2, ECF No. 127-2.) The 28 holding company’s shares now trade on The New York Stock Exchange. Axos Financial, Inc., Registration of Securities (Form 8-A) (Sept. 13, 2018).

To maintain continuity, the Court refers to these entities by their prior names. And unless the distinction is relevant, the Court uses “BofI” and “the Bank” to refer to either BofI Holding or BofI Federal Bank.

1 to-medium size businesses. (Id. ¶ 2.) The Bank also purchases “specialty finance 2 receivables,” such as payment streams from structured court settlements and lottery 3 winnings. (Id. ¶¶ 2, 44; see also Erhart Prelim. Inj. Decl. ¶ 12.) The Bank hired 4 Erhart to work as an internal auditor in its Internal Audit Department. (JSUF ¶ 6.)

5 I. The Internal Audit Department

6 BofI’s Internal Audit Department tests, monitors, and reports on the Bank’s 7 internal controls. (JSUF ¶¶ 9, 11.) The Office of the Comptroller of the Currency
8 (“OCC”) is BofI’s primary regulator. (Id. ¶ 4.) The OCC defines internal controls 9 in the banking context as “the systems, policies, procedures, and processes” 10 implemented to “safeguard bank assets, limit or control risks, and achieve a bank’s 11 objectives.” OCC, Comptroller’s Handbook: Internal Control 1 (2001). An audit of 12 BofI’s internal controls starts with an internal auditor obtaining “input and supporting 13 documentation from the relevant business unit” and preparing “preliminary 14 conclusions in the form of a draft audit report.” (JSUF ¶ 14.) Then, during the “exit 15 meeting” for the audit, “key individuals from Internal Audit and the business unit 16 discuss potential issues raised in the draft report.” (Id. ¶ 15.) Once the audit report 17 is finalized, the Vice President (“VP”) of Internal Audit distributes the final report to 18 both the business unit and the Audit Committee of the Board of Directors—which 19 oversees the Internal Audit Department. (Id. ¶¶ 12, 18.)

20 When Erhart joined BofI, Jonathan Ball served as the VP of Internal Audit and 21 managed the Internal Audit Department. (JSUF ¶ 9.) Hence, Erhart reported directly 22 to VP Ball. (Id.) One level above VP Ball on the corporate hierarchy was John Tolla, 23 Senior Vice President (“SVP”) of Audit and Compliance. (Erhart Prelim. Inj. Decl.
24 ¶ 10.)

25 As an internal auditor, Erhart’s job responsibilities included completing 26 assigned audits. (JSUF ¶ 7.) He necessarily had to make inquiries and judgments 27 based on the information available to him. (Id. ¶ 8.) Erhart had not previously done 28 internal audit work. (Erhart Summ. J. Opp’n Decl. ¶ 2.) He thus “received on-the-

1 job training, primarily from Mr. Ball, but also online at ‘Reg U’ and at various Banker
2 Compliance Group seminars.” (Id.) In addition, Erhart “was trained to do Sarbanes– 3 Oxley Act (‘SOX’) testing,” and he “knew that the Bank was required to certify its 4 SOX compliance with the CEO and CFO signing off on such a certification on its 5 financials, such as” Form 10-K filed with the SEC. (Id. ¶ 3.)

6 Erhart worked in BofI’s Internal Audit Department for approximately eighteen 7 months. (See Erhart Prelim. Inj. Decl. ¶¶ 9, 53, 72.) The parties tell two diverging 8 stories of his tenure at the Bank.

9 II. Erhart’s Believed Wrongdoing

10 Erhart’s narrative portrays himself as an internal auditor in a turbulent 11 corporate environment. (See Erhart Prelim. Inj. Decl. ¶¶ 9–75.) Time and time again, 12 Erhart claims he repeatedly battled against pressure from senior management as he 13 discovered conduct he believed to be wrongful. (Id.)

14 For instance, Erhart states he unearthed wrongdoing while conducting the 15 “Structured Settlements and Lottery Audit.” (Erhart Prelim. Inj. Decl. ¶¶ 10–16.) As 16 mentioned, one of BofI’s revenue sources involves purchasing structured settlements 17 and payment streams to lottery winners. (Id. ¶ 12.) The Bank solicits prospects for 18 this business unit through phone calls and a website. (Id.) While conducting an audit 19 of this business unit in December 2013, Erhart states he discovered BofI’s callers 20 “were not notifying people they called that the calls were being recorded,” which 21 Erhart believed violated “California Penal Code § 632.” (Id. ¶ 13.)

22 When senior management became aware of his finding, Erhart claims 23 management instructed him and his supervisor VP Ball to remove the finding from 24 the written audit report. (Erhart Prelim. Inj. Decl. ¶¶ 14–16.) And when he and Ball 25 refused to do so, Erhart further claims that senior management told him to mark the 26 entire report “Attorney Client Privileged” out of a concern that “the finding could be 27 discoverable in class action litigation against the Bank, which would be expensive to 28

1 defend.” (Id. ¶ 16.) Erhart “acceded to this order,” but still refused “to remove the 2 finding from the audit.” (Id.)

3 Erhart states he believed this conduct was wrongful because it is “improper to 4 remove findings from audits before they [are] turned over to regulators like the 5 OCC.” (Erhart Summ. J. Opp’n Decl. ¶ 6.) He also states he believed the instructions 6 “to remove the finding constituted a violation of SOX, including rules that require 7 adequate internal controls and accurate books and records, as well as constituting 8 fraud on shareholders and regulators.” (Id.)

9 Several other examples of Erhart’s believed wrongdoing involve the Bank’s 10 interactions with the OCC, including during an onsite regulatory examination. (See 11 Erhart Prelim. Inj. Decl. ¶¶ 32–33, 37–43, 49, 52.) Erhart claims the Bank falsely 12 responded to information requests, withheld information that the OCC had requested, 13 and sought to defraud the regulator. (Id. ¶¶ 32, 33, 39; Erhart Summ J. Opp’n Decl.
14 ¶¶ 13, 15, 17–18.) He also claims the Bank discouraged internal audit staff from 15 communicating in writing during the examination because BofI “did not want a paper 16 trail regarding [its] improprieties.” (Erhart Summ J. Opp’n Decl. ¶ 17.)

17 Erhart describes various other conduct he discovered at BofI that he believed 18 was wrongful. (See generally Erhart Prelim. Inj. Decl. ¶¶ 9–75; Erhart Summ. J.
19 Opp’n Decl. ¶¶ 5–16.) Ultimately, Erhart claims he reported this conduct to the 20 Government, and he contends BofI retaliated against him for raising these 21 concerns—including by harassing, defaming, and firing him. (Erhart Summ. J.
22 Opp’n Decl. ¶¶ 20–21.) As one example, Erhart claims BofI’s CEO falsely declared 23 that Erhart’s “whistleblower activities were ‘malicious’” and that any information 24 Erhart provided to the government could not be credible because of his “psychiatric 25 medical leave.” (Erhart Prelim. Inj. Decl. ¶¶ 73–74.) The CEO also purportedly 26 claimed “that he was going to ‘bury the whistleblower.’” (Id. ¶ 74.)

1 III. The Bank's Counter-Narrative

2 In contrast, the Bank portrays Erhart as an internal auditor gone rogue—a loose 3 cannon who recklessly handled confidential information and conducted unauthorized 4 investigations. As one example, the Bank claims that Erhart, without authorization, 5 requested that Bank staff run due diligence reports to dig up dirt on other employees, 6 including a bank executive's son. (Tolla Rule 30(b)(6) Dep. 50:13–51:4, ECF No.
7 155-11; Ball Dep. 329:8–14, ECF No. 155-6.) Erhart's manager, VP Ball, testified 8 that Erhart did not have authority to have these reports run and he did not request
9 permission to do so. (See Ball Dep. 329:8–10, 15–17, ECF No. 155-6.)

10 As another example, BofI highlights that Erhart obtained its CEO's personal 11 tax returns allegedly as part of a review of employee deposit accounts at the Bank.
12 (Erhart Dep. 639:7–640:14, ECF No. 155-3.) VP Ball did not instruct Erhart to obtain 13 these tax returns, was not aware that Erhart did, and testified it was improper for 14 Erhart to pull the personal returns “at that part of the investigation.” (Ball Dep.

16 The Bank also claims Erhart improperly inserted himself into a payroll audit.
17 The Bank argues it is disputed “if, when, and how Erhart may have been assigned to 18 conduct this audit.” (BofI's Opp'n 12:10–11, ECF No. 155.) VP Ball does not recall 19 if Erhart was assigned to this audit and believes Erhart was “corrupting the audit.” 20 (Ball Dep. 178:19–183:3, ECF No. 155-6.) The Bank further claims that after he 21 purportedly requested employee bonus information for the payroll audit, Erhart 22 distributed a list of BofI employee stock options and awards to at least one other 23 auditor who was not working on the audit. (Tolla Rule 30(b)(6) Dep. 55:25–57:3, 24 ECF No. 155-11.) A recipient of this list testified that Erhart sent the information 25 because he “wanted us to be aware of all the bonuses that had been granted to all of 26 the employees at BofI Federal Bank.” (Grenet Dep. 113:7–13, ECF No. 155-9.)

27 Beyond improperly accessing supposed confidential information, the Bank 28 claims Erhart wrongly took this information from BofI. Erhart admittedly kept 1 documents containing information “in a bag that was buried in [his] closet under a 2 bunch of items.” (Erhart Dep. 192:8–13, ECF No. 155-2.) He claims he had 3 permission to take documents home, but this fact is disputed. (Ball Dep. 93:5–15, 4 ECF No. 155-5.) The Bank claims this conduct would be against BofI policy, as 5 everything was supposed to be “kept in the bank or stored in there on the bank’s 6 electronic system.” (Id. 93:8–10, 261:3–17.) Erhart also put confidential information 7 on a USB drive purportedly without permission and later returned during this lawsuit 8 two USB drives containing confidential information. (Id. 93:11–15, Erhart Dep.

10 IV. Procedural History

11 In April 2015, Erhart filed a Whistleblower Complaint with the Department of 12 Labor (“DOL”)’s Occupational Safety and Health Administration (“OSHA”) that 13 alleges he was retaliated against for reporting wrongdoing he discovered at the Bank.
14 (OSHA Whistleblower Compl., ECF No. 158-16.) Then, approximately six months 15 later, Erhart commenced this action, raising federal whistleblower retaliation claims 16 and an assortment of state law causes of action against the Bank. (Erhart’s Compl., 17 ECF No. 1.)

18 Nearly a week after Erhart filed his Complaint, BofI filed a countersuit against 19 Erhart, bringing claims under the Computer Fraud and Abuse Act and various state 20 laws. (BofI’s Compl., No. 15-cv-2353-BAS-NLS, ECF No. 1.) The Court 21 consolidated BofI’s countersuit with Erhart’s whistleblower retaliation action. (ECF 22 No. 22.) Since then, the Court has resolved a medley of motions, and the parties have 23 completed discovery. Now before the Court are the parties’ cross-motions for 24 summary judgment.

25 LEGAL STANDARD

26 “A party may move for summary judgment, identifying each claim or 27 defense—or the part of each claim or defense—on which summary judgment is 28 sought.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a). Summary judgment is appropriate under Rule 56(c)

1 where the moving party demonstrates the absence of a genuine issue of material fact 2 and entitlement to judgment as a matter of law. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c); Celotex
3 Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 322 (1986). A fact is material when, under the 4 governing substantive law, it could affect the outcome of the case. Anderson v.
5 Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248 (1986). A dispute about a material fact is 6 genuine if “the evidence is such that a reasonable jury could return a verdict for the 7 nonmoving party.” Id. at 248.

8 A party seeking summary judgment always bears the initial burden of 9 establishing the absence of a genuine issue of material fact. Celotex, 477 U.S. at 323.
10 The moving party can satisfy this burden in two ways: (1) by presenting evidence 11 that negates an essential element of the nonmoving party’s case; or (2) by 12 demonstrating that the nonmoving party failed to make a showing sufficient to 13 establish an element essential to that party’s case on which that party will bear the 14 burden of proof at trial. Id. at 322–23. “Disputes over irrelevant or unnecessary facts 15 will not preclude a grant of summary judgment.” T.W. Elec. Serv., Inc. v. Pac. Elec.
16 Contractors Ass’n, 809 F.2d 626, 630 (9th Cir. 1987).

17 If the moving party meets this initial burden, the nonmoving party cannot 18 defeat summary judgment merely by demonstrating “that there is some metaphysical 19 doubt as to the material facts.” Matsushita Electric Indus. Co., Ltd. v. Zenith Radio
20 Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 586 (1986); see also Triton Energy Corp. v. Square D Co., 68 21 F.3d 1216, 1221 (9th Cir. 1995) (“The mere existence of a scintilla of evidence in 22 support of the non-moving party’s position is not sufficient.” (citing Anderson, 477 23 U.S. at 252)). Rather, the nonmoving party must “go beyond the pleadings and by 24 ‘the depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file,’ designate 25 ‘specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial.’” Celotex, 477 U.S. at 26 324 (quoting former Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(e)).

27 When making this determination, the court must view all inferences drawn 28 from the underlying facts in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party. See

1 Matsushita, 475 U.S. at 587. “Credibility determinations, the weighing of evidence, 2 and the drawing of legitimate inferences from the facts are jury functions, not those 3 of a judge, [when] he [or she] is ruling on a motion for summary judgment.”
4 Anderson, 477 U.S. at 255.

5 THE BANK’S MOTION

6 BofI moves for partial summary judgment on Erhart’s federal whistleblower 7 retaliation claims and his related state law retaliation and wrongful discharge causes 8 of action. (BofI’s Mot., ECF No. 127-1.) The Court will address each claim in turn.

9 I. Sarbanes–Oxley § 806, 18 U.S.C. § 1514A

10 Erhart’s first claim alleges BofI retaliated against him in violation of Sarbanes– 11 Oxley § 806, 18 U.S.C. § 1514A. (Erhart’s Second Am. Compl. (“SAC”) ¶¶ 76–87, 12 ECF No. 124.) Congress enacted the Sarbanes–Oxley Act of 2002, Pub. L. No. 107-13 204, 116 Stat. 745, to “safeguard investors in public companies and restore trust in 14 the financial markets following the collapse of Enron Corporation.” Lawson v. FMR 15 LLC, 571 U.S. 429, 432 (2014) (citing S. Rep. No. 107-146, at 2–11 (2002)). In 16 seeking to prevent corporate fraud, Congress was particularly concerned with the 17 “abundant evidence that Enron had succeeded in perpetuating its massive shareholder 18 fraud in large part due to a ‘corporate code of silence.’” Id. at 435 (citing S. Rep. No.
19 107-146, at 2, 4–5 (2002)). This code of silence discouraged employees from 20 reporting fraudulent behavior, and employees who attempted to report misconduct 21 faced retaliation. Id. (citing S. Rep. No. 107-146, at 2, 5, 10 (2002)).

22 To address this issue, Section 806 of Sarbanes–Oxley created a new 23 whistleblower protection provision, 18 U.S.C. § 1514A. Lawson, 571 U.S. at 435.
24 This provision, as amended, provides:

25 No [publicly-traded] company . . . may discharge . . . or in any other 26 manner discriminate against an employee in the terms and conditions of 27 employment because of any lawful act done by the employee—

28 (1) to provide information . . . regarding any conduct which the employee reasonably believes constitutes a violation of 1 section 1341 [mail fraud], 1343 [wire fraud], 1344 [bank 2 fraud], or 1348 [securities or commodities fraud], any rule or 3 regulation of the Securities and Exchange Commission, or any 4 provision of Federal law relating to fraud against shareholders, when the information or assistance is provided to or the investigation is conducted by 5 (A) a Federal regulatory or law enforcement agency;

6 (B) any Member of Congress or any committee of 7 Congress; or

8 (C) a person with supervisory authority over the 9 employee

11 18 U.S.C. § 1514A(a). Notably, Sarbanes–Oxley does not provide whistleblower 12 protection for any reported company misconduct. See id. The conduct must 13 constitute a believed violation specifically enumerated in the statute. Id.

14 As mentioned, Erhart claims BofI violated § 1514A by retaliating against him 15 for reporting conduct he believed to be wrongful to the Government. (Erhart’s SAC 16 ¶¶ 76–87.) He describes a little over a dozen instances of believed misconduct 17 involving the Bank. (See Erhart Prelim. Inj. Decl. ¶¶ 10–46, Erhart Summ. J. Opp’n 18 Decl. ¶¶ 4–20.) In construing the evidence in the light most favorable to Erhart, the 19 Court categorizes the believed misconduct as follows:

- 20 1st Category: Corrupted Structured Settlements & Lottery Audit
21 2nd Category: Altered Financial Statements
22 3rd Category: Untimely 401(k) Payments
23 4th Category: Improper Strategic Plan Approval
24 5th Category: High Deposit Concentration Risk
25 6th Category: Misleading Response to SEC Subpoena
26 7th Category: Undisclosed Customer Accounts
27 8th Category: Undisclosed Subpoenas
28 9th Category: Unauthorized Risky Loans
10th Category: Miscalculated Allowance for Loan & Lease Losses (“ALLL”)

1 reviewable in federal court under the standards stated in the Administrative 2 Procedure Act, 5 U.S.C. § 706.” Id. at 437. “If, however, the ARB does not issue a 3 final decision within 180 days of the filing of the complaint, and the delay is not due 4 to bad faith on the claimant’s part, the claimant may proceed to federal district court 5 for de novo review.” Id. (citing 18 U.S.C. § 1514A(b)).

6 Erhart filed a Whistleblower Complaint with OSHA on April 14, 2015.
7 (OSHA Whistleblower Compl., ECF No. 158-16.) He then filed this action on 8 October 13, 2015. (ECF No. 1.) Hence, there is no dispute that Erhart first 9 commenced the administrative process and then appropriately waited at least 180 10 days to file his district court complaint. See 18 U.S.C. § 1514A(b)(1)(B).

11 1. Partial Exhaustion

12 Although Erhart filed an administrative complaint, BofI argues that Erhart’s 13 district court complaint is still improper on partial exhaustion grounds. The Bank 14 claims his complaint impermissibly exceeds the scope of the administrative filing by 15 identifying “six new categories” of conduct Erhart believed was wrongful. (Bofi’s 16 Mot. 50:2–19.) Consequently, BofI argues these categories are unexhausted and this 17 Court “lacks statutory jurisdiction” over part of Erhart’s claim. (Id.) BofI has 18 previously raised this partial exhaustion argument.²

21 ² BofI moved to strike various allegations from Erhart’s initial Complaint based on 22 exhaustion of administrative remedies. (ECF No. 3.) Because the Court dismissed Erhart’s 23 Complaint, the Court denied the request. (ECF No. 22.)

24 BofI renewed its motion to strike when the Bank attacked Erhart’s First Amended 25 Complaint. (ECF No. 35.) The Court again denied BofI’s request, reasoning that even if Erhart 26 failed to fully exhaust his administrative remedies, the allegations at issue were properly included 27 in his pleading to support his claims that were not subject to an exhaustion requirement—like his 28 California state law whistleblower retaliation claim. (ECF No. 44.)

29 BofI later again raised the exhaustion issue when moving for judgment on the pleadings.
(ECF No. 78-1.) In response, Erhart requested permission to submit additional evidence regarding his OSHA filing. (ECF No. 84.) Because resolving this issue likely required considering Erhart’s additional evidence, the Court said it preferred to make a decision without the constraints of a pleadings motion. (ECF No. 123.) The Court thus stated BofI could renew this argument in its forthcoming summary judgment motion. (Id.)

1 The Court is unaware of any binding authority addressing a partial exhaustion
2 issue in the Sarbanes–Oxley context.³ The Court initially notes that the DOL’s 3 regulations for retaliation complaints under § 1514A provide that “[n]o particular 4 form of complaint is required.” 29 C.F.R. § 1980.103(b). Indeed, a complaint may 5 even be made orally, in which case the complaint “will be reduced to writing by 6 OSHA.” Id. This “absence of formal pleading requirements” means “complaints in 7 OSHA administrative proceedings are not expected to meet the standards of pleading 8 that apply to claims filed in federal court under Rule 12(b)(6).” Wadler v. Bio-Rad 9 Labs., Inc., 141 F. Supp. 3d 1005, 1020 (N.D. Cal. 2015); accord Sharkey v. J.P.
10 Morgan Chase & Co., 805 F. Supp. 2d 45, 53 (S.D.N.Y. 2011). That said, “an 11 exhaustion requirement would be meaningless if the complainant were free to litigate 12 claims bearing little or no connection to the preceding administrative complaint.”
13 Jones v. Southpeak Interactive Corp. of Del., 777 F.3d 658, 669 (4th Cir. 2015).

14 Accordingly, several approaches have been used when a defendant argues the 15 lawsuit exceeds the scope of the OSHA complaint. One district court examined 16 whether the administrative complaint provided the opposing party “fair notice” of the 17 charges against it.⁴ Another district court reasoned the “appropriate inquiry” is “not 18 whether every fact forming the basis for the belief that gave rise to a plaintiff’s 19 protected activity was previously administratively pled, but whether each separate

22 ³ In an unpublished decision, Curtis v. Century Surety Co., 320 F. App’x 546, 548 (9th Cir.
23 2009), the Ninth Circuit concluded the district court did not err in granting summary judgment 24 based on the exhaustion requirement where the plaintiff failed to file an administrative complaint altogether. See also Order, Curtis v. Century Sur. Co., No. 05-1538-PHX-ROS, (D. Ariz. Aug. 24, 2006), ECF No. 39.

25 ⁴ Relying on an administrative decision, the court reasoned an administrative complaint “is 26 sufficient so long as the whistleblower complainants give an opposing party ‘fair notice’ of the 27 charges against it.” Wadler, 141 F. Supp. 3d at 1020. This standard requires only that an 28 administrative complaint “provide (1) some facts about the protected activity, showing some ‘relatedness’ to the laws and regulations of one of the statutes in [the agency’s] jurisdiction, (2) some facts about the adverse action, (3) a general assertion of causation and (4) a description of the relief that is sought.” In re Evans v. EPA, 2012 WL 3164358, at *6 (DOL Adm. Rev. Bd., July 31, 2012).

1 and distinct claim was pled before the agency.” Wong v. CKX, Inc., 890 F. Supp. 2d 2 411, 418 (S.D.N.Y. 2012) (quoting Sharkey, 805 F. Supp. 2d at 53).

3 As another approach, the Fourth and Fifth Circuits looked to their 4 jurisprudence under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act to inform the Sarbanes–Oxley 5 exhaustion inquiry. Analogous to Sarbanes–Oxley’s regime, Title VII requires a 6 plaintiff to file a discrimination charge with the Equal Employment and Opportunity 7 Commission (“EEOC”). See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e–16(c). Thus, the Fourth Circuit 8 relied on its Title VII standard, which provides “the litigation may encompass claims 9 ‘reasonably related to the original [administrative] complaint, and those developed 10 by reasonable investigation of the original complaint.’” Jones, 777 F.3d at 669 11 (quoting Evans v. Techs. Applications & Serv. Co., 80 F.3d 954, 963 (4th Cir. 1996)).
12 The Fifth Circuit also applied its Title VII standard to Sarbanes–Oxley and similarly 13 noted: “The scope of a judicial complaint is limited to the sweep of the OSHA 14 investigation that can reasonably be expected to ensue from the administrative 15 complaint.” Wallace v. Tesoro Corp., 796 F.3d 468, 476 (5th Cir. 2015).

16 The Court finds this latter approach persuasive and will similarly look to the 17 Ninth Circuit’s Title VII cases for guidance. The “scope of a Title VII claimant’s 18 court action depends upon the scope of both the EEOC charge and the EEOC 19 investigation.” Sommatino v. United States, 255 F.3d 704, 708 (9th Cir. 2001). The 20 district court may entertain “any charges of discrimination that are ‘like or reasonably 21 related’ to the allegations in the EEOC charge, or that fall within the ‘EEOC 22 investigation which can reasonably be expected to grow out the charge of 23 discrimination.’” Id. (quoting Deppe v. United Airlines, 217 F.3d 1262, 1267 (9th 24 Cir. 2000)). Adapting this standard here, the permissible scope of Erhart’s lawsuit 25 covers “any charges of [retaliation] that are ‘like or reasonably related’ to the 26 allegations in the [OSHA Complaint], or that fall within the ‘[OSHA] investigation 27 which can reasonably be expected to grow out of the charge of [retaliation].” See id.

2. Scope of Erhart's OSHA Filing

Erhart's form OSHA Complaint alleges BofI began retaliating against him on January 14, 2015. (OSHA Whistleblower Compl. ¶ 22.) When asked to describe why he believes BofI was retaliating against him, Erhart's administrative complaint alleges:

I believe the Bank has been committing securities fraud, wire fraud, mail fraud, fraud on its shareholders, violations of SEC rules and regulations, and other violations of the Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act, and the Sarbanes–Oxley Act (I have extensive information regarding these).

Management found my internal audit memo to my boss in his email, and then unlocked my file cabinets, finding my documentation of potential tax evasion by CEO Garrabrants, then called me “malicious” in staff meetings[.]

Because I reported to the SEC that the Bank had withheld material information from them, and also did so to the Office of the Controller of Currency that was investigating the Bank; and because I told Bank management that I had done so; to intimidate me from looking into unlawful activities at the Bank, and from reporting those to authorities; because I refused to engage in certain unlawful activities; to retaliate against me for what it believed I had done; and to send a message to other employees about what will happen if they do what I have done, or allegedly have done.

BofI argues the OSHA Complaint fails to exhaust “six new categories” of believed misconduct that now appear in Erhart's Second Amended Complaint. (BofI's Mot. 50:2–6.) The challenged allegations correspond with the following categories the Court has identified:

- 1st Category: Corrupted Structured Settlements & Lottery Audit
(See Erhart's SAC ¶¶ 11–16)
- 2nd Category: Altered Financial Statements
(See id. ¶ 17)
- 3rd Category: Untimely 401(k) Payments
(See id. ¶ 18)

- 1 • “The Bank had not and may still not be calculating ALLL correctly” 2 (10th Category).

3 (Id.) Erhart effectively concedes that the documents he submitted did not mention 4 “the altered financials allegation factual predicate”—the 2nd Category and remaining 5 item challenged on exhaustion grounds. (See Erhart’s Opp’n 44:25–45:2, ECF No.
6 158.)

7 Given the standard the Court adopted above, Erhart adequately rebuts BofI’s 8 motion for five out of the six challenged categories. Erhart’s OSHA Complaint is 9 admittedly imprecise; it claims he has “extensive information regarding” the believed 10 violations of law. (OSHA Compl. ¶ 25.) Considering the breadth of his allegations, 11 Erhart ideally would have included his “summary of key issues” in his OSHA 12 Complaint or expressly incorporated the summary by reference. But his OSHA 13 Complaint is “not expected to meet the standards of pleading that apply to claims 14 filed in federal court under Rule 12(b)(6).” See Wadler, 141 F. Supp. 3d at 1020; 15 accord Sharkey, 805 F. Supp. 2d at 53. And “[n]o particular form of complaint is 16 required.” 29 C.F.R. § 1980.103(b).

17 Moreover, a reasonable investigation of the OSHA Complaint would 18 encompass at least skimming the items Erhart submitted with his pleading. A cursory 19 review would discover Erhart’s factual timeline and “summary of key issues,” which 20 are in a document invitingly titled “Notes for Whistleblower Discussion with OCC.” 21 (OCC Whistleblower Notes.) BofI argues “no authority supports the proposition that 22 merely submitting a thumb drive of raw documents and data to OSHA satisfies the 23 exhaustion requirement’s pleading requirement such that a court has jurisdiction over 24 every conceivable claim that might be premised on the contents of any and all 25 documents on the drive.” (BofI’s Reply 20:11–14, ECF No. 164.) The Court agrees.
26 The agency cannot be expected to interpret a heap of e-mails and spreadsheets to 27 determine what Erhart believed was wrong. That said, Erhart’s factual timeline and 28

1 summary of “key issues” is not “raw data,” and it sufficiently aligns with almost all 2 of his challenged district court allegations.

3 Moreover, the record does not establish Erhart “was trying to circumvent the 4 Sarbanes–Oxley Act exhaustion requirement.” See Jones, 777 F.3d at 669. He could 5 have more skillfully completed his administrative pleading, but Sarbanes–Oxley’s 6 “exhaustion requirement should not become a tripwire for hapless plaintiffs.” Id.
7 Hence, BofI is not entitled to summary judgment for those categories of believed 8 misconduct that Erhart included with his administrative filing.

9 That said, the Court draws the line at Erhart’s allegations underlying the 2nd 10 Category regarding potentially altered financial statements. (See Erhart’s SAC ¶ 17.)
11 Erhart’s OSHA Complaint did not mention this conduct, and his submission did not 12 contain “documents related to . . . the altered financials allegation factual predicate.” 13 (Erhart’s Opp’n 44:25–27.) Nor do his whistleblower discussion notes mention the 14 challenged allegation. (See OCC Whistleblower Notes.) Erhart has failed to 15 demonstrate that this conduct falls within the scope of his OSHA Complaint or a 16 reasonable investigation flowing from the complaint. Hence, summary adjudication 17 on exhaustion grounds for this item is warranted.

18 In sum, the Court denies the Bank’s request to summarily adjudicate five of 19 the conduct categories for Erhart’s Sarbanes–Oxley claim on exhaustion grounds.
20 The Court grants partial summary judgment in BofI’s favor on Erhart’s Sarbanes– 21 Oxley claim with respect to his allegations regarding alteration of financial 22 statements because he did not exhaust this issue.

23 B. Protected Activity

24 Beyond its exhaustion challenge, BofI seeks a determination that twelve 25 categories of conduct identified by Erhart do not constitute protected activity as a 26 matter of law under Sarbanes–Oxley. (BofI’s Mot. 8:22–38:6.) This sweeping 27 challenge involves a labyrinth of securities laws, accounting-related regulations, and 28 banking compliance provisions. To establish a framework, the Court first reviews

1 the reasonable belief standard for claims under § 1514A. Next, the Court explores 2 how Erhart’s claim would function before a jury. Third, the Court provides an 3 overview of several rules that Erhart relies upon to explain why he believed the 4 Bank’s conduct was wrongful. Finally, the Court turns to assessing Boff’s discrete 5 challenges.

6 1. Reasonable Belief Standard

7 Whistleblower retaliation claims under Sarbanes–Oxley “are governed by a 8 burden-shifting procedure under which the plaintiff is first required to establish a 9 prima facie case of retaliatory discrimination.” Tides v. Boeing Co., 644 F.3d 809, 10 813–14 (9th Cir. 2011). To make a prima-facie showing, the plaintiff must show that 11 (1) the plaintiff engaged in protected activity; (2) the plaintiff’s employer knew, 12 actually or constructively, of the protected activity; (3) the plaintiff suffered an 13 unfavorable personnel action; and (4) the circumstances raise an inference that the 14 protected activity was a contributing factor to the unfavorable action. Id. at 814 15 (citing Van Asdale, 577 F.3d at 996); see also 29 C.F.R. § 1980.104(e)(2)(i)–(iv). If 16 the plaintiff makes this showing, then “the employer assumes the burden of 17 demonstrating by clear and convincing evidence that it would have taken the same 18 adverse employment action in the absence of the plaintiff’s protected activity.” Van 19 Asdale, 577 F.3d at 996.

20 Erhart, then, must first demonstrate that he engaged in protected activity under 21 Sarbanes–Oxley. The anti-retaliation statute protects an employee who “provide[s] 22 information . . . regarding any conduct which the employee reasonably believes 23 constitutes a violation of section 1341 [mail fraud], 1343 [wire fraud], 1344 [bank 24 fraud], or 1348 [securities or commodities fraud], any rule or regulation of the 25 Securities and Exchange Commission, or any provision of Federal law relating to 26 fraud against shareholders” 18 U.S.C. § 1514A(a)(1). The second to last 27 segment, “any rule or regulation of the [SEC],” refers only to “administrative rules 28

1 or regulations”—not statutes. See Wadler v. Bio-Rad Labs., Inc., 916 F.3d 1176, 2 1186–87 (9th Cir. 2019).

3 To establish protected activity, an employee does “not have to prove that he 4 reported an actual violation.” See Wadler, 916 F.3d at 1186–87 (citing Van Asdale, 5 577 F.3d at 1001; Sylvester v. Parexel Int’l LLC, No. 07-123, 2011 WL 2517148, at 6 *14 (Dep’t of Labor May 25, 2011)). Rather, the employee has “to prove only that 7 he ‘reasonably believed that there might have been’ a violation.” See id. at 1187 8 (quoting Van Asdale, 577 F.3d at 1001). The statute also protects an employee who 9 has a reasonable but mistaken belief that there might have been a violation of one of 10 the laws listed in § 1514A. Van Asdale, 577 F.3d at 1001. The Ninth Circuit has 11 described this “reasonable belief” standard “as a ‘minimal threshold requirement.’” 12 Wadler, 916 F.3d at 1187 (quoting Van Asdale, 577 F.3d at 1001).

13 The “reasonable belief” standard includes both a subjective component and an 14 objective component. E.g., Wadler, 916 F.3d at 1187–88, Van Asdale, 577 F.3d at 15 1000. For the subjective component, the employee must demonstrate he believed the 16 conduct reported violated one of the categories in § 1514A. Van Asdale, 577 F.3d at 17 1000. “The objective reasonableness component . . . ‘is evaluated based on the 18 knowledge available to a reasonable person in the same factual circumstances with 19 the same training and experience as the aggrieved employee.’” Wadler, 916 F.3d at 20 1188 (quoting Sylvester, 2011 WL 2517148, at *12). This evaluation “requires an 21 examination of the reasonableness of a complainant’s beliefs, but not whether the 22 complainant actually communicated the reasonableness of those beliefs to 23 management or the authorities.” Id. (quoting Sylvester, 2011 WL 2517148, at *13).

24 This reasonable person standard recognizes that “[m]any employees are 25 unlikely to be trained to recognize legally actionable conduct by their employers.” 26 Nielsen v. AECOM Tech. Corp., 762 F.3d 214, 221 (2d Cir. 2014). Accordingly, “the 27 inquiry into whether an employee had a reasonable belief is necessarily fact-28

1 dependent, varying with the circumstances of the case.” Rhinehimer v. U.S. Bancorp
2 Invs., Inc., 787 F.3d 797, 811 (6th Cir. 2015); accord Wadler, 916 F.3d at 1188.

3 2. Wadler v. Bio-Rad Labs., Inc.

4 Exploring how Erhart’s Sarbanes–Oxley claim would function at trial further 5 informs the Court’s summary judgment inquiry. The Ninth Circuit’s decision in 6 Wadler v. Bio-Rad Labs., Inc., 916 F.3d 1176 (9th Cir. 2019), is helpful. There, the 7 district court held a trial on a Sarbanes–Oxley retaliation claim. Id. at 1184. The 8 segment of laws enumerated in § 1514A at issue was “any rule or regulation of the” 9 SEC. Id. Hence, after instructing the jury on the elements of the retaliation claim 10 and the reasonable belief requirement, the court further instructed the jury as to the 11 relevant rules or regulations of the SEC. *Id.*⁵ Relying on the Foreign Corrupt 12 Practices Act (“FCPA”), the court explained that it was illegal to, among other things, 13 bribe a foreign official and fail to keep accurate and reasonably detailed books and 14 records. Id.

15 On appeal from a verdict in the plaintiff’s favor, the Ninth Circuit held the 16 district court made an instructional error regarding the Sarbanes–Oxley claim. 916 17 F.3d at 1186–87. The Ninth Circuit highlighted that in § 1514A, “Congress uses the 18 phrase ‘any rule or regulation of the [SEC]’ in the same list in which it uses ‘any 19 provision of Federal law relating to fraud against shareholders,’” indicating “there is 20 a difference between the meaning of ‘rule or regulation’ and ‘law.’” Id. at 1186 21 (alteration in original). The plain interpretation is that “‘law’ encompasses statutes, 22 like the FCPA, whereas ‘rule or regulation’ does not.” Id. Thus, the district court 23 erred in instructing the jury that statutory provisions of the FCPA are “rules or 24 regulations of the SEC” under § 1514A.⁶ Id. at 1187.

26 ⁵ See also Am. Jury Instructions, No. 15-cv-02356-JCS, Wadler v. Bio-rad Labs. Inc., (N.D. Cal. Feb. 3, 2017), ECF No. 217.

27 ⁶ However, the Ninth Circuit remanded for the district court to determine if there should be 28 a new trial because the SEC has a regulation based on the FCPA that forbids falsifying records.
916 F.4d at 1188–89. The Ninth Circuit also told the district court to consider whether the FCPA’s provisions could fall under the last segment of laws in § 1514A, “any other federal law relating to

1 Notwithstanding the district court’s instructional error, Wadler confirms that 2 Erhart’s beliefs must be tied to at least one segment of laws in § 1514A to support 3 his Sarbanes–Oxley claim. The Court will have to tell the jury what the underlying 4 law prohibits. Erhart therefore cannot broadly argue that he objectively believed 5 there were violations of “any rule or regulation of the [SEC]” or “any provision of 6 Federal law relating to fraud against shareholders.” See 18 U.S.C. § 1514A. This 7 Court should not be expected to—and realistically cannot—“go fishing through 8 securities law and regulation for provisions [Erhart] may have believed were 9 violated.” See Lamb v. Rockwell Automation, Inc., 249 F. Supp. 3d 904, 915 n.4
10 (E.D. Wis. 2017); accord Day v. Staples, Inc., 555 F.3d 42, 57 n.14 (1st Cir. 2009)
11 (refusing to consider § 1514A argument based on “unspecified . . . SEC regulations”).
12 The Court has previously warned Erhart that for his Sarbanes–Oxley claim to be 13 viable, his beliefs must be tethered to the segments of laws listed in § 1514A. (ECF 14 No. 22.) Hence, although Erhart did not have to cite a code section or rule when 15 engaging in protected activity, he now—with the aid of counsel—must demonstrate 16 to the Court that the jury could conclude he reasonably believed the conduct he 17 reported violated a law that is covered by § 1514A. If he cannot meet this burden, 18 summary judgment in BofI’s favor is appropriate.

19 3. Erhart’s § 1514A Rules

20 To that end, Erhart proposes several rules that he argues fall under § 1514A’s 21 scope and fit BofI’s alleged misconduct. Because Erhart frequently relies upon these 22 rules to argue his beliefs of wrongdoing were objectively reasonable, the Court 23 considers them before turning to the Bank’s arguments.

24 i. Books-and-Records Rule

25 The first rule Erhart relies upon is rooted in the FCPA. Congress enacted the 26 FCPA “to stop bribery of foreign officials and political parties by domestic

27 _____
28 fraud against shareholders.” See id. at 1189. The case settled upon remand. Order Dismissing Case, No. 15-cv-02356-JCS, Wadler v. Bio-rad Labs. Inc., (N.D. Cal. Sept. 25, 2019), ECF No.

1 corporations.” Clayco Petrol. Corp. v. Occidental Petrol. Corp., 712 F.2d 404, 408 2 (9th Cir. 1983). The FCPA amended the Securities Exchange Act by adding (1) anti-3 bribery provisions and (2) auditing and accounting provisions. Pub. L. No. 95-213, 4 §§ 102–04, 91 Stat. 1494, 1494–98 (1977). One of the accounting provisions, 5 Exchange Act § 13(b), provides:

6 (2) Every issuer which has a class of securities registered pursuant to [15 7 U.S.C. § 78l] and every issuer which is required to file reports pursuant 8 to [15 U.S.C. § 78o(d)] shall–

9 (A) make and keep books, records, and accounts, which, in 10 reasonable detail, accurately and fairly reflect the transactions and 11 dispositions of the assets of the issuer[.]

 13 (5) No person shall knowingly . . . falsify any book, record, or account 14 described in paragraph (2).

15 15 U.S.C. § 78m(b)(2)(A), (b)(5). Further, willfully falsifying books and records is 16 a crime. See id. § 78ff(a).

17 The books-and-records provision in Exchange Act § 13(b) also has a 18 corresponding SEC rule, which Erhart frequently relies upon in his opposition. (See 19 Erhart’s Opp’n 38:28–39:1 (citing 17 C.F.R. § 240.13b2–1).)⁷ Titled “Falsification
 20 of accounting records,” this rule provides: “No person shall directly or indirectly, 21 falsify or cause to be falsified, any book, record or account subject to section 22 13(b)(2)(A) of the Securities Exchange Act.” 17 C.F.R. § 240.13b2–1. The Court 23 will refer to this item as the “Books-and-Records Rule.”

24 For example, in United States v. Reyes, 577 F.3d 1069, 1072 (9th Cir. 2009), 25 Stephanie Jensen, a corporate executive, committed a books-and-records violation by 26 falsifying corporate minutes as part of “a scheme to reward employees with grants of 27 backdated stock options.” “The options were backdated to a time when the 28 ⁷ (See also id. 4:15–16; 4:25–27, 8:18–20; 10:26–28; 14:4–5; 37:26–27; 38:7–9; 39:8–13; Erhart Summ. J. Decl. ¶¶ 6, 10.)

1 company's stock price was low, but the options were not recorded on the 2 company's books as an expense of the corporation, so the books showed the 3 corporation to be more profitable than it was." Id. at 1072–73.

4 After being convicted, Jensen moved for a new trial, arguing Exchange Act § 5 13(b)(2)(A) was unconstitutionally vague when applied to her case. United States v.
6 Jensen, 532 F. Supp. 2d 1187, 1195 (N.D. Cal. 2008). The district court rejected this 7 argument, reasoning the statutory books-and-records provision "is laudably clear: it 8 prohibits a person from falsifying a particular type of corporate book or record." Id.
9 at 1196. Thus, when applied to Jensen's case, "a person of ordinary intelligence 10 would be able to determine that helping to create false committee meeting minutes 11 that have the effect of understating corporate expenses constitutes the falsification of 12 a record that 'reflect[s] the transactions and dispositions of the assets of the issuer.'" Id.
13 at 1196–97 (emphasis added) (quoting 15 U.S.C. § 78m(b)(2)(A)).

14 As another illustration, in Wadler, discussed above, the Ninth Circuit held 15 there was "sufficient evidence to support the objective reasonableness of" the 16 plaintiff general counsel's belief that his employer "had falsified books and 17 records."⁸ 916 F.3d at 1188. The plaintiff's belief was based in part on an audit of 18 sales documentation that revealed the employer owed $30 million in royalty 19 obligations due to "missing documentation of end-user prices for products." Id. at 20 1182. There was also evidence of employees entering into unauthorized contracts 21 with distributors that provided improper incentives with a financial impact of up to 22 $1 million. Id. The Ninth Circuit rationalized that a reasonable jury "could find that 23 a general counsel in [the plaintiff]'s position reasonably believed that" his employer 24 "was falsifying books and records as part of its alleged FCPA violations." Id. at 25 1188.

26 ⁸ As the Court discussed, the Ninth Circuit determined the district court improperly 27 instructed the jury that the FCPA's books-and-records provision—Exchange Act § 13(b)—was a 28 "rule or regulation of the" SEC under 18 U.S.C. § 1514A. Wadler, 916 F.3d at 1186–87. But the Ninth Circuit noted the Books-and-Records Rule based on the statutory provision is such "an SEC regulation within the scope of" § 1514A. Id. at 1185.

1 In sum, the Books-and-Records Rule prohibits the falsification of a corporate 2 record that is necessary to accurately and fairly reflect the transactions and 3 dispositions of the assets of the company in reasonable detail. And this rule falls
 4 under § 1514A because it is a “rule or regulation of the [SEC].” See 18 U.S.C. § 5 1514A; see also Wadler, 916 F.3d at 1185.

6 ii. Internal Controls Rule

7 The Court will refer to the next rule Erhart relies upon as the “Internal Controls 8 Rule.” (See Erhart’s Opp’n 39:1–2 (citing Exchange Act § 13(b)(2) and SEC Rule 9 13a–15).)⁹ The rule he references requires certain issuers of securities to maintain 10 “internal control over financial reporting.” 17 C.F.R. § 240.13a–15(a).¹⁰ Under the 11 regulation:

12 The term internal control over financial reporting is defined as a process 13 designed by, or under the supervision of, the issuer’s principal executive 14 and principal financial officers, or persons performing similar functions, 15 and effected by the issuer’s board of directors, management and other 16 personnel, to provide reasonable assurance regarding the reliability of 17 financial reporting and the preparation of financial statements for external purposes in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles and includes those policies and procedures that:

18 (1) Pertain to the maintenance of records that in reasonable detail 19 accurately and fairly reflect the transactions and dispositions of the 20 assets of the issuer;

21 (2) Provide reasonable assurance that transactions are recorded as 22 necessary to permit preparation of financial statements in 23 accordance with generally accepted accounting principles, and that

24 ⁹ (See also Erhart’s Opp’n 4:1, 15; 4:26–27; 7:15; 8:19; 12:8; 14:5; 16:19; 34:13–14; 35:7– 25 8; 37:25; 38:6–7; 41:19–20; Erhart Summ. J. Decl. ¶¶ 6, 10, 11, 14, 16.)

26 ¹⁰ The Court recognizes that this regulation also requires certain securities issuers to 27 maintain “disclosure controls and procedures.” 17 C.F.R. § 240.13a–15(a). “[I]nternal control 28 over financial reporting” and “disclosure controls and procedures” are different concepts with separate definitions in the regulation. Id. § 240.13a–15(a), (e), (f). Erhart does not mention “disclosure controls and procedures” anywhere in his opposition or evidentiary submissions.
 Consequently, the Court does not consider this concept throughout this order.

1 receipts and expenditures of the issuer are being made only in 2 accordance with authorizations of management and directors of the 3 issuer; and

4 (3) Provide reasonable assurance regarding prevention or timely 5 detection of unauthorized acquisition, use or disposition of the 6 issuer's assets that could have a material effect on the financial 7 statements.

8 Id. § 240.13a–15(f).

9 In adopting this rule, the SEC elaborated on the scope of a company's required 10 internal control system. In Re Mgmt.'s Report on Internal Control over Fin.
11 Reporting & Certification of Disclosure in Exch. Act Periodic Reports, Release No.
12 8238, 80 S.E.C. Docket 1014, 2003 WL 21294970 (June 5, 2003). The SEC noted:

13 A few of the commenters urged us to adopt a considerably broader 14 definition of internal control that would focus not only on internal control 15 over financial reporting, but also on internal control objectives associated 16 with enterprise risk management and corporate governance. While we 17 agree that these are important objectives, the definition that we are 18 adopting retains a focus on financial reporting[.]

19 Id. at *7. Hence, the SEC's internal control definition does not broadly require 20 "compliance with applicable laws and regulations," but the definition does require 21 "compliance with the applicable laws and regulations directly related to the 22 preparation of financial statements, such as the Commission's financial reporting 23 requirements." Id. at *8. This commentary confirms what is already plain from the 24 rule's text: the rule concerns ensuring "the reliability of financial reporting and the 25 preparation of financial statements." 17 C.F.R. § 240.13a–15(f); see also 15 U.S.C.
26 § 78m(b)(2)(B) (requiring issuers to "devise and maintain a system of internal 27 accounting controls"). Consequently, the Internal Controls Rule is much more 28 limited in scope than the OCC's banking definition of "internal controls" that the Court mentioned above. Compare 17 C.F.R. § 240.13a–15(f), with OCC, Comptroller's Handbook: Internal Control 1 (2001).

1 The plaintiff’s Sarbanes–Oxley claim in Thomas v. Tyco International 2 Management Co., 416 F. Supp. 3d 1340 (S.D. Fla. 2019), illustrates a potential 3 violation of this rule. The plaintiff was the manager for financial reporting for the 4 defendant’s North America businesses. Id. at 1346. She reported concerns “about a 5 proper segregation of duties in the financial reporting team” and weaknesses in a 6 monthly financial “tie-out” process that could “translate[] into material weaknesses 7 in the corporation’s financial statements.” Id. at 1348–49. Although the plaintiff’s 8 whistleblower retaliation claim ultimately did not survive summary judgment on 9 other grounds, the district court concluded “that a genuine issue of material fact 10 exist[ed] as to whether [the plaintiff] reasonably believed that she was engaging in 11 protected conduct each time she raised issues regarding [the defendant’s] lack of 12 internal controls regarding financial management.” Id. at 1361.¹¹

13 In sum, the Internal Controls Rule requires a regulated company to maintain a 14 system that provides reasonable assurance regarding the reliability of financial 15 reporting and the preparation of external financial statements. The system must 16 include policies and procedures regarding certain items, including providing 17 reasonable assurance that expenditures are made only in accordance with 18 management’s authorization. The rule does not, however, broadly require 19 compliance with all laws or corporate risk management objectives. And like the 20 Books-and-Records Rule, the Internal Controls Rule falls under § 1514A because it 21 is a “rule or regulation of the [SEC].” See 18 U.S.C. § 1514A.

24 ¹¹ The Court notes the underlying theory of liability in Tyco for a violation of internal 25 controls was slightly different than that presented in this case. See id. at 1348 n.10. The Tyco 26 plaintiff believed the defendant was violating Sarbanes Oxley § 404, 15 U.S.C. § 7262, which 27 provides the SEC must adopt rules that require a covered company’s annual report to “(1) state the 28 responsibility of management for establishing and maintaining an adequate internal control structure and procedures for financial reporting; and (2) contain an assessment . . . of the effectiveness of the internal control structure and procedures of the issuer for financial reporting.”
15 U.S.C. § 7262. For purposes of illustration, however, Tyco is comparable because 15 U.S.C.
§ 7262 and the Internal Controls Rule concern the same set of required internal controls over financial reporting.

1 iii. Shareholder Fraud

2 Third, Erhart frequently raises the specter of potential shareholder fraud.
3 (Erhart’s Opp’n 1:19–20.)¹² The Ninth Circuit considered a shareholder fraud theory
4 in the context of § 1514A in Van Asdale v. International Game Technology, 577 F.3d 5 989 (9th Cir. 2009). There, two plaintiffs worked as in-house counsel for “a publicly-6 traded, Nevada-based company specializing in computerized gaming machines and 7 similar products.” Id. at 991. The gaming company began merger negotiations with 8 another gaming entity, and the gist of the plaintiffs’ lawsuit was that they “were 9 terminated for reporting possible shareholder fraud in connection with that merger.”
10 Id. at 992. In short, the merger partner had a valuable patent on the use of a wheel 11 with a slot machine. Id. But there was concern before the merger that this patent 12 might be subject to invalidation by a competitor’s prior art. Id. After the merger, it 13 was revealed that the merger partner may have known of problematic prior art; 14 meaning, “the benefits of the merger may have been overvalued.” Id. at 993. After 15 the plaintiffs expressed this concern to the newly-merged company’s management—16 which included officers from the merger partner—the plaintiffs claimed they were 17 retaliated against. See id. at 993–94.

18 On appeal, the Ninth Circuit determined the plaintiffs met their burden at the 19 summary judgment phase to show they reasonably believed there might have been 20 shareholder fraud. Van Asdale, 577 F.3d at 1001. The Ninth Circuit noted a 21 securities fraud claim’s elements “include a material misrepresentation or omission, 22 scienter, a connection with the purchase or sale of a security, reliance, economic loss, 23 and loss causation.” Id. (citing Dura Pharms., Inc. v. Broudo, 544 U.S. 336, 341–42 24 (2005)). And to show securities fraud under SEC Rule 10b–5, “a plaintiff must 25 demonstrate ‘(1) a material misrepresentation or omission of fact, (2) scienter, (3) a 26 connection with the purchase or sale of a security, (4) transaction and loss causation,

28 ¹² (See also id. 7:10–13; 8:20; 11:13–15; 14:3–4; 20:1–2; 26:3–4; 34:25–26; 38:17–21, 27– 28; Erhart Summ. J. Decl. ¶¶ 6, 11, 13.)

1 and (5) economic loss.’” Id. (quoting In re Daou Sys., Inc., 411 F.3d 1006, 1014 (9th 2 Cir. 2005)).

3 Turning to the plaintiffs’ theory of fraud, the Ninth Circuit concluded it was 4 close enough to a securities fraud claim. Van Asdale, 577 F.3d at 1001. The relevant 5 intellectual property was an important part of the merger that provided a substantial 6 portion of the merged company’s income, and there was evidence the merger would 7 not have occurred had the plaintiffs’ employer been aware of the problematic prior 8 art. Id. Further, given that (1) the prior art was potentially important, (2) several 9 former officials from the merger target now occupied top management positions at 10 the merged company, and (3) these officials allegedly had financial motives favoring 11 nondisclosure, the Ninth Circuit held it was objectively reasonable for the plaintiffs 12 to suspect that the non-disclosure might have been deliberate. Id.

13 Accordingly, a conceivable shareholder fraud theory requires at least (1) a 14 material misrepresentation or omission of fact and (2) an indication of an intent to 15 defraud. See Van Asdale, 577 F.3d at 1001; see also In re ChinaCast Educ. Corp.
16 Sec. Litig., 809 F.3d 471, 472, 474 (9th Cir. 2015) (noting “scienter or intent to 17 defraud” is “a bedrock requirement of Rule 10b–5”). Further, this item, of course, 18 falls under § 1514A’s grasp. See 18 U.S.C. § 1514A; Van Asdale, 577 F.3d at 1000– 19 02.

20 iv. Fraud on Regulators

21 The last recurring theory Erhart raises is that the Bank was “defrauding” its 22 regulators, particularly the OCC—a bank regulator. (Erhart’s Opp’n 1:17–18; 4:27– 23 28; 14:5–6; 34:8–10, 19–21; 36:1.) Yet Erhart does not identify an SEC rule that this 24 purported conduct violated. Nor does he offer a meaningful explanation for why this 25 conduct would fall under either the mail fraud, wire fraud, bank fraud, or securities 26 fraud statutes “or any provision of Federal law relating to fraud against 27 shareholders” See 18 U.S.C. § 1514A. The Court separately considers below 28 whether this concept may fit Erhart’s broader, California state law whistleblower

1 retaliation claim. As to Sarbanes–Oxley, however, Erhart does not demonstrate this 2 theory falls within the grasp of § 1514A. Consequently, the Court does not apply 3 this theory to Erhart’s § 1514A claim below.

4 4. Challenged Categories

5 BofI challenges the following categories of believed misconduct, arguing 6 Erhart fails to demonstrate a factfinder could conclude he engaged in protected 7 activity under § 1514A:

- 8 2nd Category: Altered Financial Statements
- 9 3rd Category: Untimely 401(k) Payments
- 10 4th Category: Improper Strategic Plan Approval
- 11 6th Category: Misleading Response to SEC Subpoena
- 12 7th Category: Undisclosed Customer Accounts
- 13 8th Category: Undisclosed Subpoenas
- 14 9th Category: Unauthorized Risky Loans
- 15 10th Category: Miscalculated ALLL
- 16 11th Category: Incomplete FDPA Audit
- 17 12th Category: Sanitized Global Cash Card Review
- 18 13th Category: Improprieties in CEO’s Account
- 19 14th Category: Improprieties in CEO’s Brother’s Account

20 (See BofI’s Mot. 8:22–38:6.) The Court will not address the 2nd Category because 21 the Court found it is unexhausted. For the remaining categories, the Court potentially 22 considers two issues in light of the standards set forth above: first, whether Erhart 23 demonstrates the conduct fits into one of the segments of laws included in § 1514A, 24 including the Books-and-Records Rule, the Internal Controls Rule, or shareholder 25 fraud; and second, whether Erhart produces sufficient evidence that a trier of fact 26 could conclude his belief of a violation was objectively reasonable.

27 i. 3rd Category: Untimely 401(k) Payments

28 Contributions to qualifying employer-sponsored plans receive special tax treatment under 26 U.S.C. § 401(k). Under the DOL’s regulations, an employer must deposit its employees’ contributions to 401(k) accounts as soon as the contributions

1 “can reasonably be segregated from the employer’s general assets.” 29 C.F.R. § 2 2510.3–102. Regardless, the contributions must be deposited no later than the 3 following month’s fifteenth business day. See id.

4 In the middle of 2014, Erhart and another Internal Audit employee performed 5 a payroll audit. (Erhart Prelim. Inj. Decl. ¶ 18.) They discovered “that the Bank had 6 not been making timely deposits to employees’ 401(k) accounts for employee 7 elective deferrals.” (Id.) Erhart later identified nine pay periods where—based on 8 his payroll records—he believed contributions had been deposited late. (Bofi’s Mot.
9 Ex. WW, ECF No. 127-55.)

10 Ultimately, the Bank self-reported under the DOL’s Voluntary Fiduciary 11 Correction Program that it had made delinquent participant contributions “on 5 12 occasions during the plan year 2014.” (Bofi’s Mot. Ex. AAA, at 2, ECF No. 127-13 59.) Bofi reported that $83,549 in contributions were paid late and that it had 14 “restored funds for lost earnings in the amount of $64.73 on 12/02/2015.” (Id.; 15 accord JSUF ¶ 22.)

16 Bofi challenges this category on the first issue: whether Erhart demonstrates 17 the conduct fits into one of the segments of laws listed in § 1514A. Bofi argues: 18 “Erhart no doubt could reasonably believe Bofi failed to comply with specific DOL 19 regulations governing the timeliness of employee elective deferral contributions. But 20 that conduct did not relate to any SEC (as opposed to DOL) rule or regulation. Nor 21 does it relate to . . . any SOX-enumerated violation.” (Bofi’s Mot. 12:2–11.) The 22 Court agrees. The Internal Controls Rule does not broadly encompass all laws and 23 regulations, and Erhart does not show the Bank could have violated this rule. Nor 24 does Erhart demonstrate Bofi was possibly violating the Books-and-Records Rule or 25 committing shareholder fraud. Thus, while it is possible that this conduct may 26 support one of Erhart’s other whistleblower retaliation claims, this conduct does not 27 support a claim under § 1514A. Cf. Villanueva v. U.S. Dep’t of Labor, 743 F.3d 103, 28 110 (5th Cir. 2014) (holding employee’s belief that employer was violating

1 Colombian tax laws was insufficient under § 1514A). The Court thus grants Boff's 2 request for partial summary judgment on this category of believed misconduct.

3 ii. 4th Category: Improper Strategic Plan Approval

4 Erhart was assigned to conduct the "Fiscal Year 2014/2015 Business Plan 5 Audit." (Erhart Prelim. Inj. Decl. ¶ 19; accord JSUF ¶ 61.) This audit's objectives 6 "included determining whether or not Boff's Board of Directors had approved the 7 current business plan." (JSUF ¶ 62.) The relevant document is titled "Fiscal 2015 8 Strategic Plan." (Erhart's Opp'n Ex. 229, ECF No. 174-11.) The Court sealed the 9 Strategic Plan because it contains proprietary information, and the specific 10 information is unnecessary to understand the parties' dispute and the Court's rulings.
11 (ECF No. 178.) To generally describe the document, it contains Boff's internal 12 strategies and forward-looking projections for the then-coming fiscal year. (Erhart's 13 Opp'n Ex. 229.) These projections include internal metrics and assumptions about 14 business divisions, profitability, employee utilization, fees, and other matters. (Id.)

15 Erhart states he learned "that the Strategic Plan had not been approved at any 16 of the following Board of Directors meetings: May 1, 2014; July 2014; [or] 17 September 2014." (Erhart Prelim. Inj. Decl. ¶ 19.) As of early 2015, Erhart believed 18 the plan still had not been approved. (Erhart Dep. 1243:19–21, ECF No. 158-8.) 19 Then, in February 2015, Erhart claims a unanimous written consent approving the 20 plan appeared "miraculously" and showed approval "back in July." (Id. 1243:22– 21 25; see also Boff's Mot. Ex. BB, ECF No. 127-34.) Upon reviewing the document, 22 Erhart believed the Bank's board members' signatures were "copy and paste" and 23 that the Bank "was backdating these signatures and the approval didn't actually occur 24 on – in July 2014." (Erhart Dep. 1244:2–7; see also Boff's Mot. Ex. BB.)

25 Based on this conduct, Erhart states he believed "the Bank was not properly 26 maintaining its records and did not have adequate internal controls as required under 27 SEC rules." (Erhart Summ. J. Opp'n Decl. ¶ 10.) He also testified that he believed 28 the OCC's Asset Management and Director's Book publications required approval

1 of the Bank’s strategic and business plans. (Erhart Dep. 1228:1–1229:16, ECF No.
2 158-8.)

3 BofI moves for partial summary judgment, arguing no reasonable person in 4 Erhart’s position would believe any false or deceptive conduct had occurred. (Boff’s 5 Mot. 22:4–23:25.) BofI argues that Erhart knew the strategic planning process was 6 a matter of Boff’s corporate governance policy, and Boff’s purported “failure to 7 comply with its own voluntary internal governance policies does not itself violate 8 any law, much less federal wire, mail or bank fraud statutes or an SEC rule or 9 regulation, and Erhart could not have reasonably believed otherwise.” (Id. 22:21– 10 23:2.)

11 The Bank’s challenge is persuasive. Initially, given the scope of § 1514A, the 12 Court rejects Erhart’s reliance on handbooks or similar advisory publications from 13 the OCC. Without more explanation, it is not reasonable for an internal auditor in 14 Erhart’s position to believe guidance from the OCC constitutes “any rule or 15 regulation of the [SEC]” or “any provision of Federal law relating to fraud against 16 shareholders.” See 18 U.S.C. § 1514A.

17 As for Erhart’s recurring theories of liability, he does not demonstrate a 18 factfinder could conclude it was reasonable to believe this conduct amounted to a 19 violation of the Books-and-Records Rule. Erhart’s conclusory argument that 20 “certainly [his] allegations with respect to . . . Strategic Plan approval or lack thereof 21 . . . would fit within” the Books-and-Records Rule is inadequate. (See Erhart’s Opp’n 22 39:8–13.) He does not explain why the allegedly falsified document—minutes 23 approving the Strategic Plan—could be believed to be the type of corporate record 24 covered by the rule. These minutes do not document “the transactions and 25 dispositions of the assets of the” Bank. See 15 U.S.C. § 78m(b)(2)(A); cf. Jensen, 26 532 F. Supp. 2d at 1196 (reasoning a books-and-records violation occurred where 27 falsified meeting minutes concerning stock options had “the effect of understating 28 corporate expenses”); see also Wadler, 916 F.3d at 1182 (reasoning evidence

1 supported objective belief of books-and-records violation where missing 2 documentation meant employer owed $30 million in royalty obligations). And the 3 Court will not make that jump without Erhart’s help. Moreover, even if the 4 underlying Strategic Plan itself is such a corporate record, which it does not appear 5 to be, Erhart does not claim he believed this document was falsified. (See Erhart
6 Summ. J. Opp’n Decl. ¶¶ 7–10.)

7 As for the Internal Controls Rule, Erhart again unhelpfully argues in a 8 conclusory fashion that the improper Strategic Plan approval would “clearly fit 9 within this category.” (Erhart’s Opp’n 39:12–16.) Nowhere does Erhart argue or 10 discuss why a backdated approval of the Strategic Plan had any bearing on the Bank’s 11 internal controls over financial reporting and the preparation of external financial 12 statements. See 17 C.F.R. § 240.13a–15(a). And although the connection may be 13 obvious to Erhart, it is not to the Court. He must do more to meet his burden in 14 response to the Bank’s motion.

15 Erhart’s reliance on a shareholder fraud theory is similarly inadequate. (See 16 Erhart’s Opp’n 7:10–14.) He does not mention the elements of securities fraud or 17 explain why this conduct approximates such a claim. Cf. Van Asdale, 577 F.3d at 18 1001, 1005 (reversing grant of summary judgment where the plaintiffs’ fraud theory 19 at least approximated the elements of shareholder fraud). Erhart’s stone-skipping 20 claim that he understood “the OCC and the SEC were interested in corporate 21 governance and [therefore] the Bank was misrepresenting itself to shareholders as 22 being in good regulatory standing” is insufficient. (See Erhart’s Opp’n 7:10–14.)
23 See Nielsen, 762 F.3d at 223 (affirming dismissal of Sarbanes–Oxley retaliation 24 claim where the “connection between [the plaintiff’s] claims and supposed fraud 25 against shareholders [was] simply too tenuous”).

26 Accordingly, because Erhart does not demonstrate a reasonable factfinder 27 could conclude this conduct violated a law listed in § 1514A, the Court grants the 28 Bank’s request for partial summary judgment on this issue.

1 iii. 6th Category: Misleading Response to SEC Subpoena

2 The Securities Act of 1933, the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, and the 3 Investment Advisors Act of 1940 all empower the SEC to investigate potential 4 violations of these securities laws, including by issuing subpoenas. Securities Act §§
5 19(c), 20(a), 15 U.S.C. §§ 77s(c), 77(t)(a); Exchange Act § 21(a)(1); 15 U.S.C. §
6 78u; Investment Company Act § 209(a), 15 U.S.C. § 80b–9. There are also a variety 7 of SEC rules that apply to the agency’s informal investigations, formal investigations, 8 and adjudicative hearings. See generally 17 C.F.R. Parts 200 to 203.

9 On December 11, 2014, the SEC issued a subpoena In the Matter of Elm Tree
10 Investment Advisors (“ETIA”) to BofI. (JSUF ¶ 23; SEC ETIA Subpoena, BofI’s 11 Mot. Ex. T, ECF No. 127-26.) This subpoena required the Bank to produce 12 information “showing only the name, current address, account number, and type of 13 account of the customer or customers associated with” a bank account. (SEC ETIA 14 Subpoena.) The subpoena further directed that BofI “not otherwise produce 15 any . . . information . . . from any record . . . in relation to an account in the name of 16 a customer.” (Id.)

17 The face of the subpoena plainly demonstrates the SEC was investigating 18 potential securities law violations. The subpoena reported that the SEC had “issued 19 a formal order authorizing this investigation under Section 20(a) of the Securities Act 20 of 1933, Section 21(a) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, and Section 209(a) of 21 the Investment Advisers Act of 1940.” (SEC ETIA Subpoena.) The subpoena also 22 cautioned, “FEDERAL LAW REQUIRES YOU TO COMPLY WITH THIS 23 SUBPOENA. Failure to comply may subject you to a fine and/or imprisonment.”
24 (Id.) On December 18, 2014, BofI responded to the SEC by letter, informing it:

25 We searched our records based on the criteria provided in the Subpoena 26 Attachment; however, we were unable to locate the account number at 27 BofI Federal Bank. Accordingly, we are unable to produce any 28 information or documentation requested in the Subpoena.

(BofI’s Mot. Ex. U, ECF No. 127-27.)

1 In early January 2015, Erhart “became aware of the SEC subpoena,” and states 2 he “knew that the Bank did indeed have a loan file containing information regarding”
3 the targeted customer—ETIA. (Erhart Prelim. Inj. Decl. ¶ 27.) Erhart further claims 4 “a file had been created in response to the SEC subpoena, containing the information 5 located regarding ETIA.” (Id.) Therefore, Erhart formed the belief “that the Bank 6 had improperly responded to the SEC that no responsive documents existed in 7 response to the ETIA Subpoena.” (Erhart Summ. J. Opp’n Decl. ¶ 12.) Erhart states 8 he “reported this issue to [VP] Ball” and “alerted the Legal Department . . . about the 9 fact that the Bank indeed had responsive documents.” (Id.) In response, a member 10 of BofI’s legal department asked Erhart “about the account number in the subpoena 11 and told [him] she would follow up.” (Id.)

12 After learning his investigation of the subpoena upset a BofI executive, Erhart 13 alerted the SEC about the subpoena issue. (Erhart Prelim. Inj. Decl. ¶¶ 28–29; Erhart 14 Summ. J. Opp’n Decl. ¶ 12; see also BofI’s Mot. Ex. V, ECF No. 127-28.) About a 15 month after its initial response to the subpoena, BofI also contacted the SEC, stating 16 that the Bank had “finally determined that the Account Number referenced in the 17 Subpoena is a BofI Federal Bank [General Ledger] Account.” (BofI’s Mot. Ex. W, 18 ECF No. 127-29.) In other words, apparently an internal account number matched 19 the number listed on the SEC Subpoena, but not a BofI bank account number. (See 20 id.; see also SEC ETIA Subpoena.) BofI also submits that the Bank was already in 21 regular contact with the SEC regarding the subpoena between the time of its initial 22 response and Erhart’s discovery of the subpoena, and that “there was sufficient 23 information available to Mr. Erhart” in the Bank’s “subpoena-tracking system” to 24 conclude this. (Tolla Rule 30(b)(6) Dep. 29:19–30:1, ECF No. 127-19.)

25 BofI moves to summarily adjudicate this category, arguing it complied with 26 the subpoena because the SEC’s request was limited to the account number 27 identified. (BofI’s Mot. 12:12–14:27.) The Bank thus challenges whether there is 28

1 enough evidence for a trier of fact to conclude Erhart’s belief of a violation was 2 objectively reasonable.

3 The Bank, however, does not meet its burden under Rule 56 to show the 4 absence of a genuine issue of material fact on this category. Although an attorney 5 may have concluded there was no wrongdoing in light of the subpoena’s scope, the 6 reasonableness component under § 1514A “is evaluated based on the knowledge 7 available to a reasonable person in the same factual circumstances with the same 8 training and experience as the aggrieved employee.” Wadler, 916 F.3d at 1188
9 (quoting Sylvester, 2011 WL 2517148, at *12); see also Rhinehimer, 787 F.3d at 811 10 (“[T]he inquiry into whether an employee had a reasonable belief is necessarily fact-11 dependent, varying with the circumstances of the case.”). Erhart is not an attorney.
12 And viewing the evidence in the light most favorable to Erhart, someone in his 13 circumstances could reasonably believe—or mistakenly believe—that the Bank was 14 providing a misleading response to the SEC’s subpoena. Further, although “the 15 evidence needed to support a whistleblower’s reasonable belief will necessarily vary 16 with the circumstances, [§ 1514A] generally does not require an employee to 17 undertake an investigation before reporting his concerns.” Wadler, 916 F.3d at 1188.
18 The Court thus rejects the Bank’s arguments that summary judgment is appropriate 19 because Erhart should have “bother[ed] to follow-up” regarding the subpoena and 20 that he unnecessarily contacted the SEC because the Bank “was taking steps to ensure 21 that it properly responded.” (Boff’s Mot. 14:16–18; 24–25 (emphasis omitted).)

22 Because the Bank fails to demonstrate an absence of a genuine issue of 23 material fact on this issue, the Court denies Boff’s request for partial summary 24 judgment.

25 iv. 7th Category: Undisclosed Customer Accounts

26 Boff’s primary regulator, the OCC, “conducts an annual examination of Boff’s 27 Bank Secrecy Act (‘BSA’) compliance practices.” (JSUF ¶ 28.) “As part of the 28 January 2015 BSA examination, and specifically in connection with its examination

1 of BofI’s ‘Customer Identification Program’ (‘CIP’),” the OCC requested certain 2 information from the Bank regarding taxpayer identification numbers (“TINs”). (Id.
3 ¶ 29.) Erhart was not responsible for responding to the OCC’s request. (Id. ¶ 30.)
4 But he claims the Bank’s response to the OCC’s request “was false” based on a list
5 of accounts he saw in a spreadsheet. (Erhart Prelim. Inj. Decl. ¶ 32.)

6 In response, the Bank states its answer to the OCC’s request was correct based 7 on the Bank’s custom and practice and interpretation of the OCC’s request. (Tolla 8 Decl. ¶ 4, ECF No. 127-2.) The Bank states Erhart also had access to information 9 that would have demonstrated the Bank’s response was supposedly not false. (Id. ¶¶ 10 5–6.) BofI thus argues no reasonable person in Erhart’s position would have believed 11 BofI withheld information from the regulator. (BofI’s Mot. 15:1–16:16.)
12 Regardless, the Bank also argues “there is no connection between the suspected 13 conduct and any [Sarbanes–Oxley]-enumerated violation.” (Id. 16:17–22.) Hence, 14 the Bank challenges this category on both common issues.

15 The Court need not assess the first issue here because the Bank’s challenge is 16 persuasive on the second one: Erhart does not demonstrate a connection between this 17 conduct and the segments of laws listed in § 1514A. The Court underscores that § 18 1514A is not a general compliance statute. It does not police all employee grievances 19 and suspicions of wrongdoing. See, e.g., Day, 555 F.3d at 54 (“The plain language 20 of SOX does not provide protection for any type of information provided by an 21 employee but restricts the employee’s protection to information only about certain 22 types of conduct.”). A failure to comply with the Bank Secrecy Act or an OCC 23 examination does not fit § 1514A’s categories.

24 Erhart also relies upon the Books-and-Records Rule, but he does not explain 25 how the Bank’s response to the OCC falls under the scope of this rule. (See Erhart’s 26 Opp’n 10:24–27; 39:8–13.) A purportedly incorrect response to an OCC inquiry is 27 not the type of corporate book, record, and account identified in 15 U.S.C. § 28 78m(b)(2)(A). It is not an accounting record. And there is no evidence that this

1 response caused the Bank to fail to keep books that accurately recorded its assets or 2 expenses. Cf. Jensen, 532 F. Supp. 2d at 1195–96 (reasoning falsified meeting
3 minutes fell within the scope of 15 U.S.C. § 78m(b)(2)(A) because they had the effect
4 of understating corporate expenses). Simply put, Erhart fails to demonstrate as a 5 matter of law that this conduct falls within the segments of laws listed in § 1514A.
6 The Court thus grants Boff’s request for summary judgment on this category.

7 v. 8th Category: Undisclosed Subpoenas

8 Erhart claims the Bank failed to disclose documents that were responsive to an 9 OCC request concerning subpoenas. (Erhart Prelim. Inj. Decl. ¶ 33.) Erhart believes 10 the Bank’s response was incorrect because he saw a Bank Secrecy Act “spreadsheet 11 that identified many subpoenas, including from law enforcement agencies, grand 12 juries, and even the US Department of the Treasury, of which [the] OCC is a part.”
13 (Id.) Like its attack on the prior category of conduct, the Bank argues “no reasonable 14 person in Erhart’s position with access to the same information would have 15 concluded that Boff’s response to [the OCC’s request] was false and purposefully 16 concealed information, or that it was a [Sarbanes–Oxley]-enumerated violation.”
17 (Boff’s Mot. 18:14–17.)

18 Partial summary judgment on this issue is appropriate for the same reasons as 19 the prior category concerning the OCC. Erhart argues “such a misleading or false 20 communication from the Bank amounted to shareholder fraud, securities law 21 violations, and/or SEC rule violations.” (Erhart’s Opp’n 11:13–16.) This scattershot 22 approach is unavailing. See Day, 555 F.3d at 57 n.14 (rejecting § 1514A argument 23 where the brief made “an unspecified reference to SEC regulations”). This conduct 24 does not fit into the Books-and-Records Rule. Nor does it relate to the Internal 25 Controls Rule, which addresses controls over financial reporting and the preparation 26 of financial statements.

27 As for Erhart’s other recurring theory—shareholder fraud—he argues the 28 “existence of such subpoenas could indicate criminal wrongdoing at the Bank which

1 could materially weigh on the Bank’s valuation and its status with rating agencies
2 and/or regulators.” (Erhart’s Opp’n 11:15–18.) Although the reasonable belief 3 standard is a minimum threshold requirement, Erhart does not even discuss the 4 elements of shareholder fraud or demonstrate how a factfinder could connect the dots 5 to conclude he had a reasonable belief—or a reasonably mistaken belief—that 6 shareholder fraud was occurring. See Nielsen, 762 F.3d at 223 (affirming dismissal 7 of § 1514A claim where the “connection between [the plaintiff’s] claims and 8 supposed fraud against shareholders [was] simply too tenuous” and thus the plaintiff 9 had not alleged “any facts plausibly suggesting that this supposed misconduct 10 implicated any of the enumerated provisions in § 1514A”); see also Van Asdale, 577 11 F.3d at 1001, 1005 (reversing grant of summary judgment where the plaintiffs’ fraud 12 theory at least approximated the elements of shareholder fraud). Because Erhart does 13 not demonstrate a genuine issue for trial, the Court grants the Bank’s request for 14 summary adjudication of this issue.

15 vi. 9th Category: Unauthorized Risky Loans

16 A primary part of BofI’s business is originating loans. (JSUF ¶ 2.) In January 17 2015, Erhart was performing a “Loan Origination Audit.” (Erhart Summ. J. Opp’n 18 Decl. ¶ 14.) Erhart claims he discovered the Bank “had made loans to Politically 19 Exposed Persons.” (Id.) He also claims he uncovered that “many of the Bank’s 20 borrowers were criminals, even notorious criminals convicted for large-scale fraud 21 schemes, attorneys who had been suspended from the practice of law for fraud, and 22 other suspicious persons.” (Id.) Erhart believed these customers “put the Bank at 23 high risk for violating the Bank Secrecy Act’s . . . Anti-Money Laundering Rules . .
24 . . , as well as violating the [Sarbanes–Oxley] internal controls regulation, given that 25 BofI was violating its own policy by accepting these loans.” (Id.) The referenced 26 BofI policy prohibited the Bank from establishing a relationship with certain 27 customers, including politically exposed persons, due to compliance risk. (Erhart’s 28 Opp’n Ex. 160, ECF No. 157-14.) Thus, viewing the evidence in the light more

1 favorable to Erhart, he discovered the Bank was disbursing loans to risky customers
2 against the Bank’s own directive. And a review of Erhart’s whistleblower discussion 3 notes reveals he believed the problematic loans totaled tens of millions of dollars.
4 (See OCC Whistleblower Notes.)

5 The Bank argues beliefs of potential violations of the Bank Secrecy Act’s Anti-6 Money Laundering Rules are insufficient as a matter of law for Erhart’s Sarbanes– 7 Oxley claim. (Boff’s Mot. 24:15–16.) The Bank claims this conduct “simply does 8 not fall within the ambit of any laws specified in Section 1514A” because the relevant 9 duties “are imposed on financial institutions by statute, and implemented through 10 regulations that are jointly promulgated by, among other agencies, the OCC, but not 11 the SEC.” (Id. 25:6–10 (citations omitted).)

12 Potential violations of the Bank Secrecy Act may not fall within the scope of 13 § 1514A, but Erhart also states he believed this conduct violated the Internal Controls 14 Rule. As the Court has discussed, this rule does not require a system of controls that 15 ensures compliance with all laws and regulations. It does, however, require policies 16 and procedures that provide reasonable assurance (1) that “receipts and expenditures 17 of the issuer are being made only in accordance with authorizations of management” 18 and (2) “regarding [the] prevention or timely detection of unauthorized acquisition, 19 use or disposition of the issuer’s assets that could have a material effect on the 20 financial statements.” See 17 C.F.R. § 240.13a–15(a). Erhart states he believed tens 21 of millions of dollars in loans were being made by the Bank to risky customers 22 against management’s directive to not establish relationships with these customers.
23 When the evidence is construed in Erhart’s favor, a reasonable factfinder could 24 conclude Erhart reasonably believed—or mistakenly believed—that this conduct 25 amounted to a violation of the Internal Controls Rule. See Van Asdale, 577 F.3d at 26 1001 (providing the reasonable belief standard is a “minimal threshold 27 requirement”). The Court thus denies Boff’s motion for partial summary judgment 28 on this category.

1 BofI argues no “reasonable person in Erhart’s position, without more 2 information would have rushed to conclude that BofI’s ALLL calculation was an 3 effort to deceive BofI shareholders.” (BofI’s Mot. 10:20–22.) And had Erhart 4 inquired of those who calculated BofI’s ALLL, reviewed the underlying contracts, 5 or reviewed the OCC’s ALLL handbook, he would have realized the ALLL was not 6 miscalculated. (Id. 11:2–11.)

7 The Court agrees. Although the “reasonable belief” standard is a “minimal 8 threshold requirement,” Erhart does not meet that standard for this category of 9 conduct. See Van Asdale, 577 F.3d at 1001. He does not provide what his 10 understanding of ALLL was at the time he formed this belief. (See Erhart Prelim.
11 Inj. Decl. ¶ 36.) Nor does Erhart explain why it would be reasonable for someone in 12 his circumstances—with his knowledge and financial background—to conclude BofI 13 miscalculated this metric to the tune of hundreds of millions of dollars and violated 14 one of the categories of laws listed in § 1514A. (See id.; see also Erhart’s Opp’n 15 20:11–15; Erhart Dep. 590:21–591:16, ECF No. 127-9.) Nor does Erhart 16 demonstrate the Bank’s ALLL was intentionally miscalculated or manipulated in an 17 attempt to conduct any form of “fraud.” See In re ChinaCast, 809 F.3d at 472, 474 18 (noting “scienter or intent to defraud” is “a bedrock requirement of Rule 10b–5”).

19 Because Erhart does not demonstrate there is a genuine issue of material fact 20 on this issue, the Court grants BofI’s request for partial summary judgment.

21 viii. 11th Category: Incomplete FDPA Audit

22 When BofI makes loans secured by a property located in a “special flood 23 hazard area” subject to the National Flood Insurance Program, the property must be 24 covered by flood insurance pursuant to the Flood Disaster Protection Act of 1973 25 (“FDPA”) and its implementing regulations. (See generally Comptroller’s 26 Handbook, Consumer Compliance, FDPA, at 3, BofI’s RJN Ex. 9, ECF No. 127-71.)
27 In September 2014, BofI retained The Compliance Group, Inc., a legal compliance 28 support services firm, to perform regulatory compliance reviews to supplement

1 BofI’s internal compliance efforts, including FDPA compliance. (Tolla Decl. ¶ 12, 2 ECF No. 127-2; BofI’s Mot. Ex. BBB, ECF No. 127-60.)

3 Erhart was later assigned to the “FDPA audit.” (JSUF ¶ 57.) The audit’s 4 objectives “included determining whether previous FDPA deficiencies had been 5 corrected, and the scope included assessing the adequacy of BofI’s FDPA program.”
6 (Id. ¶ 58.) Erhart declares he “investigated and verified the negative findings made 7 by [his] predecessors” and “presented them to management.” (Erhart Prelim. Inj.
8 Decl. ¶ 38.) Erhart further claims management “caused most of the negative findings 9 to be excluded from the Audit Report, leaving in only a small fraction of the 10 findings.” (Id.) That said, when asked at his deposition to identify the potential 11 Sarbanes–Oxley issue related to FDPA compliance, Erhart only identified an 12 allegation regarding withholding this information from a regulator. (See Erhart Dep.
13 1143:23–1145:18, ECF No. 127-11.)

14 Summary judgment on this category for Erhart’s Sarbanes–Oxley claim is 15 appropriate. Erhart does not demonstrate his belief that this conduct violated a 16 segment of laws in § 1514A was objectively reasonable. Compliance with the FDPA 17 is not listed in the statute. And to the extent Erhart argues he believed this conduct 18 was wrongful because BofI was purportedly withholding information from a bank 19 regulator, that theory fails under Sarbanes–Oxley for the reasons discussed above.
20 Hence, while this conduct may support one of Erhart’s other whistleblower 21 retaliation claims, the Court grants partial summary judgment in BofI’s favor on this 22 issue.

23 ix. 12th Category: Sanitized Global Cash Card Review

24 BofI issues prepaid and payroll “cash” cards marketed by third-party service 25 providers, including the “Global Cash Card” (“GCC”). (See Erhart Summ. J. Opp’n 26 Decl. ¶ 15; Erhart Prelim. Inj. Decl. ¶¶ 40–43.) Erhart claims that when GCC 27 reviewed its customer base for “high risk” customers, a resulting list of these 28 customers revealed “approximately 30% of the customers on the list were ‘bad’ –

1 i.e., the verification process produced alerts,” including Social Security numbers that 2 could not be found in public records and suspiciously high cash balances. (Erhart 3 Prelim. Inj. Decl. ¶ 41.) Erhart further claims, however, that when SVP Tolla learned 4 of this list, he “demanded that a new list be produced, and one was dutifully done 5 that did not feature any ‘bad’” customer data. (Id. ¶ 42.) Finally, Erhart claims BofI 6 then “terminated its relationship with GCC” and “repeatedly instructed staff not to 7 inform the OCC about why the relationship was terminated.” (Id.) These events 8 were documented in an internal audit memorandum dated February 12, 2015.
9 (Erhart’s Opp’n Ex. 83, ECF No. 157-10.)

10 Like its challenges to Erhart’s previous beliefs concerning the OCC, BofI 11 argues this conduct has “no connection” to a violation enumerated in § 1514A.
12 (Boff’s Mot. 19:2–4.) The Court agrees. This alleged misconduct again concerns 13 the Bank’s purported dishonesty with a banking regulator. While this conduct may 14 conceivably support a different theory of liability, Erhart fails to demonstrate to the 15 Court that a factfinder could conclude this conduct amounted to mail fraud, wire 16 fraud, bank fraud, or securities fraud or a violation of “any rule or regulation of the 17 [SEC]” or “any provision of Federal law relating to fraud against shareholders.” See 18 18 U.S.C. § 1514A. Erhart’s conclusory argument that this conduct could violate the 19 Books-and-Records Rule is insufficient for the same reasons as discussed for other 20 categories above. (See Erhart’s Opp’n 39:8–13.) The Court thus grants summary 21 judgment on this basis.¹³

22
24
25 ¹³ The Bank also moves for partial summary judgment on Erhart’s allegation concerning 26 reports under Boff’s Bank Secrecy Act program that were allegedly altered. (Boff’s Mot. 25:16– 27 27:12.) Erhart does not meaningfully develop this allegation in his opposition or explain why this 28 conduct violates a segment of laws identified in § 1514A. (See Erhart’s Opp’n 13:2–5; 39:8–19.)
Hence, the Court did not classify this conduct as a separate category above. Regardless, however, the Court’s analysis applies with equal force to this allegation. The Court thus grants Boff’s request for partial summary judgment on this issue.

1 x. 13th Category: Improprieties in CEO's Account

2 Erhart's Second Amended Complaint alleges one of BofI's businesses 3 involves purchasing "structured settlements from plaintiffs in litigation," where it 4 offers "them a lump sum in lieu of the periodic payments they are receiving."
5 (Erhart's SAC ¶ 12.) Erhart further alleges that while he was conducting "a review 6 of personal deposit accounts of senior management," he discovered "CEO 7 Garrabrants was depositing third-party checks for structured settlement annuity 8 payments into a personal account, including nearly $100,000 in checks made payable 9 to third parties." (Id. ¶ 44.) Erhart generally alleged this conduct and other events 10 he witnessed at the Bank violated the "mail fraud and wire fraud statutes" and "also 11 . . . the bank fraud statute." (Id. ¶ 74A.)

12 In denying BofI's motion to dismiss Erhart's Sarbanes–Oxley claim, the Court 13 determined "Erhart sufficiently pleads he reported at least some conduct that could 14 constitute a reasonable belief of a violation of the laws enumerated in Sarbanes– 15 Oxley's anti-retaliation provision." (ECF No. 44.) As an example, the Court 16 reasoned that when Erhart's allegations were construed in his favor, a reasonable 17 person could conclude the alleged "improprieties" in the CEO's personal account 18 involving more than $100,000 in third-party checks could be believed to be a form 19 of bank fraud. (Id.)

20 BofI moves for partial summary judgment on these allegations, providing 21 additional information about what was transpiring in CEO Garrabrants's personal 22 account. (BofI's Mot. 27:13–34:24.) BofI explains that CEO Garrabrants was not 23 diverting checks from BofI's structured settlement business into his personal 24 account; rather, he was independently also purchasing structured settlement payment 25 streams and depositing them into a family titling trust at the Bank. (Id.) Moreover, 26 BofI demonstrates that the Bank's Board approved the CEO's purchase of less than 27 $150,000 of structured settlements in 2009, and the Bank had the appropriate court 28 orders and assignment agreements that validated the conduct at issue. (Id.)

1 Accordingly, BofI argues “what Erhart observed presented no risk to BofI’s 2 property interests, and thus could raise no suggestion of bank fraud as the transactions
3 lacked the very essence of bank fraud.” (BofI’s Mot. 29:8–10.) BofI also highlights 4 “that the evidence shows that Erhart himself did not actually believe that 5 Garrabrants’s conduct constituted bank fraud” because Erhart testified he believed 6 CEO Garrabrants may be involved in evading federal tax law. (Id. 29:21–23 (citing 7 Erhart Dep. 645:8–10, ECF No. 127-9).)

8 In response, Erhart states: “I had not seen any transfer and assignment 9 agreements, court orders, or board minutes evidencing any approval Mr. Garrabrants 10 had to deposit the checks, although I asked for such documentation. Mr. Ball’s 11 response was to tell me the board had told the CEO to stop doing it.” (Erhart Summ.
12 J. Opp’n Decl. ¶ 16.) And given VP Ball’s response to Erhart, Erhart further states, 13 “I had no reason to think that six years earlier the board had approved such 14 transactions.” (Id.) As for what segment of § 1514A this conduct could fall under, 15 Erhart only identifies a “failure to implement a system of internal accounting 16 controls.” (Erhart’s Opp’n 39:12–13.)

17 Partial summary judgment on this category is warranted. Preliminarily, 18 concerns over tax evasion or money laundering are not mentioned in the segments of 19 laws enumerated in § 1514A. And Erhart regardless does not provide a theory for 20 how these concerns could be encompassed by § 1514A. Rather, the only theory 21 Erhart mentions in his opposition for this conduct is a violation of the Internal 22 Controls Rule. But beyond a conclusory argument that this conduct “would clearly 23 fit” this rule, Erhart offers no assistance to the Court. (See Erhart’s Opp’n 39:12– 24 14.) He does not show why CEO Garrabrants’s conduct possibly reveals a failure to 25 implement a system that maintains records that “accurately and fairly reflect the 26 transactions and dispositions of the assets of the” Bank. See 17 C.F.R. § 240.13a– 27 15(f)(1). Nor does Erhart show CEO Garrabrants’s conduct reveals a failure to 28 maintain internal control over financial reporting or provide reasonable assurance

1 regarding the unauthorized use of BofI’s assets “that could have a material effect on 2 the [Bank’s] financial statements.” See id. § 240.13a–15(f)(3). Hence, while it may 3 be possible that this conduct violated some other law, Erhart fails to aid the Court in 4 connecting this conduct to the rules under § 1514A he identifies. The Court thus 5 grants partial summary judgment on this issue.

6 xi. 14th Category: Improprieties in CEO’s Brother’s
7 Account

8 Erhart states that while reviewing employee deposit accounts at the Bank, he 9 discovered “the largest consumer account at the Bank” had the tax identification 10 number of the CEO’s brother. (Erhart Prelim. Inj. Decl. ¶ 45.) Erhart “could find no 11 evidence of how [the brother] had come legally into possession of the $4 million 12 wired into the account.” (Id.) Erhart thus claims he “was concerned about whether 13 CEO Garrabrants could be involved in tax evasion and/or money laundering.” (Id.)

14 In launching a similar summary judgment attack on this claim, BofI submits 15 that if Erhart “had bothered to obtain the relevant information – which, as an auditor 16 he should have obtained before jumping to any unsubstantiated conclusions – he 17 would have learned that Garrabrants’s conduct regarding funds in his brother’s 18 account was simply family financial planning.” (BofI’s Mot. 35:21–24.) CEO 19 Garrabrants testified that he transferred BofI shares he owned to his brother as a gift.
20 (Garrabrants Dep. 169:8–16, 172:22–174:8, ECF No. 127-17.) After his brother sold 21 the stock, the proceeds were deposited into the account at the Bank. (Id. 174:5–10, 22 175:22–24.)

23 BofI moves for summary judgment, arguing “there is no evidence that Erhart 24 reported during his employment that he believed that a [Sarbanes–Oxley]- 25 enumerated violation . . . had occurred, or would imminently occur.” (BofI’s Mot.
26 34:25–38:6.) The Court agrees. Again, regardless of the legality of this conduct, 27 Erhart does not demonstrate that concerns over potential money laundering or tax 28 evasion fall under § 1514A’s listed laws. He makes no reasoned argument that this

1 particular conduct could constitute shareholder fraud or violate either the Books-and-2 Records Rule or the Internal Controls Rule. He has simply not met his burden in 3 response to BofI's challenge.

4 In sum, BofI is entitled to partial summary judgment on Erhart's Sarbanes-5 Oxley claim's protected activity element. The Court concludes Erhart fails to 6 demonstrate a genuine issue for trial for this claim for various categories of believed 7 misconduct.¹⁴ The Court, however, denies the Bank's request to summarily 8 adjudicate the protected activity element of Erhart's claim with respect to the 6th 9 Category – Misleading Response to SEC Subpoena and the 9th Category –
10 Unauthorized Risky Loans.¹⁵

11 C. Knowledge of Protected Activity

12 BofI further moves for partial summary judgment on the third element of 13 Erhart's burden to demonstrate a prima facie case of retaliatory discrimination: that 14 BofI "knew or suspected, actively or constructively, that he engaged in the protected 15 activity." See Tides, 644 F.3d at 814. BofI claims "in regard to his work on certain 16 internal audits, Erhart failed to communicate or act in a manner that, as a matter of 17 law, was sufficient to cause BofI to know or suspect 'protected activity' on his part." 18 (BofI's Mot. 38:12–14.) Rather, BofI claims Erhart's "alleged disclosures all 19 occurred within the confines of assigned audit work," and "no factfinder reasonably 20 could conclude that the method and content of Erhart's audit related disclosures 21 placed BofI on notice that Erhart harbored a suspicion that the audits had uncovered 22 [Sarbanes–Oxley]-enumerated violations." (Id. 38:14–39:1.)

24
25 ¹⁴ These items are: 3rd Category – Untimely 401(k) Payments; 4th Category: Improper 26 Strategic Plan Approval; 7th Category – Undisclosed Customer Accounts; 8th Category –
27 Undisclosed Subpoenas; 10th Category – Miscalculated ALLL; 11th Category – Incomplete FDPA 28 Audit; 12th Category – Sanitized Global Cash Card Review; 13th Category – Improprieties in CEO's Account; and 14th Category – Improprieties in CEO's Brother's Account.

¹⁵ BofI's motion does not address the 1st Category – Corrupted Structured Settlements &
Lottery Audit or the 5th Category – High Deposit Concentration Risk in its challenge to Erhart's Sarbanes–Oxley claim's protected activity element. (See BofI's Mot. 8:25–38:6.)

1 BofI thus claims that for “certain alleged categories of suspected wrongdoing, 2 BofI did not have any knowledge of Erhart’s concerns until it first learned that Erhart
3 provided ‘information’ to the OCC on March 10, 2015.” (BofI’s Mot. 38:2–5.) BofI 4 highlights that Erhart’s direct supervisor, VP Ball, never thought Erhart “was a 5 whistleblower” while Erhart was reporting to him. (Ball Dep. 89:23–90:10, ECF No.
6 127-12.) In response, Erhart’s declaration states:

7 I spoke to Mr. Ball about all the factual predicates that BofI attempts to 8 challenge in its Motion for Summary Judgment. I communicated that 9 the Bank was engaging in illegal or otherwise regulatory non-compliant 10 activity to Mr. Ball either via email, over the telephone, or in person. I 11 always hoped that Mr. Ball would let me know if I were mistaken or 12 misguided. He did not do so as to any of the predicates at issue here.
13 He encouraged me to go where the evidence led me, and generally let 14 me know he agreed with me about the seriousness of the concerns I 15 raised. I also reported my concerns to other members of BofI 16 management, including Senior Vice President/Head of Compliance 17 John Tolla, Chief Legal Officer Eshel Bar-Adon and Chief Risk Officer 18 Thomas Williams.

16 (Erhart Summ. J. Opp’n Decl. ¶ 4.)

17 BofI’s challenge is unconvincing. There is no requirement that Erhart “use[] 18 the words ‘fraud,’ ‘fraud on shareholders,’ or ‘stock fraud’” when reporting his 19 beliefs. See Van Asdale, 577 F.3d at 997. Viewing the evidence in the light most 20 favorable to Erhart, a reasonable factfinder could conclude Erhart’s reports to his 21 supervisor and other BofI personnel put the Bank on actual or constructive notice of 22 his protected activity under § 1514A, including before March 10, 2015. Because 23 there is a genuine issue for trial on the knowledge element of Erhart’s claim, the 24 Court denies BofI’s request for partial summary judgment on this issue.

25 Overall, for Erhart’s Sarbanes–Oxley claim, the Court grants in part BofI’s 26 request for partial summary judgment on exhaustion grounds. The Court similarly 27 grants in part the Bank’s request to summarily adjudicate the protected activity 28 element of Erhart’s claim for all but two of the categories BofI challenges. The Court

1 denies, however, BofI’s request to partially adjudicate the knowledge element of 2 Erhart’s claim.

3 II. Dodd–Frank § 21F, 15 U.S.C. § 78u-6

4 “Like Sarbanes–Oxley, [Dodd–Frank] was passed in the wake of a financial 5 scandal—the subprime mortgage bubble and subsequent market collapse of 2008.”
6 Somers v. Digital Realty Tr. Inc., 850 F.3d 1045, 1048 (9th Cir. 2017), rev’d on other 7 grounds, 138 S. Ct. 767 (2018). Dodd–Frank “provided new incentives and 8 employment protections for whistleblowers by adding Section 21F to the Securities 9 Exchange Act of 1934.” Id. The Act defines a “whistleblower” as “any individual 10 who provides . . . information relating to a violation of the Securities laws to the 11 Commission, in a manner established, by rule or regulation, by the Commission.” 15 12 U.S.C. § 78u-6(a)(6). To protect whistleblowers from retaliation, Exchange Act § 13 21F provides:

14 No employer may discharge . . . or in any other manner discriminate 15 against, a whistleblower in the terms and conditions of employment . . .
16 because of any lawful act done by the whistleblower:

17 (i) in providing information to the [SEC] in accordance with this 18 section; [or]

19 . . .

20 (iii) in making disclosures that are required or protected under the 21 Sarbanes–Oxley Act of 2002

22 Id. § 78u-6(h)(1)(A).

23 Both Sarbanes–Oxley and Dodd–Frank “shield whistleblowers from 24 retaliation, but they differ in important respects.” Digital Realty Tr., Inc. v. Somers, 25 138 S. Ct. 767, 772 (2018). Although Sarbanes–Oxley “applies to all ‘employees’ 26 who report misconduct to the [SEC], any other federal agency, Congress, or an 27 internal supervisor . . . Dodd–Frank delineates a more circumscribed class.” Id. As 28 mentioned, the Act defines a “whistleblower” as a person who provides “information relating to a violation of the securities laws to the Commission,” 15 U.S.C. § 78u-6(a)(6), and a whistleblower is protected from retaliation for “making disclosures that

1 are required or protected under” Sarbanes–Oxley, id. § 78u–6(h)(1)(A)(iii). In 2 Somers, the Supreme Court interpreted these sections to mean that “[t]o sue under 3 Dodd–Frank’s anti-retaliation provision, a person must first ‘provide[e] . . .
4 information relating to a violation of securities laws to the Commission.’”¹⁶ 138 S.
5 Ct. at 772–73.

6 BofI moves for partial summary judgment on Erhart’s Dodd–Frank claim.
7 (BofI’s Mot. 47:1–18.) It highlights that making disclosures under Sarbanes–Oxley
8 is the “broadest” type of protected reporting under Dodd–Frank. (Id. 47:11–12.)
9 Hence, the Bank argues that if Erhart’s reporting of alleged wrongdoing does not 10 meet the protected activity standard for Sarbanes–Oxley, his Dodd–Frank claim 11 similarly fails to the same extent. (Id. 47:16–18.)

12 The Court agrees. The Court has already determined various categories of 13 believed misconduct are not actionable under Sarbanes–Oxley’s whistleblower 14 retaliation provision. The Court concludes these beliefs similarly fail to constitute 15 protected activity for Erhart’s Dodd–Frank claim because they were not “disclosures 16 . . . protected under the Sarbanes Oxley Act.” See 15 U.S.C. § 78u-6(h)(1)(A)(iii).
17 Nor does Erhart demonstrate the deficient categories sufficiently relate “to a violation 18 of the Securities laws,” see id. § 78u-6(a)(6), which would make them independently 19 protected under Dodd–Frank, see id. § 78u-6(h)(1)(A)(iii).¹⁷ The Court thus grants 20 BofI’s request and summarily adjudicates Erhart’s Dodd–Frank claim as to those 21 categories of beliefs the Court eliminated above.

24
25
26 ¹⁶ This limitation does not outright bar Erhart’s Dodd–Frank claim. He states he submitted 27 a whistleblower complaint to the SEC before some of the alleged retaliation occurred. (Erhart
28 Summ. J. Opp’n Decl. ¶ 20.)

¹⁷ For these reasons, the Court need not reach the Bank’s argument that Erhart’s Dodd– Frank claim fails for two categories of conduct because he purportedly did not report this conduct to the SEC. (See BofI’s Mot. 50:20–28.)

1 III. California Labor Code Section 1102.5

2 BofI also seeks to partially adjudicate Erhart’s whistleblower retaliation claim 3 under California Labor Code section 1102.5. (Boff’s Mot. 46:1–47:10.)

4 Section 1102.5 provides:

5 An employer . . . shall not retaliate against an employee for disclosing 6 information, or because the employer believes that the employee 7 disclosed or may disclose information, to a government or law 8 enforcement agency [or] to a person with authority over the employee .
9 . . if the employee has reasonable cause to believe that the information 10 discloses a violation of state or federal statute, or a violation of or 11 noncompliance with a local, state, or federal rule or regulation, regardless of whether disclosing the information is part of the employee’s job duties.

12 Cal. Labor Code § 1102.5(b). This provision is “California’s general whistleblower 13 statute.” McVeigh v. Recology San Francisco, 213 Cal. App. 4th 443, 468 (2013). It 14 reflects the state’s “broad public policy interest in encouraging workplace whistle-15 blowers to report unlawful acts without fearing retaliation.” Green v. Ralee Eng’g 16 Co., 19 Cal. 4th 66, 77 (1998).

17 Like the federal whistleblower retaliation provisions analyzed above, a claim 18 under section 1102.5 requires a plaintiff to first establish a prima facie case of 19 retaliation. Ross v. Cty. of Riverside, 36 Cal. App. 5th 580, 591 (2019). The plaintiff 20 must demonstrate: “(1) the plaintiff engaged in protected activity, (2) the defendant 21 subjected the plaintiff to an adverse employment action, and (3) there is a causal link 22 between the two.” Id.

23 As to the first element, “[a]n employee engages in activity protected by the 24 statute when the employee discloses ‘reasonably based suspicions’ of illegal 25 activity.” Ross, 36 Cal. App. 5th at 592 (quoting Green, 19 Cal. 4th at 87). Hence, 26 this California statute’s scope is much broader than the two federal whistleblower 27 protection provisions discussed above. Whereas Sarbanes–Oxley’s and Dodd– 28 Frank’s provisions are generally concerned with securities law violations and

1 corporate fraud, section 1102.5 encompasses violations of a “state or federal statute” 2 or “a local, state, or federal rule or regulation.” Compare 18 U.S.C. § 1514A, and 3 15 U.S.C. § 78u-6(h)(1)(A), with Cal. Labor Code § 1102.5(b). Decisions involving 4 section 1102.5 confirm its sweeping breadth. See generally Hawkins v. City of Los 5 Angeles, 40 Cal. App. 5th 384, 93–94 (2019) (state vehicle code violations); Ross, 36 6 Cal. App. 5th at 592 (prosecutor’s ethical obligations under state law); see also 7 Ferretti v. Pfizer Inc., 855 F. Supp. 2d 1017, 1025–27 (N.D. Cal. 2012) (Food and 8 Drug Administration regulations under section 1105.2(c)).

9 The Bank argues partial summary judgment on Erhart’s section 1102.5 claim 10 is appropriate for certain conduct because he fails to demonstrate a factfinder could 11 conclude he reported a reasonable belief of a violation of any law. (Bofl’s Mot. 48:3– 12 8.) Of these challenged categories, the Court already determined there is a triable 13 issue on the 6th Category – Misleading Response to SEC Subpoena. Therefore, the 14 remaining items that the Bank seeks to foreclose are:

- 15 2nd Category: Altered Financial Statements
- 16 4th Category: Improper Strategic Plan Approval
- 17 5th Category: High Deposit Concentration Risk
- 18 7th Category: Undisclosed Customer Accounts
- 19 8th Category: Undisclosed Subpoenas
- 20 10th Category: Miscalculated ALLL
- 21 12th Category: Sanitized Global Cash Card Review

22 (See Bofl’s Mot. 48:3–8.)¹⁸ The Court will thus consider whether Erhart meets his 23 burden to demonstrate a factfinder could conclude he engaged in protected activity 24 under section 1102.5 based on these beliefs.

 27 ¹⁸ Thus, the Bank does not challenge whether the following categories may support Erhart’s 28 state law whistleblower retaliation claim: 1st Category – Corrupted Structured Settlements &
 Lottery Audit; 3rd Category – Untimely 401(k) Payments; 9th Category – Unauthorized Risky Loans; 11th Category – Incomplete FDPA Audit; 13th Category – Improprieties in CEO’s Account; and 14th Category – Improprieties in CEO’s Brother’s Account. (See Bofl’s Mot. 48:3–8.)

1 A. 2nd Category: Altered Financial Statements

2 In January 2014, Erhart participated in a meeting that included VP Ball, Chief 3 Risk Officer Thomas Williams, and Chief Credit Officer Thomas Constantine.
4 (Erhart Dep. 545:17–25, ECF No. 127-9.) During this meeting, Erhart states Mr.
5 Constantine said that “he is not responsible for any of the Bank’s numbers after they 6 are turned over to the Chief Financial Officer.” (See id. 548:1–13; Erhart Prelim. Inj.
7 Decl. ¶ 17.) Mr. Constantine “reiterated that he could and would not vouch for the 8 accuracy of the numbers once the CFO had them.” (Erhart Prelim. Inj. Decl. ¶ 17.) 9 Erhart further claims the meeting participants “paused with this awkward look” and 10 “[i]t got quiet . . . and no one said anything.” (Erhart Dep. 545:17–25.) Erhart states 11 he interpreted this incident “to mean that senior Bank management, at the CFO level 12 and above, may be falsifying the Company’s financials.” (Erhart Prelim. Inj. Decl. ¶ 13 17 (emphasis added).)

14 BoFI argues partial summary judgment is appropriate because Erhart did not 15 disclose a reasonable belief of a violation of law on this basis. (BoFI’s Mot. 47 n.33, 16 48:3–5; see also id. 9:9–10:7.) The Bank highlights that Erhart never performed any 17 type of investigation to attempt to figure out what Mr. Constantine meant.¹⁹ (Erhart 18 Dep. 549:17–24, 559:2–560:4.) The Bank also argues his belief lacked any 19 specificity: “It concerned no particular item in a financial statement, nor specified the 20 nature of any financial statement alteration.” (BoFI’s Mot. 9:24–25.) Consequently, 21 BoFI argues no reasonable internal auditor in Erhart’s position would reasonably 22 suspect BoFI was falsifying its financial statements. (Id. 9:1–7.)

25 ¹⁹ BoFI also submits a declaration from Mr. Constantine, where he declares his statement 26 that he is “not responsible for any of the Bank’s numbers after they are turned over to the Chief 27 Financial Officer” simply “demarcated the routine delegation of responsibility for financial 28 information from a business division within BoFI to BoFI’s Finance and Accounting department and CFO.” (Constantine Decl. ¶ 3, ECF No. 127-4.) Mr. Constantine “did not intend this statement to mean anyone at BoFI . . . was falsifying BoFI’s financials.” (Id.)

1 The Court agrees. For one, Erhart never goes so far to state he believed 2 financial statement fraud was occurring. (See Erhart Prelim. Inj. Decl. ¶ 17.) But 3 regardless, Erhart does not produce sufficient evidence for a reasonable factfinder to 4 conclude he engaged in protected activity on this basis. It is not objectively 5 reasonable as a matter of law for an internal auditor in Erhart’s position—with his 6 background and experience—to believe the Bank was falsifying its financial 7 statements because Mr. Constantine said “he is not responsible for any of the Bank’s 8 numbers after they are turned over to” the Bank’s CFO. (See id.) Given that Erhart’s 9 belief must be reasonable, this “scintilla of evidence” is inadequate to for a factfinder 10 to conclude he had a reasonably based suspicion of financial statement fraud. See 11 Anderson, 477 U.S. at 252; cf. Nielsen, 762 F.3d at 223 (affirming dismissal of 12 Sarbanes–Oxley retaliation claim where the “connection between [the plaintiff’s] 13 claims and supposed fraud against shareholders [was] simply too tenuous”). The 14 Court thus grants partial summary judgment on this basis.

15 B. 4th Category: Improper Strategic Plan Approval

16 As outlined above, this category involves Erhart’s belief that the Bank 17 backdated its internal approval of a fiscal strategic plan. The Court concluded Erhart 18 failed to demonstrate this conduct falls into any of the categories enumerated in 19 Sarbanes–Oxley’s whistleblower retaliation provision. The Bank further moves for 20 a determination that this conduct does not support the protected activity element of 21 Erhart’s California whistleblower retaliation claim. (BoffI’s Mot. 48:3–7.) The Court 22 grants the request. Erhart does not explain why this conduct may nevertheless violate 23 a provision of law not encompassed by Sarbanes–Oxley or Dodd–Frank.²⁰ Because 24

25 ²⁰ Unlike his Second Amended Complaint and his Preliminary Injunction Declaration, 26 Erhart’s Summary Judgment Opposition Declaration explicitly mentions he believed the signatures 27 on the minutes approving the Strategic Plan may have been “forged.” (Compare SAC ¶ 21, and 28 Erhart Prelim. Inj. Decl. ¶ 21, with Erhart Summ. J. Opp’n Decl. ¶ 10.) Erhart’s opposition similarly mentions the word “forged” twice. (Erhart’s Opp’n 7:8; 34:12.) His memorandum, however, is otherwise unhelpful—it never mentions the elements of forgery under state law or cites to any relevant provisions of the California Penal Code. For this reason alone, the Court concludes Erhart

1 he fails to convincingly demonstrate a reasonable factfinder could conclude he 2 reported a violation of the law,²¹ the Court grants partial summary judgment on his 3 California whistleblower retaliation claim.

4 C. 5th Category: High Deposit Risk Concentration²²

5 BofI assigned Erhart “to the Enterprise Risk Management (‘ERM’) audit in 6 2014.” (JSUF ¶ 53.) This audit’s objections “were to determine if BofI had an ERM 7 program in place to identify potential events that may adversely affect BofI, manage 8 risk, and provide reasonable assurances regarding strategic objectives.” (Id. ¶ 54.)

9 “For Erhart’s use in conducting the ERM audit, [SVP] Tolla instructed a BofI 10 analyst to run a deposit concentration report.” (JSUF ¶ 56.) Erhart later sent an e-11 mail to the Bank’s Chief Risk Officer Thomas Williams regarding the Bank’s deposit

14 15 does not meet his burden to show reporting this conduct was protected activity on the theory that the allegedly backdated Strategic Plan approval amounted to forgery.

16 Nonetheless, for the avoidance of doubt, the Court notes that the California Penal Code 17 provides that a “person who, with intent to defraud another, makes, forges, or alters any entry in 18 any book of records . . . is guilty of forgery.” Cal. Penal Code § 471. “The statute does not limit 19 the term ‘book of records’ in any fashion; rather, it broadly refers to ‘any’ such book.” People v.
20 Dunbar, 209 Cal. App. 4th 114, 117 (2012). Thus, the provision is not limited to public records.
21 Id. at 119. The crime still, however, requires a specific intent to “defraud another.” Cal. Penal 22 Code § 471. In interpreting the same requirement in another forgery statute—section 470—the 23 California Court of Appeal noted that “only schemes to prejudice, damage or defraud persons as to their legal rights, generally money or property, are within the ambit of section 470.” Lewis v.
Superior Court, 217 Cal. App. 3d 379, 398–99 (1990). Erhart fails to demonstrate as a matter of law that the Strategic Plan approval was part of such a scheme here. Cf. Dunbar, 209 Cal. App.
4th at 119–20 (reasoning where criminal defendant used forged bank deposit slip receipts to cause false entries to be made into private company’s financial records as part of a scheme to short the company $6.8 million, this conduct fell within the ambit of section 471). The Court thus also rejects a forgery theory on this second rationale.

24 ²¹ In the same vein, Erhart fails to explain to the Court why handbook guidance from the 25 OCC—absent a specific underlying law or regulation—would be a “federal statute . . . or federal rule or regulation.” See Cal. Labor Code § 1102.5(b). Hence, although Erhart states he believed 26 OCC handbooks required approval of the Bank’s Strategic Plan, he does not connect the dots for the Court to demonstrate he has a triable section 1102.5(b) claim on this basis. The Court will not 27 “go fishing through [banking] law and regulation for provisions [Erhart] may have believed were violated.” See Lamb, 249 F. Supp. 3d at 915 n.4.

28 ²² The Bank did not challenge whether this conduct could be protected activity for Erhart’s Sarbanes–Oxley claim. (See BofI’s Mot. 8:23–9:8.)

1 concentration risk. (Erhart Prelim. Inj. Decl. ¶ 22; BofI’s Mot. Ex. DD, ECF No.
2 127-36.) In the e-mail, Erhart wrote:

3 In preparing for the upcoming Enterprise Risk Management Audit I 4 noticed that as of 11/20/2014 the four (4) largest Business Banking 5 customers together account for approximately 25% of the total bank 6 deposits, and that the nine (9) largest Business Banking customers 7 together account for approximately 40% of the total bank deposits (see 8 the link to the Report below). Do you think this presents a deposit concentration risk to the Bank having such a large percentage of the Bank’s deposits spread across only a few number of customers?

9 (BofI’s Mot. Ex. DD.) In his declaration, Erhart explains he was concerned because 10 deposit concentration is a “serious concern” for the Bank and could affect “its 11 compliance with regulators.” (Erhart Prelim. Inj. Decl. ¶ 22.) Williams responded 12 to his concerns. (BofI’s Mot. Ex. DD.) Erhart states he was later “summoned” to 13 SVP Tolla’s office who then commented on Erhart’s e-mail to Williams and 14 “instructed [him] to not put [his] concerns in writing.” (Erhart Prelim. Inj. Decl. ¶ 15 24.) Erhart claims BofI was “instructing audit staff not to create written evidence of 16 its non-compliance and illegal conduct.” (Id.) In his opposition, he argues in a 17 conclusory fashion that he reasonably believed this conduct “was both a books and 18 records violation as well as an internal control and shareholder fraud violation.”
19 (Erhart’s Opp’n 8:18–20.)

20 The Bank argues Erhart fails to demonstrate protected activity on this basis.
21 (BofI’s Mot. 48:7–8.) The Court agrees. Erhart does not explain why a reasonable 22 jury could conclude this conduct was a violation of the Books-and-Records Rule.
23 Assuming Erhart was told not to put his concern over deposit concentration risk in 24 writing, this does not implicate a failure to keep “books, records, and accounts, 25 which, in reasonable detail, accurately and fairly reflect the transactions and 26 dispositions of the assets of the issuer.” See 15 U.S.C. § 78m(b)(2)(A). The same 27 conclusion is true for his conclusory invocation of the Internal Controls Rule. Erhart 28 does not demonstrate this conduct reveals a failure of the Bank to maintain internal

1 control over financial reporting. See 17 C.F.R. § 240.13a–15(a). As for potential 2 shareholder fraud, Erhart’s opposition again does not even mention the elements of 3 this theory, and he does not meet his burden to show he disclosed an objectively 4 reasonable belief of this type of violation. See Van Asdale, 577 F.3d at 1001; see 5 also In re ChinaCast, 809 F.3d at 472, 474 (noting “scienter or intent to defraud” is 6 “a bedrock requirement of Rule 10b–5”). The Court will not patch together a triable 7 retaliation claim for him.

8 Moreover, although a high deposit concentration risk and this conduct may 9 violate some type of banking regulation or other state or federal law, Erhart’s 10 opposition does not attempt to connect the dots for the Court. The Court again 11 declines to “go fishing through [banking] law and regulation for provisions [Erhart] 12 may have believed were violated.” See Lamb, 249 F. Supp. 3d at 915 n.4. The Court 13 thus grants partial summary judgment on this issue.

14 C. 7th, 8th, and 12th Categories: Undisclosed Customer
15 Accounts, Undisclosed Subpoenas, and Sanitized Global Cash
16 Card Review

17 These categories all concern the Bank’s interactions with its principal 18 regulator, the OCC. Erhart states he believes the Bank was defrauding its regulator 19 by (1) instructing him to remove negative findings from audit reports, (2) making 20 misleading or false communications to the OCC, and (3) hiding information from it.
21 (See Erhart Summ. J. Opp’n Decl. ¶¶ 6, 13, 15; see also Erhart Prelim. Inj. Decl. ¶¶
22 32–33, 39, 41–43, 49, 50, 52; Erhart’s Opp’n 4:27–28, 14:6–7, 19:16–19; 20:26–27;
23 33:8–9.) The Bank also purportedly refused to let internal audit employees 24 communicate in writing during the OCC’s regulatory examination. (See Erhart 25 Prelim. Inj. Decl. ¶ 44.) And when Erhart’s boss, the VP of Internal Audit, abruptly 26 resigned under disputed but questionable circumstances around the time of the 27 examination, Boffl purportedly instructed audit staff “not to inform the OCC that Mr.
28 Ball had resigned.” (Id. ¶ 45.)

1 For the reasons explained above, the Court concluded Erhart fails to 2 demonstrate this conduct implicates the types of laws listed in Sarbanes–Oxley’s and 3 Dodd–Frank’s whistleblower protection provisions. The Bank maintains, however, 4 that there is also “no evidence” that Erhart disclosed “any potential violation of law” 5 for these items to support his broader California whistleblower retaliation claim.
6 (Boff’s Mot. 48:4–5.)

7 The Court is unconvinced. As part of the Department of the Treasury, the 8 OCC is a bureau “charged with assuring the safety and soundness of, and compliance 9 with laws and regulations, fair access to financial services, and fair treatment of 10 customers by, the institutions and other persons subject to its jurisdiction.” 12 U.S.C.
11 § 1. The OCC “is authorized, under such regulations as [it] may prescribe . . . to 12 provide for the organization, incorporation, examination, operation, and regulation 13 of associations to be known as Federal savings associations (including Federal 14 savings banks).” 12 U.S.C. § 1464(a). Thus, given that BofI is a federal savings
15 association, the OCC is its primary regulator. (JSUF ¶¶ 1, 4.)

16 The OCC has the authority to appoint examiners to examine subject banks like 17 BofI as often as the OCC deems necessary. 12 U.S.C. § 1. Under its regulations, the 18 OCC “is required to conduct a full-scope, on-site examination of every national bank 19 and Federal savings association at least once during each 12–month period.” 12 20 C.F.R. § 4.6. And “[i]n the course of any examination of a savings association, upon 21 request by the [OCC], prompt and complete access shall be given to all savings 22 association officers, directors, employees, and agents, and to all relevant books, 23 records, or documents of any type.” 12 U.S.C. § 1464(d)(1)(B) (emphasis added).
24 Indeed, the Bank itself acknowledges that the “OCC has its own specific rules that 25 prohibit financial institutions subject to its regulations from withholding information 26 or refusing to disclose information.” (Boff’s Mot. 21:5–8 (citing 12 U.S.C. § 481; 27 12 C.F.R. § 4.6).)

1 Beyond this specific regulatory regime, the law also more broadly prohibits 2 defrauding a federal regulator. The federal conspiracy statute, 18 U.S.C. § 371, 3 makes it a crime for “two or more persons” to “conspire . . . to defraud the United 4 States, or any agency thereof in any manner or for any purpose.” The phrase “to 5 defraud . . . in any manner or for any purpose” covers “any conspiracy for the purpose 6 of impairing, obstructing or defeating the lawful function of any department of 7 Government.” United States v. Rodman, 776 F.3d 638, 642 (9th Cir. 2015) (quoting 8 Tanner v. United States, 483 U.S. 107, 128 (1987)). This prohibition includes 9 “obstructing the operation of any government agency by any ‘deceit, craft or trickery, 10 or at least by means that are dishonest.” Id. (quoting United States v. Caldwell, 989 11 F.2d 1056, 1058 (9th Cir. 1993)). The Ninth Circuit has “also clarified that a 12 conspiracy need not deprive the government of property, involve any detrimental 13 reliance by the government, or involve independently illegal goals or means.” Id.
14 Hence, 18 U.S.C. § 371 prohibits “(1) . . . an agreement (2) to obstruct a lawful 15 function of the government (3) by deceitful or dishonest means and (4) at least one 16 overt act in furtherance of the conspiracy.” Id.; see also United States v. Hughes 17 Aircraft Co., 20 F.3d 974, 976, 981 (9th Cir. 1994) (upholding corporate defendant’s 18 conviction under § 371 where employee submitted false paperwork to the 19 Government and the employee’s “supervisors did nothing about it”).

20 When the evidence is construed in Erhart’s favor, a reasonable factfinder could 21 conclude he “disclose[d] ‘reasonably based suspicions’ of illegal activity” 22 concerning the Bank’s interactions with the OCC. See Ross, 36 Cal. App. 5th at 592
23 (quoting Green, 19 Cal. 4th at 87). At minimum, a factfinder could conclude Erhart 24 reasonably suspected the Bank was violating the law by withholding or refusing to 25 provide accurate information to the OCC. See 12 U.S.C. § 1464(d)(1)(B) (providing 26 the OCC upon request shall be given “prompt and complete access . . . to all relevant 27 books, records, or documents of any type”). Further, giving credence to Erhart’s 28 beliefs, his observations, and statements purportedly made by senior Bank officials,

1 a factfinder could also conclude Erhart disclosed reasonably based suspicions that 2 individuals at the Bank were attempting to obstruct the OCC’s lawful examination 3 and regulation of the Bank by “deceit, craft or trickery, or at least by means that are 4 dishonest.” See Rodman, 776 F.3d at 642.

5 Again, the Court emphasizes that it is not drawing any conclusions about the 6 legality of BofI’s conduct. The Bank submits evidence suggesting Erhart’s beliefs 7 were incorrect, his concerns were overblown, and nothing nefarious happened 8 involving the OCC. (See BofI’s Mot. 15:1–23:25.) But the test is whether when 9 viewing the evidence in the light most favorable to Erhart, a reasonable factfinder 10 could conclude he had “reasonable cause to believe that the information” he reported 11 “disclose[d] a violation of state or federal statute, or a violation of or noncompliance 12 with a local, state, or federal rule or regulation, regardless of whether disclosing the 13 information [was] part of [his] job duties.” See Cal. Labor Code § 1102.5(b). Erhart 14 has demonstrated there is a genuine issue for trial with respect to his beliefs 15 concerning the Bank’s interactions with the OCC. Hence, the Court denies the 16 Bank’s request for partial summary judgment on the categories that involve these 17 beliefs.

18 D. 10th Category: Miscalculated ALLL

19 To recap, this category concerns Erhart’s stated belief that BofI was possibly 20 miscalculating its ALLL—a reserve for bad debts. The Court determined above that 21 it was not objectively reasonable as a matter of law for Erhart to believe BofI was 22 violating one of the laws listed in § 1514A. Erhart does not show the outcome should 23 be any different for his section 1102.5 claim. Therefore, he similarly does not 24 demonstrate it was reasonable for someone in his circumstances to believe this 25 conduct violated a “state or federal statute” or “a local, state, or federal rule or 26
28

1 regulation.” See Cal. Labor Code § 1102.5(b). The Court thus grants summary
2 judgment on Erhart’s section 1102.5 claim on this basis.²³

3 In sum, the Court grants BofI’s request for partial summary adjudication of 4 Erhart’s section 1102.5 claim as to Erhart’s beliefs concerning the 2nd Category –
5 Altered Financial Statements, 4th Category – Improper Strategic Plan Approval, 5th
6 Category – High Deposit Risk Concentration, and 10th Category – Miscalculated
7 ALLL. The Court denies BofI’s request for partial summary judgment on Erhart’s 8 claims for his beliefs regarding the 7th, 8th, and 12th Categories – Undisclosed 9 Customer Accounts, Undisclosed Subpoenas, and Sanitized GCC Review.

10 IV. Wrongful Discharge in Violation of Public Policy

11 Last, BofI challenges Erhart’s state law claim for wrongful discharge in 12 violation of public policy. (BofI’s Mot. 48:8–10.) “[W]hen an employer’s discharge 13 of an employee violates fundamental principles of public policy, the discharged 14 employee may maintain a tort action and recover damages traditionally available in 15 such actions.” Tameny v. Atl. Richfield Co., 27 Cal. 3d 167, 170 (1980). “The 16 elements of a claim for wrongful discharge in violation of public policy are (1) an 17 employer-employee relationship, (2) the employer terminated the plaintiff’s 18 employment, (3) the termination was substantially motivated by a violation of public 19 policy, and (4) the discharge caused the plaintiff harm.” Yau v. Santa Margarita 20 Ford, Inc., 229 Cal. App. 4th 144, 154 (2014). This cause of action protects reporting 21 “a statutory violation for the public’s benefit.” Green, 19 Cal. 4th at 76. “[A]n 22 employee need not prove an actual violation of law; it suffices if the employer fired 23 him for reporting his ‘reasonably based suspicions’ of illegal activity.” Id.; see also

24
25 ²³ BofI also seeks partial summary judgment on Erhart’s allegation regarding altered Bank 26 Secrecy Act reports. (BofI’s Mot. 48:7.) The Court noted above that Erhart does not meaningfully 27 develop this allegation in his opposition or explain why this conduct violates a segment of laws 28 identified in § 1514A. Erhart similarly does not produce sufficient evidence for a factfinder to conclude he had an objectively reasonable belief that a law was being violated. The Court thus grants BofI’s request for partial summary judgment on this issue for Erhart’s section 1102.5 claim as well.

1 Wadler, 916 F.3d at 1189–91 (discussing this claim in the whistleblower retaliation 2 context).

3 BofI argues Erhart’s wrongful termination claim is derivative of his Sarbanes– 4 Oxley, Dodd–Frank, and California Labor Code section 1102.5 claims. (BofI’s Mot.
5 48:8–10.) The Bank contends partial summary judgment on this claim is therefore 6 appropriate “for the same reasons and to the same extent.” (Id.) Erhart does not 7 meaningfully argue otherwise. (See Erhart’s Opp’n 44:3–6.) And the Court agrees.
8 To the extent the Court has summarily adjudicated Erhart’s other claims discussed 9 above in the Bank’s favor, the Court similarly grants partial summary judgment in 10 BofI’s favor on Erhart’s state law wrongful discharge claim. However, to the extent 11 the Court has denied the Bank’s requests for partial summary judgment, the Court 12 similarly denies its request to summarily adjudicate Erhart’s wrongful discharge 13 claim.

14 ERHART’S MOTION

15 Erhart moves for summary judgment on all of the Bank’s claims. (Erhart’s 16 Mot. 1:6–1:10, ECF No. 137.) The Bank’s claims center on Erhart’s access to 17 confidential information and his alleged misuse of this information. (BofI’s First 18 Am. Compl. (“FAC”) ¶¶ 47–98, No. 15-cv-2353-BAS-NLS, ECF No. 12.) The Bank 19 defines its “confidential information” as:

- 20 (i) information containing BofI’s intellectual property, including, 21 without limitation, that which it licenses from third parties;
- 22 (ii) confidential and proprietary information belonging to BofI, its 23 employees, its business counterparties, and/or its clients; and
- 24 (iii) information containing the non-public personal information of 25 BofI employees, business counterparties, and clients[.]

26 (Id. ¶ 11.) As mentioned above, the Bank claims Erhart abused his access to this 27 information, performed “rogue investigations,” and failed to complete his assigned 28 audits. (Id. ¶¶ 23–29.) BofI further claims that Erhart improperly took and disclosed

1 its confidential information and deleted data from his company-issued laptop. (Id.
2 ¶¶ 43–46.)

3 Based on these allegations, the Bank brings eight claims against Erhart, 4 including breach of contract, breach of the duty of loyalty, and violation of the 5 Computer Fraud and Abuse Act. (Boff’s FAC ¶¶ 44–98.) The Court addressed these 6 claims when analyzing Erhart’s affirmative defenses and his Rule 12(c) motion.
7 Because these orders influence the Court’s summary judgment analysis, the Court 8 reviews them before turning to Erhart’s challenges.

9 I. Prior Determinations

10 A. Rule 12(c) Order

11 Erhart moved under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(c) for judgment on the 12 pleadings as to almost all of Boff’s claims. Although the Court expressed skepticism 13 about portions of these claims, it noted that “with few exceptions, it is limited under 14 Rule 12(c) to considering the factual allegations contained in the pleadings.” (Rule 15 12(c) Order 4:27–28, ECF No. 123.) The Court also underscored that “a pleadings 16 motion is not the proper venue to resolve the parties’ competing factual contentions 17 regarding what transpired during Erhart’s tenure at the Bank.” (Id. 5:5–7.) The Court 18 then analyzed the legal sufficiency of each challenged claim and concluded Boff’s 19 allegations withstand scrutiny under Rule 12(c). (Id. 5:10–17:21.) In doing so, the 20 Court addressed a variety of legal issues, including whether Boff could sue its former 21 employee under several state law causes of action. (See id.) Hence, although Erhart 22 now challenges Boff’s claims under Rule 56, the Court’s legal determinations apply 23 with equal force. The Court will incorporate its prior determinations as it addresses 24 Erhart’s revived challenges to Boff’s claims below.

25 B. Affirmative Defenses Order

26 The Court also commented on Boff’s claims when addressing Erhart’s 27 whistleblower-related affirmative defenses. (Affirmative Defenses Order, ECF No.
28 40.) The Bank moved for summary adjudication of these defenses, arguing they fail

1 because at least some of Erhart’s conduct cannot be considered protected 2 whistleblower activity as a matter of law. To resolve the Bank’s motion, the Court
3 analyzed Erhart’s defenses primarily in the context of the Bank’s breach of contract 4 claim. (Id. 11:11–32:16.) This claim is based on an Employee Confidentiality, Non-5 Disclosure, and Non-Recruitment Agreement (“Confidentiality Agreement”) that 6 Erhart executed as a condition of his employment. (Id. 3:7–20.)

7 The Court construed Erhart’s whistleblower defenses to allege that enforcing 8 the Confidentiality Agreement would be illegal. (Affirmative Defenses Order 11:20– 9 12:8.) The Court thus analyzed under California law whether the Confidentiality 10 Agreement should not be enforced—or at least not be enforced fully. (Id. 12:9– 11 15:12.) This analysis required the Court to consider the interest in enforcing the 12 Confidentiality Agreement, the public policy against enforcement, and whether the 13 public policy clearly outweighs the interest in enforcement. (Id. 15:14–19:19.) The 14 Court did so for five categories of Erhart’s conduct to determine if enforcement 15 would be against public policy. (Id. 19:22–32:16.) These categories were: (1) 16 Erhart’s communications with the Government; (2) Erhart’s appropriation of Boff’s 17 files; (3) Erhart’s disclosure of some confidential information for safekeeping 18 purposes; (4) Erhart’s and his counsel’s purported disclosures to the press; and (5) 19 Erhart’s disclosure of information in his whistleblower retaliation complaint. (Id.)

20 In brief, the Court determined the Confidentiality Agreement cannot be 21 enforced as to Erhart’s whistleblower communications with the Government.
22 (Affirmative Defenses Order 19:21–20:6.) As to the second item, the Court 23 determined a public policy exception may cover Erhart’s appropriation of Boff’s 24 files, and there is a genuine issue for trial as to whether Erhart’s removal of 25 documents was “reasonably necessary” to support his allegations of wrongdoing. (Id.
26 20:8–25:6.) The Court similarly determined there was a question of fact as to 27 whether Erhart’s disclosure of some of the Bank’s information for safekeeping 28 purposes could be shielded by his affirmative defenses. (Id. 25:8–28:4.) Fourth, the

1 Court determined purported disclosures to the press are not shielded by the relevant 2 whistleblower statutes. (Id. 29:1–30:1.) Finally, factual issues remained for the final 3 category of conduct regarding Erhart’s whistleblower allegations. (Id. 30:23–32:16.)

4 Although the Court’s analysis focused on Boff’s claim for breach of the 5 Confidentiality Agreement, the Court also briefly addressed Boff’s state law tort 6 claims. (Affirmative Defenses Order 32:18–33:14.) The Court construed Erhart’s 7 whistleblower protection defenses as raising a defense of justification or privilege to 8 the tort claims under state law. (Id.) The Court reasoned: “It is implicit in the various 9 whistleblower protection provisions that if an employee is permitted to provide 10 information regarding believed wrongdoing to the government, including documents, 11 the employer cannot then seek to impose tort liability on the employee for the same 12 conduct.” (Id. 33:7–10.) The Court thus denied Boff’s request for summary 13 adjudication of Erhart’s whistleblower protection defenses, concluding genuine 14 issues of fact remained for trial. (Id. 12:13–34:4.)

15 Even though the Court made these determinations when considering Erhart’s 16 affirmative defenses, the Court’s legal conclusions similarly apply to Erhart’s request 17 to dispose of Boff’s claims under Rule 56. Hence, if Boff demonstrates a factfinder 18 could conclude Erhart did not engage in protected activity—or that he exceeded what 19 is permitted under the relevant whistleblower statutes—the Court cannot summarily 20 dispose of Boff’s claims on account of Erhart’s “whistleblower” status. The Court 21 rejects Erhart’s arguments contending otherwise. With that backdrop in mind, the 22 Court turns to Erhart’s Rule 56 challenges to Boff’s claims.

23 II. CUTSA Displacement

24 The Court first addresses Erhart’s threshold argument concerning California’s 25 Uniform Trade Secrets Act (“CUTSA”). The Court recognized the possibility that 26 CUTSA may impact Boff’s claims in the Court’s Rule 12(c) Order, but the Court 27 declined to address this issue because Erhart did not raise it. (Rule 12(c) Order 5 28 n.3.) Erhart now argues CUTSA displaces Boff’s claims for fraud, negligence,

1 conversion, and breach of the duty of loyalty, and the Bank has had the opportunity
2 to respond. (Erhart’s Mot. 5:17–7:20, Boffi’s Opp’n 8:14–11:18, ECF No. 155.)

3 Under CUTSA, a party may recover for the “actual loss” or other injury caused 4 by the misappropriation of trade secrets. Cal. Civ. Code § 3426.3. CUTSA defines 5 misappropriation as (1) the improper acquisition of a trade secret or (2) the non-6 consensual disclosure or use of a trade secret. Id. § 3426.1(b). A “trade secret” is 7 information that derives “independent economic value” from its confidentiality and 8 is subject to “efforts that are reasonable under the circumstances to maintain its 9 secrecy.” Id. § 3426.1(d). “CUTSA provides the exclusive civil remedy for conduct 10 falling within its terms.” Silvaco Data Sys. v. Intel Corp., 184 Cal. App. 4th 210, 236 11 (2010), disapproved on other grounds by Kwikset Corp. v. Superior Court, 51 Cal.
12 4th 310, 337 (2011).

13 Because CUTSA provides an exclusive remedy, Courts have reasoned it 14 displaces common law tort claims in two circumstances. First, CUTSA displaces 15 claims that are “based on the same nucleus of facts as the misappropriation of trade 16 secrets claim for relief.”²⁴ K.C. Multimedia, Inc. v. Bank of Am. Tech. & Operations, 17 Inc., 171 Cal. App. 4th 939, 958 (2009). Stated differently, CUTSA displaces tort 18 claims where they “do not genuinely allege ‘alternative legal theories’ but are a 19 transparent attempt to evade the strictures of CUTSA by restating a trade secrets

20 _____ 21 ²⁴ The terms “displacement,” “preemption,” and “supersession” have all been used to describe CUTSA’s effect. The California Court of Appeal has reasoned:

22 “Technically, the doctrine of preemption concerns whether a federal law has 23 superseded a state law or a state law has superseded a local law, not whether one 24 provision of state law has displaced other provisions of state law. Here, the [relevant 25 claims] are all matters of state law. Accordingly, we will use the word ‘displace’ in 26 discussing this issue.” Although another Court of Appeal prefers the term “supersession” in discussing the impact [C]UTSA has on other laws and nominally non-[C]UTSA claims, we will adopt the nomenclature employed by our Supreme Court and discuss whether another law or claim has been “displaced” by [C]UTSA.

27 Angelica Textile Servs., Inc. v. Park, 220 Cal. App. 4th 495, 498 (2013) (alterations omitted) 28 (citations omitted) (citing Zengen, Inc. v. Comerica Bank, 41 Cal. 4th 239, 247 (2007); Silvaco, 184 Cal. App. 4th at 232 n. 14). The Court will similarly use this nomenclature.

1 claim as something else.” Silvaco, 184 Cal. App. 4th at 240; see also K.C.
2 Multimedia, 171 Cal. App. 4th at 960–92 (concluding CUTSA displaced breach of 3 confidence, interference with contract, and unfair competition claims).

4 Second, CUTSA displaces “all claims premised on the wrongful taking and 5 use of confidential business and proprietary information, even if that information 6 does not meet the statutory definition of a trade secret.” ChromaDex, Inc. v. Elysium
7 Health, Inc., 369 F. Supp. 3d 983, 989 (C.D. Cal. 2019); accord Copart, Inc. v. Sparta
8 Consulting, Inc., 277 F. Supp. 3d 1127, 1158 (E.D. Cal. 2017); Mattel, Inc. v. MGA
9 Entm’t, Inc., 782 F. Supp. 2d 911, 987 (C.D. Cal. 2011). Afterall, a “prime purpose” 10 of the Uniform Trade Secrets Act “was to sweep away the adopting states’ 11 bewildering web of rules and rationales and replace it with a uniform set of principles 12 for determining when one is—and is not—liable for acquiring, disclosing, or using 13 ‘information . . . of value.’” Silvaco, 184 Cal. App. 4th at 239 n.22. “Information 14 that does not fit” the definition of a trade secret, “and is not otherwise made property 15 by some provision of positive law, belongs to no one, and cannot be converted or 16 stolen.” Id. Hence, “if the basis of the alleged property right is in essence that the 17 information . . . is ‘not . . . generally known to the public,’ then the claim is 18 sufficiently close to a trade secret claim that it should be superseded notwithstanding 19 the fact that the information fails to meet the definition of a trade secret.” SunPower 20 Corp. v. SolarCity Corp., No. 12-CV-00694-LHK, 2012 WL 6160472, at *5 (N.D.
21 Cal. Dec. 11, 2012) (citing Cal. Civ. Code § 3426.1(d)(1)).

22 BofI’s tort claims implicate these principles.²⁵ BofI does not plead a trade 23 secrets misappropriation claim. But the gravamen of BofI’s tort claims is that Erhart 24 wrongfully accessed and took its “confidential and proprietary information.” (See 25 BofI’s FAC ¶¶ 11, 13, 26, 55–56, 65, 70, 75–76.) Indeed, the Bank repeatedly uses 26 the terms “misappropriate” and “misappropriation” in its pleading. (Id. ¶¶ 35, 38, 27

28 ²⁵ CUTSA does not displace “contractual remedies, whether or not based upon misappropriation of a trade secret.” Cal. Civ. Code § 3426.7(b). Consequently, CUTSA does not displace BofI’s claim for breach of the Confidentiality Agreement based on similar allegations.

1 39, 59, 70, 88.) By not pleading a trade secrets misappropriation claim, BofI 2 sidesteps CUTSA’s requirements, including proving that the information rises to the 3 level of a protectable trade secret. See Cal. Civ. Code § 3426.1(d). Yet the Bank still 4 seeks to impose liability on Erhart for “acquiring, disclosing, or using” confidential 5 information of purported value. See Silvano, 184 Cal. App. 4th at 239 n.22. (See 6 also BofI’s Opp’n 16:3–5 (arguing “there was value in the information Erhart 7 converted because BofI invested time and expense in creating, assembling, and 8 maintaining its data”).)

9 BofI nonetheless maintains that CUTSA does not displace its tort claims. The 10 Bank’s primary argument is that CUTSA is inapplicable because the information at 11 issue “was not capable of securing some trade advantage.” (BofI’s Opp’n 10:2–26.)
12 In other words, BofI argues the confidential information it is seeking to protect is not 13 a trade secret, and therefore none of its claims are “sufficiently close to a trade secret 14 claim.” (Id.) This argument is unpersuasive. It does not address the rule that CUTSA 15 displaces “all claims premised on the wrongful taking and use of confidential 16 business and proprietary information, even if that information does not meet the 17 statutory definition of a trade secret.” ChromaDex, 369 F. Supp. 3d at 989. And 18 regardless, there is little doubt that some of the information BofI is trying to protect 19 could be entitled to trade secret protection. (See Affirmative Defenses Order 16:16– 20 19 (reasoning information contained in BofI’s confidential Strategic Plan is likely 21 subject to trade secret protection) (citing Whyte v. Schlage Lock Co., 101 Cal. App.
22 4th 1443, 1454 (2002) (holding company’s strategic plan documents were trade 23 secrets under California law)).)

24 That said, BofI demonstrates some of the allegations underlying its tort claims 25 are distinguishable on another basis. The Bank argues Erhart improperly took 26 nonpublic “customer financial information,” which BofI has a duty to safeguard.
27 (BofI’s Opp’n 10:10–11.) For instance, Erhart sent a spreadsheet that contained BofI 28 customers’ Social Security numbers outside the Bank’s systems—and not to the 1 Government. (See Affirmative Defenses Order 5:19–21.) He also printed copies of 2 documents, including “customer bank account information,” and downloaded to his 3 personal laptop “account information, wire transfer details, [and] account lists.” (Id.

4 4:21–5:1.) Erhart admittedly kept documents containing information “in a bag that 5 was buried in [his] closet under a bunch of items.” (Erhart Dep. 192:8–13, ECF No.
6 155-2.) And there is a factual dispute as to whether he had permission to take 7 documents home. (See Ball Dep. 93:5–15, ECF No. 155-5.)

8 Given this conduct, the Bank argues CUTSA does not displace BofI’s tort 9 claims that pursue Erhart for the damages it incurred to recover this sensitive 10 information and prevent unauthorized disclosures. (See BofI’s Opp’n 6:21–7:6; 11 14:17–19.) This argument has merit. BofI has an obligation to protect the nonpublic 12 personal information of its customers.²⁶ In this sense, BofI’s allegations concerning 13 Erhart’s unauthorized taking of customer financial information are more akin to a 14 data breach claim than either a disguised trade secrets claim, see K.C. Multimedia, 15 171 Cal. App. 4th at 958, or a “claim premised on the wrongful taking and use of 16 confidential business and proprietary information,” see ChromaDex, 369 F. Supp. 3d 17 at 989. In the same vein, the Court finds distinguishable the Bank’s allegation that 18 Erhart wrongfully took nonpublic personal information of BofI’s employees, such as 19 BofI’s CEO’s personal tax returns. (See BofI’s FAC ¶ 11; Erhart Dep. 639:7–640:14, 20 ECF No. 155-3; Ball Dep. 318:7–18, ECF No. 155-6.) For CUTSA displacement, 21 the Court finds there is a meaningful distinction between BofI’s efforts to safeguard

22 ²⁶ See, e.g., 15 U.S.C. § 6801 (“[E]ach financial institution has an affirmative and 23 continuing obligation to respect the privacy of its customers and to protect the security and 24 confidentiality of those customers’ nonpublic personal information.”); Cal. Fin. Code 25 § 4052.5 (providing that unless an exception applies, a “financial institution shall not sell, share, 26 transfer, or otherwise disclose nonpublic personal information . . . without the explicit prior consent 27 of the consumer to whom the nonpublic personal information relates”); see also Cal. Civ. Code § 28 1798.81.5(b) (“A business that owns or licenses personal information about a California resident shall implement and maintain reasonable security procedures and practices appropriate to the nature of the information, to protect the personal information from unauthorized access, destruction, use, modification, or disclosure.”); In re Sony Gaming Networks & Customer Data Sec. Breach Litig., 996 F. Supp. 2d 942, 966 (S.D. Cal. 2014) (finding “common sense and California” law support “a legal duty to safeguard a consumer’s confidential information entrusted to a commercial entity”).

1 this information, as compared to the Bank’s efforts to impose liability on Erhart for 2 wrongfully taking “information containing Boff’s intellectual property” and the 3 Bank’s “confidential and proprietary information.” (See Boff’s FAC ¶ 11.) Cf. CTC
4 Real Estate Servs. v. Lepe, 140 Cal. App. 4th 856, 860 (2006) (noting that one’s 5 personal identifying information “is a valuable asset” because its misuse “can have 6 serious consequences to that person” and it can be the object of theft).

7 Given this blended result, the Court finds CUTSA displaces portions of Boff’s 8 common law tort claims. To the extent that the Bank seeks to impose liability on 9 Erhart for taking and misusing its amorphous confidential and proprietary business 10 information, the Court finds CUTSA displaces Boff’s tort claims. See ChromaDex, 11 369 F. Supp. 3d at 989; see also Silvaco, 184 Cal. App. 4th at 239 n.22. It would 12 defeat the purpose of CUTSA to allow Boff to maintain claims based on these 13 allegations. See Silvaco, 184 Cal. App. 4th at 239 n.22. The Court also rejects the 14 Bank’s conclusory, eleventh-hour request for leave to amend its complaint to plead 15 a trade secrets misappropriation claim.²⁷ That said, the Court finds CUTSA does not 16 displace Boff’s tort claims with respect to the Bank’s allegation that Erhart 17 improperly took and misused its customers’ and employees’ nonpublic personal 18

19 ²⁷ In a footnote, Boff “seeks leave to amend its complaint to add a CUTSA claim” to the 20 extent the Court believes CUTSA displaces the Bank’s claims. (Boff’s Opp’n 10 n.7.) The Court 21 has discretion to permit amendment in response to a motion for summary judgment. See Desertrain
22 v. City of Los Angeles, 754 F.3d 1147, 1154 (9th Cir. 2014); but see La Asociacion de Trabajadores
23 de Lake Forest v. City of Lake Forest, 624 F.3d 1083, 1089 (9th Cir. 2010) (noting the plaintiff 24 “may not effectively amend its Complaint by raising a new theory of standing in its response to a 25 motion for summary judgment”); Wasco Prods., Inc. v. Southwall Techs., Inc., 435 F.3d 989, 992 26 (9th Cir. 2006) (“Simply put, summary judgment is not a procedural second chance to flesh out 27 inadequate pleadings.”).

28 Rule 15 advises that “leave shall be freely given when justice so requires.” Fed. R. Civ. P.
15(a). “Five factors are taken into account to assess the propriety of a motion for leave to amend: bad faith, undue delay, prejudice to the opposing party, futility of amendment, and whether the plaintiff has previously amended the complaint.” Johnson v. Buckley, 356 F.3d 1067, 1077 (9th Cir. 2004). Because Boff has not shown these factors favor amendment, the Court denies its request. The Court regardless concludes granting leave would be inappropriate, particularly because it would be prejudicial to Erhart. Discovery has long since closed and only trial remains in this action. See Howey v. United States, 481 F.2d 1187, 1190 (9th Cir. 1973) (“[T]he crucial factor is the resulting prejudice to the opposing party.”).

1 information. See Copart, 277 F. Supp. 3d at 1160 (summarily adjudicating portions 2 of claims based on CUTSA displacement but concluding the claims survived for trial 3 to the extent that they relied on other conduct).

4 Accordingly, to the extent that BofI’s tort claims seek to impose liability on 5 Erhart for taking information, the Court will restrict the Bank’s tort claims at trial to 6 only those allegations involving its customers’ and employees’ nonpublic personal 7 information. Thus, the Court grants in part Erhart’s request for partial summary 8 judgment on BofI’s claims for fraud, negligence, conversion, and breach of the duty 9 of loyalty. The Court will consider Erhart’s other challenges to these claims 10 separately below.

11 III. Negligence

12 BofI’s negligence claim alleges Erhart harmed the Bank when he 13 “misappropriated, destroyed, disclosed, and/or took BofI’s Confidential 14 Information.” (BofI’s FAC ¶¶ 68–71.) “The elements of a negligence cause of action 15 are the existence of a legal duty of care, breach of that duty, and proximate cause 16 resulting in injury.” Castellon v. U.S. Bancorp, 220 Cal. App. 4th 994, 998 (2013).
17 “The first element, duty, ‘may be imposed by law, be assumed by the defendant, or 18 exist by virtue of a special relationship.’” Doe v. U.S. Youth Soccer Ass’n, Inc., 8 19 Cal. App. 5th 1118, 1128 (2017) (quoting Potter v. Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., 6 20 Cal. 4th 965, 985 (1993)). Absent certain circumstances, “[e]veryone is responsible, 21 not only for the result of his or her willful acts, but also for an injury occasioned to 22 another by his or her want of ordinary care or skill in the management of his or her 23 property or person.” Cal. Civ. Code § 1714; see also Rowland v. Christian, 69 Cal.
24 2d 108, 112 (1968).

25 In the Court’s Rule 12(c) Order, it addressed Erhart’s argument that he did not 26 owe BofI—his former employer—a duty of care. The Court rejected this argument 27 and found BofI sufficiently pleads a negligence claim. (Rule 12(c) Order 9:1–9.)
28 Aside from challenging this claim on CUTSA displacement grounds, which the Court

1 finds persuasive in part for the reasons described above, Erhart argues BofI “cannot 2 prove” it was damaged by Erhart’s conduct. (Erhart’s Mot. 11:8–4.) In response, 3 BofI highlights several possible examples of harm, including the cost it incurred for 4 a digital risk management firm to analyze Erhart’s company-issued laptop and other 5 electronic media he returned during this litigation. (BofI’s Opp’n 14:27–15:5; see 6 also id. 6:21–7:6.)

7 “‘Damages’ are monetary compensation awarded to parties who suffer 8 detriment for the unlawful act or omission of another; they are assessed by a court 9 against wrongdoers for the commission of a legal wrong of a private nature.” Meister 10 v. Mensinger, 230 Cal. App. 4th 381, 396 (2014) (citing Cal. Civ. Code § 3281).
11 “Tort damages are awarded to compensate a plaintiff for all of the damages suffered 12 as a legal result of the defendant’s wrongful conduct.” N. Am. Chem. Co. v. Superior 13 Court, 59 Cal. App. 4th 764, 786 (1997) (citing Cal. Civ. Code § 3333). But 14 regardless of “its measure in a given case, it is fundamental that ‘damages which are 15 speculative, remote, imaginary, contingent, or merely possible cannot serve as a legal 16 basis for recovery.’” Piscitelli v. Friedenber, 87 Cal. App. 4th 953, 989 (2001) 17 (quoting Frustuck v. City of Fairfax, 212 Cal. App. 2d 345, 368 (1963)).

18 The Court concludes a negligence claim remains for trial. A reasonable jury 19 could conclude Erhart breached his duty of care to the Bank as an internal auditor by 20 mishandling customers’ and bank employees’ nonpublic personal information. A 21 jury could also find Erhart damaged the Bank. BofI’s reliance on the cost it paid for 22 an outside firm to investigate Erhart’s purported “data breach” is sufficient. Viewing 23 this evidence in the light most favorable to the Bank, these damages are not 24 “speculative, remote, [or] imaginary,” see Piscitelli, 87 Cal. App. 4th at 989, and a 25 jury could determine BofI is entitled to recover tort damages to compensate it for this 26 harm suffered due to Erhart’s assumedly wrongful conduct, see N. Am. Chem. Co., 27 59 Cal. App. 4th at 786. Thus, the Court denies Erhart’s request to summarily 28 adjudicate the remainder of BofI’s negligence claim.

1 IV. Breach of the Duty of Loyalty

2 The Bank argues Erhart breached his duty of loyalty by, among other things, 3 misappropriating and wrongfully distributing its confidential information to 4 unauthorized recipients. (Bofl’s FAC ¶¶ 61–67.) “The elements of a cause of action 5 for breach of a duty of loyalty, by analogy to a claim for breach of fiduciary duty, are 6 as follows: (1) the existence of a relationship giving rise to a duty of loyalty; (2) one 7 or more breaches of that duty; and (3) damage proximately caused by that breach.” 8 Huong Que, Inc. v. Luu, 150 Cal. App. 4th 400, 410 (2007). “During the term of 9 employment, an employer is entitled to its employees’ ‘undivided loyalty.’” Fowler 10 v. Varian Assocs., Inc., 196 Cal. App. 3d 34, 41 (1987) (quoting Sequoia Vacuum 11 Sys. v. Stransky, 229 Cal. App. 2d 281, 287 (1964)). “The duty of loyalty is breached, 12 and the breach ‘may give rise to a cause of action in the employer, when the employee 13 takes action which is inimical to the best interests of the employer.’” Id. at 414 14 (quoting Stokes v. Dole Nut Co., 41 Cal. App. 4th 285, 295 (1995)). Inimical means:
15 “1. Behaving like an enemy; hostile. 2. Opposite or adverse in effect or tendency.”
16 Inimical, Black’s Law Dictionary (10th ed. 2014).

17 Moreover, the California Court of Appeal has explained that “[t]he duty of 18 loyalty embraces several subsidiary obligations.” Huong, 150 Cal. App. 4th at 416.
19 These obligations include: (1) “the duty ‘to refrain from competing with the principal 20 and from taking action on behalf of or otherwise assisting the principal’s 21 competitors’”; (2) “the duty ‘not to acquire a material benefit from a third party in 22 connection with . . . actions taken . . . through the agent’s use of the agent’s position’”; 23 and (3) “the duty ‘not to use or communicate confidential information of the principal 24 for the agent’s own purposes or those of a third party.’” Id. at 416 (quoting 25 Restatement (Third) of Agency §§ 8.02, 8.04, 8.05(2)).

26 In the Court’s Rule 12(c) Order, it rejected Erhart’s argument that he did not 27 owe BoFl a duty of loyalty as a matter of law. Erhart’s argument was based on his 28 status as a purported “lower-level employee,” but the Court noted “California courts

1 generally have not distinguished between managerial employees and lower-level
2 employees with respect to the duty of loyalty.” (Rule 12(c) Order 7:3–7 (quoting 3 E.D.C. Techs., Inc. v. Seidel, 216 F. Supp. 3d 1012, 1016 (N.D. Cal. 2016)).) The 4 Court doubles-down on this conclusion. See Arriaga v. Lara, No. H046183, 2020
5 WL 995141, at *20 (Cal. Ct. App. Mar. 2, 2020) (“We do not agree with respondents’ 6 contention that lower-level employees are exempt from any duty of loyalty.
7 California law generally affords a broad scope to employees’ duty of loyalty.”).

8 BofI does not demonstrate a triable duty of loyalty claim based on the duty’s 9 first two “subsidiary obligations” identified by the California Court of Appeal in 10 Huong. See 150 Cal. App. 4th at 416. There is no evidence that Erhart competed 11 with the Bank or took action on behalf of BofI’s competitors. See id. Nor has the 12 Bank produced sufficient evidence that Erhart “acquired a material benefit from a 13 third party in connection with” actions Erhart took through the use of his position at 14 the Bank. See id.

15 That said, the Court finds there is a genuine issue of material fact concerning 16 whether Erhart violated the third subsidiary obligation: “the duty ‘not to use or 17 communicate confidential information of the principal for the agent’s own purposes 18 or those of a third party.’” See Huong, 150 Cal. App. 4th at 416 (quoting Restatement 19 (Third) of Agency § 8.05(2)). There is evidence suggesting Erhart used and disclosed 20 customers’ and employees’ nonpublic personal information.²⁸ This issue largely 21 overlaps with the Court’s discussion of Erhart’s whistleblower defenses in the 22 Affirmative Defenses Order. (See Affirmative Defenses Order 32:18–33:14.) A jury 23 could conclude Erhart violated his duty of loyalty; it also could conclude he engaged 24 in activity protected by whistleblower statutes and his extraneous conduct did not 25 breach his duty of loyalty to the Bank. (See id.) See Reporter’s Notes to Restatement 26 (Third) of Agency § 8.05(2) (noting that “in many whistleblowing cases the

27
28 ²⁸ For the reasons discussed above, the Court concludes CUTSA displaces BofI’s claim that Erhart violated his duty of loyalty by misusing the Bank’s confidential and proprietary business information.

1 dispositive question is whether an employee’s conduct is covered by a statute that 2 explicitly protects whistleblowing activity”). Because there are disputed issues of 3 fact concerning this issue, the Court denies Erhart’s request to summarily adjudicate 4 the remainder of BofI’s breach of the duty of loyalty claim.

5 V. Conversion

6 BofI claims Erhart is liable for conversion because he took personal possession 7 of BofI’s property, including “documents containing Confidential Information” and 8 a disc named “Bank of Internet,” without the Bank’s authorization. (BofI’s FAC ¶¶ 9 31–33, 55–56.) “Conversion is the wrongful exercise of dominion over the property 10 of another. The elements of a conversion claim are: (1) the plaintiff’s ownership or 11 right to possession of the property; (2) the defendant’s conversion by a wrongful act 12 or disposition of property rights; and (3) damages.” Lee v. Hanley, 61 Cal. 4th 1225, 13 1240 (2015).

14 The tort of conversion was traditionally limited to tangible personal property, 15 but the tort has since “expanded well beyond its original boundaries.” Welco Elecs., 16 Inc. v. Mora, 223 Cal. App. 4th 202, 210 (2014). “In determining whether property 17 that was taken is subject to a conversion claim, courts have recognized that 18 “[p]roperty is a broad concept that includes every intangible benefit and prerogative 19 susceptible of possession or disposition.” Id. at 211 (internal quotation marks 20 omitted) (quoting Kremen v. Cohen, 337 F.3d 1024, 1030 (9th Cir. 2003)); see also 21 Lepe, 140 Cal. App. 4th at 860 (reasoning one’s personal identifying information can 22 be “a valuable asset”). Therefore, courts have entertained cases for conversion of 23 various property including credit card information, bootlegged copies of musical 24 recordings, and a company’s net operating loss amounts. Id. at 210–14 (collecting 25 cases). Consequently, “the unauthorized taking of an intangible property interest not 26 merged with or reflected in tangible property can be an actionable conversion.” Id.
27 at 211. Furthermore, absolute ownership of the property is not required; the plaintiff 28 “need only allege it is entitled to immediate possession at the time of conversion.”

1 Farmers Ins. Exch. v. Zerlin, 53 Cal. App. 4th 445, 452 (1997) (emphasis omitted)
2 (quoting Bastanchury v. Times-Mirror Co., 68 Cal. App. 2d 217, 236 (1945)). A 3 conversion claim still, however, can be displaced by CUTSA for the reasons outlined 4 above. See, e.g., Silvaco, 184 Cal. App. 4th at 238–40.

5 Erhart claims Boff’s conversion claim should be summarily adjudicated 6 because he had authority to access the information Boff claims he took without 7 permission. (Erhart’s Mot. 12:6–13:19.) He also argues he returned any property 8 belonging to the Bank, including his work laptop. (Id.) The Bank counters that 9 evidence exists that Erhart did not have authority to take Boff’s property, and Boff
10 further argues that Erhart’s return of any property does not defeat the Bank’s 11 conversion claim—it simply affects the Bank’s damages. (Id.)

12 The Court has already determined that CUTSA displaces part of this claim for 13 the reasons discussed above. Hence, Boff’s claim that Erhart broadly converted its 14 confidential and proprietary information fails. The Bank’s claim that Erhart 15 converted nonpublic personal information of the Bank’s customers and employees 16 survives. Cf. Lepe, 140 Cal. App. 4th at 860; see also Welco, 223 Cal. App. 4th at 17 212–13 (noting private payment information can be subject to conversion (citing In 18 re Easysaver Rewards Litig., 737 F. Supp. 2d 1159 (S.D. Cal. 2010))). Similarly, the 19 Bank may maintain its claim that Erhart wrongfully took some of its personal 20 property, such as keys and an access card, which Boff claims created a security risk.
21 (See Boff’s Opp’n 11:15–18, 19 n.11 (citing Erhart Dep. 81:14–21).)

22 Further, the Bank is correct that Erhart returning the property during the 23 litigation may limit Boff’s damages, but this change does not mean Boff lacks a 24 triable conversion claim. See Krusi v. Bear, Stearns & Co., 144 Cal. App. 3d 664, 25 673 (1983) (“[A]lthough good faith and mistake are not defenses to an action for 26 conversion, the plaintiff’s damages will be reduced if the defendant returns the 27 property or the plaintiff otherwise recovers the property.”); see also Haines v. Parra, 28 193 Cal. App. 3d 1553, 1559 (1987) (providing the plaintiff “may be able to

1 demonstrate that he did properly expend some time and money in pursuit of the 2 converted property for which he is entitled to a fair compensation”). Erhart may also 3 argue to the jury that some or all of the property at issue was worthless and therefore 4 cannot be the subject of a conversion claim. See Angelica, 220 Cal. App. 4th at 510; 5 U.S. Rubber Co. v. Union Bank & Tr. Co., 194 Cal. App. 2d 703, 708–09 (1961).
6 These parts of BofI’s conversion claim involve disputed issues of fact.

7 Because there are disputed issues of fact concerning BofI’s conversion claim, 8 the Court denies Erhart’s request to dispose of this claim in its entirety.

9 VI. Fraud

10 BofI’s fraud claim is predicated on Erhart purportedly conducting rogue 11 investigations at the Bank. (BofI’s FAC ¶¶ 72–79.) Under California law, the 12 elements of a cause of action for fraud are: “(1) misrepresentation (false 13 representation, concealment, or nondisclosure), (2) knowledge of falsity (or 14 ‘scienter’), (3) intent to defraud (i.e., to induce reliance), (4) justifiable reliance, and 15 (5) resulting damage.” Lazar v. Superior Court, 12 Cal. 4th 631, 632 (1996).
16 “[F]raudulent intent is an issue for the trier of fact to decide.” Beckwith v. Dahl., 205 17 Cal. App. 4th 1039, 1061 (2012). A fraud action “may arise from conduct that is 18 designed to mislead, and not only from verbal or written statements.” Tenet 19 Healthsystem Desert, Inc. v. Blue Cross of Cal., 245 Cal. App. 4th 821, 839 (2016).

20 Aside from arguing CUTSA displaces this claim, Erhart argues the claim fails 21 because BofI fails to demonstrate his investigations were “rogue.” Rather, he argues 22 his investigations were “within the scope of his duties as an internal auditor.”
23 (Erhart’s Mot. 8:1–9:5.) The Court has noted that BofI’s fraud claim “is not 24 compelling.” (Rule 12(c) Order 6:11–12.) The Court previously concluded, 25 however, that BofI pleads this claim with enough particularity to allow Erhart to 26 “defend against the charge.” (Id. 6:23–25 (citing Bly-Magee v. California, 236 F.3d 27 1014, 1019 (9th Cir. 2001)).) The Bank’s fraud claim remains feeble based on the 28

1 evidence. However, the Bank makes a sufficient showing to rebut Erhart’s Rule 56 2 challenge.

3 BofI policy requires that employees fully cooperate with internal auditors and 4 respond to their requests for information. (Tolla Decl. ¶ 4, ECF No. 155-32.) And 5 as highlighted above, the Bank produces evidence indicating Erhart may have lied to 6 other Bank employees to have them run due diligence reports to dig up dirt on other 7 employees, including a bank executive’s son, and to conduct other improper 8 investigations. (See Tolla Rule 30(b)(6) Dep. 50:13–51:4, ECF No. 155-11; Ball 9 Dep. 329:8–14, ECF No. 155-6.) These reports contained customer information that 10 were subject to a “need-to-know policy.” (Ball Dep. 329:12–14, ECF No. 155-6; 11 Tolla Rule 30(b)(6) Dep. 50:15–51.) There is an issue of fact as to what exactly 12 transpired. (See Austin-Rios Dep. 70:13–71:5 (testifying she does not recall Erhart 13 asking her to run such a report).) But the Court must view the evidence in the light 14 most favorable to BofI. See Matsushita, 475 U.S. at 587. In doing so, there are 15 triable issues concerning whether Erhart engaged in some conduct that survives 16 CUTSA displacement and supports a fraud claim.

17 In addition, the Court construes Erhart’s argument that he was authorized to 18 conduct investigations as a challenge to the first three elements of BofI’s claim—that 19 is, whether Erhart’s requests were (1) misrepresentations that (2) were made with 20 scienter and (3) the intent to defraud. See Lazar, 12 Cal. 4th at 632. (See Erhart’s 21 Mot. 8:14–9.) There are genuine issues for trial on all of these issues. A jury could 22 conclude Erhart did not exceed his authority in seeking to uncover wrongdoing as 23 part of his purported whistleblowing activities or that this conduct was privileged.
24 (See Affirmative Defenses Order 32:18–33:14.) But a jury could also conclude 25 Erhart’s conduct was outside the scope of his duties; he knew it was; and he intended 26 to defraud the Bank’s other employees as part of a personal vendetta to “bring down 27 the Bank.” See Beckwith, 205 Cal. App. 4th at 1061 (“[F]raudulent intent is an issue 28 for the trier of fact to decide.”); see also Yellow Creek Logging Corp. v. Dare, 216

1 Cal. App. 2d 50, 58 (1963) (providing an intent to defraud requires only “an intent to 2 induce action,” not necessarily “an intent to deceive”).

3 Overall, there are genuine issues for trial on Boff’s fraud claim. The Court 4 therefore denies Erhart’s request to summarily adjudicate this claim in its entirety.

5 VII. Unfair Competition

6 Erhart’s motion also targets Boff’s claim under California’s Unfair
7 Competition Law (“UCL”), Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200. (Erhart’s Mot. 16:1– 8 17:25.) The UCL prohibits “unfair competition,” which includes “any unlawful, 9 unfair or fraudulent business act or practice.” Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200. “The 10 UCL’s purpose is to protect both consumers and competitors by promoting fair 11 competition in commercial markets for goods and services.” Kasky v. Nike, Inc., 27 12 Cal. 4th 939, 949 (2002). The Bank alleges Erhart violated the UCL by “conducting 13 rogue investigations” and wrongfully “emailing, taking, removing, refusing to return, 14 deleting, and disclosing Boff’s Confidential Information.” (Boff’s FAC ¶ 98.)

15 At oral argument, the Court expressed skepticism about the viability of this 16 claim. (ECF No. 179.) It reasoned Boff is “trying to fit a square peg into a round 17 hole” because Erhart does not appear to have engaged in any relevant “business 18 practices.” (ECF No. 179.) In response, the Bank said it “would be willing to drop 19 [this] claim.” (Id.) The Court thus finds the UCL is inapplicable and grants summary 20 judgment in favor of Erhart on this claim.

21 VIII. Breach of Contract

22 As noted, Boff brings a breach of contract claim based on the Confidentiality 23 Agreement Erhart executed as a condition of his employment. (Boff’s FAC ¶¶ 47– 24 53.) Boff claims Erhart breached the Confidentiality Agreement by misappropriating 25 and disclosing “Confidential Information” within the meaning of the agreement. (Id.
26 ¶ 51.)

27 It is undisputed that California law governs this agreement. (See 28 Confidentiality Agreement § 12, Boff’s Opp’n Ex. T, ECF No. 155-21.) To prevail

1 on a claim for breach of contract, “the plaintiff must prove (1) the contract, (2) the 2 plaintiff’s performance of the contract or excuse for nonperformance, (3) the 3 defendant’s breach, and (4) the resulting damage to the plaintiff.” Richman v.
4 Hartley, 224 Cal. App. 4th 1182, 1186 (2014).

5 Erhart initially challenges Boff’s claim on two related fronts. He argues the 6 Confidentiality Agreement is contrary to public policy and void. (Erhart’s Mot.
7 13:22–16:7.) He also argues it is overbroad and includes shocking terms and 8 therefore the agreement is void. (Id. 16:8–19:11.) These issues are subsumed within 9 the Court’s discussion of this claim in its Affirmative Defenses Order, and the Court 10 incorporates its analysis here. Just as the Court concluded factual issues preclude 11 Boff’s request for summary adjudication of Erhart’s whistleblower-related defenses, 12 the Court finds factual issues prevent it from granting summary judgment on Boff’s 13 claim. (See Affirmative Defenses Order 11:20–34:4.) The Court cannot conclude as 14 a matter of law that all of Erhart’s conduct was protected by the whistleblower 15 statutes he invokes. Hence, Erhart is not entitled to a determination that the 16 Confidentiality Agreement is completely unenforceable in light of public policy. The 17 Court is similarly unpersuaded that the Confidentiality Agreement is void because it 18 is overbroad.

19 Erhart next argues this claim fails because there was no material breach of the 20 Confidentiality Agreement. (Erhart’s Mot. 19:12–21:11.) Whether there was 21 a breach of contract is generally a question of fact. Ash v. N. Am. Title Co., 223 Cal.
22 App. 4th 1258, 1268 (2014); see also Bos. LLC v. Juarez, 245 Cal. App. 4th 75, 87 23 (2016) (“‘Normally the question of whether a breach of an obligation is a material 24 breach . . . is a question of fact,’ however ‘if reasonable minds cannot differ on the 25 issue of materiality, the issue may be resolved as a matter of law.’” 26 (quoting Brown v. Grimes, 192 Cal. App. 4th 265, 277–78 (2011))). Erhart argues 27 “the clear weight of the evidence demonstrates” that his purported “breach was not 28 material.” (Erhart’s Mot. 20:14–15.) However, he must demonstrate no reasonable

1 factfinder could conclude he materially breached the Confidentiality Agreement. See 2 Bos. LLC, 245 Cal. App. 4th at 87. Erhart does not do so. The Court again
3 incorporates its analysis of BofI’s claim in the context of Erhart’s affirmative 4 defenses, including as to Erhart’s conduct that did not involve communications to the 5 Government. (See Affirmative Defenses Order 11:20–34:4.) A jury will have to 6 decide whether Erhart materially breached the Confidentiality Agreement.

7 Finally, Erhart argues this claim fails because BofI suffered no damages.
8 (Erhart’s Mot. 21:12–22.) Erhart claims he “did not do anything with the information 9 that damaged BofI in any way; rather [he] used this information for his 10 whistleblowing activities and for his own protection.” (Id. 21:17–20 (citing Erhart 11 Dep. 60:21–24; 63:10–23; 66:20–22).) The Court is unconvinced. Genuine issues 12 of fact permeate this element of BofI’s breach of contract claim. The Bank has 13 produced sufficient evidence for a factfinder to conclude it suffered at least some 14 recoverable damages on this claim.

15 In sum, because there are genuine issues of material fact regarding BofI’s 16 claim for breach of the Confidentiality Agreement, the Court denies Erhart’s request 17 for summary judgment on this cause of action.

18 IX. California Penal Code Section 502

19 BofI alleges Erhart violated California Penal Code section 502 by “damaging, 20 deleting, [and] destroying” BofI’s data on his company-issued laptop and BofI’s 21 computer network. (BofI’s FAC ¶¶ 80–88.) Among other things, section 502 22 imposes criminal liability on a person who “[k]nowingly accesses and without 23 permission adds, alters, damages, deletes, or destroys any data, computer software, 24 or computer programs which reside or exist internal or external to a computer, 25 computer system, or computer network.” Cal. Penal Code § 502(c)(4). The statute 26 also grants a private right of action for compensatory damages and other relief to “the 27 owner . . . of the computer . . . or data who suffers damage or loss by reason of a 28 violation.” Id. § 502(b)(8).

1 Section 502 punishes a person who “[k]nowingly accesses” a computer system 2 for specified unauthorized uses. See Cal. Penal Code § 502(c)(1)–(3), (4), (11). The 3 statute defines “access” as meaning “to gain entry to, instruct, cause input to, . . . or 4 communicate with, the . . . memory function resources of a computer, computer 5 system, or computer network.” Id. § 502(b)(1). Therefore, section 502(c) “does not 6 require unauthorized access. It merely requires knowing access.” United States v.
7 Christensen, 828 F.3d 763, 789 (9th Cir. 2015). And “[a] plain reading of the statute 8 demonstrates that its focus is on unauthorized taking[, deletion,] or use of 9 information,” as opposed to unauthorized access to the computer system. See id.; see 10 also Cal. Penal Code § 502(c)(4).

11 Erhart moves for summary judgment on BofI’s section 502 claim, arguing he 12 had permission to access the information at issue on BofI’s computer systems and 13 his conduct was within the scope of his employment as an internal auditor. (Erhart’s 14 Mot. 21:23–22:20.) Section 502 exempts conduct occurring during the course and 15 scope of employment:

16 [Section 502(c)] does not apply to punish any acts which are committed 17 by a person within the scope of his or her lawful employment. For 18 purposes of this section, a person acts within the scope of his or her 19 employment when he or she performs acts which are reasonably necessary to the performance of his or her work assignment.

20 Cal. Penal Code § 502(h); but see Chrisman v. City of Los Angeles, 155 Cal. App.
21 4th 29, 37 (2007) (providing that a police officer who logged in to a police database 22 to satisfy personal curiosity about celebrities was acting within the scope of his 23 employment); see also Christensen, 828 F.3d at 789 n.8 (discussing section 502(h)).

24 BofI counters that “there is substantial evidence that Erhart, without 25 authorization,” accessed, took, and deleted the Bank’s confidential information all in 26 violation of section 502. (BofI’s Opp’n 21:25–22:23.) The Court agrees that there 27 are triable issues for this claim. Erhart can argue to a jury that his conduct was within 28 the scope of his employment as an internal auditor, but the Court cannot reach this

1 conclusion as a matter of law. After Erhart went out on sick leave, the Bank notified 2 him that it had suspended his remote access to its network and requested that he return 3 his company-issued laptop “as soon as possible.” (Boff’s Opp’n Ex. V, ECF No.
4 154-4.) A forensic analysis of Erhart’s company-issued laptop notes he later deleted
5 3,100 “files and folders” on or around March 11 and 12, 2015—several days before 6 it was returned to the Bank. (Boff’s Opp’n Ex. X, ECF No. 155-25.) Erhart testified 7 that he wanted “to make it more difficult to – for the bank to identify [his] 8 investigations.” (Erhart Dep. 116:14–24; 164:22–25, ECF No. 155-2.) A jury could 9 conclude this conduct did not fall within the course and scope of his employment and 10 that Erhart violated section 502.

11 Erhart also argues summary judgment on this claim is appropriate because 12 “Erhart gave back all documents that were allegedly unlawfully taken from Boff,” 13 and the Bank has therefore “suffered no damages.” (Erhart’s Mot. 22:22–24.) Again, 14 the Court finds there is a triable issue on this point. Boff demonstrates that it 15 expended time and money to investigate Erhart’s purportedly wrongful conduct 16 under section 502, which is sufficient to withstand summary judgment. See Cal.
17 Penal Code § 502(e)(1) (“Compensatory damages shall include any expenditure 18 reasonably and necessarily incurred by the owner . . . to verify that . . . data was or 19 was not altered, damaged, or deleted by the access.”); see also Copart, 277 F. Supp.
20 3d at 1162 (denying summary judgment where company submitted evidence 21 indicating it had spent over eighty hours investigating the defendants’ unauthorized 22 access to its computer systems); Mintz v. Mark Bartelstein & Assocs. Inc., 906 F.
23 Supp. 2d 1017, 1032 (C.D. Cal. 2012) (concluding the plaintiff had experienced 24 sufficient damage to support a claim under section 502 where the plaintiff “spent 25 some time restoring his Gmail password and investigating who had hacked the Gmail 26 account”).

1 There are genuine issues for trial regarding Boff’s claim under California Penal 2 Code section 502. Consequently, the Court denies Erhart’s request for summary 3 judgment on this cause of action.

4 X. Computer Fraud and Abuse Act

5 Boff’s lone federal claim pleads a violation of the Computer Fraud and Abuse 6 Act (“CFAA”), 18 U.S.C. § 1030. The Bank alleges Erhart violated the CFAA by 7 “knowingly delet[ing] large amounts of data from” and causing damage to his 8 company-issued laptop—a protected computer. (Boff’s FAC ¶¶ 89–95.) “The 9 CFAA prohibits acts of computer trespass by those who are not authorized users or 10 who exceed authorized use.” Facebook, Inc. v. Power Ventures, Inc., 844 F.3d 1058, 11 1065 (9th Cir. 2016). One type of forbidden computer trespass occurs when an 12 individual “intentionally accesses a protected computer without authorization, and as 13 a result of such conduct, causes damage and loss.” 18 U.S.C. § 1030(a)(5)(C). The 14 term “protected computer” includes a computer that is “exclusively for the use of a 15 financial institution.” Id. § 1030(e)(2)(A). A “financial institution” includes an 16 institution “with deposits insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.” Id.
17 § 1030(e)(4)(A).

18 In addition, the CFAA provides a private right of action for a “person who 19 suffers damage or loss by reason of a violation of [the statute] . . . against the violator 20 to obtain compensatory damages and injunctive relief or other equitable relief,” but 21 “only if the conduct involves 1 of the factors set forth” elsewhere in the CFAA. 18 22 U.S.C. § 1030(g). Of the five possible factors, the one relevant for Boff’s claim is 23 that the offense caused “loss to 1 or more persons during any 1-year period . . .
24 aggregating at least $5,000 in value.” See id. § 1030(c)(4)(A)(i)(I). (See Boff’s FAC 25 ¶ 95 (alleging Boff “has sustained, and will continue to sustain, loss and damages 26 according to proof, but in excess of $5,000” due to Erhart’s alleged CFAA 27 violation).)

28

1 The CFAA defines “loss” as “any reasonable cost to any victim, including the 2 cost of responding to an offense, conducting a damage assessment, and restoring the 3 data, program, system, or information to its condition prior to the offense, and any 4 revenue lost, cost incurred, or other consequential damages incurred because of 5 interruption of service.” 18 U.S.C. § 1030(e)(11). Hence, “the CFAA is ‘an anti-6 hacking statute,’ not ‘an expansive misappropriation statute.’” Andrews v. Sirius XM
7 Radio Inc., 932 F.3d 1253, 1263 (9th Cir. 2019) (quoting United States v. Nosal, 676 8 F.3d 854, 857 (9th Cir. 2012) (en banc)). “The statute’s ‘loss’ definition—with its 9 references to damage assessments, data restoration, and interruption of service—10 clearly limits its focus to harms caused by computer intrusions, not general injuries 11 unrelated to the hacking itself.” Id.

12 Erhart moves for summary judgment on this claim, arguing he had the 13 authority to access the company-issued laptop at issue to perform his job duties.²⁹
14 (Erhart’s Mot. 23:12–16.) As the Court noted in its Rule 12(c) Order, the Ninth 15 Circuit has explained that “an employer gives an employee ‘authorization’ to access 16 a company computer when the employer gives the employee permission to use it.”
17 LVRC Holdings LLC v. Brekka, 581 F.3d 1127, 1133 (9th Cir. 2009). On the other 18 hand, “a person uses a computer ‘without authorization’ under [the CFAA] . . . when 19 the employer has rescinded permission to access the computer and the defendant uses 20 the computer anyway.” Id. at 1135; see also United States v. Nosal, 844 F.3d 1024, 21 1029 (9th Cir. 2016). There is a triable issue for this element of BofI’s CFAA claim.
22 As mentioned, although Erhart initially had authorization to use his BofI laptop, the 23 Bank informed Erhart via his medical leave letter that his remote network access was 24 suspended and he was required to return his laptop as soon as possible. (BofI’s Opp’n

26 ²⁹ Erhart does not challenge BofI’s claim that the company laptop was a “protected 27 computer” under the CFAA. (See Erhart’s Mot. 23:1–21.) BofI claims the laptop was a protected 28 computer because it “was provided to Erhart exclusively for his use as a Staff Internal Auditor at BofI, a financial institution with deposits insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, and it was used in, or affected, interstate and foreign commerce.” (BofI’s FAC ¶ 93.) See 18 U.S.C.
§ 1030(e)(2)(A), (e)(4)(A).

1 Ex. V.) A jury could conclude that BofI had thus “rescinded permission to access
2 the computer,” making Erhart’s future use unauthorized. See LVRC Holdings, 581 3 F.3d at 1135. Erhart also testified that he did not have permission from BofI to delete 4 information from the protected computer. (See Erhart Dep. 117:8–12, ECF No. 155-5 2.)

6 Erhart also contends BofI’s CFAA claim fails because the Bank cannot 7 establish it suffered damages. Erhart argues that although he “did delete files from 8 the computer, BofI retained originals of the files, therefore suffering no damages 9 from [his] conduct.” (Erhart’s Mot. 23:18–20.) There is similarly a genuine issue 10 for trial on this point. BofI submits that due to Erhart’s conduct, it had to retain a 11 computer forensic firm to “analyze Erhart’s laptop to determine the extent of the 12 injury to BofI, and to mitigate that injury.” (BofI’s Opp’n 24:11–16 (citing Ex. X).) 13 As the Court mentioned, “loss” under the CFAA includes “any reasonable cost to any 14 victim, including the cost of responding to an offense [and] conducting a damage 15 assessment.” See 18 U.S.C. § 1030(e)(11). BofI has produced sufficient evidence 16 for a jury to conclude it suffered loss, including a loss “aggregating at least $5,000 in 17 value.” See id. § 1030(c)(4)(A)(i)(I).

18 Because BofI demonstrates there are genuine issues for trial regarding its 19 CFAA claim, the Court denies Erhart’s motion for summary judgment on this claim.

20 CONCLUSION

21 In light of the foregoing, the Court GRANTS IN PART and DENIES IN 22 PART BofI’s motion for summary judgment (ECF No. 127). The Court grants in 23 part the Bank’s request for summary judgment on Erhart’s Sarbanes–Oxley claim.
24 The Court agrees that Erhart failed to exhaust his allegation concerning the 2nd 25 Category – Altered Financial Statements. The Court otherwise denies the Bank’s 26 request to determine Erhart failed to exhaust five other categories of conduct 27 underpinning his claim.

28

1 Further, the Court summarily adjudicates the protected activity element of 2 Erhart's Sarbanes-Oxley claim for various categories of believed misconduct. These 3 categories are the following:

- 4 3rd Category: Untimely 401(k) Payments
- 5 4th Category: Improper Strategic Plan Approval
- 6 7th Category: Undisclosed Customer Accounts
- 7 8th Category: Undisclosed Subpoenas
- 8 10th Category: Miscalculated ALLL
- 9 11th Category: Incomplete FDPA Audit
- 10 12th Category: Sanitized Global Cash Card Review
- 11 13th Category: Improprieties in CEO's Account
- 12 14th Category: Improprieties in CEO's Brother's Account

13 The Court denies Boff's request for summary judgment on this element concerning 14 the 6th Category – Misleading Response to SEC Subpoena and the 9th Category – 15 Unauthorized Risky Loans. Finally, the Court denies Boff's request to summarily 16 adjudicate the knowledge element of Erhart's Sarbanes-Oxley claim.

17 As for Erhart's Dodd-Frank claim, the Court summarily adjudicates this 18 claim's protected activity element as to those categories of beliefs the Court 19 eliminated for Erhart's Sarbanes-Oxley claim on protected activity grounds. The 20 Court otherwise denies Boff's request for summary judgment on this claim.

21 Turning to Erhart's California Labor Code section 1102.5 claim, the Court 22 grants in part Boff's request to eliminate the protected activity element of this claim.
23 The Court concludes Erhart fails to demonstrate a triable issue regarding the 24 following categories of believed misconduct: 2nd Category – Altered Financial 25 Statements; 4th Category – Improper Strategic Plan Approval; 5th Category – High 26 Deposit Risk Concentration; and 10th Category – Miscalculated ALLL. The Court 27 denies, however, Boff's request for summary judgment with respect to the 7th 28 Category – Undisclosed Customer Accounts, 8th Category – Undisclosed Subpoenas, and 12th Category – Sanitized Global Cash Card Review.

1 In addition, the Court summarily adjudicates Erhart's wrongful termination
2 claim under state law to the same extent the Court has summarily adjudicated Erhart's
3 other claims on protected activity grounds. The Court otherwise denies Boff's 4 request for summary judgment on this claim.

5 The Court also GRANTS IN PART and DENIES IN PART Erhart's motion 6 for summary judgment (ECF No. 137). The Court grants in part Erhart's request to 7 summarily adjudicate Boff's fraud, negligence, conversion, and breach of the duty of 8 loyalty claims in light of CUTSA displacement. The Court otherwise denies Erhart's 9 request to summarily adjudicate what remains of these claims because there are 10 genuine issues for trial. Further, the Court denies Erhart's request for summary 11 judgment on Boff's breach of contract, California Penal Code section 502, and CFAA 12 claims. There are disputed issues of fact concerning each of these claims. Finally, 13 the Court grants summary judgment on Boff's UCL claim in favor of Erhart.

14 Subject to the Order of the Chief Judge No. 18, In re Suspension of Jury Trials
15 and Other Proceedings During the Covid-19 Public Emergency (S.D. Cal. Mar. 17, 16 2020), the Court orders the parties to contact the Magistrate Judge's chambers to reset 17 their mandatory settlement conference. Upon conclusion of this conference, the 18 parties shall coordinate with the Magistrate Judge to set new dates for a pretrial 19 conference and trial.
