

Tracking Changes in Program Implementation: Findings from Multiple Rounds of the Reemployment Services and Eligibility Assessment (RESEA) Implementation Survey

Appendix: Detailed Wave 4 Survey Results

Zachary Epstein, Ashleigh Hawthorne, and Elizabeth Copson, Abt Associates

The 2018 Bipartisan Budget Act (Public Law 115-123) amended the Social Security Act to require states to adopt evidence-based strategies in their Reemployment Services and Eligibility Assessment (RESEA) programs. The U.S. Department of Labor (DOL) is funding a portfolio of work to support increased evaluation of RESEA, deepen states' evaluation capacities, and lay the groundwork for a culture of evidence-building. To that end, DOL is delivering ongoing and extensive technical assistance to support states to meet the evidence requirements, and it conducted an implementation study that described states' RESEA programs. The implementation study identified and described specific strategies states used to integrate and align with workforce partners, select claimants for RESEA, promote high attendance rates at RESEA meetings, provide customized reemployment services, strengthen program integrity, and build evidence on program impacts.

A 2022 implementation study report drew on data from three waves of a web-based survey of all state RESEA directors. Since completion of that report, the study team conducted a fourth survey wave. A separate brief summarized the results of that fourth wave.¹ This companion Appendix to the brief includes tabulations of results for each survey question in Wave 4. Tables include the number and percentage of states that selected each response option, in addition to the number of UI claimants selected for RESEA by those states. The number of claimants was calculated from RESEA program data reported for fiscal year 2022, plus Wyoming's 2023 state plan, as Wyoming did not operate a program in 2022.² Additional information about prior survey waves and related research on RESEA program implementation is available at <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/oasp/evaluation/completedstudies>.

Acknowledgements

The authors gratefully acknowledge the efforts of many individuals who assisted in the completion of this brief. Daniel Kuehn from the Urban Institute programmed and fielded the fourth wave of the RESEA Implementation State Survey. Colleen Bogucki and Caroline Roddey from Abt Associates analyzed the fourth wave of the RESEA Implementation State Survey.

The team also appreciates the efforts of states to complete four waves of a state survey that sought to understand and document their programmatic and evaluation-related experiences and statuses.
