In 2013, Lesotho made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government fully funded the Lesotho Child Grant Program and the OVC Scholarship Program, allocating $3.6 million and $2.9 million, respectively, in their 2013 and 2014 budgets. The Government also revived the District Child Protection Teams to decentralize efforts to address the worst forms of child labor in the informal sector and rural areas. However, children in Lesotho continue to engage in the worst forms of child labor in cattle herding and in child labor in domestic service. Lesotho law does not prohibit the use of children in illicit activities, and a gap between the compulsory education age and the minimum age for employment leaves children unprotected. A lack of government resources for enforcement and social programs also remains a major challenge to combat child labor in Lesotho.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Lesotho are engaged in the worst forms of child labor in cattle herding and in child labor in domestic service. Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Lesotho.

Lesotho has an HIV/AIDS rate of 23 per cent, the third-highest rate in the world.(7, 12) The prevalence of HIV/AIDS contributes to the approximately 364,000, or 34 percent of children in Lesotho who were orphaned as of 2011.(13) Children, mostly HIV/AIDS orphans driven by poverty, migrate to urban areas to engage in commercial sexual exploitation for survival.(7, 11, 14)

*No conscription or no standing military(21, 22)

Lesotho laws are not completely consistent with international standards regarding child labor. The labor code does not provide protection for children working in the informal sector, leaving children working in non-contractual labor such as herding and agriculture unprotected.(5) Lesotho’s CPWA does not extend protections against hazardous labor to children employed in domestic service, street vending, or agriculture.(16, 23) Lesotho also does not have a law that prohibits children from engaging in illicit activities.(24) In addition, although there are maximum penalties for violations of the CPWA, the Act does not set minimum penalties for employing underage children in night work, industrial undertakings, or hazardous work for first-time offenders.(16)

The Government of Lesotho does not have a law prohibiting the recruitment of children under age 18 for military service. However, the Lesotho Defense Force does have a policy prohibiting the recruitment of children under age 18.(25, 26)

Education is compulsory in Lesotho until the age of 13, but the minimum age for work is set at 15. This standard makes children at age 14 particularly vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, as they are not required to be in school but are not legally permitted to work.(2, 7, 15)
III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Labor law enforcement agencies in Lesotho took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms. However, research found no evidence that criminal law enforcement agencies took such actions.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, inspectors carried out 1,000 labor inspections, a decrease from 1,200 inspections in 2012.(1) The MOEL did not report child labor violations or issue citations during the reporting period. Funding for inspections was inadequate, and inspectors lacked adequate office facilities, transportation, fuel, and other necessities.(1, 5)

With support from the ILO, the MOEL held three workshops to train labor inspectors on how to identify child labor in the workplace during the reporting period.(1) However, the MOEL indicated that the training was not sufficient because it did not provide inspectors with skills on how to conduct inspections in the informal sector.(1)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2013, the National Police, Child and Gender Protection Unit (CGPU) employed 133 police officers. However, it did not identify or investigate cases involving the worst forms of child labor.(1) The CGPU police officers did not receive training on the worst forms of child labor.(1) The CGPU does not have guaranteed funding; rather, it receives funding from the general operation budget of the national police.(1) While the Government of Lesotho does not have a referral system for children identified during inspections, the CGPU reported that child victims are referred to appropriate NGO-supported social services(1, 5). The Government also provides free medical services at government-run hospitals and clinics to victims of child labor.(1) Statistics were not available on the number of prosecutions relating to the worst forms of child labor. The Children’s Court did not hear any child labor cases and there were no child labor-related convictions during the reporting period.(1)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2013, the National Task Team (NTT) held a workshop on the implementation of the National Action Plan for the Elimination of Child Labor (APEC). However, the NTT did not fully serve its function as a coordinating agency to eliminate child labor in Lesotho. The MSC has met three times since November 2013. During the reporting period, the Government revived the District Child Protection Teams (DCPT), decentralizing its efforts to address the worst forms of child labor in order to reach the informal sector and rural areas more effectively.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Lesotho has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

</tr>
<tr>
<td>ILO-Decent Work Country Program (2012–2017)</td>
<td>Includes a child labor component to establish a child labor unit within the labor inspectorate in order to address child labor in the informal sector and to conduct a national child labor survey. Other objectives include employment creation, social protection coverage for citizens, and social dialogue among the tripartite partners.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

* The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.
† Policy was launched during the reporting period.

The Government has drafted an APEC. Although APEC has not yet been adopted, in 2013, the Government assigned APEC activities to agencies responsible for its implementation; developed a timeline for implementation; and came up with activities to be carried out. Under APEC the Government, with assistance from the ILO, developed guidelines on herding and a definition of child labor in the herding sector. The guidelines prohibit night work for herders under age 13 and require that herd boys be monitored, clothed, fed, and remunerated. The guidelines also provide protection for children working in agriculture in ploughing, harvesting, and the application of pesticides. However, the guidelines’ protections for herding and ploughing only apply to children under age 15, and children ages 13-15 are permitted to plough and herd animals under adult supervision. In addition, the guidelines permit children ages 13 and older to apply pesticides. In January 2014, the Government presented the draft National Anti-Trafficking Plan to the MSC for review. The plan is pending review and adoption. Lesotho’s UN Development Assistance Plan was also launched during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Lesotho funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

</tbody>
</table>

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.
† Program is funded by the Government of Lesotho.

Although the Government of Lesotho provided full funding for the Child Grant and OVC programs, research found no evidence that it carried out programs during the reporting period to assist children engaged in domestic service, commercial sexual exploitation, livestock herding, and street work. (1)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR
