On Your Computer

All three of the U.S. Department of Labor's (USDOL) flagship reports on international child labor and forced labor are available on our website in HTML and PDF formats at dol.gov/ChildLaborReports. These reports include Findings on the Worst Forms of Child Labor, as required by the Trade and Development Act of 2000; List of Goods Produced by Child Labor or Forced Labor, as required by the Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act of 2005; and List of Products Produced by Forced or Indentured Child Labor, as required by Executive Order 13126. On our website, you can navigate to individual country pages where you can find information on the prevalence and sectoral distribution of the worst forms of child labor; specific goods produced by child labor or forced labor; efforts each country has made to implement their commitments to eliminate the worst forms of child labor in the areas of laws and regulations, institutional mechanisms for enforcement and coordination, and government policies and social programs; and specific suggestions for government actions to address the issue of child labor.

You can also access USDOL's Comply Chain: Business Tools for Labor Compliance in Global Supply Chains online at dol.gov/ComplyChain. Comply Chain is a practical guide for companies to develop strong social compliance systems to reduce child labor and forced labor in supply chains. Companies can explore modules including stakeholder engagement, code of conduct provisions, auditing, remediation, reporting, and engagement, among others.

Finally, you can access USDOL's Better Trade Tool on our website at dol.gov/BetterTradeTool. This tool's dynamic dashboards and custom queries allow users to view and analyze U.S. and global trade data for use in identifying potential child labor and forced labor risks in global supply chains.

On Your Phone

The Department of Labor's Sweat & Toil mobile application contains research from all three reports and helps you easily sort data by region, country, assessment level, good, and type of exploitation, all without the need for an internet connection. The app also includes information from USDOL's technical assistance projects around the world and data visualizations that allow users to view goods produced with exploitative labor by region and sector, the sectoral distribution of where children work by country, and labor inspectorate information by region. You can download the free app from Apple's App Store or the Google Play Store and access the data on our website at dol.gov/AppSweat&Toil.

Foreword

Ninety years ago, Frances Perkins served as Secretary of Labor and became the first woman appointed to the U.S. Cabinet. She fiercely advocated to end child labor and to institute other labor protections we now take for granted. Throughout her life and in her tenure as Secretary of Labor, she championed the role of unions and the need for social and legal protections—including a national minimum wage, unemployment insurance safety net, and social security. She also brought a global focus to the job, participating in International Labor Organization conferences as early as 1935.

The Biden-Harris Administration and the Department of Labor continue to build on Frances Perkins' enduring legacy to empower and support all workers, to end child labor and forced labor in the United States and across the world, and to uplift workers' rights internationally.

Unfortunately, around the globe workers are often denied the rights they deserve. The Department of Labor has identified a significant increase in child labor in the United States. We also have a responsibility to address labor abuses and take the lead on a global stage. To do so, we need a clear understanding of the conditions leading to harsh labor practices. Our annual Findings on the Worst Forms of Child Labor report includes an assessment of efforts to end child labor in more than 130 countries and territories and serves as a blueprint for action.

We must also center workers and workers' voices in efforts to overhaul the systems that profit off their exploitation. Through the Multilateral Partnership for Organizing, Worker Empowerment, and Rights initiative, or M-POWER, we can help empower workers to drive change and bring the rights of freedom of association and collective bargaining to the forefront. The U.S. government has already invested an unprecedented $130 million to secure these rights globally, and our partners—including five national governments, philanthropic institutions, civil society organizations, and academic entities—are helping bring these efforts to scale.

Workers need a voice in their workplace, their communities, and political systems so all workers, businesses and societies can thrive. Our Findings on the Worst Forms of Child Labor report provides critical data to help workers and worker advocates raise their voices effectively—thereby enriching their contributions and heightening their visibility.

Let's continue to be bold like Frances Perkins—by imagining a world without exploitative child labor and developing policies to empower labor activists and worker organizations to make that world real. Our collaborative efforts and collective action can uplift children's rights and ensure their time is spent learning in school and playing games at home, rather than toiling in fields and factories.

Statement

It is true both in the United States and around the world: ending child labor and forced labor is hard work. It requires more than just removing children and adults from exploitative work. This hard work also demands empowering workers to build and strengthen an environment of unionized workplaces, good benefits, and fair compensation to challenge labor exploitation and those who seek to profit and gain from it.

We must take a worker-centered approach to ending child labor and forced labor. First, and fundamentally, this requires standing up for workers' rights to organize and bargain collectively for family-sustaining wages and benefits. When workers raise their voices together to denounce exploitative and dangerous working conditions, they build collective power that can achieve lasting change that stands strong. We know, however, that many workers cannot do this safely, particularly those who toil in informal roles, at the start of global supply chains and far from view, or in countries that systematically repress these foundational rights, sometimes in concert with malevolent corporate actors.

In the U.S., a worker covered by a union contract earns 10% more on average than a peer with similar education, occupation, and experience in a nonunionized workplace in the same industry. Black workers represented by a union are paid 13% more than their nonunionized Black peers, and Hispanic workers represented by a union are paid nearly 19% more than their nonunionized Hispanic peers. (1) Outside the U.S., we also see positive effects for empowered workers. For example, collective bargaining agreements in the Honduran apparel sector have improved access to decent work, fair wages, and safe working conditions, reducing incentives to migrate. (2) And in Lesotho, unions and women's groups persuaded major brands to sign a binding agreement to combat gender-based violence and harassment in garment factories.

A unionized workplace, in short, is a more equitable workplace, and it's less likely to experience exploitative labor conditions, including child labor.

International Affairs

Second, we need worker-informed policies, aided by strong labor law enforcement, clear expectations for responsible business conduct and compliance, and economic consequences for governments that fail to enforce the law and comply with international standards. It is vital for governments to enforce transparency as a key business responsibility through legally binding instruments, including government agencies that promote market access for companies who play by global rules or have mandatory due diligence in place and in practice. Such action is essential for accountability and to clear the marketplace of actors who tolerate, or even endorse, abusive labor practices and denial of fundamental labor rights.

Third, we need adequate social protection systems to ensure that poverty and vulnerability do not lead inexorably to child or forced labor.

The U.S. government is a leader in these efforts. We have committed to taking action to end forced labor by 2030 and child labor by 2025 under Target 8.7 of the United Nations' Sustainable Development Goals. The Department of Labor has invested in the Alliance 8.7 Global Accelerator project, which supports countries in eradicating child labor and forced labor by replicating promising practices, strengthening partnerships, and spurring innovation. The project accelerates action to improve due diligence and transparency in supply chains, strengthen worker voice, and increase access to social protections.

We are steadfast in our support of the Durban Call to Action, which emerged from the Fifth Global Conference on the Elimination of Child Labor last year. We are working globally to eliminate child labor by promoting decent work, universal access to education and social protection, increased collaboration, and stronger laws and enforcement.

We are proud of our new M-POWER initiative—the Multilateral Partnership for Organizing, Worker Empowerment, and Rights. M-POWER is building a committed partnership of governments, worker organizations, and non-governmental organizations to take collective action to defend and uphold workers' rights globally, recognizing that freedom of association and collective bargaining are core elements of vibrant, resilient democracies. The M-POWER Action Plan includes four pillars: global issue campaigns supporting local action on worker priorities; country-level coordination to advance worker rights; urgent action to protect labor activists and organizations facing threats; and strategic communications to elevate worker voice and priorities. By advancing these goals, we create the conditions in which good jobs—not child or forced labor—can flourish.

The department's reports and tools provide the U.S. government and foreign governments a shared understanding of the problem: where it is and how to address it. We and other global actors are putting this research to work.

ILAB's List of Goods Produced by Child Labor or Forced Labor highlights 159 goods from 78 countries and areas vulnerable to child and forced labor. The latest version also details how some of these tainted goods enter into complex global supply chains and end up in commonly used products. This List is used by advocates, the private sector, NGOs, and governments to identify risks and where to focus remediation efforts.

Companies seeking to implement or improve due diligence also use Comply Chain, an online tool with a comprehensive set of best practices to address child and forced labor across global supply chains. This year we have enhanced Comply Chain to be more user-friendly and operational, including case studies and resources.

ILAB's Better Trade Tool matches information in our flagship reports to U.S. import trade data. Companies can see which imports have a higher risk of having been produced with child or forced labor, improving transparency and sourcing.

Our research and technical assistance impact enforcement as well. With our support, the ILO and Cornell University developed a forced labor detection handbook and hosted a workshop with South African labor, immigration, and fisheries officials. Later, authorities in South Africa detained a Taiwanese-flagged fishing vessel over suspected labor violations, the first detention action of this kind in five years.

We've also funded new projects to promote transparency and accountability in supply chains.

We awarded a new grant to the Fair Foods Standards Council to expand, for the first time internationally, the Fair Food Program model for promoting human rights and worker rights. The council will pilot the project in the cut flower sector of three countries—Chile, Mexico, and South Africa—as part of a feasibility study for further expansion of the model in other international agricultural supply chains. The model promotes transparency and accountability by empowering farmworkers to report on labor rights issues, holding participating growers responsible for addressing and taking steps to prevent labor rights infractions, and leveraging the influence of participating buyers to secure greater adherence to labor rights in global supply chains.

We also funded a new project with the International Labor Organization to increase worker voice and address forced labor, child labor, and other labor violations in cattle-raising areas of Brazil and Paraguay.

We recognize that no government, including our own, can do this alone. Whether you represent a company, a government, a union or civil society organization, or are a worker, we hope you look to us as a partner in the fight to end child labor and forced labor. We are strategically investing resources toward these efforts and call upon others to do the same. Together, we can support workers' rights to organize and bargain collectively, strengthen labor law enforcement, monitor and enforce labor provisions in trade policy, and secure adequate social protection systems in order to end child labor and forced labor.

Purpose of This Report

Research Focus of the Findings on the Worst Forms of Child Labor

USDOL prepared the 2022 Findings on the Worst Forms of Child Labor report in accordance with the Trade and Development Act of 2000 (TDA). (3) The TDA set forth the requirement that a country must implement its commitments to eliminate the worst forms of child labor for the President of the United States to designate the country a beneficiary developing country under the Generalized System of Preferences (GSP) program (subject to an exception if designation is in the national economic interest of the United States). (4) The TDA also mandated that the President submit to the United States Congress the Secretary of Labor’s findings with respect to each, “beneficiary country’s implementation of its international commitments to eliminate the worst forms of child labor.” (3) ILAB carries out this responsibility on behalf of the Secretary.

Country Coverage

This report covers 119 independent countries and 15 non-independent countries and territories designated as GSP beneficiaries. This includes former GSP recipients who have negotiated free trade agreements with the United States. (5) Because the population of children is extremely small (fewer than 50) or non-existent in the British Indian Ocean Territory, Heard Island and McDonald Islands, and the Pitcairn Islands, the report does not contain a discussion of these three non-independent countries and territories. The 2022 report presents information on child labor and the worst forms of child labor, and efforts to eliminate this exploitation in the remaining 119 countries and 12 non-independent countries and territories. The use of “countries” in this report includes territories, and because the report focuses on government efforts, non-independent countries and territories are classified by their associated regions.

Population Covered

In undertaking research on the “worst forms of child labor,” ILAB relies on the definition contained in International Labor Organization Convention No. 182 on the Worst Forms of Child Labor (ILO C. 182), which defines “child” as a person under age 18.

Reporting Period

The reporting period for this year’s report is January 2022 through December 2022. In certain cases, significant events or government efforts that occurred in early 2023 were included, as appropriate.

Type of Work

This report focuses on child labor and the worst forms of child labor. Definitions related to these types of work are primarily guided by International Labor Organization Convention No. 138 on Minimum Age (ILO C. 138) and ILO C. 182. Child labor includes work below the age of 15 (14 in developing economies where specified at the time of ratification of C. 138) or the higher minimum age as established in national legislation (excluding permissible light work) and the worst forms of child labor. The definition of “worst forms of child labor” is found in the TDA and is the same as that included in ILO C. 182. It includes (a) all forms of slavery or practices similar to slavery, such as the sale or trafficking of children, debt bondage and serfdom, or forced or compulsory labor, including forced or compulsory recruitment of children for use in armed conflict; (b) the use, procuring, or offering of a child for prostitution, for the production of pornography, or for pornographic performances; (c) the use, procuring, or offering of a child for illicit activities, in particular for the production and trafficking of drugs; and (d) work which, by its nature or the circumstances under which it is carried out, is likely to harm the health, safety, or morals of children. (3; 6) Similar to ILO C. 182, the TDA states that the work described in subparagraph (d) shall be determined by the laws, regulations, or competent authority of the beneficiary developing country involved.”

The Year in Review: A Just Transition to End Child Labor

The evidence that the Earth is warming at an unprecedented rate due to human activity is unquestionable. Although the Earth's climate has fluctuated over time, this current and ongoing period of warming is at the highest rate recorded in more than 10,000 years. (7) A drastically changing climate impacts all of us, especially vulnerable families, workers, and communities, as extreme weather events increase in frequency, sea levels rise, and oceans warm. Climate change leads to irreparable harm, from local fishing stocks disappearing as seas warm, to a need for families and even whole communities to abandon homes due to natural disasters driven by climate change. In fact, over half a billion children are living in areas with extremely high levels of floods and nearly 160 million children live in high drought severity areas. (8) Other global research demonstrates that climate change and environmental degradation are increasingly driving children to more and riskier work. (9)

In the face of these challenges, the world must rise to the occasion. We need a “just transition” to an economy that is more sustainable, inclusive, and equitable—one that is based on clean energy free from fossil fuels, which are directly linked to rising temperatures and climate change. A just transition means that no people, workers, sectors, or countries should be forgotten in the move from high carbon use to low carbon use economies. Our clean-energy future cannot be built on the backs of children and adults in exploitative labor conditions.

A just transition entails decent wages for workers, health and economic benefits for communities, respect for labor rights, and an end to child labor and forced labor. Involving workers and their organizations in key decisions is vital to ensuring that workers and communities benefit from the transition. Read more about the vital role of unions in global efforts to end child labor in Box 1.

Trade Unions' and Organized Labor's Vital Role in Fighting Child Labor

For over a century, workers have acted through unions to lead the fight to end child labor. At its first convention in 1881, the American Federation of Labor passed a resolution calling on states to set a minimum age for work. Sustained efforts on the part of organized labor helped President Franklin Delano Roosevelt, as part of the New Deal, advocate for policies that supported the rights and livelihoods of adult workers while promoting an end to the child labor that undercut those rights and livelihoods. It was during this time that Congress passed the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938, which set the minimum working age at 14 for employment outside of school hours and 16 during school hours. (10)

Today, the fight continues on a global scale, with 160 million children engaged in child labor worldwide. Winning this fight requires workers to have the right to organize and bargain collectively for family-sustaining wages, benefits, and social protection. It requires that workers have the voice and support to denounce exploitative and dangerous working conditions, and collectively advocate for better ones—so that families can find economic security and let their children be children, and so that no one's labor is forced from them.

Empirical research demonstrates the vital role unions play in combating child labor. The International Labor Organization (ILO), for example, has found that policy responses to child labor are most effective when coupled with policies to protect and enforce workers' freedom of association and collective bargaining rights. Exercising these rights allows workers to claim their share of the wealth they have helped create. Absent these rights, the reality becomes more children at work and more adults denied decent work.

Moreover, international research supported by ILAB demonstrates that collective bargaining is key to addressing root causes of labor abuse: "Through collective bargaining, workers—through their elected representatives—are better able to negotiate wages and working conditions, thereby reducing dependence on income earned by children. Strong, democratic trade unions and worker organizations lobby for the 'social wage,' including employment promotion, vocational training, and access to public education, all of which contribute to eradicating child labor." (11)

Every action that governments take to empower workers and trade unions has an exponential effect on combating child labor. With the sustained efforts of workers and organized labor, we can succeed in building stable families, vibrant communities, inclusive economies, and democratic societies free from labor abuse.

The U.S. Department of Labor's Bureau of International Labor Affairs (ILAB) produces essential resources—like this Findings on the Worst Forms of Child Labor report—to highlight the risks of child labor and forced labor in global supply chains that threaten to derail the world's transition to clean energy. ILAB also conducts broad, international research on child labor and forced labor and has undertaken targeted research in the clean energy sector, most recently in the solar and rechargeable lithium-ion battery supply chains. (12; 13; 14) In addition, ILAB funds technical assistance projects that work to prevent and eliminate child labor, while also addressing some of the effects of climate change, including our SafeYouth@Work project, which focused on occupational safety and health awareness, including the prevention of heat stress ailments faced by agricultural workers in Colombia; and the PREP4Change project, which is ongoing and looks to address chronic kidney disease, a malady closely associated with heat stress afflicting agricultural workers. (15; 16)

ILAB also works with the G7, which Ministers of Labor, Employment and Social Affairs recently adopted a communiqué on agreements, action, and joint steps toward a just transition and the creation of decent, high-quality work for a sustainable green economy. (17) In addition, ILAB promotes workers' rights in the Indo-Pacific region through the negotiation of commitments under the Trade, Supply Chain, Clean Economy, and Fair Economy Pillars of the Indo-Pacific Economic Framework for Prosperity. (18) And in early 2023, the U.S. and Japan signed a Memorandum of Understanding to launch a Task Force on the Promotion of Human Rights and International Labor Standards in Supply Chains, bringing ILAB together with U.S. government and Japanese government agencies in the global effort to tackle labor exploitation and help create and strengthen clean energy supply chains in the U.S. and Japan. (19) Read more about ILAB's work to address labor risks in clean energy supply chains in Box 2 and review general project information in Figures 3 and 4.

Addressing Child Labor and Forced Labor Risks in Global Energy Supply Chains

Paul never attended school. He was just 12 years old when he started working in an artisanal cobalt mine in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC). For years, Paul worked excessive hours underground and often without breaks or protective equipment. As the world transitions to renewable energy sources, demand for critical minerals like cobalt has soared. Unfortunately, these ores are often mined by children like Paul. His story is not unique. Thousands of children just like him, some as young as 4 years old, work in small-scale or "artisanal" mines around the world, excavating cobalt and other minerals. These children miss out on education and suffer from debilitating, sometimes life-long physical and mental health problems.

ILAB is taking significant steps to address these risks in mineral supply chains. Through our research, programming, and engagement, we can provide a more hopeful future for children like Paul. In fact, ILAB works closely with the governments of the DRC and other African countries, as well as with industry and civil society partners, to address child labor in clean energy supply chains. ILAB is promoting traceability, improving labor standards, and supporting local communities to reduce the risks of child and forced labor through projects like the Global Trace Protocol and Combatting Child Labor in the Democratic Republic of the Congo's Cobalt Industry. (20; 21) ILAB is also committed to helping countries formalize and legalize their artisanal and small-scale mining sectors, which will strengthen safety, environmental, and labor protections.

A just transition to a greener future is central to the Biden-Harris administration's strategy in Sub-Saharan Africa. The U.S.-African Leaders Summit, marking a watershed moment in the U.S.-Africa relationship, brought us one step closer to this goal. (22) The summit assembled American and African leaders in Washington to build on shared values, including addressing climate change and promoting sustainable development. At the conclusion of the summit, the United States signed a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) with the DRC and Zambia committing to support the joint development of an electric vehicle battery value chain within the two countries. (23)

We are in a singular position to signal to the world that clean energy supply chains can be free of child and forced labor. ILAB's work helps to ensure that minerals critical to this transition are produced in ways that enhance the dignity of all workers. The partnerships forged at the U.S.-African Leaders Summit demonstrate a commitment to achieving this goal. They offer children like Paul real hope for a brighter, cleaner future.

ILAB's Projects Addressing Child Labor and Forced Labor Around the World

ILAB supported 56 active projects & initiatives within 47 countries in 2022

EQUAL – Equal Access to Quality Jobs for Women and Girls in Mexico

In Mexico, women face many gender barriers to full inclusion in the labor market and access to decent work. There is limited government enforcement of laws on child labor, gender-based discrimination, and working conditions in agriculture, where many women and adolescent girls work. The EQUAL project is working to reduce the risk of child labor, forced labor, and other labor rights violations for women and adolescent girls (aged 15-17) working within the coffee and sugarcane sectors.

PAR – Multi-stakeholder Strategy for Child Labor Elimination in Agriculture in Argentina

Child labor in Argentina affects 9.4 percent of all children aged 5-15. Much of this occurs in agriculture. This project raises the visibility and understanding of child labor in agriculture. It contributes to improved tools and coordination among government, the private sector, and civil society to confront the problem, focusing on blueberry and yerba mate production.

CAPSA – Capacity Strengthening of Governments to Address Child Labor and/or Forced Labor, and Violations of Acceptable Conditions of Work in Sub-Saharan Africa

There are an estimated 79 million child laborers and 3.4 million forced laborers in sub-Saharan Africa. In Kenya, the CAPSA project is building government capacity to combat child labor and forced labor more effectively by helping them strengthen law enforcement, improve assistance for victims, and enhance coordination between law enforcement and social protection entities.

FAIR Fish – Fostering Accountability in Recruitment for Fishery Workers in Thailand

In the Asia-Pacific region, a large workforce of migrant workers catch, farm, and process most of the world's seafood. Many are recruited by third parties into exploitative jobs in illegal, unreported, and unregulated fishing. The FAIR Fish project works directly with seafood and fishing companies and their recruiters to improve responsible recruitment processes and address forced labor and human trafficking in recruitment.

The following pages provide an overview of global child labor in the year 2022 and detail the meaningful efforts that many countries made, as well as the enormous obstacles that remain before we can achieve a total abolition of child labor, especially in its worst forms. A world free of child labor is an ambitious goal—and a worthy one, without a doubt. Children deserve a world where they are free to develop into successful adults. To achieve that future, international cooperation is crucial. ILAB remains a leading voice on these efforts and part of the wider U.S. government commitment to put labor at the forefront of all our actions.

Overview of 2022 Assessments

This year, only 4 of 131 countries, down from 9 last year, achieved the highest assessment of Significant Advancement: Argentina, Colombia, Côte d'Ivoire, and Uzbekistan (see Figure 5 for a global breakdown of country assessments). These countries made meaningful efforts during the reporting period in all relevant areas—legal frameworks, enforcement, coordination, policies, and social programs. In some cases, these efforts included taking suggested actions recommended in our 2021 report. Each of the four countries met and/or exceeded the baseline of minimally acceptable protections needed to receive ILAB's highest assessment of Significant Advancement. All four countries achieving Significant Advancement this year received the same assessment last year. This is the second year in a row for both Côte d'Ivoire and Uzbekistan, the latter of which achieved its first ever Significant Advancement in 2021. Argentina, for its part, achieved its eighth consecutive assessment of Significant Advancement with this year's report. Moreover, this year's report represents the tenth Significant Advancement assessment for Colombia. Laudable as an assessment of Significant Advancement is, it represents a country's efforts only during the reporting period—from January 2022 to December 2022. Even countries that have achieved a Significant Advancement have more work to do, especially in the areas of labor and criminal law enforcement.

It is important to highlight that seven additional countries and territories would have received an assessment of Significant Advancement had they met the baseline level of protections. These countries are Brazil, Cabo Verde, Madagascar, Moldova, Nigeria, Thailand, and Uganda.

In total, 69 countries received an assessment of Moderate Advancement in 2022, a decline from 73 countries last year. These countries made meaningful efforts during the reporting period to eliminate the worst forms of child labor in some relevant areas affecting laws and regulations, enforcement, coordination, policies, and social programs. Unfortunately, 25 countries—an increase from 15 last year—received an assessment of Minimal Advancement for making efforts in only a few relevant areas.

Other countries also made efforts to address child labor during the year; yet because they simultaneously continued or established a detrimental law, policy, or practice that delayed advancement in eliminating the worst forms of child labor, the highest assessment level these countries could receive was Minimal Advancement. Twenty-one countries—Armenia; Azerbaijan; Bangladesh; Cambodia; the Central African Republic; the Democratic Republic of the Congo; the Dominican Republic; Gabon; Iraq; Kazakhstan; Kenya; the Kyrgyz Republic; Mali; Mauritania; Saint Helena, Ascension, and Tristan da Cunha; Somalia; Timor-Leste; Tonga; Ukraine; Yemen; and Zimbabwe—implemented or maintained a law, policy, or practice related to education, minimum age for work, labor inspection, impunity for perpetrators, criminal treatment of victims, or the recruitment and use of child soldiers that undermined their advancement. Three of these countries were new to this assessment level in 2022: Bangladesh, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, and the Dominican Republic. Three countries were also removed from this level: the Falkland Islands (Islas Malvinas), Montserrat, and Pakistan.

Five countries received an assessment of No Advancement because they made no effort to prevent the worst forms of child labor: Anguilla, the British Virgin Islands, the Falkland Islands (Islas Malvinas), Grenada, and Montserrat. Afghanistan also received a No Advancement during the reporting period due in part to the escalating humanitarian crisis following the Taliban takeover in 2021. The Taliban actively recruited and used children as part of their security forces and considered some child trafficking victims, especially those engaged in bacha bazi or armed conflict, as criminals, housing them in juvenile detention centers and subjecting them to torture and other forms of ill treatment rather than referring them to victim support services.

In addition, some countries could only receive an assessment of No Advancement because they had a policy or demonstrated a practice of being complicit in the use of forced child labor in more than isolated incidents. The list remains unchanged for 2 years now, since the 2020 report, and comprises Burma, Eritrea, and South Sudan. These countries were found to be complicit in the use of worst forms of child labor during the reporting period, Burma in forced labor for non-combat roles in conflict areas, Eritrea in public works projects, and South Sudan in forced recruitment for armed conflict. # Baseline of Minimally Acceptable Protections

In order for a country to be eligible to receive an assessment of Significant Advancement, a country must have:

LEGISLATION

- ✓ Established a minimum age for work that meets international standards;
- ✓ Established a minimum age for hazardous work that meets international standards;
- ✓ Established legal prohibitions against forced labor that meet international standards;
- ✓ Established legal prohibitions against child trafficking that meet international standards;
- ✓ Established legal prohibitions against commercial sexual exploitation of children that meet international standards;
- ✓ Established legal prohibitions against the use of children for illicit activities that meet international standards;

ENFORCEMENT

- ✓ Designated a competent authority or implemented institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor;
- ✓ Imposed penalties for violations related to the worst forms of child labor;
- ✓ Took active measures to ensure that children are not inappropriately incarcerated, penalized, or physically harmed for unlawful acts as a direct result of being a victim of the worst forms of child labor;
- ✓ Took active measures to investigate, prosecute, convict, and sentence public officials who participate in or facilitate the worst forms of child labor;
- ✓ Made a good-faith effort to collect and publish labor and criminal law enforcement data; and

SOCIAL PROGRAMS

- ✓ Directly funded a significant social program that includes the goal of eliminating child labor or addresses the root causes of the problem (e.g., lack of education opportunities, poverty, discrimination)

Ongoing Business Risks in South Sudan

The U.S. Department of Labor, with the U.S. Departments of State and Commerce, issued a Business Advisory on South Sudan to highlight the growing reputational, legal, and economic risks to U.S. businesses and individuals conducting or contemplating business in South Sudan, particularly with companies that have strong ties to South Sudan's extended transitional government. (24)

These risks stem from the government's August 2022 decision to extend the 4-year transitional government, which was mandated to conclude in February 2022, despite failing to address pervasive and endemic corruption in the public and private sectors of the economy. Leaders in the country allocate resources to fund and equip security forces and militias loyal to political elites who have been implicated in human rights violations, including in the forcible recruitment and use of children in armed conflict, which ranks among the worst forms of child labor. Reports also indicate that the government forcibly uses children in combat and in support roles as cooks, porters, and spies. These and other actions exacerbate reputational, economic, and legal risks for foreign businesses and individuals operating in South Sudan.

"The transitional government in South Sudan has shown an unwillingness to address the corruption and illegal activity in its ranks that have given rise to labor and human rights violations throughout the country," said Deputy Undersecretary for International Affairs, Thea Lee. This "business advisory reminds U.S. businesses that engaging with companies or individuals associated with a government complicit in human rights violations legitimizes these unethical practices," she also remarked.

The Department of Labor strongly encourages businesses and individuals with operations in South Sudan to avoid the reputational, legal, and economic risks of association with the South Sudanese transitional government and with companies that have significant ties to the transitional government.

For this year's report, only Christmas Island, Cocos (Keeling) Islands, and Wallis and Futuna received No Assessment. This assessment is reserved for countries or territories in which the population of children is either non-existent or extremely small, there is no evidence of the worst forms of child labor and the country appears to have an adequate preventative legal and enforcement framework on child labor, or a country is included in the report for the first time or receives a suggested action for the first time.

Overview of Meaningful Efforts

Despite the persistence of child labor and its worst forms, there are notable efforts worthy of recognition. These efforts offer insights into how various countries tackle child labor and demonstrate that together, and through collective action, the world can move forward in its goals to eliminate child labor.

Legal

In this year's reporting cycle, several countries undertook meaningful efforts to ratify key international commitments in support of fundamental principles and rights at work. For example, Mexico ratified the ILO Protocol of 2014 to the Forced Labor Convention 29. The Government of Panama ratified the ILO Labor Inspection (Agriculture) Convention 129, which is meant to strengthen the country's labor inspection capacity in agricultural sectors. Botswana acceded to the ILO Labor Inspection Convention 81 and the Labor Inspection (Agriculture) Convention 129, which together outline principles for development of strong labor inspection systems, including in the agricultural sector—the sector in which child labor occurs most commonly on a global scale. Chad's government also ratified the International countries do not have a minimum age for work that meets international standards

Of the 85 countries, 19 have laws that exclude certain groups of working children from minimum age protections. 3 countries also have no minimum age for work at all.

Convention on the Protection of Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families. Finally, on July 1, 2022, the ILO Violence and Harassment Convention 190 entered into force in Mauritius. This Convention provides a common framework for action and a unique opportunity to shape a future of work based on dignity and respect and reinforces the rights of everyone to a world free from violence and harassment.

Bhutan also ratified the Palermo Protocol; the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime; and the United Nations Protocol Against the Smuggling of Migrants by Land, Sea, and Air. In addition, Australia ratified the ILO Protocol of 2014 to the Forced Labor Convention 29, a fundamental Convention for the abolition of forced labor, including forced child labor, which extends to Australia's various external territories, namely Christmas Island, Cocos (Keeling) Islands, and Norfolk Island. Lastly, the Government of the Solomon Islands also ratified the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography and the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the Involvement of Children in Armed Conflict.

Other countries and territories took steps to provide children with protections against hazardous work. Bangladesh revised its list of hazardous work prohibited for children to include five additional sectors: dried fish manufacturing; informal street-based child labor; production, collection, and transportation of bricks; tailoring and informal production of garments; and waste management. Liberia also approved a new hazardous work list, which identified specific occupations and tasks prohibited for children, including sugarcane cleaning and harvesting, rubber tapping, palm cutting, bush clearing, and harvesting cocoa. Angola published a new list of hazardous work and established criteria for permissible work for children ages 16 and above, including the requirement to have a medical statement of good physical and mental health and an evaluation of the risks of that activity. These delineations of what constitutes hazardous work are essential to ensuring that children do not perform hazardous and dangerous tasks. Learn more about

What is Hazardous Child Labor?

ILO Recommendation 190<sup>1</sup> calls on governments to consider the following when determining work that is prohibited for children.

Work which exposes children to physical, psychological, or sexual abuse

Work underground, under water, at dangerous heights, or in confined spaces

Work with dangerous machinery, equipment and tools, or which involves the manual handling or transport of heavy loads

Work in an unhealthy environment which may, for example, expose children to hazardous substances, agents or processes, or to temperatures, noise levels, or vibrations damaging to their health

Work under particularly difficult conditions such as work for long hours or during the night or work where the child is unreasonably confined to the premises of the employer about the minimum age for work in Figure 7 and hazardous child labor in Figure 8.

Some countries also took steps to expand civil legal protections against child labor and ensure that laws comprehensively cover those at risk. For example, in Sri Lanka, the government amended its Children and Young Persons Ordinance to define individuals under 18 years old as children, compared to 16 years old previously, which brings this law into compliance with international standards. Mongolia's Ministry of Labor issued a decree that clarifies the list of light work activities permitted to children between the ages of 13 and 15. Chile increased prison sentences for perpetrators of child trafficking and the commercial sexual exploitation of children and passed a law to protect minors from economic exploitation. In Zambia, updates to the country's Trafficking in Persons Act brought the country's legal framework in line with international standards. Strong legal standards that are backed by robust enforcement are the bedrock that countries need to end child labor, including its worst forms.

Enforcement

New developments in laws coupled with meaningful enforcement help build a strong system of protection against child labor, especially its worst forms. To that end, several countries strengthened online protections for children as the world grows increasingly digital. Tunisia launched a digital platform in late 2022 to improve coordination among service responders of abuse against children, including child labor. In Burkina Faso, the Ministry of Labor created a mobile application for labor inspectors to help determine the dangers children are exposed to, direct them toward appropriate services, and verify that they have been removed from worksites. Further, in Thailand, 220 police officers received training on digital forensic investigations and evidence collection, while in Albania, the State Inspectorate for Labor and Social Services developed an online tool to improve transparency around penalties, particularly when a fine can be issued and the amount of the fine.

Efforts to protect children depend on good data. In 2022, countries published new data on labor and criminal law enforcement, sometimes for the first time. For example, Samoa published information about its number of labor inspectors and Lesotho and Tanzania made new enforcement data available. For the first time in several years, Benin published criminal law enforcement data on cases related to the worst forms of child labor. Botswana provided information covering all labor law enforcement data points in this year's report, offering an opportunity for a deeper level of dialogue and targeted enforcement recommendations. Also, for the first time, Egypt provided comprehensive criminal law enforcement data.

Beyond making data available, some countries made meaningful efforts to increase their number of labor inspectors and raise funding levels for their labor inspectorates. For example, Colombia created an elite group of inspectors to better focus on child labor and increased its total corps of labor inspectors by about 32 percent relative to last year. While the number of labor inspectors remains insufficient, Panama made progress by nearly doubling its number of labor inspectors, from 105 to 198, and Haiti hired 29 new labor inspectors. Georgia further increased its number of labor inspectors from 109 to 123, which provides for an adequate number of labor inspectors to perform their mandated duties. Georgia also created a group of specialized labor inspectors to identify instances of forced labor and trafficking for labor exploitation and opened branch offices to increase its operational presence in the western part of the country.

Similarly, some countries in Africa significantly increased their number of labor inspectors. Ghana, for example, quadrupled its number of labor inspectors from 48 to 189, and Benin more than doubled its number of labor inspectors from 35 to 72. Zanzibar—a sub-region operating autonomously in terms of labor law enforcement from Mainland Tanzania—increased annual funding for its labor inspectorate from $10,000 to $183,000. The Government of Guinea significantly increased its labor inspectorate funding from $11,500 to $174,182. In Asia, Maldives increased its labor inspectorate's budget, raising the number of labor inspectors from 23 to 32, including those labor inspectors designated for opening branches on additional islands. While these increases are encouraging, in many instances, further increases in the number of labor inspectors are necessary to ensure adequate coverage for a country's labor force.

Other countries enhanced and delivered training in novel ways. Belize introduced new standard operating procedures for trafficking in persons and began training prosecutors and magistrates on using the procedures to refer survivors to care. In Albania, inspectors received training on regulations related to the employment of minors, while Chile developed training modules on child labor and migration for enforcement personnel. In Guinea-Bissau, the National Guard, lacking financial and logistical resources, created grassroots committees within villages near border locations to identify human traffickers using illegal border crossings.

Regarding criminal enforcement efforts, Argentina's government prosecuted at least 16 individual defendants for child exploitation and achieved 6 convictions that sentenced 12 individuals with prison terms ranging from 6 to 25 years. The Government of Suriname also secured 10 convictions for crimes related to child labor. Two police officials in the country were found guilty and received prison sentences for child trafficking. In Bosnia and Herzegovina, 6 offenders were sentenced to a total of 74 years imprisonment, the highest length sentence for trafficking in persons to date in that country.

Madagascar's National Police and Gendarmerie collaborated with the U.S. Federal Bureau of Investigation on a case that led to the conviction of an American offender for online sexual exploitation of underage Malagasy girls. Guinea-Bissau initiated the first child labor prosecutions in nearly 10 years.

Those who prey on workers often cross borders, impeding officials seeking to enforce laws because officials have reached the limits of their jurisdiction. Because of this reality, partnerships with other countries remain essential to address persistent labor abuse and bring justice to criminals and compassion to survivors. In 2022, Suriname signed bilateral and regional enforcement arrangements with neighboring Brazil, Guyana, and French Guiana, that included language on joint efforts to combat cross-border criminal activities, including human trafficking. Officials in Bangladesh and India also worked together to repatriate 21 women and children who were victims of trafficking. Learn more about global enforcement efforts in Figure 9.

Coordination among government ministries, both those enforcing laws and those providing services, helps ensure that criminals are prosecuted, and victims receive care and support. At times, these interagency bodies also help to conduct trainings on child labor-related issues and ensure that the training is uniform across the government.

Cambodia established 14 municipal and provincial committees on countering child labor. Suriname's National Commission on Combating Child Labor was highly active in calendar year 2022: it met six times, translated television and radio awareness-raising programs into six languages, and distributed flyers about child labor across the country.

Despite the ongoing aggression and territorial incursions made by Russia against Ukraine, the Ukrainian government established a coordination body to support the temporary domestic and international evacuation of Ukrainian children living in various government institutions in areas affected by Russia's invasion. In Serbia, the government signed a plan to streamline collaboration to improve the status of street children. Tunisia launched a digital platform to improve coordination among agencies that respond to child abuse. And in Algeria, the National Authority for the Protection and Promotion of Children launched an online platform to increase coordination among civil society organizations working on child protection issues.

In cooperation with UN Office on Drugs and Crime, Senegal's National Task Force Against Trafficking in Persons developed standard operating procedures for the identification, investigation, and referral of cases of trafficking in persons. Côte d'Ivoire's government created the National Sustainable Cocoa Committee, and Comoros established the National Committee on the Prevention of Illegal Migrant Smuggling and Trafficking in Persons. In Madagascar, a regional committee in Fianarantsoa conducted field visits to markets, brickmaking sites, and stone quarries to monitor child labor and raise awareness among parents. Lastly, Mozambique's Ministry of Labor and Social Security convened the government's first national conference on the elimination of child labor and subsequently held eight province-level conferences on child labor and human trafficking.

Policy

During this year's reporting period, countries established or implemented policies to address child labor. In the Philippines, the Department of Education passed a new education plan, which will serve as a roadmap for improving the government's delivery and quality of basic education, covering education from 5 to 18 years of age, as well as non-formal education for youths and adults. The country also approved the fourth National Strategic Action Plan Against Trafficking in Persons to provide government agencies with direction for the Philippines' anti-trafficking in persons responses. Thailand drafted and approved its fifth National Policy and Plan to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor.

In Brazil, the Rio de Janeiro City Government launched its first municipal plan to combat the sexual exploitation of children. In Honduras, the Ministry of Labor and Social Security approved the creation of a special child labor seal to incentivize the private sector to implement good practices and promote compliance with standards for preventing child labor. The Dominican Republic also launched a plan to rescue children and adolescents found living on the streets and vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor.

Jordan updated its national framework to reduce child labor and extended it to 2030. Morocco approved a national strategy to address trafficking in persons, which also applies to Western Sahara. The Central African Republic established a national action plan to combat child trafficking, which includes a specific focus on preventing children from being recruited and used in armed conflict. Madagascar launched a new national action plan on trafficking in persons.

As a sign of international cooperation across Africa, The Gambia signed an MOU with Nigeria, which includes commitments to coordinate on prosecutions and facilitate the safe return of survivors to their country of origin. In December 2022, Benin also cooperated with the Governments of Burkina Faso, Togo, and Côte d'Ivoire on a joint operation that resulted in the arrest of 15 suspected traffickers and the release and reintegration of 90 child trafficking survivors.

Programs

Countries also undertook surveys to learn about the prevalence and sectoral distribution of child labor. This information allows for more targeted efforts to address child labor. For instance, the Government of Fiji published the results of its Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey (MICS) in August 2022. Bangladesh launched its first national study on trafficking in persons, which will help provide baseline information about the extent of human trafficking and examine how these crimes are committed. And Uzbekistan worked with the International Labor Organization to conduct a survey of working conditions in the construction sector.

The Government of Ethiopia supported a study of child domestic servitude to learn how to better prevent this form of child labor. In Djibouti, the Ministry of Women and Families conducted a study on over 1,130 children engaged in forced begging. The study found that 84 percent of the children were from Ethiopia, almost 35 percent had been verbally assaulted, over 32 percent physically assaulted, and nearly 5 percent sexually assaulted. This detailed information helps countries target social programs and efforts to address child labor. In Box 4, learn more about how data on child labor at the local level can make a difference in communities.

Data can also lead to more targeted and innovative programs. Indonesia is commended on the Ministry of Women's Empowerment and Child Protection's launch of a 3-year program to combat online sexual exploitation of children, with support from UNICEF. Bolivia's municipal government of Santa Cruz trained 300 university students to volunteer in a program that offers services and support to children who work in the markets with their families. In Thailand, the Thailand Safe Internet Coalition, a partnership led by the Ministry of Social Development and Human Security, UNICEF, and Thai telecommunications companies and internet service providers, was formed to strengthen reporting of online abuse, enhance coordination, improve provision of services for survivors, and increase the awareness of children, young people, and parents to online risks. The Ministry, in tandem with the Royal Thai Police, Court of Justice, and NGOs, also held a series of meetings with human trafficking survivors to create and publish guidelines for the public on identifying victims of online sexual exploitation.

The Government of Cambodia committed $10 million to the implementation of its National Action Plan on Early Childhood Care and Development, which prioritizes an expanded early learning curriculum, improved teaching materials, and a reinforced preschool teaching workforce. The Government of Albania and the UN signed a new commitment to continue working on economic and social reforms to improve the situation for vulnerable populations throughout the country. And Guinea's government, with funding from the European Union, opened shelters for trafficking survivors, including child survivors.

Other countries made efforts to grow and enhance existing programs. For example, in 2022, Argentina's Universal Child Allowance Program increased the payment amount by nearly 10 percent to beneficiaries in comparison to the prior year. In addition, Brazil's Auxílio Brasil cash transfer program reached unprecedented levels by extending assistance to over 21.5 million families, and Togo's Safety Nets and Basic Services Project expanded unconditional cash transfers to 83,681 program participants.

More work remains, but these examples provide a snapshot of the hundreds of meaningful efforts made by the countries and territories in this year's report. Read on to learn more about the work that remains and major gaps in relevant areas.

Turning Data Into Action to Mitigate Child Labor

At just age 15, Isabel knows what it is like to worry about money. Two years ago, her father got sick, lost his job, and had to find part-time construction work in another city in Mexico. The family's income was tight, putting Isabel and her siblings at high risk of engaging in child labor.

Isabel and her siblings avoided that fate in part thanks to their local municipality of Villa Victoria and Mexico's child labor risk identification model, the Modelo de Identificación del Riesgo de Trabajo Infantil (MIRTI). The MIRTI helped to identify the family as vulnerable to child labor, and, in turn, the municipal government used this information to provide a scholarship to help with Isabel's school expenses and funds to cover some of the family's expenses. This support helped to reduce the risk for Isabel and her siblings of engaging in child labor and increased their likelihood of staying in school, which is their mother's hope.

"I want my children to be someone in life, to progress, to keep studying, to have the opportunities that I didn't have," says Antonia, Isabel's mother.

The MIRTI was developed in 2018 as part of the Regional Initiative for Latin America Free of Child Labor (RILAC) with the support of ILAB's MAP 16 project. (25; 26) Mexico is the first country in the region to adopt the new model. As part of this process, the project provided training to officials on how to implement the MIRTI, building their capacity to carry it forward.

Out of the 32,000 children in Villa Victoria, 14,000 are at risk for or engaged in child labor. Isabel's age group, youth 12 to 17 years old, are most at risk of dropping out of school to migrate to Mexico City for work or to get a job locally selling goods or harvesting maize and potatoes. In Mexico, many children who reach the legal working age of 15 drop out of school to work, but they often find themselves in precarious jobs, leaving them vulnerable to poverty and labor exploitation.

"The MIRTI helped us quantify the number of child laborers and families at risk. Before the MIRTI we didn't know how to best channel our limited resources to help our community," says Laura Colin Santana, Secretary of the Municipality of Villa Victoria.

The model uses existing survey and administrative data to develop maps showing vulnerability to child labor, making it a cost-effective method to get information about child labor risk into the hands of policymakers at the local, state, and national levels. With this information, officials can direct resources, like meals, medical and legal assistance, scholarship funds, and other social support to vulnerable communities and families.

Ana Alejandra is familiar with the challenges facing families in the municipality. In her role as a census volunteer for the MIRTI, she interviews children and families and gathers data on child labor in Villa Victoria.

"I never imagined there were so many children working," Ana says, noting that some child laborers she meets are as young as 10 years old.

She always asks child laborers why they are working to try to identify alternative solutions for them, and she encourages them to stay in school, even if they continue to work.

While the municipality lacks the resources to meet the needs of all vulnerable kids and families, the MIRTI is helping make the child labor problem more visible, which in turn helps Villa Victoria secure more resources from the state to support children and families. Still, there is more work ahead and more families to serve.

"If we have data on child labor at the local level, all we have to do is channel our resources and join forces to make a difference in the community," says Isis Gutiérrez Salmerón, Honorary President of the Municipal System for Integral Family Development, one of the municipal agencies partnering with the MIRTI.

Overview of Major Gaps

Gaps remain in our collective efforts as a global community to abolish child labor, in particular its worst forms. When children engage in child labor, they sacrifice their education, wellbeing, and development, which limits their future opportunities. Today, children remain vulnerable to dangerous work in many sectors, including the back-breaking process of brickmaking; repeated exposure to hazardous chemicals and risky conditions in mining; and horrific abuse from commercial sexual exploitation, all due to gaps in legislation, enforcement, coordination mechanisms, policies, and programs.

Legal

Laws matter. Laws are the framework a country has in place to ensure children are protected from child labor, including its worst forms, and that prosecutors use to ensure those who commit these crimes face penalties. However, this year's report describes many gaps in this area. Of the 2,047 suggested actions presented in this year's report, 508 out of the over 2,000 total (or 25%) relate to deficiencies in laws and regulations. See Figure 10 for more information about global gaps in laws and regulations.

Ninety percent of countries in this report do not meet international standards for at least one category of child labor law. For example, out of the 131 countries in this report, 29 countries do not have minimum age protections that extend to the informal sector. Twenty-five countries do not have laws that prohibit child trafficking in accordance with international standards. In addition, prohibitions related to the commercial sexual exploitation of children do not meet international standards in 39 countries; 17 countries do not have adequate prohibitions related to forced labor; and 39 countries have not adequately prohibited the use of children in illicit activities.

Many countries' laws providing free and compulsory education do not meet international standards. This is particularly acute in Caribbean countries, such as Dominica, Grenada, and Saint Lucia, which only guarantee free education to citizens of Member States or Associated Member States of the Organization of the Eastern Caribbean States. Another example from the Caribbean is Jamaica, which restricts free education to citizens of the country, leaving children without citizenship vulnerable to child labor. In 35 countries across every region covered in this report, the minimum age for work is also lower than the compulsory education age, which may encourage children to drop out of school before completing their compulsory education.

Enforcement

Gaps related to enforcement account for 769 of the 2,047 (or 38%) suggested actions in this year’s report, the single largest category, as was the case in 2021. Data are also key to solving this problem. Unfortunately, many countries do not collect and/or publish information on enforcement of child labor laws. With more than 160 unique suggested actions related to the lack of information, it is evident that insights into labor and criminal law enforcement are missing on a global scale.

Despite the lack of labor law enforcement data, it is evident that many inspectorates do not have sufficient funding and/or are not fully staffed with labor inspectors. Countries including Cameroon, Chad, El Salvador, Grenada, Haiti, Honduras, Mexico, Panama, Peru, Sierra Leone, and Uganda, among others, face resource constraints and funding levels that limit their ability to fully enforce legislation. Even with committed public servants, many labor inspectorates lack adequate funding, training, and resources to address child labor. Resource constraints, such as insufficient fuel and transport, can result in a lack of inspections in areas where child labor is known to occur, including in rural or remote areas, agricultural fields, and mines. In Sri Lanka, routine inspections, especially of factories in the northern and eastern provinces, were limited by insufficient staffing, insufficient budget, and a fuel shortage.

Some labor inspectorates do not have the authority to inspect all workplaces, or even to carry out inspections. In Botswana, labor inspectors are not authorized to inspect domestic households, and some labor inspectors have faced obstacles, such as locked gates, or are denied entry to large farms, inhibiting their ability to identify underage workers. In countries like Armenia and Ukraine, labor inspectors do not have the authority or lack formal approval to conduct unannounced inspections. And in Azerbaijan and the Kyrgyz Republic, a moratorium on labor inspections actively hinders labor inspections.

Even though countries may have laws on the books that prohibit the involvement of children in armed forces, several countries failed to enforce those prohibitions. For example, the Government of Mali used children in its armed forces in 2022 in violation of national law. In Somalia, there is evidence that federal and state security forces continued to recruit and use children in armed conflict in violation of national law. In addition, there is evidence of recruitment and use of children in hostilities by state armed forces in Yemen in contravention of Yemeni law. Other enforcement gaps also remain related to the use of children in armed conflict. For instance, in Iraq, government authorities inappropriately detained or punished children allegedly affiliated with ISIS—even though some of those children were victims of forcible recruitment and use in armed conflict. Further, the Armed Forces of the Democratic Republic of the Congo provided ammunition to non-state armed groups known to recruit and use children, including using children in armed conflict.

Since enforcement is the primary challenge for most countries in this report, ILAB has developed tools and resources in addition to its research and reporting to help improve labor enforcement. For example, our Better Trade Tool links essential reporting from each of ILAB’s three flagship reports to trade data that can be used by labor inspectorates, trade policymakers, corporate compliance officers, and procurement officers to better target the enforcement of child labor laws in the production of key goods and products. (27) Comply Chain, another tool that ILAB provides, lays out best practices for a due diligence system to help companies identify and mitigate child labor and forced labor risks in global production. (28) Read more about Comply Chain and its recent revamp in Box 5.

Comply Chain: Social Compliance Made Simple

Are you a company looking to adapt to evolving social compliance regulations, including the Uyghur Forced Labor Prevention Act (UFLPA)? Whether just starting or updating established systems, Comply Chain's straightforward guidance works for businesses of all sizes.

Are you an industry group helping your members implement effective due diligence? Comply Chain is filled with examples, resources, and success stories where worker-driven social compliance practices have helped mitigate child labor and forced labor risks.

Are you a worker organization aiming to improve working conditions? Comply Chain highlights where worker voice can critically address child labor and forced labor.

ILAB makes social compliance simple with the click of a button. Comply Chain: Business Tools for Labor Compliance in Global Supply Chains helps companies address child labor and forced labor in global supply chains by providing an actionable roadmap to implement eight steps of worker-driven social compliance:

1. Engage Stakeholders and Partners
2. Assess Risks and Impacts
3. Develop a Code of Conduct
4. Communicate and Train Across Your Supply Chain
5. Monitor Compliance
6. Remediate Violations
7. Independent Review
8. Report Performance and Engagement

This year, Comply Chain has an improved new web design offering customized navigation, robust examples of good practices, and tailored content helping businesses remediate complex issues in social compliance. (28) New features provide information on the latest human rights due diligence laws and regulations around the world—from the U.S. to Australia—improving workers' lives and business practices in the process.

Companies seeking to comply with the UFLPA can leverage Comply Chain as a vital resource. The UFLPA establishes a rebuttable presumption that goods produced wholly or in part in Xinjiang, China, or produced by entities on the UFLPA Entity List, are made with forced labor and are therefore prohibited from importation into the United States. In order to overcome the presumption, importers must comply with the UFLPA Strategy "Guidance to Importers." The Guidance to Importers incorporates the key principles found in Comply Chain, which is also referenced in numerous U.S. Government resources to help businesses develop and strengthen robust social compliance systems to counter forced labor risks in their supply chains. (29) For example, see the U.S. Customs and Border Protection's Operational Guidance for Importers and the interagency Xinjiang Supply Chain Business Advisory. (30; 31)

Coordination

Effective coordination is a cornerstone to the eventual elimination of child labor. Coordination enables government departments and ministries to enforce laws, implement national policies and programs, and support survivors in receiving social services. This year's report, however, highlights many persistent gaps in coordination.

The major gap—as in previous years—is the inability of coordinating bodies, including mechanisms such as intergovernmental committees responsible for coordinating efforts to address child labor, to carry out their mandates. Much of this is due to insufficient funding. In other cases, it is due to a lack of capacity, insufficient staffing, and limited data to inform decision-making. As one example, in Peru, some regional committees for the prevention and eradication of child labor do not fulfill their mandate to create action plans to combat child labor, while others have action plans but fail to provide the necessary funding to implement them.

Challenges are also noted in coordination between those responsible for investigating child labor and those providing services. Countries in this grouping include Namibia, where there is a suggested action to establish a framework for communication between government ministries and civil society to facilitate the prompt referral of cases. Azerbaijan, Kenya, Mongolia, and Zambia, among others, face similar challenges when it comes to referrals to ensure social services for victims of child labor.

Also, there are countries with no active national coordinating mechanisms to address child labor, or that lack mechanisms in key sectors in which there is a demonstrated child labor problem. These countries include Armenia, the Central African Republic, the Republic of the Congo, Djibouti, Eritrea, Georgia, Guinea, Papua New Guinea, Senegal, Somalia, South Sudan, Tonga, and Ukraine. Similarly, Pakistan's child protection units lack adequate staffing and face delays in receiving funding. Sierra Leone's village-level and chiefdom-level child welfare committees are non-existent in some areas, and non-operational in others, despite requirements that these function as part of Sierra Leone's Child Right Act.

Policy

Policies to address child labor support governments in developing and prioritizing a roadmap to ensure that children are free from child labor, including work that harms their health, safety, and morals. This is particularly important because many children engaged in child labor are working outside the protection of the law and remain vulnerable to poor working conditions and serious occupational safety and health risks, among other concerns.

There is a continuing gap relating to the lack of publicly available information and the status of policy implementation. The lack of public information is a likely indication of inactivity or inadequate implementation of a policy. This is the case in countries such as Costa Rica, Mauritania, and Namibia.

Additional gaps relate to the scope of existing policies. Policies ought to respond to all child labor issues. For example, in Comoros and Mauritius, research found no evidence of policies that address the most pressing child labor concerns, such as the commercial sexual exploitation of children. Other countries, including Bhutan, Gabon, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, and Senegal, lack any policy related to child labor. And in India, only 11 of the 29 states have child labor action plans.

Programs

Social programs can help address child labor by countering factors that both lead to and reinforce systems of poverty, which prevent children from pursuing their education and instead thrust them into work at the expense of their futures. These factors often include, but are not restricted to, limited access to social services, lack of reliable data to design impactful programs, and the outsized impact of climate change.

Caring for those impacted by child labor and trafficking is paramount. Sadly, the report notes many gaps, including the lack of adequate social services for survivors. In Sierra Leone, research indicates that shelter space is insufficient to accommodate all survivors of human trafficking and other vulnerable children due to inadequate funding. In India, certain shelter homes, including Ujjawala and Swadhar Greh, have high rates of non-registration. Due to a reported loophole in the law, if the government does not process a shelter home's registration application by a prescribed time, the organization will automatically gain licensure. Some corrupt officials purposely miss the licensing deadline to allow politically connected shelters to gain licensing. Moreover, in some instances the homes function as hostels and offer accommodations for a fee. In 2022, authorities reported multiple instances in which children ran away from these shelters because of unsafe conditions and/or alleged abuse by caretakers.

Accurate data on the prevalence and types of child labor are also essential to designing programs that effectively address child labor. However, many countries lack reliable data on child labor or have data that are outdated, non-existent, or not publicly available. Countries such as Azerbaijan, Bhutan, Eswatini, Haiti, Comoros, Solomon Islands, and Uzbekistan fall into this category.

Responding to the growing climate crisis is also an area of increased focus by countries, and many countries, especially in Asia and Africa, are documenting the impact of climate change on child labor. In Bangladesh in 2022, for example, almost 20 million children were vulnerable to extreme weather, floods, river erosion, and sea-level rise. In Nepal, climate-related disasters have often increased child labor, particularly following the 2017 floods in the south. In Namibia, there was also a significant increase in the number of Angolans migrating to the country because of climate change-induced drought, which has led to emerging trends of locals hiring Angolan children as domestic workers, for street vending, and for agricultural activities. In addition, NGO and local media reporting indicate children of refugee status along the border of Namibia and Angola are increasingly recruited by criminal organizations to smuggle drugs, fuel, diamonds, and wildlife products. Deteriorating economic conditions in Zimbabwe and the ongoing effects of climate change (including droughts, flash floods, and crop failures) strain rural households and make children more vulnerable to child labor and commercial sexual exploitation.

Social programs can help. In Kenya, the government-funded social safety net program, with support from the World Bank, provided relief to 278,945 households with orphans and vulnerable children in 2022. In addition, the government allocated approximately $11 million to respond to the drought and food crises facing Kenya's northern counties, reaching 58,000 families as of August 2022. These actions partially mitigate vulnerability to climate shock and extreme poverty that contribute to child labor in Kenya.

Climate change's impact on global stability will only increase in the absence of effective and timely action. The collective global need to transition to a clean future is urgent, but it is vital that the transition is just and supportive to workers and their families.

Call to Action

A clean-energy future is a future without child labor. And a clean industry starts with affording adult workers fundamental freedom of association and collective bargaining rights, so they can advocate for better wages and working conditions free of child labor. Eliminating child labor requires partnerships among governments, civil society, worker organizations, and businesses to create real, sustainable change: A just transition to a cleaner economy. All governments must pass and enforce strong labor laws, and protections for collective bargaining. Workers, we need to hear your voice. Companies, we're calling on you to take supply chain transparency and due diligence seriously. If child or forced labor is in your supply chain, address it. Civil society, we need your help elevating the voices of survivors of labor exploitation on the global stage. You are often closest to the communities most vulnerable and have a unique ability to help prevent and mitigate these abuses. We call on all relevant stakeholders to raise awareness of these conditions and advocate for a just transition to a truly clean-energy future free from labor abuses.

Acting U.S. Secretary of Labor, Julie Su, meets with Department of Labor interns at the U.S. Department of Labor. Washington, D.C. July 20, 2023.

The U.S. Experience

“To all workers who are toiling in the shadows, know that we see you, we stand with you, and we will fight for you.”

Julie A. Su, Acting Secretary of Labor
March, 2023

All countries struggle with the complexity and challenges of child labor. The United States is no exception. For more than a year, the U.S. Department of Labor has been sounding the alarm on the increase in the number of children employed in violation of federal child labor laws. In fact, since 2018, we have seen a 69 percent increase in the number of minors employed illegally in the United States. Minors have been found in meatpacking plants, in construction, and at factories supplying major retail food brands.

Children are extremely vulnerable to exploitation for many reasons. They often work for subcontractors, or subcontractors of subcontractors. Multinational brands source products and services from these subcontractors but frequently claim to have no visibility into them. While governments hold ultimate responsibility for enforcing labor laws, companies need to step up, too, and no longer hide behind plausible deniability. They need to gain visibility across the breadth of their supply chains to root out abuses. This can be done, but it will take a stronger commitment from the top leadership of corporations.

Meanwhile, some U.S. states are rolling back child labor laws. As United States Solicitor of Labor Seema Nanda put it, “It is irresponsible for states to consider loosening child labor protections. Federal and state entities should be working together to increase accountability and ramp up enforcement—not make it easier to illegally hire children to do what are often dangerous jobs.”

The U.S. government has a pivotal role in protecting children and adults from labor exploitation. The Department takes these egregious violations very seriously, investigates every child labor complaint we receive, and acts to hold employers accountable. For example, in February 2023, the Department of Labor announced the resolution of one of the largest child labor cases in its history. In Kieler, Wisconsin, Packers Sanitation Services Inc., one of the nation’s largest food safety sanitation services providers, paid $1.5 million in civil penalties after the Wage and Hour Division (WHD) found the company employed at least 102 children—from 13 to 17 years of age—in hazardous occupations and had them working overnight shifts at 13 meat processing facilities in eight states. The division found that children were working with hazardous chemicals and cleaning meat-processing equipment, including back saws, brisket saws, and head splitters.

In February 2023, the Departments of Labor and Health and Human Services also announced an array of new actions to increase their efforts to thoroughly vet sponsors of migrant children, investigate child labor violations, and hold companies accountable, including:

- Creation of a Department of Labor-led interagency task force to promote further collaboration and improve information-sharing between federal agencies, and to advance the health, education, and well-being of children in the United States;
- Implementation of a national strategic enforcement initiative on child labor in which WHD will use data-driven, worker-focused strategies to initiate investigations where child labor violations are most likely to occur;
- Increased scrutiny of companies and subcontractors using illegal child labor to increase corporate accountability for systematic abuses of child labor laws;
- A call on Congress for increased funding for the Department of Labor's enforcement agencies, and to increase civil money penalties for companies that use child labor;
- And more.

In July 2023, the U.S. Department of Labor and its partners from the Interagency Task Force to Combat Child Labor Exploitation announced recent actions to hold companies accountable for violating federal child labor laws.

This included enhanced child labor enforcement efforts from the Wage and Hour Division. Between October 1, 2022 and July 20, 2023, as a result of this stepped-up enforcement, the agency concluded 765 child labor cases finding 4,474 children employed in violation of federal child labor laws and assessed employers with more than $6.6 million in penalties. These cases reflect a 44 percent increase in children found employed in violation of federal law and an 87 percent increase in penalties assessed from the same time period in the previous fiscal year. In addition, the agency announced it was pursuing more than 700 open child labor cases. This enforcement data demonstrates the department's commitment to identifying and addressing the child labor violations more aggressively than in the department's history.

In efforts to tackle child labor, WHD enforces regulations on legal working age, permissible hours of work, earned wages, and hazardous occupation prohibitions for minor employees. WHD investigators across the country conduct inspections at workplaces to ensure that labor laws are enforced and working conditions are fair. Many investigations also take place in industries that employ workers vulnerable to labor trafficking. As a result, WHD is often the first federal agency to identify cases of trafficking in persons and refer these cases to criminal law enforcement agencies. Through its YouthRules! initiative, WHD also provides information to young workers, parents, educators, and employers to safeguard the rights of workers under the age of 18 and help ensure that children's work experiences are legal, safe, and do not disrupt their education. (32) Learn more in Figure 12.

The Department of Labor's Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) ensures safe and healthy working conditions by setting standards to reduce and eliminate workplace hazards.

Finally, the Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics measures labor market activity, working conditions, price changes, and production in the U.S. economy to support private and public decision-making. The Bureau of Labor Statistics also conducts research and publishes reports on youth employment trends.

The Federal Minimum Ages for Work

The Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) guarantees basic rights and protections to ensure the safety and well-being of child workers. The child labor regulations of the FLSA are designed to ensure children's educational opportunities are not harmed by early employment and to prohibit children's employment in jobs that are detrimental to their health and safety.

The FLSA and its implementing regulations have established the following standards:

Non-Agricultural Work

- A minimum age of 14 for light work in non-agricultural industries, with limits on the times of day, number of hours, and tasks that can be performed by 14- and 15-year-olds. (33; 34)
- A minimum age of 16 for most employment in non-hazardous, non-agricultural industries. (33)
- A minimum age of 18 for employment in hazardous occupations as deemed by the Department's issuance of 17 non-agricultural Hazardous Occupations Orders. (33; 34)

Agricultural Work

- A minimum age of 14 for agricultural work outside of school hours, without limits on permitted occupations (other than hazardous work limits) or the number of hours such children may work. (33) A minimum age of 12-14 for non-hazardous agricultural work outside of school hours with the consent of a parent employed on the same farm. No minimum age for children in non-hazardous agricultural work outside of school hours with the consent of their parents on farms that use less than 500 man-days of agricultural labor in any calendar quarter.

- A minimum age of 16 for agricultural employment in hazardous occupations, as identified by the Department of Labor, except for children employed by a parent on a farm operated by the parent. (33; 34)

All states have child labor standards and mandatory school attendance laws. When state and federal child labor standards differ, the rule that provides the most protections for the young worker is the one that must be followed.

According to Department of Labor records, there were 2,243,000 youth, ages 16 to 17, employed in the United States in 2021, and 2,463,000 employed in 2022. Despite the restrictions and limitations placed on youth work, there were 17 fatal occupational injuries in the United States among youth ages 16 to 17, and 7 fatal occupational injuries among youth below the age of 16 in 2021 (the most recent year for which data are available).

Wage and Hour Division

The Wage and Hour Division determines an employer's status of compliance with the FLSA's child labor regulations in every investigation conducted. Learn more in Figure 13.

For example, a WHD investigation found Dunkin's franchise locations in Maryland and West Virginia allowed 19 minors to work in violation of child labor laws, leading the employer to accept responsibility for the offenses and to sign an agreement with the Department of Labor to prevent future violations at its eight locations in three states. The employer also paid a fine of $41,181 to resolve the violations. In Salt Lake City, Utah, a federal investigation found Specialty Consulting Services LLC, a restaurant supply company, allowed 22 employees—ages 14 and 15—to work as many as 46 hours per workweek, and to begin work after midnight—both illegal practices under child labor laws. The company was assessed $16,595 in penalties to resolve the child labor violations. And in Dundee, Ohio, a lathe mill paid an enhanced child labor enforcement penalty of $22,093 after federal investigators found the company employed a 15-year-old worker illegally in a hazardous occupation—the operation of a sawmill—which led the worker to suffer injury when he became entangled in the gears of a powered wood-processing machine.

In addition to its rigorous enforcement efforts, WHD aims to prevent violations from occurring in the first place by educating employers, workers, and the public about federal child labor law compliance. For example, the agency's Southeast Regional Office hosted a webinar in April 2023 that featured training on child labor rules and a panel discussion with stakeholders, including state officials and school and industry representatives. In May 2023, WHD's Southwest Regional Office hosted a 2-day Department of Labor forum that included a child labor and workplace safety panel discussion featuring WHD and OSHA officials.

WHD online resources include fact sheets, FAQs, on-demand video training, PowerPoint presentations, and extensive information on all laws enforced by the agency, including a comprehensive child labor webpage to help parents, educators, young workers, and employers better understand federal child labor laws. (35; 36)

The agency also provides a free Timesheet App in English and Spanish for Android and Apple mobile device users that allows employers and employees to track their hours of work and calculate wages due. (37) The app can empower young workers to ensure they are receiving the wages they are due or get assistance if a dispute arises.

Employment and Training Administration

The Department's Employment and Training Administration (ETA) provides workforce training and development programs to remove barriers to good jobs and improve economic mobility for all Americans. ETA programs include Registered Apprenticeship Programs, YouthBuild, Job Corps, Reentry Employment Opportunities, and the Workforce Innovation and Opportunities Act (WIOA) Youth Formula Program. These programs seek to empower historically disadvantaged populations, including women, people of color, and youth, by providing them with work-ready skills and pathways to industry accreditation.

In 2023, ETA awarded more than $90 million in YouthBuild grants to provide youth ages 16 to 24 with education and training to expand the clean-energy workforce. These grants will teach young adults who are not currently in school or in the workforce in-demand construction skills focused on green building techniques, including weatherization processes, use of sustainable building materials, and solar panel installation. Also in 2023, ETA awarded

Conclusion

The child labor problem in the U.S. shows we are not immune to challenges that other countries also face. But our response shows that we at the U.S.

Department of Labor are committed to turning the tide. Others need to step up. Corporations need to be vigilant to root out child labor in their own operations as well as in their supply chains, no matter how far down the chain it goes. Union leaders need to have their voices heard when they call for an end to exploitative labor. Front-line human rights defenders—such as the press—need to keep exposing these abuses through their reporting. With concerted effort, we can protect more children and punish more unscrupulous employers for all violations occurring on their watch.

About the Iqbal Masih Award

The United States Congress established the Iqbal Masih Award for the Elimination of Child Labor in 2008 to recognize exceptional efforts by an individual, company, organization, or national government to end the worst forms of child labor. The award reflects the spirit of Iqbal Masih, a Pakistani child sold into bonded labor as a carpet weaver at age 4. He escaped his servitude at age 10 and became an outspoken advocate of children's rights, drawing international attention to his fight against child labor. Iqbal was killed in Pakistan in 1995 at the age of 12, as he continued to call for an end to child labor. Further information about the Iqbal Masih Award and USDOL's efforts to combat child labor is available on the USDOL website at www.dol.gov/Iqbal.

In 2023, Acting U.S. Secretary of Labor Julie Su selected Lalitha Natarajan, an activist and advocate working in India, to receive the Iqbal Masih Award in recognition of her extraordinary efforts to combat the worst forms of child labor.

Lalitha Natarajan

Lalitha Natarajan has championed the cause to end child labor and modern slavery as an activist and ally for vulnerable communities in India for over 20 years. She has dedicated her career to rescuing children from forced labor across the state of Tamil Nadu, including from stone quarries and food processing factories. Lalitha has worked with NGOs and international human rights agencies, helping public officials enhance child laborer rescue and rehabilitation programming. She has also served as a human rights interlocuter on legal and empowerment training programs serving women, children, and marginalized caste members. Since embarking on her legal career in 2015, she has focused on issues pertaining to women's and children's rights. Lalitha has fought cases for individuals and families who have suffered from bonded labor where there is little or no recourse to legal aid. In the face of repeated harassment and threats, Lalitha continues to advocate for children's rights and fights to bring child rights offenders to justice.

World Day Against Child Labor
 Through the Kenya Schoolhouse Program, children were given the platform to express concerns about forms of child labor that exist within their county of Bungoma and their country of Kenya.
 Children created art depicting child labor and participated in a processional walk.

Definitions Related to Child Labor and Forced Labor

Definitions related to child labor are guided by ILO C. 138 on Minimum Age and ILO C. 182 on the Worst Forms of Child Labor. ILO’s Resolution Concerning Statistics of Child Labor, developed during the 18th International Conference of Labor Statisticians (ICLS), and amendments made during the 20th ICLS provide the international framework for measuring children’s work. See Appendix 7 for additional definitions.

Working Children

Per the Resolution Concerning Statistics of Child Labor developed during the 18th ICLS, working children are those engaged in any productive activity for at least 1 hour during the reference period. Productive activity includes market production and certain types of non-market production, principally the production of goods and services for their families’ use. The 20th ICLS introduced changes to the definition of working children to align that definition with internationally accepted definitions of work for adults. The new definition classifies working children as those engaged in any activity to produce goods or to provide services for use by others or for their own use. In summary, the new definition includes the production of additional types of services for family use, unpaid trainee work by children, volunteer work by children, and other work activities by children. Since most countries are in the process of adapting survey instruments to reflect this new definition, the definition of working children from the 18th ICLS Resolution has been used in this report. The work that children perform may be within the formal or informal economy, inside or outside of family settings, whether paid or unpaid. This includes children working in domestic service outside the child’s own household for an employer, paid or unpaid. (38; 39)

Child Labor

Child labor is a subset of working children and is work below the minimum age for work, as established in national legislation that conforms to international standards. The definition includes the worst forms of child labor. Child labor is a subset of working children because child labor excludes children who work limited hours per week in permitted light work and those who are above the minimum age who engage in work not classified as a worst form of child labor. (38; 39)

Worst Forms of Child Labor

The term “worst forms of child labor” refers to activities described and as understood in ILO C. 182. (6) Under Article 3 of the Convention, the worst forms of child labor comprise the following activities:

- All forms of slavery or practices similar to slavery, such as the sale and trafficking of children, debt bondage and serfdom, and forced or compulsory labor, including forced or compulsory recruitment of children for use in armed conflict;
- The use, procuring, or offering of a child for prostitution, for the production of pornography, or for pornographic purposes;
- The use, procuring, or offering of a child for illicit activities, in particular for the production and trafficking of drugs as defined in the relevant international treaties; and
- Work which, by its nature or the circumstances under which it is carried out, is likely to harm the health, safety, or morals of children.

Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor

For this report, the term “categorical worst forms of child labor” refers to child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182. This category does not include the worst forms of child labor identified under Article 3(d) as “hazardous work.” (6)

Hazardous Work

The term “hazardous work” refers to the worst form of child labor identified in ILO C. 182, Article 3(d), “work which, by its nature or the circumstances in which it is carried out, is likely to harm the health, safety, or morals of children.” ILO C. 182, Article 4, directs countries to consult with employers and workers to identify the types of hazardous work that should be prohibited by law or regulation. Hazardous work lists may describe specific activities, occupations, industries, or conditions. (6)

Forced Labor

Forced labor, under international standards, is defined as all work or service that is exacted from any person under the menace of any penalty and for which the worker does not offer themselves voluntarily. (40) Menace of penalty refers to the means of coercion and includes threats or violence against workers or workers’ families and close associates; restrictions on workers’ movement; debt bondage; withholding of wages or promised benefits; withholding of documents; and abuse of workers’ vulnerability through the denial of rights or threats of dismissal or deportation. (41) “Circumstances that may give rise to involuntary work, when undertaken under deception or uninformed, include, inter alia, unfree recruitment at birth or through transactions such as slavery or bonded labor; situations in which the worker must perform a job of a different nature from that specified during recruitment without [their] consent; abusive requirements for overtime or on-call work that were not previously agreed to with the employer; work in hazardous conditions to which the worker has not consented, with or without compensation or protective equipment; work with very low or no wages; in degrading living conditions imposed by the employer; work for other employers than agreed to; work for a longer period of time than agreed to; and work with no or limited freedom to terminate the work contract.” (41)

Slavery and Practices Similar to Slavery

Slavery is the status or condition of a person over whom any or all of the powers attaching to the right of ownership are exercised. (42) Practices similar to slavery include the following practices:

- Debt bondage, defined as the status or condition arising from a pledge by a debtor of their personal services or the services of a person under their control as security for a debt, if the value of those services as reasonably assessed is not applied towards the liquidation of the debt or the length and nature of those services are not respectively limited and defined;
- Serfdom, defined as the condition or status of a tenant who is by law, custom, or agreement bound to live and labor on land belonging to another person and to render some determinate service to such other person, whether for reward or not, and is not free to change their own status; and
- Forced or compulsory labor. (43)

Forced Child Labor

Forced child labor is a categorical worst form of child labor under ILO C. 182. (4) Children are in forced child labor if subjected to work under the threat or menace of penalty. Forced child labor also includes work performed with or for the child’s parents for a third party under the threat or menace of any penalty directly applied to the child or parents. (6; 41; 44)

Appendix 3

ILO Instruments Related to Child Labor and Forced Labor

The ILO brings together government, employer, and worker representatives of member states to establish and supervise the implementation of international labor standards and develop policies and implement programs to advance decent work. (45) International labor standards are legal instruments drawn up by these ILO constituents that set out basic principles and rights at work. They can take the form of either conventions, protocols, or recommendations. Conventions and protocols are international treaties that are legally binding on ratifying member states. Ratifying countries commit themselves to implementing the convention or protocol in national law and practice, and reporting on its application at regular intervals. Recommendations are non-binding and provide guidelines for action, either as a complement to a convention or as a stand-alone instrument. The following paragraphs describe key ILO instruments related to child labor and the minimum ages set by countries related to these instruments.

ILO Convention No. 138: Minimum Age for Admission to Employment, 1973

ILO C. 138 establishes that the minimum age of admission into employment or work in any occupation “shall not be less than the age of completion of compulsory schooling, and, in any case, shall not be less than fifteen” (Article 2(3)). Countries whose economy and educational facilities are insufficiently developed may initially specify a minimum legal working age of 14 when ratifying the Convention. In addition, Article 7(1) says that national laws or regulations may permit the employment or work of children ages 13 to 15 years for light work. Countries that specify a minimum legal working age of 14 may permit light work for children ages 12 to 14. (46)

ILO Convention No. 182: Worst Forms of Child Labor, 1999

ILO C. 182 defines the worst forms of child labor and requires ratifying countries to take immediate action to secure the prohibition and elimination of the worst forms of child labor for persons under age 18.

Among other actions, ILO C. 182 requires ratifying countries to take effective and timebound measures to prevent the engagement of children in the worst forms of child labor; help remove children from the worst forms of child labor and provide for their rehabilitation and social integration; ensure that children removed from the worst forms of child labor have access to free basic education and, wherever possible and appropriate, vocational training; identify and reach out to children at special risk; take into account the special situation of girls; consult with employer and worker organizations to create appropriate mechanisms to monitor implementation of the convention; and assist one another in implementing the convention. (6)

Worst Forms of Child Labor Recommendation No. 190, 1999

Recommendation No. 190 supplements ILO C. 182 and provides non-binding practical guidance in applying the Convention. Among other provisions, it includes a list of working conditions and types of work that should be considered when determining what comprises hazardous work. (47)

ILO Convention No. 29: Forced Labor, 1930

ILO C. 29 prohibits all forms of forced or compulsory labor, which is defined as “all work or service which is exacted from any person under the menace of any penalty and for which the person has not offered himself voluntarily.” (40)

ILO Convention No. 105: Abolition of Forced Labor Convention, 1957

ILO C. 105 prohibits forced or compulsory labor as a means of political coercion or education, or as a punishment for holding or expressing political views or views ideologically opposed to the established political, social, or economic system; as a method of mobilizing and using labor for economic development; as a means of labor discipline; as a punishment for having participated in strikes; and as a means of racial, social, national, or religious discrimination. (48)

Protocol of 2014 to the Forced Labor Convention, 1930

The Protocol reaffirms the forced labor definition in ILO C. 29. It requires ratifying countries to take effective measures to prevent and eliminate forced and compulsory labor, to sanction perpetrators, and provide victims with protection and access to appropriate remedies, such as compensation. It also requires ratifying countries to develop a national policy and plan of action to address forced or compulsory labor in consultation with employers' and workers' organizations. (78) The Protocol supplements ILO C. 29; as such, only ILO member states that have ratified the convention can ratify the protocol. (49)

Forced Labor (Supplementary Measures) Recommendation No. 203, 2014

Recommendation No. 203 provides non-binding practical guidance in the areas of prevention, protection of victims and ensuring their access to justice and remedies, enforcement, and international cooperation. It supplements both the protocol and the convention. (50)

ILO Convention No. 81: Labor Inspection Convention, 1947

ILO C. 81 establishes the duties, functions, and responsibilities of countries' labor inspection systems and labor inspectors. These functions include enforcing legal provisions related to general conditions of work and worker protection in all workplaces as defined by national laws or regulations. (51)

How to Read a TDA Country Profile

Country Overview. Each country profile begins with a single-paragraph overview of 2022 and a statement identifying the assessment level assigned to the country for 2022. Following the assessment statement, the paragraph offers a summary of key findings, including any meaningful efforts made (defined as efforts in key areas where the government advanced its commitments to eliminate the worst forms of child labor); the most common or egregious forms of child labor found in the country; and highlights of those areas in which key gaps in government efforts remain.

Section I: Prevalence and Sectoral Distribution of Child Labor. The first section of each country profile attempts to provide, to the extent that information is available, a comprehensive picture of the worst forms of child labor in the country.

Table 1, Statistics on Children's Work and Education, contains at least four variables: percentage of working children, school attendance rate, percentage of children combining work and school, and primary completion rate. Most country profiles have data for at least one of these variables. A smaller set of profiles contains data on children's work by sector. The age and methodologies of the original surveys that provide the underlying data vary, and in some cases, the surveys may not reflect the true magnitude of the child labor problem in the country.

Table 2, Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity, groups types of children's work by sector, using categories established by the ILO and Understanding Children's Work for national child labor surveys (Agriculture, Industry, and Services), and a fourth category intended to capture work understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182, referred to in the report as "Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor." Sectors and specific activities performed by children are sorted into these categories according to internationally accepted industry and occupational codes.

The first table note identifies sectors or activities determined to be hazardous by national law or regulation as understood under Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182, and the second table note provides the definition of Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor.

The table is followed by a narrative highlighting additional sector-specific information and social, economic, or political issues that affect the prevalence of child labor, such as barriers to accessing education, or major socio-economic shocks to the country that may inhibit the government's ability to address child labor, such as a natural disaster or armed conflict.

Mexico
MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2022, Mexico made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government approved the ratification of the International Labor Organization's Protocol of 2014 to the Forced Labor Convention and increased the number of municipal-level bodies responsible for coordinating efforts to address child labor. In addition, the government's Benito Juárez Wellbeing National Scholarship Program reached 1.2 million more students in 2022 than in 2021. However, children in Mexico are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in illicit activities, such as the production and trafficking of drugs. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture, including in the production of chile peppers, coffee, sugarcane, and tomatoes. Although 55.2 percent of all employment in Mexico occurs in the informal sector, federal and some state-level labor inspectors carry out inspections in that sector only after receiving formal complaints. Further, the Secretariat of Labor and Social Welfare does not have an internal system to track cases of child labor violations, and the 529 federal labor inspectors in the country are likely insufficient to cover the country's more than 57 million workers. Criminal law enforcement agencies also lack human and financial resources, and social programs to prevent and eliminate child labor are insufficient.

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Working in agriculture,† including in the production of avocados, beans, chile peppers, coffee, cotton, cucumbers, eggplants, beans (green), guavas, melons, nuts, onions, pineapples, sugarcane, tobacco,† and tomatoes (3-12) Cattle raising (12,13) Packing shrimp (12)
Industry	Manufacturing† footwear, garments, leather goods, and textiles (2,5,13-15) Producing baked goods (16,17) Construction,† activities unknown (2,12,13) Mining,† including amber and coal (2,12,13,18-21) Loading wood and working in carpentry workshops (12)
Services	Street work† as vendors, shoe shiners, beggars, car washers, and porters (3,12,16,22-24) Working in auto repair garages and bars† (2,5,12)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.
‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children's work in agriculture often includes long working hours, use of sharp tools, handling pesticides, and carrying heavy loads. (4,45,46) Indigenous children, migrant children, and those working in agriculture are particularly vulnerable to child labor. (26,31,32,47,48) Children from indigenous populations are more likely to work across all sectors, including in agriculture, than non-indigenous children. (31,49,50) Indigenous children are also less likely to attend school due to the lack of schools near their homes, educational materials, and instruction in native languages. (51,52)

Section II: Legal Framework for Child Labor. The second section indicates whether a country has ratified key international instruments related to child labor and assesses whether a country's legal framework meets international standards. This section begins with a statement about the extent to which the government has ratified key international conventions concerning child labor.

Table 3, Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor, lists the relevant UN conventions concerning child labor. A checkmark indicates the country's ratification, acceptance, or accession to the instrument, considering that the latter two actions have the same practical legal effect regarding the substantive obligations of the instrument as ratification. If other relevant international instruments, beyond those listed in the table, were ratified during the reporting period, this may be recognized in a short narrative following the table.

A statement above Table 4, Laws and Regulations on Child Labor, indicates whether the government's laws and regulations related to child labor meet ILO C. 138 and C. 182, or whether gaps exist in the legal framework to adequately protect children from child labor.

Table 4 lists each of the relevant legal standards and notes which laws meet and do not meet international standards. Notes under Table 4 identify whether a government does not use conscription for military service, whether a government does not have a standing military, and whether an age is calculated based on available information.

The table is followed by a narrative describing any relevant laws that the government enacted or advanced to a significant step in the legislative process during the reporting period. The narrative also discusses why existing laws do not meet international standards.

Section III: Enforcement of Laws on Child Labor. The third section describes the roles of government agencies in enforcing laws related to child labor and reports on efforts made during the reporting period. It begins with a statement about whether the government has established institutional mechanisms to enforce laws and regulations on child labor and notes whether gaps exist within the authority or operations of the ministries responsible for law enforcement.

Table 5, Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement, lists the agencies charged with enforcing such laws, identifies each agency's role, and describes gaps in agency responsibilities or new information during the reporting period. A table note identifies whether an agency responsible for child labor enforcement was created during the reporting period.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Mexico has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government ratified the Protocol of 2014 to the Forced Labor Convention, 1930 on November 10, 2022. (65)

The government's laws and regulations are in line with relevant international standards (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 123 of the Constitution; Article 22 bis of the Labor Code; Article 47 of the Law on the Rights of Children and Adolescents; Article 6 of the General Education Law (66-69)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 23 and 175 of the Labor Code (69)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 175 and 176 of the Labor Code (69)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 1 and 5 of the Constitution; Articles 11, 12, and 22 of the Trafficking in Persons Law; Article 47 of the Law on the Rights of Children and Adolescents (65-67,70)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 10 of the Trafficking in Persons Law; Article 47 of the Law on the Rights of Children and Adolescents (67,70)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 200–205-Bis of the Federal Penal Code; Articles 13 and 18 of the Trafficking in Persons Law; Article 47 of the Law on the Rights of Children and Adolescents (67,70,71)

In 2022, the Mexican Senate revised the Military Service Law to remove the exception that allowed children aged 16 and 17 to enroll in voluntary state military service. (73-76) In April 2022, Mexico also amended the Labor Code to allow children as young as age 15 to work in some forms of agricultural employment. Previously, all work in agriculture was considered hazardous; under the new provision, only work using chemicals, handling machinery, operating heavy machinery, and determined by the Secretariat of Labor and Social Welfare (STPS) is considered hazardous. (69,77-79) In addition, as the minimum age for work at age 15 is lower than the compulsory education age of 18, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (78,80)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Secretariat for Labor and Social Welfare (STPS)	Leads efforts to enforce child labor laws, conduct labor inspections, and refer cases for investigation. (69,81-86) The STPS inspectorate is responsible for labor law enforcement in 22 industrial sectors under federal jurisdiction, including the sugar and tobacco industries, three types of enterprises, and labor matters affecting two or more states. The state-level labor inspectorates are responsible for labor law enforcement in all other situations. (66,69,87) Federal and state labor inspectorates carry out labor inspections in formally registered businesses. (81,82,88,89) The Federal Attorney for the Defense of Labor (PROFEDET), a decentralized unit of STPS, receives and prosecutes labor rights violations, including cases involving workers under age 18. (12)
Office of the Attorney General of the Republic (FGR)	Prosecutes crimes involving human trafficking, including those considered as categorical worst forms of child labor, such as human trafficking. (72,90) The FGR's Specialized Unit for Crimes against Women and Trafficking in Persons (FEVIMTRA) and the Specialized Unit on Trafficking in Minors, People, and Organs (UEITMPO) are responsible for investigating and prosecuting human trafficking cases at the federal level, while the Specialized Office for Organized Crime (FEMDO) investigates and prosecutes cases linked to commercial sexual exploitation of children. (12,26,75,86,91-93) In addition, all 32 states have specialized trafficking in persons prosecutors or units, which are responsible for investigating and prosecuting cases of human trafficking at the state level. (93-96) Federal and state trafficking in persons units also receive some cases of child trafficking from the National Institute of Migration and the Mexican Commission for Refugee Assistance. (97,98)

Table 6, Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor. provides information on labor law enforcement data from the current and previous reporting years, including information about the labor inspectorate's financial and human resources, authority to conduct inspections and assess penalties, and actions and mechanisms to enforce labor laws.

Table 7, Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor. provides information on criminal law enforcement data from the current and previous reporting years, including information about actions and mechanisms to enforce laws related to the worst forms of child labor.

Notes under each table identify whether the data included in the tables fall outside of the calendar year. A narrative follows each of these tables with more specific information on government mechanisms and efforts and includes findings for which ILAB concludes that government efforts fall short.

Section IV: Coordination of Government Efforts on Child Labor. The fourth section provides information on the key institution charged with coordinating efforts related to child labor. It begins with a statement indicating whether the government has established a mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, and whether any gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor.

Table 8, Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor. lists the country's key coordinating body and its composition, if known, including its respective mandate, as well as its efforts during the reporting period. A table note states whether the mechanism was created during the reporting period.

Section V: Government Policies on Child Labor. The fifth section describes a country's policies and plans to address child labor and the development of policies that explicitly incorporate the issue of child labor. It begins with a statement indicating whether the government has established policies related to child labor, and whether policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Mexico took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of STPS that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the lack of unannounced inspections being conducted in all sectors.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

‡ Data reported may not be complete. (56)

The Specialized Unit for Crimes against Women and Trafficking in Persons (FEVIMTRA) and Mexico's National Guard participated in trainings on child trafficking and other crimes against children, including some aimed at identifying commercial sexual exploitation cases. (12) However, reports indicate that the lack of training for criminal law enforcement officers on how to perform prosecutorial and police investigative functions hampered their ability to adequately investigate and prosecute cases involving child labor. (9,26,56,110,113,114)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including low levels of participation by state authorities in coordinating mechanisms.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Inter-Institutional Commission for Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor and the Protection of Adolescent Workers of the Permitted Age in Mexico (CITI)	Coordinates Mexico's activities to develop policies, approve programs, and monitor and evaluate efforts to eliminate child labor. Meets on a quarterly basis, chaired by STPS, and includes representatives from the secretariats of the Interior, Economy, Foreign Affairs, Wellbeing, Agriculture, Transportation, Education, Health, Tourism, Social Security, System for Integral Family Development (SNDIF), and FGR, and NGO networks and international technical and financial partners, such as ILO, UNODC, IOM, and academia. (12,100) There are also state level (CITI Estatales) and municipal-level committees through a National Network of Local Commissions for Preventing and Eradicating Child Labor and Protecting Adolescent Workers (CITIs Network). However, some states do not have active CITI committees, and only about half of the 32 states engaged with CITI at the federal level. (12) In addition, of the active state CITIs, only the state CITIs of Baja California Sur, Chihuahua, Coahuila, Jalisco, and the State of Mexico reported on their activities during the reporting period. (9,12) CITI also began implementing its Plan of Action on Child Labor 2021–2024. (9,100,104) Although this plan requires the CITI Secretariat to conduct monitoring activities on a quarterly basis, it lacks an accompanying budget for activities. (118,119)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of coverage of all worst forms of child labor.

● Table 9, Key Policies Related to Child Labor. lists the country's key policies and provides a description of each policy's objectives and any developments in implementation, to the extent known, that occurred during the reporting period. Table notes identify policies that were approved during the reporting period and whether there are additional small-scale policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor.

● The narrative following the table includes findings related to whether existing policies sufficiently address child labor issues in the country.

● Section VI: Social Programs to Address Child Labor. The sixth section describes social programs launched or implemented during the reporting period that focus on child labor. It begins with a statement as to whether the government funded or participated in social programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, and whether gaps exist in these social programs.

● Table 10, Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor. lists the country's key social programs and descriptions, including its activities and accomplishments, to the extent known, during the reporting period. Where possible, programs are hyperlinked to project websites for additional information. Table notes identify social programs that are funded by the government or were launched during the reporting period, and whether the government had additional small-scale social programs with the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor.

● The narrative following the table may include an analysis of the extent to which social programs were sufficient to address the scope of child labor or covered the key sectors in which children are known to work in the country. Not all country profiles will have a paragraph after Table 10.

● Section VII: Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor. Table 11, Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, includes a list of suggested actions for the country to consider taking to advance the elimination of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Program for the Secretariat of Labor and Social Welfare (2020–2024)	Seeks to strengthen worker rights in Mexico and increase the participation of workers in the formal sector. (12) The program prioritizes addressing child labor as part of STPS's social inclusion strategy. (120) In 2022, STPS, in collaboration with Save the Children, trained 44 civil servants from the state government of Aguascalientes on child labor issues. (12,121)
National Program for Children and Adolescents (PRONAPPINA) (2021–2024)	Aims to guarantee the rights of children and adolescents by establishing mechanisms to support their growth and development. (12,122) In February 2022, the government launched an action plan to accompany PRONAPPINA. (123) In addition, under this program, the government published the Strategy for the Prevention of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children and Adolescents and delivered a technical training to develop indicators on the rights of children and adolescents. (12,124)
National Action Plan on Trafficking in Persons (PNTdP)† (2022–2024)	Guides the work of the Inter-agency Commission to Prevent, Sanction, and Eradicate Crimes on Human Trafficking and for the Protection and Assistance to Victims of Human Trafficking, under the General Law on Human Trafficking. (125) Published by the Secretariat of the Interior (SEGOB) in December 2022, this program delineates the Government of Mexico's public policy on human trafficking, in alignment with the National Development Plan 2019–2024. (9,12,126) Thirteen federal government agencies, including SEGOB, STPS, and the Secretariat of Tourism, are responsible for implementing the plan. (125) PNTdP has five key objectives: (1) promoting amendments to the legal framework on human trafficking at the federal level, (2) outlining coordination efforts on human trafficking at the national level, (3) strengthening services to survivors of human trafficking, (4) promoting research to inform actions and public policies, and (5) promoting the human rights of survivors of human trafficking. (125)

‡ The government has other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (127)

● Although the government has policies to address some of the worst forms of child labor, research could not confirm whether there is a policy to address the use of children in illicit activities. (100,120,128)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

The government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including a lack of programs to address child labor in all sectors and in all states.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Benito Juarez Wellbeing National Scholarship Program†	A $39.3 million Secretariat of Public Education cash transfer program that offers scholarships for families living in poverty and students at risk of school desertion. The Wellbeing Basic Education Family Scholarship provides bimonthly payments of $92 per household for all children under age 15 enrolled in school, while the Benito Juarez Scholarship provides bimonthly payments of $92 to each child enrolled in high school. (129-131) Although the program reached 11 million students in 2022, it has been criticized for providing insufficient cash transfers, lacking monitoring and evaluation, and having implementation issues. (132-137)
Education Programs‡	Managed by the National Institute of Indigenous Peoples, the Indigenous Education Support Program (PAEI) promotes access to public education for children and adolescents from indigenous and Afro-Mexican communities through scholarships, lodging, and nutritional assistance. (138) With funding close to $87 million, the program helped 80,607 students in 2022. (138) However, during the reporting period, the government eliminated the Indigenous People's Education Diversity Program, the Educational Program for Migrant School Population, and the Full-Time Schools Program. (9,139-141) The termination of the Full-Time Schools Program impacted 3.6 million students. Starting in April 2022, due to advocacy and legal action by parents, civil society organizations, and state-level authorities, Secretariat of Public Education expanded the scope of The School is Ours (LEEN) program from its initial focus on building and improving educational infrastructure to also include an extended school schedule and meal services. (139,142-144)
Assistance for At-Risk Children and Adolescents Program (PAMAR)†	Implemented by SNDIF at the state and municipal levels to assist youth at risk for child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and in illicit activities, by providing shelters, psychosocial assistance, and training. (9,56) Research could not confirm whether the program was active in all states and municipalities where the program is needed.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (12,48,100,145-147)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Mexico (Table 11).

TDA Country Assessment Criteria

Each country in this report receives an assessment to indicate the USDOL's findings on the country's level of advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor during the reporting period. There are five possible assessment levels: Significant Advancement, Moderate Advancement, Minimal Advancement, No Advancement, or No Assessment.

Significant Advancement

For a country to be assessed as having significantly advanced efforts in 2022, the country must have (1) instituted the minimum requirements related to laws and regulations, mechanisms, and programs to address and prevent the worst forms of child labor (see Exhibit 1); and (2) during the reporting period, made meaningful efforts in all relevant areas covering laws and regulations, enforcement, coordination, policies, and social programs, which may have included taking suggested actions recommended in the 2021 report.

Exhibit 1

Minimum Requirements Needed to be Considered for a Significant Advancement Assessment

In order for a country to be eligible to receive an assessment of Significant Advancement, a country must have:

- Established a minimum age for work that meets international standards;
- Established a minimum age for hazardous work that meets international standards;
- Established legal prohibitions against forced labor that meet international standards;
- Established legal prohibitions against child trafficking that meet international standards;
- Established legal prohibitions against commercial sexual exploitation of children that meet international standards;
- Established legal prohibitions against the use of children for illicit activities that meet international standards;
- Designated a competent authority or implemented institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor;
- Imposed penalties for violations related to the worst forms of child labor;
- Took active measures to ensure that children are not inappropriately incarcerated, penalized, or physically harmed for unlawful acts as a direct result of being a victim of the worst forms of child labor;
- Took active measures to investigate, prosecute, convict, and sentence public officials who participate in or facilitate the worst forms of child labor;
- Made a good-faith effort to collect and publish labor and criminal law enforcement data; and
- Directly funded a significant social program that includes the goal of eliminating child labor or addressing the root causes of the problem, such as lack of educational opportunities, poverty, or discrimination.

Moderate Advancement

A country moderately advanced its efforts in eliminating the worst forms of child labor in 2022 if it made meaningful efforts during the reporting period in some relevant areas covering laws and regulations, enforcement, coordination, policies, and social programs, which may have included taking suggested actions recommended in 2021.

Minimal Advancement

Three types of countries made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor in 2022. The first is a country that made meaningful efforts during the reporting period in a few relevant areas covering laws and regulations, enforcement, coordination, policies, and social programs, which may have included taking suggested actions recommended in 2021.

The other two types of countries are those that, regardless of meaningful efforts made in relevant areas, minimally advanced as a result of establishing or failing to remedy regressive or significantly detrimental laws, policies, or practices that delayed advancement in the elimination of the worst forms of child labor. Examples of regressive or significantly detrimental laws, policies, or practices include lowering the minimum age for work below international standards, recruiting or using children in armed conflict, and continuing to impose administrative barriers to child labor inspections. The following points make distinctions between regression and continued law, policy, or practice:

Regression in Law, Policy, or Practice that Delayed Advancement. This type of country made meaningful efforts in a few or more relevant areas but established a regressive or significantly detrimental law, policy, or practice during the reporting period that delayed advancement in eliminating the worst forms of child labor.

Continued Law, Policy, or Practice that Delayed Advancement. This type of country made meaningful efforts in a few or more relevant areas but failed to remedy a regressive or significantly detrimental law, policy, or practice established in previous years, which delayed advancement in eliminating the worst forms of child labor.

No Advancement

Three types of countries made no advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor in 2022. The first is a country that made no meaningful efforts to advance the elimination of the worst forms of child labor during the reporting period.

The other two types of countries are those that, regardless of whether meaningful efforts in relevant areas were made, had a policy or demonstrated a practice of being complicit in the use of forced child labor in more than isolated incidents, which is considered an egregious form of exploitation. Complicity can occur when a government is involved in forced child labor at any level of government, including at the local, regional, or national level. Such incidents involve direct or proactive government action to compel children under age 18 to work. The following points make distinctions between a country making no efforts and being complicit and a country making efforts but being complicit:

No Efforts and Complicit in Forced Child Labor.

This type of country made no meaningful efforts, took no suggested actions reported in 2021, and had a policy or demonstrated a practice of being complicit in the use of forced child labor in more than isolated incidents in 2022.

Efforts Made but Complicit in Forced Child Labor.

This type of country made meaningful efforts, which may have included taking suggested actions reported in 2021 but had a policy or demonstrated a practice of being complicit in the use of forced child labor in more than isolated incidents in 2022.

No Assessment

This assessment is reserved for countries in which the population of children is either non-existent or extremely small (fewer than 50), there is no evidence of the worst forms of child labor and the country appears to have an adequate preventive legal and enforcement framework on child labor, or when a country is included in the report for the first time or receives a suggested action for the first time. This year, no assessment has been made regarding Christmas Island, Cocos (Keeling) Islands, and Wallis and Futuna.

Reference Materials—Key Concepts and Definitions

Children’s Work and Education Statistics: Sources and Definitions

In this report, 109 country profiles include a statistical table (Table 1, Statistics on Children’s Work and Education) with data on the percentage of working children, school attendance rate, percentage of children who combine school and work, and/or primary completion rate. For a smaller set of profiles, a chart lists the percentages of children who work by sector.

This appendix provides definitions and descriptions of the sources for these data and some of the strengths and weaknesses inherent within them. In a few cases, more current sources of data may be available than the ones used in this report; however, the most reliable, standardized sources available to date are used to allow for cross-country comparisons. Because reliable child labor surveys are not available for many countries, in some cases USDOL uses statistics from child labor surveys that are more than 10 years old (data from earlier than 2013). If data did not exist from the sources described below, if no other reliable and publicly available source of data exists for a country, or if data exist but have not been analyzed to allow for cross-country comparisons, this report concludes that the statistics are “unavailable.”

Working Children

Many of the statistical tables in the country profiles in this report present data on the percentage and number of working children. Data presented in the current report may differ from data that were presented in previous reports because updated data have become available.

Definition

The term “working children” describes children engaged in any productive activity for at least 1 hour during the reference period. Productive activity includes market production and certain types of non-market production, principally the production of goods and services for their own use. The work that children perform may be in the formal or informal economy, inside or outside family settings, or for pay or profit. This includes children working in domestic service outside the child’s own household for an employer, paid or unpaid. This definition is in accordance with the Resolution to Amend the 18th ICLS Resolution Concerning Statistics of Child Labor, adopted by the 20th International Conference of Labor Statisticians (ICLS) in 2018, and the ILO and UNICEF report Child Labour: Global Estimates 2020, Trends and the Road Forward. (38; 52) The 20th ICLS definition classifies working children as those engaged in any activity to produce goods or to provide services for use by others or for their own use. The definition also includes the production of additional types of services for family use, unpaid trainee work by children, volunteer work by children, and other work activities by children. Since most countries are in the process of adapting survey instruments to reflect this new definition, the definition of working children from the 18th ICLS Resolution has been used in this report.

Working Children Versus Children Engaged in Child Labor

This report presents statistics on “working children” rather than on “children involved in child labor.” These terms are defined precisely in Appendix 2, “Definitions Related to Child Labor and Forced Labor.” The definition of working children does not vary among countries and, therefore, statistics on working children are comparable across country profiles. In contrast, the definition of children involved in child labor is based on national legislation, including, for example, the minimum age for work, which varies from country to country. As a result, child labor data based on this measurement are not comparable across countries. Furthermore, these country-level statistics may not disaggregate child labor from the broader category of child work, thereby including children who work only a few hours a week in permitted light work. For the purposes of this report, ILAB is unable to clearly articulate the proportion of working children who are involved in child labor.

Data Sources and Limitations

Data are primarily from the ILO's analysis of four survey types: (1) the ILO's Statistical Information and Monitoring Program on Child Labor (SIMPOC) surveys; (2) national Labor Force Surveys (LFS); (3) UNICEF's Multiple Indicator Cluster Surveys (MICS); and (4) other national and regional household surveys, including Demographic and Health Surveys (DHS).

According to ILO researchers, typical surveys on children's work do not collect sufficiently detailed information on children's activities to accurately measure economic activity. (53) This observation was repeated in December 2008 at the 18th ICLS. A resolution adopted at the conference provides guidelines for governments on collecting child labor data. Specifically, the guidance indicates that countries can choose to use a broad framework to measure children's work and child labor that encompasses unpaid household services or countries can use a narrower definition of children's work that excludes such services, as long as the definition used is clearly specified. This resolution is contributing to the collection of more comparable data on children's involvement in non-market activities. In addition, although the 20th ICLS introduced changes to the definition of working children to align it with internationally accepted definitions of work for adults, since most countries are in the process of adapting survey instruments to reflect this new definition, the definition of working children from the 18th ICLS Resolution has been used in this report. (38; 39)

In analyzing the data from the above-mentioned surveys, the ILO attempted to apply a standard definition of children's work, although UNICEF's MICS and ILO's SIMPOC reports, for example, each use a different definition of work. As of the writing of this report, MICS reports include household chores in their definition of work, while some SIMPOC reports do not, depending on each country's basis for reporting. To the extent possible, the ILO applied a common definition of work to the micro-data described. To date, this has resulted in the individual analysis of more than 250 datasets. While every attempt was made to present a standardized child work statistic, differences across surveys have the potential to affect the comparability of statistics across countries and across years. Some of these differences are explained in greater detail here; however, in general, they include differing age groups, questionnaire content and wording, purpose of the survey, sample design, non-sampling errors, and the year of data collection.

In general, data are presented for children ages 5 to 14; however, some of the profiles present a work statistic for children ages 6 to 14, 7 to 14, or 10 to 14, depending on the age categories used in the original survey. The wording of work-related questions also may affect the results. For example, the question on work in these surveys usually refers to work during the past 7 days; however, some surveys may refer to work activities during the past 12 months, and thus they are likely to capture a higher proportion of working children than surveys with 7-day timeframes. The purpose of the survey—whether specifically to measure children's work and child labor (SIMPOC surveys) or measure labor force participation of adults—may affect estimates of children's work. (54) Sample design may also affect survey results. For example, children's work is often clustered geographically; SIMPOC surveys are designed to capture children's work in such geographic areas. As a result, estimates of working children vary across surveys that do not use the same sample design. (53) The ILO and UNICEF continue to investigate the effects of these survey differences on estimates of children’s work.

As noted, some country profiles also include the sectors in which children reportedly work. For some surveys, the sector of work was not reported by the entire sample of working children. Therefore, the distribution of children working by sector—agriculture, industry, and services—represents children with non-missing data for the sector of work. Additional information on the sectors of work reported in the chart appear in Table 1.

Percentage of Children Attending School

The percentage of children attending school is the share of all children within a specified age group that reported attending school. The ILO data described above in the section “Working Children” are used to develop country-specific school attendance statistics. To be consistent with estimates of working children, the age group for which attendance statistics are calculated for children is generally ages 5 to 14. In some cases, however, different age categories are used, usually ages 6 to 14, 7 to 14, or 10 to 14.

Percentage of Children Combining Work and School

The percentage of children who combine work and school is the share of all children within a specified age group reporting both working and attending school. The ILO data described earlier under “Working Children” are used to develop country-specific statistics on children combining work and school. The age group for which these statistics are calculated is usually for children ages 7 to 14 or 10 to 14.

Primary Completion Rate

This report uses the “gross intake ratio to the last grade of primary education” as a proxy measure for primary completion. This ratio is the total number of new entrants in the last grade of primary education, regardless of age, expressed as a percentage of the population at the theoretical entrance age to the last grade of primary education. A high ratio indicates a high degree of current primary education completion. The calculation includes all new entrants to the last grade, regardless of age. Therefore, the ratio can exceed 100 percent, due to over- and underage children who enter primary school late or early or repeat grades.

Data Sources and Limitations

Unlike the other statistics presented in the country profile data tables, which are all based on the ILO analysis described earlier, primary completion rate data are from the UNESCO Institute for Statistics. The data were downloaded on March 15, 2023, and are available at <http://data.uis.unesco.org/>. Further information on this statistic is available from the UNESCO Institute for Statistics Glossary at <http://uis.unesco.org/en/glossary>.

UNESCO uses population estimates from the United Nations Development Program (UNDP) to calculate some of the rates it publishes, including the gross intake ratio to the last grade of primary education. These population estimates change over time. The last revision that affected the statistics used in this report was in March 2023. All population-based indicators, including the gross intake ratio to the last grade of primary education, are re-calculated every year using the latest estimates. For some countries and years, when the new UNDP population estimates are found to be inconsistent with education data, related indicators are removed. All updates made to UNESCO data on the gross intake ratio to the last grade of primary education are reflected in the primary completion rate statistic included in this report.

Labor Force Calculation

This report uses data from either government-reported labor force statistics collected by the ILO or from labor force estimates by the ILO modeled on a combination of demographic and economic factors. Both sources of labor force data provide the most recent estimates for countries’ total labor force. This number is used to calculate a “sufficient number” of labor inspectors based on the country’s level of development, as determined by the UN. (55)

Country Classification

For analyses, the Development Policy and Analysis Division of the Department of Economic and Social Affairs of the United Nations Secretariat (UN DESA) classifies all countries of the world into one of four broad categories: (1) developed economies, (2) economies in transition, (3) developing economies, and (4) least developed countries. The composition of these groupings is intended to reflect basic economic country conditions. Several countries, in particular the economies in transition, have characteristics that could place them in more than one category; however, for analyses, the groupings have been made mutually exclusive. This is decided upon by the UN Economic and Social Council and, ultimately, by the General Assembly deciding on the list of least developed countries based on recommendations made by the Committee for Development Policy. The basic criteria for inclusion require that certain thresholds be met for per capita gross national income, a human assets index, and an economic vulnerability index. For the Findings on the Worst Forms of Child Labor report, “developed economies” equates to the ILO’s classification of “industrial market economies,” “economies in transition” to “transition economies,” “developing economies” to “industrializing economies,” and “least developed countries” to “less developed countries.” Countries that appear on both “developing economies” and “least developed countries” lists are considered “least developed countries” for calculating a “sufficient number” of labor inspectors. (56)

Number of Labor Inspectors

Article 10 of ILO C. 81 calls for a “sufficient number” of inspectors to do the work required. Because each country assigns different priorities of enforcement to its inspectors, there is no official definition for a sufficient number of inspectors. In 2022, the ILO updated its guidance for assessing the size of country/territory labor inspectorates to emphasize a holistic evaluation of national context rather than solely a ratio of labor inspectors to labor force size. The factors that need to be considered include the number and nature of the functions assigned to the inspection system; the number, nature, size, and situation of the workplaces liable to inspection; the number of workers; the number and complexity of legal provisions to be enforced; the material and financial resources available to the inspectorate; and the practical conditions under which visits of inspection must be carried out in order to be effective. No single measure is sufficient; however, in many countries, the available data sources are weak. The ratio of inspectors per workforce is currently the only internationally comparable indicator available. In its policy and technical advisory services, the ILO has taken as reasonable benchmarks that the number of labor inspectors in relation to workers should approach 1:10,000 in industrial market economies, 1:15,000 in industrializing economies, 1:20,000 in transition economies, and 1:40,000 in less developed countries. (57; 58)

ILO Committee of Experts on the Application of Conventions and Recommendations

The ILO CEACR examines and makes two types of comments on the application of international labor standards by states that are party to the relevant conventions. Direct requests contain the Committee’s technical comments or questions about the state’s application of a particular convention, and these requests are sent directly to governments. Observations, which are published in the Committee’s annual report, contain comments on fundamental questions raised by a state’s application of a particular convention and recommendations for the state. (58)

Glossary of Other Terms

Basic Education

Article 7(c) of ILO C. 182 requires countries to, “ensure access to free basic education.” According to the International Standard Classification of Education, “basic education” corresponds to the first 9 years of formal schooling and comprises primary and lower secondary education. Primary education is considered to be the first stage of basic education and covers 6 years of full-time schooling, with the legal age of entrance normally being no younger than age 5 or older than age 7. Primary education is designed to give pupils a sound basis in reading, writing, and mathematics, along with an elementary understanding of other subjects, such as history, geography, natural science, social science, religion, art, and music. Lower secondary education is more subject-focused and requires specialized teachers. It corresponds to about 3 years of schooling. Basic education also can include various non-formal and informal public and private educational activities offered to meet the defined basic learning needs of groups of people of all ages. (6)

Article 13 of the UN's 1966 International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights indicates that primary education should be compulsory and free to all. Secondary education, including technical and vocational education, should be available and accessible to all, and free education should be progressively introduced. Article 28 of the 1989 Convention on the Rights of the Child affirms the right of the child to an education and the state's duty to ensure that primary education is free and compulsory. (59; 60)

Bonded Labor, Debt Bondage

Bonded labor or debt bondage is, "the status or condition arising from a pledge by a debtor of his personal services or those of a person under his control as security for a debt if the value of those services as reasonably assessed is not applied towards the liquidation of the debt or the length and nature of those services are not respectively limited and defined," as defined in the UN Supplementary Convention on the Abolition of Slavery, the Slave Trade, and Institutions and Practices Similar to Slavery (1956). (43)

Bonded labor typically occurs when a person who needs a loan and has no security to offer pledges their labor, or that of someone under their control, as security for a loan. In some cases, the interest on the loan may be so high that it cannot be paid. In others, it may be deemed that the bonded individual's work repays the interest on the loan but not the principal. Thus, the loan is inherited and perpetuated, and becomes an inter-generational debt. (43)

Bonded labor is prohibited as one of the worst forms of child labor in ILO C. 182. (6)

Child Domestic Worker

A "child domestic worker" works in third-party private households under an employment relationship and engages in various tasks that include cleaning, cooking, gardening, collecting water, or caring for children and the elderly. Child domestic workers sometimes have live-in arrangements, whereby they live in their employer's household and work in exchange for room, board, and sometimes education. Child domestic workers are vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, including sexual, physical, and verbal abuse, in large part because they often depend on their employers for basic needs and work in locations hidden from public view. (61; 62)

Child Labor Elimination Projects

Since 1995, USDOL has funded over 360 projects in 99 countries. USDOL currently oversees more than $291 million in active programming to combat exploitative child labor. To date, USDOL-funded projects have provided nearly 2 million children with education and vocational training opportunities as a strategy for preventing and reducing child labor and increasing access to education in disadvantaged communities.

Child Trafficking

The UN's Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children (Palermo Protocol) states, "the recruitment, transportation, transfer, harbouring or receipt of a child for the purpose of exploitation shall be considered 'trafficking in persons' even if this does not involve any of the means set forth in subparagraph

(a) of this Article.” As such, there does not need to be abuse of power, control, coercion, or fraud present to constitute child trafficking, as the definition for adults requires. The Palermo Protocol provides a commonly accepted definition of human trafficking in Article 3(a) that trafficking in persons means, “the recruitment, transportation, transfer, harbouring or receipt of persons, by means of the threat or use of force or other forms of coercion, of abduction, of fraud, of deception, of the abuse of power or of a position of vulnerability, or of the giving or receiving of payments or benefits to achieve the consent of a person having control over another person, for the purpose of exploitation. Exploitation shall include, at a minimum, the exploitation of the prostitution of others or other forms of sexual exploitation, forced labor or services, slavery or practices similar to slavery, servitude or the removal of organs.” (63)

The trafficking of children is prohibited as a worst form of child labor in ILO C. 182, Article 3(a). (6)

Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children

Based on the 1996 Declaration and Agenda for Action of the First World Congress Against the Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children, commercial sexual exploitation of children (CSEC) is defined as, “sexual abuse by the adult and remuneration in cash or kind to the child or third person or persons.” (64) The remuneration dynamic distinguishes CSEC from the sexual abuse of a child, which does not include commercial gain; however, commercial sexual exploitation also involves abuse. The definition of CSEC includes these activities:

- Prostitution in the streets or indoors, and in such places as brothels, discotheques, massage parlors, bars, hotels, and restaurants
- Child sex tourism
- The production, promotion, and distribution of pornography involving children
- The use of children in sex shows (public or private)

ILO C. 182, Article 3(b), prohibits using, procuring, or offering a child for prostitution or for the production of pornography or for pornographic performances. (6)

Compulsory Education Age

The age up to which children and youth are legally required to attend school. (65)

Convention on the Rights of the Child

The UN’s Convention on the Rights of the Child spells out the basic rights of children, such as the right to survival; to develop to the fullest; to be protected from harmful influences, abuse, and exploitation; and to participate fully in family, cultural, and social life. The Convention protects children’s rights by setting standards in health care; education; and legal, civil, and social services. According to Article 32 of the Convention, children have the right, “to be protected from economic exploitation and from performing any work that is likely to be hazardous or to interfere with the child’s education, or to be harmful to the child’s health or physical, mental, spiritual, moral, or social development.” (59)

Hazardous Work

Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182 sets forth, “work which, by its nature or the circumstances in which it is carried out, is likely to harm the health, safety or morals of children,” as a worst form of child labor. This is colloquially referred to as “hazardous work.” Countries must determine which types of work are considered to be hazardous work by statute or regulation. ILO R. 190 includes factors for consideration in determining which types of work are hazardous. (47)

ILO Recommendation No. 190: Worst Forms of Child Labor

ILO R. 190 supplements the provisions of ILO C. 182 and provides guidance to ratifying countries regarding its implementation. It provides guidelines to assist countries in determining what types of work should be considered hazardous and thus what type of work countries should prohibit for all children as a worst form of child labor, in accordance with Article 4 of ILO C. 182. ILO R. 190 describes populations in need of specific attention regarding the worst forms of child labor, such as girls and children involved in hidden forms of work. It also provides guidance regarding specific steps that countries which have ratified ILO C. 182 should take to combat the worst forms of child labor, such as the collection and exchange of data on both the problem and best practices to address it; passage and enforcement of laws that penalize violations with criminal penalties; awareness raising about the problem; establishment of policies against the worst forms of child labor; and international cooperation through technical, legal, and other forms of assistance. (6; 47)

Illicit Activities

ILO C. 182, Article 3(c), prohibits, “the use, procuring or offering of a child for illicit activities, in particular for the production and trafficking of drugs.” Illicit activities in this context can include activities that are criminal under national law, however, the term refers to activities considered illicit under international instruments. (6) According to ILO R. 190 and the General Survey on the Fundamental Conventions Concerning Rights at Work, illicit activities can include, “activities which involve the unlawful carrying or use of firearms or other weapons,” and, “the use of children by criminal organizations for transporting weapons and carrying out arson attacks or destroying public or private property, illicit activities such as housebreaking and petty theft, and children being engaged by adults in car breaking, housebreaking, selling drugs and selling stolen goods, use of children for forced or organized begging, gambling, the unlawful carrying or use of firearms or other weapons, or for the commission of an offence or a crime using violence or the threat of violence.” (47)

Informal Sector

While the concept of the informal sector was introduced into international usage in the 1970s, it was only in 1993 at the 15th ICLS that an internationally recognized definition was established for data collection to delineate the “informal sector” as unincorporated, small, or unregistered enterprises, and the employees of those enterprises. An enterprise is unincorporated if no complete set of accounts are available that would permit a financial separation of the activities of the enterprise from that of its owners, and it produces marketable goods or services. The registration and size criteria are determined according to national circumstances and legislation, which provide a degree of flexibility in identifying the informal sector from country to country. However, all interpretations of this sector share the notion of enterprises whose activities are not covered or are insufficiently covered by law, or whose activities are not covered by law in practice, meaning that the relevant law is not applied or enforced. Workers in such enterprises often lack the benefits of regular, stable, and protected employment. Because employers in the informal sector are generally either not covered by labor laws or are not held accountable for complying with labor protections, including occupational safety measures, children who work in “hazardous” informal settings likely face increased risk of exploitation, including injury. In addition, because businesses in the informal sector are not usually included in official statistics, children working in informal sector enterprises may not be counted in labor force activity rates. (66; 67)

Light Work

This report uses the definition of light work as established in ILO C. 138, Minimum Age for Admission to Employment. Under Article 7(1) of the Convention, “National laws or regulations may permit the employment or work of persons 13 to 15 years of age on light work which is (a) not likely to be harmful to their health or development; and (b) not such as to prejudice their attendance at school, their participation in vocational orientation or training programmes approved by the competent authority, or their capacity to benefit from the instruction received.” Countries that have specified a minimum legal working age of 14 may permit the employment or work of persons ages 12 to 14 in light work as defined in Article 7(1). Under Article 7(2), countries may also permit the employment in light work of children who are at least age 15 but have not yet completed compulsory schooling. Countries permitting light work under Article 7 must specify limitations on their hours of work, as well as activities and conditions in which light work may be undertaken. (46)

Minimum Age for Work

The minimum age for work is the age at which a child can enter into work other than light work or hazardous work. ILO C. 138 states that the minimum age for admission to employment should not be less than the age of completion of compulsory schooling and should not be less than age 15, or age 14 for developing countries that specified a minimum legal age of 14 upon ratification of ILO C. 138. (46)

Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the Involvement of Children in Armed Conflict

This optional UN protocol, adopted in 2000, addresses and commits ratifying countries to take action against the involvement of children in armed conflict, which is a worst form of child labor per ILO C. 182, Article 3(a). (68)

Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography

This optional UN protocol, adopted in 2000, addresses and commits ratifying countries to prohibit the commercial sexual exploitation of children, which is a worst form of child labor as defined in ILO C. 182, Article 3(b). (6) (69)

Poverty Reduction Strategy Paper (PRSP)

This document is written by the government of a developing country with the participation of civil society to serve as the basis for concessional lending from the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund, as well as debt relief under the World Bank's Highly Indebted Poor Countries Initiative. A poverty reduction strategy paper (PRSP) should be used to measure poverty in the country, identify goals for reducing poverty, and create a spending and policy program for reaching those goals. A PRSP also should ensure that a country's macroeconomic, structural, and social policies are consistent with the objectives of poverty reduction and social development. A new PRSP must be written every 3 years to continue receiving assistance from international financial institutions such as the World Bank. (70)

Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, supplementing the United Nations Convention Against Transnational Organized Crime (Palermo Protocol)

The Palermo Protocol supplements the UN Convention Against Transnational Organized Crime and covers the trafficking of children, also delineated as a worst form of child labor under ILO C. 182, Article 3(a). (71) See "Child Trafficking" above. (6; 63)

Ratification

Ratification is a serious undertaking whereby a state formally accepts the terms of an international agreement, thus becoming legally bound to apply it. Generally, an ILO convention comes into force in a ratifying country 12 months after the government has deposited the requisite instrument of ratification. This grace period provides ILO members time to enact or modify legislation to comply with the convention before it comes into force. (45)

Slavery

Slavery is the status or condition of a person over whom any or all of the powers attaching to the right of ownership are exercised. (42)

Unpaid Household Services

For this report, the term "unpaid household services by children" refers to the domestic and personal services a child performs within the child's own household, under the following conditions: (1) for long hours; (2) in an unhealthy environment, including equipment or heavy loads; or (3) in dangerous locations. (61)

Appendix 8

Research Framework and Organization of TDA Country Profiles

Research Methods

This section describes the research methods used for data collection, as well as the sources, analysis of information, and the limitations of these methods in this report.

Data Collection and Sources

Information was gathered for this report through desk research, U.S. embassy reporting, and limited fieldwork. Information also was received from some foreign governments. Desk research consisted of an extensive review of mostly online materials, which included both primary and secondary sources. The sources included academic and independent researchers, media outlets, NGOs, international organizations, foreign governments, and U.S. government agencies. Information also was collected from U.S. government-funded technical assistance and field research projects.

Examples of the sources used in this report are the most recent available editions of country laws relevant to child labor; national-level child labor surveys; NGO reports on the nature of child labor in various countries; and UN reports, including direct requests and observations by the ILO Committee of Experts. (58)

The U.S. Department of State and U.S. embassies and consulates abroad provided important information by gathering data from contacts, conducting site visits, and reviewing local media sources. A request for information from the public was published in the Federal Register, and a copy of the request was mailed to the Washington, D.C.-based foreign embassies of the countries included in this report. (72) Data also were gathered through key informant interviews.

Analysis of Information

The existence of child labor, particularly in its worst forms, often involves violations of laws and regulations, including serious criminal violations. Information on child labor may be intentionally suppressed. Victims of the worst forms of child labor often are unable to claim their rights or even communicate the abuse they are suffering because they are traumatized, unaware of their rights under the law, or politically underrepresented or marginalized. These factors make information on the worst forms of child labor difficult to obtain. Therefore, to compile a credible and comprehensive report, ILAB uses the following criteria to assess information:

Nature of the information

Whether the information about child labor and government efforts to combat it—gathered from research, public submissions, or other sources—was relevant and probative, and covered the “worst forms of child labor” and “government efforts” as used in this report. Specific evidence of government efforts was preferred when it was available.

Date of the information

Whether the source information about child labor was no more than 5 years old. More current information was given priority, and to the extent possible, ILAB uses sources published during the reporting period. Information from sources older than 5 years was generally not considered.

In the case of child labor statistics, however, certain factors contribute to less frequent generation of new data. Because government and other efforts to address exploitative child labor take time to have an impact on national-level rates of child labor, children's involvement in such activities does not change dramatically from year to year. Child labor surveys are carried out infrequently, in part, because the child labor picture does not change frequently, although the number of surveys has increased recently. To present an overall picture of children's work in as many countries as possible, ILAB uses statistics that are, in some cases, more than 10 years old as of the writing of this report. For more information on the statistics used in this report, see "Children's Work and Education Statistics: Sources and Definitions" in Appendix 7.

In addition, in cases in which previous editions of this report have asserted that the worst forms of child labor exist in the production of goods, and in the absence of evidence that the problem has been effectively eliminated, sources more than 5 years old may be used. This practice makes the report's information on such forms of child labor consistent with USDOL's List of Goods Produced by Child Labor or Forced Labor, as mandated by the Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act of 2005 (TVPRA). Statements that the worst forms of child labor exist in the production of goods will be removed when there is evidence that the problem has been effectively eliminated.

Source of the information

Whether the information, either from primary or secondary sources, was from a source in which methodology, prior publications, degree of familiarity and experience with international labor standards, or reputation for accuracy and objectivity warranted a determination that it was relevant and probative.

Extent of the corroboration

Whether the information about the use of child labor was corroborated by other sources.

Limitations

While data on the worst forms of child labor and information about government efforts to provide remediation are improving, data are still insufficient to provide a complete understanding of the problem. A lack of information may create the impression that a country has less serious problems with the worst forms of child labor than it actually has. At the same time, a dearth of information may create the impression that a government is doing less than it should when, in fact, efforts to address child labor exist, but are simply unreported or unpublicized. Although countries with open and available information may sometimes appear to have greater problems relative to other countries, this may not be the case. In fact, countries that collect information on child labor are in a better position to eliminate the problem than countries in which such information is suppressed, because with better information, they can target policies and programs toward identified problem areas to achieve maximum impact.

Due to an inability to travel to each country covered in the report, ILAB relies on U.S. embassies, internet research, and submissions received in response to the Federal Register notice to gather primary and secondary sources of information. For countries where internet access and technology are limited, there may be less information available online. Countries with more closed government processes and less civil society participation also may have less information readily available. When ILAB is unable to find information about report topics, including the content of important laws or enforcement efforts, this is noted in the report.

Most of ILAB's online research is conducted in English; however, we also gather and read source materials written in Spanish, French, and, to a limited extent, Portuguese, Russian, and Arabic. Materials other than laws written in other languages are generally not reviewed.

Despite ILAB's best efforts to cover relevant topics as comprehensively as possible, this report cannot address every salient issue that may affect children’s involvement in child labor. For example, there are many factors that affect whether a household sends a child to school, to work, or both. A lack of available information, however, limits the discussion of these issues for some countries. In these cases, we note that the profile’s information is incomplete. Furthermore, ILAB chose to limit its reporting of education to the issue of access, and generally does not cover the quality of education because research on the relationship between the quality of education and child labor is lacking.

Organization and Content of Country Profiles

ILAB organizes country profiles to track the types of efforts outlined in the TDA Conference Committee report. In this report, the Conference Committee indicated that the President should consider certain criteria when determining whether a country has met its obligation under the Generalized System of Preferences (GSP) program to implement its international commitments to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. (3) Each country profile contains an introductory paragraph that provides an assessment of government actions to advance efforts in eliminating the worst forms of child labor, six sections that describe the problem and different aspects of government efforts to address it, and a set of suggested actions. The following section describes the content in country profiles.

Content of Country Profiles

Each country profile begins with a single-paragraph overview of 2022 and a statement identifying the assessment level assigned to the country for 2022. Following the statement of assessment, the summary includes meaningful efforts taken by a government to implement its commitment to eliminating child labor. The summary also notes where children are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, or if no worst forms of child labor exist, where they are engaged in tasks for which there is evidence that such tasks fall into the categories suggested by ILO R. 190 for hazardous work—referred to as “dangerous tasks” in this report. Depending on the situation in the country, the summary also may discuss child labor that does not rise to the level of hazardous work. Finally, the paragraph highlights areas in which key gaps in government efforts remain.

Section I: Prevalence and Sectoral Distribution of Child Labor

The first section of each country profile provides, to the extent that information is available, a comprehensive picture of child labor in the country. This section begins with a review of available data on working children and school attendance, followed by a presentation of the most common sectors and activities in which children are engaged. The narrative also provides information about the nature and conditions of the work, specific populations that are particularly vulnerable to child labor, government complicity in the use of forced child labor, circumstances that make accessing education difficult, and events during the year that destabilized the country.

Section II: Legal Framework for Child Labor

The second section of the country profile addresses the second criteria included in the TDA Conference Committee report concerning whether the country has, “adequate laws and regulations proscribing the worst forms of child labor.” (73) This section describes a country’s legal framework with regard to child labor and assesses the adequacy of that legal framework by comparing it, in general, to the standards set forth in ILO C. 182 and ILO C. 138, and to other international instruments, including the Palermo Protocol and the Convention on the Rights of the Child and its Optional Protocols. ILAB considered whether the laws criminally prohibited the categorical worst forms of child labor in ILO C. 182, Articles 3(a)–(c), as suggested by ILO R. 190. In line with the ILO Committee of Experts, ILAB considered any law that could be used to prohibit child labor, including its worst forms. ILAB also considered whether the country had ratified key international instruments related to child labor.

It is important to note that ILAB analyzes a country's legal framework regarding compliance with international standards, regardless of whether a problem exists in a country. This is to ensure that legal frameworks also serve as preventive mechanisms. For example, even in the case of a country that does not have a problem with the use of children in illicit activities, if there are no laws to prohibit the use of children in illicit activities, the report points out a gap when comparing laws on this issue against international standards.

The corresponding table indicates where the legal framework meets international standards and where it does not. For example, the table indicates whether the country's minimum age for work complies with the international standard.

ILAB assesses whether a country has created a hazardous work list and whether the types of hazardous work prohibited are comprehensive, based on whether there is evidence that children engage in work which, according to ILO R. 190, may be hazardous. Because the standards on the minimum age for work in ILO C. 138 provide a foundation for protections against the worst forms of child labor, ILAB uses the standards embodied in that convention to assess each country's minimum age for admission to work and the age up to which education is compulsory. ILO C. 138 establishes that countries should set a minimum age of 15 for work, or age 14 for countries with less-developed economies where the country has specified an age of 14 upon ratification of the convention. For countries that permit children to engage in light work, ILAB also indicates whether the country has set a minimum age of 13 for light work, or age 12 for less-developed economies, and whether legislation related to light work determines permitted activities, and the number of hours per week and the conditions under which light work may be conducted.

ILAB assesses whether a country's laws criminally prohibit slavery and practices similar to slavery, including debt bondage and forced labor, as well as human trafficking. In accordance with the Palermo Protocol's standard for child trafficking, ILAB reviews statutes criminalizing international and domestic trafficking for both commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor, including whether the legal protections prohibit the five actions that comprise the human trafficking process—recruiting, harboring, transporting, transferring, and receiving persons.

For the issue of commercial sexual exploitation of children, ILAB assesses whether a country's laws criminally prohibit the using, procuring, and offering of children for prostitution; the production of child pornography; and the use of children in pornographic performances. For illicit activities, ILAB assesses whether laws criminally prohibit the using, procuring, and offering of a child in the production and trafficking of drugs.

In all cases in which countries maintain a military force, ILAB assesses whether the country prohibited the compulsory military recruitment of children and whether the minimum age for voluntary military recruitment is at least age 16, with certain safeguards to ensure voluntariness. For all countries, ILAB assesses whether the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups is criminally prohibited, even if non-state armed groups are not present in the country.

ILAB assesses whether the age for compulsory education aligns with the minimum age for work, in accordance with ILO C. 138, which states that the minimum age for work should not be less than the age up to which education is compulsory, and that it should be at least age 15, or age 14 for developing countries. However, the opposite situation—in which the minimum age for work is higher than the upper cut-off age for compulsory education—also should be avoided because when children are not required to be in school or permitted to work, they are susceptible to the worst forms of child labor.

Section III: Enforcement of Laws on Child Labor

The third section of the country profile addresses the second and third criteria included in the TDA Conference Committee report concerning whether the country has, “adequate laws and regulations for the implementation and enforcement of such measures,” and has, “established formal institutional mechanisms to investigate and address complaints relating to allegations of the worst forms of child labor.” (73) This section describes the role of government agencies in enforcing laws relevant to child labor, including its worst forms, and reports on labor law and criminal law enforcement efforts during the reporting period.

In this section, ILAB analyzes whether and to what degree the country defines enforcement agency roles and investigates and addresses complaints related to allegations of child labor. Because ILO C. 182 only discusses enforcement to a limited extent, other international standards and practices also are considered as general evaluation guidelines, including from ILO C. 81 and ILO C. 129 on Labor Inspection and Labor Inspection in Agriculture, respectively. (51; 74) To the extent possible, ILAB assesses whether the country has taken these actions:

- Established labor inspection systems, including a functioning labor inspectorate.
- Provided sufficient funding and resources to enforce child labor laws and regulations.
- Employed a sufficient number of inspectors to enforce the country’s child labor laws and regulations.
- Provided sufficient training for inspectors, including initial training for new employees, training on new laws related to child labor, and refresher courses.
- Developed and implemented an adequate labor inspection strategy that allows for different types of onsite inspections of worksites—such as routine, targeted, complaint-driven, and unannounced—and conducted inspections with sufficient frequency and in all relevant sectors.

- Provided sufficient authority to the labor inspectorate to penalize child labor violations and follow through with sanctions, where appropriate.
- Published information on specific inspection results and fines or sanctions imposed for violation of child labor laws and regulations, including the worst forms of child labor.
- Established a complaint mechanism for labor violations.
- Set up a reciprocal referral mechanism between labor authorities and social services.

Although ILAB conducts research and requests law enforcement information on the topics for this year’s report, the information is not always available. For example, in many cases, ILAB does not have enough information to determine whether the number of inspectors was sufficient for the country. Only in certain situations, where a country’s government acknowledges that it does not have a sufficient number of labor inspectors or ILAB obtains information indicating that the number of labor inspectors is insufficient relative to the size of the country’s workforce, does ILAB issue findings of insufficiency. (75)

In addition, ILO R. 190 states that countries should criminally prohibit the categorical worst forms of child labor as set forth in ILO C. 182, Articles 3(a)–(c). (6; 47) Therefore, the report also assesses whether criminal law enforcement in the country has taken these actions:

- Established criminal investigation systems.
- Provided sufficient funding and resources to enforce the worst forms of child labor laws and regulations.
- Provided sufficient training for investigators, including initial training for new employees, training on new laws related to the worst forms of child labor, and refresher courses.

- Conducted a sufficient number of investigations related to the worst forms of child labor.
- Published information on specific investigation results and violations, prosecutions, and convictions related to the worst forms of child labor.
- Imposed penalties for violations related to the worst forms of child labor.
- Established a reciprocal referral mechanism between criminal authorities and social services.

Section IV: Coordination of Government Efforts on Child Labor

The fourth section of the country profile also addresses the third criterion included in the TDA Conference Committee report—whether the country has established, “formal institutional mechanisms to investigate and address complaints relating to allegations of the worst forms of child labor.” (73) This section provides information on key institutions in the country charged with coordinating overall efforts to combat child labor, including its worst forms. Although the TDA Conference Committee report speaks only to whether such mechanisms are in place with regard to investigation and complaints of the worst forms of child labor, ILO C. 182, Article 5, states that, “[e]ach Member shall, after consultation with employers’ and workers’ organizations, establish or designate appropriate mechanisms to monitor the implementation of the provisions giving effect to this Convention.” ILAB applies this concept of monitoring to all provisions of the Convention, not just those directly related to the enforcement of child labor laws. However, because the term “monitor” is often associated exclusively with enforcement activities, ILAB uses the term “coordinate” to describe this function.

Section V: Government Policies on Child Labor

The fifth section of the country profile provides information on the fourth criterion in the TDA

Conference Committee report—whether the country has, “a comprehensive policy for the elimination of the worst forms of child labor.” (73) This section describes a country’s key policies and plans to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

ILAB uses the framework provided in ILO R. 190, Article 15(f), which illustrates measures that countries might take to combat the worst forms of child labor, such as, “encouraging the development of policies by undertakings to promote the aims of the Convention.” (47) In ILO C. 182 and in comments from the ILO Committee of Experts, the terms “programs” and “plans of action” are often used interchangeably. Indeed, in some cases, it is difficult to distinguish among “a policy,” “a plan,” and “a program.” (6; 58) For the TDA Conference Committee report, a policy on child labor is defined as a framework that lays out general principles that are intended to guide a government’s actions on child labor. Although policies may call for the passage of new laws and the establishment of new programs, the actual adoption of laws and program implementation are reported in the “Legal Framework for the Worst Forms of Child Labor” or the “Social Programs to Address Child Labor” sections of the profiles.

Specifically, ILAB assesses whether governments have achieved the following activities:

- Established specific child labor policies, any related development policies that explicitly incorporate the issue of child labor, or any related development policies that do not explicitly target child labor but that could have an impact on the problem (because so few governments distinguish between worst forms of child labor and child labor, any policy on child labor, whether targeted toward the worst forms of child labor or not, may be reported).
- Ensured that these policies include specific action plans, assign responsibilities, establish goals, and set timetables.
- Implemented established policies and plans.

Section VI: Social Programs to Address Child Labor

The sixth section of each country profile provides information on the fifth criterion in the TDA Conference Committee report—whether social programs exist in the country, “to prevent the engagement of children in the worst forms of child labor and assist in the removal of children engaged in the worst forms of child labor.” (73) This section of the country profile reports on key programs focused on child labor and the worst forms of child labor because countries often do not distinguish between the two when creating child labor programs. This section of the profile also reports on programs that focus on child labor specifically, and programs that address poverty, education, and other related matters that could have a beneficial impact on child labor. Only programs launched or implemented during the reporting period are included in this section.

ILAB generally considers the implementation of projects through international organizations to be government efforts because the projects can be carried out only with the consent of the government, and such efforts are sometimes considered part of a country’s national budget.

ILAB applies the standards embodied in Articles 6 and 7 of ILO C. 182 to assess country programs to combat child labor. ILO R. 190 also is considered to determine the types of efforts that governments might make, such as giving special attention to girls, providing training to employers and workers, and raising awareness. With this in mind, ILAB assesses whether governments have taken the following actions:

- Participated in any social programs to combat child labor, including programs aimed at directly preventing and withdrawing children from participation in child labor.
- Implemented social programs with sufficient resources to combat the scope and magnitude of the child labor problem at issue.
- Targeted at-risk populations.
- Implemented social programs successfully and sustainably.

Section VII: Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

The last section of the country profile is a set of suggested actions. These suggested actions serve as a roadmap of efforts that individual countries can follow to more fully address the worst forms of child labor. When the same suggested action has been provided in successive years, the years in which it was previously provided are listed in the table.

Framework for Country Assessments

Objective for Country Assessments

ILAB is using an assessment tool to clearly indicate and highlight the status of efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor by each country that benefits from U.S. trade preferences.

Research Question Guiding Country Assessments

The assessment answers the question “To what extent did the beneficiary country advance efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor during the reporting period?”

Scope of Country Assessment

As discussed, the TDA Conference Committee report outlines the following six criteria that the President is asked to consider in determining whether a country is implementing its international commitments to eliminate the worst forms of child labor:

- Whether the country has adequate laws and regulations proscribing the worst forms of child labor
- Whether the country has adequate laws and regulations for the implementation and enforcement of such measures

- Whether the country has established formal institutional mechanisms to investigate and address the worst forms of child labor
- Whether the country has a comprehensive policy for the elimination of the worst forms of child labor
- Whether social programs exist in the country to prevent the engagement of children in the worst forms of child labor and assist in the removal of children engaged in the worst forms of child labor
- Whether the country is making continual progress toward eliminating the worst forms of child labor

The country assessment tool is intended to inform the sixth criterion—whether the country is “making continual progress toward eliminating the worst forms of child labor.” (73) In preparing the assessments, ILAB evaluates the first five criteria, grouping them into the same five areas addressed in the individual country profiles: laws and regulations, enforcement, coordination, policies, and social programs. The assessment is based on an analysis of the status of each country’s efforts in these five areas considered as a whole and compared to the country’s prior efforts. The assessments do not take into account the impact of government actions on the problem, or whether they have a documented effect on eliminating child labor. This type of analysis would require rigorous impact evaluations and assessments based on data from solid research designs, which is beyond the scope of this report. It is important to note that the assessment is not intended to reflect a determination of “whether a country has implemented its commitments to eliminate the worst forms of child labor.” That determination is reserved for the President.

Method for Determining a Country Assessment

Each country profile in this report identifies a set of suggested actions for governments to take to advance efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The implementation—or lack of implementation—of these suggested actions establishes a baseline or point of reference from which to assess a country’s advancement. These actions, in combination with other efforts undertaken by a country, were considered when assessing the level of a country’s advancement during the current reporting period and in comparison with the previous reporting period.

After identifying and assessing a country’s efforts, ILAB considers the significance of the efforts undertaken during the reporting period—actions that could have an impact on eliminating the worst forms of child labor—and the extent to which these efforts addressed the first five TDA criteria, outlined above, in a limited or meaningful manner during the reporting period. In addition, ILAB reviews whether the government established or failed to remedy a regressive or significantly detrimental law, policy, or practice that delayed advancement in eliminating child labor. Finally, ILAB also examines whether countries had a policy or demonstrated a practice of being complicit in forced child labor in more than isolated incidents at the national, regional, or local level.

To promote consistency and transparency, and to operationalize these first five TDA criteria, each country’s efforts are analyzed according to a uniform set of guidance questions related to the five general areas of laws and regulations, enforcement, coordination, policies, and social programs. Detailed information is given in “TDA Guidance Questions.”

Enforcement of Laws on the Worst Forms of Child Labor

TDA Conference Report Criteria:

- Whether the country has adequate laws and regulations for the implementation and enforcement of such measures
- Whether the country has established formal institutional mechanisms to investigate and address the worst forms of child labor

In this section of the country profiles, ILAB analyzes whether, or to what degree, a country has defined enforcement agency roles, conducted routine and targeted inspections, and unannounced inspections, and investigated and addressed complaints related to allegations of the worst forms of child labor. The analysis is based on the following guidance questions.

Guidance Questions

- Does the country have a labor inspectorate?
- Does the country have labor inspectors? Are its labor inspectors public servants as opposed to contractors?
- What was the amount of funding for the labor inspectorate? Was there an increase or decrease in the funding and resources to enforce child labor laws and regulations, and were these resources adequate given the incidence of child labor in the country?
- Was there an increase or reduction in the number of labor inspectors to enforce child labor laws and regulations, and was the number of labor inspectors adequate given the size of the country's workforce?
- Did the country offer initial training to new labor inspectors and investigators, including specialized training on child labor; training on new laws related to child labor, including its worst forms; and refresher courses?
- Did the labor inspectorate fail to conduct labor inspections during the reporting period?*
- Does the labor inspectorate lack legal authorization to conduct unannounced inspections?*
- Did the inspectorate conduct unannounced inspections?
- Did the government develop and implement a labor inspection strategy that allowed for different types of onsite inspections of worksites, such as routine, targeted, complaint-driven, or unannounced?
- Were inspections conducted with sufficient frequency and in all relevant sectors?

- Did the government provide the labor inspectorate with sufficient authority to sanction child labor violations?
- Did the country make available information on labor law enforcement efforts related to child labor, including the number of labor inspections conducted at worksites and by desk review, the number of child labor violations found, and the number of child labor violations for which penalties were imposed and collected?

- Did the government ensure that all children engaged in the worst forms of child labor were protected from inappropriate incarceration, penalties, or physical harm?
- Did the country establish or fail to remedy a regressive or significantly detrimental law enforcement practice that delayed its advancement in the elimination of child labor?*

* A “Yes” response likely means that the country will automatically receive an assessment of Minimal Advancement or No Advancement.

Coordination of Government Efforts on the Worst Forms of Child Labor

TDA Conference Report Criterion:

- Whether the country has established formal institutional mechanisms to investigate and address complaints relating to allegations of the worst forms of child labor

In this section of the country profiles, ILAB analyzes whether, or to what degree, the country has an institution charged with coordinating overall efforts to combat child labor, including its worst forms. The analysis is based on the following guidance questions.

Guidance Questions

- Does the government have an agency or committee created to coordinate government efforts to combat the worst forms of child labor? Did it create such an agency or committee during the reporting period?
- Does the agency or committee address all sectors of child labor that are prevalent in the country, or does it address only certain sectors?
- Did such an agency or committee meet regularly and take actions, or did it not meet regularly and take few or no actions?

Government Policies on the Worst Forms of Child Labor

TDA Conference Report Criterion:

- Whether the country has a comprehensive policy for the elimination of the worst forms of child labor

Guidance Questions

- Did the government establish any new policies or plans that specifically address the worst forms of child labor or any one of the worst forms of child labor?

- Did the government incorporate the worst forms of child labor specifically as an issue to be addressed in poverty reduction, development, educational, or other social policies, such as poverty reduction strategy papers?
- If the country established any of the above policies or plans, do they designate responsibilities, establish goals, and set timelines?
- Did the government effectively implement existing policies and plans?
- Did the country establish or fail to remedy a regressive or significantly detrimental policy that delayed its advancement in the elimination of child labor?*

* A “Yes” response likely means that the country will automatically receive an assessment of Minimal Advancement or No Advancement.

- Did the government make efforts to reduce children’s vulnerability to the worst forms of child labor by addressing factors such as
  - ◆ country- and region-specific practices that make children vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, and
  - ◆ barriers to education, such as a lack of teachers; lack of schools or inadequate facilities; lack of infrastructure to access schools; lack of transportation; violence, including physical and sexual abuse; birth registration requirements; and the charging of school fees?
- Are the country’s programs sufficient to combat particular forms of child labor, considering the scope and magnitude of those problems?
- Do the programs provide services directly to children?
- Do the programs adequately target at-risk populations?
- Were the programs fully funded?
- Are the programs meeting their goals?
- Are the program efforts sustainable?
- Did existing government programs improve or worsen in quality or effectiveness compared with the previous year?
- Did the country establish or fail to remedy a regressive or significantly detrimental social program or other practice that delayed its advancement in the elimination of child labor?*

Country Profiles

In 2022, Afghanistan made no advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The humanitarian crisis following the Taliban takeover in August 2021 resulted in an increase in the prevalence of child labor, including its worst forms, and exacerbated existing child labor risks for girls. In addition, the COVID-19 pandemic, drought conditions, and worsening economic conditions further exacerbated child labor, child marriage, and child trafficking in the country. During the reporting period, the Taliban actively recruited and used children as part of their security forces. Furthermore, authorities considered some child trafficking victims, especially those engaged in bacha bazi or in armed conflict, as criminals, housing them in juvenile detention centers and subjecting them to torture and other forms of ill treatment rather than referring them to victim support services. Children in Afghanistan are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in armed conflict, forced labor in the production of bricks and carpets, and commercial sexual exploitation. The government lacks a mechanism to impose penalties for child labor violations and sufficient programs to address situations of child labor or prevent its occurrence. In addition, Afghan law does not sufficiently criminalize forced labor, debt bondage, or the commercial sexual exploitation of girls.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

The humanitarian crisis following the Taliban takeover in August 2021 resulted in an increase in the prevalence of child labor, including its worst forms. (5,6,26-28) In addition, the COVID-19 pandemic, drought conditions, and worsening economic conditions further exacerbated child labor, child marriage, and child trafficking in the country. (5,6,16,23,26,29,30) Of all the sectors in which Afghan children work, carpet weaving is the sector with the largest number of child laborers, particularly girls between the ages of 11 and 15. (5,31) Many of these children suffer respiratory ailments. (28,32)

Children in Afghanistan are recruited and used as child soldiers. (6,16,24) According to the UN, the Taliban has dramatically increased the number of child soldiers in their ranks. (6) Dire economic conditions have made children more vulnerable to recruitment. The Taliban usually recruits boys between the ages of 14 and 17, and 97 percent of these become part of the Taliban’s security forces. (6,16,23,25) In 2021, the Haqqani Network, Gulbuddin Hekmatyar’s Hizb-I Islami, and the Islamic State of Iraq and the Khorasan Province all recruited child soldiers in Afghanistan. However, research was unable to confirm if this practice continued in 2022. (16,33) Additionally, in recent years, low rates of birth registration and the falsification of identity documents contributed to the prevalence of child soldiers by making it difficult to determine a recruit’s age. (34) Observers reported that some officials accepted bribes to produce false identity documents indicating that the recipient boys were older than age 18. (17,34)

Boys in Afghanistan continued to be subjected to commercial sexual exploitation through the practice of bacha bazi, which typically entails keeping a male or transgender child for the purpose of sexual gratification. (5,6,16) Some boys were sold into the practice by their families or abducted from the street, including by police officers. (16,35) Children subjected to bacha bazi often become further victimized by the threat of violence when returning to their families, necessitating the placement of these child victims in rehabilitation centers. (5) The suspension of international aid after August 2021 significantly impacted bacha bazi victims’ access to rehabilitation services. (6,26,36) According to media and NGO reports, many of these cases went unreported or were referred to traditional mediation, which often allowed perpetrators to re-offend. Cases were further under-reported because the stigma associated with these crimes prevented the vast majority of child victims from bringing cases forward to law enforcement or seeking care, especially when the alleged perpetrators were members of the police force. (6,37)

Girls from impoverished families are forced into marriage with adult men in order for the girls’ families to obtain dowries. These girls are often subsequently forced into carpet weaving and required to provide their earnings to their husbands. (5,6,16,26,38,39) Girls are also sold to men in India, Iran, and Pakistan and subsequently exploited sexually or in domestic servitude. (16) Meanwhile, girls from China, Iran, Pakistan, the Philippines, and Tajikistan are sometimes trafficked to Afghanistan for the purpose of commercial sexual exploitation. (16,40) Most human trafficking victims in Afghanistan are children, some of whom are forced into brick production or the production of illegal drugs to settle family debts. (5,16,22) Boys, especially those traveling unaccompanied, are particularly vulnerable to human trafficking, including for work in agriculture and construction. (41,42) Children's families may pay intermediaries to send children for labor abroad, where they are subsequently subjected to labor and sex trafficking in Iran, Pakistan, and parts of Europe. (43)

During the reporting period, and due to the effects of poverty and on-going military conflict, roughly half of Afghanistan's children did not attend school; as many as 1.9 million children either engaged in or were subjected to work. Moreover, after August 2021, school-age girls were not allowed to attend classes beyond the sixth grade in most provinces. (5,6,30,44) During the reporting period, the Taliban further banned Afghan girls and women from attending university. (6,45) The requirement for women to be escorted by male relatives (mahram) continues not only to impact women and girls' freedom of movement but also inhibits their access to education. (6,46) In some cases, girls faced deliberate militant attacks against their community and girls' schools, limiting their access to education. (47,48) Additional barriers to education for children included displacement of populations due to conflict, the use of schools as military bases, living long distances from schools, school-related fees, lack of security, lack of female teachers in girls' schools, and the lack of identity documentation. (6,19,23,48-50)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Afghanistan has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

Afghanistan has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Afghanistan's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the lack of criminal prohibitions against the commercial sexual exploitation of children.

* Country has no conscription (58)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (59)

The Taliban have not made a clear pronouncement on whether the group would follow modified versions of either Afghanistan’s 1964 or 2004 constitution until it produces a new constitution, making it unclear the degree to which prior elements of the legal system remain in effect. Simultaneously, the Taliban have conveyed that prior laws remain in effect unless they violate the Taliban interpretation of sharia, as determined by Taliban courts. (60)

The Afghan Labor Law’s minimum age provision prohibits those who have not completed age 18 from being “recruited as a worker.” (51) However, the law defines “worker” as a person who is “recruited based on a definite contract,” meaning that the minimum age provision does not apply to those in informal employment. Afghan law does not sufficiently criminalize practices similar to slavery, including debt bondage. (51,52) The Penal Code criminalizes the use of male or transgender children in bacha bazi, criminalizes forcing children to dance, and criminalizes the forced use of girls in prostitution. However, the legal framework does not criminalize the use of boys or non-forced use of girls in prostitution, and it does not criminalize the use of children in pornographic performances other than dancing. (52,53,55)

Children in Afghanistan are required to attend school only up to age 15. This standard makes children between the ages of 15 and 17 vulnerable to child labor, as they are not required to attend school but are not legally permitted to work without restriction on hours and times of work. (51,52,57)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

Afghanistan has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Child Protection Action Network (CPAN)	Operates as a coalition of agencies, NGOs, and community and religious leaders. Receives complaints of child labor, investigates such cases, refers victims to NGO and government shelters that provide social services, provides case management services, and issues warnings or refers criminal cases to the Attorney General's Office (AGO). (19,61) Not all provinces have a CPAN chapter. The capacity of CPAN chapters is not uniform or based on need, and the type of intervention depends on members of a particular CPAN chapter and resources available. (15) In addition, a person wishing to file a complaint to the CPAN must specify in writing the precise legal statute for the labor violation, making it nearly impossible for most citizens to report labor law offenses. (61) Limited training and resources also hinder prompt government response to complaints about child labor. (19) Research was unable to determine whether the networks remained active during the reporting period.
Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs (MoLSA)	Responds to complaints of child labor, child trafficking, and child sexual exploitation; refers cases to the AGO and NGO shelters; and operates a shelter for human trafficking victims in Kabul. (15) Research was unable to determine whether the Kabul shelter remained in operation.
Ministry of Interior	Enforces laws related to child trafficking, the use of children in illicit activities, and child sexual exploitation. (15) Research was unable to determine enforcement activities undertaken during the reporting period.

The extent to which relevant agencies are carrying out the enforcement activities mandated by the pre-August 15, 2021, government—or whether these agencies continue to exist at all—is unknown. (6)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, research did not find information on whether labor law enforcement agencies in Afghanistan took actions to address child labor. (5)

In 2022, information about the number of labor inspectors was unavailable. Before the takeover by the Taliban, government officials, NGOs, and UNICEF acknowledged that the number of labor inspectors was insufficient; this likely remains the case. (19) Moreover, sources indicate that labor inspections took place only in the capital, Kabul, prior to the Taliban takeover. It is unclear whether inspections continued after the Taliban takeover in August 2021; the international community did not supply support to labor inspectors after that time. (6,19,30) Although Afghanistan's labor code designates the Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs (MoLSA) as the entity with labor law enforcement authority, before mid-2021, the Ministry lacked implementing regulations and labor law enforcement funding, leaving inspectors with no mechanism to assess penalties and without offices equipped with modern technologies and means of transportation, limiting their ability to carry out inspections. (48)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, research did not find information on whether criminal law enforcement agencies in Afghanistan took actions to address child labor.

After August 2021, the United Nations confirmed the continued presence of unknown numbers of children detained without regard for age with adults in prisons and juvenile rehabilitation centers. Although reports confirm the Taliban has detained and punished children found engaged in child labor, research was unable to verify the conditions of these detentions and the scope of punitive measures imposed. (6,23)

Prior to the Taliban takeover, child victims of human trafficking were routinely prosecuted and convicted of unlawful acts that traffickers compelled them to commit—and this practice is likely to have continued during the reporting period. (6,16,17) Male victims of child trafficking, especially those engaged in bacha bazi or in armed conflict, were sometimes referred to juvenile detention or rehabilitation facilities on criminal charges, instead of being referred to appropriate victim support services. (17,19,21,63) Under the Ghani administration, the government arrested, detained, and prosecuted for terrorism-related crimes children younger than age 12 who had been forcibly recruited by non-state armed groups. Furthermore, authorities housed some child trafficking victims in juvenile detention centers, sometimes for several years. (49) Such children were considered criminals even after being transferred to rehabilitation centers. (17,35) In past years, the UN reported that some of these children were subjected to torture and ill treatment. (63,64)

In 2022, research was unable to determine whether the Taliban carried out criminal investigations in alleged instances of human trafficking. In addition, security agencies and the Ministry of Justice did not have a reciprocal referral mechanism to ensure that child victims of human trafficking and other forms of child labor receive social services. (6,15,19)

The Taliban has said that the Ministry of Interior’s anti-trafficking in persons offices have been inoperable since the 2021 takeover, and that all computer systems, data, and staff in those offices are gone. These offices have yet to be restored as of the end of the reporting period. (5,6) Due to assistance restrictions, the international community has been able to provide only limited resources to support child trafficking victims. (6,30)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

Afghanistan has an established mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including lack of utilization of previously established coordinating bodies.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Commission on Protection of Child Rights	Monitors and protects children's rights established under the Law on Protection of Child Rights and strengthens national coordination on child protection. Participants include representatives from the AGO, the Afghanistan Independent Human Rights Commission, the Ministry of Education, and other bodies. (65,66) Includes an inter-ministerial technical committee, chaired by the MoLSA Minister, to ensure that the Child Act is operational at the provincial and district levels. (65) Research was unable to determine whether this committee was active during the reporting period.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

Afghanistan has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that may hinder efforts to address child labor, including lack of implementation of previously established policies and strategies.

Policy	Description & Activities
Labor Policies	The National Labor Policy includes objectives to eliminate the worst forms of child labor, such as those involving hazardous activities; to pass legislation prohibiting child labor; and to effectively enforce child labor laws. (68) The National Child Labor Strategy and Action Plan aims to eliminate the worst forms of child labor by 2025 and all child labor by 2030. Makes recommendations to improve social protections and oversight. Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period. (69) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.
National Anti-Trafficking in Persons Action Plan	Organizes Afghanistan's response to human trafficking, including bacha bazi , with a three-pronged approach: mandates the National Child Protection Committee to find and respond to bacha bazi cases among Afghan civil servants; encourages the implementation of laws, the prevention of child recruitment, and the reporting of corruption by the Ministry of Defense, the Ministry of Interior, and the National Directorate of Security; and oversees the production of annual or semiannual interagency progress reports on addressing trafficking in persons. (67) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.
Protection Strategies Related to Child Labor	The National Strategy for Children at Risk creates a framework to provide social services to at-risk children and their families, and guides donors in contributing toward a comprehensive child protection system. Focuses specifically on working children, victims of child trafficking, child soldiers, and other children affected by conflict. (69) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period. The Policy for the Protection of Children in Armed Conflict protects children from recruitment and sexual exploitation in the armed forces and provides services to children rescued from engagement in armed conflict. Assigns the Ministry of Defense and the Afghan National Police (ANP) with monitoring that children's rights are safeguarded and coordinating with CPAN chapters and the Afghanistan Independent Human Rights Commission. (70) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.

Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement policies related to child labor during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, Afghanistan had programs that include the goal of preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including lack of implementation.

Program	Description & Activities
Child Protection Units (CPUs) of the Afghan National Police (ANP)†	Units located within ANP recruitment centers to ensure that children are not recruited to join armed conflict. Operate in all provinces. (19) CPUs inspect e-tazkeera (ID cards) and compare them against the physical appearance of applicants; however, Afghanistan did not have sufficient CPU reporting channels to identify children, prevent them from joining the security forces, or provide shelter, services, and family reintegration. (71,72) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this program during the reporting period or if CPUs are even possible following the Taliban takeover.
Juvenile Rehabilitation Center†	Provides educational, social, and psychological support, and vocational training in Kabul to children who were previously engaged in armed conflict. (73,74) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this program during the reporting period.
Asia Regional Child Labor Program (2019–2023)	Funded by ILO and implemented with UNICEF and the Institute for Development Studies, works with Afghanistan to ensure that policies on child labor align with ILO conventions while strengthening local and national Plans of Action. Contains a special focus on internally displaced persons and returnee migrants, along with other groups vulnerable to child labor and human trafficking. (75) ILO stated that activities under this program within Afghanistan were suspended. (30)

REFERENCES ON FILE

In 2022, Albania made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government continued to support the work of the Special Anti-Corruption and Organized Crime Court, which was established in 2019 and has the power to hear cases involving human trafficking if linked to organized crime (including cases involving children). Additionally, during the reporting period the government supported policies focused on improving children's rights, including the National Agenda for the Rights of the Child and the National Strategy on Education. However, children in Albania are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including use in illicit activities and forced begging, and in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in scavenging, including scavenging for chromium near mines. Albania's legal framework governing child labor also does not explicitly prohibit using, procuring, or offering children for illicit activities.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Children are sometimes forced into labor, such as begging and scavenging. (8,22,25) To contribute to family income, some Roma and Balkan Egyptian children are forced to engage in street begging or the collection of recyclables. (5,26) In addition, some children informally scavenge chromium around hazardous mines where debris from mine tunnels is found, and they sometimes carry these heavy rocks for miles. (5) Children are also subjected to trafficking, both domestic and abroad to EU countries, for commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor. (8,22,25) Domestic child trafficking and forced begging have continued in recent years, particularly during the tourist season. (8,22,24) Albania lacks recent, comprehensive data on child labor, including in the agriculture and construction sectors. (5)

Children in Albania face a number of barriers to accessing education, which increases their vulnerability to child labor. (5) Although Albania allows children without a birth certificate to enroll in public schools, some children from Roma and Balkan Egyptian families and refugees without proper birth documentation may still face obstacles in obtaining access to social services and education. (5) Roma and Balkan Egyptian children also experience discrimination in schools when placed in separate classrooms, and faced other hurdles to accessing education, such as a lack of access to reliable transportation. (5,27) In addition, some migrant and refugee children from Syria, Afghanistan, and Bangladesh face difficulties accessing education due to language barriers. (8) Children with disabilities also continue to experience discrimination and other hurdles to accessing inclusive education. (5,28)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Albania has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Albania's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the failure to prohibit the use of children in illicit activities.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

* Country has no conscription (34)

Albania does not explicitly prohibit using, procuring, or offering children under age 18 for illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs. Article 129 of the Criminal Code only prohibits inducing or encouraging children under age 14 to participate in criminality. (33) Additionally, Article 25 of the Law for the Protection of the Rights of the Child provides for protection of children against the use of alcohol and drugs, as well as the illicit production and trafficking of these substances, but does not criminalize inducing a child to participate in these acts. (30) The law also does not criminally prohibit the use of children for prostitution. (33)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Finance and Economy (State Inspectorate for Labor and Social Services)	Enforces laws related to child labor and receives and responds to child labor complaints through the State Social Services Agency. (5) The 241 Child Protection Units (CPUs) located throughout the country at the municipal level identify at-risk children, conduct initial evaluations of each case, and refer children to appropriate social services. (5,37)
Ministry of Interior	Enforces laws related to the worst forms of child labor through protection officers. (28) Coordinates operations of the Border Police and each of the Illicit Human Trafficking sections in the country's 12 Regional Police Directorates through the General Directorate of State Police. (3,4) Establishes the government's policy on addressing human trafficking through the State Committee Against Trafficking in Persons, chaired by the Interior Minister. (28,42)
Office of the Prosecutor General	Investigates and prosecutes child trafficking cases through the Special Anti-Corruption and Organized Crime Court. (8)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Albania took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including lack of authority to inspect informal work locations such as private farms and unregistered businesses.

In 2022, inspectors received training on regulations related to the employment of minors. (8) Inspectors determined that the tourism sector continued to contribute to children working as street vendors, particularly in Durrës and Vlorë. (8,22) The State Inspectorate for Labor and Social Services (SILSS) also developed an online tool to improve transparency around penalties, particularly when a fine can be issued and the amount of the fine. Although SILSS can inspect registered private entities, it cannot inspect private homes, private farms, or unregistered businesses. (5)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, the government's criminal law enforcement agencies appeared to function adequately in addressing child labor (Table 7).

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	No (39)	Yes (44)

‡ Includes data from January 2022 to September 2022.

If a child victim of labor exploitation is identified during the course of a labor inspection, then the agency conducting the inspection first refers the child to the police and state social services, then to an anti-trafficking shelter. (5,40) The case may also be referred to local Child Protection Units (CPUs), which can then connect the child to social services. (5,37,40,41) During the reporting period, the state police continued to investigate the trafficking of minors in collaboration with the 12 regional police directorates. Additionally, criminal law enforcement authorities received multiple trainings on anti-trafficking efforts and new criminal legislation regarding the treatment of minor victims of human trafficking. (8)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including coordination among agencies.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
State Agency for the Rights and Protection of Children	Oversees implementation of the government's child rights protection policies, including monitoring the National Agenda for the Rights of the Child. (5,42) Manages cases of at-risk children and refers them to appropriate social services. Sanctions authorities who fail to protect children from violence and exploitation. (5,37) Coordinates local and central efforts on health, security, and the education of children. (5) During the reporting period, the State Agency for the Rights and Protection of Children met with local Child Protection Units and ad-hoc Cross-Sectoral Technical Groups to improve the local bodies' ability to properly identify children at risk of exploitation. Additionally, the State Agency continued to coordinate regular annual meetings with child protection workers in all 61 municipalities. (8)

Coordination between SILSS and the Albanian State Police has traditionally been sporadic. (11,44,49)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Policy	Description & Activities
National Action Plan for Combating Trafficking in Persons (2021–2023)	Calls for the identification and referral of child victims and those at risk of human trafficking to social protection services in accordance with standard operating procedures. (5) Increases the use of CPUs, police, and border control personnel to identify victims, including children involved in street work. Seeks to raise public awareness of all forms of human trafficking, including for forced labor. (5) Active during the reporting period. (8)
National Agenda for the Rights of the Child (2021–2026)	Aims to protect and promote children's rights by supporting physical and psychosocial development, and the social inclusion of children. (5,41) Other goals include eliminating all forms of violence against children and creating child-friendly systems and services in education, justice, health, and social protection. (5,41) Active during the reporting period. (8)
National Strategy on Education (2021–2026)	Aims to promote learning environments that are conducive to student well-being and preventing children from dropping out of school. (23) Active during the reporting period. (8)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (4,45,46)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the problem in all sectors.

Program	Description & Activities
Program of Cooperation for Sustainable Development (2022-2026) *	UN program that aims to increase access to education for vulnerable children and improve protections for child survivors of human trafficking. During the reporting period, the Government of Albania and the UN office in Albania signed a new commitment to continue working on economic and social reforms to improve the situation of vulnerable populations throughout the country. (8,47)
Cash Transfer Program (Ndhma Ekonomike) †	Government-funded cash transfer program that provides an allowance for families receiving economic aid through the Law on Social Assistance and Services. (4) During the reporting period, the government continued to provide regular cash payments to qualifying families. (48)
World Vision Albania Centers (Children's City Program) †	The municipalities of Durrës, Maliq, and Korçë collaborated with World Vision Albania to construct centers for children in high-risk situations, including violence, abuse, and various forms of exploitation. (48) During the reporting period, World Vision Albania continued to assist children who were previously in abusive situations. (8)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (45)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Research indicates that there is a lack of shelters for street children who are not victims of human trafficking, although some state- and NGO-run services were available for children who were forced to beg. (5) A lack of financial and human resources and issues related to the decentralization of social funds from the central government to municipalities were also cited as gaps in the efficient implementation of social programs. (4,45,50,51)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Albania (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that using, procuring, and offering children under age 18 for illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs, are criminally prohibited.	2015 – 2022
	Ensure that the use of children in prostitution is criminally prohibited.	2019 – 2022
Enforcement	Ensure that labor inspectors can inspect the informal sector in which child labor is known to occur, including private homes, private farms, or unregistered businesses.	2010 – 2022
Coordination	Ensure proper coordination between the State Inspectorate for Labor and Social Services and the Albanian State Police.	2019 – 2022
Social Programs	Collect and publish comprehensive data on the extent and nature of child labor in Albania. In particular, gather data on the prevalence and conditions of child labor in sectors of heightened concern, such as the agriculture and construction sectors.	2013 – 2022
	Provide adequate transportation resources for all children who face transportation-related barriers to school attendance, in particular Roma and Balkan Egyptian children and those who live in communities far from schools.	2011 – 2022
	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education accessible for all children, including children from Roma and Balkan Egyptian minority communities, children with disabilities, and children from Syria, Afghanistan, Bangladesh, and elsewhere living in Albania as refugees or displaced migrants, by removing all school-related fees and ensuring that children without documentation do not face obstacles to enrolling in school.	2013 – 2022
	Provide translation services for all children, especially those from migrant or refugee families, who are facing language-related barriers to education.	2018 – 2022
	Increase the number of shelters for victims of the worst forms of child labor, in particular for unhoused children living and working in forced begging rings on the streets.	2017 – 2022
	Institute programs to assist children who are victims of human trafficking and those who are used in scavenging chromium.	2014 – 2022
	Ensure that funding and human resources are increased for social programs for child labor and that decentralized social funds to municipalities are appropriately allocated to adequately carry out programs.	2018 – 2022

In 2022, Algeria made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government drafted legislation to remove the requirement of proving force, fraud, or coercion in some circumstances for an act to be considered child trafficking; the law was approved by both chambers of parliament in April 2023 and will enter into force after its publication in the official gazette. The National Authority for the Protection and Promotion of Children also launched an online platform to increase coordination among civil society organizations working on child protection issues. However, children in Algeria are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and forced begging. Children also engage in street vending. Algerian law does not provide increased penalties for, or categorize as a separate crime, the involvement of children in either the production or trafficking of drugs. The government also has not determined by national law or regulation the types of work that are hazardous for children to perform. Moreover, while the labor inspectorate is authorized to conduct inspections in all workplaces, inspectors do not investigate some workplaces, such as houses or informal construction sites, without a complaint, resulting in instances of child labor going undetected.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Algeria. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	3.6 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	94.8
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	3.9
Primary Completion Rate (%)		95.7

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2022, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2023. (1)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization’s analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 6 (MICS 6), 2018–19. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming (3)
Industry	Construction, activities unknown (3,4)
Services	Street work, including vending and begging (3,4,8)
	Domestic work (5)
	Working in small businesses, including mechanics’ shops and restaurants (3,6)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (4)
	Forced begging (3,4)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

School-aged children in Algeria generally attend school regularly, so jobs for children are often part time and informal in nature, with some children working in small-scale family-run businesses such as restaurants or small stores. (3,5-7) Children also work in informal street markets in street vending and begging. (3,4) In addition, sub-Saharan migrant children, including unaccompanied children, are sometimes exploited through commercial sexual exploitation and forced begging. (3,4) In 2022, the government continued to conduct a survey on child economic exploitation in cooperation with UNICEF; the study is not yet complete. (8-10)

The Algerian public education system is free and open to all children ages 6 to 16, regardless of ethnicity and nationality. School enrollment increased in 2022 as the COVID-19 pandemic protocols ended. (11) Despite universal access to education, schools in the southern regions of Algeria face attendance problems, with children as young as age 13 or 14 dropping out of school. (7,12) Non-Algerian children face other barriers to education such as required documentation of grade level or testing to determine their level. (5,7,12,13) Unlike in 2021, there were no reported cases of migrant children without valid documentation being denied enrollment by school administrators and reported to authorities in 2022. (6,8,10) In addition, migrants who do not speak Arabic, the language of instruction, face challenges in the Algerian education system, and some migrant families may also not be familiar with Algerian law granting free education to all children. (8,12) These informal barriers to education, specifically for migrant children, result in absence from school and contribute to increased vulnerability to child labor. (6,14,15)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Algeria has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Algeria's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the lack of prohibitions related to the use of children in illicit activities.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 15 of the Labor Code; Article 7 of Executive Decree No. 96-98 on the List and Content of Special Books and Registers Mandatory for Employers (16,17)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 15 of the Labor Code; Article 7 of Executive Decree No. 96-98 on the List and Content of Special Books and Registers Mandatory for Employers (16,17)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 303 bis 4 of the Penal Code (18)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Articles 303 bis 4 and 319 bis of the Penal Code (18)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 2, 319, 333 bis I, 343, and 344 of the Penal Code (18)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No		Article 195 bis of the Penal Code (18)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	17	Article 14 of Presidential Decree No. 08-134 on the National People's Army (19)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 3 of Law No. 14-06 on National Service (20)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 12 of Law No. 08-04 on National Education (21)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 13 of Law No. 08-04 on National Education (21)

The prohibitions against child trafficking in Algerian law are insufficient because they require threats, the use of force, or coercion for the crime of child trafficking to be established. (18) In April 2023, Algeria passed a law that largely removes the requirement of proving force, fraud, or coercion for the prosecution of child trafficking crimes, which will enter into force after publication in the national gazette. The law was approved by both chambers of parliament in April 2023 and will enter into force after publication in the official gazette. (12,22) However, the draft law still requires proof of force, fraud, or coercion when the exploitative purpose has not been achieved. (22) This law is insufficient to meet international standards regarding prohibition of child trafficking, as child trafficking must be criminalized without a requirement to prove force, fraud, or coercion, without exceptions.

The Labor Code prohibits anyone under age 19 from working at night and anyone under age 18 from performing work that is harmful to their health, safety, or morals. (16) However, Algeria has not determined by national law or regulation the types of work that are hazardous for children, and research did not determine whether the government commission tasked with proposing a list of hazardous professions continued to work on this issue in 2022. (3) Additionally, Algerian law does not provide increased penalties for, or categorize as a separate crime, the involvement of children in either the production or trafficking of drugs. (18)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor, Employment, and Social Security	Enforces labor laws, including laws related to child labor, through its labor inspectorate. Issues citations noting violations of labor laws and refers violations to the Ministry of Justice. (3) Supervises the application of laws and regulations related to labor relations, working conditions, and worker safety. (8) Refers children found in child labor to the Ministry of National Solidarity, Family, and the Condition of Women to ensure follow-up with social services. (3) Since 2003, chairs the Interministerial Committee against Child Labor involving 12 other government ministries. (10,23) In 2022, labor inspections were conducted in all 58 wilayas (states). (3)
Ministry of Justice	Prosecutes child exploitation cases, including those related to non-compliance with labor laws, through its Office of Criminal Affairs and Amnesty Procedures, the lead enforcement agency for human trafficking issues. (7,8,24) During legal proceedings, appoints a special judge familiar with the needs of minors if a child does not have a parent. (8) Also directs the Ministry of National Solidarity, Family, and the Condition of Women to conduct investigations into issues related to children and families. (8,25)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Criminal Enforcement Agencies	As directed by the Ministry of Justice, both the Directorate General for National Security (DGSN), which is part of the Ministry of Interior and Internal Assemblies, and the National Gendarmerie, which is part of the Ministry of National Defense, conduct child labor investigations and enforce criminal laws. DGSN investigates child labor in urban areas while the National Gendarmerie investigates such cases along the country's border and in rural areas. (3,26) DGSN comprises brigades of specialized police officers focused on illegal immigration and human trafficking. There are 61 brigades for the protection of minors or other vulnerable populations. (3,8,15,25) Both DGSN and the National Gendarmerie administer hotlines for the reporting of child abuse. The National Gendarmerie also maintains a website through which individuals can file complaints. In 2022, 1,780 potential child endangerment cases came through the National Gendarmerie's hotline, but it is not certain how many of these calls were related to child labor. (3,12)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Algeria took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor, Employment, and Social Security that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the lack of authority to inspect informal workplaces for child labor.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown (8)	Unknown (3)
Number of Labor Inspectors	709 (8)	619 (3)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	Yes (8)	Yes (3)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	Yes (8)	Yes (3)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksite	153,537 (8)	165,406 (3)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	0 (8)	1 (3)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	N/A (8)	Unknown (3)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	N/A (8)	Unknown (3)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (8)	Yes (3)
Routine Inspections Targeted	No (8)	No (3)

Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (8)	Yes (3)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (8)	Yes (3)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (8)	Yes (3)

Although the labor inspectorate is authorized to conduct inspections in all workplaces, inspectors do not investigate informal workplaces, such as houses or informal construction sites, without a complaint. (3) The number of labor inspectors in Algeria dropped from 885 in 2020, to 709 in 2021, and to 619 in 2022. (3,8,24) Research indicates that Algeria does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (27,28)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Algeria took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, the lack of information provided by the government regarding its criminal law enforcement efforts makes the scope and effectiveness of these efforts difficult to determine.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (8)	Yes (3)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (8)	Unknown (3)

Number of Convictions	Unknown (8)	67 (3)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (8)	Yes (3)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (8)	Yes (3)

Under Algerian law, penalties for crimes of the worst forms of child labor may include prison sentences, fines, or both. The government did not provide information on the number of investigations conducted, prosecutions initiated, or sentences imposed for those convicted of child labor crimes during the reporting period. (3) In 2022, the National Gendarmerie investigated 23 child labor violations involving 27 child victims. (10) Although the government did not provide the number of child labor prosecutions initiated in 2022, the Ministry of Justice reported prosecuting 75 child labor cases, some carrying over from previous years, and achieving 67 convictions. (3) Six child victims of human trafficking (five girls and one boy) were also identified during the reporting period. (26)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Commission for the Prevention of and Fight Against Child Labor	Under the direction of the National Authority for the Protection and Promotion of Children, protects and promotes children's rights and advocates for children in danger of economic exploitation. Acts as a liaison between the Ministry of Justice and members of the public alleging violations of children's rights. (3,8,29,30) Runs a national hotline and website to field questions and complaints about the mistreatment of children. (3) In 2022, launched an online platform for civil society organizations working on child protection issues so they can better coordinate their efforts. (3)

Trafficking of children is addressed specifically by the National Committee for Preventing and Combating Human Trafficking, led by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. The committee coordinates the activities of stakeholders involved in addressing human trafficking, develops the national anti-trafficking action plan, and provides training to relevant government authorities. (12)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including the lack of a policy addressing all of the worst forms of child labor that exist within the country.

Policy	Description & Activities
National Action Plan for the Prevention of and Fight Against Trafficking in Persons (2022–2024)†	Aims to prevent and reduce human trafficking by raising awareness, strengthening legislation, prosecuting human trafficking crimes, improving the provision of protective services to survivors, and increasing collaboration with national and international NGOs. This plan continues activities of the 2019–2021 plan that could not be completed due to the COVID-19 pandemic. (7,26,31)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

The Government of Algeria does not currently have a national action plan that addresses all worst forms of child labor. In 2019, the government drafted but did not finalize a national action plan that intended to promote and protect children's rights, including reducing child labor; the plan was not enacted during the reporting period. (3,10) An event was held in 2022 so that agencies, such as the National Authority for the Protection and Promotion of Children and the National Economic, Social and Environmental Council, along with other stakeholders from government and civil society organizations, could collaborate and develop recommendations for this plan. (11)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Children Assistance Facilities†	Facilities operated by the government to provide support for children, namely orphans and children in dangerous situations who are taken into custody by the state. (8) During the reporting period, 103 facilities operated across the country. (10)

† Program is funded by the Government of Algeria.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. (5,15,29)

Although Algeria has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, including the commercial sexual exploitation of children, forced begging, and street work.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Algeria (Table 11).

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested

In 2022, Angola made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government updated the list of hazardous occupations and activities for children, including 52 activities, 39 of which were not found on the previous list. The Ministry of Public Administration, Labor, and Social Security conducted training workshops focused on capacity building for child protection stakeholders, and several trainings and workshops on human trafficking concepts were provided by the Ministry of Justice and Human Rights to members of the Angolan diplomatic corps, national police, prosecutors, and all 18 provincial human rights committees. Additionally, the Multisectoral Commission on the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor established procedures to process and report child labor cases and strengthened its coordination with law enforcement and social services providers. However, children in Angola are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in construction. Laws prohibiting forced labor are not sufficient as they do not criminalize practices similar to slavery or allow for the prosecution of debt bondage. Additionally, the number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Angola's workforce, and social programs do not target all sectors in which children work.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Angola. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (6,13,21-25)
	Forced labor in agriculture, brickmaking, construction, fisheries, artisanal diamond mining, and domestic work (13,25)
	Use in illicit activities, including drug trafficking (6,13,25)
	Use in illicit activities, including for the transport of illicit goods across the border of Angola and Namibia, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (13)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Research indicates that incidences of child labor have increased in recent years, especially in the agriculture, construction, services, and industrial sectors. Research further indicates that in the province of Namibe, over 50,000 children work in the agricultural sector. (5,6,8) Due to widespread droughts in Cunene Province, children in some villages are forced to drop out of school to gather water, dig wells, and herd cattle. (13) Undocumented Congolese migrant children also enter Angola for work in diamond-mining districts, and some are subjected to forced labor or commercial sexual exploitation in mining camps. Girls as young as age 12 are subjected to human trafficking from Kasai Occidental in the Democratic Republic of the Congo to Angola for forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation. (13) Moreover, Angolan boys are taken to neighboring countries and forced to herd cattle or work as couriers to transport illicit goods. Reports also indicate that some adults force children younger than age 12 to commit crimes because children cannot be criminally prosecuted. (13)

Education is free up to the ninth grade; however, families often face difficulty in paying informal school fees, such as for textbooks, and at times, bribes requested by some education officials for new admissions or passing grades. (10,26,27) Further barriers to education for children include lack of classrooms and teachers. Despite research indicating that over 500 schools have been built in the last few years, many children remain outside of the educational system, and over 2 million school-age children in Angola do not attend school. (9,27-29) According to the UN Sustainable Development Cooperation Framework (2020–2022) report for Angola, 40 percent of children between the ages of 6 and 11 are not presently attending school, 18 percent have never been to school, and 19 percent do not have any level of education. For children between ages 12 and 17, almost half do not attend programs of secondary or vocational education corresponding to their age. (30) In addition, poor infrastructure, including the lack of sanitation facilities, disproportionately affects girls' attendance, especially at the secondary-school level. (9,29,31) Children in Angola are permitted to attend school only up to the sixth grade without a birth certificate; however, the government's "Massive Registration Campaign," conducted throughout all 18 provinces, resulted in the issuance of 5.1 million birth registration cards and 4.7 million identification cards between December 2019 and December 2021. (10,32)

Refugee children also face difficulties in continuing their education beyond age 11 since their status is directly connected to their parents' refugee cards, which are not accepted by secondary schools. Currently, a mechanism to apply for identity documentation does not exist, but the government is making efforts to address the issue and ensure that refugee children are not hindered from continuing their education. (10) In addition, the Ministry of Justice and Human Rights, in collaboration with UNHCR, is working on developing a national plan to address statelessness, which will provide a mechanism to ensure that children born to refugees in Angola receive birth certificates. (33)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Angola has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Angola's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including a lack of minimum age protections for children working outside formal employment relationships.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	14	Articles 1, 2, and 254 of the Labor Law (34)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 3(21) and 256 of the Labor Law (34)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 256 of the Labor Law; Hazardous Work List (34,35)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	No		Articles 71(j-l), 175, 177, 178, 180, and 383 of the Penal Code (36)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 71(j-l), 175, 177, 178, 180, and 196 of the Penal Code (36)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 71(j-l) and 195–198 of the Penal Code (36)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 4 and 7 of the Drug Trafficking Law; Article 168(1b and 1d) of the Penal Code (36,37)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 11 of the Military Service Law (38)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 2 of the Military Service Law (38)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 385(1c) of the Penal Code (36)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	14	Articles 12, 27, and 31 of the Basic Law of the Education System (39)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 11 of the Basic Law of the Education System (39)

In 2022, the government approved an updated list of 52 hazardous activities and occupations prohibited to minors, 39 of which were not included on the previous list, such as construction, street vending, and lifting and transporting heavy loads; however, the updated list does not include diamond mining, a sector in which there is evidence of work conducted underground. (35) In addition, the law's minimum age protections do not apply to children working outside formal employment relationships, which is not in compliance with international standards that require all children to be protected by the law. (34,40) Moreover, laws prohibiting forced labor are not sufficient as they do not criminalize practices similar to slavery or allow for the prosecution of debt bondage. (36)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Public Administration, Labor, and Social Security (MAPTSS)	Enforces laws against child labor and coordinates the Multisectoral Commission on the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor. Fines employers or sends cases to the Ministry of Interior, through the Criminal Investigation Services (SIC), for further investigation, and to the Attorney General's Office for prosecution. (10) Employs labor inspectors in all 18 provinces to carry out inspections and joint operations with social services providers. (41)
Ministry of Interior's National Police	Enforce criminal laws and conduct operations and investigations related to the worst forms of child labor. Through SIC, collaborates with the Juvenile Court on child labor, child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and illicit recruitment investigations. (10)
Attorney General's Office	Investigates and prosecutes cases of the worst forms of child labor. (10)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Angola took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Public Administration, Labor, and Social Security (MAPTSS) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient financial and human resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (10)	Yes (9)

In 2022, MAPTSS conducted training workshops to build the capacity of several stakeholders working on child protection issues, including the National Child Protection System, the National Children's Institute (INAC), Provincial and Municipal Departments of Social Action, the Ministry of Interior, and the Court of Minors. In total, approximately 176 individuals were trained, including labor inspectors, throughout six provinces. (9) However, although inspections were conducted throughout the country and in most sectors, no labor inspections were conducted in the informal sector, which consists of 75 percent of Angola's economic activity, and in which child labor is known to occur. (9) Furthermore, research indicates that Angola does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties, and reports indicate that MAPTSS considers the budget allocated for labor inspection activities to be insufficient. (9,43)

Inspectors from MAPTSS work with INAC and the Ministry of Social Action, Family, and the Advancement of Women (MASFAMU) to ensure that child labor victims receive the appropriate social services. (9) INAC refers children found during inspections to social services and ensures their legal rights. INAC, along with MASFAMU, coordinates complaints with the Criminal Investigation Services (SIC), which then refers investigated cases to the Children's Tribunal (Julgado de Menores). (9)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Angola took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (10)	Yes (9)
Number of Investigations	3 (44)	Unknown (9)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown	Unknown (9)
Number of Convictions	1 (44)	Unknown (9)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (44)	Unknown (9)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (10)	Yes (9)

In 2022, the Government of Angola provided several trainings and workshops with a focus on human trafficking concepts to members of the Angolan diplomatic corps, national police officers, prosecutors, and all 18 provincial human rights committees. (45) However, reports indicate that training remains insufficient, particularly for investigators located outside the capital and in remote areas across the country. (46)

Child trafficking victims can be referred to MASFAMU-run shelters before a determination is made regarding their reintegration with their families or guardians. (9) INAC and MASFAMU use a network of 114 counseling and housing shelters to support victims and provide them with social services. (47) Reports indicate, however, that victims in rural areas have less access to social services than those in urban areas. (44)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including challenges with aggregating and synthesizing data on human trafficking cases.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Multisectoral Commission on the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor	Addresses all issues related to the worst forms of child labor and leads the drafting, implementation, and monitoring of national plans for the elimination of child labor, including the National Action Plan to Eradicate Child Labor. Led by the Minister of Public Administration, Labor, and Social Security, and includes representatives from the National Children's Institute (INAC), the Ministry of Social Action, Family, and the Advancement of Women (MASFAMU), and six other government agencies. (9) During the reporting period, established procedures on the measuring and reporting of child labor cases, as well as strengthening coordination with law enforcement and social services. In addition, conducted review of proposed updates to the Hazardous Work List. (9)

In 2022, the Ministry of Justice and Human Rights strengthened mechanisms to protect children and women as the main victims of human trafficking in the country by creating a gender observatory, increasing awareness of reporting hotlines, and establishing a child protection system. In addition, the Interministerial Commission to Combat Trafficking in Persons conducted several trainings and workshops throughout the reporting period and participated in various media outlet programs on human trafficking issues, including three on television and five on the radio. (45) Despite these efforts, reports indicate that the government faces challenges with aggregating and synthesizing data on human trafficking cases. (13,48)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Action Plan to Eradicate Child Labor (2021–2025)	Prioritizes effective, immediate, and integrated measures toward the promotion of children's rights, including through the prevention and eradication of child labor and its worst forms, by 2025. Focuses on seven principal areas: (1) child development; (2) social assistance; (3) education; (4) advocacy, accountability, and enforcement; (5) raising children's voices; (6) communication; and (7) monitoring and evaluation. (49) Each area provides specific objectives, including increasing access to education and vocational training, raising awareness of the problem at all levels of the community, strengthening relevant legal framework, and increasing the capacity of children's participation. (49) In 2022, the government began implementing the action plan, including through labor inspections and forced labor awareness campaigns. (45)
National Action Plan on Preventing and Combating Trafficking in Persons (2020–2025)	Outlines Angola's strategy to address human trafficking, including domestic human trafficking, in a 5-year plan with the option of extension. Commits to specific activities designed to improve the prevention, protection and assistance, and prosecution components involved in addressing human trafficking. (50) In 2022, the government implemented the recently approved National Referral Mechanism for the Protection of and Assistance to Victims of Human Trafficking and the Standard Operating Procedures for addressing human trafficking. (45)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (51)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Program	Description & Activities
Social Protection Programs†	National network of child support centers implemented by the government in coordination with NGOs, offering meals, shelter, basic education, and family reunification services to victims of crime, including child trafficking victims. MASFAMU and the Organization of Angolan Women operate 52 children's shelters that assist victims of child trafficking. (9) Active during the reporting period. (9)
Birth Registration and Justice for Children†	Government-run program making birth registration free for all Angolan citizens. (52) Ongoing throughout the reporting period. (9)
Mobile Schools and Free Meals for Children†	Ministry of Education program that provides education in mobile schools to migrant children who work with their parents in cattle herding. Specifically supports children at the highest risk of involvement in child labor in southern Angola. (46) Supports some mobile schools with kitchens, facilitating the free school meals program. (46) Active in 2022. (9)

During the reporting period, the government conducted awareness and prevention campaigns against child sex tourism. INAC and MASFAMU also led child sexual exploitation awareness campaigns through radio and television public service announcements. (45) However, although Angola has implemented programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem. Furthermore, research did not identify programs that seek to reach children subjected to certain worst forms of child labor, such as commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Angola (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that minimum-age protections are extended to children working outside of formal employment relationships.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that laws prohibiting forced labor criminalize practices similar to slavery and allow for the prosecution of debt bondage.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that the law prohibits hazardous occupations or activities for children in all relevant sectors in Angola, including in diamond mining.	2011 – 2022
Enforcement	Publish information regarding labor inspectorate funding.	2011 – 2022
	Increase the number of labor inspectors from 257 to 376 to ensure adequate coverage of the labor force of approximately 15 million people.	2009 – 2022
	Ensure that the Ministry of Public Administration, Labor, and Social Security receives adequate resources to conduct inspections in sectors in which child labor is known to occur, including in the informal sector.	2019 – 2022
	Ensure that child trafficking survivors in rural areas have adequate access to social services.	2021 – 2022
	Increase training for criminal investigators, including training of investigators outside the capital and in remote areas across Angola.	2019 – 2022
	Publish information on the number of investigations conducted, prosecutions initiated, convictions achieved, and penalties imposed for violations related to the worst forms of child labor.	2019 – 2022
Coordination	Increase the government's capacity to aggregate and synthesize data on human trafficking cases.	2018 – 2022
Social Programs	Develop and expand existing social programs to ensure that all children have access to education and are not restricted by informal fees, lack of birth certificates, lack of teachers and classrooms, or poor school infrastructure.	2013 – 2022
	Institute programs to support children subjected to commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor and expand existing programs to address the full scope of the child labor problem.	2010 – 2022
	Ensure that refugee children are not hindered from continuing their education beyond age 11 by creating a process for them to obtain identity documents.	2020 – 2022

Although research found no evidence that child labor exists in Anguilla, in 2022, the government made no advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. The law does not prohibit the involvement of children in illicit activities, including the production and trafficking of drugs. In addition, the minimum age of 12 for work and 14 for hazardous work does not meet international standards, and Anguilla lacks a list of prohibited hazardous occupations and activities for children.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides one key indicator on children's education in Anguilla.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Primary Completion Rate (%)		95.6

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2019, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2023. (1)

Data were unavailable from International Labor Organization's analysis, 2023. (2)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

British Overseas Territories recognize the jurisdiction and sovereignty of the UK but are not constitutionally part of the UK. They are self-governing, except in the areas of foreign affairs and defense. (3) Domestic UK law does not generally apply unless explicitly extended to Anguilla. Under Article 35(4) of the ILO Constitution, when the UK ratifies a Convention, the Territory must consider if it will accept the Convention. (3,4) If the Convention is accepted, it is considered applicable to that Territory. The following Convention has been extended to and accepted by Anguilla (Table 2).

Table 2. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The Government of Anguilla has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 3). However, gaps exist in Anguilla's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the failure to criminalize the use of children in illicit activities.

Table 3. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	12	Articles 1, 3, and 4 of the Employment of Women, Young Persons and Children Act; Articles 1 and 2 of the Employment of Children (Restriction) Act (5,6)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No	14	Articles 1, 3, and 4 of the Employment of Women, Young Persons and Children Act; Articles 1 and 2 of the Employment of Children (Restriction) Act (5,6)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No		Article 6 of the Employment of Women, Young Persons and Children Act (5)

NO ADVANCEMENT

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 242 and 243 of the Criminal Code; Chapter I, Section 4 of the Constitution Order (7,8)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 242, 243, 247, and 248 of the Criminal Code (7)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 244 of the Criminal Code (7)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	N/A†
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*†
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	17	Article 117 of the Education Act (9)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 106 of the Education Act (9)

† Country has no standing military (10)

The minimum age of 12 for work does not meet international standards. The minimum age of 14 for hazardous work also does not meet international standards as it applies only to industrial undertakings, transportation of passengers or goods by roads or rail, and work on ships. (5,6) Anguilla lacks a list of prohibited hazardous occupations and activities for children. However, there is a prohibition of night work for children under age 16 in the manufacturing of raw sugar and a prohibition of night work in other industrial undertakings for children under age 18. (5) In addition, Anguilla's laws do not criminally prohibit the use of children in illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs. (7,11,12) As the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (6,9)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for enforcement actions to address child labor, including its worst forms. However, Anguilla has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 4).

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Department of Labor of the Ministry of Finance, Economic Development, Investments, and Tourism	Through the Employment of Children (Restriction) Act, the Labor Commissioner has the authority to enforce all labor laws pertaining to child labor and may freely enter and inspect any premises in which violations of child labor laws may be occurring. The Labor Commissioner is also the head of the Department of Labor. (6)
Royal Anguilla Police Force Safeguarding Investigation Unit	Investigates child protection cases through interviews and forensic assessments. (3)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for a mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for programs to address child labor.

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, the following actions would advance the continued prevention of child labor in Anguilla (Table 5).

Table 5. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify ILO Convention 182 on the Worst Forms of Child Labor.	2020 – 2022
	Ratify the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict.	2020 – 2022
	Ratify the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution, and Child Pornography.	2020 – 2022
	Ratify the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2020 – 2022
	Establish a minimum age for work of at least 15 years, and preferably up to the compulsory education age of 17.	2016 – 2022
	Establish age 18 as the minimum age for hazardous work and determine by national law or regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited for children, in consultation with employers' and workers' organizations.	2011 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the use of children in illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs.	2014 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2022

In 2022, Argentina made significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government reported completing an additional 25 actions from the "100 Actions Against Trafficking" list outlined in its National Action Plan Against Human Trafficking. It also published the National Plan for the Regularization of Labor, which includes an allocation of funding for the labor inspectorate, and greatly increased the number of worksite inspections compared to pandemic years. Furthermore, the government published operating rules under the Mica Ortega Law that created an Observatory, an Interministerial Administrative Coordination Unit, and a Committee of Advisors to address sexual grooming and cybersafety of children. However, children in Argentina are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in illicit activities, such as the transport, sale, and distribution of drugs. Children also engage in dangerous tasks in agriculture. The government does not publish complete information about its labor law enforcement efforts and the labor inspectorate remains understaffed to adequately address child labor issues in the country.

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, including use in the production of pornography, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (10,17,18)
	Forced labor in agriculture and in the production of garments, charcoal, and bricks (5,11,13,17,19,20)
	Use in illicit activities, including transporting, selling, and distributing drugs (10,18,21,22)
	Forced labor in domestic work and street vending (17,19)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Argentinian children perform dangerous tasks in agriculture, including harvesting, caring for animals, fishing, and selling bait. (10) Misiones—producer of 87 percent of Argentina’s yerba mate—is one of the provinces most affected by child labor. Children as young as age 5 help their parents harvest yerba mate, sometimes carrying heavy loads. (23,24) In Salta and Jujuy provinces, children harvest tobacco. (8,25) Children from primarily the northern provinces, Bolivia, Paraguay, Peru, and other countries are also used in forced labor in numerous sectors, including garment production, agriculture, street vending, charcoal and brick production, domestic work, and in small businesses. (20,26,27) In addition, research found that children are used in illicit activities, including drug trafficking in the outskirts of Buenos Aires and Rosario where they serve as vigilantes, distributors, and producers. (10,22,28-30) Although the extent of the problem is unknown, reports indicate that girls from Argentina’s northern provinces are victimized by sex trafficking. (12,26) Furthermore, Paraguayan children are victims of sex trafficking in Argentina and reports indicate that traffickers exploit children participating in domestic youth sports clubs. (20,27)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Argentina has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Argentina’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including a gap between the minimum age for work and the compulsory education age.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Articles 2, 7, and 17 of the Prohibition of Child Labor and Protection of Adolescent Work Law; Article 9 of the Special Code on Contracting Domestic Workers; Article 25 of the Child and Adolescent Rights Protection Law; Articles 54 and 55 of the Law on Agrarian Work; Article 189 of the Employment Contract Law (31-35)

* Country has no conscription (46,47)

To further advance the National Program for the Prevention and Awareness of Grooming and Cyber-harassment Against Children, the government published operating rules under the Mica Ortega Law in July 2022 that created an Observatory, an Interministerial Administrative Coordination Unit, and a Committee of Advisors on the use of Information and Communications Technology. (48,49) However, as Argentina’s minimum age for work of 16 years is lower than the compulsory education age of 18 years, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (31-35)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of the enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Argentina

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor, Employment, and Social Security (MTEySS)	Conducts labor law enforcement efforts in cooperation with labor officials and authorities at the provincial level in each province and the Autonomous City of Buenos Aires. (10,50) In part through its Inspection Directorate of Child Labor, the Protection of Adolescent Work, and Indicators of Labor Exploitation (DITIAEIEL), it enforces child labor laws and collaborates with the National Registry of Rural Workers and Employers (RENATRE) to enforce child labor laws in the agricultural sector. (10) Further, it operates a national hotline to receive reports of labor violations and leads the Network of Businesses Against Child Labor ( Red de Empresas contra el Trabajo Infantil ), which includes companies promoting best practices in the private sector to address child labor. Labor inspectors play a key role in enforcing laws related to child labor as part of MTEySS' broader enforcement strategy, the National Plan for the Regularization of Labor ( Plan Nacional de Regularización del Trabajo [PNRT]). (10) As part of the plan's standard operating procedure for inspections, PNRT aims to detect and eradicate child labor and irregular adolescent work. (10)
Ministry of Justice and Human Rights	Delivers emergency legal and other assistance to survivors of labor and sex trafficking, including children. (10,51) Its regional offices provide legal and social services to human trafficking survivors in the provinces of Chaco, Chubut, La Pampa, La Rioja, Mendoza, Rio Negro, and Santa Fe. (10) In collaboration with the Ministry of Justice and Human Rights and the Institute of Public Policies for the Prevention of Grooming, the NGO Mom Online ( Mama en Línea ) and Twitter launched the initiative #HayAyuda meant to facilitate access to the hotline, Line 137, to anyone experiencing (or having knowledge of a situation of) child sexual exploitation, grooming, and/or domestic and sexual violence. (52)
Public Prosecutor's Office	Detects, investigates, and prosecutes cases of human trafficking and labor exploitation through its Special Prosecutor's Office for Human Trafficking and Exploitation (PROTEX). (10,53) Receives public reports of suspected human trafficking cases through an anonymous national hotline, Line 145. (10,53) During the reporting year, it identified 61 child trafficking victims and referred them to government services. (18) In 2022, PROTEX strengthened the capacities of criminal investigators through numerous trainings, including one on reparations and compensation to survivors of child labor, forced labor, and human trafficking under the Paraguayan legislation. (10)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Argentina took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor, Employment, and Social Security (MTEySS) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient human resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022

MTEySS employed 385 labor inspectors and 312 labor inspection assistants while provincial governments also employ their own local labor inspectors, though the total number for the latter is unknown. (10) Nonetheless, research indicates that Argentina does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors. (57) Additionally, NGOs continue to report that the number of provincial inspectors is not adequate. (10) In 2022, MTEySS trained national and provincial inspectors from Santa Cruz, Tucuman, and Salta, including 67 inspectors on procedures to follow after a case of child labor has been identified. An additional 85 inspectors received training on verifying administrative records for child labor and forced labor cases. (10) MTEySS also provided new tablets to its labor inspectors to use in conducting inspections. (10) MTEySS requires inspectors to refer victims of child labor to the Provincial Commission for the Eradication of Child Labor for social services assistance and its inspection protocol mandates that federal labor inspectors notify the relevant provincial child protection authorities after detecting a child labor violation. (26,58) Labor inspectors are also required to file a criminal complaint with the provincial courts of the relevant jurisdiction for any child labor violation detected. (3,26,58) MTEySS reported that its labor inspectors cooperated with law enforcement authorities in criminal matters resulting from the criminal complaints that inspectors filed after identifying child labor violations. (10,26) However, the government did not publish labor enforcement data on the total number of child labor penalties imposed or collected. (10) In addition to resources for labor inspections, the National Plan for the Regularization of Labor (Plan Nacional de Regularización del Trabajo [PNRT]) funding of approximately $342,000 included a nationwide awareness raising campaign during the reporting period. (55)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Argentina took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including allocating insufficient financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (54)	Yes (10)
Number of Investigations	16 (54)	9 (10)

Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (54)	Yes (10)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (54)	Yes (10)

During the reporting period, 16 defendants were prosecuted for child labor crimes in 5 cases involving 5 children. Argentine courts also convicted 12 individuals of using children for prostitution, pornography, and labor trafficking in the textile industry, imposing sentences ranging from 6 to 25 years' imprisonment; one individual received a 3-year conditional sentence and did not serve time in prison. (10) In addition, as part of international operation "Protected Childhood 9 and 10," enforcement officials detained and indicted 33 individuals for the production and distribution of child pornography. (59) Furthermore, in November 2022, a Federal Network Alert Operation in Buenos Aires and 14 provinces led to the detention of 21 individuals for suspected child pornography-related crimes. (60) In the past, Argentine law enforcement authorities have reported receiving insufficient funding and other resources to carry out their mandates. (20)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of interagency cooperation.

Argentina

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Commission for the Eradication of Child Labor (CONAETI)	Coordinates federal efforts to prevent and eradicate child labor and implements the Third National Action Plan for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor and the Protection of Adolescent Work (2018-2022). Led by MTEySS and includes representatives from the Executive Power, industry associations, and labor unions, in addition to benefitting from the advice of the ILO and UNICEF. (61,62) During the reporting year, it began the second phase of the Federal Program for the Eradication of Child Labor and launched the 2022 Action Plan of the Network of Companies Against Child Labor. It also developed the "Childhoods Free of Child Labor" program. (10) CONAETI held four plenary meetings throughout 2022. (10) At the December 2022 meeting, it presented the 2023 National Plan for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of Adolescent Labor. (63) There are also 24 Provincial Committees for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor ( Comisiones Provinciales para la Prevencion y Erradicacion del Trabajo Infantil [COPRETI] ), which coordinate activities at the provincial level between government, business, unions, and civil society stakeholders. (54,64)

There continues to be a need to strengthen cooperation between national- and provincial-level governments to address child labor. (65,66)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of publicly available information on activities taken under each policy during the reporting period.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
Third National Plan for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor and the Regulation of Adolescent Work (2018–2022)†	Aims to prevent and eliminate child labor, including its worst forms, and to regulate adolescent work. (61) Promotes the dissemination of information on child labor, efforts to strengthen the labor inspectorate, civil society engagement on child labor issues, inclusive education, and institutional and legislative reform. (3,10,61,67) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the program during the reporting period.
Federal Strengthening Program for the Eradication of Child Labor	Supports leaders at the sub-national level to improve strategies to prevent and detect child labor and irregular adolescent work. (54,68,69) Aims to coordinate efforts among COPRETI, civil society organizations, labor unions, and companies in common geographic areas and sectors that show high risks of child labor. (54) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the program during the reporting period.
National Plan Against Human Trafficking and Exploitation, and for Protection and Assistance of Victims (TIP Action Plan 2020–2022)	Managed by the Federal Council to Fight Human Trafficking and to Protect and Assist Victims, focuses on the prevention and prosecution of human trafficking crimes and the creation of a database to track cases and the provision of services to human trafficking survivors. (70-72) In 2022, the government implemented 25 actions out of the "100 Actions Against Trafficking" listed in the plan, including by supporting the survivors' compensation assistance fund, establishing a hotline for survivors, and creating new partnerships with prosecutors' offices from nine South American countries. (10,17,48,54)

† The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (73)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Universal Child Allowance Program ( Asignación Universal )†	Government program funded in part by the World Bank that provides a conditional cash transfer to unemployed parents and workers in the informal economy, contingent upon parents' fulfillment of health and education requirements for their children. (3,74) During the reporting period, the government increased the payment to beneficiaries by 8 percent in comparison to the prior year. (10,18,75,76)

Program	Description & Activities
National Registry of Rural Workers and Employers (RENATRE) Awareness-Raising Campaigns†	Campaigns that raise awareness of child labor in agriculture. (77) During the reporting period, RENATRE identified 36 children subjected to conditions of child labor. It also accompanied approximately 540 children through its RENATRE Center for Childcare and Rural Education ( Centro RENATRE de Cuidado y Educación Rural ) within the provinces of Tucuman, Salta, Misiones, and Jujuy. (55,78)
Good Harvest Program	Provides childcare facilities and services for migrant and rural families involved in seasonal harvests. (79,80) In 2022, the program created 104 childcare facilities to serve more than 6,600 children of rural workers. (10,81)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of Argentina.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (83,84)

As a result of the coordination between the National Ministry of Public Works and the National Ministry of Social Development, 30 child development centers operated in the provinces of Chaco, Buenos Aires, San Luis, Entre Rios, Formosa, and Jujuy. (10) In May 2022, the first child development center in the country for children of yerba mate pickers opened its doors in Comandante Andresito, Misiones on land donated by the municipal government. With an initial capacity for 60 children, the center is funded by the national government and supported by relevant unions. (85,86) Under the National Campaign Against Child Labor in Brickmaking, the government also ensured that 98 percent of children from brickmaking families attended school during the reporting period. (10) However, funding for shelters and assistance to girl survivors of sex trafficking remains lacking. (58) Research also found no evidence of social programs that specifically target children engaged in street begging and performing, windshield washing, and guarding parked cars, despite the prevalence of these activities that are designated as hazardous for children.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Argentina (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum age for work from 16 to 18 years to align with the compulsory education age.	2018 – 2022

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2022, Armenia made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government enacted a new Criminal Code and Criminal Procedure Code, which strengthened Armenia’s child protection framework by criminalizing child trafficking and the commercial sexual exploitation of children. The government also adopted a universal inspection checklist on labor rights violations which is applicable to all industries. However, despite new initiatives to address child labor, Armenia is receiving an assessment of minimal advancement because it continued to implement a regression in law that delays advancement in eliminating the worst forms of child labor. Labor inspectors lack full authority to conduct unannounced inspections, despite receiving additional authority in 2022 to carry out limited unannounced inspections when detecting unregistered employment cases. The lack of unannounced inspections may leave potential violations of child labor laws and other labor abuses undetected in workplaces. Children in Armenia are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in agriculture. In addition, the government does not routinely collect or maintain official data on the prevalence of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table I provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Armenia.

Table I. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Attending School (%)	5 to 14	95.4
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	8.6
Primary Completion Rate (%)		91.8

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (4,5,11,12) Forced begging and forced labor in stores (4,5,8,9)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

The Government of Armenia does not routinely collect or maintain official data on child labor. (9,13,14) Reports indicate that significant numbers of children, primarily boys ages 14 to 18, leave school to work in the informal sectors in agriculture and construction. (9,15,16) In 2022, according to the police, the number of children engaged in begging increased; however, the police did not find evidence of organized crime behind the begging. (9) Children of families who travel for seasonal labor and work on farms in remote rural areas are less likely to be enrolled in school and are vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, including forced child labor in agriculture. (17) Authorities note that less-educated, socially vulnerable girls are at higher risk of being trafficked for commercial sexual exploitation, while children living in economic hardship or children deinstitutionalized from orphanages are more likely to be coerced into forced begging, farm work, and forced labor in the service sector. (9,12)

Although Article 38 of the Constitution of Armenia and Article 6 of the Law of the Republic of Armenia on Education guarantee free universal education, children from ethnic minority and low-income families continue to have reduced access to education. (18-21) Reports indicate that in some rural areas, girls' education is not prioritized due to traditional cultural norms. (15,20) The government has made progress in improving access to education in remote communities and implemented a program to pay tuition fees for students from national minorities. The detection of school dropouts has also been a priority for the government; however, there is no enforcement of the mandatory school attendance requirement, nor are there programs to identify, assess, and address the reasons for truancy or dropping out. (5,22)

The Law on Education requires all schools to be inclusive for children with disabilities by 2025; however, children with disabilities still face difficulty accessing mainstream education where school buildings remain inaccessible. (19,21) In addition, lack of accessible learning materials, special education teachers and other specialists makes it particularly difficult for students with hearing, visual, and mental disabilities to access mainstream education. (21) Challenges remain with institutionalized children, such as those living in government boarding schools, orphanages, and special education institutions, who are vulnerable to exploitation in child labor and are at a higher risk of becoming victims of human trafficking. (4,7,23)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Armenia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Free Public Education	Yes		Article 38 of the Constitution; Article 6 of the Law on Education (18,19)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (29)

During the reporting period, the government enacted a new Criminal Code and a new Criminal Procedure Code, which strengthened Armenia’s child protection framework by criminalizing child trafficking and the commercial sexual exploitation of children. (27,31) In addition, the government approved changes to the Labor Code that define “forced or compulsory labor,” which allows the government to fully enforce its prohibition on forced labor as prescribed in the Constitution, Criminal Code, and Labor Code. (18,24,27,32) Adopted in May 2022, amendments to the Law on Identification and Assistance to Victims of Trafficking include requirements for the government to issue a National Action Plan to counter human trafficking and to set specific minimum standards for the services provided to survivors of trafficking, to include child survivors. The amendments expand the definition of trafficking to include “exploitation of persons in helpless situations” from the previous version that referred to “exploitation of a person who, because of a mental disorder, is unable to realize or control his/her behavior.” (33,34) In October 2022, the government issued a decree on Approved Indicators for Identifying Trafficking Victims by the Identification Commission, to include specific indicators to identify potential child victims of trafficking. (35)

During the reporting period, the Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs (MoLSA) finalized a draft law on Child Rights and Child Protection System to include several regulations related to the worst forms of child labor. (9,36) In addition, in 2022, MoLSA finalized a draft package of amendments to the Labor Code to include clarification and consolidated provisions related to child labor. (9) The amended Labor Code was adopted in 2023 and it includes provisions that align the minimum age for work law with the international standards. (24)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Because the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (18,19,24,25) In addition, the Labor Code allows children ages 14 and 15 to work restricted hours with the permission of a parent or guardian but does not identify specific activities that constitute light work. (24)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/ Agency	Role & Activities
Health and Labor Inspection Body (HLIB)	Ensures compliance with legal requirements in the fields of healthcare and labor law. (5) Publishes an annual report on activities undertaken the previous year and plans for the upcoming year. (8,37) Operates a labor rights violations complaint hotline and online platform to which individuals can submit complaints. (9) Carries out on-site inspections based on a pre-determined list of companies compiled based on risk assessment methodology, an annual work plan, as well as in response to complaints, including child labor complaints, and administrative proceedings. Also authorized to issue penalties for any administrative violations they uncover and to refer cases to criminal law enforcement when appropriate. (38) During 2022, HLIB held seminars for students of the State Pedagogical University and the College of Finance and Economics of the State Economic University on reducing children's involvement in the worst forms of labor, ensuring safe working conditions in the workplace, and preventing child labor exploitation. (9) HLIB continued the internship program started in 2021 with the Agricultural University, hosting student interns majoring in occupational safety and health issues, and training them on labor issues including child labor. In 2022, the ILO organized a multi-day training for labor inspectors on legal provisions related to working conditions, employee protection, and child labor. (9) In addition, over 50 labor inspectors participated in two 2-day trainings organized by the Department of State-funded World Vision program on the application of forced labor indicators including for children. (9)
Criminal Enforcement Agencies	General Department of Criminal Police enforces laws against the worst forms of child labor and transfers information received on alleged crimes and trafficking in persons cases to the Investigative Committee. Anti-trafficking, domestic violence, and other units of the police prevent and respond to crimes, as well as support the Investigative Committee's investigator in conducting criminal proceedings and perform the investigator's assignments as needed. (9,31,39) Conducts administrative proceedings, enforces protective measures, and other activities prescribed by law. Conducts internal investigations and submits to the Investigative Committee case information about alleged crimes. (9) Every regional police unit throughout the country has a designated officer whose portfolio includes human trafficking. (40) Operates a hotline to receive complaints related to human trafficking and migration issues. (4,40,41) In 2022, the police increased their efforts in identifying children begging in the streets and, for the first time, they were able to fine parents for engaging a child in begging by applying Article 177 of the Administrative Violations Code. (9) During the reporting period, the Police continued with human trafficking-related trainings for its staff and organized 8 trainings attended by 100 participants. (42) Investigative Committee, through its Department for Investigation of Trafficking in Persons, Crimes Against the Sexual Inviolability of Minors and Illegal Drug Trafficking Crimes, initiates criminal proceedings and conducts investigations of all cases of human trafficking and the commercial sexual exploitation of children. (9,31,43)
Prosecutor General's Office (PGO)	Through the Department for Combating Crimes against Humans within the PGO, oversees the legality of Police operations and Investigative Committee investigations and prosecutes criminal cases involving child trafficking. Prosecutors receive regular training on human trafficking and other worst forms of child labor. (39,44)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, the lack of full authority to conduct unannounced inspections in Armenia may have impeded the enforcement of child labor laws (Table 6).

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In March 2022, the government adopted a universal inspection checklist on labor rights violations which is applicable to all industries to verify their compliance with labor legislation requirements. (9) This checklist allowed the Health and Labor Inspection Body (HLIB) to carry out scheduled on-site labor inspections in 2022, compared to 2021 when most of HLIB's labor engagement was initiated through administrative proceedings, in part due to lack of an approved checklist. (5,9,39) Of the 398 on-site inspections conducted in 2022, 234 were on labor rights and 155 were on workers' health and safety, and primarily targeted mining, manufacturing, and construction businesses. In 2022, HLIB identified seven violations of child labor laws in construction, small and medium trade, and gas services, and children were between 17 and 18 years old. (9) All of the companies were fined and penalties were collected in total amount of $1,500 (601,185 AMD). (9)

In 2022, HLIB had funding to employ 92 labor inspectors, of which 57 positions were filled. (9) In November 2022, the government adopted changes to the Law on Organizing and Conducting Inspections to allow HLIB to carry out unannounced inspections only when detecting unregistered employment cases. (9,45,46) Even for routine inspections, HLIB must inform employers of an upcoming inspection three business days in advance. (40) HLIB has broader authority when responding to a complaint, in which case HLIB may issue notification to the employer via e-mail and immediately conduct a site visit; however, if the business director or acting director is not present and does not receive the notification, inspectors are not allowed to start. (5,38) HLIB lacks legal mechanisms to fully enforce compliance with labor legislation, including conducting unannounced inspections and conducting inspections after working hours. (9)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Armenia took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient specialized training for investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (5)	Yes (9)
Number of Investigations	Unknown	1 (47)

During the reporting period, one person was convicted and sentenced to 5 years of imprisonment and was conditionally released with a 2-year probation period for involving three minor victims in forced begging in 2016. (43,47) One criminal case from 2021 of involving a child in forced begging was concluded and sent to court with an indictment. (47) In addition, the police conducted a preliminary investigation on one child labor trafficking case. (9,43,47) Authorities reported an increase in the use of social media to coerce and blackmail vulnerable individuals into sex trafficking. (12)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2022, 52 judges (19.2 percent of judges) and all 376 prosecutors from the Ministry of Justice attended trainings on the new Criminal Code and the new Criminal Procedure Code. (42) With support from the U.S. Department of State-funded World Vision program, multiple government agencies participated in several human trafficking-related training activities, and the State Migration Service developed guidelines for identification of potential victims of human trafficking among migrants and other at-risk populations, to include the specifics of working with potential child trafficking victims. (42,43) In addition, during the reporting period, three prosecutors, three investigators from the Investigative Committee, one investigator from the National Security Service, and three police officers participated in an online training course on Human Trafficking and Child Exploitation organized by the International Law Enforcement Academy of Budapest and supported by the U.S. Department of State. (39,42)

Reports indicate that law enforcement officials may not receive sufficient specialized training on interviewing survivors of child trafficking, which in some cases can prevent local investigators from collecting sufficient evidence to build a prosecutable case. (4,39,48) Although the Criminal Procedural Code includes provisions to protect witnesses and minimize victim re-traumatization, the government does not always employ these measures in all human trafficking cases, including those involving minors. (31,41) In addition, the change in the law enforcement structure resulting in the decrease of police involvement in initial investigations and establishing the Investigative Committee as the leading investigative agency raised further concerns among civil society about proactive identification of trafficking victims and effective investigations under the new criminal procedures. (31,43)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of efforts to address all forms of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Interagency Working Group Against Trafficking in Persons	Operates under the Ministerial Council to Combat Human Trafficking and ensures operational coordination. Multidisciplinary group of government representatives and national and international NGOs, chaired by the Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs (MoLSA). (7) MoLSA also chairs the Trafficking Victims Identification Commission comprising representatives from MoLSA, Prosecutor's Office, Police, and two NGOs, tasked with identifying individuals as victims of trafficking and referring them for required assistance and support. (7) During the reporting period, the working group discussed findings on the implementation status of the 2020–2022 National Action Plan Against Trafficking in Persons and developed the 2023–2025 version of this anti-trafficking plan, which was approved by the government in early 2023. (9,43,49)

Armenia lacks coordinating mechanisms to address other forms of child labor, including street work, the services sector, and agriculture. (16)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of policies to cover all forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Action Plan Against Trafficking in Persons (2020–2022)	Supported the development of policy and the implementation of activities to address human trafficking. Committed the government to train specialists in multiple spheres, including law enforcement, the courts, educators, and medical providers. (50,51) Included a chapter on prevention of child trafficking and child exploitation. (7,52) From July 30 to December 2, 2022, the government conducted human trafficking awareness-raising campaigns, including outreach meetings and trainings, across the country. (42,43) In addition, classes on human trafficking topics continued as part of the middle and high school civics curricula. (42)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

During the reporting period, MoLSA, with UNICEF's support, developed a draft Strategy on Labor and Social Protection for 2023–2026 that covers vulnerable populations, to include children. This strategy will inform future cross-sectoral and thematic sub-strategies related to labor and social protection. (9,53) Research found no evidence of any policies to address child labor in all its forms in Armenia, including in agriculture, services, and other forms of informal work.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Family Benefits Program†	Seeks to mitigate poverty for families with children by giving families a monthly payment based on their financial situation, the number of children in the family, and the geographical location of their home. (54) During the reporting period, research was unable to determine the impact of this ongoing program.
UNICEF Country Program for 2021–2025	Improves child protection systems, including through expanding programs for children in extreme poverty, improving social integration of children with disabilities, and developing a victim witness protection system. (5,55) In 2022, continued to support the government's child protection systems through technical assistance, operationalization of policies, and strengthening systems at central and local levels to ensure more integrated delivery of services for children and families in various social sectors. (56)
Shelter for Victims of Human Trafficking‡	Operates in partnership with NGOs to provide medical, psychological, social, and legal services to survivors of human trafficking, and access to education for children. Continued services were provided to survivors during the reporting year. (5,8,22,51) In 2022, the government also increased funding to the shelter to $100,000 (40.2 million AMD), twice the amount allocated in 2020. (57)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of Armenia.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (54)

Although the Government of Armenia has implemented programs to address child labor, research found no evidence that it has carried out programs to assist children engaged in child labor in street work or in agriculture. In addition, personnel and resources are insufficient to meet the needs of many social services programs, and participation is low due to a lack of awareness-raising outreach by the government. (22)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Armenia (Table 11).

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2022, Azerbaijan made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Ministry of Internal Affairs trained more than 700 police officers from 25 city and district police units on forced labor and human trafficking issues. In addition, the government continued efforts to integrate children with disabilities into mainstream education by establishing 12 more schools with inclusive classrooms, in addition to the existing 8 schools. However, despite new initiatives to address child labor, Azerbaijan is assessed as having made only minimal advancement because it has not rescinded a law that delays advancement in eliminating the worst forms of child labor. This law continues a moratorium on all worksite labor inspections. While inspectors can conduct desk reviews in response to complaints, this lack of proactive or onsite inspection mechanisms may leave potential violations of child labor laws undetected in workplaces. Children in Azerbaijan are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging. In addition, data are limited regarding how many children are currently engaged in child labor. In some instances, police treat children forced to beg or engage in street work as a family issue, leading to child labor cases not being properly referred for criminal investigation and prosecution.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Azerbaijan.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Child labor in Azerbaijan occurs in the agriculture sector; however, data are limited regarding how many children are currently engaged in child labor in this or other sectors. (2,3,5,6,18) Although the prevalence of child labor in cotton harvesting appears to be small, there were reports in 2019 and 2020 that children under age 15 worked picking cotton and other crops to augment family incomes; however, no new reports were identified in 2021 or 2022. (3,15,19,20) Reports also indicate that children under age 17 engage in household work, on small family farms, or in family businesses. (17,21) Crop production in Azerbaijan is governed by a "priority" system that conditions agricultural subsidies, services, and access to public resources, such as irrigation water, on whether farmers produce one or more crops that the government has designated as high priority. (3) In some cases, regional and local government officials are held responsible for mobilizing sufficient labor to meet established production targets for one or more of these priority crops. (22,23) This system creates a risk that farmers and local officials may turn to exploitative labor practices, including child labor and forced labor, to ensure they are able to meet production targets for designated crops. (19,23) Street children, some of whom become homeless after they are released from government-run care institutions, and children from marginalized communities are also particularly vulnerable to human trafficking within Azerbaijan. (7,24,25)

Although Article 5 of the Education Law guarantees free universal education, undocumented children and children with disabilities face difficulty accessing education. (15) The court proceedings required to secure identification documents can take up to 2 or more years, during which time children without identification documents are ineligible to enroll and attend school or to access health services. (3,15,26) Some children with disabilities are not in school or are facing barriers to education caused by inaccessible infrastructure, lack of specialized training for teachers on inclusive education, and discrimination against individuals with disabilities. (17,27,28) Children from the Roma ethnic community also face barriers to education due to social stigma. (7,26) In addition, children in some rural areas have low rates of school attendance. (15,17,27) Children not attending school are vulnerable to child labor.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Azerbaijan has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Azerbaijan's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the lack of criminal prohibitions for purchasing sex with a child.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Articles 42 and 249 of the Labor Code; Article 192 of the Code of Administrative Offenses (29,30)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 250 of the Labor Code; Article 192 of the Code of Administrative Offenses (29,30)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 98, 250–252, and 254 of the Labor Code; Decree 58 of the Cabinet of Ministers in 2000; Article 9 of the Law on the Rights of the Child (29,31,32)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 35 of the Constitution; Article 144-2 of the Criminal Code (33,34)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		The Law on Trafficking in Persons; Article 144-1 of the Criminal Code (34,35)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 144-1 and 171 of the Criminal Code (34)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 28 of the Law on the Rights of the Child; Article 170 of the Criminal Code (32,34)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	19	Article 36 of the Law on Military Obligation and Military Service (36)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Articles 2, 3, and 12 of the Law on Military Obligation and Military Service (36)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 116 of the Criminal Code (34)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15‡	Article 19 of the Law on Education; Article 13 of the Law on General Education (37,38)
Free Public Education	Yes		Articles 5 and 19 of the Law on Education; Article 13 of the Law on General Education; Article 22 of the Law on the Rights of the Child; Article 42 of the Constitution (32,33,37,38)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (37,38)

The laws criminalizing commercial sexual exploitation of children are insufficient because they do not criminalize the purchase of commercial sex involving children. Similarly, the criminalization of involvement of a child in "immoral actions" does not clearly criminalize the use or offering of a child for the production of pornography or pornographic performances. (34)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, the absence of worksite inspections conducted at the national level in Azerbaijan may impede the enforcement of child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor and Social Protection of Population (MLSP)	Enforces labor laws related to the worst forms of child labor through the State Labor Inspection Service (SLIS). (17) All SLIS inspectors are trained to detect and respond to child labor and received training on child labor issues in 2022. (17) Due to the ongoing moratorium on all worksite labor inspections, passed in 2016, SLIS is only able to receive and respond to complaints through desk reviews. (27,39,40) Based on information received, inspectors are empowered to identify violations and impose appropriate penalties. Although SLIS can impose penalties directly against individuals, it must refer cases to the courts to levy penalties against corporate entities. (17,39) In addition, SLIS is able to identify potential minimum age violations by monitoring an electronic database of labor contracts, and has the authority to impose penalties for violations. (39,41) During the reporting period, SLIS drafted and submitted for the government's approval a risk-based routine inspection plan. Approval of this plan will permit SLIS to resume limited routine labor inspections for occupational safety and health issues, including hazardous child labor, based on pre-identified risk groups of enterprises. (17,21)

(16,17) Through the Anti-Trafficking Division (ATD), enforces human trafficking laws, investigates human trafficking violations, to include child trafficking, and enforces criminal laws related to the use of children in illicit activities. (9,17) Refers children who are survivors of human trafficking to social services for assistance with school enrollment, participation in recreational activities, and procurement of proper documentation. (8,17) Operates a 24-hour hotline for the public to report suspected child trafficking and instances of child begging. (15) ATD serves as the National Coordinator of the Interagency Commission to Combat Trafficking in Human Beings, coordinates policies to counter trafficking in persons, and oversees implementation of the National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Human Beings. (3,42) Continued to preside over the work of the 33 entities, including government agencies and local executive authorities, involved in implementing the 2020–2024 National Action Plan to Combat Human Trafficking. (17) During the reporting period, MoIA trained more than 700 police officers from 25 city and district police bodies on trafficking prevention and prevention of forced labor. (17,43)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, the absence of worksite inspections conducted at the national level in Azerbaijan may have impeded the enforcement of child labor laws (Table 6).

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022

‡ Data are from January 2022 to November 2022.

The government suspended all routine and unannounced labor inspections in 2016 as part of a broader anti-corruption drive. In 2017, this moratorium was extended until 2021 as part of an effort to stimulate small- and medium-business growth. (8,11,21,39,40) In early 2022, the government extended this moratorium through January 1, 2023. (45,46) The moratorium was then extended through the end of 2023. (43) In addition, there have been no indicators as to when the government anticipates a resumption of onsite inspections. (17,44,47) Although the State Labor Inspection Service (SLIS) is still able to receive and respond to complaints related to child labor and impose penalties in cases of violations, this response cannot include onsite inspections, and inspectors are limited to conducting desk reviews. (17,27,39,40) From January to November 2022, the Ministry of Labor and Social Protection of Population (MLSP) reported there were no cases of underage labor, forced child labor, or administrative offenses committed by employers related to the involvement of children in activities that could endanger their life or health. (17)

Research indicates that Azerbaijan does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (48) Government officials also assess the number of inspectors as insufficient to fully enforce child labor laws in Azerbaijan. (49) In addition, sources report a lack of coordination between law enforcement agencies. (15)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Azerbaijan took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including a lack of investigations pertaining to forced begging cases.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (15)	Yes (17)
Number of Investigations	0 (15)	16 (17)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	0 (15)	14 (17)
Number of Convictions	1 (15)	1 (17)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (15)	Yes (17)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (15)	Yes (17)

In 2022, the government significantly increased its criminal law enforcement efforts. (41) From January to November 2022, the Ministry of Internal Affairs (MoIA) identified six cases of child trafficking. (17,43) MoIA reported that one criminal case was initiated in November 2022 for involving a child in prostitution and in child pornography. Four additional criminal cases were initiated for child trafficking, resulting in three prosecutions. (17) In addition, MoIA investigated 15 cases involving a child in criminal activity, a significant increase over previous years; however, it is unclear if any of those cases involved children in drug production, drug trade, or other forced labor. Of those cases, 13 ended in an indictment and 2 investigations are ongoing. (17) In 2022, the government sentenced one individual to 7 years and 6 months in prison in a child forced labor case. (17)

In 2022, the government increased its provision of training to address human trafficking. Employees of 139 migration offices of the State Migration Service received training on human trafficking, victim identification indicators, and children's rights issues. (43) Multiple government agencies and NGOs also participated in several anti-human trafficking-related trainings organized by IOM, with financial support from the U.S. Department of State and USAID. In addition, the MoIA and the Ministry of Education held educational seminars at 36 secondary schools to raise awareness of human trafficking. (43) Furthermore, the government distributed 7,000 educational booklets and 7,000 flyers on human trafficking to state agencies and offices, and a human trafficking awareness-raising video, produced by the State Committee for Family, Women, and Children Affairs (SCFWCA), aired on social media and public television. (43)

In 2022, reports indicate that law enforcement and other government agencies used human trafficking indicators when detecting potential victims of human trafficking among vulnerable populations, including children. (43) In some cases, police treat children begging or engaging in street work as a family issue rather than screening for indicators of forced begging. As a result, these situations are often referred to the Commission on Juvenile Issues and Protection of Minors' Rights for coordination of services, rather than to law enforcement agencies for investigation and, when warranted, criminal prosecution of forced begging cases. (8,25,50-52) In addition, research found that police declined to investigate potential forced begging cases and that children identified in child labor resumed work almost immediately after being identified by law enforcement officials. (3,9,49) Also, child labor law enforcement efforts are concentrated in Baku, with few investigations undertaken outside the capital. (53)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Azerbaijan

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Commission on Juvenile Issues and Protection of Minors' Rights	Coordinates policies at the national level to protect children from the worst forms of child labor. Located within the Cabinet of Ministers and acts as a national-level version of district-level Commissions on Juvenile Issues and Protection of Minors' Rights, which are located in individual district Executive Commissions. (3) Although Commissions on Juvenile Issues and Protection of Minors' Rights exist at both the national and local levels, research was unable to determine the relationship between these respective national and local coordinating bodies. (3)

In 2022, the government amended the Rules of the National Referral Mechanism for Victims of Human Trafficking to modify the Interagency Commission's composition and include NGO members, and to delegate the Commission with implementation of the National Referral Mechanism. (43,54,55) The SCFWCA also continued to regulate, implement, and coordinate child-related policies, including research on child labor. Although the SCFWCA is empowered to work with local governments, particularly district-level Executive Committees, to coordinate policy and research related to children and gather data on the situation of children and families in rural areas, the body has limited capacity to carry out its work. (3,17) In 2022, the SCFWCA conducted trainings on the prevention of child labor for labor inspectors, police inspectors, regional authorities, and business owners. (17)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including lack of coverage for all worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Action Plan on Combating Trafficking in Human Beings (2020–2024)	Aims to address human trafficking through enhanced coordination between relevant government agencies and improved protection for human trafficking victims. Includes action items to improve services for child trafficking victims, address forced child begging, and research and monitor forced labor and child trafficking risks. (56) Amendment to the law On Combating Human Trafficking in 2022 approved the establishment of a working group under the authority of MoA's Trafficking in Persons National Coordinator to oversee the implementation of the National Action Plan. (17,35,57) In October 2022, the government also participated in an IOM- and USAID-led mid-term review meeting on the implementation of the National Action Plan. (43)
Strategy on Children of the Republic of Azerbaijan (2020–2030)	Aims to improve child protection mechanisms and legislation. Through the associated National Action Plan, includes action items on implementing international commitments under ILO Convention 182 and enhancing coordination to detect and prevent child labor and commercial sexual exploitation of children. (58,59) The National Early Childhood Development program was launched as part of the Strategy. Jointly organized by SCFWCA, the EU delegation to Azerbaijan, the Regional Development Public Union, and UNICEF Azerbaijan, the program aims, in part, to increase the capacity of children's services professionals and raise awareness around the health and education of children in four target regions—Ganja, Shirvan, Aghjabadi, and Absheron. (60)
State Program for the Development of Inclusive Education for Children with Disabilities (2018–2024)	Aims to create inclusive education for children with disabilities. In addition to the existing 8 schools nationwide, in 2022, the government established 12 more schools with inclusive classrooms, including training teachers in inclusive teaching methods. (51,62,63) The government continued to develop and publish textbooks for students with intellectual disabilities and methodical aids for teachers and parents during the reporting period. (51)

‡ The government has other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (15,21)

Although the government amended the labor code in 2020 to prohibit children under the age of 18 from engaging in work involving difficult or harmful working conditions, the law does not specifically mention agriculture and research found no policy on hazardous child labor, including in agriculture. (15)

The State Program on Improvement of Official Statistics in the Republic of Azerbaijan (2018–2025) aims to improve and further develop the national statistics system, and includes an action item on developing a methodology for studying child labor and conducting survey research on the prevalence of child labor in Azerbaijan. (61) In 2022, the State Statistical Committee and UNICEF signed a Memorandum of Understanding on Conducting a Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey in Azerbaijan, including a dataset on child labor. (64,65)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including insufficient funding.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Government-run Assistance Centers†	Social Shelter and Rehabilitation Center for Minors‡, MLSPP-run shelter in Baku for vulnerable children, including street children. (3,50) Children are able to stay in these shelters until they turn 18. (16) The shelters were active in 2022. (41) Additionally, Victims Assistance Centers† provide direct social services and social services referrals, education on administrative and legal procedures, and medical assistance to survivors of human trafficking, including children. Funded by MLSPP. (17,39) In 2022, each of the six child trafficking victims identified by MoLA were paid a one-time benefit from the government, and five of them were placed in Victims Assistance Centers and received additional services from these centers. (43)
Targeted Social Assistance Program†	MLSPP-run program that provides cash transfers to vulnerable families. (8) During the reporting period, the government approved an increase in benefit payments for families receiving state assistance, including families with children with disabilities and low-income families. (17,51,66)
MoLA Identification Document Program†	Provides identification documents to undocumented minors who may be street children or victims of human trafficking. (49) In 2022, three identified child trafficking victims were provided with identity cards. (43)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of Azerbaijan.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (14,21,50,67)

In 2022, the Ministry of Education organized training on children's labor rights to 9th, 10th, and 11th grade students. (17) However, the level of government support for NGO-run shelters for trafficking victims is inconsistent. (14) Directors of these shelters note that the unpredictable nature of funding prevents long-term planning and capacity building of shelters, including those that serve child victims. In addition, the number of social workers with training in supporting vulnerable and at-risk children remains low. (14,42,68)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Azerbaijan (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Criminally prohibit the use of children for prostitution and the use and offering of children for the production of pornography and pornographic performances.	2019 – 2022

Government Policies	Adopt a policy that addresses all relevant worst forms of child labor, such as hazardous work in agriculture.	2016 – 2022
	Revise policies on priority crops that mandate production targets to help prevent child labor in agriculture.	2019 – 2022

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT REGRESSION IN PRACTICES THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2022, Bangladesh made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Department of Inspections for Factories and Establishments rescued 3,990 children from working in various hazardous sectors. Furthermore, the government added five additional sectors to the hazardous work list (dried fish production; informal steel-based work; brick and stone production, collection, and carrying; tailoring and informal production of garments; and waste management), officially prohibiting children from working in these jobs. The Bangladesh government also launched its first national study on human trafficking. The study will help provide a baseline understanding of the human trafficking situation in the country, including how human trafficking crimes are committed and how victims are targeted. The government supported UNICEF's rollout of the Myanmar Curriculum to over 250,000 Rohingya children in 2022, providing Rohingya students with a formal, standardized education based on Burma's national curriculum. However, despite these initiatives to address child labor, Bangladesh is assessed as having made only minimal advancement because it continues to hinder educational opportunities for Rohingya children in 2022. Reports indicate that the Bangladesh government closed Rohingya-operated schools and threatened to confiscate UNHCR-issued identity cards from Rohingya teachers and move them to the flood-prone island of Bhasan Char, which hampered education access for Rohingya children. Furthermore, children in Bangladesh are still subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and forced labor in the drying of fish and the production of bricks. Children also perform dangerous tasks in the production of garments and leather goods. The Bangladesh Labor Act does not apply to children working in all sectors in which child labor occurs. Though the government did not publicly release information on its criminal law enforcement efforts related to child labor in 2022, penalties for child labor violations can only be imposed after a lengthy legal process and, when courts do impose them, the fines are too low to deter child labor law violations.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table I provides key indicators on children's work and education in Bangladesh. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report. The Bangladesh Bureau of Statistics, with support from the ILO, started collecting data for their national child labor survey in 2022. The survey results have not yet been published. (1-3)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Approximately 1.7 million children in Bangladesh, many under the age of 11, are engaged in child labor. Approximately 3.45 million children between the ages of 5 and 17 are working in Bangladesh, of which 1.28 million are engaged in hazardous work. (3,27) Hazardous sectors include tanneries, shipbreaking, the dried fish industry, and rolling cigarettes. (1,3,12) In addition, 93 percent of child labor in Bangladesh occurs in the informal sector, including domestic work, street work, and work on small agricultural farms. (6,9,28) There are more than 400,000 children engaged in domestic work in Bangladesh. Some girls are forced into domestic work and are abused by their employers. (3,4,29) Further, children throughout Bangladesh are sexually exploited, including with the hazardous use of steroids for girls to appear older, in the country's legal and illegal brothels, and child commercial sexual exploitation remained widespread during the reporting period. (3,9,30) Reports indicate that some police officers accept bribes to verify that workers in registered brothels are older than age 18 and to procure falsified documents for younger workers. (9,26) Some reports suggest that children are being hired at the local district level for jobs funded by the government's job creation projects. (3)

A The government supported UNICEF's rollout of the Myanmar Curriculum to over 250,000 Rohingya children in 2022, providing Rohingya students with a formal, standardized education based on Burma's national curriculum. (86) However, during the reporting period, the Government of Bangladesh closed most Rohingya-operated schools and continued to ban Rohingya children from attending schools outside of refugee camps. (31-35) It also prohibits teaching Rohingya children the Bangla language or the national curriculum as part of the government's policy to prevent Rohingya refugees from integrating and permanently residing in the country. (32,33,36-39) Furthermore, during the reporting period, the government threatened to confiscate UNHCR-issued identity cards from Rohingya teachers and students and to move them to the flood-prone island of Bhasan Char. (32-40) Finally, there are reports of Bangladeshi officials taking bribes to provide human traffickers access to refugee camps and facilitate the trafficking of Rohingya children. (3) NGOs allege that some officials allow traffickers to operate at the India-Bangladesh border and check-points. (3,9)

More than 40 percent of schools lack basic sanitation facilities and basic hygiene services, and one in five schools lack safe drinking water. (41) Many schools in Bangladesh are overcrowded and over 80 percent run double shifts. (3) The country does not have an adequate number of teachers for an education system of its size. (3) The Primary Teacher Training Institutes cannot keep up with the demand for teachers, particularly in rural areas. (3) Other barriers to education include the high costs for transportation, uniforms, and school supplies. (3,6,42) In 2022, almost 20 million children were vulnerable to extreme weather, floods, river erosion, and sea-level rise. (43,44) Increases in such climate-related natural disasters that result in damage to property and crops push large sections of the population into poverty, making children more vulnerable to exploitative child labor and human trafficking. (3,43,44)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Bangladesh has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Bangladesh’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including a lack of protections against the commercial sexual exploitation of children.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	19	Sections 1–2, 34 and 284 of the Bangladesh Labor Act; Sections 159, 161, and 175 of the Bangladesh EPZ Labor Act, 2019. (28,45)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Sections 39–42 of the Bangladesh Labor Act (28)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Sections 39–42 of the Bangladesh Labor Act; Statutory Regulatory Order Number 65, List of Worst Form of Work for Children (28,46,47)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Sections 370, 371, and 374 of the Penal Code; Sections 2, 3, 6, and 9 of the Prevention and Suppression of Human Trafficking Act (48,49)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Sections 2,3, and 6 of the Prevention and Suppression of Human Trafficking Act; Sections 2 and 6 of the Suppression of Violence Against Women and Children Act (49,50)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Sections 372 and 373 of the Penal Code; Sections 78 and 80 of the Children’s Act; Sections 2,3, 6 and 11 of the Prevention and Suppression of Human Trafficking Act; Sections 2 and 8 of the Pornography Control Act (48,49,51,52)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No		Section 79 of the Children’s Act (51)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No		Anti-Terrorism Act of 2009. (57)
Compulsory Education Age	No		Sections 2 and 3 of the Primary Education (Compulsory) Act (58)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 17 of the Constitution (59)

* Country has no conscription (60)

During the reporting period, the Bangladesh government revised the list of hazardous work to include five additional sectors: dried fish manufacturing; street-based child labor such as hawking and trash collection; production, collection, and transportation of bricks and collection and transportation of stones; local tailoring and informal garment sectors; and garbage and waste management. (3,47) However, even with the hazardous work list amendment, the list does not cover domestic work, in which children are known to work long hours and are exposed to violence and sexual assault.(3,15,46,61-63)

The Bangladesh Labor Act does not meet international standards because a number of sectors are excluded from its application, including seamen, ocean-going vessels, agriculture farms with fewer than 10 workers, and domestic work. (28) Bangladesh does not criminalize the use, procurement, or offering of children in pornographic performances. Bangladesh does not criminalize the use of children who are not under guardianship in prostitution. (48,52) Bangladesh criminalizes the use of children in the transport of drugs, but does not criminalize the use of children in the production of drugs. (51) The Bangladesh Constitution also does not criminally prohibit the recruitment of children by non-state armed groups. (59) No compulsory education age is in effect because the compulsory education age of 10 in the Primary Education (Compulsory) Act does not go into effect until it is published in the Gazette. In addition, as the Primary Education (Compulsory) Act only provides compulsory education for children up to age 10, even if it is put into effect, children between the ages of 10 to 18 would remain particularly vulnerable to child labor as they do not have to be in school and they are not able to legally work without restriction. (16,64)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Department of Inspection for Factories and Establishments (DIFE)	Located within the Ministry of Labor and Employment (MOLE). (64) Enforces labor laws, including those related to child labor and hazardous work. (65) During the reporting period, carried out monthly awareness programs in factories and at district offices on the elimination of child labor among enterprises, employers, and the public. (3) Also removed 3,990 children from automobile, brick, and stone crushing; engineering workshops; bakeries, hotels and restaurants; and the plastics sector. (3)
Bangladesh Police	Enforce Penal Code provisions protecting children from forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation. (66) Through its Trafficking in Persons Monitoring Cell, investigate cases of human trafficking and enforce the Prevention and Suppression of Human Trafficking Act's anti-human trafficking provisions. (67) Operate victim support centers for trafficked women and children through partnership with 11 NGOs. (68)
Bangladesh Labor Court	Prosecutes labor law violations, including those related to child labor, and imposes fines or sanctions against employers. (28)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Bangladesh took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the Department of Inspection for Factories and Establishments (DIFE) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including a lack of unannounced inspections in the export processing zones.

†Data from July 1, 2021, to June 30, 2022.

Bangladesh employs 400 labor inspectors for a workforce of over 74 million workers. (66,73) The ILO and NGOs report that the number of labor inspectors in Bangladesh is inadequate and that the number of inspections carried out is insufficient given the size and population of the country. (73,74) The shortage in human resources and high turnover rates at DIFE led the agency to omit around 95 percent of industrial and commercial establishments from its inspection list. (3) Sources also indicate that DIFE is insufficiently funded and that inspectors are reluctant to enforce labor laws for fear of pushing people out of work and into poverty. (3)

Under the Export Processing Zone (EPZ) Labor Rules, published in October 2022, DIFE is required to provide notice to the Bangladesh EPZ Authority (BEPZA) by “intimation” prior to conducting inspections. (75) Following the inspection, DIFE must submit its report to the BEPZA Inspector General to implement recommendations the BEPZA Inspector General deems feasible. DIFE cannot file cases in the labor courts for violations in the EPZ. (75) Rather, the BEPZA Inspector General must file all cases in the EPZ Labor Court. During the reporting period, DIFE and BEPZA jointly developed standard operating procedures for inspecting EPZ factories. (3,75) For factories outside of the EPZs, DIFE must notify the establishment three times regarding a labor law violation before it can lodge a complaint in the labor courts. (3,75) Penalties for a child labor law violation carry a maximum fine of approximately $47 (5,000 taka), which is insufficient to act as a deterrent. (3,18,28,45) In addition, while a previous reciprocal referral mechanism existed between labor authorities and social services, DIFE lacks an active referral and rehabilitation system for children. (3,6)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Bangladesh took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including the lack of publicly released criminal law enforcement information.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT REGRESSION IN PRACTICES THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

According to independent reports, during the reporting period, the Government of Bangladesh repatriated 21 survivors of human trafficking, including children. (9) But the Government of Bangladesh did not provide specific information on criminal law enforcement efforts against child labor crimes. Some reports have suggested that investigation coordination between agencies and authorities is lacking. (3) Many cases are resolved through mediation and settlement rather than prosecution. (3,6) According to reports, criminal investigators do not receive sufficient training on forced labor and child labor. (6) Despite the high number of children engaged in commercial sexual exploitation, the Government of Bangladesh largely ignores the issue due to the prevailing belief that commercial sexual exploitation is not a major issue in the country. (3) DIFE has the authority to refer cases only to the labor courts and not the criminal courts, even in cases requiring criminal court intervention. The labor courts have never referred a case to the criminal courts. (3) Corruption and the lack of enforcement of Occupational Health and Safety Codes contribute to industrial fires and fire-related worker deaths, including child laborers. (10,70,76)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including coordination efforts that encompasses all child labor issues.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Child Labor Welfare Council	Coordinates government efforts to guide and monitor the implementation of the National Plan of Action on the Elimination of Child Labor. (77) Chaired by MOLE and comprising of officials representing relevant government ministries, international organizations, child advocacy groups, and employer and worker organizations. (77) In 2022, the Council held Child Labor Monitoring Committee meetings at the district level and organized discussions with various stakeholders on the elimination of child labor. (78) MOLE integrated the workflow of different divisional councils with that of different NGOs, district, and sub-district level committees to better coordinate efforts to address child labor. While the councils held regular meetings in 2022, reports suggest that coordination efforts at the district level are limited to child marriage, and do not encompass all child labor issues in Bangladesh. (3)

The Counter-Trafficking National Coordination Committee under the Ministry of Home Affairs (MOHA) formed counter-trafficking committees at the central government and grassroots levels to improve coordination. (78)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including not covering all aspects of child labor in the country.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Plan of Action on the Elimination of Child Labor (2021–2025)	Identifies strategies for developing institutional capacity, increasing access to education and health services, raising social awareness, strengthening law enforcement, and creating prevention and reintegration programs. (79) Although there has been some improvement, the National Plan of Action on the Elimination of Child Labor faces coordination and implementation challenges among ministries. (3,6,80) During the reporting period, MOLE activated the National Monitoring Core Committee prescribed under the National Plan of Action. The committee formulates national-level policies to eliminate child labor with assistance from NGOs. (3)
National Plan of Action for Prevention and Suppression of Human Trafficking (2018–2025)	Establishes a plan to build government capacity to address trafficking in persons and provide economic and social safety nets for victims and vulnerable populations, particularly children. (81,82) Led by the Ministry of Home Affairs (MOHA). The national plan has been extended to 2025 due to the slow progress made during 2020 and 2021 pandemic lockdowns. (11) In 2022, MOHA routinely monitored and implemented the action plan through a government organized NGO coordination committee. (83) MOHA also conducted consultative meetings with domestic and international organizations to collect feedback on the ongoing implementation process. (2) During the reporting period, the government established special tribunals, created an anti-trafficking task force to curb human trafficking, and took initiatives to prevent child trafficking, mostly for child labor in the informal sector. (78)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (84)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT REGRESSION IN PRACTICES THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the discontinuation of a social program that could cause an increase in child labor.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Elimination of Hazardous Child Labor, Phase IV (2021–2023)†	Government of Bangladesh-funded, $33 million, 3-year project implemented by MOLE. (70) Removed 90,000 children from hazardous labor in Phases I through III by providing informal and technical education, stipends, and awareness raising for employers and families. (21) Phase IV of the Elimination of Hazardous Child Labor program was approved in October 2021. (6,16) MOLE has signed agreements with 112 selected NGOs to remove 100,000 children from hazardous work. (70) Under the program, NGOs will provide education and vocational training to affected child laborers. During the education period, each child's family will receive a monthly stipend of $9 (1,000 taka). After completing the training, each child will receive $93 (10,000 taka) as financial compensation. (3) During the reporting period, NGOs completed a nationwide child labor survey to identify the child labor situation in 43 hazardous sectors. (3) However, the government did not make the survey public. (70)
School Programs‡	Second Chance Education is funded by the Bangladesh Rural Advancement Committee and provides informal schooling for children ages 8 to 14 who have dropped out of formal schools. (2) Along with the Educating a Child Initiative, the program supported 170,000 students from 2018 to 2022. (78) The School Feeding Program, which ended in July 2022, helped implement school meal programs in poverty-stricken areas for 12 years. Reports have noted that the decision to end the program could fuel school dropouts and increase child labor since many families keep their children in school due to feeding programs. (3)
Child Protection Programs‡	Child protection programs in Bangladesh include Child Sensitive Social Protection in Bangladesh (CSPB) II which will end in 2024. (66,70) The CSPB Project is implemented by the Ministry of Social Welfare's Department of Social Services, with support from UNICEF, to implement the Children Act (2013). This program will help to reduce violence, abuse and neglect against children. (16,66) The project offers case management services to identify vulnerable children and provide intervention plans, psychological counseling through the Child Friendly Services hub, and conditional cash support to reduce child labor. (70) During the reporting period, CSPB supported underprivileged families to reduce child labor, prevent early marriages, and reduce school dropouts. (70) The project offers a 24-hour emergency hotline service through Child Helpline 1098. (2) Between July 2017 and June 2022, the helpline received more than 1.4 million complaints, stopped 2,754 child marriages, and served 31,980 callers with psychosocial counseling, 18,753 callers with legal assistance, and 8,572 callers with protection from violence and abuse. (66)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (80)

Research has found that the government's social programs often align 16357 with the priorities of various domestic and foreign funders and lack coordination among relevant ministries to address the cross-cutting nature of child labor issues, such as its intersections with economic insecurity and education. (22) In addition, DIFE maintains the 16357 Hotline to receive complaints involving labor law violations. During the reporting period, the 16357 Hotline received 612 complaints; however, the complaints were not related to child labor. (3) The Department of Social Services manages the child protection 1098 Helpline. During the reporting period, the Ministry of Women and Children Affairs maintained a mobile app called "Joy," which records dialogue and images of child labor victims and perpetrators and sends relevant information to the National Helpline Center 109 and nearby police stations. (2) During the reporting period, around 300 people received emergency support through the "Joy" app. (66)

In 2022, Bangladesh launched its first national study on human trafficking. The study will help provide a baseline for the trafficking situation and examine how human trafficking crimes are committed and victims targeted in Bangladesh. (85)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Bangladesh (Table 11).

In 2022, Belize made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government approved the National Child Labor Policy and Strategy 2022–2025, which aims to eliminate the worst forms of child labor by 2025 and prioritizes addressing legislative and information gaps, increasing child labor law compliance, and reducing barriers to education. The Ministry of Human Development also introduced new standard operating procedures on human trafficking and trained 85 percent of social workers, 80 percent of labor officers, and 78 percent of immigration officers on using the procedures to refer victims to care. However, children in Belize are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in dangerous tasks in agriculture and construction. Belize does not meet the international standard for prohibitions of hazardous work because children over age 14 are permitted to work in dangerous activities like mining and construction. In addition, Belize has not adequately prohibited the use of children in illicit activities, including the production and trafficking of drugs.

	Use in illicit activities, including trafficking of drugs and weapons (3,9,12)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Government officials state that there are anecdotal reports of Belize being a destination for child sexual exploitation, with reports of children being trafficked in areas frequented by tourists, such as Belize City and San Pedro. (8,13) Law enforcement reported that the commercial sexual exploitation of children involving female minors does occur in bars, informal brothels, unregistered hotels, and guest houses. (3) Migrant children are trafficked for commercial sexual exploitation, with most typically originating from Guatemala, El Salvador, and Honduras. (3,7) Sources also report the prevalence of "sugar daddy" arrangements, in which a wealthy male offers to pay school fees, provide cash payments, or purchase groceries or gifts for a family in exchange for sexual favors from a young, usually female, family member. (11) A limited number of sources also indicate that male child trafficking victims from Belize City were forced to transport and distribute drugs and ammunition and commit murders as part of gang warfare. (3,7,12) The contraband trade, in which children work as smugglers, vendors, and informants, has increased since the COVID-19 pandemic restrictions were lifted due to a reduced number of enforcement officers manning border entry points. (3) Furthermore, some families remove their children from school on their fifteenth birthday so they can work in the service industry or smuggle contraband near the Mexican and Guatemalan borders, where smuggling is known to be a high-profit enterprise. (3,7)

Belize lacks a recent comprehensive child labor study, which makes it difficult to clearly determine the sectors and activities in which working children are engaged. (5,8) Children below the age of 12 informally work in the agriculture, fishing, wholesale and retail, service, and tourism industries. In urban areas, children as young as 10 years old work with their families or independently as street vendors. (3) Mennonite children, undocumented migrant children, and children from Belizean families who perform seasonal jobs often perform hazardous tasks on Mennonite land, including operating machinery and fumigating with chemicals. (3,9) In the fishing industry, young boys from coastal communities dive for aquatic species and to free snagged nets. (3) Some of these children cannot swim or may be involved in swimming at extreme depths. (8) Boys in construction industries are exposed to heavy equipment and tools, work with electricity without any formal training or supervision, carry heavy loads, and work at dangerous heights without harnesses. Children working as store clerks in the Corozal Commercial Free Zone at the border with Mexico carry heavy loads to unload containers and have extended work hours during peak season. (3)

In Belize, primary and secondary education is tuition free up to age 14, and in-person learning at all education levels resumed in August of 2022. In areas lacking a school, the state provides free transportation for children to attend the nearest primary school. (3,7) Truancy officers reported that in some schools in northern Belize, up to half of primary school students are absent from school to pick beans and other crops during the harvest season. (3,14) Belize lacks an adequate number of qualified teachers, basic supplies, and adequate facilities, and many children's access to education is hindered by the cost of school fees, textbooks, uniforms, and meals. (3,7,8,14)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Belize has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Belize's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including a lack of prohibitions related to the use of children in the production and trafficking of drugs.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

The government is reviewing the Trafficking in Persons (Prohibition) Act and the Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children (Prohibition) Act to consider merging them into one piece of legislation and held consultations with stakeholders in 2022. (11) In July, the government also announced that it will increase the compulsory education age from 14 years to 16 years by 2025. (3,25)

While Belizean law sets the minimum legal age for work in wholesale and retail trade or business at age 14, the law is inconsistent with international standards on light work because the types of light work permissible for children ages 12 to 14 have not yet been identified. (15,16) Belizean law is also inconsistent with international standards on hazardous work as children over age 14 may work in industrial undertakings—including activities such as mining, manufacturing, and construction. (15) In addition, although Belizean law indicates that children under age 18 are prohibited from being employed or engaged in any activity that may be detrimental to their health, education, or mental, physical, or moral development, the law does not specify which employment activities are detrimental to children. (15,17) A list of hazardous work prohibited for all children has not been adopted as law. (26) The Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children (Prohibition) Act and the Criminal Code prohibit all forms of child sexual exploitation, with the former explicitly prohibiting child pornography. (20,21) However, consensual sex with children ages 16 or 17 is permitted, including in cases in which a person gives or promises remuneration, goods, food, or other benefits in exchange for the sexual act. This provision leaves children vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, including child sex trafficking. (3,20) Belizean law does not contain a prohibition on the use of children in specific illicit activities, including the production and trafficking of drugs. (21,27)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Rural Transformation, Community Development, Labor, and Local Government	Enforces child labor laws through its Department of Labor. (3,7,9) Coordinates with other agencies on child labor reporting, monitoring, and enforcement activities. (25) In 2022, the Department of Labor conducted child labor awareness trainings for various stakeholders across the country on the new National Child Labor Policy and Strategy 2022–2025, including stakeholders in the agriculture sector. (3,28) The department also provided educational sessions on child labor to approximately 1,000 high school students in the northern districts, the epicenter of sugarcane cultivation, and a similar session was provided to employers and employees in the service and agriculture sectors. (3)
Department of Human Services, Ministry of Human Development, Families, and Indigenous People's Affairs	Enforces criminal laws regarding forced child labor, child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, the recruitment and use of child soldiers, and use of children in illicit activities. (3,7) Has a case management system, FAMCare, which is used in all cases. (11,25) In 2022, partnering with the Human Trafficking Institute, the Ministry of Human Development introduced new standard operating procedures, the Trafficking in Persons Identification Guidelines and Referral Standard Operating Procedures for Frontline Officials in Belize. During the reporting period, trained 85 percent of social workers, 80 percent of labor officers, and 78 percent of immigration officers on using the procedures to refer victims to care. (11)
Belize Police Department (BPD)	Investigates cases of child labor, commercial sexual exploitation, and human trafficking through Sexual Offense and Family Violence Units. (7-9) Through its Anti-Trafficking in Persons (A-TIP) Unit, uses specialized screening to identify potential survivors of trafficking and forced labor. The A-TIP Unit also works closely with its counterparts in the A-TIP Council, which is the interagency governmental council overseeing cases involving human trafficking and forced labor. (3,7) Works with the Department of Labor to carry out investigations into child labor, compile evidence, and submits cases to the Office of the Director of Public Prosecution for prosecution. (3)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Belize took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient funding for the labor inspectorate.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In 2022, with the lifting of COVID-19 restrictions in April, labor officers were able to freely travel in both urban and remote areas to conduct inspections. The labor inspectorate conducted country-wide inspections in industries most at risk for child labor, except in mining, quarrying, and household activities. (3) There were 57 child labor inspections conducted at suspected worksites in the tourism, agriculture, street vending, retail, and construction sectors, and inspections were carried out in English, Spanish, and Kriol. The Department of Labor is required to visit every business at least once a year, but it usually falls short of this goal due to a lack of resources. (3)

Although the government does not publish information regarding labor inspectorate funding and reports that resources are sufficient to carry out inspections, sources indicate that funding for the labor inspectorate is insufficient to conduct accurate inspections throughout the country and to address child labor. (3) The training budget for 2022 was approximately $43,650. Reporting indicates that not all offices possess the necessary transportation and personnel to operate effectively, affecting the quantity and quality of inspections, especially in rural areas. (3,7) Reports also indicate that it is difficult to follow up on the status of complaints made about suspected child labor cases. (3,9,29)

The labor inspectorate is authorized to issue warnings or citations for labor law violations, but the court must assess penalties for those citations, which may range from a fine to a prison sentence. The legal penalty for employing a child is only a fine of $12.50 or imprisonment of 2 months. (3) Liquor licensing boards, which also have a responsibility to detect and report cases of child labor, routinely fail to conduct required inspections of restaurants and bars. (11,29,30) Thus, inspections and penalties may be insufficient to deter child labor violations including child trafficking. Belize has a system for referring children found during inspections to appropriate social services. (3,25)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Belize took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient allocation of human resources.

In March, the Belize Police Department and Immigration Department identified 20 minors on board a bus bound for an orange orchard in the Stann Creek district as potential victims of child labor. Upon further investigation, two of the minors were confirmed to be accompanying their parents and not victims of exploitation. (3) The Anti-Trafficking in Persons (A-TIP) Unit and the Department of Human Services (DHS) carried out subsequent investigations concerning the remaining 18 minors and discovered they were unaccompanied minors, some traveling without necessary documentation, who intended to work in agriculture. (3) Additionally, during the reporting period, the A-TIP Unit removed four female children from situations of suspected trafficking. The four children were provided protection and care by the DHS. (3) The Government of Belize also investigated two cases involving both sex and forced labor of children during the reporting period. (3, 11) The two cases involved two girls as victims, one Belizean and one Guatemalan national, and the investigations are ongoing. Three cases involving sex trafficking of children brought into Belize, two from Guatemala, and one from Honduras, are also ongoing. (3) Furthermore, reporting indicates that there are bureaucratic inefficiencies with the justice system and a lack of personnel, including judges. (11) According to the A-TIP Council, no cases of child sex tourism were registered, but officers continued to do screening for this crime at the airport. Moreover, Belizean authorities conducted multiple raids and unannounced inspections at worksites suspected of child labor violations, as part of a multinational police operation. (11, 14)

In 2022, 540 police officers received training about trafficking in persons and child labor laws. Investigators continue to report they have sufficient office facilities but lack adequate transportation and fuel to carry out investigations. (3) There are anecdotal but consistent reports of low-level officials tolerating and participating in human trafficking-related offenses. (11, 13, 14, 32, 33)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Child Labor Committee	Coordinates efforts among ministries to prevent and eliminate child labor and implement the National Child Labor Policy. Led by the Ministry of Rural Transformation, Community Development, Labor, and Local Government and 14 government and civil society members. (3, 33) Held five meetings in 2022 to review and approve the third draft of the National Child Labor Policy and Strategy 2022–2025. Includes the Child Labor Secretariat and Inspectorate, which identifies, coordinates, and reports on all child labor activities. (3) In 2022, Child Labor Secretariat and Inspectorate held several working sessions, including signing an MOU with sugarcane industry stakeholders for the elimination of child labor by 2025, and a meeting for stakeholders in the sugar, banana, and citrus industries about child labor. (3)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of legal implementation of a new national child labor policy.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Child Labor Policy and Strategy (2022–2025)†	Harmonizes and standardizes the definition of a child across all laws and establishes interagency coordination and information sharing. The policy was created in consultation with stakeholders and developed and funded by ILO, UNICEF, and the Government of Belize. (3) Has a policy goal of reducing the incidence of child labor in Belize and taking significant steps to eliminate the worst forms of child labor by 2025. Prioritizes addressing legislative and information gaps, increasing child labor law compliance, reducing barriers to education, and preventing child labor by ensuring adequate support. (25) Includes feedback from 25 entities on the effectiveness of existing policies on child labor and potential improvements. Quarterly meetings on the status of policy implementation will be organized under the National Child Labor Committee with detailed output and outcome-based reports to be issued at the end of each meeting. (25) Recommends raising both the minimum age for work and the compulsory school age to 16. In January, a national validation workshop for feedback on the new policy was held and the final version was published in July, but the report largely relies on child labor survey data from 2013, limiting its insights. (25) While the policy contains a detailed list of hazardous work activities and conditions and a light work list, they are not legally enforceable. Stakeholders also identified gaps in legislation. (25)
CARE Model	Coordinates the protection, care, and monitoring of sexually exploited and trafficked children. Outlines the role of the Department of Human Services and BPD in receiving allegations of commercial sexual exploitation of children and referring children to services. (3,8) Began in 2020 and was active during the reporting period. (14)
Amnesty Program‡	Offers a path to regularization for qualifying undocumented migrants, including children. From August to the end of December, the Immigration Department received 10,962 Amnesty Program applications, which could help prevent child labor in this population. (3,14)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (34,35)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government participated in a program that may contribute to eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in this social program, including adequacy of the program to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
National Resources Center for Inclusive Education†	Ministry of Education, Culture, Science, Technology and E-Governance program that funds and coordinates school feeding programs in under-resourced communities. (3)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of Belize.

In 2022, the government participated in a multi-country program, Angel Watch, that helps notify immigration officers of the arrival of suspect individuals and registered sex-offenders. In addition, the government continued to sponsor billboards at the international airport and at border crossing points specifically to address child sex tourism. (11,36) Research found no evidence of government programs to prevent or eliminate commercial sexual exploitation of children, or to assist children working in agriculture, fisheries, or construction. (3,9)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Belize (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law's light work provisions specify the activities and conditions in which light work may be undertaken.	2021 – 2022
	Adopt a list of hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children and ensure that all children under age 18 are prohibited from engaging in hazardous work.	2009 – 2022
	Ensure that the law prohibits all forms of commercial sexual exploitation of children ages 16 and 17.	2013 – 2022

	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 into non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2022

In 2022, Benin made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government of Benin provided criminal law enforcement data on investigations and prosecutions concerning the worst forms of child labor for publication in this report. The government also renewed and contributed funding to the Integrated National School Feeding Program, which provides meals at 75 percent of Benin's schools. Finally, labor inspectors, social workers, and judicial police officers received training from the Directorate General of Labor on standard operating procedures for child labor cases. However, children in Benin are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including forced labor in the production of cotton and crushed granite. Children also perform dangerous tasks in domestic work and street vending. There are many barriers to education, especially for children with disabilities. In addition, inadequate funding for the labor inspectorate may impede government efforts to protect children from the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Benin. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Sector/ Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced begging (4,15) Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and use in the production of pornography (4,7,13,15-17)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Child trafficking occurs mostly within Benin, but it also occurs to other countries, primarily Gabon, Togo, Nigeria, Niger, and the Republic of the Congo, for purposes of domestic work, commercial sexual exploitation, and work in vending, agriculture, and mining. (4,7,15,18-21) Within Benin, child trafficking primarily occurs for forced labor. (4,15) Children living in the northern regions of Benin are particularly vulnerable to human trafficking to urban regions in southern Benin. (15,17) Reports also indicate that children living in the lakeside areas of southeastern Benin, including the commune of So Ava, are sometimes subjected to debt bondage. (4,15,17) Children work below the minimum age in the production of cotton, Benin's top export crop, and they are sometimes exposed to dangerous pesticides. (3,4,18) Furthermore, children are subjected to hazardous labor, and at times forced labor, in granite quarrying. (6) Children working at quarries break stones, dig sand and gravel, work at elevated heights, use construction equipment, and are exposed to dust. (4) Traditionally, under a practice known locally as vidomègon, children live with relatives or family friends and perform household services in exchange for educational opportunities. A majority of these children are girls, and many are subjected to labor exploitation and sexual abuse. (4,7,10,15,19,22)

In Benin, primary education is free and compulsory for all children between ages 6 and 11, and secondary education is free for girls through grade nine. (23) While boys and girls attend primary school at roughly the same rates, boys complete secondary school at a higher rate than girls. (23,24) Evidence suggests that incidences of abuse in school, including corporal punishment (outlawed in 2015), sexual harassment, and sexual abuse by teachers in exchange for better grades, continue to hamper educational access, especially for girls. (4,13,16,18) Inadequate toilets and sanitation facilities, as well as lack of access to menstruation education and products, are further barriers to girls’ education. (4,20) In Benin, other barriers to education include the need to travel long distances, insufficient numbers of teachers, and inadequate access for students with disabilities. (18,25) To address the latter, the government runs 20 specialty schools in the country, but access is limited in rural areas. (4,18) In rural areas, sometimes children do not have birth certificates due to the costs and parents’ limited understanding of birth registration procedures. Children without documentation may be denied access to education, leaving them more vulnerable to child labor. (16,18,23)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Benin has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Benin's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the lack of free public basic education guaranteed by law.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Articles 166 and 301 of the Labor Code; Article 210 of the Child Code (26,27)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 210 and 353 of the Child Code; Article 1 of the Hazardous Occupations List (27,28)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Hazardous Occupations List (28)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 3 and 303 of the Labor Code; Articles 212 and 353 of the Child Code; Article 4 of the Law Relating to the Transportation and Trafficking of Minors (26,27,29)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 2–4, 6, 15, 16, 18, and 21–25 of the Law Relating to the Transportation and Trafficking of Minors; Articles 201, 212, 352, and 353 of the Child Code; Articles 499–501 and 504 of the Penal Code (27,29,30)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 3 of the Law on the Prevention and Repression of Violence Against Women; Article 4 of the Law Relating to the Transportation and Trafficking of Minors; Articles 212 and 378 of the Child Code; Article 504 of the Penal Code (27,29-31)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 212 and 353 of the Child Code; Article 4 of the Law Relating to the Transportation and Trafficking of Minors (27,29)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 6 of Law 2005-43 (32)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 6 of Law 2005-43; Title II, Article 32 of the Constitution (32,33)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Articles 2 and 4 of the Law Relating to the Transportation and Trafficking of Minors (29)
Compulsory Education Age	No	11‡	Article 24 of Act N° 2003-17; Article 113 of the Child Code (27,34)
Free Public Education	No		Article 13 of the Constitution; Article 114 of the Child Code; Article 24 of Act N° 2003-17 (27,33,34)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (23,34)

Children in Benin are required to attend primary school, which lasts 6 years and typically ends at age 11. This standard makes children ages 11 through 14 vulnerable to child labor as they are not required to attend school but are not legally permitted to work. (26,27,34) In addition, while the law provides free primary education to all children, basic education through the lower secondary level is not guaranteed by law, which may increase the risk of children's vulnerability to child labor. (27,33,34)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor and Civil Service (MOLCS)	Enforces child labor laws and investigates labor code infractions. (18) Coordinates the National Executive Committee to Combat Child Labor ( Comité Directeur National de Lutte Contre le Travail des Enfants ). (4)
Ministry of the Interior and Public Security	Enforces criminal laws related to the protection of minors, including the worst forms of child labor and child trafficking, through the Central Office for the Protection of Minors, Families, and the Prevention of Human Trafficking (OCPM). (4,13,15,17) Maintains a child trafficking database—Benin's Children ( Enfants du Benin )—to track and process child trafficking cases. (19) Coordinates with MOLCS to inspect labor code infractions related to child labor, and coordinates with the Ministry of Social Affairs and Microfinance to provide assistance to survivors of labor exploitation. (4) Through OCPM's vice squad ( Brigade des Moeurs ), addresses child trafficking for sexual exploitation. (4,15)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Benin took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Civil Service (MOLCS) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including restrictions on inspections in agriculture.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$189,000 (18)	$108,000 (4)

In 2022, the government increased the overall funding for the Ministry of Labor's Directorate of Labor to $264,000, of which $108,000 was reserved for the labor inspectorate. Of Benin's 72 labor inspectors, 29 are dedicated to conducting child labor inspections. (4) Labor inspectors, social workers, and judicial police officers received training from the General Directorate of Labor on standard operating procedures for child labor cases. The labor inspectorate targeted inspections in several sectors in which children work, including open-air markets, workshops, mines, quarries, and construction worksites. (4) MOLCS claims that it is not permitted to conduct labor inspections in agriculture due to the lack of an interministerial decree from the Ministry of Agriculture. The labor code, by contrast, allows labor inspectors to freely enter any workplace to carry out investigations, and it requires all civil authorities to collaborate with labor officials to facilitate inspections. (9,18,26,35) This gap between law and practice means that no inspections are carried out in agriculture, a sector in which child labor is known to be present. (9,18,35) In addition, no labor inspections occurred in several other sectors where children are known to work, including fishing, domestic work, and gold mining. (4)

Labor inspections are conducted via committee and require the presence of labor inspectors, police officers, and social workers. In practice, research suggests that these requirements create logistical challenges to the labor inspection process. (18) In prior years, the labor inspectorate lacked sufficient transportation to conduct regular inspections, but in 2022, the government provided some motorcycles for department-level labor inspectors to complete their work. (4) MOLCS estimated that its budget allocation still meets less than 10 percent of its needs. (4) Research also indicates that Benin does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (4,36,37) In addition to child labor violations found through the labor inspectorate, the Ministry of Social Affairs reported identifying 575 violations of child labor laws and 517 cases of child trafficking. (4)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Benin took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (18)	Yes (4)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (18)	108 (4)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (18)	49 (4)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (18)	38 (4)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (18)	Unknown
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (18)	Yes (4)

In 2022, for the first time in several years, Benin provided for publication criminal law enforcement data on cases related to the worst forms of child labor. (4) The government has a mechanism to enable criminal authorities and social services to reciprocally refer children found in the worst forms of child labor and human trafficking, and social workers regularly refer cases. (4,15) The government also runs a child assistance hotline, which takes anonymous tips and is staffed 24 hours a day by French and local language speakers. Tips involving child trafficking and child labor are referred to social services and criminal authorities. (4,13,17) In 2022, the hotline received 44 calls related to child trafficking, and these calls were referred to police and/or social workers. (15) The government also held three training classes in 2022 for police officers, brigadiers, and commissions on child protection. (15) In addition, criminal law enforcement officers received initial training on child labor and child trafficking as part of the National Police Academy's curriculum, but the government and UNICEF have assessed the training as insufficient. (4)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of coordination among agencies.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Executive Committee to Combat Child Labor ( Comité Directeur National de Lutte contre le Travail des Enfants )	Coordinates efforts to address child labor. Falls under the jurisdiction of MOLCS and includes delegates from UNICEF, trade unions, local NGOs, and other government ministries. (4,13,18) Continued to implement the National Action Plan for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor during the reporting period. (4)

In addition to the National Executive Committee to Combat Child Labor, the National Monitoring and Coordination Working Group for Child Protection and the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Technical Commission also have mandates to coordinate government-wide efforts to address child trafficking. (4,15,17) Research found that there is a lack of effective coordination among agencies responsible for addressing the needs of vulnerable children, partially due to a lack of clarity regarding institutional mandates and gaps in communication regarding child labor data. (4,18)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including insufficient incorporation of child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the Education Sector Plan.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Action Plan for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2019–2023)	Aims to reduce the worst forms of child labor in Benin by 70 percent by the end of 2023. Targets six focus areas: (1) strengthening the legislative and institutional framework related to child labor; (2) information, awareness, and social mobilization; (3) education and training; (4) victim monitoring, protection, and referral; (5) inspection and suppression; and (6) institutional mechanisms, and monitoring and evaluation of the plan. (13,38) Includes a vocational education program focused on formalizing and regulating apprenticeships for children. (20) The government continued to implement this policy during the reporting period. (4)
Cooperative Agreement to Combat Cross-Border Trafficking	Outlines a tripartite cooperative agreement among the Governments of Benin, Burkina Faso, and Togo committing to cooperate and assist each other in the investigation of human trafficking offenses, including child trafficking. (22) In December 2022, Benin cooperated with the Governments of Burkina Faso and Togo, as well as that of Côte d'Ivoire, on a joint operation that resulted in the arrest of 15 suspected traffickers and the release and reintegration of 90 child trafficking survivors. (15)
National Action Plan to Fight Trafficking in Persons (2020–2024)	Aims to eradicate trafficking in persons, including child trafficking, by strengthening governmental systems and institutional frameworks. (17,39) The government indicates that inadequate resources were dedicated to the National Action Plan to Fight Trafficking in Persons. (15,17) During the reporting period, the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Technical Commission coordinated data collection on trafficking across various government ministries and agencies, and began planning a Trafficking in Persons National Information System. (15)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate efforts to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Government-Funded Shelters and Retraining Centers†	Shelters and centers that provide social services to survivors of child labor and child trafficking. Includes an OCPM-operated interim care facility for children rescued from child trafficking or labor exploitation, which has capacity for 160 children and provides housing, medical, legal, and psychological services. (4,15,17,18,40) In addition, the Ministry of Social Affairs and Microfinance operates Social Promotion Centers which provide social services to child trafficking survivors in all of Benin's 77 communes. There is also a MOLCS-run vocational school program that, with the assistance of UNICEF, provides training in trades to survivors of child trafficking. (4,15,17,18,40) During the reporting year, OCPM's interim care facility and the Ministry of Social Affairs and Microfinance's Social Promotion Centers continued to provide services to child survivors in cooperation with labor and criminal law enforcement. (4)
Integrated National School Feeding Program (2022–2026)†	$31.7 million program funded by the Government of Benin and the McGovern-Dole International Food for Education and Child Nutrition Program. Implemented by WFP and Catholic Relief Services. (4,41) Covers 75 percent of schools in Benin and aims to improve school retention and reduce hunger. In 2022, the program was renewed and the Government of Benin contributed funding. (4,41)
Administrative Census for Population Identification†	Program to identify and register citizens lacking identity documents; collect personal data on Beninese citizens, including newborns; and issue national biometric identification cards that can be used for civil and administrative purposes. (4) The program continued to register citizens, including children, in 2022. (4)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of Benin.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (4,18)

Although the Government of Benin has implemented programs to protect children from human trafficking, research was unable to determine whether the government has implemented programs to assist children engaged in other worst forms of child labor, including in domestic work, mining and quarrying, and agriculture. (18)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Benin (Table I I).

Table I I. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Establish by law free basic public education, including lower secondary education.	2021 – 2022
	Raise the minimum age for compulsory education from age 11 to age 14 so it is consistent with the minimum age for admission to work.	2021 – 2022
Enforcement	Provide adequate training for labor inspectors and criminal law enforcement officials.	2013 – 2022
	Ensure that the labor inspectorate receives adequate funding, including for transportation, to carry out its mandate.	2009 – 2022

	Allow the labor inspectorate to freely conduct inspections in the agriculture sector.	2021 – 2022
	Expand labor inspections in sectors with a high prevalence of child labor, including mining and quarrying, fishing, and domestic work.	2019 – 2022
	Increase the number of labor inspectors from 72 to 120 to ensure adequate coverage of the labor force of approximately 4.8 million people.	2015 – 2022
	Publish data on criminal law enforcement efforts, including penalties imposed.	2009 – 2022
Coordination	Ensure effective coordination among agencies, including by clarifying institutional mandates and improving communication regarding the collection and sharing of data.	2019 – 2022
Government Policies	Dedicate adequate resources to support the implementation of all policies related to child labor and child trafficking, including the National Action Plan to Fight Trafficking in Persons.	2010 – 2022
Social Programs	Increase access to education by ensuring the safety of children, especially girls, in schools, providing access to sanitation facilities and feminine hygiene products, ensuring accommodations in schools for children with disabilities, providing reliable transportation to schools, improving school infrastructure, and increasing birth registration rates.	2010 – 2022
	Institute programs to address the worst forms of child labor, including in domestic work, agriculture, mining and quarrying; and monitor and report annually on the progress of these programs.	2010 – 2022

In 2022, Bhutan made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Royal Government of Bhutan ratified the Palermo Protocol and the United Nations Protocol Against Smuggling of Migrants by Land, Sea, and Air. Additionally, it conducted anti-trafficking training programs for 72 judges and carried out 7 awareness programs on countering human trafficking for over 2,600 students. However, children in Bhutan are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and forced domestic work. Bhutan's minimum age for work of 13 does not meet international standards and education is not compulsory. In addition, the government has not adopted a national policy to address child labor, including its worst forms, and the government did not publicly release information on its labor or criminal law enforcement efforts.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Bhutan.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	3.8 (6,338)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	84.7
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	3.3
Primary Completion Rate (%)		89.8

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2021, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2023. (1)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 4 (MICS 4), 2010. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, activities unknown (3)
Industry	Construction, † activities unknown (4,5)
Services	Domestic work (3,6)
	Work in hospitality services, including restaurants (3,6,7)
	Work in automobile workshops (6)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor ‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, as a result of human trafficking (6)
	Forced domestic work, including forced caregiving (3,6)

There is a lack of current data on child labor in Bhutan; to date, no national survey on child labor has been conducted. Bhutanese girls are victims of sex and labor trafficking, including for forced domestic work and caregiving. (6) Some are also trafficked into debt bondage and face threats of physical abuse. (6,8) Media outlets have reported instances of child labor, including some indications of forced child labor, in Bhutan's restaurants and automobile workshops. In addition, some Indian children are trafficked into Bhutan for the purpose of domestic servitude. (6,8)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

The Royal Government of Bhutan (RGOB) provides free education to all children in Bhutan until grade 10. (9,10) While the RGOB committed to achieving universal student attendance in its 12th Five-Year Plan (2018–2023), research was unable to determine whether that objective has been implemented. (9,11) Children living in remote villages, from nomadic communities or migrant populations, and those with disabilities face significant difficulties in accessing public schools due to lack of transportation. (7,9-12) Although they have access to primary education, a small number of children who are stateless also lack access to the documentation necessary to enroll in higher education, making them more vulnerable to child labor and human trafficking. (3,7,13)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Bhutan has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3). Bhutan is not a member of the ILO.

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	N/A
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

During the reporting period, the RGOB ratified the Palermo Protocol; the UN Convention Against Transnational Organized Crime; and the UN Protocol Against the Smuggling of Migrants by Land, Sea, and Air. (9,14)

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Bhutan’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including setting the minimum age for work at 13 years old.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	13	Sections 170 and 171 of the Labor and Employment Act; Regulation on Working Conditions 2012: Acceptable Forms of Child Labor (15,16)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Sections 170 and 171 of the Labor and Employment Act (15)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Section 9(e) of the Labor and Employment Act; Section 9 of the Regulation on Working Conditions 2012: Acceptable Forms of Child Labor (15,16)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	No		Amendment 9 of Penal Code (Amendment) Act of Bhutan 2021; Section 11 of Acceptable Forms of Child Labor 2009; Sections 6–8, 9(a), and 10 of the Labor and Employment Act; Sections 154 and 155 of the Penal Code; Preamble and Sections 221 and 224 of the Child Care and Protection Act (15-19)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Section 9(a) of the Labor and Employment Act; Sections 221 and 224 of the Child Care and Protection Act; Amendment 9 of Penal Code (Amendment) Act of Bhutan 2021; Sections 154, 379, and 380 of the Penal Code (15,18-20)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Section 9(b) of the Labor and Employment Act; Sections 222–224 of the Child Care and Protection Act; Sections 225 and 375–380 of the Penal Code (15,17,18)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Section 9(c) of the Labor and Employment Act; Sections 216 and 220 of the Child Care and Protection Act (15,17-19)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Defense Service Rules and Regulations (20)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Section 9(a) of the Labor and Employment Act (15)
Compulsory Education Age	No
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 9.16 of the Constitution of the Kingdom of Bhutan (21)

* Country has no conscription (20)

Bhutan's minimum age for work is not compliant with international standards because the Labor and Employment Act allows children age 13 to enter the labor force. (15) Although Bhutan provides free education through grade 10, attendance is not compulsory, which may increase the risk of children's involvement in child labor. (7,9,10,22) Laws prohibiting forced labor are also not sufficient as they do not criminalize slavery. (16,17) In addition, while the Bhutanese Parliament passed the Penal Code (Amendment) Act of Bhutan 2021, which amended the legal definition of human trafficking to make the legislation consistent with international standards for adults, it still includes the necessity of force, fraud, or coercion in child trafficking cases. (3,19,23,24) Moreover, although the RGOB reports that the minimum age for voluntary recruitment into Bhutan's military is age 18, the relevant Defense Service Rules and Regulations were not available for public review. (20,24)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor and Human Resources (MOLHR)	Investigates child labor complaints and ensures that employers comply with child labor laws. Refers cases involving the worst forms of child labor to the police. (3,22) Regularly inspects companies for compliance with the Labor and Employment Act. Regulations on working conditions cover issues related to child labor, hours of work, and penalties. (25)
Royal Bhutan Police	Investigates and enforces criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. Includes 3 dedicated Women and Child Protection Units and 10 Women and Child Protection Desks tasked with enforcing laws protecting women and children. (3,26) Refers survivors of child abuse and exploitation to child welfare officers and the National Commission for Women and Children. (3,18)
Child Justice Court	Adjudicates criminal and civil cases involving child labor. (3,18)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Bhutan took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Human Resources (MOLHR) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient financial and human resource allocation.

† Data from July 2020–June 2021.

MOLHR officials acknowledged that limited financial and human resources place constraints on how many inspectors can be employed and on the number of inspections that can be conducted. (27) Reports noted that adequate training and refresher courses for inspectors were not provided due to budget issues. (7,22) Furthermore, labor inspectors are not allowed to carry out inspections on private farms or in homes. In some cases, exceptions are made if underage child labor is suspected. (3)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Bhutan took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including a lack of data on criminal law enforcement efforts.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Unknown (22)	Unknown (9)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (22)	Unknown (9)

Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (22)	Unknown (9)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Unknown (22)	Unknown (9)

The Government of Bhutan did not respond to requests for information on its criminal law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report. However, during the reporting period the government, in partnership with the UNODC and the Bhutan National Legal Institute, facilitated a training program with introductory courses on human trafficking for 72 judges. (9) The UNODC also provided a separate training for 25 police officers. (9)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Child Labor Task Force	Coordinates government efforts on child labor across multiple government agencies and ministries. Led by MOLHR, and comprises representatives from government, international organizations, civil society, and the private sector. Research was unable to determine whether the Child Labor Task Force was active during the reporting period.

Bhutan government’s National Commission for Women and Children (NCWC) coordinates the implementation of laws and policies that promote and protect the rights of women and children. (28) During the reporting period, NCWC launched a multi-sectoral campaign to end violence against children, which will be implemented by a consortium of 14 governmental and non- governmental organizations. (29) The commission also launched the Internal Child Safeguarding and Protection framework with support from Save the Children. The framework establishes awareness programs for school principals on child protection issues. (9) However, budget cuts have hampered the NCWC’s ability to effectively implement its programs, including providing shelter homes for children. Bhutanese officials have also commented on the lack of protection, probation, and child welfare officers due to the budget cuts. (30,31)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that the government has established policies to address child labor. (22)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 9). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 9. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Women and Children Hotlines†	Respond to issues related to women and children, including human trafficking cases, and provide emergency assistance and referral services. (25) One hotline is run through the National Commission for Women and Children (NCWC) and is managed by a team of counselors, providing counseling and legal services. MOLHR also has a hotline that can receive anonymous complaints about child labor abuses. MOLHR’s online system is for employers and employees to report complaints and accidents. (26) Research was unable to determine if the hotlines were operational during the reporting period.
Shelters for Vulnerable Women and Children†	Includes Respect, Educate, Nurture, and Empower Women (RENEW), a Thimphu-based NGO that receives government funding, and provides shelter, counseling, and survivor services for women and children who have been victims of human trafficking. (27) The Nazhoen Lamtoen Children Halfway Home also provides shelter, counseling, and support services to children, in part through government funding. (32,33) Both shelters were operational during the reporting period. (34)
Promoting Rights-Based Multi-Sectoral Responses to Prevent Trafficking in Persons in Bhutan (2019–2022)	Program funded by the USDOS Trafficking in Persons Office and implemented by the UNODC to improve Bhutanese police investigation skills regarding human trafficking cases, improve information sharing, and implement the government’s Standard Operating Procedure for Multi-Sectoral Responses to Prevent Trafficking in Persons in Bhutan. (27) During the reporting period, the government, in collaboration with the UNODC, conducted 7 awareness programs on countering human trafficking for over 2,600 students. (35)

For information about USDOL’s projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Royal Government of Bhutan.

Although the 12th Five-Year Plan (2018–2023) has a goal to achieve universal student attendance and improve education for primary students by 2023, research was unable to determine whether the plan has been implemented. (11,22) In addition, while Bhutan has programs that address child labor, research found that the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem in all relevant sectors, particularly regarding child labor in agriculture, domestic work, and commercial sexual exploitation.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Bhutan (Table 10).

In 2022, Bolivia made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government increased its number of labor inspectors from 72 to 123 and launched a new national action plan to address human trafficking. The municipal government of Santa Cruz also trained 300 university students to volunteer in the Market Spaces program, which is designed to offer services and support to children who work in the markets with their families. However, children in Bolivia are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and forced begging. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture, including in the harvesting of Brazil nuts, and mining. Although Bolivian law requires that apprentices attend school, it does not set a minimum age for participation in apprenticeships. In addition, prohibitions against child trafficking are insufficient because they require that the use of threats, force, or coercion be proven for a trafficking crime to have occurred. The government also did not publicly release information in 2022 on its criminal law enforcement efforts.

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced labor in domestic work, mining, ranching, and in the production and harvesting of Brazil nuts and sugarcane (13,14)
	Forced begging (3,14)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,15)
	Use in illicit activities, including robbery and producing or transporting drugs (13,14)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Rural and poor Bolivians, most of whom are indigenous, and LGBTQI+ youth are particularly at risk for sex and labor trafficking. (14,16) Girls, averaging 14 years old, are used in commercial sexual exploitation in El Alto. (17) Girls ages 13 to 17 are increasingly lured by sex traffickers via social media with fake offers of modeling or employment. (16) Bolivian children are taken from rural areas to major cities and mining centers for commercial sexual exploitation. (16) Civil society groups also report that child sex tourism has become an increasing problem. (14,16) Bolivia has no shelters for boys who have been sexually exploited, and many cases involving the exploitation of boys go unreported due to social stigma. (3) In addition, the cultural practice known as padrinazgo, which involves rural families sending their children to urban areas to live with individuals for better access to education, social services, and food, often leads to forced labor, including in domestic work and third-party businesses. (13) The government has not published any comprehensive data on child labor since 2016. (3)

Attendance rates for secondary education remain low in rural areas. (10) Civil society has reported a steady rise in the number of Venezuelan migrants electing to stay in Bolivia, most of whom lack legal status. The children of these families often struggle to obtain the proper paperwork to enroll in the public school system. (3,17) Migrant children attending school do not receive credit and are prevented from receiving diplomas. (18) There is also a lack of teachers, schools, and textbooks in rural areas, especially in indigenous communities. (3)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Bolivia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Bolivia’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including insufficient prohibitions against child trafficking as they require that the use of threats, force, or coercion be proven for a crime to have taken place.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Articles 8 and 58 of the General Labor Law; Article 129 of the Child and Adolescent Code; Sentence 0025/2017 of the Plurinational Constitutional Tribunal; Article 3 of Law No. 1139 (19-22)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 58 and 59 of the General Labor Law; Articles 5 and 136 of the Child and Adolescent Code (19,20)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 136 of the Child and Adolescent Code (20)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 15, 46, and 61 of the Constitution; Article 291 of the Penal Code; Article 34 of the Comprehensive Law against Human Trafficking and Smuggling (23-25)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Article 15 of the Constitution; Articles 6, 34, and 35 of the Comprehensive Law against Human Trafficking and Smuggling (23,25)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 34 and 35 of the Comprehensive Law against Human Trafficking and Smuggling; Articles 281 bis, 321, 321 bis, 322, and 323 bis of the Penal Code (25,26)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 47, 48, and 56 of the Law on Coca and Controlled Substances (27)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	16*	Article 2 of the General Directive of Pre-Military Recruitment; Articles 2 and 7 of the Law of National Military Service (28,29)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	No		Articles 108 and 249 of the Constitution; Article 1 of Supreme Decree No. 1875; Article 1 of Supreme Decree No. 21479 (23,30,31)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	17‡	Article 81 of the Constitution; Articles 1, 8, 9, and 11–14 of the Avelino Siñani-Elizardo Pérez Education Law (23,32)
Free Public Education	Yes		Articles 17 and 81 of the Constitution; Article 1 of the Avelino Siñani-Elizardo Pérez Education Law; Article 115 of the Child and Adolescent Code (20,23,32)

*The minimum age for combat is 18 per Article 36 of the Law of National Military Service. (28)

‡ Age calculated based on available information. (23,32)

As the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (20,22) Furthermore, although Bolivian law specifies that education is compulsory through secondary school, it does not specify a start or end age. (23,32) In addition, prohibitions against child trafficking are insufficient because they require that the use of threats, force, or coercion be proven in order for a crime to have taken place. (23,25) Bolivian law requires employers to grant apprentices the time necessary to attend school. However, it does not set a minimum age of at least 14 for participation in apprenticeships. (19) Articles 108 and 249 of the Constitution require Bolivian males to perform compulsory military service in accordance with national law. (23) Article 1 of Supreme Decree No. 1875, passed in 2014, lowered the minimum age at which compulsory military service may begin, from age 18, as previously established, to age 17, which does not comply with international standards. (30,31)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of child labor laws.

Bolivia

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor (MOL)	Enforces child labor laws. (4) Refers cases to the Labor Courts for adjudication of penalties and unpaid wages. (4) Engages municipal Offices of the Child Advocate to ensure the protection of children's rights and carries out inspections through its special unit for the Progressive Eradication of Child Labor. (33,34) Assists in the implementation of the Child and Adolescent Code. (20,33) MOL can investigate cases of hazardous child labor through routine investigations or from citizens who report a potential problem. If a child is discovered working in hazardous or illegal conditions during an investigation, the case is referred to the municipal Child Advocate Office. (3) In 2022, MOL presented a proposal to the national government to help guide future actions to address child labor titled, "Public Policy Bolivia: A Country Free of Forced, Dangerous, and Child Labor." (18,34)
Municipal Offices of the Child Advocate	Authorize children from the age of 14 to engage in work and register them in the government's Child and Adolescent Information System (SINNA). (17,22,33) Protect the rights and welfare of children by referring criminal child labor cases to prosecutors and by referring children to social services. (20,33) SINNA is administered by the Ministry of Justice and Transparency. (20,22)
Prosecutor's Office	Enforces criminal laws against forced labor, commercial sexual exploitation including child sex trafficking, and the use of children in illicit activities at the departmental level, in coordination with the Attorney General. (3,18,35) Provides legal support and lawyers for children who are survivors of the worst forms of child labor. (3) The Attorney General's Office oversees investigations and prosecutions at the national level and regional prosecutors who, in conjunction with the Bolivian National Police, pursue cases of human trafficking and maintain a database of these cases. (35)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Bolivia took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor (MOL) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient financial resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

The MOL's Employment and Social Welfare office reported employing 123 labor inspectors. (34) Research indicates that Bolivia does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (18,37,38) According to NGOs, the training that labor inspectors received in 2022 was much shorter than the 4-month training course previously offered. (3) However, the MOL trained 8,850 people to help prevent child and forced labor in 2022 but did not specify who received the training. (34) Research could not determine whether unannounced inspections are permitted. (19) While the municipal Offices of the Child Advocate are charged with registering work permits for children ages 14 and older, reports indicate that up to 15 percent of municipalities in Bolivia lack a local office. Many more are reported to lack sufficient resources and the capacity to perform their mandate and raise awareness of children's rights and their parents' obligations under the Child and Adolescent Code. (4,13,33) In a 2021 interview, the Ombudsman's Office acknowledged that the registration of adolescent workers by these offices was insufficient and that the low numbers of registrations reported do not reflect the reality of child labor in Bolivia. (39)

If a child labor violation is found, an inspector's report serves as the official complaint and details in the report are the evidence that inspectors transfer to labor judges, who then adjudicate the cases. The judge is the final arbiter and determines penalties for violations. (3) The special unit for the Progressive Eradication of Child Labor conducted 423 inspections using 8 mobile office units, primarily in rural and remote areas, and did not find any child labor violations. (34) Although a high proportion of children work in the informal economy, this sector is not subject to labor inspections. (34,40) The MOL, the Prosecutor's Office, and the Ministry of Justice do not have a consolidated database or systematized records of the number of violations found related to child labor. (17) In previous reporting periods, the MOL reported that its budget was insufficient to perform the number of labor inspections that should be conducted. (4,17)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Bolivia took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal law enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including a lack of training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Unknown (17)	Unknown
Number of Investigations	Unknown (17)	Unknown
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (17)	Unknown
Number of Convictions	Unknown (17)	Unknown

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (17)	Yes (3)

In 2022, Bolivian officials from the Ministries of Foreign Affairs, Government, and Justice met with experts from the EU-funded EUROFRONT program to discuss border management strategies and a regional plan to address trafficking in persons on the Peruvian-Bolivian border area of Desaguadero and the Argentinian-Bolivian border area of Aguas Blancas. The Bolivian Police Academy, with IOM support, trained 70 officials, including police officers, prosecutors, and judges on the investigation and prosecution of trafficking in persons crimes. (16,18) The 6-month training program included 240 hours of academic instruction followed by 560 hours of investigative practice and on-the-job training. In addition, 65 prosecutors received training on human trafficking from UNODC. (16) Although the government did not provide the number or type of officials who received training, a civil society group reported that a course titled "Diploma in the Investigation of Trafficking in Persons aimed at Public Police Servants," organized by the Police University, the Bolivian senate, and IOM launched in July of 2022 to strengthen the government's response to human trafficking. The Trafficking in Persons Council also met 17 times in 2022 and led an effort to draft new amendments to the human trafficking law. (16)

The Government of Bolivia did not take active measures to investigate, prosecute, convict, or sentence perpetrators of worst forms of child labor crimes. (17) The high rate of rotation among police, prosecutors, and judges—a standard practice to help prevent corruption—leads to insufficient knowledge, a lack of experience on human trafficking, and a judicial backlog for these types of cases. (14,41) Reporting indicates that the budget, personnel, and resources of the judicial system are insufficient to address human trafficking. Although the amount dedicated to human trafficking is not reported, less than 0.5 percent of the entire federal budget is devoted to the judicial system, implying inadequate resources. (16) Furthermore, in 2022 the judiciary returned unused funds to the executive branch, suggesting that its budget is not implemented in the most productive manner. Civil society groups reported that trafficking in persons crimes in developed areas received more judicial attention compared to rural areas where there are few resources for the legal system. (16,18) In addition, research found that children rescued from the worst forms of child labor are often not referred to social services providers because some cities lack shelters and other social services for children. (13,42,43) Shelters maintained by departmental governments are underfunded, and child survivors are often cast out of shelters on the basis of fixed timelines—after spending the maximum number of days allowed—rather than an assessment of need. (42) The government did not report the number of children referred to receive social services in 2022. While children can report workforce abuse to the Child Advocate’s Office, they rarely do. (13)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Commission for the Progressive Eradication of Child Labor	Coordinates national efforts on child labor issues. Led by MOL, and includes the Ministries of Justice, Education, and Planning, and several NGOs. (33) Research was unable to determine whether the coordinating body carried out activities during the reporting period.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including coverage of all worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
Plurinational Policy Against Trafficking in Persons and Smuggling of Migrants (2021–2025)†	On April 29, 2022, the government released a new national action plan for 2021-2025, with support from IOM, UNODC, and civil society. It contains several objectives including to educate the population about human trafficking and smuggling, reintegrate survivors, train law enforcement officials, provide prompt and effective justice, promote mechanisms of international coordination, produce and manage knowledge, and build an institutional environment able to address human trafficking and smuggling. (16) The government did not provide information about the resources devoted to implement this plan. (16)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

The government has lacked a national action plan to address child labor since the National Plan for the Progressive Eradication of Child Labor expired in 2010. (44)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate efforts to address child labor in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Juancito Pinto Subsidy Program†	Government program that provides a conditional cash transfer to all primary and some secondary school students to increase school attendance and reduce the dropout rate. (45) According to the latest publicly available information from the Education Ministry, the program provided financial support to more than 2.3 million participating students to encourage school retention. Each participating child received approximately $29 annually upon proving regular attendance in school. (3) The Government of Bolivia continued to support this program throughout the reporting period. (3)
Market Spaces	Each year, the Santa Cruz municipal government trains over 300 university volunteers and reaches over 500 young children between the ages of 3 and 12 in the 8 Santa Cruz markets. (3) Children who previously worked with their parents in the market now receive mentorship and food, and abuse is monitored and reported. Most of the workers in the Market Space project are psychology, education, or social work university students in their final year at university and volunteer their time to prevent child labor. (46) The concept was initially supported by the Government of Santa Cruz and UNICEF and costs about $5,000 per year to maintain but is now self-sustaining through a small tax collected from each market vendor or parent. (46) The Government of Bolivia continued to support this program throughout the reporting period. (3)

Program	Description & Activities
Bolivian Foreign Trade Institute's Triple Seal Initiative	Initiative of the Department of Santa Cruz's MOL, in collaboration with the Bolivian Institute of Standardization and Quality, UNICEF, and ILO, to develop a voluntary certification program that recognizes companies that comply with Bolivian law and ILO conventions on child labor and forced labor issues. (47) In January 2022, the largest sugar producer in the country, responsible for 40 percent of the market, was issued the triple seal certification. (14) Reports from the current period suggest that this partnership has been successful at reducing child labor in the sugarcane industry. (3)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of Bolivia.

The government has funded a school breakfast program since 1994. Currently, approximately 74 percent of students nationwide receive this service. (3) Although the Government of Bolivia has implemented programs in the agricultural and education sectors, research found no evidence that it has carried out programs specifically designed to assist children in commercial sexual exploitation.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Bolivia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum age for work from 14 to 17 to align with the compulsory education age.	2018 – 2022
	Ensure that the law sufficiently prohibits child trafficking by removing the requirement of the use of threats, force, or coercion to be established for the crime to have occurred.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that the law prohibits children under the age of 14 from participating in apprenticeships.	2010 – 2022
	Ensure that the law establishes age 18 as the minimum age for compulsory recruitment by the state military and criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 into non-state armed groups.	2015 – 2022
Enforcement	Publish information on child labor law enforcement, including labor inspectorate funding, training, penalties imposed and collected, and whether routine and unannounced inspections were conducted.	2009 – 2022
	Publish information about whether unannounced inspections are permitted.	2022
	Increase the number of labor inspectors from 123 to 432 to ensure adequate coverage of the labor force of approximately 6.5 million.	2013 – 2022
	Provide sufficient funding to increase the Ministry of Labor's capacity to ensure the adequate enforcement of child labor laws.	2013 – 2022
	Ensure that there are systematized records or a consolidated database on the number of violations found related to child labor.	2019 – 2022
	Establish and maintain an Office of the Child Advocate in every municipality, allocating sufficient resources from municipal-level budgets to ensure that legal protections are extended to all children who are permitted to work, and that parents are assisted in registering their children for work.	2014 – 2022
	Publish information on criminal law enforcement, including training for criminal investigators and disaggregated numbers on investigations conducted, prosecutions initiated, convictions achieved, and sentences imposed for child labor crimes.	2011 – 2022
	Address issues of high rotation among police, prosecutors, and judges, as well as the existing judicial case backlog, to ensure adequate prosecution of child labor crimes.	2015 – 2022
	Ensure that rural areas receive sufficient resources to address trafficking in persons crimes.	2022
	Coordination	Ensure that the National Commission for the Progressive Eradication of Child Labor is active and able to carry out its intended mandate.
Government Policies	Establish and implement a new national policy or national action plan to address child labor, including its worst forms.	2010 – 2022
	Provide data on the funding or resources supporting the Plurinational Policy Against Trafficking in Persons and Smuggling of Migrants.	2022

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Social Programs	Conduct a comprehensive child labor survey so there is sufficient data to inform government actions to eliminate child labor.	2022
	Ensure that all children, regardless of migration status, can access education and receive credit and diplomas for attending, and expand national programs in rural and indigenous areas to increase secondary school attendance.	2010 – 2022
	Ensure that there are sufficient social programs, including shelters for male survivors of human trafficking, throughout the country for child labor survivors and that survivors are not cast prematurely out of shelters.	2018 – 2022
	Implement programs to address the commercial sexual exploitation of children.	2022

Bosnia and Herzegovina

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2022, Bosnia and Herzegovina made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Council of Ministers approved the 2021–2025 National Action Plan for the Social Inclusion of Roma, which aims to strength education access for Roma children, and the Anti-Trafficking Strike Force expanded its membership to include representatives from additional agencies. The Tuzla Cantonal Court also sentenced six offenders to a total of 74 years of imprisonment, a historical first for the judicial system in Bosnia and Herzegovina. However, children in Bosnia and Herzegovina are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging. Social programs dedicated to assisting children involved in forced begging do not have adequate resources, and representatives from the Ministries of Labor are not included in the National Anti-Trafficking Strike Force, which limits coordination efforts. Furthermore, most child labor is in the informal sector, and laws on the minimum age for work do not meet international standards because they do not apply to children who are self-employed or those working outside of formal employment relationships.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Bosnia and Herzegovina (BiH). Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	8.9 (44,017)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	83.7
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	10.6
Primary Completion Rate (%)		Unavailable

Primary completion rate was unavailable from UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2023. (1)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization’s analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 3 (MICS 3), 2006. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Services	Street work, including vending and washing car windows (3-5)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced begging and forced domestic work (5,6)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (5,6)
	Use in illicit activities, including for pickpocketing (5-7)
	Use in the production of pornography (5,6)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Street begging is the most common form of child labor in BiH, and organized groups sometimes traffic children to regional and EU countries, where they are forced to beg. (3,7-10) In BiH, Roma children are the most vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor due to barriers to accessing education, including the high costs of school supplies and uniforms. (11,12) Roma students also face discrimination from teachers, peers, and school administrators, which has resulted in a disproportionate number of Roma children being enrolled in schools for children with intellectual disabilities. In addition, some Roma children lack birth registration documents, which are required to attend school in BiH. (13) UNHCR reports indicate that some children in BiH were still designated as being at risk of statelessness in 2022. (5,13,14) Children who are classified as stateless are at higher risk for labor exploitation. (14,15) Additionally, migrants—particularly unaccompanied children—from Afghanistan, Pakistan, Iraq, and other countries who travel through BiH are potential targets for human traffickers. (16,17)

Schools in the Republika Srpska (RS) entity deny the right of some Bosniak children to receive instruction in the Bosnian language; as a result, these children sometimes travel long distances to the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina (FBiH) entity to receive education in their language. (3,14,18) In addition, discrimination persists under the "Two Schools Under One Roof" practice between Bosniaks and Croats in FBiH. Under this system, Bosniak and Croat children are in segregated classes following separate curricula in the same school building. (19) This creates obstacles for students who wish to attend schools other than those that match their ethnic identity and enables ethnic discrimination in schools, which can lead to absenteeism. (3,14,18) Children with disabilities also face barriers to accessing education, which may make them vulnerable to child labor. (18) Sources indicated that the government has not allocated enough financial resources for adequate implementation of inclusive education initiatives, particularly for students with disabilities. (15,18,20)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

BiH has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

BiH is a democratic republic with a bicameral parliament. Governmental responsibilities lie with the state; the two entities of BiH, which are the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina (FBiH) and the Republika Srpska (RS); and the self-governing Brčko District (BD). (21) The Government of BiH has established laws and regulations related to child labor at the state, entity, and district levels (Table 4). However, gaps exist in BiH's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including a lack of minimum age protections for children who are self-employed or working outside a formal employment relationship.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	15	Article 20 of the Labor Law of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina (23)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 57 of the Labor Law of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina (23)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 42, 57, and 171 of the Labor Law of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina (23)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 185 and 186a of the Criminal Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina; Article II of the Constitution of Bosnia and Herzegovina (26,27)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Articles 185 and 186a of the Criminal Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina (24)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 186 and 187 of the Criminal Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina (24)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No		Article 195 of the Criminal Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina (27)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 9 of the Law on the Service in the Armed Forces of Bosnia and Herzegovina (31)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*		Article 9 of the Law on the Service in the Armed Forces of Bosnia and Herzegovina (31)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No		Article 173(e) of the Criminal Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina (27)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15‡	Article 16 of the Framework Law on Primary and Secondary Education in Bosnia and Herzegovina (32)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 16 of the Framework Law on Primary and Secondary Education in Bosnia and Herzegovina (32)

* Country has no conscription (31)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (32)

The labor laws of FBiH, RS, and BD do not conform to international standards that require all children to be protected by the minimum age to work because the labor laws do not apply to children who are self-employed or working outside of formal employment relationships. In addition, FBiH, RS, and BD do not include street begging in their lists of hazardous occupations prohibited for children. (22-27) Although the Criminal Code of Bosnia and Herzegovina BiH criminalizes human trafficking for forced labor, it fails to specifically outlaw forced labor, debt bondage, and slavery separately from trafficking in persons. (28) Laws related to illicit activities in BiH are also not sufficient because using, procuring, and offering children for the production and trafficking of drugs are not criminally prohibited. Moreover, the laws of BiH and FBiH do not meet international standards for the prohibition of commercial sexual exploitation of children, and legislation in BiH, FBiH, RS, and BD do not meet international standards for the recruitment of minors by non-state armed groups, as their criminal codes fail to explicitly prohibit this offense. (24)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor and Social Policy	Enforces labor laws, including those on child labor. (5) The Cantonal-Level Labor Inspectorates (Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina), the Ministry of Labor and Veterans' Labor Inspectorate (Republika Srpska), and the Administrative Support Department (Brčko District) enforce labor laws at the canton, entity, and district levels respectively. (22,27,29)
State Investigative and Protection Agency (SIPA) and Border Police (SBP)	SIPA investigates human trafficking crimes and enforces anti-trafficking laws across the entire country. SBP identifies victims of human trafficking at the border. (5,6,30)
State, Entity, and Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina Cantonal-Level Prosecutors' Offices	Prosecute human trafficking, forced labor, enticement to prostitution, and forced begging cases at their respective levels, based on applicable laws. (5,6)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in BiH took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including a lack of appropriate referral mechanisms.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown	Unknown
Number of Labor Inspectors	133 (10)	191 (33)

Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (23-25)	Yes (22,27,29)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (10)	Yes (33)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (10)	Yes (33)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (10)	Yes (33)

Officials indicated that there were sufficient resources provided to the Labor Inspectorates and that the number of labor inspectors appeared to be adequate. In 2022, labor inspectors received training on labor law enforcement and the identification of hazardous work and human trafficking. (5) The Labor Inspectorate is authorized to assess administrative penalties up to approximately $555 (1,000 konvertibilna marka), and labor inspectors in both entities and BD may visit formal sector worksites without prior supervisory approval. (5,22-27) Complaint mechanisms also exist in both entities and BD, including a mechanism for receiving online complaints, but research found that BiH does not have an official system for referring children identified during labor inspections to social services providers unless they are victims of human trafficking. (29)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in BiH took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient training for responsible enforcement authorities.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (10)	Yes (33)
Number of Investigations	Unknown	9 (32)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown	7 (32)
Number of Convictions	Unknown	20 (32)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown	Yes (32)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Unknown	Unknown

Forced begging cases are pursued by cantonal- and entity-level police and cantonal-, entity-, and state-level prosecutors. Children who are detained for begging are generally referred to social services providers, which are often run by NGOs with funding from the Ministry of Security or the Ministry for Human Rights and Refugees. (5,9,32) However, law enforcement officials sometimes penalize child victims of forced begging by issuing fines against the children. (17,33,34) Research also indicates that law enforcement officials and social workers would benefit from additional training on identifying children used for forced labor and begging, as these cases are often misclassified as child negligence or simply "Roma custom" (referring to higher rates of participation in the informal market). (4,17)

In November 2022, the Tuzla Cantonal Court sentenced 6 offenders to a total of 74 years of imprisonment, a historical first for the judicial system in BiH as the highest sentence for trafficking in persons in BiH to date and also the first conviction for organized human trafficking for child labor exploitation. (5) However, some courts continue to impose sentences under the legal minimum or dismiss charges against perpetrators altogether. (5,37,38) In addition, enforcement officials are often unwilling to pursue investigations and prosecutions against parents involved in the trafficking of their children, particularly for forced labor, and shelters subsequently return children to the parents who were involved in the trafficking process. (5,17)

Additionally, in December 2022, the Court of BiH concluded a 4-year case involving international trafficking in human beings, including minors, for the purposes of labor exploitation and involvement in criminal offenses and ultimately sentenced 5 individuals to a total of 33 years of prison. Two defendants were each sentenced to 12 years of prison and were also ordered to pay back illicit gains in the amount of $423,975 (389,887 euros). (32) One defendant was sentenced to five years in prison and a fine of $5,560 (10,000 konvertibilna marka), and the other 2 defendants were each sentenced to 2 years in prison (with a fine in 1 case of $2,780 (5,000 konvertibilna marka)). (5,6,32)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including the lack of inclusion of all relevant agencies.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Department of the State Coordinator for Combating Trafficking in Persons (State Coordinator) within the Ministry of Security (MOS)	Coordinates human trafficking survivor protection efforts among relevant ministries at the entity-level and among prosecutors at the state-, entity-, and local-levels, as well as with NGOs. (11,31,35) Oversees the human trafficking database, which includes data from NGOs, SIPA, SBP, and police agencies and prosecutors' offices at all levels. (31,35,36) Publishes data from this database in its annual report on human trafficking. Oversees shelter management and monitors NGO compliance with the agreed-upon provisions on survivors' assistance. (31,36) During the reporting period, the National Coordinator's Office allocated approximately $71,406 (130,000 konvertibilna marka ) to fund 7 NGOs, providing support and housing to survivors of human trafficking. (5)

Although the Anti-Trafficking Strike Force is meant to coordinate anti-trafficking efforts across agencies, representatives from FBiH and RS Ministries of Labor are not included. (2,7,39)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of implementation of existing policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
Strategy to Suppress Trafficking in Human Beings in Bosnia and Herzegovina (2020–2023)	Includes activities to prevent forced labor, including child labor. (3) During the reporting period, the Anti-Trafficking Strike Force established by the Strategy continued to meet regularly and was expanded to include representation from the Service for Foreigners' Affairs per the guidance of MOS. (5)
Guidelines for Work of Regional Monitoring Teams	Enhance the cooperation of monitoring team members and the National Referral Mechanism. (30,40) Include a section on mixed migration flows, in which unaccompanied migrant children and victims of human trafficking are addressed. (30) During the reporting period, the regional monitoring teams continued to meet regularly and implemented their respective annual action plans. (5)
Protocol on Cooperation and Treatment in Cases of Unlawful Behavior to the Detriment of Children in Sarajevo Canton	Prevents begging, exploitation of children, and abuse of children in Canton Sarajevo. (39,40) Sets rules on state cooperation for victim protection and mandates the provision of physical, psychological, health, and social protection for children. (40) Research was unable to determine whether the Protocol was active during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (10)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In April 2022, the Council of Ministers approved the 2021–2025 National Action Plan for the Social Inclusion of Roma, which calls for higher rates of civil registration of Roma, more opportunities for fair employment, and better educational outcomes for Roma children, all of which factor into lower child labor participation rates. (5,41,42)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including a lack of adequate funding.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Daily Centers†	Centers for Social Welfare-supported and NGO-operated drop-in centers in seven locations across the country, designed to assist vulnerable street children. (11,31,39) Provide direct assistance to children, including educational activities, counseling, food, and hygiene. (3) Sarajevo's Center for Social Welfare Mobile Team also engages in daily outreach to children on the streets and to families in vulnerable communities throughout the capital region. (3) During the reporting period, the centers continued to operate normally and provided children involved in begging and other forms of street work with material and educational support. (5) However, Sarajevo's Mobile Team staff continues to lack sufficient resources for their work, especially reliable transportation. (31,43) Daily Centers also lack consistent financial and technical support, which may limit the ability of these centers to identify and assist children working on the streets. (30,35,46) In addition, support for street children outside Sarajevo varies significantly. (3) Although the government provides some social services for low-income families through the Centers for Social Welfare, many families do not receive enough assistance to reduce their reliance on child labor, especially begging. (31,43,45)
Assistance for Trafficking Victims†	Government program that allocates small grants to local NGOs for the provision of shelter and social services to survivors of human trafficking, including counseling, educational assistance and job training for domestic survivors, and visa and legal services for foreign survivors of human trafficking. (3,20) In 2022, the government allocated approximately $71,406 (130,000 konvertibilna marka ) to support designated NGOs. (5)
Prevention and Fight Against Trafficking in Human Beings in Bosnia and Herzegovina	Joint project by the EU and the Council of Europe with $790,720 in funding over 3 years to assist Bosnia and Herzegovina in its efforts to better identify victims of human trafficking and heighten public awareness of human trafficking. (46,47) Activities include training for labor inspectors, police officers, healthcare providers, and education professionals. (20) During the reporting period, the Office of the State Coordinator submitted its final report on its anti-trafficking efforts in 2021 to the Council of Ministers. (5)

In 2022, Botswana made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government ratified the International Labor Organization's Labor Inspection Convention and the Labor Inspection (Agriculture) Convention, which outline mandates to promote effective labor inspection systems, including in the agricultural sector in which child labor is prevalent in the country. The Ministry of Labor also provided comprehensive information on its labor law enforcement efforts and partnered with a local non-governmental organization to conduct targeted inspections in key districts where there have been reports of child labor on commercial farms and cattle posts. However, children in Botswana are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and forced labor in cattle herding and domestic work. Key gaps remain in the country's legal framework, including the lack of a minimum age for compulsory education and a list of hazardous work activities for children. The government also did not provide information on its criminal law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report. In addition, the design and implementation of social programs to address child labor are insufficient to fully address the scope of the problem, especially in commercial sexual exploitation, cattle herding, and domestic work.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Botswana. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Working (% and population)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable

Data were unavailable from International Labor Organization's analysis, 2023. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Herding and spraying of cattle and goats (3-5)
	Farming, including rearing livestock, mending fences, and molding bricks (5)

	Domestic work (7,8)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (5,9-11)
	Forced labor in cattle herding (11)
	Forced labor in domestic service (11)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Children in Botswana are victims of commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (9,12) Research indicates that some children residing in the Dukwi Refugee Camp are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation around the camp, as they await decisions regarding their refugee status. (6,11) Some parents in poor rural communities send their children to engage in domestic work in cities, or at farms or cattle posts, increasing their vulnerability to forced labor. (11) Children, particularly from the San minority ethnic group, work on commercial farms in the Ghanzi Region, tending to and herding cattle. (7,9) An NGO reported that one of the work activities children perform on commercial farms is the "dipping" (spraying) of cattle, a process to remove ticks and flies. Such work may expose children to hazardous chemicals. (7) On some farms, employers may withhold food rations unless children perform work. (3,7,12) Children working in domestic service settings are exposed to various conditions that are indicative of forced labor, including confinement; denial of promised educational opportunities and basic necessities; and physical, verbal, and sexual abuse. (11)

Botswana law provides for free basic education, and the costs of books, uniforms, and other materials may be waived for children from poorer families. However, insufficient transportation to schools in remote regions of Botswana and a lack of materials in indigenous languages create educational barriers for children from minority ethnic groups. (5,9,13,14) In addition, school enrollment requires an identity document, such as a birth certificate or national identity card. (12) The government allows all children to enroll in primary education, even without these documents; however, migrant children and children born outside of health care facilities, or whose parents did not register them at birth, may not be able to enroll in secondary schools or register for national exams. (5,9,15) Schools also often lack adequate resources for students with disabilities. Children of the San ethnic group have limited access to educational facilities, must travel long distances to reach schools, and encounter language barriers and prejudice within schools, which cause children to drop out. (9,14,16,17) Moreover, pervasive physical and sexual abuse, including gender-based violence within schools, by both teachers and peers, contributes to children leaving education early and becoming vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. (3,6,18,19)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Botswana has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

During the reporting period, the government acceded to the ILO Labor Inspection Convention (C. 81) and the Labor Inspection (Agriculture) Convention (C. 189), which outline principles for development of strong labor inspection systems, including in the agricultural sector in which child labor occurs in Botswana. (5,20)

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Botswana's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the lack of a compulsory education age that is consistent with the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Articles 2 and 107 of the Employment Act (21)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 2 and 110 of the Employment Act (21)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 2 and 71 of the Employment Act; Section 114 of the Children's Act; Articles 9 and 10 of the Anti-Human Trafficking Act; Section 262 of the Penal Code (21-24)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Section 114 of the Children's Act; Article 175 of the Penal Code; Articles 9 and 10 of the Anti-Human Trafficking Act (22-24)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Sections 25 and 57–59 of the Children's Act; Sections 9 and 10 of the Anti-Human Trafficking Act (22,23)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Section 60 of the Children's Act (23)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Section 17 of the Botswana Defense Force Act (25)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Section 26 of the Children's Act (23)
Compulsory Education Age	No
Free Public Education	Yes		Section 18 of the Children's Act (23)

* Country has no conscription (25)

The Employment Act allows children to conduct light work activities at age 14, with restrictions on the number of hours a child can work during a single day and in a week, and includes a requirement that the Labor Commissioner approve any forms of work outside of domestic service; however, the government has yet to determine the conditions or types of light work activities permitted for children. (13) Additionally, while the Employment Act prohibits night work and underground work for children, the government has not determined by national law or regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited for children. (10,14,21) In addition, legal protections for children from commercial sexual exploitation do not meet international standards because the use of children for prostitution is not criminally prohibited. (23) Despite the provision of free basic education, there is not a compulsory education age, which may increase children's vulnerability to child labor. (14)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor and Home Affairs	Enforces child labor laws and conducts inspections under the Employment Act. (21,26) Facilitates coordination with local leaders and law enforcement officers. Posts labor inspectors to District Council offices to carry out their duties. (26) Coordinates with the Ministry of Local Government and Rural Development (MLGRD), and MLGRD's District and Municipal Council Child Welfare Divisions, to respond to cases of child labor and place children in safe environments. (6,26,27) During the reporting period, the Ministry of Labor partnered with a local NGO to conduct targeted inspections in the Ghanzi and Kgalagadi Districts, where child labor has been reported on commercial farms and cattle posts. Research, however, indicates a need for increased inspections in these districts given their geographical size. (5)
Botswana Police Service (BPS)	Responds to cases of labor law violation, including child labor violations, based on referrals from the Ministry of Labor. (28) Investigates cases of the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation of children and child trafficking. (26) During the reporting period, BPS established four child-friendly police stations, increasing the total number of such stations to five. (29) BPS also conducted educational campaigns in schools to teach teachers and students about trafficking in persons. (30)
Ministry of Justice	Monitors suspected human trafficking cases and leads the Human Trafficking (Prohibition) Committee. (11)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Botswana took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient human resource allocation.

Under the Employment Act, child labor violations are criminal offenses, resulting in 12 months imprisonment; as such, Botswana labor inspectors refer violations to police for investigation and imposition of penalties. (21)

Research indicates that Botswana does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (32,33) Some of Botswana's largest administrative districts have only one or two labor inspectors, which likely hinders monitoring of farms and cattle posts where there is evidence of child labor. (3,28) Furthermore, labor inspectors are not authorized to inspect domestic households, and some labor inspectors have faced obstacles in accessing large farms, such as locked gates or denial of entry, inhibiting their ability to identify underage workers. (3,6) Although two labor officers participated in a workshop organized by a local NGO on child labor concepts, the rest of the labor inspectorate did not receive comprehensive training during the reporting period. (5)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether criminal law enforcement agencies in Botswana took actions to address child labor (Table 7).

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (9)	Unknown (5)

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (9)	Yes (5)

The lack of child-friendly courts and social workers in Botswana leads to delays in processing cases, few referrals, and limited psychosocial support to child victims of exploitation. (29) The government did not provide criminal law enforcement data during the reporting period.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of information on steps the coordination mechanism has taken to address child labor during the reporting year.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Advisory Committee on Child Labor	Oversees government policies and efforts to prevent and eliminate child labor. Reports to the government three to four times a year. (9) Includes representatives from government agencies, various NGOs, worker federations, and employer organizations. (9) Led by the Ministry of Labor, with participation from MLGRD, Ministry of Finance, and the Office of the President. (15) At the local level, child labor coordination is handled through Child Labor Committees that include social workers; schoolteachers; members of the Village Development Committees, which are local government structures; labor inspectors; and community leaders, including chiefs and priests. (9) Research could not determine whether the Advisory Committee on Child Labor was active during the reporting period. (5,9,35)

The Ministry of Defense, Justice, and Security leads a counter-trafficking in persons coordinating body, which includes representatives from the labor inspectorate and social services. (9)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including the lack of a policy to address all worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
Anti-Human Trafficking National Action Plan (2018–2022)	Supervised and coordinated by the Ministry of Defense, Justice, and Security. Encouraged interagency collaboration in eliminating and preventing trafficking in persons in Botswana, particularly trafficking of women and children, through the establishment and maintenance of a Human Trafficking (Prohibition) Committee. (31,36) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the plan during the reporting period.

Research indicates that the government is not actively supporting implementation of key national policies for the prevention and elimination of child labor. (5,9) Child labor elimination and prevention strategies are not included in relevant national policies, including the Education and Training Sector Strategic Plan and the Botswana National Youth Policy. (37,38) Although Botswana had a policy to address trafficking in persons, research found no evidence of a policy related to other worst forms of child labor.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Government-Funded Programs to Prevent and Eliminate Child Labor†	Government-funded programs that aim to prevent child labor and increase protections for vulnerable children. These include: NGO-run shelters that cater to human trafficking survivors, including children; the National School Feeding Program, which provides meals to children (grades one through seven) in all public primary schools in the country; the Remote Area Development Program, which provides a second meal to school children living in remote areas and children from marginalized communities; the Orphan Care Program, which provides orphans with meals and subsidizes the cost of school fees and transportation costs; and the Needy Children and Needy Students program, managed by MLGRD, which provides families with free meals, toiletries, and school uniforms. (26) Research indicates that these programs were active during the reporting period, but the government did not publish specific activities undertaken to implement them. (5,31)
Addressing Child Labor in Botswana*	U.S. Embassy-Gaborone-funded project, implemented by Humana People to People, a local NGO operating in Botswana that aims to raise local awareness and increase community engagement on child labor concerns, in coordination with Botswana's Minister of Labor. (39) Targets Gantsi and Tsabong, areas with high levels of poverty and close proximity to farms. During the reporting period, the project held a launch and awareness-raising event in commemoration of World Day Against Child Labor, held sensitization and training workshops, and coordinated targeted labor inspections with the Ministry of Labor's inspectorate. (39,40)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

There are no government-run shelters that cater to child survivors of human trafficking. While the government funds and contracts with NGO-run shelters that serve this population, it does not directly provide such services. (9) An NGO reported that established shelters lack resources to attend to the needs of older children. (4) Although Botswana has programs that target child labor, the design and implementation of these programs are insufficient to fully address the scope of the problem, especially in commercial sexual exploitation, cattle herding, and domestic work.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Botswana (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

In 2022, Brazil made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government published two updates to the national "Dirty List," which contains data on employers that the Ministry of Labor and Employment found to be using slave labor, including that of children. The updated lists were published in April and October for a total of 184 newly listed employers. The Secretariat of Labor Inspection conducted over 1,368 child labor specific operations which resulted in the removal of 2,317 children from situations of child labor; the numbers of operations and rescues were the highest recorded in the last six years. Additionally, the government launched the Information System for Confronting Human Trafficking, which aims to generate data on the purposes for and forms of recruitment, improve responses in addressing these crimes, and allow for detailed information on victims of human trafficking to be recorded. The Rio de Janeiro City government also launched the first Municipal Plan to Combat the Sexual Exploitation of Children and Adolescents, which includes awareness campaigns to address and eradicate child labor. In addition, the Auxílio Brasil cash transfer program reached unprecedented levels by extending assistance to over 21.5 million families. However, children in Brazil are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in agriculture, including in the production of coffee. Although Brazil made meaningful efforts in all relevant areas during the reporting period, prohibitions against child trafficking require the use of threats, violence, coercion, fraud, or abuse be established for the crime of child trafficking to have occurred and, therefore, do not meet international labor standards. The reported number of labor inspectors is also likely not sufficient to provide adequate coverage of the workforce, and local governments lack the capacity to fully implement and monitor the National Program to Eradicate Child Labor and other social protection programs.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Brazil. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

The overall scope and magnitude of commercial sexual exploitation of children is unknown; however, the latest biennial report published by the Federal Highway Police, in collaboration with Childhood Brazil, identified 3,651 areas along highways throughout the country where children are vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation. Areas are assessed by evaluating the risk of exploitation and the implementation of preventative mechanisms and strategies that exist within each state. (30) According to the report, the states of Bahia, Goiás, Pará, Minas Gerais, and Ceará are at the highest risk for this type of exploitation. The report also indicated a 0.4 percent decrease of these vulnerable areas since its previous publication. (30) Child sex tourism is particularly common in tourist and coastal areas, and girls from other South American countries are also exploited for commercial sex in Brazil. (31)

A survey by the education-focused NGO Education for All (Todos pela Educação), using data from the second quarter of the 2021 Continuous Household Survey (PNAD), found that the number of children between the ages of 6 and 14 who are out of school grew 171 percent compared to the same calendar period in 2019, resulting in 244,000 children out of school, the largest number since 2012. Furthermore, the percentage of school-enrolled children fell from 98 percent in 2019 to 96.2 percent in 2021. (39) Additionally, research found that some schools, particularly those in rural areas, are overcrowded, have poor infrastructure, and lack basic resources and teachers. (8)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Brazil has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Brazil's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including deficiencies with its child trafficking prohibitions.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 403 of the Labor Code (40)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 2 of the Hazardous Work List (41)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Hazardous Work List (41)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 149 and 149-A of the Penal Code; Article 13 of Law 13.344 amending Penal Code; Articles 1 and 2 of Law 12.781 (42,44)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Article 149-A of the Penal Code; Article 244-A of the Child and Adolescent Statute (43,45)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 218-A, 218-B, 227, and 228 of the Penal Code; Articles 240, 241, and 244-A of the Child and Adolescent Statute (42,45)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 33 and 40 of the National System of Public Policies on Drugs; Article 244-B of the Child and Adolescent Statute (45,46)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	17	Article 127 of the Military Service Regulation (47)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 5 of the Military Service Law (48)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	17	Article 4 of the National Education Law (49)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 4 of the National Education Law (49)

The national "Dirty List" containing information on employers found to be using slave labor, including that of children, was updated in April 2022 with 89 new names and again in October 2022 with 95 new names. (50) However, prohibitions against child trafficking require the use of threats, violence, coercion, fraud, or abuse to be established for the crime of child trafficking and, therefore, do not meet international labor standards. (43) In addition, as the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (40,49)

III. Enforcement of Laws on Child Labor

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Brazil

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor and Employment (MTE)*	Oversees the Secretariat of Labor Inspection (SIT), which is responsible for organizing, coordinating, evaluating, and monitoring all labor inspection activities, including those related to child labor and forced labor. Labor inspectors carry out a number of actions outlined in the Labor Prosecution Office's Normative Instruction No. 02 of 2021, including unannounced inspections at sites where child labor is suspected, identification and removal of children from child labor situations, and issuing of penalties. (11,51) At the start of 2023, Decree 11.359 reestablished SIT within the Ministry of Labor and Employment. (52) In 2022, SIT's Special Mobile Group to Combat Child Labor was reinstated and carried out an operation in Maranhão, which resulted in the removal of 43 minors engaged in activities included in Brazil's Hazardous Work List. The Mobile Group carries out inspections of greater technical and operational complexity, including in isolated geographical areas and for cases classified as the worst forms of child labor according to Decree 6.481. (11,41,53)
Labor Prosecution Office (MPT)	Prosecutes child labor and forced labor violations by working with prosecutors from its National Committee to Combat Child and Adolescent Labor, an in-house body that coordinates efforts to address child labor. Collects fines for forced labor violations and allocates funds for initiatives that address child labor and forced labor. (8) Led by the Ministry of Public Union. (54)
Military, Civil, and Federal Police	The Military Police operate at the local level and refer cases to the Civil Police for investigation. The Federal Police, in turn, work on interstate or international cases and maintain a database to track cases of human trafficking for sexual exploitation. (8) The recently established Nucleus to Repress Forced Labor office works with the Federal Police's Service for the Repression of Trafficking in Persons and Human Smuggling (STRP) to respond to cases of human trafficking and forced labor. The STRP is led by a police delegate and supported by three federal police officers, along with additional staff support, depending on the specific mission with a focus on human trafficking and smuggling. (55,56)

* Agency responsible for child labor enforcement was restructured during the reporting period.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Brazil took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Employment (MTE) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient human resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In 2022, the Secretariat of Labor Inspection (SIT) conducted over 1,368 child labor specific operations resulting in the removal of 2,317 children from situations of child labor, including its worst forms. The number of operations and rescues were the highest recorded over the last 6 years. (11) According to SIT, when children are found in situations of child labor, including in hazardous working conditions, they are immediately removed from the situation and relevant data related to the violations are collected and forwarded to social services providers within the child and adolescent protection network, while reports are sent to the Public Ministry for further guidance. (51,58) In addition, children over age 14 may be referred to the country's apprenticeship program. (58)

However, research indicates that Brazil does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (59-61)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Brazil took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient efforts to hold violators of child labor laws accountable in accordance with the law.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (8)	Yes (50)

In 2022, the Ministry of Justice and Public Security (MJSP) prepared a Judicial Activity Protocol on Trafficking in Persons and Crimes, which was funded and led by the IOM, and in partnership with the Federal University of Minas Gerais, drafted a report titled "International Trafficking in Persons in Brazil: Crime in Motion, Justice on Hold." The report presents a diagnosis of how the Brazilian justice system addresses international human trafficking across its entire national territory. (50,62) In addition, the Judiciary, the Labor Prosecution Office (MPT), and the federal and state police have databases to track cases of human trafficking for sexual exploitation; however, information from these databases is not shared in a standardized way across relevant agencies. (8,63) Furthermore, reports indicate that the judicial system does not sufficiently hold perpetrators accountable for child labor law violations, including forced child labor, which may lead to a sense of impunity among violators. (64)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Commission for the Eradication of Child Labor	Leads implementation of the National Plan for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor and the Protection of Working Adolescents. Re-established in December 2020 and restructured from its original multipartite composition to a tripartite structure made up of six government, six employer, and six employee representatives. (65) Government representatives include the Ministries of Economy, Education, Citizenship, Health, Agriculture and Supply, and Women, Family and Human Rights. In addition, six special representatives are allowed to participate in meetings as observers, including from government agencies and national and international organizations, though these special representatives are not allowed to vote on any new initiatives. (66) In 2022, established a Working Group focused on developing a national workflow among agencies to address child labor. (11)

During the reporting period, the MJSP, through its National Committee to Combat Trafficking in Persons and in collaboration with the IOM, launched the Information System for Confronting Human Trafficking, which aims to generate data on the purposes and forms of recruitment, improve responses in addressing these crimes, and allow for detailed information on victims of human trafficking to be recorded. (50,67)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including the efficacy of accomplishing mandates.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Plan for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor and the Protection of Working Adolescents III (2019–2022)	Prioritized the prevention and eradication of child labor and the protection of adolescent workers; raised public awareness of child labor and its worst forms, including the risks of child labor; ensured relevant legislative compliance related to the prohibitions of child labor and its worst forms; strengthened family security and stability through the increase of employment opportunities; ensured access to quality education; and established health support systems for child labor victims. (68) Its implementation was coordinated by the National Council for the Rights of Children and Adolescents (CONANDA). (69) Research was unable to determine whether activities were taken to implement this policy during the reporting period.
National Plan to Combat Human Trafficking III (2018–2022)	Outlined the government's strategy to address human trafficking. Included 58 objectives based on 6 themes: policy management, information management, training, accountability, victim assistance and prevention, and public awareness raising. (64,70) During the reporting period, the Plan was implemented through numerous human trafficking trainings, victim assistance and prevention, and awareness campaigns. (50)
Federal Pact for the Eradication of Forced Labor	Aims to establish a database on forced labor, create state-level commissions to address forced labor, and strengthen inter-agency coordination. Led by the Ministry of Justice and Public Security's (MJSP) Special Secretariat for Human Rights, and currently signed by 23 of the 27 states. (64,71,72) Research was unable to determine whether activities were taken to implement this policy during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (73-75)

In 2022, the Rio de Janeiro city government launched a Municipal Plan to Combat the Sexual Exploitation of Children and adolescents. The Municipal Plan is aimed at improving existing policies focused on protecting and ensuring the rights of minors in the municipality, including through the increase of awareness campaigns to address and eradicate child labor; this is the first municipal plan of its kind to be implemented in Brazil. (76)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to assist child victims of human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
National Program to Eradicate Child Labor ( Programa de Erradicação do Trabalho Infantil [PETI] )†	Ministry of Citizenship (MOC) social assistance program that addresses child labor through awareness-raising activities, victim identification and protection, and conditional cash transfers. To receive program benefits, family participants must ensure that children are not working and maintain at least 85 percent school attendance. (77) In 2022, continued providing support to Brazilian states, and participated in all meetings of the National Commission to Combat Slave Labor and in the meetings of the National Commission for the Eradication of Child Labor. (78)
Aid Brazil ( Auxílio Brasil )†	MOC cash transfer program that integrates various public policies addressing social assistance, health, education, employment, and income. Aimed at families living in poverty and extreme poverty throughout the country. (79) Established in November 2021, the program replaces the pre-existing Family Stipend ( Bolsa Família ) program, increasing the amounts paid to vulnerable families and incorporating all families previously enrolled in the Bolsa Família program. (8) In 2022, the program reached unprecedented levels by extending assistance to over 21.5 million families due to an increase of $13 million. (80)
National Flow of Assistance to Victims of Slave Labor†	Creates an integrated network of social services providers and standardizes assistance to victims of slave labor, including child victims, across the country. It is structured into three stages: complaint and planning, rescue and reintegration, and the identification of organizations mandated to act at each stage, including details of each organization's roles. (81) Led by the Ministry for Women, Family, and Human Rights. (82) Active in 2022. (11)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (83,85-89)

In 2022, the Secretary of State for Tourism in the state of Maranhão continued conducting its annual weeklong awareness campaign to Combat Abuse and Sexual Exploitation of Children and Adolescents. Various activities were carried out in schools to raise awareness of these issues. (50) Campaigns were also conducted at tourist focused events. In addition, the state of Pernambuco's Public Ministry of Labor, in partnership with the State Secretariat of Urban Development and Housing, the Pernambuco International Transport Company, and the Recife Transport Consortium, launched a campaign to raise awareness of child abuse and human trafficking. (50) Posters were distributed through 66 intercity transport terminals and plastered on 2,000 buses in the Metropolitan Region of Recife. (50) Moreover, the National Forum for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor launched the results of a study on the situation of child laborers in domestic service. According to the study, most of the identified cases were girls (85 percent), African descent (70.8 percent), and between the ages of 14 and 17 (94 percent). Activities performed were varied though the study determined that 48.6 percent of these children worked as child caregivers, 40.3 percent as domestic workers, and 5.3 percent as caretakers. (90)

Although there are social programs in place, reports indicate that states lack resources and expertise to adequately assist, identify, refer, and support child trafficking victims, and many also do not have specialized shelters for child victims of commercial sexual exploitation. (31) In addition, because the National Program to Eradicate Child Labor (Programa de Erradicação do Trabalho Infantil [PETI]) is decentralized, municipal governments are responsible for implementation and monitoring, and must report back to state and federal governments. Challenges include responding to the needs of program participants, complex local contexts and geographic areas, excessive program requirements, and high staff turnover. (91)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Brazil (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Although research found no evidence that child labor exists in the British Virgin Islands, in 2022, the government made no advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. There is no list of hazardous work prohibited for children in the British Virgin Islands, nor does the law criminalize the use of children in illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs. In addition, the minimum age for work of 16 years old is lower than the compulsory education age of 17 years old.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides one key indicator on children's education in the British Virgin Islands. (1)

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Primary Completion Rate (%)		114.5

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2021, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2023. (1)
Data were unavailable from International Labor Organization's analysis, 2023. (2)

The Ministry of Education has employed truancy officers to ensure that children continue to attend school until the age of 17. (3) While education in the British Virgin Islands is free, the cost of uniforms, books, and lunches prevents some children from attending school. In addition, violence in schools can deter children from attending. (1,4) Children not in school may be vulnerable to engage in child labor.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

British Overseas Territories recognize the jurisdiction and sovereignty of the UK but are not constitutionally part of the UK. They are self-governing, except in the areas of foreign affairs and defense. (5) Domestic UK law does not generally apply unless explicitly extended to the British Virgin Islands. Under Article 35(4) of the ILO Constitution, when the UK ratifies a Convention, the Territory must consider if it will accept the Convention. If the Convention is accepted, it is considered applicable to that Territory. (5,6) The following Convention has been extended to and accepted by the British Virgin Islands (Table 2).

Table 2. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The Government of the British Virgin Islands has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 3). However, gaps exist in the British Virgin Islands' legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including a failure to criminalize the use of children in illicit activities.

Table 3. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Articles 3 and 128 of the Labor Code (7)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 3 and 130 of the Labor Code (7)

British Virgin Islands

NO ADVANCEMENT

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No		Articles 130 and 146 of the Labor Code (7)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 130 of the Labor Code; Article 14 of the Constitution Order; Section 201A of the Criminal Code (7-9)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Section 201A of the Criminal Code (9)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Sections 127, 201A, and 284A of the Criminal Code; Article 130 of the Labor Code (7,9)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No		Articles 3 and 130 of the Criminal Code (9)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	N/A†
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*†
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	17	Section 2b of the Education Amendment Act of 2014; Part 2, Division 3, Section 28(1) of the Education Act (10,11)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 22 of the Constitution Order; Section 17 of the Education Act (8,10)

* Country has no conscription (5)

† Country has no standing military (12)

In the British Virgin Islands, there is no criminal prohibition against using children in illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs. In addition, the laws prohibiting the commercial sexual exploitation of children do not meet international standards by not covering girls ages 16–17 or boys. (9) The Labor Code specifies that hazardous work be defined by the Minister of Labor, but the Minister of Labor has not defined hazardous work for children, including seafaring, or light work that may be engaged in by children who are at least age 14. (7,13) The minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, which may encourage children to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (10,11)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for enforcement actions to address child labor, including its worst forms. However, the British Virgin Islands have established an institutional mechanism for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 4).

Table 4. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor	Enforces labor laws and collects data and statistics on violations of the Labor Code and plans and conducts labor inspections. (7,14,15)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for a mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for programs to address child labor.

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, the following actions would advance the continued prevention of child labor in the British Virgin Islands (Table 5).

Table 5. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify ILO Convention 182 on the Worst Forms of Child Labor.	2020 – 2022
	Ratify the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict.	2020 – 2022
	Ratify the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution, and Child Pornography.	2020 – 2022

	Determine by national law or regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited for children, after consultation with employers' and workers' organizations.	2012 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the commercial sexual exploitation of girls ages 16–17 and boys.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the use of children in illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs.	2015 – 2022
Social Programs	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2022
	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education accessible for all children by eliminating prohibitive school costs and violence in schools.	2018 – 2022

In 2022, Burkina Faso made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. On September 12, 2022, the government adopted a handover protocol in collaboration with the United Nations, which considers child soldiers as victims and directs officials to transfer them to social services by security forces if detained following military operations. The government also developed a mobile application for labor inspectors that will provide real-time data and information on child labor throughout the country and translated its hazardous work list for children into five local languages. Lastly, the government adopted the 2023–2027 Strategic Plan on Eliminating Child and Forced Labor in the Cotton, Textile, and Garment Value Chains. However, children in Burkina Faso are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in farming and commercial sexual exploitation, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in artisanal gold mining. The Labor Code does not identify the light work activities in which children may engage. The government also lacked resources for the enforcement of child labor laws and did not release information on its labor and criminal law enforcement efforts.

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor†	Forced begging in Koranic schools (11,12,14)
	Recruitment of children by non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict (8,16)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children engage in artisanal gold mining, which is particularly arduous and often exposes children to dangerous chemicals such as cyanide and mercury, which are used in the gold extraction process. (5,10,15,17) Burkina Faso also is one of the largest producers of cotton in Africa, with a reported 250,000 children involved in growing the crop, primarily on small family farms. (4,7,12) Children working in the cotton sector are exposed to many health risks, including exposure to pesticides, injury from the use of sharp tools, animal bites, and respiratory issues. (4,10)

During the reporting period, children were used as soldiers by extremist armed groups. In addition, a coup d’etat in January 2022 and a subsequent military takeover in September 2022, as well as continued insecurity, has led to the mass displacement of more than 2 million IDPs in the last 3 years, including a large number of vulnerable children. (8,12,16,18) Child trafficking also occurs within Burkina Faso, and it is a destination, transit point, and source for child trafficking to and from other West African countries. (14,15,19)

Although the Law Orienting the Education System mandates free education until age 16, many children face barriers to educational access. (3,9,20,21) Due to a lack of infrastructure, some communities create makeshift structures to serve as schools, and in rural areas teacher shortages are common, especially for the post-primary levels. (8) In addition, there are fees for all levels of public education, which sometimes pose heavy burdens on families. (3,9) Moreover, school violence exists and is exacerbated by the current security crisis, and transportation costs restrict access to schooling in urban areas. (9) Children in Burkina Faso must have birth documentation (e.g., a birth certificate or supplemental birth judgment) to register for school. (9,22) A student may begin schooling without documentation; however documentation must be provided before the end of the first quarter following the child’s registration. (3,9) Because more than one in five children do not have a birth certificate, many children in Burkina Faso remain out of school and vulnerable to child labor. (8,9) While research has found no evidence of discrimination based on ethnicity, refugees and IDPs face many educational challenges, mainly due to the sudden increase in educational needs in the communities hosting them. Less than 20 percent of displaced people manage to obtain school registration. (8,9) In some localities where armed attacks on schools have intensified, especially in the East and Sahel regions, there is a preference of some communities for other types of education such as Koranic schools. (9) Ongoing insecurity in the country has resulted in more than 6,253 schools being closed, affecting more than 1 million children. (8)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Burkina Faso has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Burkina Faso's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including unspecified light work provisions.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 152 of the Labor Code; Order Deviating the Age of Admission to Employment (23,24)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 149 and 150 of the Labor Code; Article 1 of the Hazardous Work List (23,25)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 153 of the Labor Code; Articles 3–6 of the Hazardous Work List; Article 77 of the Mining Code (23,25,26)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 5 and 153 of the Labor Code; Articles 3–5 of the Law Suppressing the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography; Article 1-4 of the Law on Combating Trafficking of Persons and Similar Practices (23,27,28)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 153 of the Labor Code; Articles 1–5, 14, and 15 of the Law on Combating Trafficking of Persons and Similar Practices (23,28)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 153 of the Labor Code; Articles 3, 4, 7–10, and 20 of the Law Suppressing the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography (23,27)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 153 of the Labor Code (23)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	20	Article 2 of the Decree Organizing Operations Related to Convoking the Contingent (29)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Articles 153 and 424 of the Labor Code (23)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 4 of the Law Orienting the Education System (21)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 6 of the Law Orienting the Education System (21)

* Country has no conscription (30)

The light work provisions in the Labor Code are not sufficiently specific to prevent children from involvement in child labor because activities that qualify as light work that may be permitted are not identified in the legislation. (23,24)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of child labor laws.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Public Service, Labor, and Social Security (MFPTSS)	Enforces labor laws as the lead agency on child labor law enforcement and establishes a government policy to address child labor. (31) In 2022, MFPTSS organized a training workshop on child labor for journalists and communicators to increase their understanding of the laws and regulations against child labor and child trafficking, and to facilitate the implementation of the National Strategy to End the Worst Forms of Child Labor. (16) The Ministry of Territorial Administration, Decentralization, and Interior Security (MATDSI) assists MFPTSS by participating in joint routine inspections for suspected child trafficking cases. (10,32)
Ministry of Women, National Solidarity, Family, and Humanitarian Action (MFSNF)	Removes children from exploitative child labor; provides reintegration services through its mobile unit for intervention, and works with local village surveillance committees on awareness-raising efforts through participation in joint routine inspections with MFPTSS. (10,32) Operates a free hotline to report child abuse and maintains civil registry offices in maternity wards to register newborn babies. Enlists its National Council for Childhood to oversee all policies aimed at the survival, protection, development, and participation of children in broader policy initiatives. (33) It is unknown how many cases of child labor were identified as a result of complaints made to the MFSNF hotline.
Ministry of Justice	Appoints one or more judges who specialize in child protection issues to each high court to oversee juvenile court cases. Collaborates with MFSNF social workers in charge of child protection to conduct investigations on behalf of vulnerable children, including victims of child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, exploitative child labor, and begging. (10,34) Receives criminal cases involving children and women referred from MATDSI's Morals Brigade in the MATDSI National Police Force. (10,32)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Burkina Faso took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Public Service, Labor, and Social Security (MFPTSS) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including a lack of human resources.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown	$225,000 (8)

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (3)	Yes (8)

In 2022, the MFPTSS created a mobile application for labor inspectors as a tool for reporting and monitoring their work that also will provide real-time data and information on child labor throughout the country. (8) In particular, the application will help inspectors determine the dangers that children are exposed to, include information about appropriate social services, and help verify that children have been removed from work sites. (8) During the reporting period, the government also reported its labor inspectorate budget for the first time since 2018. (8) However, research indicates that Burkina Faso does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (35) Furthermore, the labor inspectorate lacks adequate resources to enforce labor laws throughout the country, including the financial resources needed to carry out a sufficient number of preliminary labor inspections and follow-up inspections. (19,36)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Burkina Faso took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including inconsistent application of victim identification and referral procedures by authorities and frontline responders.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Unknown (3)	Unknown (8)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (3)	Unknown (8)

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Unknown (3)	Yes (8)

On September 12, 2022, the government adopted a handover protocol in collaboration with the UN that considers child soldiers as victims, and directs officials to transfer children to social services by security forces if detained following military operations. (8,12,16) The authorities have begun implementing the protocol and have transferred 149 children to social services. However, the protocol did not apply to children previously detained, leaving at least 15 minors, including potential human trafficking victims, in detention for alleged association with violent extremist groups. (12) They were held in a high-security prison separately from adult detainees and international organizations and NGOs were allowed access to provide specialized care, including legal services. However, research suggests that there are isolated cases of children being detained by the government in connection with terrorism charges and held in prisons along with adults, with some children being held for years. (8,12,37) In addition, although the government has standard victim identification and referral procedures, criminal law enforcement authorities and frontline responders do not apply them uniformly. (15,19)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including insufficient coordination among ministries.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Coordination Committee for the National Strategy Plan to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor (CNC-SN/PFTE)	Defines appropriate strategies for mobilizing the resources necessary to implement SN/PFTE. Created in July 2020 by order of the Minister of Labor, comprises representatives from other ministries, civil society organizations, NGOs, unions, and employers. (3,8,9) The decree determining the list of dangerous work prohibited for children has been translated into five local languages, including Moore, Dioula, Fulfulde, Gourmanché, and Dagara. (8) MFPTSS serves as the Secretariat for CNC/SN/PFTE. (38) Promotes consultation and synergy of action among the actors involved in SN/PFTE implementation. Validates the annual activity programs of SN/PFTE. (9) Monitors and evaluates implementation and proposes necessary readjustments. Reviews and adopts the reports submitted to it by the Technical Secretariat. (9) Issues reasoned opinions on any question related to the worst forms of child labor. (9) The Committee held its first meeting in October 2022, where it reviewed and finalized the 2021 implementation report of SN-PFTE, and provided training to its members, as well as a training to approximately 50 teachers on child labor issues. (8)

Poor coordination among the various ministries responsible for addressing child labor and a lack of funding and resources, including computers and electricity, continue to hamper the government's ability to coordinate efforts to fully address child trafficking. (3,17,36)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of implementation of policies related to child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Strategy to End the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2019–2023) (SN/PFTE)	Aims to monitor, address, prevent, and protect against the worst forms of child labor in Burkina Faso, and reintegrate victims. (3,14) Developed by law enforcement agencies focused on child labor and its worst forms; governmental and non-governmental bodies; technical, financial, and social partners; and civil society organizations, including children's associations. (9) During the reporting period, the government continued to implement SN/PFTE, including by the completion of the data collection process for the national survey on child labor, the digitalization of child labor inspections through the development of a mobile application, the translation into local languages of the decree fixing the lists of dangerous work prohibited for children, and the drafting of the decree enumerating the list of light work authorized for children. (8,16)
National Child Protection Strategy (2020–2023)	Aims to strengthen the institutional, community, and family environment to ensure effective protection for children. (22) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Child Protection Strategy during the reporting period.

During the reporting period, the MFPTSS adopted the 2023–2027 Strategic Plan on Eliminating Child and Forced Labor in the Cotton, Textile, and Garment Value Chains under the CLEAR Cotton project co-funded by the ILO and EU. (12,16)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Campaign to Remove Street Children	NGO MinWomen-funded program, with coordination by MFSNF. Includes outreach missions in the streets to identify and refer vulnerable children, including victims of forced begging, and reintegrate them back into society or to one of the four youth shelters established in the Somgandé, Baskuy, Nongremassom, and Cissin districts of Ouagadougou. (19,36) During the reporting period, MFSNF continued to implement campaigns to remove children from streets, including an operation launched by the Minister of MFSNF to relocate children from the streets of Ouagadougou. (12)
MFSNF Projects to Combat Human Trafficking†	Aim to address human trafficking. Includes the operation of transit centers that provide food, medical assistance, and counseling to child trafficking survivors and children vulnerable to human trafficking. (15) Transit centers aim to reintegrate victims into their communities and facilitate the repatriation of foreign victims when possible. (15) The National Parenting Program assists parents in providing access to education and raising awareness about child trafficking. Nationwide media campaigns to address human trafficking provide advocacy, raise awareness, and build capacity for key actors involved in child protection issues, including child trafficking. (15) Watchdog and monitoring committees ensure that all cases of alleged trafficking of children are reported to the justice system by social workers. (39) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the MFSNF Projects to Combat Human Trafficking during the reporting period.
ILO-Implemented Projects to Combat Child Labor	Project to address child labor and forced labor in supply chains, implemented by the ILO in collaboration with the Food and Agriculture Organization. Includes Eliminating Child Labor and Forced Labor in the Cotton, Textile and Garment Value Chains: An Integrated Approach (2018–2022), a 9.70 million (EUR 9 million) EU and ILO initiative of the UN-funded global project to combat child labor and forced labor in cotton and textile supply chains. (40) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement ILO projects to Combat Child Labor during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Burkina Faso.

Although Burkina Faso has social programs to address the worst forms of child labor in cotton production and gold mining, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem. (15)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Burkina Faso (Table I I).

Table I I. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that laws determine the light work activities in which children are permitted to engage.	2016 – 2022

	Ensure that a reciprocal referral mechanism exists between criminal authorities and social services and is operational.	2019 – 2022
	Take active measures, including ensuring that a mechanism is operational, to ensure that children are not inappropriately incarcerated, detained with adults, penalized, or physically harmed solely for unlawful acts committed as a direct result of their subjection to the worst forms of child labor, such as child soldiering.	2020 – 2022
Coordination	Ensure that coordinating bodies receive adequate resources, such as computers and electricity, to accomplish their mandates.	2015 – 2022
	Enhance coordination and collaborative processes and procedures among ministries, law enforcement, and social services.	2019 – 2022
Government Policies	Ensure that activities are undertaken to implement key policies related to child labor, including the National Child Protection Strategy, and publish results from activities implemented during the reporting period.	2020 – 2022
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2022
	Establish a social program to ensure that IDP and other vulnerable children have access to education and thus reduce their risk of exposure to the worst forms of child labor.	2020 – 2022
	Improve access to education by eliminating school-related fees and other costs, such as uniforms, by increasing the number of schools and teachers in rural areas, ensuring access to affordable transportation, and ending violence in schools.	2010 – 2022
	Ensure that children are registered at birth and that IDPs have access to the requisite documentation to gain access to social services, including education.	2010 – 2022
	Ensure that activities are undertaken to implement key social programs to address child labor during the reporting period and make information about implementation measures publicly available.	2020 – 2022
	Expand existing programs to fully address child labor in cotton production and gold mining.	2009 – 2022

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

In 2022, Burma is receiving an assessment of no advancement. Despite initiatives to address child labor, Burma is assessed as having made no advancement because it demonstrated complicity in the use of forced child labor. During the reporting period, the regime’s military continued to force civilians, including children, to work in non-combat roles as porters, cleaners, cooks, and agricultural laborers in conflict areas. Otherwise, the government made efforts by enacting the Prevention and Suppression of Trafficking in Persons Law, which establishes that a child trafficking offense does not require a demonstration of force, fraud, or coercion. Children in Burma are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in the forced recruitment of children for use in armed conflict by armed groups, and in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. The vulnerability of Rohingya children to the worst forms of child labor remained high as many continued to be denied access to education and livelihoods because of restrictions on their movements imposed by the regime. The regime also has not published a hazardous work list of activities prohibited for children, as required by the Child Rights Law. In addition, the regime did not publish information on its labor or criminal law enforcement efforts.

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced recruitment of children by state and non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict (8,6,17,18)
	Forced labor in agriculture, including harvesting bamboo and producing beans, rice, rubber, sugarcane, and teak (4,8,11)
	Forced labor in manufacturing bricks and construction (8)
	Forced labor in domestic work, teashops, and begging (6,10,13,15)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (6,8)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

In 2022, the national military's continued self-reliance policy, which requires military forces to provide their own food and labor from local communities, led some units to force children and other civilians to work in non-combat roles, including portering, cooking, camp maintenance, farming, and other activities. (19,20) Border guard and non-state armed forces have also recruited and used children in armed conflict during the reporting period. (3,8) In addition, civilian brokers with military connections sometimes altered birthdates on identity documents to facilitate the entry of underage recruits into the military, and some children of military personnel have been forced to receive military training. (4,13,21,22)

Since the military perpetuated widespread ethnic cleansing of Rohingya people in northern Rakhine State in August 2017, hundreds of thousands of Rohingya, including over 495,000 children, have fled from Burma to Bangladesh, making them vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. (6,23-25) Rohingya children residing in camps for refugees and IDP are at an increased risk of the worst forms of child labor, including forced labor and sex trafficking, due to lack of schools, movement restrictions, discriminatory policies and practices, and school closures as a consequence of ongoing violence, especially in Muslim villages. (6,8,26-29) The regime tightened movement restrictions on the Rohingya population, leading to the arrests of 2,000 people, including children, during the reporting period. (20,30) Children, particularly girls, are leaving these camps to immigrate to countries such as Malaysia for marriages, but often find themselves in situations of forced labor, including domestic work—a sector for which the regime has yet to pass a child labor law. (15,27,31-33)

School attendance is dramatically lower post-COVID-19 pandemic and after the February 1, 2021, coup. Exact percentages are unknown, as many parents refuse to enroll their children in regime-controlled schools, and many teachers joined the Civil Disobedience Movement and refuse to teach in schools controlled by the regime. (8) Moreover, schools throughout the country are regularly attacked by the military regime and non-state armed groups, particularly in the Sagaing region and Shan and Kachin States. Attacks on schools rose dramatically during the reporting period, often resulting in the death or injury of children. (8,19,34-36) Regime forces also continued to occupy schools, further disrupting education and exposing children and teachers to violence. (19,22) In addition, reports show that personnel in the military regime have killed teachers in non-regime-controlled areas for establishing community schools for children. (34,35) Other barriers to education in the country include costs associated with travel to schools located long distances away, a lack of schools and teachers, and expenses that include uniforms, books, transportation, and extra fees charged by teachers and schools. These barriers often lead children to discontinue their studies after primary school, increasing their vulnerability to the worst forms of child labor. (8,24) Refugee children and children from ethnic communities who speak different languages also face barriers to education because ethnic languages are prohibited from being spoken in schools and the curriculum is only taught in Burmese. (8,24,37) Moreover, Burmese law guarantees education only for Burmese citizens, and Rohingya are often denied nationality identity cards due to discriminatory regime policies. (6,8,18,28,38)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Burma has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

The regime has laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Burma's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the lack of comprehensive hazardous work prohibitions.

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the regime enacted the updated Prevention and Suppression of Trafficking in Persons Law, which removed the requirement to demonstrate force, fraud, or coercion to prosecute child trafficking cases. (8,45) The regime also enacted the Organization Registration Law, which reportedly will constrain operations for both domestic and international NGOs. It is unclear whether this law will also hinder their ability to provide services to exploited children. (20,35,53,54)

Although Burmese law prohibits persons under the age of 18 from joining the armed forces, the regime did not take action to enforce this during the reporting period. (8) In addition, Burma has higher penalties for perpetrators who use children in the production or trafficking of drugs; however, the law defines children as those under age 16, while international standards regarding illicit activities define children as those below the age of 18. (9,46) Moreover, although Burma's Child Rights Law mandates the creation of a hazardous work list, Burma has not published a hazardous work list. (8) Additionally, school is only required for children through age 10; however, the minimum age for work is age 14. (37,50) This does not meet international standards because the compulsory schooling age does not meet the minimum age for work of 14.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The regime has institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor — Factories and General Labor Laws Inspection Department (FGLLID)	Inspects factories, shops, and establishments for child labor law violations. (39,40) Only mandated to inspect for child labor in manufacturing establishments and factories as laid out in the Factories Law (1951) and the Shops and Establishment Law (2016). (8) Certain sectors in which child labor is reported to occur—including agriculture, construction, mining, and fishing—are outside of the purview of FGLLID and are, therefore, not subject to inspections. (8)
Ministry of Home Affairs – Myanmar Police Force, Anti-Trafficking in Persons Division (ATIPD)	Investigates human trafficking crimes and engages in prevention efforts through its 32 regional Anti-Trafficking Task Force police units. (7,8) Also oversees three specialized Child Protection Units in Rangoon, Mandalay, and Nay Pyi Daw to address child exploitation cases, including child trafficking, and uses formal written procedures to screen victims. (7) ATIPD operates nine 24/7 hotlines for reporting human trafficking cases. (6) In 2022, ATIPD reported four trafficking cases involving six children. The current status of these cases is unknown. (7)
Ministry of Legal Affairs	Previously named the Union Attorney General's Office. (3) Responsible for prosecuting human trafficking crimes. Coordinators act as district-level human trafficking focal points, helping to build prosecutorial expertise, collect and report data, support coordination between prosecutors and police, create focused training opportunities, and improve prosecution records related to human trafficking throughout the country. (8) The Ministry of Legal Affairs did not publish comprehensive data on human trafficking prosecutions in 2022. (7,8)

Labor Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether labor law enforcement agencies in Burma took actions to address child labor.

Due to widespread armed conflict in Burma following the 2021 military coup, the military regime was unable to enforce child labor laws in approximately half of the country. (8) Many labor inspectors left their jobs to join the pro-democracy movement after the coup, which, in addition to pandemic and conflict-related travel restrictions, limited the Ministry of Labor's ability to carry out inspections. (3,11) Reports also indicate that training for labor inspectors is insufficient, and there is a lack of funding to cover transportation and equipment for labor inspections. (10,55) When labor inspections do occur, they are generally limited to Burma's major urban centers, leaving children in remote rural areas unprotected. (55,56) In addition, previous reports indicated that factory owners are often told in advance when an inspection will occur, and labor inspectors often neglect to speak with workers. (10,55) Research indicates that Burma does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (3,8,55,57,58)

On the rare occasion that penalties are imposed for labor violations, they are often too low to act as a disincentive for most medium to large enterprises. (8) Moreover, although the 2019 Child Rights Law specifies that the Department of Social Welfare within the Ministry of Social Welfare, Relief and Resettlement (MSWRR) is the official body responsible for the care of child labor victims, regulations regarding implementation of the law are pending, and research was unable to determine whether this agency received referrals from labor inspectors during the reporting period. (8) Further, it is unclear whether the National Complaints Mechanism for Forced Labor, which was established by the previous government, is functioning. (6,20)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether criminal law enforcement agencies in Burma took actions to address child labor (Table 7).

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Unknown (3)	Unknown (8)

In 2022, community-based human trafficking identification teams received training on screening and interviewing human trafficking victims in accordance with the 2022 Trafficking in Persons Law. MSWRR also provided representatives from various regime departments with training on standard operating procedures for human trafficking crimes. (8) Although the regime reported that it prosecuted four child trafficking cases during the reporting period, information about the nature of these cases is unavailable. (8) Research also indicates that nearly 7,000 police officers have left the Myanmar Police Force since the coup in 2021, which has resulted in regions throughout the country lacking sufficient enforcement coverage. (4,31,34,59)

While the national military has previously taken action against military officials for crimes related to the recruitment of children, most of these cases reportedly culminated in reprimands, demotions, relocations,

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

fines, or decreases in pensions—penalties significantly less than the prison sentences that are prescribed by law. (4,9,10,21,60) The regime did not make information public regarding the investigation, prosecution, or sentencing of military officials related to the military recruitment of children during the reporting period. (8) In more than isolated instances, children associated with non-state armed groups have been detained and arrested, rather than being referred to appropriate victim support services. In addition, some children have been detained in a military interrogation center for periods ranging from 2 days to several weeks. (19,34)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of coordination across government agencies.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Committee on Child Labor Eradication	Oversees the implementation of the Myanmar Child Labor Eradication Project. (8) Chaired by the Vice Chairman of State Administration Council and includes 39 members, including representatives from 13 government ministries, the chief ministers of 10 states, the mayors of Rangoon and Mandalay, unions, and employer and civil society organizations. (8) Although this committee held its fifth coordination meeting in October 2022, the specific activities carried out by this committee during the reporting year are unknown. (7,8)

The regime's Committee on Prevention of Recruitment of Child Soldiers is the designated interagency coordination body to address child soldier issues and is the only agency within the regime that works with the UN Country Taskforce on Monitoring and Reporting. (8) There are reports that this committee had an overwhelming backlog of child soldier cases in 2022. (8,19) In addition, research indicates that since the 2021 coup, the regime continues to be hampered by limited interministerial coordination to address child labor issues. (13,20)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The regime has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including the lack of policies that address all relevant worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
Myanmar National Action Plan on Elimination of Child Labor (2019–2023)	Established in partnership with the ILO. Aims to eliminate child labor, including hazardous child labor. (61) Research was unable to determine whether the regime conducted any activities to implement the plan during the reporting period. (8)
Myanmar Sustainable Development Plan (2018–2030)	Sets out a strategy to expand social protection services, including the introduction of measures to keep children enrolled in schools and out of child labor. (62) In particular, Action Plan Item 4.3.6 specifically addresses eliminating child labor by preventing school dropouts. (10,62) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the plan during the reporting period. (8)
5-Year National Plan of Action to Combat Trafficking in Persons (2022–2027) †	Aims to eliminate internal and cross-border trafficking in persons and to prevent new forms of trafficking. Implemented by the Central Body for Suppression of Trafficking in Persons. (8) The regime did not consult with the Human Trafficking Working Group in the development of the plan, departing from the practices of the former government. (8) The regime also has not published this plan, and as a result, research was unable to determine its contents, scope, and objectives. Moreover, research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the plan during the reporting period. (7,8)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

Although Burma has adopted the 5-Year National Plan of Action to Combat Trafficking in Persons, research found no evidence of a policy specific to other worst forms of child labor, including forced child labor or commercial sexual exploitation of children. (8)

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the regime funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate programs to address all worst forms of child labor.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Hotlines	UNICEF and World Vision-operated hotlines for reporting suspected cases of child recruitment or use of children by Burma's military, which remain active. (63) World Vision reported receiving 11 calls from the hotline in 2022, 8 of which were referred as suspected cases of the recruitment of minors. (8) Specific actions taken by the government to support the hotlines were not specified during the reporting period. (8)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

The primary challenges to addressing child labor and forced labor issues include lack of resources and personnel, lack of understanding of victim integration, and decentralization of responsibility to state and regional authorities. (20,21,55,64) As a result, the responsibility for protecting, rehabilitating, and reintegrating victims of forced child labor largely falls on civil society organizations and international NGOs. The government also lacks sufficient social programs to adequately address all worst forms of child labor, including forced child labor and the commercial sexual exploitation of children. (8)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Burma (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Determine by national law or regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited for children as required by the Child Rights Law.	2019 – 2022

In 2022, Burundi made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Burundian government significantly increased funding for labor inspections, a fourteen-fold increase from 2021. The government, in collaboration with the United Nations Children's Fund, also developed a national strategy to increase the integration of Batwa children into schools. Furthermore, members of Burundi's newly formalized Consultation and Monitoring Commission on Prevention and Repression of Trafficking in Persons completed a draft of a new national action plan on human trafficking, pending approval from authorities and final adoption by the Office of the Prime Minister. However, children in Burundi are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in gold mining. Burundi's laws do not establish a compulsory education age.

And while Burundi has a policy-based compulsory education age of 15, this is lower than its minimum age for work, 16, leaving children vulnerable to labor exploitation. The government also failed to provide comprehensive criminal law enforcement data related to the worst forms of child labor and lacked resources to conduct labor inspections and criminal investigations. Lastly, Burundi has insufficient social programs to address child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Burundi. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Attending School (%)	5 to 14	69.4
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	30.5

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Burundi is a source country for children subjected to forced labor and sex trafficking abroad, and children from rural areas are subjected to human trafficking within the country for domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation. (8,16,18) Reports indicate that an increasing number of children from the Batwa ethnic group are being transported from rural areas into Bujumbura with promises of work and subsequently are exploited. (4) Women who offer room and board to children also sometimes force the children into commercial sexual exploitation to pay expenses. (11) In addition, Burundian girls are taken abroad for commercial sexual exploitation in Kenya, Rwanda, Uganda, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, and countries in the Middle East. (5,11,16,19,20) Reporting suggests that Burundian children are exploited in Tanzania in forced labor. A civil society organization reported that 509 Burundian child trafficking victims returned to Burundi from Tanzania during the reporting period. (8)

Children work entire days transplanting rice, and typically drop out of school in the pre-harvest season to guard rice plantations from birds. Children are also utilized as lookouts in the forestry industry to report illegal woodcutting or theft, placing them in potentially dangerous situations when smugglers and thieves are present. (6,8,21) In fishing communities near Lake Tanganyika, boys are often engaged in fishing activities without pay while girls work as cooks or domestic employees and are at risk of sexual exploitation. (6,8,11) Civil society organizations indicate that up to 15 percent of children who are school dropouts in urban centers work in the charcoal trade, either packing, loading, and unpacking charcoal or working in fire pits. (6,8) Street children in Burundi may be particularly vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, including forced begging. (8,22)

While the government abolished primary school fees in 2012, there is no law that guarantees free public education and families are frequently asked to pay for supplies, secondary school fees, and school building maintenance costs, which has prevented many children from accessing public schooling. (4,7,8,23) Inadequate teacher capacity and poor infrastructure have also limited educational opportunity. For example, the lack of gender-separated bathrooms can contribute to a lower attendance rate among girls. (4,7,8) Children with disabilities and mobility issues face discrimination in schools, along with a lack of appropriate materials and infrastructure, limiting access to education. (24) In addition, refugee children from neighboring countries living in camps in Burundi face barriers to learning due to deteriorating school infrastructure, overcrowded classrooms, and a lack of educators. (8) Moreover, because birth certificates are required to attend school, many unregistered children, in particular children of the Batwa ethnic group and Burundian refugee children repatriating from abroad, remain out of school and vulnerable to child labor. (4,7,8,22,25)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Burundi has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Burundi's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the lack of sufficient prohibitions against the use of children by non-state armed groups.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Articles 2, 10, and 618 of the Labor Code (26)

* Country has no conscription (30)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (31)

In 2022, the government drafted a new Child Protection Code, which has not yet been ratified, to provide more effective protections for children. (8,23) Although the Constitution prohibits the use of children in armed conflict, the Penal Code criminalizes only the use of children under age 15 in armed conflict, leaving children between the ages of 15 and 18 vulnerable to this worst form of child labor. (29,33) Burundian law does prohibit the recruitment of children under age 18 by state armed forces, and available evidence indicates that the government continued to comply with this provision. (3,34) Although it does not appear that there are any laws that establish compulsory education, there is a policy that provides for compulsory education to age 15. (35,36) However, even the policy-based compulsory education age is lower than the minimum age for work, leaving children between the ages of 15 and 16 vulnerable to labor exploitation. (26,37) The Law on Basic and Secondary Education states that free education will be guaranteed as established by decree, but research was unable to locate the relevant decree. (8,23,31) Moreover, the Law on Basic and Secondary Education calls on parents to finance education, which suggests that educational officials or schools would be permitted to levy fees. (31)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Public Service, Labor, and Employment	Administers and enforces all labor laws, including those on child labor, through the Inspector General of Work and Social Security. (38)
Ministry of Interior, Community Development, and Public Security	Conducts criminal investigations on the worst forms of child labor, including forced child labor, child trafficking, and the use of children in illicit activities. Through the Burundi National Police's Unit for the Protection of Minors and Morals, protects children from commercial sexual exploitation, illicit activity, forced labor, and military recruitment. (3-5,16,34)
Ministry of Justice	Prosecutes cases of the worst forms of child labor through its General Prosecutor's Office. (3-5)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Burundi took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Public Service, Labor, and Employment that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including an insufficient number of labor inspectors.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (7)	Yes (8)

In 2022, 20 labor inspectors were trained on the labor code and social protection issues. (9) The government also significantly increased the budget for labor inspections during the reporting period, and the additional funding helped cover some travel expenses for inspectors, per diems for inspection visits, awareness campaigns on companies' social obligations, and ongoing development of the national health and safety policy. (8) However, a lack of sufficient resources for travel, fuel, and computer equipment continued to hamper the enforcement of child labor laws. (5,8,39) Reporting also suggests that inspections are conducted exclusively in the formal and semi-formal sectors, including in large-scale enterprises, in which child labor is relatively rare. As such, inspections are not conducted in the informal sector, including in informal agricultural labor, where child labor is much more prevalent. (4,7,8,40,41) In addition, research indicates that Burundi does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their duties. (8,42,43)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Burundi took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient resource allocation.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Unknown (7)	Yes (8)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (7)	Unknown (8)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (7)	Unknown (8)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (7)	Unknown (8)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (7)	Unknown (8)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (7)	Yes (8)

During the reporting period, 30 magistrates and judicial police officers and 90 police officers from the General Commissariat for Migration received training from IOM on trafficking in persons. (9) The government also operates multiple hotlines that assist in the identification of child trafficking cases, including one specifically to report child abuse managed by the Ministry of National Solidarity, Social Affairs, Human Rights and Gender. (44) In 2022, the government continued to implement measures to prevent international child trafficking, including increased patrols of communes bordering neighboring countries and inspection of vehicles leaving Bujumbura for international travel. (45) In September 2022, Burundian police identified 20 children believed to be on their way to Tanzania to engage in child labor, including forced labor. The Burundian National Police and local authorities took the children into protective custody, provided them with assistance, and returned them to their families. (44)

The government lacked resources to fully implement criminal law enforcement strategies. For example, while the Burundi National Police Unit for the Protection of Minors and Morals was responsible for investigating trafficking in persons, commercial sexual exploitation of children, and child labor issues, it lacked capacity and often did not receive referrals from other police units. (19) Reporting indicates that investigators lack sufficient office spaces and supplies, transportation, fuel, and computer equipment. (8) The government acknowledged that officials are unfamiliar with the 2014 anti-trafficking law and thus are not sufficiently familiar with the concepts of the worst forms of child labor. (11,16,41) Burundi lacks formal guidance for authorities on how to respond to cases potentially involving the worst forms of child labor, and law enforcement lacked sufficient training to properly identify such cases. Although a referral mechanism between law enforcement and social services exists, civil society organizations indicate it is utilized on an ad hoc basis, thus making it difficult to ensure survivors receive services. (11,18) In general, agencies lacked resources necessary to respond to survivors' needs and had to rely primarily on services from civil society and international organizations. (11,19) During the reporting period, 90 street children were arrested by police. Street children who are arrested are often taken to temporary rehabilitation centers, which have been presented as prisons for children, before being returned to their families. (22,46) The government did not provide complete information on its criminal law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report, including the number of investigations, prosecutions initiated, convictions, and penalties imposed. (8)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including insufficient resources.

Burundi

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Multisector Committee for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Under the Child and Family Department and the Ministry of National Solidarity, Social Affairs, Human Rights, and Gender, works with the Ministry of Public Service, Labor, and Employment and local NGOs to address child protection issues, including the worst forms of child labor. (6,7,47) Has made strides in reaching areas beyond the capital region, with a greater presence and ability to respond to cases upcountry. However, it is primarily funded by UNICEF and small NGOs, and reporting suggests that its resources are still insufficient to fully address the worst forms of child labor. (47)

In addition to the key coordinating mechanism above, Burundi's Consultation and Monitoring Commission on Prevention and Repression of Trafficking in Persons began operations as a permanent formal inter-ministerial body in January 2022. (44,45) The Commission oversees national anti-trafficking efforts and the national social protection policy. (8) During the reporting period, the Commission promoted and implemented standard operating procedures for identifying trafficking cases and referring survivors to appropriate services and care, including comprehensive processes and screening protocols, and organized trainings for government officials such as police officers, social workers, judges, and diplomats. It also drafted a new national action plan to combat human trafficking for 2023–2027, which was forwarded to the Office of the Prime Minister for approval. (8,44) However, the Commission currently lacks the resources and training required to collect data and report on cases of human trafficking. (44)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of relevant policies covering all worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Child Protection Policy 2020–2024	Aims to ensure child welfare systemically by increasing understanding of children's rights; preventing discrimination, abuse, and exploitation; identifying issues and intervening quickly and effectively using the appropriate community mechanisms; and building the economic and general resilience of children, families, and communities. (23,48) Conducted awareness-raising activities among local administrators and educational leaders about child labor during the reporting period. (23)
Burundi National Development Plan (2018–2027)	Aims to address economic and social challenges in the country, with goals to target poverty and access to education. Seeks to enhance youth employment through strategies such as updates to the labor code and improvements in basic and vocational education. (49) As part of this policy and in cooperation with the UN, Burundi continued its Joint Refugee Return and Reintegration Plan during the reporting period. In 2022, the program provided food assistance and core relief items to 21,157 returning refugees. (50-52)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (53)

In 2022, the government had yet to renew its national action plan to address child labor, which expired in 2015, or its anti-trafficking plan, which expired in 2020. (8,44) While Burundi has broad child protection and national development policies, it does not have a policy that addresses all relevant worst forms of child labor. (47)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Centers for Family Development†	Operated by the Ministry of National Solidarity, Social Affairs, Human Rights, and Gender, address human rights issues, including child exploitation. Coordinate with Child Protection Committees to refer survivors to local NGOs for care, when necessary. (54) Remained active during the reporting period, including reintegrating 15 street children with their home communities. (8)
Education Cannot Wait, Burundi Multi-Year Resilience Program	Launched in 2021, a collaborative agreement among the Government of Burundi, UNICEF, and World Vision (2022–2024), a 3-year, $30 million program aiming to provide educational opportunities to 300,000 vulnerable children and reduce the risks of exploitation, including child labor, for vulnerable families. (55,56) During the reporting period, interventions included cash transfers to promote school retention, dignity kits for adolescent girls, increasing and improving classroom infrastructure, school feeding programs, and providing learning materials. (57)
National School Feeding Program†	Initiated in 2008, the National School Feeding Program, sponsored by Burundi's First Lady, is designed to reduce child labor by increasing school retention. In addition to funding received from international donors, the program was granted several million USD in funding from the Government of Burundi during the reporting period, and provided meals to children in 664 schools throughout the country. (8,58,59)

† Program is partially funded by the Government of Burundi.

In addition to the programs above, the government also collaborated with UNICEF to develop a national strategy for integration and inclusion of the Batwa population, which includes sensitization programs to integrate Batwa children into schools in Ngozi and other provinces. UNICEF also works with local governments to secure identity documents for Burundian children repatriating from abroad. (8) However, research found no evidence that the government has carried out programs to assist children working in agriculture, in which child labor is most prevalent.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

In 2022, Cabo Verde made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The General Legal Framework for the Protection of Children and Adolescents was approved by legislators during the reporting period. The Framework contains provisions addressing forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation and formalizes procedures for addressing situations in which children or adolescents are in danger. The government also reported its first worst forms of child labor conviction in recent years, imposing a 10-year sentence against an individual for the commercial sexual exploitation of a 14-year-old child. Additionally, the government began working on a new National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons, and the Cabo Verdean Institute for Children and Adolescents and the National Statistics Institute conducted a survey on children, which included statistics on child labor. However, children in Cabo Verde are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. Although Cabo Verde made efforts in all relevant areas during the reporting period, laws prohibiting forced labor are not sufficient as they do not criminalize practices similar to slavery or debt bondage and forced or compulsory labor. In addition, coordination among law enforcement agencies is limited and social programs to assist children involved in agriculture and domestic work are not sufficient to address the scope of the problem.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Cabo Verde.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,12-15)
	Use in illicit activities, including drug trafficking (8,11)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

During the reporting period, the Cabo Verdean Institute for Children and Adolescents (ICCA) and the National Statistics Institute conducted a survey on children, including child labor, slated for release in 2023. (16)

Commercial sexual exploitation of boys and girls occurs in the tourism industry in Cabo Verde, and research indicates that the islands of Sal and Boa Vista have the highest incidence of commercial sexual exploitation of children. (8,11-14) In addition, anecdotal reports indicate that children may have been victims of commercial sexual exploitation on the islands of Brava, Santiago, Fogo, and São Vicente. (11)

According to the ICCA, not all students with special needs or children in remote areas of Cabo Verde have equal access to education. In some areas, children must travel long distances through mountainous topography to reach secondary schools. (16)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Cabo Verde has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Cabo Verde's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of forced labor.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 261 of the Labor Code (17)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (25)

The General Legal Framework for the Protection of Children and Adolescents was approved by legislators during the reporting period, although additional steps must occur for it to enter into effect. The Framework contains provisions addressing forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation and formalizes procedures for addressing situations in which children or adolescents are in danger. (16,26)

Laws prohibiting forced labor are not sufficient because they do not criminalize practices similar to slavery, including debt bondage and forced or compulsory labor. (17,20) The Civil Code includes a list of light work activities that children aged 14 are allowed to perform; however, the law does not prescribe the number of hours per week permissible for light work, nor does it specify the conditions under which light work may be performed. (18,27,28)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Inspectorate General of Labor (IGT)	Monitors and enforces child labor laws, working closely with the Cabo Verdean Institute for Children and Adolescents (ICCA). Overseen by the Ministry of Family, Inclusion, and Social Development. (5,6)
Attorney General's Office	Determines whether reported complaints or violations need further investigation and prepares cases for trial, including cases of the worst forms of child labor. (16)
National Police and Judicial Police	The National Police receives initial violation complaints, and the Judicial Police conducts criminal investigations as needed. (16)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Cabo Verde took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Inspectorate General of Labor (IGT) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient allocation of financial and human resources.

During the reporting period, IGT inspectors participated in a capacity-building program focused on addressing hazardous child labor, and a delegation from the IGT participated in a month-long training related to youth employment funded by the ILO. (16) Additionally, approximately 70 participants, many representing government institutions, attended a conference on international labor standards and Cabo Verdean labor law that was held as part of the ILO's Trade for Decent Work Project with the intent of strengthening the implementation of forced labor and child labor conventions. (30)

ICCA conducts informal inspections when it receives any allegations of child labor and keeps the Attorney General's Office informed whenever further investigative action is needed. All child labor cases found by IGT inspectors are referred to ICCA for care or for referral to social services providers. (5) From January to July 2022, ICCA registered six reported cases of child labor through its child protection hotline. (16)

The IGT reported that the number of labor inspectors is insufficient to cover the country's labor force. The IGT also reported that its budget is not sufficient to fulfill all of its operational needs. (16)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Cabo Verde took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including the government's limited capacity to collect anti-trafficking statistics and comprehensively report on law enforcement actions.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Unknown	Yes (16)
Number of Investigations	Unknown	2 (16)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown	1 (30)
Number of Convictions	1 (31)	1 (30)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown	Yes (30)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (5)	Yes (16)

In 2022, the government reported its first worst forms of child labor conviction in recent years, imposing a 10-year sentence against an individual for the commercial sexual exploitation of a 14-year-old child. (16)

Reports indicate that the Judicial Police and the National Police often lack the necessary financial and human resources to conduct thorough investigations, including in cases of child labor. (30) The government's capacity to collect anti-trafficking statistics and to comprehensively report on law enforcement actions, along with the reportedly limited coordination among law enforcement agencies, due to struggles in sharing case information and updates, may hinder enforcement efforts. (8, 11) Reports also indicate that the judicial system is overburdened with a backlog of cases, which can contribute to a lack of protection for child victims of the worst forms of child labor, including children subjected to commercial sexual exploitation. (12,30,32)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Committee for Child Labor Prevention and Eradication in Cabo Verde	Coordinates the execution of the National Action Plan for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor and provides a functional mechanism for reciprocal referrals between law enforcement and social services. (16) Led by ICCA, with support from the Ministry of Family, Inclusion, and Social Development. (5,33) Active during the reporting period. (16)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Action Plan for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor	Prioritizes the eradication of child labor. Outlines specific objectives, including data collection, institutional capacity building, and enhancement of measures to prevent, protect, and remove children from involvement in child labor. (33) Activities were undertaken to implement this policy in 2022. (16)
National Plan to Prevent and Combat Sexual Violence Against Children and Adolescents (2022–2024)	Aims to prevent and eliminate the sexual exploitation of children by building on lessons learned from the previous plan, while ensuring coordination among institutions and organizations that work to prevent and address sexual violence against children and adolescents. Establishes five goals, including (1) the active participation of children and adolescents; (2) the development of preventive actions against sexual violence; (3) a network of specialized care by trained professionals; (4) combating impunity; and (5) strengthening the national, regional, and local entities focused on combating and eliminating sexual violence against children and adolescents, including commercial sexual exploitation. (34) In 2022, the government began preparations for the creation of a national committee to manage and monitor the National Plan to Prevent and Combat Sexual Violence Against Children and Adolescents and draft local plans. The committee will consist of representatives from ICCA, UNICEF, the Cabo Verdean NGO Platform, and the education, health, and public ministries. (16)
National Communication Strategy for the Prevention and Combat of Sexual Violence	Aims to coordinate public policies to protect children and adolescents against sexual violence, including commercial sexual exploitation. (34) Implemented during the reporting period in collaboration with UNICEF, ICCA, and the Ministry of Family, Inclusion and Social Development. (16)

In 2022, the government began developing a new national action plan on human trafficking to succeed the 2018–2021 plan, and while the new plan was not approved during the reporting period, a national drafting committee approved its goals and activities in December. (30)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating and preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Child Labor Awareness Campaigns†	Government program implemented by ICCA and the National Committee for Child Labor Prevention and Eradication that conducts national awareness-raising campaigns on the worst forms of child labor. (5) During the reporting period, several awareness campaigns addressing the rights of children, including the prevention and elimination of child labor, were conducted on a national level with various governmental and NGO institutions. ICCA further reported that, in 2022, about 425 community activities were conducted on a variety of children's rights topics, including child labor. (35)
Help for At-Risk Children and Social Protection and Reintegration Centers†	ICCA-implemented program that provides education, health services, and professional training to vulnerable children and their families. (32) Operates six day centers for street children vulnerable to sexual and labor exploitation, including sex trafficking. Moreover, ICCA operates three additional centers for street children through its Nós Kaza center. (32) The government also operates five long-term social protection and reintegration centers that provide support and educational integration services to children who have experienced long-term trauma, including child trafficking. (36) Active in 2022. (16)

† Program is funded by the Government of Cabo Verde.

Research indicates that awareness-raising efforts on human trafficking, including child sex tourism, remained insufficient on some of the nine inhabited islands. (11) Research also found that programs to assist children involved in agriculture and domestic work are not sufficient to address the scope of the problem.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2022, Cambodia made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government of Cambodia launched and committed $10 million to the National Action Plan on Early Childhood Care and Development, which aims to provide equitable and inclusive early childhood education and prioritizes an expansion of early learning curriculum, improved teaching materials, and a strengthened preschool workforce. Cambodia's Inter-Ministries Technical Working Group also drafted the Child Protection Law, which outlines children's rights and provides detailed information on how officials should conduct child-centered case management and referrals to social services. Despite initiatives to address child labor, Cambodia is assessed as having made only minimal advancement because it continued to implement practices that delay advancement to eliminate child labor.

The government failed to take active measures to investigate, prosecute, convict, and sentence public officials who participate in or facilitate the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation of children and debt-based forced labor in brick kilns. In addition, judges, police, and labor inspectors were reported to have accepted bribes to overlook child labor offenses in the country, especially when the perpetrator had alleged ties with the government. Children in Cambodia are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in forced labor in brickmaking. The government also failed to publicly release information on its criminal law enforcement efforts. Moreover, the lack of regulation in the microfinance industry has led to debt bondage and an increase in child labor.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

The rapid growth in the construction industry in Cambodia has increased the demand for bricks and fueled child labor and debt bondage in the country. Failed harvests from droughts have compounded farmers' debts, forcing them to sell their harvests to brick kiln owners and subsequently placing farmers' families into debt bondage. (3,9,13,20,30,31,33-35) Research also found that children work under similar debt bondage conditions in rubber plantations in northeastern Cambodia and in domestic work. (14) In addition, foreign investments in Cambodian banana production have resulted in the considerable use of child laborers on banana plantations in Kampong Cham and Ratanakiri provinces, many of which expose workers, including children, to dangerous chemicals and subsequent hospitalizations. (16,36) Furthermore, in recent years, the microfinance industry in the country has grown rapidly with inadequate regulation, leading to an increasing number of overburdened debtors. Cambodian human rights organizations cite cases of extrajudicial land sales, child labor, and debt bondage linked to the microfinance crisis. (16,37,38) Research also showed that children were taken out of school so they could work to help with credit repayment difficulties. (37) Although Cambodia conducted a nationwide survey of child labor in 2019, it has yet to publish the results of this survey or make the data publicly available, limiting public awareness of the true prevalence of child labor in the country. (14,27)

Cambodia is a source and destination country for child trafficking—on fishing vessels, in the agriculture and construction sectors, in factories, in domestic work (often through debt-based coercion), or for purposes of commercial sexual exploitation (CSEC). (13,24,26,27,30,35) Girls as young as age 14 are trafficked to China for CSEC. Many of these girls previously worked in the garment, hospitality, and tourism sectors, which were particularly stunted by the COVID-19 pandemic, pushing them to seek out livelihood opportunities elsewhere and making them vulnerable to CSEC and other forms of child labor. (27,29,39,40) Online sexual exploitation of children is also reportedly increasing in Cambodia, facilitated by an increase in access to high-speed internet. (9,26,27,41,42) In addition, research found that children who are placed in some residential care facilities or orphanages in Cambodia are at a higher risk of engaging in child labor. (9,13,26,27,43,44)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Although the Education Law establishes free basic education, unofficial school-related fees, such as for extra classes or school uniforms, are prohibitive for some families. (3,14,45) Other barriers to education include denied enrollment for children without birth certificates, limited transportation to schools in remote areas, lack of drinking water, a severe shortage of teachers, language barriers, and a lack of safe sanitation conditions in some schools. (7,16,46) Sanitation conditions are particularly unsafe in Cambodia's "floating schools" on or near fishing communities, to which children as young as age 6 row themselves by boat each day. (16) These barriers disproportionately affect ethnic minority children, indigenous children, children with disabilities, girls, and children from rural and disadvantaged communities. (3,9,13,14,16,43,46-48) During the reporting period, the UN Child Rights Committee expressed concern over a Cambodian draft law proposing segregated classes for children with disabilities, fearing the exclusion of children with disabilities from adequate education. (49)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Cambodia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Cambodia's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the lack of criminal prohibitions for the use of a child for pornographic performances in private spaces or through communication and information technologies.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	15	Article 177 of the Labor Law (50)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 173 and 177 of the Labor Law; Regulation on the Prohibition of Hazardous Child Labor; Articles 339 and 340 of the Penal Code (50-52)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 2 of the Regulation on the Prohibition of Hazardous Child Labor (51)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 15 and 16 of the Labor Law; Articles 10, 12, 15–17, and 19 of the Law on Suppression of Human Trafficking and Sexual Exploitation; Article 80 of Law on Juvenile Justice (50,53,54)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 10–20 and 22 of the Law on Suppression of Human Trafficking and Sexual Exploitation (53)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 15, 28, 33–37, and 41 of the Law on Suppression of Human Trafficking and Sexual Exploitation; Articles 284, 289, and 346 of the Penal Code (52,53)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 345 of the Penal Code; Articles 3 and 47 of the Law on Control of Drugs (52,55)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 42 of the Law on General Statutes for the Military Personnel of the Royal Cambodian Armed Forces (56)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Articles 41 and 42 of the Law on General Statutes for the Military Personnel of the Royal Cambodian Armed Forces (56)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	No
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 31 of the Education Law (45)

During the reporting period, Cambodia's Inter-Ministries Technical Working Group drafted the Child Protection Law, which outlines children's rights and provides detailed information on how officials should conduct child-centered case management and referrals to social services. (16,57) However, Cambodia lacks compulsory schooling, which makes children under age 15 particularly vulnerable to child labor because they are not required to be in school but are not yet legally permitted to work. (45,50,51,58) In addition, although the Labor Code prohibits work by children under age 15, the law does not apply to children outside of formal employment relationships and, therefore, does not conform to international standards that require all children be protected under the law that sets a minimum age for work. (43,51) Moreover, the Ministry of Labor and Vocational Training's (MOLVT) regulation on household work extends minimum age protections for domestic workers to age 18 and provides clear definitions of household work, but it does not specify legal protections for household workers employed in informal relationships, including when working for their relatives without a contract. (43,50,58,59) Finally, Cambodian laws do not sufficiently prohibit the commercial sexual exploitation of children, as the use of a child for pornographic performances is criminally prohibited in public places but not in private spaces or through the use of communication and information technologies. (27,52,60)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor and Vocational Training (MOLVT)	Enforces child-related provisions of the Labor Law and trains Commune Committees for Women and Children that oversee local child labor monitoring systems. (12,61,62) Tasked with removing children from child labor, including at brick kilns. (9) Head of the MOLVT's Child Labor Bureau also serves as the Secretary General of the National Committee on Countering Child Labor (NCCL). (9,14,61) Refers cases involving possible criminal violations to the Anti-Human Trafficking and Juvenile Protection Department. (16) During the reporting year, held an International Children's Day event with 325 participants to raise awareness of child labor, and conducted 39 educational child labor prevention campaigns for 9,122 workers at consumer goods factories. (29) In 2022, also conducted 400 inspections to prevent child labor at brick kilns and other agro-industry enterprises. (29) Reports note that Commune Committees were likely underfunded during the reporting period. (63,64) Furthermore, research indicated that the MOLVT's labor inspectorate struggled to coordinate training with the Ministry of Land Management, Urban Planning, and Construction on ensuring safe working conditions and identifying child labor in inspections of construction sites. (3)
Ministry of the Interior—Cambodian National Police—Anti-Human Trafficking and Juvenile Protection Department (AHTJP)	Enforces laws against human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children in collaboration with municipal and provincial anti-human trafficking and juvenile protection offices; reports to the AHTJP Department Director. (26,29) Provides training to labor inspectors. (29) Fields complaints from the public about human trafficking, which can be filed through the anti-human trafficking hotline. (63) Oversees the Information and Technology Office, which searches for evidence of human trafficking and sexual exploitation of children on the internet, in printed media, and in other sources. (27,61,65) During the reporting year, in collaboration with Ministry of Social Affairs, Veterans and Youth Rehabilitation (MOSAVY), piloted new standard operating procedures to clarify the workflow and accountability of stakeholders tasked to address children's issues. (29)

(14,63) Through their Criminal Police Bureaus, enforce criminal laws at the provincial level. (14,63)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Cambodia took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MOLVT that may hinder adequate enforcement of child labor laws, including financial resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Research indicates that Cambodia does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. Reporting also indicates that labor inspectorates at the provincial level are unable to adequately enforce child labor laws due to insufficient funding and resources. (67) Evidence suggests that labor inspectors and other law enforcement personnel are unwilling to investigate child labor allegations involving powerful business owners. (16) In addition, law enforcement officials have requested bribes from employers when child labor violations have been found. Malfeasance within the MOLVT and law enforcement agencies limits the capacity of local authorities to adequately enforce regulations for children related to hazardous work, resulting in penalties related to the worst forms of child labor rarely being imposed in accordance with the law. (16,43,68)

The government did not provide disaggregated data on the sectors in which labor inspections were conducted, the locations of inspections, or labor inspectorate funding. (16) Research suggests that the government does not proactively conduct inspections in all sectors in which child labor is suspected to occur, and that authorities were known to give employers advance notice of inspections, enabling them to conceal abuses. (9,12) In addition, while unannounced inspections are permitted, the MOLVT indicated they are not plausible, as the inspectors are not yet equipped with the proper technical training and expertise. (3,9,14,16,69) Furthermore, although the MOLVT states that their inspectors can conduct "special inspections" in informal sectors in which children are believed to work (including agriculture, casinos, construction, domestic work, the entertainment sector, fishing, begging, scavenging, and street vending), these only take place when a specific request has been made or a serious violation reported. (16) Police also view brick kiln inspection as the MOLVT's responsibility and said they would only investigate a kiln if the MOLVT asked them to and reported suspected criminal activity. (38) Labor inspectors are also prevented from conducting inspections at some construction sites, as owners who are closely affiliated with government officials or powerful tycoons are able to obstruct inspectors from accessing their properties. (14,30,63,66)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Cambodia took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Cambodian National Police that may hinder adequate enforcement of child labor laws, including insufficient training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Unknown (3)	Unknown (16)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (3)	Unknown (16)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (3)	Unknown (16)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (3)	Unknown (16)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (3)	Unknown (16)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (3)	Yes (16)

The government failed to provide information on its criminal law enforcement efforts for the reporting period. (16) Evidence indicates that some government officials profited directly from the commercial sexual exploitation of children and indirectly by being permissive of it, especially when it is undertaken in establishments owned by those with ties to the government. (3,13,29,30,70,71) NGO contacts claim that the government has limited political will to investigate any Cambodian officials complicit in these illegal activities, and there was no evidence of public officials being investigated, prosecuted, or convicted during the reporting period. (3,13,24,30,43,64) Law enforcement officials investigating suspected human trafficking cases are expected to personally cover all expenses of the investigation and are rarely reimbursed in full or on time, which makes some law enforcement units more susceptible to malfeasance. (9,24,38,71)

Available research found that prosecutors and judges have been known to accept bribes in return for dismissal of charges, acquittal, and reduced sentencing. (12,27,38,71,72) The use of "judicial supervision," where defendants are released on their own recognizance in advance of a trial, has resulted in human trafficking suspects not returning to participate in their criminal trials as law enforcement lacks the resources to monitor defendants. Law enforcement rarely issued arrest warrants for absconded defendants unless NGOs were available to assist in the apprehension of said defendants. (38) Research found that due to outdated collection storage platforms, a lack of resources, and an absence in coordination among relevant government institutions, the government's ability to properly save and store data related to the worst forms of child labor was found to be inadequate. (12,24,30,63)

From January to September 2022, the Ministry of Social Affairs, Veterans and Youth Rehabilitation helped reintegrate 91 Cambodian victims and suspected victims of human trafficking back into their communities, including 62 women and 15 children. It also referred 2,227 victims of human trafficking to social services, 672 of whom were women and 1,519 were children. (29)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including insufficient inter-ministerial coordination.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Committee on Countering Child Labor (NCCL)	Serves as the primary interagency coordinating body for the government's various ministries on child labor issues. The Minister of Labor serves as its chair and the head of the MOLVT's Child Labor Bureau serves as the Secretary General. (3) Coordination across relevant ministries remains a challenge. (16) During the reporting period, established 14 municipal and provincial committees focused on countering child labor. (16) The committee includes other ministries like the Interior Ministry, the Justice Ministry, and Women's Affairs Ministry. (16)

During the reporting year, the National Committee for Counter Trafficking implemented an awareness campaign for 350 teachers focused on internet safety for children and the prevention of online child sexual exploitation. (29)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Plan of Action on Combating the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2016–2025)	Aims to build the capacity of law enforcement officers, strengthen enforcement of relevant laws, raise public awareness of child labor issues, and enhance child labor monitoring systems at the community level. (21) Overseen by MOLVT. (14) Creates a roadmap to the complete eradication of the worst forms of child labor by 2025 in various sectors, including services, agriculture, mining, and energy. (23,58,63,73) Mandates awareness-raising activities, legal action, and collaborations with civil society actors. (73) Although research was unable to determine specific activities carried out under the Plan of Action during the reporting period, MOLVT reports they conducted trainings and conferences in the city and in provinces to raise public awareness about child labor. (16)
Action Plan to Prevent and Respond to Violence Against Children (2017–2023)	Plan was set to end in 2021 but was extended through 2023. (16) Original plan was run by the Ministry of Women's Affairs and was developed in response to the Cambodia Violence Against Children Survey conducted in 2013. (27,65,74) Provided Online Child Sexual Exploitation (OSEC)-related interventions in policy and governance, including providing training for teachers and developing curriculum to help children build online safety skills; providing OSEC materials to law enforcement; and developing an online hotline to help identify platforms that perpetuate OSEC. (9,27) Details of the extended plan have not been made publicly available. (16)
Action Plan for Gender Equality Promotion and Child Labor Elimination in the Fisheries Sector (2022–2026)†	Aims to prevent and withdraw children from child labor and hazardous work in the fisheries sector, and to improve monitoring and evaluation mechanisms on child labor in this sector. Overseen, coordinated, and monitored by the Fisheries Administration, which falls under the Ministry of Agriculture, Forestry and Fisheries. (75) During the reporting year, trained local officials and conducted workshops in several provinces to raise public awareness of gender and child labor. (16)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (6,54,76-79)

In 2022, the government also launched and committed $10 million to the National Action Plan on Early Childhood Care and Development, which aims to provide equitable and inclusive early childhood education and prioritizes an expansion of early learning curriculum, improved teaching materials, and a strengthened preschool workforce. (80)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address all worst forms of child labor.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Cambodia Countering Trafficking in Persons (CCTIP) (2019–2023)	$10 million, USAID-funded, 5-year (including a 1-year cost extension) program implemented by Winrock International to strengthen the capacity of government and community stakeholders to prevent human trafficking, protect at-risk populations, and increase the number of successful prosecutions of perpetrators. (81) During the reporting period, CCTIP and the Cambodian National Committee to Combat Trafficking began developing a 2-year action plan based on new human trafficking patterns in the country. Additionally, CCTIP awarded a 2-year grant to NGO International Justice Mission to reduce bonded labor in Cambodia's brick manufacturing industry and in cross-border online scamming/gaming. (16,82)
UN WFP Country Program† (2020–2024)	Multi-government and private sector-funded program implemented in collaboration with the Government of Cambodia that includes a school feeding program for children in need. (83) Provided school meals to over 200,000 children in 2022. (16)
Child Protection Programs	Family Care First (FCF REACT) (2015–2023) is led by MOSAVY. Funded by the European Union, USAID, the GHR Foundation, Save the Children Hong Kong, and UNICEF. (65,84) Aims to support more than 7,000 Cambodian children to live in safe, nurturing, family-based care. (65,84,85) Activities include supporting the development of Social Service Workforce Training curriculum, the reintegration of children from residential care institutions to family-based care, the closure of residential care institutions, and the provision of prevention and response social services. (3) During the reporting period, FCF provided cash and livelihood assistance to over 700 recipients, intended to reduce trafficking risks for children in extreme poverty. (16) Cambodia Child Protection Program (2009–2023) is led by UNICEF and MOSAVY, and aims to strengthen the child protection system in Cambodia and to prevent and reduce violence against children and unnecessary family separation. (14,63) Builds capacity of national and sub-national authorities in all 25 provinces to formulate and implement nationally-approved institutional and legal frameworks. Includes capacity building of the government and civil society child protection workforce to provide direct services to vulnerable children and families. (14) The government stated that the program is operational but failed to report implementation activities conducted during the reporting period. (12)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (86,87)

The government has yet to create a system to monitor and promote the reintegration of victims of forced labor and human trafficking, including children. As a result, survivors are left vulnerable, leaving the government heavily reliant on NGOs to fill this need. (27,38,64) Many poor households in rural communities lack access to a social protection safety net, increasing the vulnerability of children to child labor as a means to supplement family income. (88) Although Cambodia has programs that target child labor, the scope and resources provided to these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, particularly in online sexual exploitation of children. (44)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Cambodia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure the minimum age for work applies to all children, including those engaged in informal work in domestic work and employed by their relatives.	2018 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the use of a child for pornographic performances in not only public spaces, but also private spaces or through the use of communication and information technologies.	2015 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2022
	Establish by law a compulsory education age and ensure that it is same as the minimum age for work (age 15).	2009 – 2022
Enforcement	Build the capacity of labor law enforcement authorities to enforce child and forced labor regulations by providing more technical training opportunities on how to properly identify child labor during inspections and offer sufficient resources to labor law authorities to ensure the enforcement of child labor laws through investigations and inspections, including unannounced inspections.	2012 – 2022
	Ensure and permit labor inspectors to conduct unannounced inspections in all sectors in which child labor are reported to occur, including in the construction and entertainment sectors, and impose penalties when child labor violations are found.	2021 – 2022

	Collect, properly store, and publicly release disaggregated data on labor and criminal law enforcement efforts, including labor inspectorate funding, initial training for new criminal investigators, the number of prosecutions initiated, the number of convictions, and the number of penalties imposed for violations related to the worst forms of child labor.	2015 – 2022
	Ensure that malfeasance is addressed in all law enforcement agencies, including not accepting bribes to influence the outcome of cases or providing tip offs in advance of raids, and investigating and prosecuting politically connected individuals and government officials who are complicit in facilitating and profiting from the worst forms of child labor.	2019 – 2022
	Ensure that all criminal law enforcement officials are sufficiently trained on the techniques of how to conduct anti-trafficking work, particularly those located in rural areas and in brick kilns.	2019 – 2022
	Ensure that funding for criminal law enforcement agencies is sufficient to cover all expenses, including transportation costs, for law enforcement officials.	2019 – 2022
	Ensure that inspectors routinely conduct inspections in informal sectors where children are believed to work ("special inspections") and not only when a specific request or violation is reported.	2022

	Social Programs	Publish the results of the 2019 nationwide child labor survey.	2020 – 2022
		Strengthen child protection services, gatekeeping mechanisms, and the alternative care system to reduce the number of children unnecessarily placed in residential care and ensure that Residential Care Facilities and orphanages protect the health and well-being of children living in them.	2019 – 2022
		Increase access to free basic education by eliminating unofficial school-related fees; eliminating the requirement of a birth certificate to enroll in school; addressing issues related to limited transportation and inadequate school infrastructure, including the unsafe "floating schools" on or near fishing communities; eliminating barriers to school for ethnic minority children, indigenous children, children with disabilities, girls, and children from rural and disadvantaged communities; and providing safe, sanitary schools with access to water and latrines.	2013 – 2022
		Establish a system to accurately capture and monitor the reintegration of victims of the worst forms of child labor, including human trafficking.	2019 – 2022
Expand social protection safety nets in rural areas to ensure that poor children and their families have access to services that may mitigate the risk of involvement in child labor.		2016 – 2022
Provide sufficient funding resources to all social programs so that they can fully address the extent of child labor in Cambodia, particularly the online sexual exploitation of children.		2019 – 2022

In 2022, Cameroon made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. Officials from the East Regional Delegate of the Ministry of Social Affairs identified 3,000 children engaged in child labor at 46 mining sites. In addition, the government inaugurated a new anti-trafficking hotline, 1503, in cooperation with the International Organization for Migration. Finally, the Government of Cameroon supported access to education by distributing 1,803,906 free textbooks to students at 13,000 primary schools and hiring an additional 3,000 primary school teachers. However, children in Cameroon are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in recruitment by non-state armed groups for use in conflict. Children also perform dangerous tasks in cocoa production and gold mining. The government has not addressed gaps in Cameroon's legal framework regarding the prohibition of use of children in illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs, and the prohibition of the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Cameroon. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor†	Forced labor in agriculture in the production of cocoa, cotton, onions, and tea; fishing; raising livestock; domestic work; spare parts shops; artisanal gold mines and gravel quarries; street vending; and construction (6,13)
	Forced begging (6,13)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Cameroon is a source, transit, and destination country for child trafficking from neighboring countries in Central and West Africa; child trafficking also occurs within Cameroon. (6,13,14) Children are trafficked for commercial sexual exploitation, domestic work, and forced labor in mining and agriculture. (13,14) Parents often entrust children to intermediaries who promise to take them to urban centers for education or improved living conditions, and these children are often subjected to exploitation. (13) In the artisanal mining sector in eastern Cameroon, children are subjected to hazardous conditions, including frequent collapses of open pit mines and use of dangerous chemicals including mercury. (6-8,15)

Several crises within Cameroon and in neighboring countries—including the Central African Republic refugee crisis; the Lake Chad Basin Crisis impacting Cameroon's Far North as well as Nigeria, Niger, and Chad; and the separatist crisis in Cameroon's Northwest and Southwest regions—have heightened children’s vulnerability. (16) As of December 2022, 3.9 million people were in need of humanitarian assistance, and Cameroon was home to over 1 million displaced people and nearly half a million refugees, primarily from Nigeria and the Central African Republic. Disruptions to family livelihoods as a result of these crises place children at greater risk of human trafficking and child labor. (16) In 2022, in the Far North Region near Lake Chad, non-state armed group Jama'atu Ahlis Sunna Lidda'awati wal-Jihad (JAS) recruited and used children. (6) English-speaking separatist groups in the Northwest and Southwest regions have recruited and used children as fighters. (6) Anecdotal evidence suggests that some community neighborhood watch groups in the Far North Region, known as Vigilance Committees, may have incorporated children into their ranks. Vigilance Committees carry out reconnaissance operations against Boko Haram and ISIS-West Africa, and some receive non-lethal material support from the government. (6,13,14,17)

Ongoing violence in Cameroon and the surrounding regions has significantly disrupted children's schooling, making both Cameroonian and refugee children vulnerable to exploitation. In prior years, armed separatist groups have violently enforced school boycotts, leading to long-term disruptions of education for children in the Northwest and Southwest regions. (18) While calls for school boycotts subsided in 2022, separatists continued to attack and kidnap students and teachers who attended classes, often releasing them only after collecting ransom. (6,18) In addition, armed separatists have occupied and used schools as camps and bases for their operations. (18) According to the UN Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, 3,223 of 5,724 schools in the Northwest and Southwest regions are non-functional. (6) In the Far North Region, terrorist activity by Boko Haram and ISIS-West Africa has also disrupted children’s schooling, and at least 66 schools remained closed in the aftermath of attacks. (6) Research suggests that roughly 36 percent of primary school students lack birth certificates, which are required to register for end-of-course examinations to enter secondary school. (3,19) Many public officials in the Northwest and Southwest regions have fled since the beginning of the crisis in those regions, reducing access to birth registration services. In addition, many internally displaced children lost their birth certificates as they fled the violence and have been unable to participate in end-of-course examinations. (3) The law guarantees free education up to the age of 12, but in practice, additional school fees are often charged and families must pay the cost of books and uniforms, which is a significant barrier for many families. (6,19,20) Further barriers to education include inadequate school facility infrastructure, including toilets and sanitation facilities, and an insufficient number of teachers. (6,21)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Cameroon has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Cameroon's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the lack of prohibition of the use of children in illicit activities.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Article 2 of Order N° 17 on Child Labor; Section 86 of the Labor Code (22,23)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 9–23 of Order N° 017 on Child Labor; Section 86 of the Labor Code (22,23)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 9–23 of Order N° 017 on Child Labor (23)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Sections 2–6 of the Law Relating to the Fight Against Trafficking in Persons and Slavery; Sections 11 and 342-1 of the Penal Code; Section 2 of the Labor Code (22,24,25)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Sections 2 and 4–6 of the Law Relating to the Fight Against Trafficking in Persons and Slavery; Articles 11, 342-1, and 352–354 of the Penal Code (24,25)

Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 12 of the Decree Concerning the Status of Non-Defense Military Personnel; Article 2a of the Decree Establishing the Conditions for Admission to Military Training Schools for Officers (27,28)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes*		Article 12 of the Decree Concerning the Status of Non-Defense Military Personnel; Article 2a of the Decree Establishing the Conditions for Admission to Military Training Schools for Officers (27,28)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	No	12‡	Preamble of the Constitution; Articles 9 and 16 of the Law Orienting the Education System (29,30)
Free Public Education	No		Article 9 of the Law Orienting the Education System; Articles 46-2, 47, and 48 of the Decree on the Organization of Public Schools (30,31)

* Country has no conscription (32)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (33)

Children in Cameroon are required to attend only 6 years of primary school, which typically concludes at age 12. This standard makes children ages 13 and 14 vulnerable to child labor because they are not required to attend school but are not legally permitted to work. (29,30) In addition, the Decree on the Organization of Public Schools provides for free schooling only through primary school, but basic education is a total of 9 years

Cameroon

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

and includes 3 years of lower secondary school. The failure to provide for complete free basic education may increase the risk of children's involvement in the worst forms of child labor. (31) Human trafficking provisions do not meet international standards because they require threats, the use of force, or coercion to be established for the crime of child trafficking, and individuals ages 16 to 18 are not considered children for the purposes of trafficking in persons provisions. (24,25) In addition, the types of hazardous work prohibited for children under age 18 are not comprehensive because work at dangerous heights and underwater is not prohibited. (23,34)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MINLSS)	Enforces labor laws, including those related to child labor, and promotes decent working conditions. (35)
Ministry of Justice (MOJ)	Prosecutes cases referred by the General Delegate for National Security or the Ministry of Defense's National Gendarmerie (SED), and contributes to investigations, as appropriate. (3,35)
Criminal Law Enforcement Agencies	The General Delegate for National Security operates as the national police service of Cameroon, enforces laws against the worst forms of child labor, and investigates violations in urban areas. (3,35) Through its Special Vice Squad, it investigates cases of human trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and other forms of abuse against women and children. (3,35) The SED investigates cases of child trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation in both urban and rural areas before referring cases to MOJ for prosecution. (3,35) It also operates a reporting hotline for human trafficking cases. (3,35,36)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Cameroon took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MINLSS) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient financial resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

While MINLSS reported that it did not find any cases of child labor during its inspections, other government ministries conducted inspections and identified children subjected to the worst forms of child labor. (6) In September 2022, a government official in the East Region reported that officials from the Ministry of Social Affairs (MINAS) had identified 3,000 children engaged in child labor at 46 mining sites during the reporting year. (6) MINAS and the Ministry of Mines, Industries, and Technological Development carried out inspections at mining sites in the South Region and identified 10 children engaged in child labor. (6)

Research indicates that Cameroon does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (3,37) Labor inspectors do not conduct inspections in the informal sector, in which the majority of child labor occurs. (3,38) While the government did not provide for publication the labor inspectorate's funding, it reported that it allocated $167,000 to child labor prevention and elimination efforts, in comparison with $120,000 in 2021. (6) Despite this increase in funds, the labor inspectorate lacked sufficient resources, including transportation, to carry out its mission. (6) Government officials, journalists, and NGOs in the East Region indicated that labor inspections rarely took place, especially at rural mining sites at which children are known to work. (3,6) Although the government has not created a formal mechanism for filing and responding to complaints about child labor, cases of child labor can be reported directly to any of the institutions, including MINAS, MINLSS, the National Gendarmerie's State Defense Secretariat, and the Ministry of Justice (MOJ). (6)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Cameroon took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient allocation of financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (3)	Yes (6)
Number of Investigations	0 (17)	Unknown (6)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	0 (17)	Unknown (6)
Number of Convictions	0 (17)	Unknown (6)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	No (17)	Unknown (6)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (3)	Yes (6)

In July 2022, the National Interpol Bureau coordinated with criminal law enforcement and social services agencies to identify Nigerian children in Cameroon who had been subjected to trafficking and forced labor in automobile shops in Cameroon. (6,39) In addition, MINAS inaugurated a government-sponsored anti-trafficking hotline, 1503, in cooperation with the IOM. The hotline allows real-time interaction with representatives from the police, gendarmerie, MOJ, and social and health services. (6) In May 2022, the government and the IOM held a workshop that trained 800 gendarmerie officers on trafficking in persons, case identification and investigation, and referral to social services and prosecution. (39) Law enforcement officers, however, did not receive training specifically addressing child labor, and criminal law enforcement agencies do not receive adequate funding to investigate the worst forms of child labor. (6,12,40) In 2013, MINAS and IOM developed the National Referral System and Standard Operating Procedures to coordinate the identification and assistance of human trafficking victims, including children found to be in the worst forms of child labor. Research shows no evidence of relevant stakeholders using this system during the reporting period. (6)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including the lack of resources to carry out mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Committee to Combat Child Labor (CNLCTE)	Coordinates government efforts to address child labor. Led by MINLSS and includes representatives from other ministries and government bodies as well as representatives from civil society. (41) In 2022, CNLCTE drafted a revision of the list of hazardous work prohibited for children, but the draft has not yet been made into law. (6) In addition, the Government of Cameroon carried out a communication seminar on universal social protection and the elimination of child labor. (6) Research indicates that CNLCTE has not made significant progress because of a lack of dedicated resources. There is also evidence to suggest that each of the government agencies represented in the committee looked for its own funding and initiated its own activities without significant coordination. (12)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including the lack of a policy specifically dedicated to addressing child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
NDS30 National Development Strategy (2020–2030)	Incorporates the reduction of poverty, improved access to basic services, and the elimination of child labor into the national development strategy. Calls for improved legal frameworks to address the worst forms of child labor, universal primary education enrollment and completion, and eventually, free education through 10 years of schooling. (42) In 2022, the Government of Cameroon provided public schools with tables, chairs, and scholarships to facilitate enrollment, especially in the Far North Region where education access has been hampered by insecurity. (6)
Operational Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons and Smuggling of Migrants (2021–2023)	Focuses on addressing trafficking in persons, including child trafficking. Objectives include raising awareness, improving the provision of services to human trafficking survivors, increasing prosecution of traffickers, enhancing data collection, and coordinating execution of anti-trafficking efforts. (43) Includes the goals of identifying and suppressing forced child labor and the commercial sexual exploitation of children. (43) In 2022, the government continued to implement the action plan through relevant government ministries, and it began the process of updating the plan. (39)

In 2018, the Government of Cameroon drafted a National Action Plan for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor in Cameroon, 2018–2025. Although research could not confirm if the government has formally adopted this plan, various government ministries carried out activities in support of the plan in 2022, and the National Committee to Combat child Labor met to evaluate the plan's implementation. (6,17,38,44)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Project to Fight the Phenomenon of Street Children (Project 559)†	In conjunction with the National Employment Fund, this MINAS-funded program provides street children with health care, education, and psychosocial care, and supports the reintegration of street children by providing vocational training opportunities at the Betamba Childhood Institute. (3,4,40) During the reporting year, MINAS completed a modernization of the Betamba Childhood Institute. (6,39)
Support Project in Quality Management for Cocoa and Coffee Production/Forever Chocolate (2019–2025)†	Promotes labor standards in the cocoa industry, including the elimination of child labor. (5) Implemented by the NGO association Enfant Jeunesse Avenir , in partnership with Cameroon's largest cocoa processor, Cameroon Cacao Industrial Corporation. Key stakeholders of the project include government ministries such as the Ministry of Health, MINAS, the Ministry of Women Empowerment and the Family, MINLSS, and the Ministry of Basic Education. (5) The project is implemented in cocoa production basins using the Farmer Field School Extension Approach and aims to train cocoa farmers to produce cocoa that is free of child labor and utilizes environmentally friendly techniques. (5) The project provides services to children at risk of child labor, including school-fee exemptions, school kits, and health services. Also seeks to empower women and provide families with alternative sources of income to limit the involvement of children in child labor. (3) In addition, the project includes monitoring and remediation systems aimed at ensuring the traceability of cocoa supply chains and eliminating child labor. (3) During the reporting period, the project expanded monitoring and remediation systems, encouraged school attendance by providing school kits and facilitating birth registration, and provided education and training to communities on child labor. (6)
Zero Children in Gold Mines‡	Project implemented by the state-owned National Mining Corporation, SONAMINES, to eliminate child labor in gold mining in the East Region, where there are more than 300 gold-mining sites. (3,14) During the reporting period, SONAMINES carried out a 5-day awareness-raising campaign promoting school attendance and encouraging parents to prevent children from working in gold mines. It also distributed educational materials to children in at least 15 schools. (6)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of Cameroon.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (6)

During the reporting year, the government made efforts to enhance educational access across the country. As part of the Support Program for the Reform of Education in Cameroon, the government distributed 1,803,906 free textbooks to students at 13,000 primary schools. (6) In addition, the Government of Cameroon recruited and assigned 3,000 new teachers at primary schools across the country. (6) Although the government has implemented programs to improve education access and address child labor in mining, street work, and cocoa production, research suggests that the scope of current programs is insufficient to address the extent of the problem due to limited resources and insufficient geographic coverage. (3)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Cameroon (Table II).

Table II. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2022, the Central African Republic made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government passed and ratified a Trafficking in Persons Law, which creates a prosecutorial framework specifically for trafficking offenses, and establishes broad protections and services for trafficking victims, regardless of their immigration status. In addition, the government issued a circular to help prevent the recruitment and use of children in armed conflict. The government also established a National Plan of Action to Combat Trafficking in Children, which includes a specific focus on preventing children from being recruited and used in conflict. However, despite new initiatives to address child labor, the Central African Republic is assessed as having made only minimal advancement because it continued to implement practices that delay advancement to eliminate child labor.

Government security forces used children in support roles at isolated checkpoints during the reporting period in violation of national law. The government also coordinated with an armed group that recruited and used children in armed conflict, and some children accused of aiding armed groups were detained, although the government eventually released them in December. Children in the Central African Republic are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including recruitment and use in armed conflict, and forced labor in diamond mining. Children also engage in child labor in agriculture and domestic work. The government did not publish complete data on its civil and criminal child labor law enforcement efforts in 2022, and enforcement agencies are understaffed and underfunded. Lastly, the Central African Republic lacks both a coordinating body and policies that address all relevant forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in the Central African Republic. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Sector/Industry	Activity
Services	Domestic work (3,8)
	Street work, including vending, portage, loading and unloading vehicles (3-7,9)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Recruitment of children by state security forces for use in armed conflict as combatants and in support roles, and by non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict, including as combatants, cooks, porters, informants, domestic workers, and for sexual exploitation (3,4,10-12)
	Forced labor in domestic work, agriculture, vending, and mining, including in artisanal diamond and gold mines (3,4,10)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as the result of trafficking (3-6,10)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children in the Central African Republic (CAR) are subjected to recruitment and use by state and non-state armed groups. (4,11,12) In 2019, the government and 14 armed groups signed the Political Agreement for Peace and Reconciliation in the Central African Republic (APPR), which called for the immediate cessation of recruitment of child soldiers by all parties involved in the conflict. (13,14) However, an attempt by six of those armed groups to overthrow the government following the December 2020 elections stalled implementation of the APPR. (3,5,8,9,15) During the reporting period, anti-Balaka-affiliated armed groups and ex-Séléka factions—including Return, Reclamation, Rehabilitation; Popular Front for the Central African Renaissance; Union of Patriots for Change; and the Lord’s Resistance Army—recruited and used children as combatants, informants, messengers, cooks, and porters. (4,10,12) The United Nations verified a total of 134 children were recruited and used during the reporting period by all parties in the conflict, including the pro-government Kremlin-backed Wagner Group forces, the Central African Armed Forces (FACA), and several other armed groups. While these other armed groups committed a majority of the verified violations, government and pro-government forces were found to be responsible for 46 violations, including using children to cook, operate checkpoints, and run errands. (4,5,12)

Armed groups and criminal elements, including some pastoralist groups, subjected children to forced domestic servitude and commercial sexual exploitation. (9,10,16) In some instances, relatives or family friends exploited children to generate additional income. (3,9) Girls may be trafficked into forced domestic work. In maisons de joie, girls as young as age 13 are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation. Maisons de joie are typically private residences at which alcohol and food are served to middle and upper-class customers. (3,6,10) Furthermore, children in rural areas are forced to work in diamond and gold mines, often for long hours and without protective equipment. Children working in mines are sometimes exploited by armed groups and are often exposed to harmful substances, including hazardous chemicals such as silver nitrate and mercury, and may suffer from injuries and waterborne diseases. (3-5,8,10)

Fewer than 60 percent of children in the Central African Republic complete their primary school education, and only 6 percent graduate from secondary school. (17) Violence and insecurity exacerbate barriers to education access, particularly for girls. (3,11,18,19) Although state security forces have extended their presence through most of the national territory since 2021, schooling is disrupted and schools often closed outside the capital by frequent clashes between CAR’s warring parties. (4,5) Other barriers to education include displacement due to conflict, and the occupation of some school buildings by armed groups, including the Kremlin-backed Wagner forces. (4,12) Children also continue to experience difficulties accessing education due to school fees, shortages of basic infrastructure, an absence of teachers, security concerns, and destruction or looting of school materials and buildings by armed groups. (4,10,11,20,21) Due to insecurity, conflict, and limited resources, the government has failed to fully implement a provision of the 2020 Child Protection Code (CPE) to provide free birth registration for all children, and many municipal governments continue to levy fees on birth registration and other vital records. (4,22) Moreover, reporting suggests that members of CAR’s minority Muslim population and people with names perceived to be Muslim faced discrimination and higher fees when trying to obtain new or replacement identification documents, leaving Muslim children more likely to be undocumented and unable to enroll in school. (4,5) Nevertheless, the Ministry of Education has attempted to improve access to education by waiving school entrance exam fees for children affected by conflict, and expanding programs to provide birth registration, as identification is required for school enrollment. (4,23)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

The Central African Republic has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

violations of the law by individuals and entities, broad protections for trafficking victims to ensure they are not prosecuted themselves, regardless of their immigration status, and additional protections and services for child survivors. (4,28,31,32) In an effort to eliminate the use of children in support roles by armed groups, the Ministry of Defense issued a circular banning children from military facilities, and warning officers of sanctions for violations. (5,31,33,34)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor (MOL)	Monitors and enforces laws related to child labor through its General Directorate of Labor and Social Welfare, and the seven regional labor directorates. (3,24)
Ministry of Justice (MOJ)	Oversees Juvenile Court, established under the 2020 Child Protection Code (CPE) to field all cases involving the health, safety, morals, and education of children. Maintains sole jurisdiction over criminal cases involving juvenile plaintiffs, defendants, witnesses, and victims of crime, including former child soldiers. (22) Oversees a special police unit for children, which is responsible for monitoring children's safety and welfare in large cities, and industrial or mining areas. (22,30) This unit is also responsible for recording criminal offenses against children. The judges are responsible for working with the police, the Child Protection Unit, the Children's Prosecutor, and social workers to refer child victims and monitor compliance with diversion measures. (22,24)
Mixed Unit for Rapid Intervention and Repression of Sexual Violence to Women and Children (UMIRR)	Aims to put a stop to sexual violence against women and children, including child trafficking. Interagency law enforcement unit that includes representatives from the Ministry of Social Affairs; MOJ; the Ministry of Public Security; law enforcement (gendarmerie and police); and social workers. (3,4,16,23,35) Operates a 24-hour hotline to report cases of violence against women, and provides social services to survivors of human trafficking. (3,4,35) Operates in Bangui, the capital city, and Bouar, a town in the northwestern part of the country. (31,35) Falls under the joint authority of MOJ and the Ministry of Public Security, and is part of a state organization supporting investigations into conflict-related sexual violence. (16,36,37)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in the Central African Republic took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient resource allocation.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

The government did not provide information on its labor law enforcement efforts, including labor inspectorate funding, number and type of inspections, number of violations found, penalties imposed and collected. However, reporting suggests that the number of inspections conducted during the reporting period was insufficient. (4) Insecurity, as well as inadequate financial and material resources, including transportation and fuel, office facilities and supplies, and technology, hindered the government's efforts to conduct inspections and address child labor. (3,4,23,38) In addition, inspectors may be provided transportation by employers, which threatens the impartiality and independence of inspections. (38)

Moreover, the passage of Decree No. 12.177 in 2012 effectively removed regional labor directorates from the general directorate's chain of command, resulting in regional directorates no longer being required to submit periodic reports on inspection activities, as required under ILO C. 81. (39) In addition, labor inspectors do not always issue formal penalties or sanctions. Instead, the conciliation of labor disputes makes up a significant part of inspectors' work. (9,24,38) The Ministry of Labor (MOL) works with other ministries and UNICEF to provide assistance to survivors of child labor, including its worst forms. However, due to a lack of resources, NGOs and UN bodies, such as the UN Multidimensional Integrated Stabilization Mission in CAR (MINUSCA) and UNICEF, provide most of the social services available to survivors. (4,40,41)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in the Central African Republic took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including detaining children who were subjected to the worst forms of child labor.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (3)	Yes (4)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (3)	Unknown (4,5)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	1 (3)	Unknown (4,5)
Number of Convictions	1 (3)	Unknown (4)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	No (3)	Unknown (4)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (3)	Yes (4)

The government did not provide information on its criminal law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report, including the number of investigations, number of prosecutions, number of convictions, and penalties imposed. (4) During the reporting period, officers in the Mixed Unit for Rapid Intervention and Repression of Sexual Violence to Women and Children (UMIRR) received training on new standard operating procedures (SOPs) to identify trafficking cases and refer survivors to assistance services. In August 2022, Focal Point for Child Protection delivered a trafficking in persons training series at three military installations. (31) Among training participants were customs officers and migration and border security agents. One session was also attended by senior members of the Kremlin-backed Wagner Group in CAR. (5,31) The government also held training sessions on child trafficking and child labor in conflict zones for senior law enforcement and security forces. During the reporting period, UMIRR responded to several cases of human rights violations involving children, which were reported as a result of calls to its 24-hour hotline. (4) In November 2022, UMIRR also collaborated with Wagner forces and the International Committee of the Red Cross to repatriate a group of Cameroonian migrant children in CAR, who had been kidnapped by an armed group and forced to work at a rebel camp. (5,31,42)

During the reporting period, some children accused of aiding armed groups were detained in facilities for incarcerated adults. (4,5) In December of 2022 all remaining children who had been detained for aiding armed groups were released following a presidential clemency decree. (4,5,12,31,43) Reporting suggests that the released children were accused of working for armed groups at checkpoints, securing mining sites, running errands, and as child soldiers. The government worked with UNICEF to reintegrate the children by providing access to community care centers and foster homes or returning the children to their families. (4,31) While the government has a referral mechanism for authorities and social services to refer children found to be subjected to the worst forms of child labor, due to resource constraints, NGOs and UN agencies were the primary actors involved in monitoring and managing such cases. Government authority and enforcement capacity remains constrained in remote areas of the country. (4)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of coordinating mechanisms that address all worst forms of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Interministerial Committee to Combat Human Trafficking	Coordinates drafting and implementation of the Central African Republic's National Trafficking in Persons Strategy and the National Action Plan to Address Trafficking, acting as an interministerial working group under the authority of the President. Includes a Coordination Office led by the President and includes representatives from key ministries, including MOL. (28,31,32) Promoted the adoption of the 2022 Human Trafficking Law, encouraged MOJ officials to pursue trafficking in persons prosecutions, organized trainings and public awareness campaigns. During the reporting period, the National Committee met twice monthly, and the Coordination Office members met twice weekly. (31)

While the government has established a key mechanism that addresses human trafficking, these efforts do not extend to other worst forms of child labor and other sectors, such as mining, agriculture, and domestic work, in which child labor is prevalent. (3,44)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of coverage of all forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
Political Agreement for Peace and Reconciliation in the Central African Republic (APPR)	Peace agreement signed by 14 armed groups and the Transitional Government in February 2019. Includes provisions to end the recruitment and use of children by armed groups, and to facilitate the separation of children from their ranks. (14,40,41) Armed groups listed by the UN for grave violations against children have signed Action Plans to implement these commitments. (45-47) Action Plans cover the four areas for which the groups are listed, including: (1) recruitment and use of children; (2) killing and maiming; (3) rape and other forms of sexual violence; and (4) attacks on schools and hospitals. (45-47) The Central African Patriotic Movement has appointed four commanders to serve as child protection focal points in areas under its control. (40,45) However, MINUSCA reported that armed groups continued to recruit child soldiers during the reporting period. (4,12,34,48) Research was unable to determine what activities were undertaken as part of this policy during the reporting year, or to identify published results of these activities.
Child Disarmament, Demobilization, and Reintegration Policy	Based on the 2015 Bangui Forum, aims to facilitate initiatives to disarm, demobilize, and reintegrate child soldiers, in cooperation with UN agencies, other ministries, and armed groups. (9) Through its National Strategy for Community-Based Reintegration of Children Formerly Associated with Armed Forces and Armed Groups, provides temporary care to children separated from armed groups, and establishes Community Child Protection Networks. (9,49,50) With the assistance of UNICEF and other partner organizations, the Office of the Presidency also works to disarm, demobilize, and reintegrate children used in armed conflict back into community life, through the Disarmament, Demobilization, Reintegration, and Rehabilitation coordinating body. (35) During the reporting period, the government worked with NGOs to provide community reintegration support and established a vocational training center in Ouaka Prefecture for conflict-affected children. (4,12,31)
National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Children†	Adopted in April 2022, establishes provisions to counter child trafficking, with a specific focus on preventing children from being recruited and used in conflict. (4,51,52) Includes awareness-raising programs for both the public and military forces, specialized training for FACA members, and a communication channel for officials to share information about the use of children in armed conflict and draw attention to potentially problematic situations. Provides for assistance to children previously associated with armed forces and their families to prevent revictimization, including through economic and education opportunities. (5,52)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period. (5,52)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (4)

Central African Republic

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2022, the government established a Multi-year National Action Plan to Combat Gender-Based Sexual Violence/ Conflict-Related Sexual Violence, which includes initiatives to raise awareness about child labor among regional leadership. (4) During the reporting period, violence hindered the ability of the government to implement existing policies throughout its territory. (4,31) Research found no evidence of a policy on other forms of child labor, such as in the mining, agriculture, or domestic work sectors.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
UNICEF Programs	Coordinate the removal of children from forced labor situations, in partnership with NGOs, and provide necessary social services for their rehabilitation, enrollment in schools or vocational training programs, and placement in stable homes. Provide basic education and vocational skills training to children who are most at risk for child labor exploitation and armed group recruitment. (4,9,53) Support shelters that provide immediate care, food, and psychosocial support to vulnerable children and former child soldiers, including through the Shelters for Unaccompanied Children program. (4,54) During the reporting period, worked with the government to provide community reintegration support to children released from armed groups, and undertook a fact-finding survey, in conjunction with NGOs, to collect information on child labor throughout the country to inform future assistance programs. (4,53) In July 2022, established an annual work plan with the government focusing on actions related to the protection of children, including addressing the worst forms of child labor and social protections. (32)
War Child, Reintegration Support for Victims of Child Labor Exploitation	Conducts community-based reintegration programs for survivors of the worst forms of child labor, reaching 689 children during the reporting period. (4) Mobilizes community-based child protection committees, and provides mental health services to children affected by armed conflict. (55)
Birth Registration Campaign†	Aims to provide birth registration to children in the Central African Republic in accordance with the Child Protection Code. During the reporting year, local authorities, with support from UNICEF, used "mobile courts" at several prefectures to issue the documentation necessary for school attendance. (3,4) The campaigns reached 11,173 children during the reporting period. (4,53)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is partially funded by the Government of the Central African Republic.

While the government conducted several outreach efforts during the reporting period to educate local leaders and families about the dangers of child labor and the importance of attending school, research indicated that a lack of sufficient resources significantly hindered its ability to support programmatic efforts to address child labor. (3,4) Coordination with non-government actors to support children used in armed conflict and the scope of programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, including the reintegration of children who were recruited for use in armed conflict. (11,23,56)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in the Central African Republic (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Ensure that the labor inspectorate has sufficient financial and material resources, including transportation, office facilities and supplies, and computers, to enforce child labor laws, in particular in urban centers.	2009 – 2022
	Ensure that inspectors use their own transportation rather than accepting transportation from employers to ensure impartiality of inspections.	2022
	Publish complete labor law enforcement data, including labor inspectorate funding, number and type of inspections conducted, number of child labor violations found, number of violations for which penalties were imposed, and number for which penalties were collected.	2021 – 2022

	Ensure that the government conducts an adequate number of labor inspections, including unannounced inspections.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that formal penalties or sanctions are imposed for child labor law violations, rather than conciliation, as appropriate.	2018 – 2022
	Ensure that referral mechanisms for children found in child labor situations are well-funded and fully operational.	2019 – 2022
	Ensure that children used in armed conflict are not detained, including in facilities for incarcerated adults, and continue to be granted access to social services providers and humanitarian assistance.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure that judicial and criminal law enforcement officials receive sufficient funding and training and ensure that citizens can report violations and access formal judicial processes throughout the country.	2016 – 2022
Coordination	Establish a coordinating mechanism that addresses all forms of child labor, including in mining, agriculture, and domestic work.	2019 – 2022
Government Policies	Adopt a policy that addresses all relevant worst forms of child labor, including in mining, agriculture, and domestic work.	2014 – 2022
	Ensure that signatories to the Political Agreement for Peace and Reconciliation uphold their commitments, cease the recruitment and use of children in armed conflict, and publish efforts to implement the agreement on an annual basis.	2020 – 2022
Social Programs	Improve access to education for all children, regardless of IDP status or religious affiliation, by eliminating school-related fees; making additional efforts to provide all children with birth registration; ensuring that religious minorities are not denied access to education; improving basic educational infrastructure throughout the country, including buildings and adequate furniture, sanitary facilities, teachers, and supplies; and ensuring that schools are safe spaces and free from armed groups.	2009 – 2022
	Expand programs to assist former child soldiers and children associated with armed groups, support their reintegration into society, and improve coordination among relevant actors.	2013 – 2022
	Allocate sufficient resources and implement programs to address the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation and child labor in mining, throughout the country.	2009 – 2022

In 2022, Chad made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government collaborated with the United Nations Children's Fund and the European Union to modernize the civil registry with the aim of increasing access to birth registration. In February 2022, the government also ratified the International Convention on the Protection of Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families. However, children in Chad are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including forced labor in domestic work and cattle herding. The government did not provide sufficient data on law enforcement efforts and does not have policies or programs to address all worst forms of child labor in the country, including in commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Chad. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Chad

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

In the Lake Chad region, human trafficking networks exploit children in fisheries, and traffickers in rural areas sell children in markets for use in cattle or camel herding. (3,4,11,14) Human traffickers exploit children in forced labor as beggars in urban areas, agricultural laborers on farms, gold miners in the north of the country, laborers in charcoal production, and as domestic workers. (4,8,14) Child herders, some of whom are victims of forced labor, follow traditional routes for grazing cattle and may cross ill-defined borders across the Sahel. (8,14) Domestically, boys sent to Koranic schools, or mouhadjirin, may be forced to beg and surrender the money they receive to their teachers. (4,8,14,15) Girls travelling to larger towns in search of work may be subjected to commercial sexual exploitation or domestic servitude. (8) Children in Chad's refugee and IDP communities are also vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking due to their economic instability and lack of access to support systems. (8,14) During the reporting period, children in Chad were recruited by non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict. (4,16) Furthermore, children were abducted and used for forced labor by terrorist groups Boko Haram and the Islamic State West Africa Province. (8)

Both the Constitution and the Law Orienting the Education System mandate free and compulsory education for all Chadian children who are citizens. (17,18) Chad was the first country in the region to integrate its network of refugee schools into the national education system; these schools are fully accredited and receive state funding. (19) Notwithstanding this positive development, Chad only guarantees education for children who are citizens or refugees, rather than for all under law. (17,18,20) While basic education is free by law, some schools require additional payment for textbooks and for supplemental fees. (3,4,21) Other barriers to education include shortages of schools, classrooms, and teachers. In addition, some schools do not offer all grade levels. (4) Girls also experience higher dropout rates than boys, and children with disabilities face barriers to school attendance. (22,23) In addition, poor access to birth registration documents hinders access to education in rural Chad. (4) During the reporting period, the government cooperated with UNICEF and the European Union to work toward modernizing the civil registry, including with the use of mobile phones, to help reduce the number of children lacking birth certificates. (4,24) In addition, a National Biometric Population Registry was established by ordinance in 2020 to centralize birth, death, identity, and other civil status records of residents and persons in transit through the Republic of Chad. However, research was unable to determine if the registry had been implemented in the reporting period. (4,25)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Chad has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

In February 2022, the government ratified the International Convention on the Protection of Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families. (8,9)

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Chad's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the lack of prohibition against the use of children in illicit activities.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Article 52 of the Labor Code; Article 1 of the Decree Relating to Child Labor (26,27)

Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 32 of the Law on the Organization of the Armed Forces; Article 1 of the Ordinance Prohibiting the Use of Children in Armed Conflict; Article 52 of Military Statute N° 006/PR/06; Article 5 of the President's Ordinance on Trafficking in Persons; Articles 10, 286 (cc), 288 (g), and 370 of the Penal Code (28,29,31-33)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 32 of the Law on the Organization of the Armed Forces; Article 22 of the African Charter on the Rights and Welfare of the Child; Articles 5, 18, and 22 of the President's Ordinance on Trafficking in Persons; Articles 10, 286 (cc), 288 (g), and 370 of the Penal Code (28,29,31,34)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 1 of the Ordinance Prohibiting the Use of Children in Armed Conflict; Articles 5, 18, and 22 of the President's Ordinance on Trafficking in Persons; Articles 10, 286 (cc), 288 (g), and 370 of the Penal Code (28,29,32)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16‡	Articles 21, 23, 25, and 28 of the Law Orienting the Education System; Article 35 of the Constitution (17,18)
Free Public Education	No		Article 9 of the Law Orienting the Education System; Article 35 of the Constitution (17,18)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (17)

Chad lacks a specific legal prohibition on children being used, offered, or procured for illicit activities. (4) Furthermore, as the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before completion of compulsory education. (15-18,26,27) Lastly, while Chad's laws provide for free basic education for citizens and refugees, they do not meet the international standard because they do not cover foreign-born children without refugee status. (18,20)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Public Service, Employment, and Social Dialogue (MOPS)	Oversees Chad's labor inspectorate and enforces child labor laws. (12) Administers a directorate charged with addressing the worst forms of child labor, and maintains a specific point of contact to assist in coordinating child protection and human trafficking issues. (12)
Ministry of Justice, Human Rights, and Guardian of the Seal (MOJ)	Drafts and enforces laws and coordinates efforts to protect human rights. Through its Directorate for Protection and Legal Monitoring of Children, enforces laws related to child labor and child trafficking. (12,14)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
National Police's Child Protection Brigade (CPB)	Enforces and investigates allegations of child exploitation, including human trafficking and the worst forms of child labor. (3, 11, 14) Evacuates children to its headquarters in N'Djamena, from where they may be moved to Ministry of Women and Childhood Protection (MWCP) temporary shelters in Koundoul. (12) Includes 100 "focal points" spread throughout all 23 provinces. These focal points are not trained investigators, but they are responsible for coordinating investigations with hub offices and referring allegations to investigators. (3, 4, 14) CPB is active in Chad's largest cities (N'Djamena, Moundou, Sarh, Mongo, Mao, and Abéché). (14) CPB or other local authorities notify MOJ's Directorate for Protection and Legal Monitoring of Children, UNICEF, and local NGOs when there is a case of child trafficking or abuse. (14) Allegations may be submitted directly by the public or by MWCP, MOPS, or MOJ. The government's regional child protection technical committees also identify and refer child trafficking survivors to CPB. (3) During the reporting period, began operating out of a UNICEF-funded headquarters in N'Djamena, which hosts the coordinating service between CPB, MWCP, MOPS, and MOJ. (4)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Chad took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including a lack of sufficient resources, funding, and administrative capacity.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown (3)	Unknown (4)
Number of Labor Inspectors	36 (3)	36 (4)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	Yes (27)	Yes (27)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	Yes (3)	No (4,7)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksite	Unknown (3)	Unknown (4)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	Unknown (3)	Unknown (4)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	Unknown (3)	Unknown (4)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	Unknown (3)	Unknown (4)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Unknown (3)	Unknown (4)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Unknown (3)	Unknown (4)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (27)	Yes (27)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Unknown (3)	Unknown (4)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (3)	Yes (4)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (3)	Yes (4)

The government did not provide information on its labor law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report, including labor inspectorate funding, inspector training on child labor, the number and type of inspections conducted, whether violations were found, penalties imposed, and fees collected. (4) Research indicates that Chad does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (4,35,36) In addition, the government does not maintain a central database for routine inspections, including child labor violations. (4) Furthermore, while a complaint mechanism exists for the public to report suspected child labor violations to be addressed by the Child Protection Brigade, this mechanism is not well known or frequently used. (4)

Labor inspectors lacked sufficient resources, including equipment, transportation, and fuel, to conduct investigations outside the city in which they are based. The ability to conduct inspections is also constrained by limitations in both administrative capacity and funding. (4) Research indicates that the informal sector, which employs the most children in Chad, is also largely unmonitored. (3,5,7)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether criminal law enforcement agencies in Chad took actions to address child labor.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	No (3)	Unknown (4)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (3)	Unknown (4)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (3)	Unknown (4)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (3)	Unknown (4)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (3)	Unknown (4)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Unknown (3)	Yes (4)

The government does not maintain a centralized criminal records database. All criminal records are handwritten, and hard copies are stored at courts and regional tribunals. (4) As a result, the government did not provide information on its criminal law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report, including whether training was provided for criminal investigators and the number of criminal investigations conducted, violations found, prosecutions initiated, convictions made, and penalties imposed. (4) In addition, many judicial officials remain unaware of Chad's laws on trafficking in persons, including the 2018 President's Ordinance on Trafficking in Persons. (9,14) However, the IOM trained 48 judicial authorities and members of security forces in Tibesti and 51 persons in Batha on the identification, referral, and protection components of the national anti-human trafficking law during the reporting period. (4,37)

In collaboration with UNICEF and the Ministry of Women and Childhood Protection, civil society organizations typically assist with providing temporary shelter, legal assistance, and family reintegration services to trafficking survivors. (9,11) Resource constraints, including lack of electricity and internet at judicial facilities and erratic and insufficient funding allocations, pose barriers to criminal investigation and prosecution. (3,4,9,11) Corruption is also a concern. Reporting indicates that high-ranking military officials, who profit from human trafficking, may impede the implementation of anti-trafficking measures and that security forces sometimes interfere in attempts to prosecute suspected traffickers through intimidation. (9)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Working Group on the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Coordinates government efforts to address the worst forms of child labor, provides training to enforcement personnel, and conducts awareness-raising activities. Chaired by MWCP Child Protection Directorate and includes representatives from four other ministries, including MOPS. (3) Research was unable to determine whether the working group was active during the reporting period, and whether it received funding to carry out its mandate. (4)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of implementation of existing policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Road Map to Implement the President's Ordinance on Trafficking in Persons	Adopted in 2019, with the ultimate goal of implementing a National Action Plan. Coordinates interagency enforcement of the 2018 President's Ordinance on Trafficking in Persons. (4) Includes provisions for training members of the courts, local authorities, traditional and religious leaders, members of civil society, and members of enforcement agencies. (4) Components of this policy relating to child labor were inactive during the reporting period. (7)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (4,7)

Chad

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Although Chad has a policy to address human trafficking, research could not find whether it had a policy to address all worst forms of child labor in the country. (9)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Refugees and Host Communities Support (2018–2025)	$60 million World Bank-funded project to improve access to health and education services for refugees and host communities by rehabilitating and constructing primary schools. (3,38,39) During the reporting period, cash transfers reached an additional 45,000 participants (80 percent of whom were women), and there were an additional 5,250 students (50 percent of whom were female) attending new or rehabilitated schools. (38,40)
UNICEF Programs	Multifaceted humanitarian action targeting children, including refugees and internally displaced children in Chad. Includes interventions in education, healthcare, nutrition, and other areas of basic need. (41) Through its $21 million Education Cannot Wait (2020–2023) program, supports education for 446,744 at-risk children. (4,42) The program was developed under the Ministry of National Education's Transitional Education Plan, Program to Strengthen Literacy, Humanitarian Response Plan, and Education Cluster Strategy. (43,44) Interventions include early childhood education, in addition to non-formal education and literacy programs for out-of-school adolescent children (ages 9 to 14). (43,44)
WFP Strategic Plan (2019–2023)	Aims to provide food security and educational outcomes in Chad among crisis-affected and vulnerable populations. (4,45,46) Seeks to promote resilient livelihoods and sustainable food systems. Prioritizes strengthening national institutions to manage food security and coordinating cooperation with humanitarian and development partners in Chad. (45) Through joint initiatives Breaking Barriers to Girls' Education and Education Cannot Wait, provides meals to school children. (46,47) During the reporting period, provided unconditional food assistance and cash transfers to 2.1 million crisis-affected people, supported 232,200 children and school staff in school-based programs, and reached 138,600 people through asset creation and livelihood programs. (48)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

Although Chad has programs that target child labor, they do not address all relevant forms of child labor, particularly regarding the use of child labor in herding cattle, forced child labor in domestic work, and commercial sexual exploitation. (3,4,14,49)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Chad (Table 11).

In 2022, Chile made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. Chile passed laws that specifically prohibit the use of children in illicit activities, raised the maximum prison sentences for those guilty of committing child trafficking crimes, and guaranteed the rights of children to be protected from economic exploitation. The Ministerial Advisory Commission for the Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of Working Adolescents held several meetings on inspection guidelines for the labor directorate, which resulted in the creation of a manual and training modules on child labor and migration for enforcement personnel. In addition, Chile participated in the Alliance 8.7 Strategic Workshop as a Pioneer Country to renew its roadmap for attaining sustainable development goal 8.7. However, children in Chile are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children are also subjected to involvement in the production and trafficking of drugs. Furthermore, migrant children face significant barriers to education, including discrimination and a lack of transportation and access to educational settings. There is also a lack of adequate shelters for child survivors of trafficking in persons.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Chile.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children from indigenous and migrant communities are especially vulnerable to human trafficking for labor exploitation in Chile. (12) Children are also involved in street work, including the selling of goods. (7) While education is compulsory through secondary school, some educational barriers do exist in Chile, including the lack of transportation to schools in rural areas and discrimination in educational settings, specifically for migrant children. (3,6,14,15)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

‡ Age calculated based on available information (15)

In 2022, the Chilean government amended the Penal Code to fully prohibit the use of children in illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs. (25,26,29) Chile also made updates to its criminal code by promulgating Law 21.522, which replaced the term "child prostitution" with "commercial sexual exploitation of a person under the age of 18," and included a minimum sentencing of 5 to 10 years for perpetrators of this crime, with sentencing as high as 20 years if the minor is personally or economically dependent on the perpetrator. (12,13,30) In addition, the government promulgated Law 21.523, which increased the maximum prison sentence for child trafficking to between 10 to 20 years. (12,13,31) Chile also passed Law 21.430 on Guaranteed Rights and Protections for Children and Adolescents, which establishes the right of minors to be protected from economic exploitation, sexual exploitation, and child labor. (12,13,32)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare (MINTRAB)	Designs and implements national strategies on child labor and generates awareness on child labor and commercial sexual exploitation of children. (6) Enforces child labor laws, coordinating with the Better Childhood Service and the Department of Fundamental Rights. (13,33) During the reporting period, Chile replaced the Department for the Eradication of Child Labor with the Department of Fundamental Rights. The Department of Fundamental Rights is responsible for eradicating child labor and forced labor, as well as addressing labor issues pertaining to migration and people with disabilities. (13) As of 2021, the Undersecretary of Labor within MINTRAB chairs the Ministerial Advisory Commission for the Implementation of the Protocol (ILO C029) on forced labor. The Commission is made up of actors whose knowledge and experience are used to advise the Undersecretary of Labor on the limitations that may hinder implementation of the protocol. (8,34)
Ministry of the Interior	Oversees the National Investigations Police (PDI) and the National Uniformed Police ( Carabineros ). (13) Both agencies are tasked with investigating and preventing child labor violations and the worst forms of child labor. (35) Within PDI, the Brigade to Investigate Trafficking in Persons investigates trafficking of children, modern slavery, and organized crime. (35,36) The Sexual Assault Victim Care Center provides support to child survivors of commercial sexual exploitation. (35) Within the National Uniformed Police, the Directorate for Family Protection provides special orientation on policies and operating plans for detection of commercial sexual exploitation of children. (3)
National Prosecutor's Office ( Fiscalía Nacional )	Conducts criminal investigations and prosecutes crimes related to the worst forms of child labor. Trains and coordinates with interagency partners, including PDI, Carabineros , and regional and local prosecutor's offices. (3,37)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Chile took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient human resource allocation.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Chile took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including judges suspending or commuting sentences for those convicted of child commercial sexual exploitation crimes.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022

During the reporting period, the government provided criminal law enforcement information for inclusion in this report.

In 2022, judges frequently suspended or commuted sentences of individuals convicted of commercial sexual exploitation of children, including human trafficking. (3,9) There is also a lack of adequate shelters for child survivors of trafficking in persons. (11)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Ministerial Advisory Commission for the Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of Working Adolescents (CETI)	Coordinates with the Department of Fundamental Rights on implementing the National Strategy for the Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of the Working Adolescent on the national and subnational levels. (13) During the reporting period, CETI held meetings on inspection guidelines for the labor directorate and conducted a survey of work activities for boys, girls, and adolescents, the results of which will be published in 2023. CETI also drafted a manual on child labor and migration with support from IOM, developed training modules for employees of the Better Childhood Service, and updated information about child labor on the government's website. (13)

During the reporting period, the Interagency Task Force on Child Labor and Migration began working on a study on the work of migrant children and adolescents in Chile, and results are expected to be published in 2023. (13)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Strategy for the Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of Adolescent Workers (2015–2025)	Establishes a strategy to eradicate child labor by combining efforts across national and regional agencies and private and public entities, and requiring regions to establish a strategy to address child labor issues in the area. (38) MINTRAB oversees the implementation of regional strategies, including the design and implementation of regional operating plans. MINTRAB continued implementing the national strategy during the reporting period. (13)
Third Action Plan against the Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children and Adolescents	Creates cooperation mechanisms for private and public institutions to collaborate on preventing and detecting commercial sexual exploitation of children and providing social services and rights restitution to survivors. (39) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken during the reporting period to implement this plan.
National Action Plan Against Human Trafficking (2019–2022)	Prevents and addresses human trafficking, with a focus on women and children. Encompassed four strategic areas: prevention and awareness raising, prosecution, victims' assistance and protection, and inter-institutional cooperation and coordination. (40) The Intersectoral Roundtable on Trafficking in Persons developed the Action Plan in 2019, which was approved at the working level but is awaiting approval at the ministerial level. (36,41,42) The plan continued to guide member agencies' work in 2022, despite not being fully implemented. (12) The government plans to draft a new Action Plan against Trafficking in Persons in 2023. (12)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (43)

During the reporting period, the Ministry of Labor and Social Security attended the Alliance 8.7 workshop to renew the roadmap for attaining sustainable development goal 8.7. This goal seeks to eliminate child labor in all its forms by 2025. (13,44)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including a lack of shelters for survivors of human trafficking.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Better Childhood Service ( Mejor Niñez )	Operates under the Ministry of Social Development and Family, guaranteeing the protection of vulnerable children and adolescents, particularly those living on the streets, and survivors of commercial sexual exploitation, in coordination with the Department of Child Labor Eradication. (37,45) Also coordinates with Local Offices of Childhood ( Oficinas Locales de la Niñez ), referring cases of children whose rights have been violated to appropriate social services and monitoring cases of the worst forms of child labor. These offices are located in municipalities throughout the country and are part of the larger social protection network overseen by Better Childhood Service. (45,46) During the reporting period, Better Childhood conducted activities in 11 regions across Chile to assist with its Sexual Exploitation Program. The program is dedicated to addressing commercial sexual exploitation of children and adolescents by financing accredited collaborating. (12,47)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

Reports indicate that the absence of specialized shelters for male survivors of human trafficking remains a problem. (12)

During the reporting period, the National Service for Specialized Protection to Children and Adolescents, in conjunction with the Inter-American Institute, held a seminar on violence and commercial sexual exploitation. The seminar included discussions about new forms of commercial sexual exploitation of children in digital spaces, and the challenges in criminal prosecution and protection of survivors. (48) Additionally, the Development Subdirectorates of the National Service of Tourism created training for several members of the tourist industry on prevention, identifying, and acting in cases of commercial sexual exploitation of children. (49) The Ministry of Labor and Social Security also established partnerships with the private sector, in which they provided businesses, unions, and the general public with training on preventing the worst forms of child labor. (13)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Chile (Table 11).

(1,22) In December 2022, the Australian Attorney General convened the fourteenth Ministerial Meeting of the National Roundtable on Human Trafficking and Slavery, the government's key mechanism for consultation with civil society and industry stakeholders on modern slavery issues. (1)

In 2022, the Government of Australia issued its annual report detailing the previous year's activities related to the implementation of the Modern Slavery Act, which requires businesses and organizations with an annual turnover of $70 million (AUD 100 million) or more to report on the efforts made to reduce the risk of modern slavery, including the worst forms of child labor, in their supply chains. (1,23)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for programs to address child labor. However, the Government of Australia has established social programs that include the goal of preventing child labor (Table 6).

Table 6. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Cash Assistance Programs	Child Care Subsidy Program provides support for the care of children ages 13 or younger using an approved childcare service, and the Parenting Program provides an income support payment for the principal caretakers of a child under age 8. (1)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, there are no actions needed to advance the continued prevention of child labor in Cocos (Keeling) Islands.

In 2022, Colombia made significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. Through Law 2205, the government amended the Code of Criminal Procedure, which prioritizes and accelerates investigations into commercial sexual exploitation and the use of children in pornography by establishing a prosecution timeline for the Attorney General's Office. The government also increased the number of labor inspectors from 885 to 1,165, developed an elite group of inspectors to focus on child labor, and increased the capacity of labor inspectors to identify children at risk. Furthermore, the Colombian Institute for Family Welfare established a 2023 Action Plan with Ecuadorian authorities to address child labor in illegal mining operations. Lastly, the government increased Venezuelan migrant children's enrollment in the education system by approximately 20 percent compared to the year prior. However, children in Colombia are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and illicit activities, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. In addition, inadequate resource allocation for the labor inspectorate, including an insufficient number of labor inspectors, may impede government efforts to protect children from the worst forms of child labor. Finally, existing social programs are insufficient to address the scope of the worst forms of child labor in Colombia, including commercial sexual exploitation and forced begging.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Colombia.

	Recruitment of children by non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict (3,22,24)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

In 2022, reports continued to indicate that the forced recruitment or use of minors in Colombia by illegal armed groups, including by the U.S.-designated terrorist organizations the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia–People’s Army (Fuerzas Armadas Revolucionarias de Colombia-Ejército Popular or FARC-EP) and the National Liberation Army (Ejército de Liberación Nacional or ELN), as well as by the Residual Organized Armed (Grupos Armados Organizados Residuales or GAOR), dissidents of the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia, the Clan del Golfo, the Popular Liberation Army (Ejército Popular de Liberación or EPL) and criminal bands (bandas criminales or BACRIM) continued in 2022. (3,24,25) Armed groups, particularly in the departments of Cauca, Choco, Cordoba, Nariño, and Norte de Santander, typically recruit children to commit crimes such as producing and trafficking drugs, extortion, and serving as combatants and informants, as well as use children for commercial sexual exploitation. (3,21,22,24) In 2022, an international organization reported that 77 percent of municipalities in the department of Choco and 33 percent of municipalities in the department of Nariño were at high risk for child soldier recruitment, particularly indigenous and Afro-Colombian children. (21) According to the Coalition Against the Involvement of Children and Youth in the Armed Conflict in Colombia (Coalición Contra la Vinculación de Niños, Niñas y Jóvenes al Conflicto Armado en Colombia), illegal armed groups forcibly recruited or used 159 children in 66 cases during the reporting period. (21) Colombia’s 2016 Peace Accord with the FARC integrated special provisions known as the “Ethnic Chapter” to address the disproportionate harm Afro-Colombian and indigenous communities suffered during the 50-year conflict. High levels of violence persist in these communities, and ethnic community leaders report an increase in child recruitment by drug traffickers. (26,27)

Commercial sexual exploitation of children occurs more often in private homes rented online than in commercial establishments. Children are particularly vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation in areas with foreign tourism, in mining communities, and in areas with large construction projects. (5) Some children are reportedly recruited in schools, and members of sex trafficking rings conduct surveillance around schools in search of vulnerable girls. (5,8,9,28) In 2022, 114 child victims of sexual exploitation, including sex trafficking, received shelter assistance from an NGO, mostly government-funded. (21) Traffickers exploit Colombian children working in the informal sector and street vending in forced labor. (21,22) Migrant and refugee Venezuelan children are particularly vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, including in street work, commercial sexual exploitation, forced recruitment or use by non-state groups for armed conflict, and recruitment by organized criminal organizations. (21) While children under 18 are eligible for Temporary Protected Status (TPS), migrant and refugee children face difficulties in obtaining TPS due to their adult guardians’ ineligibility and lack of familiarity, thereby increasing barriers to education access and vulnerability to child labor. (5,21,29)

Basic education is free and compulsory for all children up to age 18. However, children in rural and marginalized urban parts of the country face barriers to accessing education due to living long distances from school and a lack of adequate transportation, poor school infrastructure, and violence at school. (3,5,21,30) The government reported an increase of almost 20 percent of Venezuelan migrant children in Colombia's education system, up from 489,179 in 2021 to 586,971 in 2022. (3,21) The TPS program gives Venezuelans with irregular migration status up to 10 years to become residents, as well as access to health, social security, and financial systems. (31,32) Notably, this humanitarian measure also helps them overcome difficulties in accessing pre-primary, primary, secondary, and higher education, as well as training opportunities offered by the Colombian National Apprenticeship Service. (3)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Colombia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Colombia's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including a minimum age for work that is less than the compulsory education age.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation

Colombia

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

In May 2022, Colombia passed Law 2205, which modified Article 175 of the Code of Criminal Procedure to prioritize and accelerate investigations into commercial sexual exploitation and the use of children in pornography by establishing a prosecution timeline for the Attorney General's Office. (3,21,42,43) As the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor (MOL)	Receives complaints of labor law violations and conducts labor inspections, including inspections to verify labor conditions for adolescent workers and compliance with other child labor provisions through its Inspection, Monitoring, Control, and Territorial Management Directorate. Also oversees the Internal Working Group on Child Labor Eradication. (9,44) Additionally, the Directorate of Fundamental Rights' Unit for Labor Protections operates the Comprehensive Child Labor Information System (SIRITI), a child labor monitoring system that identifies children engaged in or at risk of child labor. (3) MOL works closely with the Colombian Institute for Family Welfare (ICBF), which provides services to children who have been engaged in child labor and assists in restoring their rights. (3)
National Police	Investigate cases of commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking and have a Child Protection Police Unit. (9,45)
Attorney General's Office (AGO)	Investigates and prosecutes cases of child recruitment for use in armed conflict and illicit activities, commercial sexual exploitation, forced labor, and human trafficking. With support from the Office's Technical Investigation Unit, advises the Attorney General in the design of policies and strategies related to the role of judicial police investigators. (3,9,33) Oversees the Articulation Group for Addressing Trafficking in Persons, which includes prosecutors, analysts, and judicial police engaged in addressing organized crime and human trafficking. (46) During the reporting period, it created a Special Unit for the Investigation of Prioritized Crimes Involving Children and Adolescents. (3,21,42,43)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Colombia took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor (MOL) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$1,400,000 (5)	$1,255,755 (3)

In January 2022, the Government of Colombia approved the addition of 355 labor inspector positions through Decree 144, and the MOL subsequently hired 280 labor inspectors. (3) However, research indicates that Colombia does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. A labor inspectorate funding decrease combined with a labor inspector hiring increase in 2022 resulted in fewer resources allocated for conducting labor inspections throughout the country. (3,48,49) While Colombia does not have labor inspectors trained or specialized in the identification of forced labor, the MOL created an "Elite Group for Inspections against Child Labor" on June 13, 2022, which comprises 50 inspectors who focus on the enforcement of child labor laws. (3,21,50,51) This group conducted child labor enforcement efforts leading to the rescue of 60 children, and signed pacts with local authorities in cities beyond Bogota, including Cali, Riohacha, and Itagui. The MOL also carried out 38 awareness-raising campaigns on child labor and safe adolescent work across 15 departments, reaching 1,561 participants. (3) Nevertheless, the number of children removed from child labor as a result of labor inspections is unknown. (3)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Colombia took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including the lack of a case management system that tracks sentencing information.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (5)	Yes (3)
Number of Investigations	2,457 (5)	2,219 (3)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	316 (5)	585 (3)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (5)	Unknown (3)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (52-54)	Unknown (3)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (5)	Yes (3)

In 2022, there were 2,079 children and adolescents registered as survivors of crimes related to the worst forms of child labor. Child pornography was linked to 65 percent of the violations and 23.6 percent involved commercial sexual exploitation and forced recruitment by non-state armed groups and criminal groups. (3) During the reporting period, 351 of the 585 suspects charged with crimes related to the worst forms of child labor were charged for using children to commit illicit activities. (3) The government did not report comprehensive annual statistics related to the number of convictions for crimes related to the worst forms of child labor. (21) In addition, as the AGO's case management system tracks criminal proceedings only through the stage of convictions, it does not include information on sentencing. As a result, the government did not report comprehensive information on sentencing. (3,21)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Interagency Committee for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor and Protection of the Adolescent Worker (CIETI)	Coordinates efforts to address the worst forms of child labor. (8) Chaired by MOL, includes 13 government agencies and representatives from trade unions, business associations, and civil society organizations. Oversees department-level CIETIs throughout the country, each comprising municipal-level committees. (3,55) During the reporting period, MOL and CIETIs reached 4,534 public officials in 898 municipalities through 161 technical assistance activities to address child labor. CIETIs in the Boyaca, Caldas, Cundinamarca, Tolima, and Valle del Cauca departments also conducted child labor research. (3) In addition, a MOL-led technical team trained both the departmental and municipal level CIETIs on the SIRITI. (3,21)

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

The National Interagency Committee for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Commercial Sexual Exploitation convened in December in Cartagena to raise awareness of commercial sexual exploitation of children. (3) Throughout the reporting period, the Colombian Institute for Family Welfare (ICBF) also made several efforts to build the capacity of the government to address child labor crimes. For instance, the ICBF and MOL established a protocol for labor inspectors to help with the identification of children in or at risk of child labor and ensure that these children are referred to appropriate social services. (3) The ICBF also provided capacity-building assistance on child labor prevention and elimination to National System for Family Welfare (SNBF) agencies at local levels, including by conducting 14 training workshops, reaching 1,654 officials and civil society stakeholders. (3) Finally, ICBF led the government efforts to establish a 2023 Action Plan with Ecuadorian authorities to address child labor in illegal mining operations. (3)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Policy Guidelines to Prevent and Eradicate Child Labor and Protect the Adolescent Worker (2017–2027)	Aims to address child labor in the agriculture sector, develop child labor prevention strategies, improve the quality and coverage of child protection services, protect adolescent workers from hazardous work, create strategies to address child labor in domestic work, and establish evaluation and monitoring mechanisms to assess progress. (56) Contains a roadmap to prevent and eliminate child labor in mining and a cooperative agreement between the Ministry of Mining and Energy and the ICBF to prevent child labor in mining. (57) MOL also signed a pact to prevent and eliminate child labor in urban markets with the Bogota District Government's Institute for Social Economy ( Instituto para la Economía Social ), which include child labor awareness interventions conducted with employers and operators and ICBF's Mobile Teams for Comprehensive Protection ( Equipos Móviles de Protección Integral or EMPIs). (3)
National Strategy for the Prevention and Eradication of the Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children (2018–2028)	Guides government actions at the national, departmental, and municipal levels for the prevention of commercial sexual exploitation, survivor assistance, and the strengthening of sentencing for perpetrators. (58) As part of this strategy, the Colombian government maintains an "Eyes in All Places" ( Ojos en Todas Partes ) public awareness campaign, which aims to prevent child sex tourism. Led by the Ministry of Commerce, Industry, and Tourism, and implemented in coordination with ICBF and the National Tourism Fund. (3) In 2022, MOL and other agencies conducted 86 campaigns to raise awareness of commercial sexual exploitation in 547 municipalities across 24 departments, reaching 3,308 participants. (3) Also in 2022, MOL and ICBF, along with the Organization of Ibero-American States, held a national competition for department-led efforts to address the commercial sexual exploitation of children, out of which five awardees traveled to Spain to conduct exchanges on efforts to prevent this crime. (3)
National Policy for the Prevention of Recruitment, Use, and Sexual Violence Against Children and Adolescents by Illegal Armed Groups or Organized Criminal Groups (2018–2028)	Directs government actions to prevent the recruitment and use of children by armed groups, address violence against children, and improve interagency coordination. (3) The government also has a roadmap that establishes protocols to assist child survivors of armed conflict. (11) The Intersectoral Commission for the Prevention of the Recruitment and Use and Sexual Violence Against Children by Illegal Armed Groups (CIPRUNNA) met twice in 2022. (3) Under this policy, CIPRUNNA also presented an assessment of its "Join for Me" ( Súmate por Mí ) strategy, conducted 263 technical assistance activities with local level authorities, and shared its findings on the probability of recruitment of children and adolescents by illegal armed groups in 2022. (3)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (3)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Campaigns Against Child Labor†	ICBF campaigns to increase coordination for the protection of children and adolescents with other government agencies at the national, departmental, and municipal levels, while leading the Family National Welfare System. (59) In 2022, ICBF continued to oversee 51 EMPLs with a total of 153 officers across 33 regional directorates. The EMPLs conducted numerous child labor prevention efforts, including carrying out "active searches" for children either engaged in child labor or at risk, which resulted in the identification of 2,042 children from January through November 2022. (3) Separately, EMPLs verified the school enrollment status for 9,152 children. (3)
Programs Addressing Trafficking in Persons‡	AGO continued to implement the "Don't be Fooled" ( #EsoEsCuento ) public awareness campaign to prevent human trafficking in 2022, targeting areas with high prevalence of this crime, such as the department of Bolivar, which includes Cartagena. (3) The National Police also continued implementing their "Open Your Eyes" ( Abre Tus Ojos ) public awareness and child protection program, which aims to protect children from exploitation in the worst forms of child labor, including the recruitment and use of children by armed groups, commercial sexual exploitation, trafficking in persons, child pornography, and forced begging. The program reached 344,031 participants through 13,323 awareness and prevention activities. (3)
Development for Social Prosperity Programs‡	Families in Action ( Familias en Acción ) uses a conditional cash transfer program to address poverty and build human capital; United Network ( Red Unidos ) coordinates actions to reduce inequality and end extreme poverty; Healthy Generations ( Generaciones con Bienestar ) operates a children's rights program offering cultural and recreational activities for children ages 6 to 17 identified as vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor; and Youth in Action ( Jóvenes en Acción ) provides technical job training and conditional cash transfers to vulnerable urban youth ages 16 to 24. (60,61) As of October 2022, the Shake it Up Generation ( Generación Sacúdete ) program benefitted 81,569 children ages 14–18 across the country, helping them develop life goals and projects helping prevent the risks associated with the worst forms of child labor. Further, the Culture Fest ( Cultura Fest ) helped educate children and adolescents and their families on child labor and related crimes. (3) Other social protection programs like Katunaa Modality, Explorers' Generation, and Healthy Ethnic Generations collectively reached a total of 46,115 children across 141 municipalities in 2022, up from 42,378 across 132 municipalities in 2021. † Program is funded by the Government of Colombia.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (3,10,11)

Research indicates that existing social programs are insufficient to address the scope and magnitude of the worst forms of child labor problem in Colombia, particularly commercial sexual exploitation, forced begging, and recruitment for use in illicit activities. (3,5)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Colombia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum age for work from 15 to 18 to align with the compulsory education age.	2018 – 2022
Enforcement	Increase the number of labor inspectors from 1,165 to 1,606 to ensure adequate coverage of the labor force of approximately 24.1 million people.	2009 – 2022
	Enhance the Attorney General's Office's case management system to track entire criminal proceedings beyond sentencing, to include information on the sentences and penalties handed down after conviction.	2021 – 2022
	Publish information on inspections conducted at worksites, child labor penalties imposed that were collected, convictions for crimes related to the worst forms of child labor, imposed penalties for violations of the worst forms of child labor, children removed from child labor due to inspections, and children referred to social services.	2009 – 2022
	Strengthen labor law enforcement by conducting unannounced inspections.	2022
	Increase funding for the Ministry of Labor to ensure that it has the capacity to conduct labor inspections throughout the country.	2022
	Ensure that all children rescued from child labor situations are referred to and provided social services.	2022
Social Programs	Expand efforts to improve education access for all children, especially those in rural and marginalized urban environments, including by ensuring adequate transportation to school, improving school infrastructure, and addressing violence affecting school attendance.	2013 – 2022
	Expand social programs to sufficiently address the scope of the worst forms of child labor, particularly commercial sexual exploitation, forced begging, and recruitment for use in illicit activities.	2020 – 2022

In 2022, Comoros made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government established a National Brigade for the Repression of Illegal Migrant Smuggling and Trafficking in Persons, and the National Committee on the Prevention of Illegal Migrant Smuggling and Trafficking in Persons to bolster its anti-trafficking efforts. In addition, it doubled the number of labor inspections carried out in 2022 compared to the previous year. However, children in Comoros are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including forced labor in agriculture. Children also perform dangerous tasks in domestic work. Comoros' Labor Code applies only to workers with a formal work agreement, leaving child laborers, particularly those in the informal sector, vulnerable to exploitation. In addition, the legal framework defines child trafficking as requiring the use of force, fraud, or coercion, which does not conform with international standards. Finally, Comoros lacks a policy that addresses all relevant worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Comoros.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Data detailing the prevalence of children engaged in child labor in Comoros were not available for inclusion in this report. However, reports suggest that some children are subjected to domestic servitude and forced labor in the agricultural and fishing sectors. (5, 11) Children from poor or rural families are at higher risk of being placed into forced labor. (3,12) Some parents who are unable to care for their children send them to wealthier families, who are expected to provide food, shelter, and schooling for the children in exchange for housework. In practice, some may become domestic workers and victims of labor trafficking. (3,5,12) In addition, in Comoros, it is traditional practice to send children to Koranic teachers to receive an education. Some Koranic teachers, however, may force their students to perform domestic or agricultural work, and some children are sexually and physically abused. (5-7,12) In nearby Mayotte, which is administered by France, reports indicate that there are more than 3,000 unaccompanied children from Comoros, some of whom are exploited in child labor or may be vulnerable to human trafficking. (12,13) There are also reports that drug traffickers use Comoran teenagers to transport drugs on boats to Mayotte. (3,5,9)

Children in Comoros often work on family farms or family fishing boats, performing agricultural tasks with sharp tools, carrying heavy loads of products, and climbing tall heights to harvest fruit. In construction, children work without basic safety or protective equipment. (3,5,9)

Although boys and girls attend public primary schools in equal numbers, fewer girls complete primary education. Due to a lack of facilities to accommodate female menstrual cycles, girls often miss school or leave altogether. (3,5,14,15) Furthermore, poor school infrastructure, the limited availability of teachers, and physical and sexual violence in schools may impede access to education and increase the vulnerability of children to child labor. (5,6,9)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Comoros has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

In June 2021, Comoros ratified the Forced Labor Protocol, which commits the country to taking effective measures to prevent forced labor, protect survivors, and ensure survivors have access to judicial recourse. The Protocol entered into effect on July 15, 2022. (16)

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Comoros' legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the lack of minimum age protections for all children.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	15	Article 129 of the Labor Code (17)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 131(d) of the Labor Code; Article 7 of the Law to Combat Child Labor and Trafficking (17,18)

* Country has no conscription (25)

Comoros' Law to Combat Child Labor and Trafficking defines child trafficking as requiring the use of force, fraud, or coercion, which does not conform with international standards. (18,26) While the Labor Code does not stipulate this requirement, it also does not exclude the means of force, fraud, or coercion for child trafficking victims. (17,18,27) The 2020 Penal Code also does not exclude the means of force, fraud, or coercion for child trafficking victims. (28) Thus, relevant Comoran laws do not meet international standards.

The Labor Code allows children under age 15 to perform light work in domestic work or agriculture if it does not interfere with their education or physical or moral development. The Labor Code, however, does not set age 13 as the minimum age for light work, specify the conditions under which light work may be conducted, or limit the number of hours for light work, as defined by international standards on child labor. (17,22,27) In addition, the Labor Code applies only to workers who perform work under a formal employment agreement, which does not conform to international standards requiring that all children be protected under the law establishing a minimum age for work. (17,27)

Although education is compulsory from ages 3 to 16 in Comoros, there is no free basic education for children in Comoros as established by law. This, in addition to a lack of infrastructure, teachers, and transportation hamper schooling and retention of children, increases the risk of children's involvement in child labor. (5,6,22,29) Furthermore, as the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor (MOL)	Enforces child labor laws, investigates allegations of child labor, and refers cases of the worst forms of child labor for criminal investigation. (5,6,27)
Ministry of the Interior	Oversees the National Brigade for the Repression of Illegal Migrant Smuggling and Trafficking in Persons*. Established in March of 2022, and is composed of 16 officers from the police, gendarmerie, and civil security. (13,30) Responsible for investigating human trafficking cases and coordinating with IOM, Service d'Ecoute , and civil protection to provide trafficking survivors with social services. (13,31) The Police Morals and Minors Brigade, also operating under the Ministry, investigates allegations of child abuse, including child trafficking, and refers cases for prosecution. (5,32)
Ministry of Justice	Prosecutes criminal cases, including those related to child trafficking. Has specialized courts for minors, with judges responsible for the prosecution of cases involving forced labor, child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and the use of children in illicit activities. (5-7)

*Agency responsible for child labor enforcement was created during the reporting period.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Comoros took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor (MOL) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient allocation of financial resources.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Labor Inspectorate Funding	0 (3)	0 (5)

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Comoros' workforce, which includes approximately 229,000 workers. Research indicates that Comoros does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (5,33) Reports indicate that there is a lack of training, equipment, transportation, and funding available to conduct child labor inspections. (5,6,8) Inspectors have indicated that although there is a budget for fixed costs such as salaries, there is no operating budget for the labor inspectorate, and labor inspectors have to rely on their own funds for costs such as transportation. (3,5,6,9)

The labor inspectorate conducted 50 inspections during the reporting period, a 100 percent increase compared to the number of inspections carried out in 2021. (5) Although the labor inspectorate is permitted to conduct unannounced inspections, in practice, inspectors usually respond only when the MOL receives complaints. Furthermore, inspections are primarily conducted in the formal sector, even though most child labor is concentrated in the informal sector. (5) The labor inspectorate is required to submit a yearly report detailing its work, including statistics on inspections, offenses identified, and penalties imposed; however, no report of this type was identified during the reporting period. (3,5) Finally, although a reciprocal referral mechanism was established under the National Action Plan for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor in Comoros 2010–2015, it does not appear that this mechanism is currently active. (5)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Comoros took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Police Morals and Minors Brigade that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient allocation of financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	No (3)	No (5)
Number of Investigations	Unknown	Unknown
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown	Unknown
Number of Convictions	Unknown	Unknown
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown	Unknown
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (3)	Yes (5)

In 2022, Comoros made progress in identifying trafficking victims, investigating trafficking cases, and working with international organizations to conduct anti-trafficking trainings. (13,34) In particular, the government identified trafficking victims and screened for trafficking indicators, with support from IOM, which partnered with the government to develop a manual for identifying trafficking victims. In November 2022, IOM also held a training related to trafficking victim identification, screening, and using the manual. (13,34) In addition, the Ministry of the Interior and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, together with IOM, held anti-trafficking trainings for law enforcement and civil society organizations. However, reports indicate that prosecutors and judges have received insufficient training related to trafficking prosecutions. (34)

Since the government established the National Brigade, four potential trafficking cases have been referred to it for further investigation; with at least one case involved child trafficking. (30,31) Officers in the National Brigade noted the need for additional training related to child-friendly interviewing techniques, survivor-centered and trauma-informed approaches, and general human trafficking concepts. (31)

Reports indicate that a lack of trained staff, equipment, transportation, and funding inhibit criminal law enforcement efforts against the worst forms of child labor. (5,11,12) The government also did not provide comprehensive information on its criminal law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a failure of coordinating bodies to convene.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Committee Against Child Labor	Coordinates government efforts on child labor. Chaired by MOL. (7,35) Research was unable to determine whether the committee was active during the reporting period.

The National Committee on the Prevention of Illegal Migrant Smuggling and Trafficking in Persons was established in March 2022 to lead government efforts to apply anti-trafficking policies, replacing the Anti-Trafficking Task Force. The National Committee operates under the direction of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and comprises multiple government agencies, the Services d'Ecoute, NGOs, and international organizations. (13,31)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including the lack of a policy specifically dedicated to addressing child labor.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Policy for the Protection of Children (2016–2021)	Aimed to improve child protection in Comoros; included components to address the worst forms of child labor, with a focus on child trafficking. Implemented by the Ministry of Health, Solidarity, Social Protection, and Gender Promotion. (7,35,37) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.

‡ The government has other policies that may have addressed child labor issues. (38)

Although child labor is integrated into some government policies, Comoros has not adopted a new national action plan to address child labor since the previous plan expired in 2021. (5,11)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate efforts to address child labor in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Services d'Ecoute (Listening Services)†	UNICEF-funded, government-backed centers that provide protective services and offer immediate assistance to vulnerable and abused children. (5,11,39) Investigates allegations of violence against children, including the worst forms of child labor, and refers perpetrators to criminal authorities for prosecution. (9,40) An independent evaluation of Services d'Ecoute found that it responded to the needs of child survivors of violence and improved the professionalism of those responding to child survivors. However, program personnel lack relevant training in social services provision and in international standards on child protection, which has resulted in incomplete casework, and a lack of evaluation and follow-up with child survivors. (39,41)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of Comoros.

Although the government has programs that target child labor, their scope is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, particularly in agriculture, fishing, domestic, and informal work.

While the Services d'Ecoute may provide assistance services to children, these services are designed to address cases involving violence against children rather than child labor issues. (3,5)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Comoros (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law's light work provisions set age 13 as the minimum age, prescribe the number of hours per week that light work may be undertaken, and specify the conditions under which light work may be conducted, as defined by international standards on child labor.	2012 – 2022
	Establish by law the right to free basic education.	2020 – 2022
	Ensure that the law's minimum age for work provisions and protections apply to children in unpaid or non-contractual work.	2015 – 2022
	Align child trafficking laws with international standards by ensuring that force, fraud, or coercion are not required elements in child trafficking cases.	2019 – 2022
Enforcement	Raise the minimum age for work from age 15 to age 16 to align with the compulsory education age.	2021 – 2022
	Provide the labor inspectorate with an operating budget for resources, training, transportation, and equipment to ensure adequate coverage of the workforce.	2009 – 2022
	Increase the number of labor inspectors from 3 to 6 to ensure adequate coverage of a labor force of approximately 229,000 people.	2018 – 2022

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Ensure that labor inspectors expand their coverage of the informal sector.	2020 – 2022
	Ensure that the labor inspectorate uses its authority to conduct unannounced inspections rather than relying solely on incoming complaints to initiate inspections.	2017 – 2022
	Ensure that the labor inspectorate fulfills its mandate to collect and publish data and statistics related to inspection efforts on an annual basis.	2019 – 2022
	Establish and use a reciprocal survivor referral mechanism between labor enforcement authorities and social services.	2019 – 2022
	Publish information on the number of criminal law investigations, prosecutions initiated, convictions, and penalties assessed related to cases of the worst forms of child labor.	2009 – 2022
	Provide additional trainings to criminal law enforcement personnel and judges, as well as expand the allocation of resources, transportation, and equipment, to enhance criminal law enforcement efforts related to the worst forms of child labor.	2009 – 2022
Coordination	Ensure that the National Committee Against Child Labor carries out its intended mandate.	2014 – 2022
Government Policies	Adopt a policy that addresses all relevant worst forms of child labor, such as a new national action plan to combat child labor.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure that activities are undertaken to implement key policies related to child labor and that data on these activities are published on an annual basis.	2019 – 2022
Social Programs	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers to education, by offering appropriate facilities to meet the needs of girls, improving infrastructure and teacher availability, and addressing school violence.	2014 – 2022
	Collect and publish data on the prevalence of child labor and the types of work children perform in Comoros.	2019 – 2022
	Ensure that social program personnel, such as those in the Services d'Ecoute , have adequate and relevant training to be able to appropriately respond to the needs of child survivors, including those abused by religious instructors.	2019 – 2022
	Implement and expand existing programs to address the scope of the child labor problem, particularly in agriculture, fishing, domestic work, and informal work.	2009 – 2022

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT REGRESSION IN PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2022, the Democratic Republic of the Congo made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. In October, the Inter-ministerial Commission to Combat Child Labor in Mines and Artisanal Mining Sites launched the Child Labor Monitoring System. Moreover, the Ministry of Labor began recruiting 2,000 labor inspectors and controllers, some of whom will be trained to conduct inspections in mine sites. President Felix Tshisekedi also promulgated Law No° 22/067 for the Prevention and Fight Against Trafficking in Persons, which strengthened penalties for trafficking in persons. However, despite new initiatives to address child labor, the Democratic Republic of the Congo is receiving an assessment of minimal advancement because of the national army's complicity in the worst forms of child labor. During the year, the Armed Forces of the Democratic Republic of the Congo supplied weapons and munitions to non-state armed groups known for recruiting children. Children in the Democratic Republic of the Congo are also subjected to other forms of the worst forms of child labor, including in the forced mining of gold, tin ore (cassiterite), tantalum ore (coltan), and tungsten ore (wolframite), and are used in armed conflict, sometimes as a result of forcible recruitment or abduction by non-state armed groups. Children also mine cobalt ore (heterogenite) in the Copperbelt region. The government did not publish labor or criminal law enforcement data. It also failed to take active measures to ensure that children are not inappropriately incarcerated, penalized, or physically harmed solely for unlawful acts committed as a direct result of their exploitation in the worst forms of child labor. Other gaps remain, including a lack of sufficient numbers of enforcement personnel, insufficient training for enforcement personnel, limited financial resources, and poor coordination of government efforts to address child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC). Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	17.4 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	68.8
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	16.3
Primary Completion Rate (%)		69.9

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT REGRESSION IN PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including tilling fields, planting seeds, weeding, watering and harvesting crops, carrying heavy loads,† and use of chemical products and machetes in the production of beans, corn, manioc, rice, and sweet potatoes (3-6)
	Fishing, including maintaining fishing tools, baiting hooks, transporting heavy loads, using explosives, and salting, smoking, and packaging fish (3-7)
	Herding and raising livestock such as chickens, goats, and pigs, including feeding, cleaning cages or stalls, and disposing of waste (4,8)
Industry	Mining, including carrying heavy loads,† digging, sifting, sorting, transporting, using explosives, washing, and working underground† in the production of diamonds, copper, cobalt ore (heterogenite), gold, tin ore (cassiterite), tantalum ore (coltan), and tungsten ore (wolframite) (3-6,9-12)
Services	Domestic work (3-6)
	Driving motorcycle taxis (3)
	Street work, including vending, garbage scavenging, and carrying heavy loads (3,6,7)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced mining of gold, tantalum (coltan), tin (cassiterite), and tungsten (wolframite), each sometimes as a result of debt bondage (4-6,10,11,13-15)
	Forced domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation (6,13,16,17)
	Use in illicit activities for non-state armed groups, including carrying stolen goods, and smuggling minerals (15,18)
	Recruitment or abduction of children by non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict, including as checkpoint monitors, combatants, concubines, domestic workers, field hands, human shields, looters, porters, spies, and tax collectors at mining sites (5,6,13)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Escalating conflict in the east rendered children increasingly vulnerable to recruitment by non-state armed groups, forced labor in artisanal mining, and prostitution. (6,13,19-25) Non-state armed groups in Ituri reportedly seized young children from their homes, forcing them to transport heavy loads or perform domestic work. (4,23,24) UNICEF and other international organizations estimate that between 40 and 70 percent of non-state armed groups in central DRC include children, some as young as age 5. (6,13,26) Non-state armed groups, criminal gangs, and illicit smuggling networks operating in the DRC continued to abduct, recruit, or use children in armed conflict during the reporting period. (6,13,27) There were also reports of non-state armed groups connected to ISIS-DRC, also known as the Allied Democratic Forces, recruiting children in North Kivu, South Kivu, and Ituri provinces in eastern DRC. (6,23,24,27) The UN verified that a total of 1,545 children, as young as 5, were recruited and used in armed conflict, including in support roles (643), in combat (585), as guards (206), as spies (54) and as fetish keepers (26), and in unspecified roles (31). In October 2022, Human Rights Watch documented claims that the Armed Forces of the Democratic Republic of the Congo (FARDC) had provided ammunition to the armed group Democratic Forces for the Liberation of Rwanda (FDLR) and collaborated with the armed groups Alliance of Patriots for a Free and Sovereign Congo, Coalition of Movements for Change, Nyatura, and Nduma Defense of Congo-Renovated. (23,28) The UN verified that these armed groups recruited and used children in 2022. (23,24,29,30)

In eastern Congo's conflict-affected regions, children extract and transport tin (cassiterite), tantalum (coltan), tungsten (wolframite), diamonds, and gold. Thousands of children also work in cobalt and copper mines in the southern Copperbelt region. (31,32) Non-state armed groups and their Congolese political and military backers control mineral resources in this region. (21) Prevalence of child labor is highest in the country's artisanal and small-scale mining (ASM) sector, which operates with minimal oversight. (33) One study detected child labor at 17 of 58 ASM sites surveyed. At informal or illegal ASM operations, children are uniquely exposed to hazardous working conditions and, in some instances, to forced labor. (19,34-36) While the exact number of children working in cobalt is unknown, estimates indicate between 5,000 and 35,000 children work as artisanal cobalt miners. (37-39) In addition, non-state armed groups subjected children to forced labor in artisanal mines in Ituri, North Kivu, South Kivu, and Maniema, where forced labor, armed conflict, and mining are often intertwined. (5,40)

Congo, Democratic Republic of the

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT REGRESSION IN PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Children from the Kasai region were taken to Kinshasa and used in forced begging schemes. (5,17,40,41) Tens of thousands of civilians have been displaced in eastern DRC's Ituri Province because of the conflict, making thousands of children vulnerable to sex trafficking, forced labor, or commercial sexual exploitation. (40,42,43) Despite evidence that children are subjected to participation in armed conflict, commercial sexual exploitation, and forced labor in mining, the prevalence and nature of child labor in other sectors remains unclear because a comprehensive, stand-alone child labor survey has never been conducted in the DRC. (5,23,24)

UNICEF estimates that only 25 percent of children under age 5 have birth certificates. (44) Low rates of birth registration leave many children vulnerable to child labor because it makes age verification difficult during armed forces (FARDC) recruitment campaigns and hinders efforts to identify and separate children associated with armed groups. (10,45) While Congolese law provides for free, compulsory education, only slightly more than half of the DRC's 51,574 public schools were financed by the state. At public schools that did not receive government funding, parents were asked to pay school fees, which were often prohibitively high, to support teacher salaries. (46,47) During the reporting period, at least 750,000 children in eastern DRC's conflict-affected provinces were unable to attend school. (25)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

The DRC has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in the DRC's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including a compulsory education age of 12 years that is lower than the minimum age of work, which is 18 years.

During the reporting period, President Tshisekedi promulgated Law No° 22/067 for the Prevention and Fight Against Trafficking in Persons, which criminalizes all forms of trafficking and prescribes stringent penalties. However, the law continues to require a threat, use of force, coercion, fraud, deception, or abuse of power for a child to have been considered trafficked. (29,55) Children are required to attend school only up to age 12, based on available information. This standard makes children ages 12 to 18 vulnerable to child labor as they are not required to attend school but are not legally permitted to work. In addition, the law provides for free schooling for 6 years, although basic education is a total of 9 years. The failure to provide for complete free basic education may increase the risk of children's involvement in the worst forms of child labor. (48,54,59)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Employment, Labor, and Social Welfare (MELSS)	Investigates cases related to child labor, including its worst forms. (62,63) Refers cases of child labor to the Ministry of Justice (MOJ) for prosecution. Currently lacks the capacity to conduct inspections in the mining sector. (3)
Ministry of Mines	Includes the Service for Assistance and Supervision of Artisanal and Small-Scale Mining, the government agency responsible for artisanal and small-scale mining (ASM) regulation and training, and the Division of Mines, which oversees mining-related departments and public services, including large-scale mining, at the provincial level, and enforcement of the 2018 Mining Code. Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Criminal Enforcement Agencies	The Ministry of Justice enforces criminal laws related to child labor. (3,4) Oversees 5 juvenile courts in Kinshasa and 19 UNICEF-funded child protection courts throughout the country. (4) Assists the International Criminal Court in conducting investigations and prosecuting individuals charged with using children in armed conflict. (3,4,66) The Ministry of Interior investigates allegations of human trafficking rings, refers child labor cases to the MOJ for prosecution, and coordinates support and reintegration services with the Ministry of Social Affairs, Solidarity, and Humanitarian Action. (3,66) Includes the Special Police Unit for Women and Children, which addresses conflict-related sexual and gender-based violence against women and children, protects women and children who are survivors of physical abuse, and ensures the demobilization of children. (3,4) The Congolese National Police Child Protection and Sexual Violence Directorate has a formal mechanism in place with local NGOs to screen for possible human trafficking survivors among vulnerable groups. (41) In addition, the Mining and Hydrocarbon Police are charged with enforcing the mining code, including prohibitions against child labor, at artisanal and large-scale mining sites. (36) The Ministry of Defense investigates and prosecutes military officials in military courts suspected of recruiting and using child soldiers, and leads the implementation of the Action Plan to End the Recruitment and Use of Child Soldiers. Through its Department of Child Protection, coordinates actions with UNICEF. (3) Moreover, through its Children Associated with Armed Forces and Armed Groups Unit, coordinates demobilization, disarmament, and reintegration activities. (66,67)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in the DRC took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Employment, Labor, and Social Welfare (MELSS) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient financial resource allocation.

Research indicates that the DRC currently does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (23,29) The government is hiring an additional 2,000 labor inspectors and controllers (serving as inspection assistants) in 2023, for a total of 2,172 inspectors across 23 of the DRC's 26 provinces. (23,29) Once this cohort is trained and deployed, the DRC will have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (68) The Ministry of Labor also increased its budget in 2022 to $19.6 million, up from $13 million in 2021. However, there is no reported budget for the Labor Inspectorate, and reports suggests that it suffers from poorly equipped offices, irregular electrical power, and lack government-issued computers and mobile phones. (23) Many inspectors also do not have access to vehicles for inspections and regional labor inspectorates rely on fees collected from violators to sustain their operations. (5,6) In addition, labor inspectors did not receive training on enforcing child labor laws in 2022. (23)

Despite these challenges, provincial authorities conducted inspections in the formal mining sector in Haut Katanga, Tanganyika, and Lualaba, where child labor is known to occur. (5,24) The United States Department of State's Bureau of International Narcotics and Law Enforcement also continued to provide trafficking in persons training as part of its training for mining police. During the reporting period, they trained 245 specialized mining police officers to address human trafficking in this sector. (23)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in the DRC took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including inadequate human resource allocation.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

While the Ministry of Interior is responsible for investigating allegations of human trafficking and referring child labor cases to the Ministry of Justice for prosecution, it lacks the necessary financial and human resources to carry out its mandate. In addition, the Special Police Unit for the Protection of Children and Prevention of Sexual Violence (PEPVS) lacks adequate resources to address child trafficking and child labor, especially outside of major cities. (69) Finally, the Ministry of Justice lacks the resources to rapidly, fully, and consistently carry out investigations and prosecutions. (69)

The Disarmament, Demobilization, and Reintegration Commission (UEPN-DDR) coordinates verification and release of children associated with armed groups. Working with the Ministry of Gender and Family, the UN Organization Stabilization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (MONUSCO), UNICEF, and NGOs, it refers demobilized child soldiers to social service providers for family reunification and reinsertion. (3,66,67) The commission is led by the Ministry of Defense's Children Associated with Armed Forces and Armed Groups Unit. (66,67) In addition, the Country Task Forces on Monitoring and Reporting, which is co-chaired by the UN, documents all grave violations committed against children. With UN support, the Centers for Transit and Orientation in North Kivu Province provided psychological counseling, basic education, and job skills training to ex-child soldiers during the reporting period. (6)

The FARDC, mining police, and private security forces, including those guarding large-scale mining concessions, reportedly subject child laborers on ASM sites to extortion and physical abuse. (21,22,70) There is no evidence that the government took action to address these abuses in 2022. (71) In addition, while the FARDC removed children from armed groups, these children were occasionally detained for 2 to 14 days. (5,41) When children are detained, official procedure requires that the government alert MONUSCO, which then assumes responsibility for demobilizing children and referring them to social service providers. Prior to that handover, children may be held in local detention cells, which suffer from overcrowding, lack of food and health services, and poor sanitation. (5,41) Furthermore, penalties for criminal violations related to the worst forms of child labor—including the use of children in armed conflict—are 1 to 3 years' imprisonment with fines of up to $784 (1,576,624 Congolese Francs); the penalties are insufficient to serve as deterrents. (4,15,48,50,56,72,73)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of clarity of institutional mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Committee to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor (CN-PFTE)	Oversees the National Action Plan to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor and monitors its implementation. (74,75) Led by the Ministry of Employment, Labor, and Social Welfare and includes representatives from 12 other ministries, local NGOs, and civil society. (3,74,75) During the reporting period, the committee appointed a new President, the incoming Secretary General of the Ministry of Mines, Jacques Ramazani, who coordinated with the ILO to host a relaunch of the Inter-ministerial Commission to Combat Child Labor in Mines and Artisanal Mining Sites (CISTEMA) on October 26, 2022. CISTEMA, which is chaired by the Ministry of Mines, coordinates efforts to eradicate child labor in the DRC's mining sector and serves as an adviser to other ministries addressing child labor in mining. CISTEMA committed to following national goals to eliminate child labor in artisanal mining by 2025. (23) The CN-PFTE and CISTEMA also validated the Child Labor Monitoring System (CLMS) during the reporting period. (23) The CLMS platform includes a database for tracking cases of child labor in artisanal mines, which can be accessed using cellphones to enable wide-reaching reporting. (23) However, research continued to indicate that coordination among government ministries remained weak, and funding and communication between government entities remains a challenge. (23)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of regional scope.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
Child Soldiers Action Plans	The DRC has several key policies to address children in armed conflict. The UEPN-DDR's National Disarmament, Demobilization, Repatriation, Reintegration, and Resettlement (DDR III) plan aims to provide rehabilitation and reintegration services to demobilized combatants, including children. (13,14,74,75) DDR III is implemented with UN and international support and within the 2013 Framework Agreement for Peace, Security, and Cooperation for the DRC and the Great Lakes Region. (74,76,77) Requires children separated from armed groups to be immediately transferred to UNICEF. (66) The Action Plan to End the Recruitment and Use of Child Soldiers is a UN-backed plan that aims to prevent and end the use of children in armed forces, provide support and reintegration services, pursue accountability for perpetrators, and create a partnership framework for the UN and the government. (78,79) Includes standard operating procedures for age verification to help the FARDC avoid underage recruitment. (13,14) In 2022, the MOD worked with the UN Organization Stabilization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo and UNICEF to identify and remove child recruits from FARDC and non-state armed groups. (6,80)
Action Plans to Address Child Labor in Mining	Includes the National Sectoral Strategy to Combat Child Labor in Artisanal Mines and Artisanal Mining Sites (2017–2025), which was developed by the Ministry of Mines and seeks to eradicate child labor in artisanal mining by 2025. The strategy aims to strengthen relevant laws, improve data collection on the prevalence of child labor in the mining sector, promote responsible sourcing regulations, improve child protection measures, and build stakeholder capacity to address these issues. (81) During the reporting period, CISTEMA officially launched the Child Labor Monitoring System to identify and remove children from mines. (23,24) The government is also cooperating with the Public-Private Alliance for Responsible Minerals Trade to end child labor in the cobalt sector. (82) Finally, the National Action Plan to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2012–2025) promotes the enforcement of laws prohibiting the worst forms of child labor, universal primary education, monitoring and evaluation efforts, and improved coordination of stakeholders. (6) Also seeks to raise awareness of the worst forms of child labor, empower communities to stop child labor practices, and provide prevention and reintegration services. (23) However, the government does not currently have policies to address child labor in the mining sector at the regional level. (23,24)
Agency for Prevention and the Fight Against Trafficking in Persons' (APLTP) National Action Plan (2020–2024); and new Agency for Youth and the Fight Against Sexual Violence and Trafficking in Persons	Addresses all forms of trafficking in persons, including foreign national and Congolese citizen survivors, as well as child soldiers. (82) Aims to prevent human trafficking through national awareness-raising and government training programs, survivor identification and care, and law enforcement cooperation and coordination. (82) During the reporting period, APLTP worked with the Ministry of Social Affairs, the Ministry of Health, and the Ministry of Labor to provide care to child trafficking survivors. In January 2022, APLTP also finalized its plan to distribute and train relevant actors on the newly adopted national standard operating procedures for victim identification. (23,24) During the reporting period, the APLTP was disbanded and in its place, the government created a new agency responsible for coordinating the government's antitrafficking response, the Agency for Youth and the Fight Against Sexual Violence and Trafficking in Persons. (69)

In 2022, President Tshisekedi announced a 4-year Partnership Compact at the Transforming Education Summit in New York. The Compact requires major reforms to teachers' workforce development, including payroll and training, that currently prevent many children in the DRC from attending school. (83) Although the DRC has developed a number of action plans to address child labor, only some received dedicated funding. (12,34,66)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem in all relevant sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Programs under the Ministry of Labor and Ministry of Mines	Includes Combating Child Labor in the Democratic Republic of the Congo's Cobalt Industry (2018–2022) (COTECCO), a $3.5 million project implemented by the ILO in Kolwezi, Lualaba Province, aimed at reducing child labor and improving working conditions in the mining sector; Supporting Progress on Labor Standards in the DRC, a $3 million project implemented by the ILO to enhance the capacity of the labor inspectorate and improve working conditions; and the Global Trace Protocol Project, a global project that seeks to increase downstream tracing of goods made by child labor and forced labor. (38) Under COTECCO, CISTEMA had appointed a supervisor for the new CLMS and trained 10 CISTEMA personnel on database procedures as of November 2022. CISTEMA was also working to create provincial commissions in 11 provinces to track child labor in mines by the end of the reporting period. (23,24)
UNICEF-Funded Education Programs	Under the auspices of the government's Free Primary Education Program, and with support from UNICEF and Global Partnership for Education, the Ministry of Primary, Secondary and Technical Education continued to provide free primary education for children up to the age of 12. (5,6,84,85) In 2022, UNICEF reached 56,000 out-of-school children through its alternative learning pathways. These children, who were unable to attend school due to conflict or natural disaster, were able to continue learning through educational programs on the radio, workbooks, and other learning tools. (83)
USAID-Funded Projects	The USAID-PACT Sustainable Mine Site Validation (SMSV, 2018-2022) is a 4-year cooperative agreement that aims to implement a technically and financially sustainable Mine Site Qualification and Validation model in North and South Kivu that adheres to the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development's Due Diligence Guidance for Responsible Supply Chains of Minerals; the International Conference on the Great Lakes Region; Regional Certification Mechanism; and DRC law. (86) SMSV also aims to develop strategies to fight child labor, including by raising awareness of child labor issues among local stakeholders, and by building the capacity of mining inspectors and local stakeholder committees to qualify and validate mine sites. (86) In addition, the Conflict-Free Gold Project seeks to create a transparent supply chain model for clean artisanal gold; Understanding Artisanal Mining Supply Chains and Conflict Financing in DRC is gathering reliable data to address 'conflict minerals' trade in eastern DRC; and the Program for the Development of Eastern Congo (P-DEC) aims to adopt bottom-up peacebuilding approaches to reduce conflict and bridge social divisions. (87-89)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (90,91)

The scope of child disarmament, demobilization, and reintegration programs remains insufficient, the reintegration process is slow, funding is inadequate, and collaboration between partners is weak. (13,14,45) Furthermore, children separated from armed groups remain vulnerable to stigmatization and re-recruitment. In particular, girls, who make up an estimated 30 to 40 percent of children associated with armed groups, often survive prolonged sexual and physical abuse in captivity and face social exclusion upon their return. (11,45,92,93) There is also a lack of efforts to assist street children and programs to provide support to children engaged in forced labor in agriculture, domestic work, mining, and commercial sexual exploitation. (6,10,11,45,92,93)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in the DRC (Table 11).

In 2022, the Republic of the Congo made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government established a Child Protection Action Plan, which includes measures for assisting child trafficking survivors. In addition, child labor data were published in June 2022, resulting from a nationwide study carried out by the Ministry of Social Affairs, Humanitarian Action and Solidarity in coordination with the United Nations Children's Fund. However, children in the Republic of the Congo are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and forced domestic work. Children also perform dangerous tasks such as working in mines and stone quarries. The government has yet to accede to the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons, and existing social programs are not sufficient to address the scope of child labor in all relevant sectors. In addition, the country lacks a national policy to address child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in the Republic of the Congo (ROC). Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	25.4 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	92.9
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	27.1
Primary Completion Rate (%)		67.1

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2018, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2023. (1)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 5 (MICS5), 2014–2015. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including in the production of manioc, peanuts, corn, plantains, sweet potatoes, and sugarcane (3-8)
Services	Directing road traffic (7)
	Fishing (4,6,9)
	Domestic work (3,4,6,9-11)
	Market vending and carrying heavy loads (4,5,11,12)
Industry	Working in mines and stone quarries, including extracting gold and breaking stones (7,11-13)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as the result of human trafficking (4,7,11,12,14-17)
	Forced labor in agriculture, including in the production of sugarcane and manioc, and fishing (3,5-8,11,16,18)
	Forced labor in market vending, working in bakeries, and working in stone quarries (3,5,11,16,18)
	Forced domestic work (7)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

In some rural areas, the majority ethnic Bantu population forces non-majority, indigenous children—such as from the Baka, Aka, and Kola groups—to perform agricultural work, including forced work, for low wages and under the threat of physical abuse. Within the ROC, internal child trafficking networks relocate children from rural areas to urban centers for forced labor in domestic work and market vending. (3,4,9,16) In urban environments, including the major cities of Pointe-Noire and Brazzaville, children from West Africa perform forced domestic work for West African families. (3,10,11) Additionally, many foreign children subjected to forced domestic work or commercial sexual exploitation in the ROC originate from the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC) and other West African nations, including Benin. (3,11,13,14)

The Constitution stipulates that education is free until age 16; in practice, however, some parents are required to pay for books, uniforms, and school fees, which may limit access to education for some children, especially indigenous children, who may also experience cultural and ethnic discrimination. (11,19-23) The government offers an expenses subsidy—"tuition waiver"—for indigenous children, but research indicated that the waiver program was not clearly communicated to families in remote areas, resulting in limited use during the reporting period. (4,8,11) The absence of sanitation facilities, a lack of teachers, and sexual violence in schools also pose barriers to education for some children, particularly in non-urban areas and among refugee populations. (11,20,24,25)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

The ROC has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in the ROC's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the absence of a list of hazardous work activities prohibited for children.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 116 of the Labor Code; Article 68 of the Child Protection Code (26,27)

* Country has no conscription (32)

Order No. 2224, which established a list of hazardous occupations or activities prohibited for children, is no longer in force. (11,33) The government has yet to develop a replacement hazardous work list, and therefore has no current national law or regulation regarding the types of hazardous work prohibited for children. (8)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MOL)	Enforces child labor laws. (34) Conducts initial inspections before referring cases to the Ministry of Justice, Human Rights and the Promotion of Indigenous People (MOJ) for prosecution, and offers support to victims afterwards. (4)
Ministry of Justice, Human Rights and the Promotion of Indigenous People (MOJ)	Enforces criminal laws against the worst forms of child labor. Dedicates two judges to child protection cases. (4,6)
Ministry of the Interior's National Police	Enforces criminal laws against the worst forms of child labor and conducts initial investigations into cases of forced labor, human trafficking, and the use of children in illicit activities. Conducts operations to rescue trafficked children used for labor exploitation. (3,4,6,9)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in the ROC took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MOL) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including a lack of sufficient resources.

During the reporting period, some government employees attended training with the ILO and the French Labor Inspectorate on workplace safety practices, workplace discrimination, and workers' rights. (8) However, inspectors did not receive any country-specific training on the enforcement of the ROC's child labor laws. (11) Further, training opportunities for labor inspectors, particularly for lower-level staff, are very limited due to a lack of resources, including budget shortfalls and a lack of internet access. (36,37) Research indicates that labor inspections are focused on large businesses and urban areas, while child labor occurs predominantly in rural areas, family enterprises, and the informal economy, including children working on their own account. (20) In addition, inspectors do not have access to government vehicles and rely on the employers whose businesses are being inspected to provide transportation. (8,38) Although the government lacks a formal process for referring children found in situations of child labor to appropriate social services providers, individual labor inspectors may leverage personal connections with their counterparts in other ministries to refer children found during inspections to social services. (3,4,9-11)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in the ROC took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient allocation of financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	No (4)	No (11)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (4)	Unknown (11)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (4)	Unknown (11)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (4)	Unknown (11)

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	No (4)	No (11,35)

The government provides funding for investigations, prosecutions, and convictions of suspected traffickers in the context of broader judicial and law enforcement programs. (10) In general, the Ministry of Justice, Human Rights and the Promotion of Indigenous People (MOJ) and the Ministry of Social Affairs, Humanitarian Action and Solidarity (MSA) experienced difficulties in prosecuting offenders due to a weak judicial system, poor record-keeping, a large backlog of cases in the high court, courts that convene infrequently and irregularly, and criminal law enforcement officials' and judges' uneven knowledge of anti-trafficking legislation and the Child Protection Code. (14,36)

The MSA, MOL, MOJ, and the National Police work together to enforce criminal laws against child trafficking; however, their efforts are limited to Brazzaville and Pointe-Noire. The National Police lack funds for fuel, new equipment, and training on new laws, and sometimes demand payments from NGOs and other stakeholders to assist in or execute operations to rescue victims of child trafficking. (4,6,8,11,36) Research found that many police officers did not understand what constituted criminal child labor violations, and that court and MOJ personnel did not fully understand or know how to handle such cases. (3)

The government has an anti-child trafficking agreement with the Government of Benin that enables criminal authorities and social services agencies to repatriate children found in the worst forms of child labor. (11,39)

However, during the reporting period, no new repatriations or prosecutions took place. (11) The National Commission to Fight Against Trafficking in Persons has the aim of coordinating efforts on trafficking in persons and forced labor at the federal level. Although Article 34 of the 2019 Law on Combating Trafficking in Persons provides a dedicated line item for funding the Commission, it did not meet, nor did it receive government funding during the reporting period. (11,28) Likewise, although there is a line item in the MSA's budget for activities to combat human trafficking, funds are disbursed irregularly or not at all. (36)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of adequate funding.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Anti-Trafficking Coordinating Committee for Pointe-Noire (MSA Task Force)	With UNICEF support, coordinates all efforts to address trafficking of West African children in Pointe-Noire. Chaired by the Ministry of Social Affairs, Humanitarian Action and Solidarity (MSA), with representatives from other government agencies and civil society organizations. (6,14,18) Lack of adequate resources and funding hinder the effective coordination of the MSA's anti-trafficking work. The Task Force has not been granted a specific operating budget since 2014 and did not meet during the reporting period due to lack of funding. (11) In addition, a local NGO has indicated that it refers cases to the Beninese consulate rather than the Task Force because the majority of victims are Beninese and the Task Force is unable to provide the NGO with financial support. (8,36)

Although the ROC has an Anti-Trafficking Coordinating Committee for Pointe-Noire to coordinate efforts to address human trafficking in a geographically limited area, it does not have coordinating mechanisms to address other forms of child labor at the national level.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including the lack of a national child labor action plan.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
Child Protection Action Plan (2022–2026)†	Updated and disseminated by the Legal Directorate for Child Protection under MOJ. Identifies specific measures for the Ministry to pursue in the area of child protection, including assisting child trafficking survivors. (17,40) The Directorate began implementing measures established in the plan during the first quarter of 2022, including human trafficking awareness campaigns in schools in major cities, and information sessions and trainings with the Ministry of Education. Other measures proposed in the plan include undertaking a census of relevant NGOs to improve coordination and providing training for Directorate personnel on human trafficking identification and protection techniques. (17,40)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (36)

In 2021, MSA drafted and disseminated an interagency 2022–2023 National Action Plan on Trafficking in Persons. However, the plan lacked final approvals from the Prime Minister's Office, Cabinet, and President during the reporting period. (8,17,41) Research found no evidence of a general policy on child labor. (33) In addition, the government has not included child prevention and elimination efforts in its Education Sector Strategy and research found no activities to implement this strategy during the reporting period. (8,42)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government participated in programs that may contribute to eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate efforts to address child labor in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Safety Net Program ( Lisungi ) and Additional Financing (2014–2027)	World Bank-funded social protection project that provides cash transfers to poor households in Brazzaville, Pointe-Noire, and Likouala, and encourages children's school attendance and use of health services. (25,43) During the reporting period, the government increased its participation in Lisungi and worked with the World Bank to expand the scope of social safety nets and protections. In 2022, the World Bank also provided an additional $83 million in funding, increasing the total program budget to $133 million. (11,25)
UNICEF Study on Street Children and Mobile Children, including Child Trafficking Victims (2021–2022)	A nationwide study conducted by UNICEF in collaboration with MSA, under the aegis of the ROC's National Development Plan (2018–2022). Aimed to provide an evidence base to inform social programs and strengthen child protection efforts, including for child trafficking survivors. (7) Published results in a research report released in June 2022, which includes key data about child labor and child trafficking in the country. (7,17)
Observe, Reflect, Act (ORA) Schools	Ministry of Education program supported by UNICEF, the EU, and World Food Program to improve access to education for indigenous children through a 2- or 3-year program to prepare them for schooling. (8,13,44) Sources indicate that ORA schools are funded primarily by international organizations, private companies, or the local communities, and that teachers are unpaid and work on a voluntary basis. (5,8,13,35,37,45-47)

‡The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (4)

Existing government programs are not sufficient to address the scope of child labor in all relevant sectors, such as domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation. (4)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in the ROC (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested

Although research found no evidence that child labor exists in the Cook Islands, in 2022, the government made minimal advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. The government partnered with the United Nations Children's Fund to launch the Pacific Islands Inclusive Educational Review to ensure that all children, including those with disabilities, have access to quality education. However, the government has not established adequate legal protections to prevent the worst forms of child labor. The law does not criminally prohibit the use, procuring, or offering of a child for prostitution; the production of pornography, or pornographic performances; or the use of children for illicit activities, including for the production and trafficking of drugs. Additionally, while the Cook Islands provides free education to citizens, permanent residents, and children of permanent residents, children outside of these categories must pay a school fee.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table I provides one key indicator on children's education in the Cook Islands.

Table I. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

The Ministry of Internal Affairs provides support for all related educational mandates, and the Ministry of Education has implemented the Inclusive Education Policy 2017 to ensure that children with disabilities and special learning needs are accommodated within the school system. (2-5) In 2022, the Government of the Cook Islands, in partnership with UNICEF, conducted a survey on the state of inclusive education. (6,7) This survey found that all schools have classrooms that are safe and accessible, and that all schools are equipped with sanitation facilities that are accessible for all. (7)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

The Cook Islands is self-governing in free association with New Zealand. (8,9) Since 1988, no treaty signed, ratified, accepted, approved, or acceded to by New Zealand extends to the Cook Islands, unless New Zealand acted expressly on behalf of the Cook Islands. (8) The Cook Islands has ratified some key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 2).

Table 2. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 3). However, gaps exist in the Cook Islands' legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of using children in illicit activities.

Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 23.1 of the Education Act (15)
Free Public Education	No		Article 22.2 of the Education Act (15)

* Country has no conscription (14)

† Country has no standing military (16)

New Zealand is responsible for the defense of the territory at the Cook Islands' request; therefore, the Islands have no standing military or conscription. (14,16) The Employment Relations Act 2012 prohibits children younger than age 13 from being employed and also prohibits a school-age person, defined as ages 13 to 16, from working during normal school hours, working for more than 10 hours a week outside of school hours, or doing work that is not considered light work. (10) However, the Cook Islands' legal framework does not determine the sectors in which light work is permitted. (10) The law also does not criminalize the use of children in illicit activities, particularly in the production and trafficking of drugs. (10,13) Although the Employee Relations Act prohibits children younger than age 18 from engaging in hazardous occupations, the government has not identified a list of prohibited hazardous occupations for children. (10) Additionally, while the Crimes Amendment Act 2004 prohibits child trafficking, it does not prohibit the commercial sexual exploitation of children, including the use or offering of a child for prostitution, the production of pornography, or pornographic performances. Additionally, the use of children for illicit activities, including for the production and trafficking of drugs is also not criminally prohibited. (13) While the Cook Islands provides free education to citizens, permanent residents, and children of permanent residents, children outside of these categories must pay a school fee. (15)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for enforcement actions to address child labor, including its worst forms. However, the Government of the Cook Islands has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 4).

Table 4. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Internal Affairs	Lead agency for implementation of the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child. (8) Made up of multiple divisions, including Labor, Welfare, and Consumer Services, among others. (17) The Labor Division's labor inspectors are responsible for monitoring labor protections, occupational safety, and health; enforcing labor laws; and providing child services. (8, 18) The division has three labor inspectors that handle all matters related to employment and consumer affairs. (8)
Cook Islands Police Service	In conjunction with the Crown Law office, responsible for enforcement of criminal laws against forced child labor, child trafficking, and criminal sexual exploitation. If cases are detected by the Ministry of Internal Affairs, they are referred to the police. (8)

Labor Law Enforcement

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for labor law enforcement actions to address child labor.

Criminal Law Enforcement

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for criminal law enforcement actions to address child labor.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for a mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor. However, the Government of the Cook Islands has established policies related to child labor (Table 5).

Table 5. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
United Nations Pacific Strategy (2018–2022)	The United Nations Pacific Strategy was a multinational strategic framework program comprising 14 South Pacific nations. The strategy aimed to address, develop, and implement strategic economic development priorities in the South Pacific, including eliminating child labor and the worst forms of child labor. (19) Although the strategy expired in 2022, it is still being supported by the Government of the Cook Islands. (8) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the United Nations Pacific Strategy during the reporting period.

The Cook Islands National Youth Policy (2021–2026) identifies priority areas for youth development, including education and work opportunities, health, and youth risk and resilience. (8, 20) However, the government has not included child labor prevention strategies in the Cook Islands National Youth Policy. (20) In addition, the Cook Islands' National Policy Framework for Children, which ran until 2021, has yet to be replaced but is still in force. (8)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for programs to address child labor.

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

Based on the reporting above, the following actions would advance the continued prevention of child labor in the Cook Islands (Table 6).

In 2022, Costa Rica made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government launched a plan to eradicate all forms of child labor in Costa Rica by 2025 and conducted virtual and in-person training to strengthen awareness, prevention, and the culture of reporting on child labor issues. The Office for the Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of the Adolescent Worker also provided assistance to minors withdrawn from exploitative labor by referring them to the cash transfer program for adolescent workers. However, children in Costa Rica are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in agriculture, including in the production of coffee. Lastly, research indicates that Costa Rica does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out inspection duties and it lacks sufficient financial resources to be able to carry out labor and criminal enforcement efforts.

Costa Rica

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

One third of children engaged in child labor in Costa Rica work in agriculture, with the highest incidences of child labor occurring in coastal regions, in the provinces of Limon, Puntarenas, and Guanacaste. (16,17) Children, including migrant children, are also subjected to commercial sexual exploitation, particularly in tourist destinations, border areas, and in the Northern and Pacific coastal zones. (12,14,18) In addition, migrant children, typically from Nicaragua and the Dominican Republic, are subjected to forced labor in agriculture, domestic work, and commercial sexual exploitation. Migrant, indigenous, and Afro-descendant children are particularly vulnerable to labor exploitation in Costa Rica. (11,12,18)

In June 2023, the National Statistics Institute published the 2022 National Household Survey, which included data on children between the ages of 12 and 17 and found that 0.7 percent of children within this age group were working. (6) This represented an additional decline from the 1.3 percent noted in the 2021 survey. The last comprehensive child labor study that included all relevant age ranges was conducted in 2016. (6)

Although preschool and general basic education are free and compulsory, children in rural areas, girls, LGBTQI+ youth, and children from indigenous and Afro-descendant communities face barriers to education access, including discrimination and gender stereotypes. (19,20)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Costa Rica has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Costa Rica's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including a lack of prohibitions related to the military recruitment of children by non-state armed groups.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

† Country has no standing military. (27)

‡ Age calculated based on available information. (20,27)

As Costa Rica's minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (20,27)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MTSS)	Monitors and enforces provisions in the Labor Code related to child labor, including by conducting school visits and worksite inspections. (20) Through the Office for the Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of the Adolescent Worker (OATIA), responds to and attempts to prevent child labor through policy development and public awareness campaigns. (30) Also provides referrals for those found to be in exploitative labor to government social services and prepares technical reports to inform policies and programs. (20)
Attorney General's Office	Enforces criminal laws protecting children, including laws prohibiting forced child labor, human trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation of children, and the use of children in illicit activities. (9,31) Coordinates efforts with the Judicial Investigative Police, the Immigration Police, the Uniformed Police, and municipal police forces. Also coordinates with other government agencies (the National Child Welfare Agency, the Social Security System, the Ministries of Education and Health, the Civil Registry, and other agencies), as well as with NGOs, international organizations, and diplomatic missions. (15)
Judicial Investigative Police	Investigate violations related to the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking, child commercial sexual exploitation, and the use of children in illicit activities. (11)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Costa Rica took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MTSS) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient resource allocation.

As of October 2022, labor inspectors identified 37 minor workers through inspections, while OATIA identified 150 cases of minors working, including 48 cases of children under 15 years of age while the rest of the cases were of children over 15 years of age found working under hazardous conditions. (6,8) The Office for the Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of the Adolescent Worker (OATIA) also reported providing assistance to these minors, by referring them to the Joint Social Welfare Institute (IMAS) so they can benefit from the cash transfer program for adolescent workers (MTSS-IMAS Agreement). (8) Additionally, the Labor Inspection Office identified three infractions related to child labor during worksite inspections, as well as eight illegal dismissals of adolescent workers. (8) Furthermore, the Labor Inspection Office trained 23 labor inspectors on labor laws from July 20 to August 31, 2022, and OATIA trained 90 officials on the worst forms of child labor. (8) However, enforcement of child labor laws, particularly in rural areas and in the informal sector, is reportedly challenging due to insufficient funds for travel, facilities, and per diem costs incurred during inspections. (15,19,32) Informal work is more common in agriculture than in other sectors in Costa Rica. (3,15) The Labor Inspection Office has indicated that it does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (5,19,32-34)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Costa Rica took actions to eliminate child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (15)	Yes (8)

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (15)	Yes (8)

† Data are from January 1, 2022, to November 30, 2022.

In 2022, the National Child Welfare Agency (PANI) reported 10 cases of human trafficking involving minor victims, including 1 case of labor exploitation, 1 case of domestic servitude, and 4 cases of commercial sexual exploitation. Additionally, as of November 2022, the National Coalition Against Migrant Smuggling and Trafficking in Persons (CONATT) Immediate Response Team had confirmed one case of labor exploitation of a child for selling candy in San Jose, one case of domestic servitude of a minor involving a Nicaraguan victim, and one case of a minor forced to sell drugs in Limon. (8) The migration authority, in coordination with CONATT member institutions, conducted virtual and in-person training for 1,060 individuals to strengthen awareness, prevention, and the culture of reporting. According to the CONATT report, this exceeded previously identified training participation goals by 51 percent. (35) In addition, the Costa Rican Tourism Institute conducted 18 virtual and in-person workshops on the Code of Conduct for the Protection of Children and Adolescents from Commercial Sexual Exploitation related to Travel and Tourism. (35) The government also made efforts to reduce the demand for participation in international sex tourism by working with international partners through programs such as the Angel Watch Program to deny entry to 76 foreign-registered sex offenders in 2022. (6)

Reports indicate that the judiciary, prosecutors, and the police require additional staff, training, and resources to identify victims of human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation, refer victims to appropriate social services, and investigate, prosecute, and convict perpetrators. (8, 11, 13, 15, 36) In addition, a lack of training and resources for municipal-level authorities hampered the abilities of local governments to respond to cases that could involve the worst forms of child labor. (18) Costa Rica does not have a database to track human trafficking cases, making it difficult to target enforcement and prevention efforts. (13)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of sufficient resources to ensure coordination among relevant agencies.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
MTSS Office for the Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of the Adolescent Worker (OATIA)	Coordinates government policies and programs to address child labor. (3) Oversees the Interinstitutional Coordinating Protocol for the Protection of Working Minors. (37) In 2022, supported MTSS in the launch of the Roadmap to Make Costa Rica a Country Free of Child Labor and Its Worst Forms 2021–2025. (8) Furthermore, it continued implementing projects in the Talamanca and Valle la Estrella areas in the territories of indigenous and African-descent within the Limon province to develop interinstitutional actions, provide direct assistance to the working minor populations, and refer them to local municipalities, education sector, and other resources that assist parents and members of the community with livelihood projects. It also benefited 130 working minors from the Huetar Caribbean region by providing conditional cash transfers of $120 per month to individuals under 18 years of age who work in conditions of poverty or extreme poverty. (8) Additionally, during the reporting period it provided training to 232 government officials and 41 individuals from the business sector through a virtual course entitled "Let's make a difference and protect the rights of working minors!" (8)

Reports indicate that coordination is lacking among institutions responsible for investigating the worst forms of child labor and those providing social services to victims. (15) OATIA has reported that its office needs additional staff to better assist children engaged in child labor and their families. In addition, OATIA lacks adequate transportation resources, which limits its ability to provide oversight of child labor programs. (6, 31)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
Roadmap to Make Costa Rica a Country Free of Child Labor and Its Worst Forms (2021–2025)†	Launched on April 25, 2022, and aims to eradicate all forms of child labor in Costa Rica by 2025 by strengthening efforts to identify and track hazardous child labor, and by increasing social awareness and collaborative efforts to address child labor. (8,15,38)
National Policy Against Trafficking in Persons (2020–2030)	Outlines goals and actions in the area of preventing and combating human trafficking and smuggling of migrants, as well as strengthening human trafficking investigations and sanctioning criminals. (39,40) In 2022, the government continued implementing this policy. (6)
Interinstitutional Coordinating Protocol for the Protection of Working Minors	Outlines provision of services for child laborers through collaboration between MTSS, the National Child Welfare Agency (PANI), the Ministry of Public Education, and the Joint Social Welfare Institute (IMAS), as well as their regional and local agencies and the private sector. (41) Reports indicate that the government continued carrying out activities implementing this policy during the reporting period. (6)

† Policy was launched during the reporting period.

In 2022, the Ministry of Planning and Economic Policy launched the new National Development Plan 2023-2026. (8) The plan establishes seven national goals related to economic growth, public debt, unemployment, poverty, inequality, citizen security, and decarbonization. The plan also includes a section on welfare, labor, and social inclusion with elements related to child protection and addressing the root causes of child labor. (6,8)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the accessibility of programs to all relevant groups.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Bridge to Development†	Aims to reduce poverty and eliminate vulnerability, including child labor, by providing social services to families in poor communities. (42,43) In 2022, the government reported the program was still active and that since its inception it had served 113,000 families. (6)
Houses of Joy ( Casas de la Alegría )†	Public-private initiative that seeks to protect and contribute to the development and social inclusion of children, particularly migrant and indigenous children, while their parents and relatives are working in the coffee harvest. (4,6,44) The centers offer free childcare, healthcare, meals, and social protection services and mitigate the risk of child labor on coffee plantations. (6) IMAS funds meals, caregiver salaries, and training; farm owners provide the land and classrooms, with financial contributions from UNICEF for building and teaching materials. (19,44) The program continued in 2022, and during the reporting period expanded to a total of 30 centers. (6,8)
Let's Get Ahead Program ( Avancemos )†	IMAS program that provides monthly conditional cash transfers to low-income families to keep children in school and out of exploitative work. (3,45) Reporting indicates that this program was active during the reporting period. (6)

† Program is funded by the Government of Costa Rica.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (46-48)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Costa Rica (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2022
	Raise the minimum age for work from 15 to 17 to align with the compulsory education age.	2020 – 2022
Enforcement	Publish information on the number of child labor violations for which penalties were imposed and collected.	2017 – 2022
	Allocate sufficient resources to ensure routine labor inspections in rural areas and the informal sector, including child labor inspections, particularly in agriculture.	2015 – 2022
	Increase the number of labor inspectors from 105 to 167 to ensure adequate coverage for the labor force of approximately 2.5 million people.	2015 – 2022
	Ensure that the judiciary, prosecutors, municipal authorities, and the police have sufficient staff, training, and resources to investigate, prosecute, and convict perpetrators of human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children, and identify victims of child trafficking and refer them to appropriate social services.	2017 – 2022
	Develop a mechanism to properly track human trafficking cases to improve enforcement and prevention efforts.	2019 – 2022
Coordination	Strengthen coordination and information sharing between institutions responsible for investigating child labor and providing social services to victims.	2015 – 2022
	Increase transportation and human resources for the Office for the Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of the Adolescent Worker so that the office can improve program oversight.	2015 – 2022
Social Programs	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education accessible for all children, including children in rural areas, girls, LGBTQI+ youth, children from indigenous and Afro-descendant communities, and migrant children.	2015 – 2022

In 2022, Côte d'Ivoire made significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Ivorian government conducted 9,471 inspections, a 234 percent increase from the previous year, and recruited 100 additional child labor agents to track instances of child labor on cocoa farms and in production zones. The government also officially created the National Sustainable Cocoa Committee (Comité National du Cacao Durable), which is designed to implement the National Strategic Plan to address deforestation, child labor, and the low incomes of cocoa farmers. In addition, the government opened 91 new secondary schools, 517 new primary schools, and 227 new preschools during the reporting period. However, children in Côte d'Ivoire are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced labor in the harvesting of cocoa and coffee. The government does not have a mechanism to assess civil penalties for labor law violations, and the lack of financial resources and personnel may have hindered labor law enforcement efforts.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Côte d'Ivoire. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report. In addition, NORC at the University of Chicago released a report detailing findings from a sectorally representative survey conducted in Ghana and Côte d'Ivoire during the cocoa harvesting season of 2018–2019. This report found an increase in child labor (and hazardous child labor) in cocoa production during the 10-year timeframe since the survey in 2008–2009. (1)

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	25.6 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	70.1
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	21.8
Primary Completion Rate (%)		79.6

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of cocoa, including burning† and clearing fields;† cutting down trees† to expand cocoa plantations; exposure to agrochemicals;† harvesting, drying, and fermenting cocoa beans; using sharp tools to break pods;† and transporting heavy loads† of cocoa pods and water (1,4-9)
	Production of cereals and coffee, including applying chemical fertilizers,† spraying pesticides,† cutting down trees,† and burning† and clearing fields† (5,6,10,11)
	Production of palm oil, honey, cashews, and rubber (5-7,9,12,13)
	Fishing, including deep sea diving;† repairing and hauling nets; and cleaning,† salting, drying, descaling, and selling fish (5,6,11)
	Production of charcoal† (10)
	Forestry (7,9,14)

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

Sector/Industry	Activity
Industry	Mining,† including crushing and transporting stones, blasting rocks, digging, working underground, sieving, and extracting gold with mercury or cyanide (6,7,11,15)
	Manufacturing, including repairing automobiles (7,11)
	Construction,† activities unknown (11)
Services	Domestic work (3,5-7,9,11,16)
	Working in transportation and carrying goods‡ (4,6,7,9-11,17)
	Street vending and commerce (5-7,9-11,15,17)
	Work in restaurants (5,9,12,15)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Mining, carpentry, construction, domestic work, street vending, restaurants, and agriculture, including in the production of cocoa, coffee, cotton, and rubber, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,6,7,9,10,12)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (6,7,9,13,15)
	Use in illicit activities, including drug trafficking (9,18)
	Begging as talibés by Koranic teachers, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (19)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Due to security issues in both Mali and Burkina Faso, Côte d'Ivoire has an estimated 13,214 refugees (2,489 households), of which an estimated 59 percent are children. Children are also brought to Côte d'Ivoire from those countries for commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor, including in begging, cocoa production, and artisanal mining. (5,9,10,12,16,20) Children from Côte d'Ivoire are also subjected to human trafficking for forced labor in domestic work within the country and North Africa. (5,9,10,12,16,20)

School is mandatory for children ages 6 to 16 in Côte d'Ivoire. Although the Law on Education provides for free education, students are often required to pay for textbooks and uniforms, which may be prohibitive to some families. (5,7,21-24) In addition, birth registration or identity documents are required for students to take entrance exams for secondary school, posing a barrier to continued education beyond the primary level. (6,9,25)

A shortage of teachers, poor school infrastructure, lack of transportation systems in rural areas, and inadequate sanitation facilities have negatively impacted children's ability to attend school. (5,6,9) Research also suggests that some students are physically and sexually abused at school, which may deter some students from attending school. Because of this, roughly one in four girls in Côte d'Ivoire are not able to attend primary school. (5,7,26,27) In addition, there remains insufficient classroom space in rural areas for the number of students enrolled. (7)

Results from the International Cocoa Initiatives' Child Labor Monitoring and Remediation System indicate that the number children working in hazardous working conditions increased, which is at least partially attributed to the COVID-19 pandemic. (28) Research showed that despite an upward spike in child labor during the partial government shutdown as a reaction to the pandemic, in cocoa-producing areas the level of child labor returned to pre-pandemic levels at the end of the partial government shut down. (29) Research also indicates that between 2008 and 2019, there were significant increases in cocoa production and, during that time, child labor in high-producing zones remained stable. However, in small- and medium-producing zones, child labor increased. (1,8) During this time, however, there was an increase in children attending schools in cocoa-growing areas. (1,8)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Côte d'Ivoire has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government's laws and regulations are in line with relevant international standards (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Côte d'Ivoire

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Employment and Social Protection (MEPS)	Develops, proposes, and enforces all labor laws, including those related to child labor. (5,7,38,39) The Anti-Trafficking Unit, a Sub-Directorate, and the Ministry of Women, Family, and Children provide support to survivors of child trafficking and other forms of child labor. (5,16) MEPS has authority over the child labor monitoring system ( Système d'Observation et de Suivi du Travail des Enfants en Côte d'Ivoire [SOSTECI]), which enables communities to collect and analyze statistical data on the worst forms of child labor. As of 2022, there are 20,000 local SOSTECI committees in operation for the purpose of improving local coordination and exchange of information on child labor and child welfare in cocoa production areas. (5-7,11,17) The General Labor Directorate in Abidjan coordinates the regional offices and their efforts to address child labor. (7,18,40)
Ministry of the Interior and Security	Through its Anti-Trafficking Unit, leads efforts to enforce criminal laws against child trafficking. Through its Vice Squads ( Brigades Mondaine ), addresses commercial sexual exploitation, including the exploitation of children. (5,9) Through its Unit for Combating Transnational Organized Crime, supports UNODC's West African Coast Initiative, which aims to improve cross-border cooperation to address crimes, including human trafficking. (37,41)
Ministry of Justice and Human Rights	Investigates and prosecutes crimes related to child labor, including its worst forms. Through its Directorate of Judicial Protection of Childhood and Youth, assists with investigations and implements the ministry's child protection policy. (5,9) The Ministry of Justice and Human Rights is charged with rehabilitating children who have been detained or arrested. (7)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Côte d'Ivoire took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Employment and Social Protection that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient human resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$305,588 (6)	$305,600 (9)

During the reporting period, the government recruited 100 additional child labor agents to track instances of child labor on cocoa farms and production zones, though these agents have not begun working in the field as of yet. In addition, the government also provided motorcycles, fuel, and computers to 30 local labor inspectorates to help with inspections throughout the country. (9)

Research indicates that Côte d'Ivoire does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (42) The labor inspectorate suffers from a lack of resources, including insufficient staff. (6,38,39) While some labor inspections are done in the informal sector, the majority of the inspections are done in the formal sector, in which child labor is less likely to occur. (7,9,43)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Côte d'Ivoire took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient human resource allocation.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (6)	Yes (9)
Number of Investigations	789 (9)	832 (9)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	789 (9)	587 (9)

Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (6)	Yes (9)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (6)	Yes (9)

During the reporting period, Ivoirian Police Forces arrested four child traffickers and rescued nine Togolese minors, all of whom were under 18 years old. The accused in this case are still awaiting trial. (9) However, the Anti-Trafficking Unit continued to lack the resources and personnel to adequately enforce criminal child labor laws throughout the country. (6,9)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Monitoring Committee on Actions to Combat Trafficking, Exploitation, and Child Labor (CNS)	Supervises, monitors, and evaluates all government activities related to child labor and child trafficking, including making policy recommendations and harmonizing laws with international conventions. Chairs the Interministerial Committee for the Fight against Trafficking, Exploitation, and Child Labor (CIM), and provides medical and social assistance to survivors of child labor and trafficking. (5,44,45) Chaired by the First Lady of Côte d'Ivoire, and comprises both international and domestic partners. (5,15,16,44,46) During the reporting period, CNS reported that 2,116 children (1,576 boys, and 540 girls) were removed from situations of trafficking, exploitation, violence, and child labor. Once these children were removed, they were evaluated by social workers who could help determine the type of care they needed. (9) The type of care provided included shelters, healthcare, and educational and psychological services. (9)

During the reporting period, the government officially created the National Sustainable Cocoa Committee (Comité National du Cacao Durable), which is designed to implement the National Strategic Plan to address deforestation, child labor, and low incomes of cocoa farmers. (9)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking, Exploitation, and Child Labor (2019–2023)	Coordinated by CNS and the Inter-Ministerial Committee for the fight against Trafficking, Exploitation, and Child Labor, which aims to significantly reduce the number of children engaged in the worst forms of child labor by drawing on best practices and building on lessons learned from the implementation of previous national action plans. Priorities include increasing efforts to mobilize resources at the national level, reinforcing regional cooperation and public-private partnerships, incorporating worst forms of child labor considerations into national and sector-specific programming, and reinforcing the monitoring and evaluation of the National Strategy for the fight against human trafficking and the worst forms of child labor. (47) During the reporting period, the policy remained active and continued all of its previous efforts. (9)

Côte d'Ivoire

Policy	Description & Activities
Policies Involving SOSTECL	Aim to strengthen and expand SOSTECL. Includes a partnership agreement between the International Cocoa Initiative and CNS in support of the National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking, Exploitation, and Child Labor. (5) The Decent Work Country Program (2017–2020), in collaboration with ILO, aimed to improve working conditions, strengthen SOSTECL, and address the worst forms of child labor. (48,49) The National Development Plan (2016–2020) allocated almost $6.1 million over 5 years to conduct diagnostic studies on child labor and child trafficking, construct three child protection centers, and develop a national action plan to address human trafficking, particularly of girls. (50) During the reporting period, the government organized multiple workshops on SOSTECL in high-risk areas which included Nawa, Vavoua, Minignan, Bagoué, Sassandra, Bouna, San-Pedro, Issia, Haut Sassandra, and Toumodi. (9)
Labor Inspection Strategy (2019–2023)	Through the Ministry of Employment and Social Protection, with assistance from ILO, aims to enable the government to ensure the application of legal provisions for the improvement of working conditions and the removal of children from work through the inspection of worksites, the provision of counseling, and monitoring. (14,43) In 2022, undertook activities related to building the capacity of the inspectors, monitoring inspection units, and raising public awareness. (9)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (51)

During the reporting period, Ghana and Côte d'Ivoire, along with EU stakeholders, supported the Alliance on Sustainable Cocoa, which creates an outline for improving the economic, social, and environmental sustainability of cocoa production and trade, including eliminating child labor. (52,53)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate programs to address the full scope of the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
ACCEL AFRICA	The program was co-funded by the EU, under the Project "Accelerate action for the elimination of child labor in Africa's supply chains" ( Accélérer l'action pour l'élimination du travail des enfants dans les chaînes d'approvisionnement en Afrique , or ACCEL AFRICA). UNICEF and ILO representatives provided participants with strategies for synchronizing efforts to eradicate child labor. (54) During the reporting period, the government organized a workshop on child labor for 50 labor inspectors. (9)
Industry-Funded Projects	Aim to increase sustainability in the cocoa sector, improve farmer livelihoods and access to education—including increasing access to education opportunities for children—and address the worst forms of child labor in cocoa-growing areas. Some projects support the spirit of the 2010 Declaration. (48) In November 2017, the Governments of Ghana and Côte d'Ivoire signed an agreement to fight deforestation and protect the cocoa supply chain. During the reporting period, the government partnered with private sector companies to implement the Cocoa for Good Strategy, a $500 million investment to make cocoa production in Ghana and Côte d'Ivoire more sustainable and transparent. (48,52,55) In addition, private industry continued to implement the Cocoa and Forests Initiative to this end. (52,55)
World Bank-Funded Projects	Aim to improve access to education and provide poverty relief. Includes the Productive Social Safety Net (2015–2024), which has supported 127,000 beneficiary households (representing 766,253 individuals), of which 47,435 are women, the main recipients of the cash transfers. In addition, the Unique Social Registry currently counts 315,925 poor and vulnerable individuals, while progress is being made in terms of timely digital payments to beneficiaries. (56,57)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (6)

In 2022, the government signed the U.S.-Côte d'Ivoire Child Protection Compact Partnership, a non-binding multi-year $10 million plan to address child sex trafficking and forced child labor in Côte d'Ivoire. The government also opened 91 new secondary schools, 517 new primary schools, and 227 new preschools during the reporting period. (9,13) In addition, the government increased its education budget by 11 percent from $1.8 million to $1.97 million in 2022, and increased its social services program budget, which addresses social inequalities and looks to reduce poverty, to $5.5 billion. Moreover, the government continued its national project to map the locations of cocoa farms throughout the country. (9,13) Approximately 350,000 out of the estimated 993,000 cocoa farmers have registered. Finally, to address the issue of birth registration, the government partnered with UNICEF to implement new birth registration mechanisms to ensure that children are registered immediately at birth, or during vaccination campaigns. (9,13) Because of this, the government decreased the number of children without birth certificates from 914,913 students in 2020–2021 to 672,010 students in 2022. (9,25)

Despite an increase in activities, the scope of existing programs, including in cocoa, is insufficient to fully address the extent of the child labor problem in Côte d'Ivoire. (5,6) Current programming is not expansive enough, evidenced by the fact the child labor prevalence rate has not declined. The industry-funded NORC report released in October 2020 found that programs like the Child Labor Monitoring and Remediation System, access to quality to education, and programs to increase farmer yields and household income need to be scaled and expanded to impact more families. (1)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Côte d'Ivoire (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Establish a mechanism to assess penalties for child labor violations.	2014 – 2022
	Ensure that the labor inspectorate receives a sufficient amount of funding to conduct inspections and investigations throughout the country, including in the informal sector.	2014 – 2022
	Ensure that criminal law enforcement agencies receive the resources and personnel needed to adequately enforce laws related to the worst forms of child labor.	2018 – 2022
	Increase the number of labor inspectors from 344 to 624 to ensure adequate coverage of the labor force of approximately 9.4 million people.	2009 – 2022
Social Programs	Improve the accessibility and transportation capacity of schools; ensure that schools are free of physical and sexual abuse; and increase the number of teachers, textbooks, sanitation facilities, and schools, particularly in rural areas. Ensure that all children have access to birth registration and identity documents.	2011 – 2022
	Expand existing programs, including the Child Labor Monitoring and Remediation System, and institute new ones aimed at addressing the full scope of the child labor problem in Côte d'Ivoire, including outside the cocoa sector.	2009 – 2022
	Ensure that survivors of the worst forms of child labor are able to access social services throughout the country.	2015 – 2022
	Ensure that there are sufficient classrooms available for all students enrolled.	2020 – 2022

In 2022, Djibouti made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government signed a presidential decree mandating the establishment of the National Committee to Fight Against Trafficking and Similar Practices and, in partnership with the International Organization for Migration, established and opened the Center for Unaccompanied Children and Vulnerable Migrants, which provides mental health and medical support, legal assistance, shelter, food, and clothes to vulnerable young migrants. The Ministry of Women and Families also conducted a study on children living in the street in Djibouti City, which included information about the prevalence and conditions of forced child labor. However, children in Djibouti are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in street work. Minimum age provisions apply only to children with a formal employment contract, which does not comply with international standards. In addition, the government did not make adequate efforts to enforce laws related to the worst forms of child labor due to a lack of financial and human resource allocations and reporting mechanisms. Finally, the government did not publish data on criminal law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Djibouti. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		64.8

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2021, published by the UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2023. (1)

Source for all other data: Data were unavailable from International Labor Organization's analysis, 2023. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Caring for livestock, including goats (3)
Industry	Construction, activities unknown (4)
Services	Domestic work, † activities unknown (4-6)
	Street work, including vending, shining shoes, washing cars, and begging (4,6-8)
	Working in restaurants, small shops, and family businesses (4-6)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor ‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (9)
	Forced domestic work and begging (6,9-12)
	Use in illicit activities, including the selling of marijuana (3)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Continued conflict between Russia and Ukraine—which, together, account for the majority of Djibouti's wheat imports—and continued drought in the region have led to rural workers losing livelihoods and rising commodity prices throughout the country. Reports claim that this has subjected roughly 49,000 women and children to higher risks of labor exploitation, including child labor, and has greatly increased the risk of children dropping out of school. (13) Djibouti is vulnerable to the effects of a changing climate, and children will become increasingly vulnerable to exploitation as the country experiences more climate change-related weather events and trends such as droughts, floods, and sea level rise. (14)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Reports suggest that children, including undocumented migrant girls, are vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation in Djibouti City, along the Ethiopia-Djibouti trucking corridor, and in Obock, the primary point of arrival and departure for Yemen. (9,12) Djibouti is a common transit country for mixed-migration flows from Ethiopia, Yemen, the East Africa region, and the Arabian Peninsula, and children from these regions are vulnerable to exploitation. (4,8,12) During the reporting period, the Ministry for Women and Families conducted a study on over 1,000 children forced to beg in Djibouti City, revealing that an overwhelming majority of the children—over 90 percent—were from Ethiopia and Somalia. (6)

During the reporting period, the government completed and inaugurated a new kindergarten school in the Markazi refugee camp. Girls, children living in rural Djibouti, children with disabilities, children in nomadic families, and child refugees continue to have low rates of school enrollment, making these children more vulnerable to child labor. (15-18) Although primary and middle schools are tuition free, other school-related expenses may prevent children from attending school. (19) Requirements for documentation and birth registration can be barriers to accessing education because in practice, migrant children and refugees without UNHCR documentation cannot attend public schools, and children in rural areas and street children without birth documents can attend school but cannot take exams. (6) For children born in rural areas and street children, there is often a financial barrier in obtaining birth documentation later in childhood, preventing them from accessing all benefits of public schooling and thus increasing their vulnerability to child labor. (5,6,20) Registered refugee children are integrated into local schools while undocumented migrant children and refugees awaiting status determination have access to schools in refugee camps. (4,6)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Djibouti has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Djibouti's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the lack of prohibitions related to the use of a child for prostitution.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	16	Article 5 of the Labor Code (21)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 108 and 110 of the Labor Code (21)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 110 of the Labor Code (21)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 2 and 290 of the Labor Code; Article 23 of the Law Regarding Terrorism and Other Serious Crimes (21,22)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 1 and 5–7 of the Law on the Fight Against the Trafficking of Persons and the Illegal Smuggling of Migrants; Article 23 of the Law Regarding Terrorism and Other Serious Crimes (22,23)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 394, 396, 462, and 463 of the Penal Code; Articles 1 and 5–8 of the Law on the Fight Against the Trafficking of Persons and the Illegal Smuggling of Migrants (23,24)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 355, 356, and 461 of the Penal Code (24)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 1 of the National Army Amendment Decree (25)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Articles 149–151 and 461 of the Penal Code (24)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Articles 4 and 14 of the Law on the Orientation of the Education System (26)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 16 of the Law on the Orientation of the Education System (26)

* Country has no conscription (27)

The Labor Code's minimum age provision applies only to children who perform work under a formal employment agreement, which does not conform to international standards requiring the protection of all children under the law establishing a minimum age for work. (21,24) In addition, while Djibouti's Labor Code contains a hazardous work list, it only applies to domestic work, work in hotels, and work in bars, omitting hazardous activities like street work, in which children are known to be engaged in the country. Article 111 in the Labor Code grants authority to the Minister of Labor to publish a hazardous work list enumerating additional hazardous sectors, which has not yet been done. (21,24) Furthermore, laws do not specifically criminalize the use of a child for prostitution. (23,24)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor (MOL)	Enforces all labor laws, including child labor laws and regulations. (10) Through its General Inspectorate of Labor and Social Laws, regulates youth employment. (5)
Criminal Enforcement Agencies	Enforces criminal laws and investigates crimes related to child labor through the Djibouti National Police, including the Brigade for Minors. (10) Through the National Commission on Human Rights receives complaints and investigates cases of human rights violations, including child labor. (28) Assists survivors in obtaining legal aid to prosecute violators. (28)
Ministry of Justice	Prosecutes child labor cases referred by MOL. (10)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Labor Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether labor law enforcement agencies in Djibouti took actions to address child labor (Table 6).

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$112,994 (4)	Unknown (29)
Number of Labor Inspectors	5 (4)	5 (4,29)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	Yes (21)	Yes (6,21)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	Yes (4)	Yes (6,29)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksite	6 (4)	Unknown (6)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	14 (4)	Unknown (6)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	0 (4)	Unknown (6)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	0 (4)	Unknown (6)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (4)	Yes (6)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (4)	Yes (6,29)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (21)	Yes (21)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (4)	Yes (6)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	No (4)	No (4)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	No (4)	No (4)

Previous years' reports show that the labor inspectorate conducts an exceptionally low number of worksite inspections, which may impede the enforcement of child labor laws. The enforcement of child labor laws is also challenging due to a lack of child labor-specific training for inspectors and minimal resources for transportation, limiting the inspectorate's ability to conduct inspections outside of Djibouti City. (4) While the law includes a mechanism to impose monetary civil penalties, in practice, the labor inspectorate currently issues warning letters outlining how to remedy the situation in order to avoid a penalty. There is no formal mechanism to refer children found during labor inspections to appropriate social services. (4,6)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether criminal law enforcement agencies in Djibouti took actions to address child labor (Table 7).

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Unknown (4)	Unknown (6)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (4)	Unknown (6)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (4)	Unknown (6)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (4)	Unknown (6)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (4)	Unknown (6)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (4)	Yes (4)

Research indicates that NGOs in Djibouti communicate human trafficking indicators to the police, who refer these cases to the prosecutor's office. (3,30) During the reporting period, the government did not provide information on criminal law enforcement for inclusion in this report.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including clarity of institutional coordination mandates among government ministries to address all forms of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Council for Children	Assesses progress on issues pertaining to children and proposes policy and strategic guidelines. (8,31) Headed by the Prime Minister and includes public stakeholders, civil society partners, associations, and non-governmental organizations involved in the field of childhood. (31) Research was unable to determine whether the National Council for Children was active during the reporting period.

During the reporting period, the government mandated the establishment of a National Committee to Fight Against Human Trafficking and Similar Practices, intended to prioritize the issue of trafficking in persons and to mandate a comprehensive, inter-ministerial approach to preventing and eliminating trafficking in persons. (6,29,32) However, while various bodies coordinate efforts to address child protection and trafficking in persons, research was unable to determine if there were other active coordinating bodies dedicated to preventing and eliminating other forms of child labor. (4,5,33)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including the lack of a policy to address child labor in its worst forms.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Action Plan on Trafficking in Persons (2015–2022)	Aims to strengthen the legislative framework to address and prevent human trafficking, protect and assist human trafficking survivors, and establish a national referral mechanism between law enforcement officials and social services providers. (34) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Action Plan on Trafficking in Persons during the reporting period.
Child Protection Policies	Includes the National Child Policy (2022–2032), which sets out fundamental rights for children—including the right to education and the right to health—and mobilizes national resources toward these ends. (35) The National Strategic Plan for Childhood in Djibouti (2022–2026) provides political and strategic guidelines for implementing the country's child protection policy. (29,36) Both policies are coordinated by the Ministry of Women and the Family. (35) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement these policies during the reporting period.
National Strategy for Migration	Promotes aid and livelihoods for migrants in Djibouti and raises awareness for the rights and humanitarian needs of migrants. Facilitates coordination between humanitarian partners and the government through the National Coordination Office for Migration. (37) Launched in 2021 with the assistance of the IOM. (37) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Strategy for Migration during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (18,36,38)

During the reporting period, the Government of Djibouti approved and implemented the Master Plan for Education and Training (2021–2035) and its implementation plan, the Action Plan for Education and Training (2021–2025). These plans aim to expand inclusive and equitable education to all children in Djibouti, increase access to vocational training, achieve universal basic education, and to develop the preschool education system. (18,29,36) The plans bring together various ministries to ensure cohesive implementation, planning, and monitoring of their programs. (17) The Ministry of Social Affairs and Solidarity, in partnership with an international NGO, performed an evaluation of the National Social Protection Strategy (2018–2022) to develop terms of reference for the creation of a new strategy. The original strategy sought to broaden social protections for vulnerable Djiboutians, including children and youth from families experiencing poverty, by collecting data on the needs of these children and calling for increased investments in child welfare. (38,39) Despite these efforts, research found no evidence of a comprehensive policy to address all forms of child labor. (4,29)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to eliminating child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Djibouti

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Ministry of Women and Families Programs†	Includes programs developed to provide children and families from vulnerable groups with resources to reduce their economic and social vulnerabilities, such as: the Social Assistance Program, which provides children and their families with education and in-kind support; the Support Project for Girls and Women in Precarious Situations, a multi-sectoral program which provides girls with education and training; the Country Strategic Option Program (2019–2024), a rural poverty-reduction program; and Djibouti's Support Program for Children with Academic Difficulties, a program providing academic support for children from low-income families. (40,41) An NGO implements a memoranda of understanding with the Ministry of Women and Families and the National Commission of Human Rights to provide psycho-social support and monitoring for children housed at an overnight shelter. (42) During the reporting period, the Ministry developed a guide on foster families with NGO partners, focused on minimizing child abuse, exploitation, and abandonment. (17)
IOM Center for Unaccompanied Children and Vulnerable Migrants*	Established during the reporting year as a result of a partnership between the IOM, the Ministry for Women and Family, and the Ministry of the Interior. Provides mental health services, medical support, legal assistance, and basic needs to young and child migrants, who are often vulnerable to exploitation. (6,32,43) Established in conjunction with the National Referencing Mechanism for Trafficking Victims, which allows civil society organizations and NGOs to refer people impacted by human trafficking directly to law enforcement agencies. During the reporting year, the Center provided shelter and services to 21 Ethiopian migrant children in Djibouti. (6,32)
World Bank-Funded Programs	The Integrated Cash Transfer and Human Capital Project, which ended in 2022, sought to expand the social safety net system and provide basic services in targeted poor communities, primarily through conditional cash transfers. (5,44,45) The Expanding Opportunities for Learning Project (2019–2024), a $30 million project, supports Djibouti's efforts to expand access to quality education for 35,000 at-risk or underserved children, including girls, refugees, and disabled students. The Government of Djibouti and the International Development Association (IDA) co-finance the program, which aims to expand access to and improve retention in primary and lower secondary education for disadvantaged and vulnerable population groups. (46,47) The project also plans to build the capacity of teachers and administrators in underserved areas. (46,48,49) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement these programs during the reporting period.

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Djibouti.

‡ The government had other programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (17,39,50)

Research found no evidence of programs to assist children involved in domestic work, street work, and commercial sexual exploitation. (6)

Although research found no evidence that child labor exists in Dominica, in 2022, the government made minimal advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. The government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to preventing child labor, including fundraising for the Education Trust Fund and providing meals to students. However, the government's ability to prevent children from being subjected to the worst forms of child labor is limited because existing laws do not determine the types of hazardous work prohibited for children and the government has not enacted laws explicitly prohibiting the use of children in pornography. In addition, information on Dominica's criminal law enforcement efforts was not publicly released.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides one key indicator on children's education in Dominica.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Primary Completion Rate (%)		101.8

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2021 published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2023. (1)

Children from the Kalinago community face barriers to accessing secondary education, including a lack of schools and long travel outside of the territory to attend school, which could make them more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. (2-4)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Dominica has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 2).

Table 2. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 3). However, gaps exist in Dominica's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for hazardous work.

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Articles 2 and 46 of the Education Act (5)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No	14	Articles 2, 4, and 5 of the Employment of Women, Young Persons and Children Act (6)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No		Articles 2, 4, 5, and 7(1) of the Employment of Women, Young Persons and Children Act (6)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	No		Article 4 of the Constitution; Sections 2, 8, 10, and 13 of the Transnational Organized Crime (Prevention and Control) Act (7,8)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Sections 2, 8, 10, and 13 of the Transnational Organized Crime (Prevention and Control) Act (8)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Sections 2, 8, 10, and 13 of the Transnational Organized Crime (Prevention and Control) Act; Article 18 of the Sexual Offenses Act (8,9)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No		Article 16(5) of the Drugs (Prevention of Misuse) Act (10)

Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A†
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Articles 2 and 27 of the Education Act (5)
Free Public Education	No		Articles 15 and 16 of the Education Act (5)

† Country has no standing military (11)

Pursuant to Section 7(1) of the Employment of Women, Young Persons and Children Act, children under age 18 are prohibited from working at night, unless they are working with family members. However, the law does not otherwise prohibit the employment of children in work that is likely to jeopardize their health, safety, or morals. (6) Specifically, Dominica does not have national laws or regulations that comprehensively define the types of hazardous work prohibited for children. The government also has not established a sufficient minimum age of 18 for hazardous work. (8) Moreover, Article 46 of the Education Act prohibits the employment of children ages 5 to 16 during the school year, but allows students ages 14 and older to work during school vacations or in school-sponsored employment training programs without defining the conditions, specific activities, or number of hours permissible for light work. (5) Dominica's laws related to forced labor are not sufficient because they do not criminally prohibit forced labor except when it results from human trafficking. In addition, laws related to child trafficking are not sufficient because they are limited to international human trafficking. (8) The law does not sufficiently prohibit commercial sexual exploitation because the use of children in prostitution, pornography, and pornographic performances is not criminally prohibited. (3) Further, the law criminalizing the use of children as carriers for drug trafficking is insufficient because it does not cover the use, procuring, and offering of children for the production and trafficking of drugs. (10) Laws providing for free basic education do not meet international standards because they permit schools to charge tuition fees for some students who reside in Dominica but are not citizens. (5)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for enforcement actions to address child labor, including its worst forms. However, the government has established relevant institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 4).

Table 4. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Labor Division, Ministry of National Security and Legal Affairs*	Documents and investigates cases involving child labor and refers violations to the Dominica Police Force and the Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions. Refers cases to the Ministry of Health and Social Services and the Ministry of Culture, Youth, Sports and Community Development, which have limited social welfare and outreach programs. (12) In December 2022, Dominica created the Ministry of Labor, Public Service Reform, Social Partnership, Entrepreneurship and Small Business Development. At this time, it has not been reported what responsibilities the Ministry will take over from the Labor Division in the Ministry of Justice, Immigration and National Security. (12)
Police Force	Enforces criminal laws, including those related to child labor. (12)

* Agency responsible for child labor enforcement was created during the reporting period.

Labor Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether labor law enforcement agencies in Dominica took actions to address child labor. (12)

(12)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether criminal law enforcement agencies in Dominica took actions to address child labor. (12)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for a mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for programs to address child labor. However, in 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to preventing child labor (Table 6), although gaps exist in these programs, including a lack of implementation.

Table 6. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Basic Needs Trust Fund	Caribbean Development Bank-implemented program supervised by the Ministry for Ecclesiastical Affairs, Family, and Gender Affairs that aims to reduce poverty through livelihood services, improved infrastructure, capacity-building projects, and technical services. (15) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Basic Needs Trust Fund during the reporting period.
Education Trust Fund†	Government-funded program implemented by the Ministry of Education and Human Resource Development to provide financial assistance for textbooks, transportation, registration, and exam fees to students in secondary school who would otherwise be unable to complete their education. (12) The Dollar Day fundraiser was held during the reporting period. (16)
School Feeding Program‡	Government-funded program implemented by the Ministry of Education and Human Resource Development to provide lunch to primary school students in targeted areas. Active during the reporting period. (12)

† Program is funded by the Government of Dominica.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (4,17-23)

There is no evidence of current research on the worst forms of child labor in Dominica.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT REGRESSION IN PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2022, the Dominican Republic made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Ministry of Labor created the Protocol for Coordination and Internal Action to address situations of complaints or detection of child labor and its worst forms. In addition, several government agencies signed a cooperation agreement to implement a new transportation program that facilitates school access in hard-to-reach areas. However, despite new initiatives to address child labor, the Dominican Republic is assessed as having made only minimal advancement because of a practice that delays advancement to eliminate child labor. Numerous reports indicate that school administrators have denied access to education to a significant number of children without identity or residency documents. Additionally, children without identity or residency documents, most of whom are of foreign origin or descent, are being prevented from receiving social services, including access to the government's poverty reduction and vocational training programs. Children in the Dominican Republic are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture, including forced labor in the production of various crops. Significant enforcement gaps remain, including limited human and financial resources for labor and criminal enforcement agencies to conduct inspections, and the lack of authority for labor inspectors to directly assess penalties for labor law violations. In addition, the Dominican Republic's legal prohibitions related to trafficking are insufficient because they require threats, the use of force, or coercion to be established for the crime of child trafficking.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

	Use in illicit activities, including drug trafficking, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (9,12,15,16)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Most children working in the Dominican Republic do so in the informal sector, mainly on family farms in rural areas. (12,16) Officials from the National Council for Children and Adolescents (CONANI) observed that Constanza and the southern part of the country have the highest incidences of child labor. (16) Children in the Dominican Republic are also victims of commercial sexual exploitation, principally in tourist locations, such as coastal resorts and major urban areas. (16,19) The porous border between Haiti and the Dominican Republic has allowed Haitian children to be trafficked into the Dominican Republic, where some are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation and forced to work in domestic work, street vending, begging, and forced labor in agricultural work producing bananas and other crops. (13,15,20,21) Some children also work in agricultural production, often alongside their parents, and live in communities that frequently lack basic services, including schools. (18)

Many Dominican-born persons of Haitian descent, including children, continue to remain in undocumented status because of a Constitutional Court decision in 2013 that retroactively revoked birthright citizenship of all persons born after 1929 to non-citizens in the Dominican Republic, almost all of whom were children of Haitian descent. (22,23) In general, children of undocumented parents are particularly vulnerable to labor exploitation because they may lack birth or residency documents. This increases the likelihood that these children may be denied access to education or engage in child labor, including its worst forms, in part because labor inspectors may not be able to verify their ages. (6,24,25) Despite education being free and compulsory until age 14, and the law prohibiting excluding children from school based on a lack of identity documents, numerous reports indicate that a significant number of children without identity documents were prevented from accessing education in 2022. (12,26,27) There were also reports that some schools require a list of extensive documentation in order to allow the enrollment of Haitian children. This documentation includes school transcripts or other proof of past enrollment in schools certified by several government ministries and entities, including some from the Haitian government, copies of notarized birth certificates, and official translations of required documents, if not in Spanish, which then need to be notarized by the Office of the Attorney General of the Dominican Republic. (13) As a result of these requirements, some children have been prevented from enrolling in school. There are also reports that some children of migrants, even those with legal permits to be in the country, have had difficulty accessing education, and that in some cases, the enrollment authorization process has taken up to 2 years. (13) Moreover, although the Ministry of Education's Office of Community Participation reissued a directive to public schools noting that all children must be allowed to attend school, regardless of their documentation, the Ministry of Education's current Operations Manual of Public Education Centers incorrectly requires school administrators to request children to present identity documents to enroll in school. (8,28,29) According to reports, this contradictory guidance has been used to explicitly deny migrant children and Dominican children lacking documentation access to schools. Moreover, while there is a process for caregivers to appeal cases of education denial, sources indicate that personnel responsible for managing the appeals process were not responsive. (13)

According to reports, children without identity documents are unable to continue schooling beyond the 8th grade, when they are typically 13 years of age. (13) The Ministry of Education also requires that students have a birth certificate on file in order for them to receive a high school diploma or school transcript after graduation, leaving those children without identity documents unable to prove that they have completed high school or apply for tertiary or postsecondary. (16,28,30,31) Teacher and school infrastructure shortages also create barriers to accessing education in the Dominican Republic. (9) In addition, a high percentage of students drop out at the primary and secondary levels. These issues particularly affect children living in rural areas and in communities predominantly of Haitian descent. (12,32) Sources indicate that some children of Haitian descent face discrimination by teachers and peers, travel long distances to schools, and are unable to afford school fees. (12,32)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

The Dominican Republic has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in the Dominican Republic's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibitions related to child trafficking, which are insufficient because they require threats, the use of force, or coercion to be established for the crime of child trafficking.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 245–247, and 249–253 of the Labor Code; Article 40 of the Code for the Protection System and Fundamental Rights of Boys, Girls, and Adolescents; Article 56.1 of the Constitution (26,33,34)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Sections 1 and 2 of the Resolution on Hazardous Work for Persons Under Age 18; Articles 251, 720, and 721 of the Labor Code (34,35)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 1–3 of the Resolution on Hazardous Work for Persons Under Age 18; Articles 246, 249, 252, and 253 of the Labor Code (34,35)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 1, 3, and 7 of the Law Against Migrant Smuggling and Trafficking in Persons; Articles 25 and 409 of the Code for the Protection System and Fundamental Rights of Boys, Girls, and Adolescents; Articles 40, 41, and 62.2 of the Constitution (26,33,36)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Articles 1, 3, and 7 of the Law Against Migrant Smuggling and Trafficking in Persons; Articles 25, 406, and 409–411 of the Code for the Protection System and Fundamental Rights of Boys, Girls, and Adolescents; Article 41 of the Constitution (26,33,36)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 25 and 408–411 of the Code for the Protection System and Fundamental Rights of Boys, Girls, and Adolescents; Articles 1, 3, and 7 of the Law Against Migrant Smuggling and Trafficking in Persons; Article 24 of the Law on Technological Crime; Article 56.1 of the Constitution (26,33,36,37)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 85 of the Law on Drugs and Controlled Substances (38)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes*	18	Articles 26, 96, and 97 of the Organic Armed Forces Law (39)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes*		Articles 4, 96, 97, 231, and 232 of the Organic Armed Forces Law (39)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	14‡	Article 63 of the Constitution; Articles 33, 35, 37, and 40 of the Organic Law of Education (33,40)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 63 of the Constitution; Articles 33, 35, 37, and 40 of the Organic Law of Education; Ministry of Education Circular No. 18 of 2011; Articles 45 and 46 of the Code for the Protection System and Fundamental Rights of Boys, Girls, and Adolescents (26,33,40,41)

* Country has no conscription (39)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (33,40)

Prohibitions against child trafficking are insufficient because they require threats, the use of force, or coercion to be established for the crime of child trafficking under the 2003 Law on Human Smuggling and Trafficking (Law 137-03); and although the Code for the Protection System and Fundamental Rights of Boys, Girls, and Adolescents criminally prohibits accepting, offering, or transferring children without requiring threats, the use of force, or coercion as an element, it does not criminally prohibit the recruitment or harboring of children. (26,36)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor (MT)	Leads efforts to eliminate child labor, conducts labor inspections, and oversees the Directorate of Policies for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor. Refers children found in exploitative conditions to social services, mainly the National Council for Children and Adolescents (CONANI). (9)
Office of the Attorney General (AG)	Prosecutes crimes involving children, including criminal violations related to the commercial sexual exploitation of children and other worst forms of child labor. Oversees the Special Prosecutor for Migrant Smuggling and Human Trafficking, which receives notifications of alleged violations related to the worst forms of child labor through a hotline. (18,24,42)
National Police	Enforce criminal laws, including those prohibiting the worst forms of child labor, and coordinates with the AG in the prosecution of perpetrators, under the Ministry of Interior and Police. (43,44) Under direction of the National Police, the Tourist Police (POLITUR) detects and prevents child sex abuse and commercial sexual exploitation in tourist areas, coordinates with CONANI in the rescue of child victims, and arrests child sex offenders in tourist areas. (9,16,45)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in the Dominican Republic took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Labor (MT) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the lack of authority of labor inspectors to assess penalties.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT REGRESSION IN PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In 2022, the MT reported that there were 390 children and adolescents removed from child labor as a result of labor inspectorate operations, and that 98 of those removed received follow-up social services. (12) The MT also conducted 18 training sessions for labor inspectors, with a combined total of 624 participants. (12) Despite these efforts, research indicates that the Dominican Republic does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (9,12,16,23,46-48) The MT also reported that its budget is insufficient for office maintenance, transportation, fuel, and other resources needed to carry out adequate inspections.

In 2022, the reported 63,730 worksite inspections conducted, represented approximately 307 worksite inspections per inspector, which is a high number of inspections per inspector and likely negatively impacted inspection quality. (12) While labor inspectors are authorized to re-inspect worksites to ensure that violations are remedied, re-inspections occur less frequently and are more difficult and less consistent in remote rural areas. (23,34) In addition, Labor inspectors do not have the authority to assess labor penalties; instead, they write infraction reports that are sent to prosecutors in the Office of the Attorney General (AG) for enforcement action if prosecutors determine it is necessary. The collection of civil penalties is also the responsibility of the judicial system. (9,12) The MT reports that it only has oversight of work situations within an employer-employee relationship, leaving children engaged in work in the informal sector outside the MT's purview. In such cases, CONANI is the agency with the authority and jurisdiction to intervene, though they lack the authority to issue sanctions. (12,16)

The Labor Inspection Manual instructs inspectors to assess child labor violations by reviewing workers' identity documents and employers' records, making observations, and conducting interviews. (49) However, MT officials have expressed that improvements could be made with respect to how inspectors conduct interviews, ask follow-up questions, and use inspection data to ascertain the ages of workers and guarantee that children under age 18 are not participating in dangerous or unhealthy work. Moreover, reports indicate that in some cases, Spanish-speaking inspectors working without translation assistance have been responsible for interviewing Creole-speaking workers with limited or no Spanish-language abilities, which may have hindered those inspections. (16) Research also indicates that inspections are not always conducted in a timely manner after complaints or requests for inspections are received. In addition, evidence suggests that inspection reports often contain errors and contradictions that undermine the credibility of these reports and a lack of prosecutorial resources have hindered the ability of the AG to pursue prosecutions on criminal matters involving child labor issues. (12,23,48) Furthermore, employees and unions complained that an insufficient number of inspections were taking place, and that there was a lack of follow-through on the inspections that were carried out. An example of these allegations are reports from longtime employees in the sugar sector indicating that they have never seen or spoken to labor inspectors. (12,48)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in the Dominican Republic took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient allocation of financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (16)	Yes (12)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (16)	Unknown (12)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (16)	7 (12)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (16)	0 (12)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (16)	4 (12)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (16,43)	Yes (12)

The AG's Directorate for Children, Adolescents and Family (DINNAF) carried out several operations to rescue children and adolescents in streets and public spaces. This was done in coordination with CONANI, the MT, the National Police, and the Specialized Police for Children and Adolescents. (12) DINNAF also provided training to prosecutors on the commercial sexual exploitation of children and adolescents. (12) However, reports indicate that the capacity of enforcement agencies to identify, investigate, and prosecute criminal cases related to child trafficking is limited due to a lack of human and financial resources. (24,50,51) Reports indicate there is a lack of coordination between the MT and the AG, leading to some cases referred to the AG by the MT not being subsequently investigated and prosecuted by the AG. (23,24) Moreover, research finds that CONANI does not have the financial, material, or personnel resources, facilities, and institutional capacity to meet the demand for services nationwide. (13,24,52)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Steering Committee to Eliminate Child Labor	Develops policies, approves programs, and coordinates, monitors, and evaluates efforts to address child labor in the Dominican Republic. Meets every two months, overseen by the MT, and comprises ministerial representatives, labor unions, private sector representatives, NGOs, more than 30 other institutions, and local steering committees in each province. (12,16,53) Oversees the system for referring children found during inspections to appropriate social services. (6) In 2022, President Abinader issued Decree No.431-22, which added new members to the committee and empowered it to include or exclude members and allies that the plenary considers necessary. MT also created the Protocol for Coordination and Internal Action to address situations of complaints or detection of child labor and its worst forms. (12,54,55)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of implementation of a key national policy.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT REGRESSION IN PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
Education Pact (2014–2030)	Includes strategies to address child labor and seeks to improve the quality of, and access to, primary and secondary education by increasing attendance and graduation rates and enrolling more students in the Extended School Day Program. (56) Implemented by the Ministry of Education and supported by the World Bank. (16,56) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken during the reporting period to implement the Education Pact.
National Development Strategy (2010–2030)	Aims to reduce poverty and inequality, and includes programs to address child labor, provide universal education to all children, and expand access to secondary school, including for students without identity documents. (57) During the reporting period, and for the tenth consecutive year, the government committed to allocating 4 percent of the nation's GDP to primary and secondary education as indicated by the National Development Strategy. Although, reporting indicates that in 2022 they actually allocated only 3.6 percent. The purpose of this continued funding is to improve the national education system. (6,9,16,58)

In February 2022, the government launched the Intervention Model for the Protection of Children and Adolescents in Street Situations and Mobility in Public Space, which seeks to rescue children and adolescents in street situations and the worst forms of child labor. (12,59) This model began in the National District with the creation of the Operational Technical Unit (UTO), which is a multidisciplinary and inter-institutional team specially formed to support vulnerable children. During the reporting period, 254 children and adolescents participated in 71 workshops organized by the UTO. (12,59) In addition, the Cabinet of Childhood and Adolescence, the Ministry of Education, and CONANI established the Padre Luis Rosario Center in April 2022 to provide comprehensive care and social and family reintegration services, including health and education services, to children and adolescents rescued from street situations and the worst forms of child labor. (12,60) Finally, in 2022, the Specialized Prosecutor's Office against the Smuggling of Migrants and Trafficking in Persons (PETT) and the Puerto Plata prosecutor office signed an agreement with Puerto Plata School District I1-02 to deliver awareness-raising sessions on human trafficking in schools. (61)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
SUPERATE †	Main poverty eradication strategy by the government that serves as the primary line of social protection actions. Focuses on social intervention through the integration of conditional cash transfers, socio-educational support, and links with other government programs and services. (62) Components of the strategy include: educational inclusion; health, food security, and support in emergencies; economic inclusion; and housing. (62) Addresses families in vulnerable situations, particularly low-income families, with one of its goals being to increase children's school attendance and reduce child labor. (62) In 2022, the government continued carrying out cash transfers, increased social assistance, and collaborated and joined efforts with NGOs and other entities to alleviate the hunger problem in the country through this program. (63-65) Furthermore, together with the Cabinet of Childhood and Adolescence and the National Council on Disability (CONADIS), SUPERATE presented the National Fund for Children and Adolescents with Disabilities with the aim of raising the quality of life of this sector of the population, as well as guaranteeing access to services and support to meet their basic needs. (66) Research indicates that SUPERATE is not available to families without documentation, including migrants and Dominicans who lack documentation. (13)
Oportunidad 14–24 ‡	Aims at reintegrating high-risk and socially vulnerable adolescents and young people into technical or vocational education and training programs. Provides adolescents and young people between ages 14 and 24 who have limited resources access to technical professional training, scholarships, a monthly provision of raw food, and transportation to study centers. (67-70) In 2022, the government assisted 371 youths who participated and graduated from this program; this was the first cohort to graduate from the program. The youths completed studies in the areas of beauty, hospitality, pharmacy, information technology, multimedia, secretarial work, technical support, and sales. (71,72) Research indicates that individuals without documentation, including migrants and Dominicans who lack documentation, are ineligible to participate in Oportunidad 14–24 . (13)
Extended School Day Program ( Jornada Escolar Extendida )†	Ministry of Education program to extend school hours to a full day (8 a.m. to 4 p.m.) to improve educational achievement and reduce child labor. (73) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this program during the reporting period.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT REGRESSION IN PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2022, the Ministry of Education appointed 24,815 teachers and directors to public education centers throughout the country to fill vacancies in the education system. (12,54) In addition, the Ministry of Education, the National Institute of Land Transit and Transportation (INTRANT), and the Metropolitan Transportation Office signed an inter-institutional agreement to execute the School Transportation Program. The purpose of the program is to facilitate the mobility of students living in vulnerable areas who face difficulties in accessing the education system. The program began with a pilot in the provinces of Azua, San Cristóbal, Santo Domingo, and Monte Plata. (12,54)

Although the Dominican Republic has programs that target the worst forms of child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, particularly to address the commercial sexual exploitation of children and harmful work in the agricultural sector. (55) Furthermore, reports indicate that CONANI does not have specialized shelters for trafficking victims, and child victims of human trafficking who go to CONANI temporary homes until they are reunited with their families do not receive additional services. (16,55) Reports also indicate that most social programs require Dominican citizenship or documentation, and therefore Haitian children or those of Haitian descent, and even Dominican children who lack documentation, are not eligible to receive assistance from these programs. This greatly reduces the effectiveness of these programs to address child labor and its root causes. (13)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in the Dominican Republic (Table I I).

Table I I. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

	Address the specific educational needs of vulnerable populations, including migrant and undocumented children.	2011 – 2022
	Increase school infrastructure and teacher availability, especially in rural areas, remove supply and school-related fees, and expand efforts to reduce discrimination on the basis of national origin in schools.	2011 – 2022

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Social Programs	Ensure that children are not denied access to education based on their national or ethnic origin, immigration status, or lack of identity documents and update all Ministry of Education's school manuals to align with Dominican law guaranteeing that children without birth certificates or identity documents are able to enroll in schools and receive diplomas certifying school completion.	2017 – 2022
	Expand social protection programs, particularly for child survivors of commercial sexual exploitation, and agricultural labor exploitation and forced labor, and ensure that programs also provide services to vulnerable children without regular identity documents.	2010 – 2022
	Ensure that the National Council for Children and Adolescents (CONANI) has sufficient resources and facilities to provide the necessary care for survivors of child labor and child trafficking.	2015 – 2022

In 2022, Ecuador made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Ministry of Interior created the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes Against Women, Family, Children, Adolescents, Trafficking in Persons and Smuggling, which oversees law enforcement units responsible for investigating labor and sex trafficking cases that involve children. Further, the Ministry of Tourism approved a new Code of Conduct for tourism industry workers that includes actions meant to prevent the sexual exploitation of minors in tourist establishments. In addition, the government's new social program, Inclusive Cities, brought protection services and temporary housing to 9,000 participants in 17 cities. However, children in Ecuador are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in mining. The Ministry of Labor has reported that the resources allocated to the labor inspectorate—including the number of inspectors, transportation, and equipment—is insufficient to conduct inspections in the informal sector. The Government of Ecuador has also not undertaken a nationwide child labor survey since 2012; the lack of current information on the prevalence of child labor hampers efforts to address the problem.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (10,11,14,15)
	Use in illicit activities, including drug trafficking and robbery, sometimes as result of human trafficking (8,10,11,16)
	Recruitment of children by Colombian non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (8,17)
	Use in the production of pornography (10,11,14)
	Forced labor in small scale banana, hemp, and palm plantations, cacao, coffee, floriculture, mining; and in domestic work, street vending, and begging (8-11,15)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Civil society and government sources reported incidences of Peruvian adolescents being recruited under false promises of employment into forced labor in illegal mines in Ecuador, where child prostitution can also occur. (11,18-20) Migrant and refugee children from Colombia and Venezuela are vulnerable to street work, including forced begging. They are also vulnerable to exploitative labor practices in some parts of the fishing sector in the coastal region and in artisanal mining in southern Ecuador and in the northern province of Imbabura. (3,4,10,11,18,21) Some Indigenous children between the ages of 6 and 10 from the highlands are victims of human trafficking for forced begging in Guayaquil and Quito, initially under false promises of employment. (6,11,22) Some migrant and refugee children from other Latin American countries, as well as Indigenous and Afro-Ecuadorian girls, are used in child prostitution. (3,4,8,11,15,23) Sex trafficking networks also recruit children from schools and, increasingly, through social media platforms. (14,21) Traffickers force children into criminality, recruiting them to engage in drug trafficking and robbery. (8,11)

Despite education being free in Ecuador, children face barriers to accessing education including lack of space and teachers, economic difficulty in buying uniforms and school supplies, inadequate school infrastructure, teen pregnancy, and lack of transportation for children who must attend schools far from their homes. (3,4,10,18) In addition, some NGOs have reported students being assigned to schools that are far from their homes. (10) Reports indicate that approximately 57,000 children abandoned their studies during the reporting period due to involvement in informal employment or begging networks that prevented them from attending school. (24) Reporting also indicates that as many as 65 percent of school-age Venezuelan refugee and migrant children are not enrolled in Ecuador’s educational system due to non-institutional barriers like a lack of resources and local discrimination. (11) Undocumented students face difficulties graduating from secondary school as national authorities are unable to grant diplomas without identity documents. (10) Lastly, the government has not conducted a comprehensive nationwide child labor survey since 2012, which hampers efforts to eradicate child labor. (11-16)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Ecuador has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

*Country has no conscription (25)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient human resource allocation.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor (MOL)	Enforces child labor laws in the formal sector through the Directorate for the Attention to Priority Groups, which has partially resumed the responsibilities of the now-defunct "Project to Eradicate Child Labor" (PETI). (10) Monitors and identifies cases of child labor, assesses penalties, promotes public awareness campaigns to prevent child labor, provides technical assistance to local governments on child labor, and identifies victims of child labor for the Ministry of Economic and Social Inclusion (MIES) to provide special services. (4,11) Separate from MOL, MIES conducts routine inspections in the informal sector for child labor and provides remediation services to child laborers and their families. (3,4,18) Using the Unified System of Registration of Child Labor, MOL collects information on child laborers and refers children to appropriate government services. (4,11)
Attorney General's Office (AGO)	Enforces criminal laws against child labor and hazardous child labor, including the prosecution of cases. (10,11,18) The AGO's Specialized Victim Witness Protection Program provides immediate support and shelter to survivors and witnesses willing to press charges and testify against their abusers, and coordinates referrals for further assistance with other government agencies. (18)
Ministry of Interior (MOI)	Enforces child labor laws. In 2022, through the National Police, MOI established the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes Against Women, Family, Children, Adolescents, Trafficking in Persons and Migrant Smuggling* with four specialized units: (1) the National Investigation Unit for the Protection of Children and Adolescents (UNIPEN); (2) the National Investigation Unit for Gender Violence, Women or Members of the Family Nucleus; (3) the National Investigation Unit for Sexual Integrity; (4) and the National Investigation Unit for Trafficking in Persons and Migrant Smuggling. All of these units are tasked with investigating crimes against children, including child labor. (10) UNIPEN is the primary anti-trafficking law enforcement unit responsible for investigating labor and sex trafficking cases involving children and is also responsible for investigating all crimes against children. (10)

* Agency responsible for child labor enforcement was created during the reporting period.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Ecuador took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of Ministry of Labor that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient human resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$2,187,168 (11)	$4,000,000 (10)
Number of Labor Inspectors	117 (11)	149 (10)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	Yes (32)	Yes (32)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	Yes (11)	Yes (10)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksite	12,335 (11)	7,782 (10)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	5 (11)	6 (10)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	19 (11)	4 (10)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	19 (11)	4 (10)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (11)	Yes (10)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (11)	Yes (10)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (32)	Yes (32)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (11)	Yes (10)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (11)	Yes (10)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (11)	Yes (10)

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Ecuador's labor force, which includes approximately 8.3 million workers. (10,11,33,34) MOL also reported that the labor inspectorate lacked the necessary resources, such as transportation and equipment, to fulfill its mandate. (3,10) Furthermore, inspectors do not have sufficient knowledge of child labor laws and lack training on identifying victims of human trafficking. (19,21) While Ecuador's labor inspectors do carry out inspections in the informal sector, they focus primarily on formal sector employment. (11) Although Ecuadorian laws and regulations governing child labor are comprehensive, those regarding hazardous work are not enforced equally in rural areas and family-run businesses. (11) The government does not publish information from the Unified System of Registration of Child Labor, which collects data on the number of child laborers and allows labor enforcement to refer children to the appropriate government services, and research indicates the government continues to struggle with ensuring that some children rescued from working in the informal sector receive adequate social services. (19,35)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Ecuador took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including a lack of specialized shelters for boys who are survivors of sex or labor trafficking.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (11)	Yes (10)
Number of Investigations	479 (11)	414 (10)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown	39 (10)
Number of Convictions	Unknown	2 (10)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (11)	Yes (10)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (11)	Yes (10)

A reciprocal referral mechanism exists between law enforcement and social services for victims of human trafficking; however, civil society reports that the mechanism is, at times, ad hoc. (11) Shelters serve only girls who are survivors of sex trafficking. There are no shelters for boys who are survivors of sex trafficking, or for survivors of labor trafficking. (14) Although the Ministry of Economic and Social Inclusion (MIES) will generally assign child victims to shelters depending on space availability, officials cite a lack of shelters in many provinces as a primary constraint in victim assistance. (3,18,21,36,37) Shelters have reported not receiving promised government funds in a timely manner and largely relied on NGOs and international funding to maintain their services. (15) Penalties were imposed for convictions related to child labor; however, the Judicial Council did not provide specific information on the penalties themselves. (10)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Directorate for the Attention to Priority Groups	MOL, through the Directorate for the Attention to Priority Groups, is the primary coordinating mechanism for the elimination of child labor. The Directorate partially assumed the roles and responsibilities of the now-defunct PETI program. (10) Aims to promote employment for parents and prevent child labor through labor inspections. (10) The Directorate was active during the reporting period, offering support for child labor eradication efforts, assessing penalties, and providing technical assistance to local governments on child labor eradication. (24)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including the lack of an active and permanent policy to address child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
Prevent and Eradicate Child Labor (2021–2025)†	Promotes employment for parents and prevention of child labor through inspections. (10) Developed in March through the National Council for Intergenerational Equity's National Agenda for Intergenerational Equity, which was created as a technical planning instrument for the formulation of public policies at the national and local levels. Despite the end of the PETI program in 2021, MOL reported it continued to support child labor eradication efforts through the Directorate for the Attention to Priority Groups. (10) Reports indicate that, although this policy has been officially adopted, it has not yet been implemented. (10)
National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons (2019–2030)	Aims to prevent, investigate, and impose legal sanctions against human trafficking with a focus on human rights, mobility, and gender, as the majority of victims in Ecuador are women. The Action Plan includes U.S.-funded support through the IOM and is the government's first multisectoral plan on human trafficking that establishes goals for every public sector institution to address human trafficking. (38-40) The government continued to implement the National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons during the reporting period. (15)
National Development Plan ( Plan de Creación de Oportunidades ) (2021–2025)	Creates employment opportunities for Ecuadorians and aims to establish a plan for future policy areas. These include economic, social, integral security, ecological transition, and institutional policy areas. (41) In the social axis listed in the plan, the Ecuadorian government lays out its objective to protect families, guarantee their rights and services, eradicate poverty, and promote social inclusion. (10) In order to meet this objective, Ecuador has set a goal of decreasing the percentage of children between the ages of 5 and 14 that engage in child labor. This plan aims to reach the goal of decreasing child labor from 6.1 percent to 4.4 percent by 2025. (9,10,41)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

During the reporting period, the Ministry of Tourism approved a new Code of Conduct for tourism industry workers. The Code outlines actions meant to prevent the sexual exploitation of minors in tourist establishments. (15)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate efforts to address the worst forms of child labor in all relevant sectors.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Inclusive Cities*†	MIES program that helps guarantee the rights of children, adolescents, people with disabilities, and the elderly population through social protection programs. Provides temporary housing for children and adolescents. (42) During the reporting period, the Inclusive Cities program reached 9,000 participants across 17 cities with populations vulnerable to child labor. (10)
National Program to Combat Street Begging and Child Labor†	MIES program that raises awareness about child begging and aims to facilitate social services for children begging in the streets. (11) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Program to Combat Street Begging and Child Labor during the reporting period.

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Ecuador.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (18,43)

Although civil society stakeholders commended the government's social programs, they reiterated that these programs only make limited interventions in sectors in which child labor is most prevalent, specifically the informal and agricultural sectors. (18) Research found that a social registry that contains information on low-income families has not been updated since 2015, which hampers its ability to sufficiently fund social assistance programs. Civil society notes that an update to the social registry should prioritize the most vulnerable populations at risk of child labor. (4,11)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Ecuador (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Strengthen social services referral mechanisms for survivors of child labor, especially for those found in the informal sector.	2015 – 2022
	Increase the number of labor inspectors from 149 to 556 to provide adequate coverage of the labor force of approximately 8.3 million people.	2009 – 2022

In 2022, Egypt made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government approved an updated National Strategy for Combating and Preventing Trafficking in Persons, which includes outcomes related to reducing child labor. The government also provided comprehensive criminal law enforcement data for inclusion in this report for the first time, and investigated 107 crimes involving 237 individuals, initiated 171 prosecutions, and achieved 70 convictions related to the worst forms of child labor. However, children in Egypt are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in quarrying limestone. The government did not publish data on its efforts to enforce its child labor laws, including labor inspectorate resources, number of child labor violations found, and penalties imposed for child labor violations. Additionally, programs to address child labor are insufficient to adequately address the extent of the problem, particularly the lack of targeted programming to prevent the commercial sexual exploitation of children and child labor in limestone quarrying.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table I provides key indicators on children's work and education in Egypt.

Table I. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	6 to 14	3.3 (583,290)
Attending School (%)	6 to 14	96.6
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	3.2
Primary Completion Rate (%)		66.1

Figure I. Working Children by Sector, Ages 6-14

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including the production of cotton† (5)
	Tending livestock and poultry (6,7)
	Fishing, activities unknown (6)
Industry	Quarrying† limestone (5,7,9)
	Making bricks (3-5,9,10)
	Working in carpentry workshops (6)
	Construction, activities unknown (4,5,10)
Services	Domestic work (3-5,10,11)
	Driving tuktuks (5)
	Repairing automobiles (3-5)
	Street work, including selling goods and collecting garbage (5)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor†	Forced domestic work (3,5,8,12)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3-5,12-15)
	Forced begging (3,4,12)
	Trafficking of drugs, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (5,12,15)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

In Egypt, some children are forced by their immediate and extended families into sexual exploitation, begging, domestic work, and factory labor. (12,13) In addition, some girls are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation under the pretext of temporary marriage, sometimes called "summer marriage," to wealthy foreign men, mostly from Persian Gulf countries. (3-5)

Children in Egypt face barriers to education, including access to identity documentation and the associated costs of attending school, such as school fees. Enrolling in public school requires a certified birth certificate, which some children born out of wedlock or born to parents of differing religions lack. (5) Children also drop out of school because of school-related costs, such as educational supplies, transportation, and clothing. (6) A lack of qualified teachers, poorly maintained schools, sanitation issues, classroom density, insufficient infrastructure, and bullying in schools prevent some children from attending school. (3) In rural communities, children face difficulties getting to school due to long commuting distances. In addition, girls face additional barriers to education, especially in rural Egypt, including harassment on the way to school, as well as cultural barriers. (3,8)

The government offers refugee children access to the public education system; however, refugee children are subjected to racism and bullying, and face language barriers. In response, some non-Egyptians residing in the country, such as those from Sudan, have organized independent school systems unaffiliated with the government for their children. (3,16)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Egypt has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Egypt’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including incomplete hazardous work prohibitions for children.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Articles 64 and 74 of the Child Law (17)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 1 and 3 of Ministry of Manpower's Decree 215; Articles 1 and 3 of the Child Law (17,32)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 1, 3, and Table 1 of Ministry of Manpower's Decree 215 (32)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 89 of the Constitution; Article 291 of the Penal Code; Articles 2 and 3 of the Law on Combating Human Trafficking (17,19,20)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 89 of the Constitution; Article 291 of the Penal Code; Articles 2 and 3 of the Law on Combating Human Trafficking (17,19,20)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 116-bis(a) of the Child Law; Article 291 of the Penal Code; Articles 2,3, 5, and 6 of the Law on Combating Human Trafficking; Articles 1–4 and 6 of the Law on the Combating of Prostitution (17,20,21)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 34 of the Law on Narcotics; Article 65 of the Child Law; Article 3 of Ministry of Manpower's Decree 215 (17,22,32)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	No	15	Ministry of Defense Guidelines on Youth Volunteers in the Armed Forces (23)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 1 of the Law on Military and National Service (24)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No		Article 7-bis(b) of the Child Law (17)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15‡	Article 59(1) of the Child Law; Articles 19, 80, and 238 of the Constitution (17,19)
Free Public Education	No		Article 54 of the Child Law (17)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (17)

The minimum age for voluntary state military recruitment does not meet international standards as it is below age 16. (23) Additionally, the law does not criminally prohibit military recruitment by non-state armed groups. (17) While public education is free by law, there are still fees for attending which, if not met, disqualify students from sitting for final exams. Not completing final exams results in a failing grade. (5,17)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Manpower	Enforces child labor laws and regulations through its inspection department, including receiving and investigating child labor complaints. Inspectors conduct labor inspections and report violations to the police, which operate under the Ministry of Interior. (5) If police investigations confirm criminal activity, cases are subsequently sent to the Prosecutor General's Office (PGO), which operates under the Ministry of Justice. (5)
Ministry of Interior	Investigates cases of human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children. Reports violations to the Public Prosecution Office under the PGO. (3,4) Also receives reports of violations from the Administrative Control Authority, which investigates government corruption and human trafficking. (3,25)
Ministry of Justice, Prosecutor General's Office (PGO)	Prosecutes violations of laws related to the worst forms of child labor and human trafficking. (3,4)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Egypt took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Manpower that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including an insufficient number of inspectors.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown (26)	Unknown
Number of Labor Inspectors	Unknown (26)	Unknown

Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Unknown (26)	Unknown

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (26)	Yes (5)

The government did not provide information on its labor law enforcement efforts specific to the worst forms of child labor for inclusion in this report. Although the number of labor inspectors is unknown, research indicates that Egypt does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (27)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Egypt took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including in financial resource allocation.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Unknown (26)	Yes (15)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (26)	107 (15)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (26)	161 (15)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (26)	70 (15)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (26)	Yes (15)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (26)	Yes (15)

In 2022, Egyptian authorities investigated 107 crimes related to the worst forms of child labor involving 237 individuals. Crimes included commercial sexual exploitation and drug trafficking. (15)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Steering Committee for the National Action Plan to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor and Supporting Families	Coordinates efforts to implement the National Action Plan to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor and Supporting Families. Membership includes the Ministries of Manpower, Social Solidarity, Education, Agriculture, Interior, Planning, Finance, Investment and International Cooperation, Trade, Justice, Health, Local Development, and Awqaf, in addition to the National Council for Childhood and Motherhood (NCCM), the National Council of Women, the Central Agency for Population and Statistics, the National Media Agency, and Al Azhar University. (3,4) In 2022, the committee met four times. (28)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established relevant policies related to child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Action Plan Against the Worst Forms of Child Labor and Supporting Family (2018–2025)	Aims to eliminate the worst forms of child labor by 2025 and identify roles of government agencies responsible for assisting child laborers. (3,8) Other objectives include expanding the child labor knowledge base; capacity building of agencies providing support; providing social protection, with links to existing programs; enhancing education, including vocational education for children; and advocacy and awareness raising. (10) Active in 2022. (15)
National Strategy for Combating and Preventing Trafficking in Persons (2022–2026)†	Aims to address trafficking in persons through prevention, prosecution, protection, and partnership. Includes goals such as empowering households to combat poverty and illiteracy, preventing school dropouts, and reducing child labor. (29)
National Strategy for Childhood and Motherhood (2018–2030)	Includes a child labor chapter that aims to promote dialogue on child labor legislation, including updating the hazardous work list; building the capacity of relevant government agencies, such the Ministry of Manpower and NCCM; developing programs to address child labor; and expanding educational and vocational training opportunities. (3,6) Active in 2022. (14)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Solidarity and Dignity Program ( Takaful and Karama ) †	Funded by the Ministry of Social Solidarity (MoSS), this program promotes school attendance and health monitoring for children by providing income supplements to poor families. (3,6) This partnership between the government and the WFP, the UNDP, UNICEF, and the World Bank offers income supplements to poor families under the conditions that household children maintain at least an 80 percent attendance record in school and that mothers and children under age 6 provide demonstrable evidence of having been seen at health clinics four times per year. (3) In 2022, the number of families receiving assistance increased from 4.1 million to more than 5 million. (30)
Ministry of Social Solidarity Centers for Combating Child Labor†	MoSS-run centers, operated by partner NGOs, to provide services to children and their families. Consisting of 17 centers across 14 governorates. (28) In 2022, MoSS centers provided services to 600 children and their families. (28)
ACCEL Africa (2018–2023)	Aims to eliminate child labor in the cotton, textiles, and ready-made-garments sectors; implemented by the ILO and funded by the Dutch government. ACCEL Africa- Egypt partners with the Ministries of Manpower, Education, and Agriculture, as well as MoSS and NCCM, to improve policy, legal, and institutional frameworks. (31) Active in 2022. (5)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of Egypt.

Although Egypt has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, particularly for commercial sexual exploitation and quarrying limestone.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Egypt (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law establishes age 16 as the minimum age for voluntary recruitment by the state military with safeguards for voluntariness.	2019 – 2022
	Ensure that there are criminal penalties for recruitment of children by non-state armed groups.	2022
	Ensure that the law prohibits school fees for the first nine years of education.	2022
Enforcement	Publish information on civil child labor law enforcement, including labor inspectorate funding, number of labor inspectors, training for labor inspectors, number of labor inspections conducted, number of child labor violations found, number of penalties imposed for child labor violations, number of penalties that were collected, whether routine inspections were conducted and whether they were targeted, and whether unannounced inspections were conducted.	2011 – 2022
	Establish a mechanism to assess civil penalties for violations of child labor laws that are not considered criminal.	2017 – 2022
	Employ at least 1,897 labor inspectors to ensure adequate coverage of the labor force of approximately 28.5 million people.	2018 – 2022
Social Programs	Ensure universal access to free public education, especially for girls and refugee children, by addressing the cost of school fees, supplies, violence in schools, lack of documentation, and other barriers to education.	2010 – 2022
	Expand programs to address the full scope of the child labor problem, particularly targeted programming to prevent and address child commercial sexual exploitation and limestone quarrying.	2010 – 2022

In 2022, El Salvador made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government amended the Labor Code to allow for higher fines to be imposed for child labor violations. The Trafficking in Persons Unit of the Attorney General's Office added 6 prosecutors for a total of 15. In addition, the National Council on the Trafficking of Persons carried out trainings for hospitality and emergency services hotline workers to enable them to better identify victims of human trafficking. However, children in El Salvador are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and in illicit activities, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in the harvesting of coffee. Law enforcement agencies throughout the country continue to lack sufficient resources to enforce child labor laws. Gaps also remain related to the lack of publicly available, comprehensive information on the government's labor and criminal law enforcement efforts. Finally, social programs do not adequately address the full scope of the child labor problem in the country, particularly in the service sector.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the Director General of Statistics and Census published results from the 2021 El Salvador Annual Multipurpose Household Survey, which found that around 81,164 children between the ages of 5 and 17 are working in El Salvador, an 8 percent decrease since 2020. (1,2) The survey also found that more than 61 percent of child laborers live in rural communities and 41 percent do not attend school. However, it did not include information about the sectors in which children are working. (1) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in El Salvador.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	4.1 (41,069)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	91.1
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	4.3
Primary Completion Rate (%)		100.1

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (5,9-12)
	Use by gangs to perform illicit activities, including committing homicides, delivering threats, collecting extortion money, conducting surveillance activities, and trafficking drugs, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (8,9,12)
	Forced begging, domestic work, agricultural labor, construction, and work in textiles (5,9,10,12,14)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Multiple reports, including by third-party monitoring groups, indicate that the use of child labor in sugarcane harvesting has decreased. (15) However, despite ongoing government efforts to address child labor in this sector, recent data have not been published to provide details on government programs that focus on addressing the problem and demonstrate the impact of such efforts. (7) Children in El Salvador often lack economic stability and educational opportunities and are vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation and recruitment by gangs to carry out illicit activities. (8,9,12) Gangs have traditionally forced young girls into domestic servitude, including providing childcare, and in some cases, children are taken into prisons to be commercially sexually exploited by prisoners. (8,9) According to El Salvador's Trafficking in Person's Special Prosecutor and local NGOs, adolescent girls with limited education are among the most at risk of being trafficked. (16) LGBTQI+ adolescents have also been forced into commercial sexual exploitation by gangs. (5) However, in 2022, gang activity decreased dramatically across El Salvador following the arrests of thousands of suspected gang members under the government's state of exception, introduced March 27, 2022. Reports have documented gangs' loss of control over neighborhoods throughout the country, and residents of these neighborhoods had observed a significant decline in extortion, violence, and gang recruitment by the end of 2022. (2,17) Some of the suspected gang members arrested were children and adolescents. The Government of El Salvador did not implement screening measures for indicators of force, fraud, or coercion in this population. (2)

Children in El Salvador face numerous barriers to education, such as insufficient funds allocated to education and precarious school infrastructure. (18) Most schools in the country are not constructed in a manner that allows them to adjust to environmental changes. For example, 6 out of 10 schools are not prepared to face environmental risks, natural disasters, and epidemics. (9) Furthermore, 1,943 of the country's approximately 6,400 schools do not have adequate sanitation systems, 938 schools do not have access to drinking water, and an additional 964 schools have an inconsistent source of water. (9) Reporting also indicates that children from indigenous communities disproportionately lack access to education. (5,10,15) Many students drop out of school before completing their education, particularly during middle school, due to the existing barriers to education. (9) Some transgender children have been denied access to education, and 23 percent of LGBTQI+ youth stopped their education before high school, in contrast with the 7.1 percent children nationwide who drop out of basic education. (8) Furthermore, gang violence has led to forced displacement of families, resulting in additional children dropping out of school. (10) The Ministry of Education (MINED) reported that only 6 out of 10 students complete 9 years of compulsory education. (9) Children who do not attend school are more vulnerable to child labor, including its worst forms. (15,19)

According to the Comprehensive Law of Protection of Childhood and Adolescence, a lack of identity documents should not prevent school enrollment. However, research indicates that children are, in practice, being required to have birth certificates to enroll in schools, in contravention of national law. (5,8,10) According to MINED, it is standard procedure in every school in the country to require birth certificates for enrollment. In the cases when a child does not have a birth certificate, the school will consider their enrollment, but there is no guarantee of admission. (20) This practice may be having an adverse effect on the enrollment rates of children in school, because the cost for identity documents is prohibitive for very poor families. (5,8-10)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

El Salvador has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in El Salvador's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2022, the Legislative Assembly passed reforms to Article 627 of the Labor Code, which allow for higher fines to be imposed for child labor violations. (31) The Growing Together Law, which entered into force on January 1, 2023, replaced the Comprehensive Law of Protection of Childhood and Adolescence (LEPINA). This law merged El Salvador's two child protection agencies, Consejo Nacional para la Niñez y la Adolescencia (CONNA) and the Instituto Salvadoreño para la Niñez y la Adolescencia (ISNA) into one: El Consejo Nacional de la Primera Infancia, Niñez y Adolescencia (CONAPINA). (8,32) Under LEPINA, which made secondary education compulsory, the minimum age for work was lower than the compulsory education age. As Growing Together repeals LEPINA, it appears that the compulsory education levels are early childhood education and basic education, making the new compulsory education age 16. However, under both LEPINA and Growing Together, El Salvador's light work framework is inconsistent with international standards because it does not specify the work activities children can perform. (21-23)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare (MTPS)	Inspects worksites for labor violations, including child labor, and monitors working conditions for adolescents who are granted work authorization. (5,11) Maintains a child labor unit dedicated to child labor law enforcement issues. (13,33) Refers cases of the worst forms of child labor to the Attorney General's Office. (5,13)
Ministry of Justice and Public Security	Enforces criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor, together with the Attorney General's Office, through the National Civil Police (PNC), which maintains a special trafficking in persons unit to investigate and prosecute human trafficking, including child trafficking. (5,9,11,25)
Attorney General's Office	Responsible for initiating criminal proceedings for all types of the worst forms of child labor, as well as bringing the cases to trial. The Attorney General is the head of the office and is elected by the Legislative Assembly. (9) In 2022, the Trafficking in Persons Unit of the Attorney General's Office gained 6 additional prosecutors, for a total of 15 prosecutors. (8)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in El Salvador took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare (MTPS) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient financial resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$1.6 million (9)	$1.68 million (8)
Number of Labor Inspectors	Unknown (9)	Unknown
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	Yes (22)	Yes (22)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	Yes (9)	Unknown
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksite	Unknown (9)	Unknown
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	Unknown (9)	Unknown
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	Unknown (9)	Unknown
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	Unknown (9)	Unknown
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (9)	Unknown
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (9)	Unknown
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (22)	Yes (22)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (9)	Unknown
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (9)	Yes (8)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (9)	Yes (8)

Since 2020, the government has provided limited information on its labor law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report. MTPS has indicated that its budget is insufficient to address workers' rights. (10) In addition, inspectors focus primarily on the formal sector in urban areas, as resource constraints prevent inspections in El Salvador's large informal sector. (5,8,10,15,34) While the number of labor inspectors in the country is unknown, research indicates that El Salvador does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (8,35,36)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in El Salvador took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient allocation of financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Unknown (9)	Unknown
Number of Investigations	Unknown (9)	36 (8)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (9)	Unknown
Number of Convictions	Unknown (9)	3 (8)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (9)	Unknown
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (9)	Yes (8)

The government provided limited information on its criminal law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report. (2) The scope of the government's criminal law enforcement efforts, however, is likely insufficient to fully address the extent of the child labor problem in the country, particularly when it comes to the worst forms of child labor. The Attorney General's Office stated the need for more investigators and analysts due to the complexity of the investigations and the specialized investigation techniques required. (9,10) Reports also indicate that the Ministry of Justice and Public Security is underfunded and is unable to support a sufficient number of investigators to collect and analyze evidence to process case backlogs. (13,15,16,34) Interagency coordination remained weak during the reporting period. (38)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Committee for the Eradication of Child Labor	Determines and implements government efforts to address child labor. Chaired by MTPS, includes 11 government agencies, along with representatives from labor unions, business associations, and NGOs. (11,39) Research was unable to determine whether the National Committee for the Eradication of Child Labor was active during the reporting period.

The National Council on the Trafficking of Persons met several times in 2022 at the working level. It carried out training and awareness campaigns to help workers in the hospitality sector and operators of emergency services hotlines recognize possible trafficking victims. (8,40)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including the lack of mainstreaming of child labor issues into relevant national policies.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Policy for the Comprehensive Protection of Children and Adolescents in El Salvador (PNPNA) (2013–2023)	Seeks to protect children from violence and harm, including the worst forms of child labor. Other objectives include reducing poverty and improving health services and access to quality education for children, including children with disabilities. (41) The National Council for Children and Adolescents (CONNA) reported that in 2022 it implemented several specialized plans under the National Policy for the Comprehensive Protection of Children and Adolescents, including Open Arms, which provided returning migrant children and their families with guaranteed support services to help prevent child labor. (2)
National Policy Against Trafficking in Persons	Provides a comprehensive plan to address human trafficking of adults and children for labor and commercial sexual exploitation. Aims to improve prevention efforts, victim assistance, prosecution of trafficking crimes, interagency coordination, training, and anti-corruption efforts. (42,43) During the reporting period, the government deployed an immediate response team to identify possible survivors of human trafficking returning to El Salvador. (8) The government also developed training plans for the PNC on issues pertaining to trafficking in persons. (40,44)
National Policy to Support Early Childhood Development ( Crecer Juntos ) (2020–2030)	Seeks to ensure children reach their maximum potential during early childhood by guaranteeing the necessary conditions to provide them with education, health, nutrition, and environments that protect their rights. Also aims to eradicate child labor for children between the ages of 5 and 7 by 2030. (13,45) During the reporting period, the government created a management team in each of the 14 departments to implement the plan and conducted a training course for those teams. The government also formed an interagency team to monitor the Crecer Juntos policy. (2)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (9,15,46,47)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Public Awareness Campaigns for At-Risk Populations†	Government public awareness campaigns implemented by CONNA and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs to raise awareness about the dangers of human trafficking. Includes the “Protection Starts at Home” awareness program and the “Call 1 2 3” Hotline, both of which promote respect toward the physical, psychological, and sexual integrity of children and adolescents. (48) The hotline offers children and adults the ability to consult specialists in emergency situations. (48) In 2022, CONNA strengthened the services of its hotline, running a social media campaign to promote the hotline and CONNA’s services. The hotline received calls regarding 26 cases of child labor during the reporting period. (8)
Sustainable Families Programs†	Focused on improving health, education, productivity, and security, and eliminating poverty through inclusive and sustainable economic growth and access to public services. Includes Health and Education Bonus Programs that assist families with cash transfers conditioned on children’s school attendance and health checkups. (13,42) This program continued during the reporting period, with over 29,000 families receiving health or education bonuses in 2022. (8)
School Prevention and Security Plan†	Programs implemented by the Ministry of Education and Public Security and the PNC in schools with high levels of violence. Includes activities such as provision of psychological help, online classes, skills workshops for youth, and increased police patrols. (13,49,50) During the reporting period, the PNC, with the support of the U.S. Department of State’s Bureau of International Narcotics and Law Enforcement Affairs, developed training sessions for children and adolescents designed to remove children from risky situations, such as affiliation with gang members and drug trafficking. The program reached 233 schools and benefitted 11,065 children. (8)

For information about USDOL’s projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of El Salvador.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (15)

Despite efforts to address human trafficking, services for boys and LGBTQI+ youth who are human trafficking survivors are limited, which may leave them vulnerable to being trafficked again. (38,40) Although the government implements several programs to reduce the worst forms of child labor by assisting poor families and school children, research found no evidence that the government has programs that assist child laborers who may not be living with their families or attending school, such as children engaged in domestic work. (13)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in El Salvador (Table I I).

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

In 2022, Eritrea is receiving an assessment of no advancement. Despite initiatives to address child labor, Eritrea is assessed as having made no advancement because it demonstrated complicity in the use of forced child labor. Government officials continued to force students in grade 12, some of whom are under the age of 18, to participate in military training elements of the government's compulsory national service program. Otherwise, the government made efforts by increasing the number of its child wellbeing committees from 43 in 2021 to 67 in 2022. Children in Eritrea are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced military training associated with national service, forced agricultural labor, and forced recruitment by state armed groups for use in armed conflict. In addition, Eritrea's minimum age protections do not apply to children working outside formal employment relationships, and laws do not criminally prohibit the use of a child for prostitution; the use, procuring, or offering of a child in illicit activities; or the procuring or offering of a child for pornography or pornographic performances. Moreover, the government does not publicly release information on its criminal law enforcement efforts.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Eritrea. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		55.6

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2019, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2023. (1)
Data were unavailable from International Labor Organization's analysis, 2023. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, activities unknown (3,4)
	Herding livestock (3-5)
Industry	Small-scale manufacturing, including recycling, remanufacturing, and repurposing metal (4,6)
Services	Domestic work, including fetching water and firewood (3,6)
	Working in auto mechanic shops, bicycle repair shops, tea and coffee shops, metal workshops, grocery stores, the Asmara bowling alley, and open markets (6-9)
	Street work, including vending, cleaning cars, and begging (3,4,6,7)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Compulsory participation in national service or military training associated with national service prior to age 18, and in forced agricultural and domestic work (4,10-12)
	Forced recruitment of children by state armed groups for use in armed conflict (13,14)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

In order to graduate from high school and meet the compulsory training component of national service prescribed by the Proclamation on National Service No. 82/1995, students are required to complete their final year of schooling (grade 12) at the Warsay Yikealo Secondary School located at the Sawa military complex. Each year, 11,000 to 15,000 students enter grade 12 at Sawa, and while many of these students have typically reached age 18 by the time they participate in the military training component of 12th grade schooling, some are reportedly as young as age 16. (4,10,15,16) During the year at Sawa, 4 months are devoted to mandatory military training, which includes military discipline and procedures, weapons training, a survival exercise, and a 2- to 4- week war simulation, and some conscripts are forced to perform agricultural labor on government-owned farms. (11,15,17) During the reporting period, the Ministry of Agriculture and the Ministry of Education reinstated a compulsory summer campaign program in which high school students implement “greening” programs for little to no pay, and failure to comply could result in students being fined or being unable to enroll in school the following term. (18)

Without completion of (and official release from) national service assignments, Eritrean children face a future of indefinite national service. They endure notoriously harsh conditions and corruption at Sawa, including allegations of military commanders offering food and better treatment to female students in exchange for sexual acts. (12,19) These factors underlie an ongoing exodus of unaccompanied minors from the country. (3,20,21) Adolescent children, some as young as age 14, who attempted to leave Eritrea were sometimes detained or forced to undergo military training, despite being younger than the minimum age of 18 for compulsory military recruitment. (3,20,22,23) In addition, the military periodically conducts roundups, known as giffas, to perform identity checks. There have been reports that giffas have resulted in the imprisonment of children alleged to be attempting to evade compulsory national service and recruitment into the military. (10,20,24)

The UN Special Rapporteur’s report on the situation of human rights in Eritrea, covering the period from April 2021 to April 2022, collected witness accounts of children as young as 14 years old rounded up off the streets for military conscription. (13,14) The UN Special Rapporteur also received information on the deployment of Eritrean children in military combat in Tigray. Most of the children deployed were 16 and 17 years old. (14,18) A large number of children were allegedly injured or killed during the early stages of the conflict, and dozens sustained grave injuries causing disabilities. (14,18)

Eritrea is particularly vulnerable to climate change, especially flooding and drought, which may make children more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. During the reporting period, the Southern Red Sea region was dealing with the effects of drought, including dead livestock, failed crops, and high malnutrition rates. (18) Children, particularly in rural areas, also face numerous barriers to education access, which may increase their vulnerability to child labor, including a lack of access to teachers, lack of personnel due to teachers fleeing the country to avoid open-ended conscription into the national service, and a limited number of classrooms, as well as a lack of transportation, uniforms, and school supplies. (4,20,25) To the address the shortfall, the government recently deployed teachers to less-populated regions to educate rural and nomadic children. (4,7) The government’s national development agenda also prioritizes the expansion of schooling in rural areas. (4,26,27)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Eritrea has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Eritrea's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including minimum age protections that do not apply to all children.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	14	Articles 3 and 68 of the Labor Proclamation (28)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No		Articles 3, 35, and 69 of the Labor Proclamation (28)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No		Article 69 of the Labor Proclamation (28)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 3 and 9 of the Labor Proclamation; Articles 565 and 570 of the Penal Code of 1957 (28,29)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Articles 94, 565, 604-607 of the 1957 Penal Code (29)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 604-607, 609, 610, 776 of the Penal Code of 1957 (29)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	No
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Articles 6 and 8 of the Proclamation on National Service (10)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	No	14‡
Free Public Education	No		Article 21 of the Constitution (30)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (22,23,26)

In 2015, Eritrea passed into law a new Penal Code that expanded legal protections against human trafficking, forced labor, and the sexual exploitation of children. However, because the 2015 Penal Code was never published in the Gazette of Eritrean Laws, as required under Article 3, the law has not officially taken effect. (12,21,31) The Labor Proclamation's minimum age protections do not apply to children working outside formal employment relationships, such as those who are self-employed, which does not conform to international standards requiring all children to be protected by the minimum age to work. (28) In addition, Article 69 of the Labor Proclamation authorizes the Minister of Labor to issue a list of activities prohibited to children under age 18; however, the government has not determined by national law or regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited for children. (32) Likewise, the Labor Proclamation's hazardous work protections do not apply to children working outside formal employment relationships. (28)

Laws governing the use of children in illicit activities are not sufficient because the Penal Code does not criminally prohibit the use, procuring, or offering of a child for the production and trafficking of drugs. (29) Laws

Eritrea

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

regarding the commercial sexual exploitation of children are also insufficient because the use of a child for prostitution is not criminally prohibited, nor is procuring or offering a child for pornography or for pornographic performances. (29) While the Proclamation on National Service No. 82/1995 requires compulsory national service from all citizens ages 18 to 40, the law is silent on voluntary military service, and thus places no explicit limitations on the voluntary recruitment of children under 18 into the national armed forces. (10)

Eritrea does not appear to have any laws guaranteeing free basic education or setting the compulsory education age, increasing the risk of children’s involvement in child labor. However, several government policies provide free and compulsory basic education to all children below the age of 14, including the Education Sector Development Plan, the Nomadic Education Policy, and the Comprehensive National Child Policy. (26,32-34)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare (MoLSW)	Enforces labor laws and investigates labor abuses, including child labor, through its Labor Inspection Division. (13,16)
Eritrean Police	Enforce laws and investigate referred cases of child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation of children, and the use of children in illicit activities. (6,13)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Eritrea took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare (MoLSW) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including a lack of labor law enforcement data.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Inspectors, in collaboration with the local administrations and police, are empowered to identify and prosecute child labor violations. Penalties for labor violations are assessed in coordination with inspectors, administrators, and the police, and are adjudicated by judicial authorities. (7)

Labor inspectors are not provided sufficient resources, including transportation, to conduct investigations of sites where child labor is likely to occur. (4) Moreover, the government did not provide information on its labor inspectorate efforts for inclusion in this report, nor did the government provide information on actions taken by enforcement agencies to address child labor. (12,13)

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Eritrea took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including a lack of criminal law enforcement data.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Unknown (35)	Unknown (4)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (35)	Unknown (4)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (35)	Unknown (4)

Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (35)	Unknown (4)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Unknown (35)	Unknown (4)

Despite evidence that children younger than age 18 are forced to participate in military training, research did not identify measures taken by the government in 2022 to ensure that children were not subjected to compulsory military training. (4,6,11,28)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination efforts to address child labor, including the lack of a coordination mechanism to address all worst forms of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Interagency Steering Committee on Trafficking and Migration	Aims to prevent and address human trafficking among vulnerable groups, including children. Includes representatives from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, MoLSW, the national police, the Immigration and Nationality Department, the National Union of Eritrean Women, and the National Union of Eritrean Youth and Students. (18) The government did not report any action taken by the steering committee during the reporting period. (18)

Eritrea has 67 child wellbeing committees, 19 of which were established in 2022, that operate at the local level and coordinate representatives from the political, health, educational, legal, and civil society sectors. They are charged with ensuring that children in distress receive specialized care. (4,7) The committee mandates are primarily focused on reducing female genital mutilation and child marriage, and are not directly related to addressing child labor. (4,6) Although Eritrea has a coordinating mechanism to address human trafficking, it does not have a coordinating mechanism to address other forms of child labor. (13)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 8). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of efficacy in carrying out policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
Comprehensive National Child Policy	Addresses underlying causes of child labor through studies of and assessments on the nature and conditions of child labor, designs advocacy and public awareness campaigns on the worst forms of child labor, and empowers communities and the public sector to monitor and prevent child labor from occurring. (33,37) The policy calls for the provision of free and compulsory basic education to all children, irrespective of gender, sex, ethnicity, religion, or disability. (38) The policy outlines the creation of a National Action Plan for the elimination of child labor, but this plan has not been drafted, leaving children vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. Although reports suggest that components of the policy are being implemented, research was unable to identify activities undertaken to implement the policy during the reporting period. (12,33)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Complementary Elementary Education†	Program created by the government in partnership with UNICEF in 2007 that addresses the educational needs of out-of-school children ages 9 to 14 in remote and rural areas. Condenses 5 years of elementary education into a 3-year program to allow students to either mainstream into formal education at the secondary level or access vocational education. (3,17,39) During the reporting period, the Ministry of Education established 11 complementary elementary education centers with essential teaching and learning materials. (40)
Better Migration Management	EU-led program encompassing 11 countries in North, Central, and East Africa; aims to address the international labor market, including trafficking of children. The Government of Eritrea joined the program on May 28, 2019. (6,41) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the policy during the reporting period.
Education Sector Development Plan (2018–2022)	Established 8 years of free and compulsory education for all children. (39,42) Included a strategy to ensure equitable access to education for all children, including in nomadic communities, through the provision of portable classrooms. (37,39) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the program during the reporting period.

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of Eritrea.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (40,43)

During the reporting period, the MoLSW supported more than 5,000 children to enroll and resume their education in an effort to prevent children from engaging in child labor. The MoLSW provided children with education materials and cash to cover their school uniforms, registration fees, and books. (4) Despite this effort, research found no evidence of programs to assist children working in agriculture, domestic work, and street work, or that address all worst forms of child labor in the country.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

In 2022, Eswatini made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. During the reporting period, the Ministry of Labor and Social Security began conducting a review of their offices with the International Labor Organization to evaluate the effectiveness of their efforts in addressing child labor. However, children in Eswatini are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced domestic work, forced livestock herding, and commercial sexual exploitation. Significant gaps in the legal framework remain, including a lack of legislation regulating the labor conditions under Kuhlehla and other customary practices. In addition, the de facto compulsory education age does not meet international standards.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Eswatini.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	11.7 (35,368)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	92.5
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	13.0
Primary Completion Rate (%)		88.6

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2019, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2023. (1)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 4 (MICS 4), 2010. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Raising and herding livestock, including cattle, buffalo, goats, swine, horses, and sheep (3-6)
Services	Domestic work (6)
	Street work, including working as vendors, bus attendants, taxi conductors, porters, and car washers (5,7-9)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced labor in livestock herding, domestic work, farming, and market vending (7-11)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (5,7-13)
	Use in illicit activities, including growing drugs such as marijuana (11)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children perform physically arduous tasks while herding in the grasslands and mountainous regions, and risk occupational injury and disease from exposure to dangerous tools and chemicals. Children's injuries sustained during livestock herding include open wounds, fractures, dislocations and sprains, fever, extreme fatigue, and snake bites. (4) In addition, there is evidence that children are involved in the production—but not the dealing or trafficking—of marijuana, which remains illegal. (3) Research suggests that in recent years, children from neighboring countries have been trafficked through Eswatini for purposes of commercial sexual exploitation. There are also reports that children from Eswatini, particularly orphaned and vulnerable girls from poor families, have been lured into sexual exploitation through promises of employment in neighboring countries, particularly South Africa. (3)

Eswatini

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

The government provides free primary education from grade one through grade seven and subsidizes secondary education for the approximately 70 percent of Eswatini's children who are orphaned or vulnerable. At the lower secondary and upper secondary levels, however, the cost of school fees is a barrier for students whose families lacked sufficient funds to sustain their enrollment. (3,5,14) In addition, there is a shortage of teachers in numerous areas throughout the country. (6)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Eswatini has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Eswatini's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including deficiencies with the country's compulsory age provisions as they are below the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Articles 2, 234, and 238 of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act; Section 2, 97, 98, 109 of the Employment Act (15,16)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 236 and 238 of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act; Article 29 of the Constitution (15,17)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 2, 97, 98, and 109 of the Employment Act; Articles 2, 233, and 236-238 of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act (15)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 2, 13, 232, and 238 of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act; Sections 144 and 145 of the Employment Act; Articles 2, 12, and 13 of the People Trafficking and People Smuggling (Prohibition) Act; Article 17 of the Constitution (15-18)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 2, 75, and 76 of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act; Articles 2, 3, 12, and 13 of the People Trafficking and People Smuggling (Prohibition) Act (15,18)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Sections 42-46 of the Crimes Act; Sections 2, 13-15, 24, 25, and 38 of the Sexual Offences and Domestic Violence Act; Articles 2, 12, and 13 of the People Trafficking and People Smuggling (Prohibition) Act (18-20)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 16 and 49 of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act (15)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Sections 5 and 17 of The Umbutfo Swaziland Defense Force Order (21)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Sections 5 and 17 of The Umbutfo Swaziland Defense Force Order (21)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	No	12/13‡	Sections 10 of the Free Primary Education Act (22)
Free Public Education	No		Section 3, 6, 7, and 10 of the Free Primary Education Act (22)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (22)

Section 10 of the Free Primary Education Act requires parents to send their children to school for the completion of primary education, which is typically around ages 12 or 13. As a result, children who complete primary education between ages 12 to 14 are vulnerable to child labor, as they are not required to be in school but also cannot legally work because they are under age 15, the minimum age for work. (22,23) In addition, the Free Primary Education Act provides for free schooling for citizens for seven years, although basic education is a total of nine years and includes lower secondary education. The failure to provide free basic education for the full nine years may increase the risk of children's involvement in the worst forms of child labor. (22)

While there is some identification of hazardous occupations or activities prohibited for children based on the current legislation, the list is not comprehensive to all hazardous jobs in Eswatini. The Employment Law does not cover herding, for which there is evidence of exposure to dangerous substances and temperatures. (4,6,16)

Previous reports indicated that local chiefs required residents, including children, to participate in non-communal tasks such as seasonal weeding. This work was performed through the customary practice of Kuhlehla, a practice in which people render services to the local chief or king. (14,24) The ILO has requested that the government issue legislation to regulate the nature and conditions of Kuhlehla and ensure that the law explicitly states the voluntary nature of participation in such work. (24)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor and Social Security	Enforces child labor laws and promotes relations between labor, government, and business through tripartite dialogue. (14) During the reporting period, began conducting a review of their offices with the ILO to evaluate the effectiveness of their efforts in addressing child labor. (6)
Royal Eswatini Police Services	Investigate cases involving the worst forms of child labor. Inform victims of sexual offenses, including commercial sexual exploitation, of available counseling and other support services. (20,25) During the reporting period, police forces received training on how to properly respond to suspected victims of human trafficking. (26)
Director of Public Prosecutions	Prosecutes cases involving the worst forms of child labor and refers child survivors to social and legal support services. (3,20) Responsible for implementing survivor identification guidelines and referral mechanisms for victims of human trafficking and those at risk. (3,20)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Eswatini took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including financial and human resource allocation.

Eswatini

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown (3)	Unknown
Number of Labor Inspectors	14 (3)	18 (6)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	Yes (16)	Yes (16)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	Yes (3)	Unknown
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksite	Unknown (3)	Unknown
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	0 (3)	Unknown
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	N/A (3)	Unknown
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	N/A (3)	Unknown
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (3)	Unknown
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (3)	Unknown
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (16)	Yes (16)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (3)	Unknown
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (3)	Yes (6)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (3)	Yes (6)

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Eswatini's work force, which includes approximately 396,000 workers. (3)

In previous years, research indicated that labor inspectors lacked sufficient resources, such as vehicles, to conduct inspections. (3,5,6,12,25)

While a mechanism to assess civil penalties exists, inspectors are not allowed to assess penalties. They must refer the matter to the police, who in turn refer to the office of the Director of Public Prosecutions for framing formal charges against a company or individual. (3) If the case is prosecuted and concluded against the employer, then the courts will determine the fines. (3)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Eswatini took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including allocation of financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (3)	Unknown
Number of Investigations	0 (3)	Unknown
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	N/A (3)	Unknown
Number of Convictions	0 (3)	Unknown
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (3)	Unknown
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (3)	Yes (6)

The Royal Eswatini Police Services lacked sufficient resources to carry out investigations related to the worst forms of child labor and likely will continue to lack sufficient resources due to the ongoing economic crisis and budget cuts in Eswatini. (3,5,14)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Child Labor Task Force	A multi-sectoral team comprising different ministries along with private members and NGOs. The task force is responsible for overseeing the Action Program for Combating Child Labor in Eswatini and takes the lead on child labor issues throughout the country. (6,28) Research was unable to determine whether this group took actions during the reporting period to coordinate efforts to address child labor.

The Anti-Human Trafficking Task Force formulates policies and programs to prevent and suppress human trafficking and people smuggling, including programs to provide assistance to survivors and increase the public's awareness of the causes and consequences of human trafficking and smuggling. The task force also exchanges information on cases of human trafficking among relevant stakeholders, including the police, immigration officers, social workers, and prosecutors. (18) Although the government has coordinating mechanisms that address child labor and human trafficking, resource constraints, poor communication, and a lack of coordination between agencies has resulted in confusion about its mandate, how to accomplish their mission, and the overall effectiveness of the task force. (6,12)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Strategic Framework and Action Plan to Combat People Trafficking (2019–2023)	Assigns responsibilities for addressing human trafficking to relevant government agencies and provides services to survivors. (29) Aims to improve protection for survivors, increase prosecution for offenders, and support continued prevention efforts. (29) Research was unable to determine whether actions were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.
Action Program on Combating Child Labor in Eswatini (2021–2026)	Outlines key strategies that the government should use to prevent children from engaging in child labor and for withdrawing those already in child labor situations. (6,28) The task force responsible for this policy continued to meet during the reporting period. (6)
National Children's Policy	Represents the policy framework of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act and aims to promote the rights of children, protect children from abuse and exploitation, including child labor, and improve the quality of education. (30) Research was unable to determine whether actions were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the full scope of the child labor problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Free Primary Education Program†	Provides funding to ensure free primary education to children for a period of seven years, starting from age six and ending at seventh grade. (25,31) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this program during the reporting period.

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of Eswatini.

The offices of the Prime Minister and the Deputy Prime Minister continued to work with the Trafficking in Persons Secretariat and the Catholic Church to explore the establishment of a shelter to improve the quality of care available to survivors of human trafficking. (9) In addition, the Deputy Prime Minister's office, which oversees child welfare issues, launched a campaign to register children to help them gain access to schools. Along with this, the Eswatini Broadcast Service runs a radio program that focuses on raising awareness on the worst forms of child labor. (3) Although Eswatini has programs to improve education access, it lacks programs to address child labor, including in domestic work and herding. (9,32)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Eswatini (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

In 2022, Ethiopia made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government supported a study of child domestic servitude to learn how to better prevent this form of forced child labor. The Ministry of Justice also worked with the International Organization for Migration to launch new standard operating procedures to identify potential victims of human trafficking and refer them to services. However, children in Ethiopia are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced labor in domestic work and in commercial sexual exploitation. Children also perform dangerous tasks in traditional weaving. Ethiopian law does not include free basic education or a compulsory age for education, leaving children vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. Additionally, social programs to address child labor have not sufficiently targeted sectors with high incidences of child labor, including agriculture and domestic work.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Ethiopia.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Ethiopian children voluntarily travel to Amhara to harvest sesame. This sector is allegedly linked to overland smuggling networks, with children earning enough to fund passage to Europe via North Africa. (5,7,20) Many others journey through Djibouti en route to Persian Gulf states, where they are often intercepted, repatriated, and later routed to a transition center in Addis Ababa. (7) Traffickers exploit children from rural areas surrounding Addis Ababa and other regions of the country for forced labor in the weaving industry, street vending, construction, and domestic work. (19,21,22) Moreover, children in Oromia and Amhara reportedly harvest and sell khat, a stimulant to which they may become addicted due to contact with the plants' excretions during harvest. (3,6,7,23,24) Children who begin as voluntary migrants may be forced into commercial sexual exploitation or become victims of forced labor. (3,16,25) Research on child trafficking survivors from the Southern Nations, Nationalities, and Peoples Region (SNNPR) and Oromia indicates that 85 percent were removed from or escaped domestic work. (18) The children surveyed were mostly from families that continue to play a role in financing and coercing their children to go abroad or to urban areas to look for work. (16,26) A large-sample size study of female child domestic workers in Addis Ababa found the average number of hours worked per week by these girls was 55 hours, well beyond the ILO's guidelines of 14 hours per week for light work. Additionally, 52 percent of these girls were victims of human trafficking. (19) Trusted community members, known as manamasas, recruit and groom vulnerable youth on behalf of local and international human trafficking syndicates. (22,27)

The ongoing conflict between government forces and the Tigray People's Liberation Front (TPLF) continued during the reporting period and halted November 2, 2022, when a Cessation of Hostilities Agreement was signed between the Government of Ethiopia (GOE) and the TPLF in Pretoria, South Africa. (23,28) There were unconfirmed reports that both the TPLF and GOE-aligned forces recruited and used child soldiers during the conflict. (3,22,23,29) Some women and girls have reportedly been forced by military elements to have sex in exchange for basic commodities, though the specific military elements remain unknown. (30,31) In addition, emergency humanitarian aid distribution networks and essential services have been disrupted by conflict in the Tigray, Afar, and Amhara regions. (32,33)

Conditions in Ethiopia are also influenced by an ongoing drought, which is increasing food insecurity and internal displacement. (34) There are an estimated 2.73 million IDPs across the country due to conflict or drought. (32) Internally displaced children are acutely vulnerable to exploitation and abuse, including child labor. (35)

With infrastructure for remote learning non-existent, many children remained out of school for many months during the COVID-19 pandemic, and some have still not returned. (23,36) Armed conflicts and resulting humanitarian crises have also disrupted education in Ethiopia. As a result of violence, some 2.3 million children in Tigray were unable to attend school, while estimates of all Ethiopian children out of school due to conflict or drought ranged between 3.4 and 3.6 million. (34,36,37) Children in rural areas also face additional barriers to education, including the distance they must travel to reach school; a lack of sanitation, which especially affects adolescent girls; sexual harassment; the requirement to pay for uniforms and supplies; and a lack of teachers. (8) These factors increased children's risk of entering the workforce at a young age. (6,38,39)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Ethiopia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Ethiopia's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the omission of traditional weaving from the country's hazardous work list.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation

Free Public Education	No

* Country has no conscription (43)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (13)

In 2022, Ethiopia published Directive No. 813/2021 on the Restating of Activities Prohibited for Young Workers, which had been signed and entered into force on August 24, 2021, replacing an earlier directive. (23,42) In addition to listing the prohibited categories of work, it provides weight limits for loads carried or transported by young workers and specifies employer responsibilities to verify worker age and ensure workplace awareness of the protections for young workers. (42) However, the types of hazardous work prohibited for children do not cover traditional weaving, an area of work in which there is evidence that children use dangerous machinery, equipment, and tools. (40,42,46,47) Moreover, Article 89.5 of the Labor Proclamation allows children ages 15 to 16 to engage in certain forms of hazardous work during a government-approved and inspected vocational training course. (23,40) This contradicts ILO Convention 138, which prohibits hazardous work for all children under the age of 16. (46,48) The GOE notes that, in practice, children begin apprenticeships after the completion of 10th grade, typically at age 16 or 17. (49) Lastly, while Ethiopia has a policy encouraging public funding of primary education, its laws do not provide for free public education or a compulsory age for education. (13,44,50)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor and Skills (MOLS)	Conducts labor inspections of formal worksites through its regional Bureaus of Labor and Skills. (8) Through its National Referral Mechanism (NRM), coordinates referrals of survivors to social services providers. (26,51)
Ethiopian Federal Police Commission	Enforces criminal laws against the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking and the commercial sexual exploitation of children. (8) Addresses child trafficking and assists vulnerable children through its Special Child Protection Units in Addis Ababa and other major cities. (8,22,52) Refers cases to the Ministry of Women and Social Affairs (MOWSA), which develops and implements programs to protect vulnerable children, maintains rehabilitation centers, and coordinates foster families for children rescued from the worst forms of child labor. (8,23)
Ministry of Justice	Prosecutes criminal violations of child labor laws, including through its Special Investigative Unit for Women and Children. (8)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Ethiopia took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Skills (MOLS) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient financial and human resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$2,524,544 (3)	Unknown (8)
Number of Labor Inspectors	537 (3)	Unknown (8)

Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksite	40,639 (3)	24,989 (8)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	Unknown (3)	Unknown (8)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	Unknown (3)	Unknown (8)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	Unknown (3)	Unknown (8)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (3)	Yes (8)

Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (3)	Yes (8)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (3)	Yes (8)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (3)	Yes (8)

The government did not provide information concerning labor inspectorate funding in 2022. Data on child labor violations are not aggregated at the national level, and the government did not publish the number of child labor violations identified as a result of its labor inspections. (8) Labor inspectors refer child labor violations to judicial authorities, who are able to assess penalties. (8,40) While the official number of labor inspectors was unreported, local NGOs and civil society organizations estimate there to be between 550 and 700 inspectors. (8,23) This suggests that Ethiopia does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (8,53,54) MOLS and other stakeholders report that a lack of resources and poor coordination among agencies hampered their ability to enforce child labor laws. (3,8)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Ethiopia took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including a lack of published information about penalties for child labor violations.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Unknown (3)	Yes (8)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (3)	11 (8)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (3)	9 (8)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (3)	Unknown (8)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (3)	Unknown (55)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (3)	Yes (8)

The government provided some criminal law enforcement data for inclusion in this report that had not been reported in recent years. In the 11 cases of suspected child labor crimes reported to have been investigated, the government identified 13 alleged violations of child labor laws and initiated 9 prosecutions. (8) However, the number of convictions achieved, and penalties imposed, remains unknown. (8) The government continued to disproportionately focus on transnational trafficking crimes and did not take adequate action to address internal trafficking crimes, including child domestic servitude and child sex trafficking, despite the scale of the problem. (22,23)

Ethiopian immigration and border patrol authorities refer human trafficking survivors to NGO-run shelters, where they are given first aid and assistance to return home. NGOs reported that many of those receiving services were younger than age 18. (21,26) In 2022, the Ministry of Justice worked with the IOM to improve mechanisms for referring victims to services. (8) In November 2022, the government updated its Standard Operating Procedures for victim identification and validated and launched its new National Referral Mechanism, which includes a directory of service providers. (23,51)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including overlapping mandates, limited budgets, and ineffective coordination among key agencies.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Steering Committees	The National Steering Committee on the Worst Forms of Child Labor coordinates activities on the worst forms of child labor. Members include MOLS, MOWSA, and the Ministry of Education. (3,8,16,56) The National Steering Committee Against Sexual Abuse and Exploitation of Children develops action plans and coordinates activities to address the commercial sexual exploitation of children. (16) Research was unable to determine whether coordination activities were undertaken during the reporting period. (8)

Limited committee budgets, overlapping mandates, and poor coordination between the committees and relevant agencies hindered coordination efforts to address child labor at the national and regional levels. (3,8)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation of policies to address child labor.

Ethiopia

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Action Plan to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2021–2025)	Includes guidelines on child labor identification, withdrawal, reintegration, and education. Overseen by the National Steering Committee on the Worst Forms of Child Labor. (56) The National Action Plan (NAP) was created in 2021 with input from government ministries, ILO, the Confederation of Ethiopian Trade Unions (CETU), the Confederation of Ethiopian Employers Federation, and other NGOs. (3) In 2022, although there was no update on the status of the NAP, MOLS and CARE Ethiopia prepared a joint action plan dedicated to the prevention and reduction of child labor that was funded by the USDOL's She Thrives project. (8,57) In addition, with assistance from ILO, CETU launched guidance on reducing child labor, human trafficking, and forced labor. (8,55)
Five-Year Strategic Plan (2021–2025) for Migration Management	Aims to prevent and suppress trafficking in persons and smuggling of migrants; supports safe, humane, and orderly migration; and supports efforts to reduce child labor as it occurs in the context of human trafficking and migration. (8,55) The government implemented several activities under the plan during the reporting period, including working group meetings, awareness raising, law enforcement efforts, victim identification and referral to services, and validating the NRM. (21,23)
National Education and Children's Policies	Promote children's rights and aim to improve access to education. The National Children's Policy facilitates access to quality primary and secondary education for out-of-school youth, including in rural areas, and provides measures against exploitation and human trafficking. (58) The Ethiopian Education Development Roadmap (2018–2030) aims to make education free and compulsory, while the Education and Training Policy prioritizes government support for education through grade 10. (39,50) The Pastoralist Area Education Strategy provides for alternative education in pastoralist communities, while the National Technical & Vocational Education & Training Strategy aims to improve access to vocational education for girls and out-of-school children. (59,60) The government has not included child labor elimination and prevention strategies in the Education Sector Development Roadmap, the National Technical & Vocational Education & Training Strategy, or the National Youth Policy. (59-61) The Ethiopian government did not provide an update on progress of these policies. (8)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (61,62)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
The Freedom Fund	Works to reduce prevalence of child domestic servitude with support from the Government of Ethiopia and the USDOS Office to Monitor and Combat Trafficking in Persons. (8,19) The Freedom Fund conducted a study of child domestic workers in Addis Ababa published in October 2022 that concluded that over half of the girls studied are victims of human trafficking. (19)
World Vision Programs	Included Effective Approaches to Ending the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2019–2022), an international program designed to test and measure innovative approaches to reduce the worst forms of child labor, and which targeted approximately 500,000 at-risk youth in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Central African Republic, and Ethiopia, including victims of child commercial sexual exploitation and child soldiering, and children engaged in hazardous work. The program's efforts were coordinated by World Vision, with funding by a consortium of NGOs and multilaterals, including UN Global Compact, the Global Compact UK, War Child UK, Thompson Reuters, and the private sector. (7,63,64) This program supported children engaged in the worst forms of child labor in Dera, Libo Kemekem, and Gondar Zuria districts of Amhara. (3) World Vision has remained active during the conflict in Northern Ethiopia, addressing food insecurity and gender-based violence. (65)

Program	Description & Activities
Multilateral Projects†	The Ethiopia General Education Quality Improvement Program for Equity (GEQIP-E) (2017–2025)† is a $583 million World Bank-funded program implemented by the Ministry of Education and development partners to improve education quality and access. Originally slated to end in 2022, GEQIP-E has been extended to 2025 to better address issues compounded by the pandemic and recent conflict. (66,67) Despite challenges due to the conflict, the project reported achieving results in several project indicators, including the improvement of girls-to-boys ratio in grade 8 in marginalized regions such as Afar, Somali, and Benishangul-Gumuz, from 63 percent in 2016 to 71.2 percent in 2022, and increased grades 1 and 2 enrollment rates from 76 percent in 2016 to 88.6 percent in 2022. (23,68) UNICEF-funded programs include Child-to-Child and Accelerated School Readiness programs, which extend educational opportunities to internally displaced children, and the Integrated Safety Nets Program (2017–2023). (6) UNICEF, the Swedish International Development Agency, and MOLS also jointly fund the Urban Productive Safety Net Program, which aims to build upon efforts to address nutritional and educational outcomes in Amhara and Addis Ababa through cash transfers and linking participants to basic social services. (6,69) During the reporting period, UNICEF reached over 295,000 children through formal or non-formal education across drought- and conflict-afflicted regions. (70)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is co-funded by the Government of Ethiopia. (11)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (3,71,72)

Although the government participates in and implements several programs to address child labor, programs do not sufficiently target sectors with high incidences of child labor, such as agriculture and domestic work. (56) There is also a lack throughout the country of rehabilitation and reintegration centers for victims of child trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation. (15,16)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Ethiopia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum age at which children may perform dangerous tasks during vocational training from age 15 to age 16, in line with ILO Convention 138.	2009 – 2022
	Ensure that the types of hazardous work prohibited for children are comprehensive, including hazardous tasks in traditional weaving.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2020 – 2022
	Establish by law free basic education.	2012 – 2022
	Establish by law a compulsory education age that extends to the minimum age for employment of 15 years.	2012 – 2022
Enforcement	Gather and publish information related to labor inspectorate funding, number of labor inspectors, child labor violations found, and penalties imposed.	2022
	Employ at least 964 labor inspectors to ensure adequate coverage of the labor force of approximately 38.6 million people.	2015 – 2022
	Ensure that labor inspectors have sufficient resources to conduct inspections in all sectors and are able to coordinate adequately with other agencies.	2009 – 2022
	Ensure that both domestic and transnational child trafficking cases are investigated and punished.	2013 – 2022
	Gather, disaggregate, and publish information on penalties applied and collected, trainings conducted, and convictions obtained related to child labor violations.	2009 – 2022
	Prosecute perpetrators of the worst forms of child labor, including recruitment of children into armed conflict, according to the law.	2021 – 2022
	Clarify individual mandates for coordinating mechanisms charged with addressing child labor, and enhance inter-committee communication, coordination, and collaboration.	2015 – 2022
Coordination	Provide adequate funding to coordinating bodies so that they may effectively coordinate activities related to the worst forms of child labor.	2020 – 2022

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the Education Sector Development Program, the National Technical & Vocational Education & Training Strategy, and the National Youth Policy.	2013 – 2022
	Publish activities undertaken to implement key policies related to child labor to address child labor on an annual basis.	2018 – 2022
Social Programs	Increase access to education for all children by decreasing the distance to schools in rural areas, hiring additional teachers, constructing sanitation facilities, and eliminating school-related costs.	2010 – 2022
	Develop or expand social protection programs to address child labor, including in agriculture and domestic work.	2009 – 2022
	Ensure that social services necessary to prevent child labor, such as rehabilitation and reintegration centers, are available throughout the country.	2009 – 2022
	Ensure student safety while at school, including by ensuring environments free from sexual harassment and preventing schools from being attacked by armed actors.	2021 – 2022

Falkland Islands (Islas Malvinas)

NO ADVANCEMENT

Although research found no evidence that child labor exists in the Falkland Islands (Islas Malvinas), in 2022, the government made no advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. The Falkland Islands (Islas Malvinas) also continued to implement a practice that delays advancement to prevent child labor. There is no functioning labor inspectorate in the Falkland Islands (Islas Malvinas) to enforce labor laws. Labor inspections are a key tool for identifying child labor violations, and their absence makes children more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. In addition, the minimum age of 14 for work and 16 for hazardous work are not in compliance with international standards, and the law does not prohibit adults from using, procuring, and offering a child for the production and trafficking of drugs.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor exists in the Falkland Islands (Islas Malvinas). (1)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

British Overseas Territories recognize the jurisdiction and sovereignty of the UK but are not constitutionally part of the UK. They are self-governing, except in the areas of foreign affairs and defense. (2) The Falkland Islands (Islas Malvinas) generally incorporate English Law Ordinances to the extent permitted by local circumstances and subject to modification by local laws. Under Article 35(4) of the ILO Constitution, when the UK ratifies a Convention, the Territory must consider if it will accept the Convention. (2,3) If the Convention is accepted, it is considered applicable to that Territory. (2) The following Conventions have been extended to and accepted by the Falkland Islands (Islas Malvinas) (Table 1).

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The Government of the Falkland Islands (Islas Malvinas) has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 2). However, gaps exist in the Falkland Islands' (Islas Malvinas') legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the failure to criminalize the use of children in illicit activities.

Table 2. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	14	Section 3 of the Employment of Children Ordinance (4)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No	16	Section 3 of the Employment of Children Ordinance; Sections 2, 3, and 4A of the Employment of Women, Young Persons, and Children Act (4,5)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No		Section 3 of the Employment of Children Ordinance; Section 3 of the Employment of Women, Young Persons, and Children Act (4,5)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Section 117 of the Crimes Ordinance of 2014; Chapter 1, Section 4 of the Constitution Order (6,7)

Falkland Islands (Islas Malvinas)

NO ADVANCEMENT

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Section 87 of the Crimes Ordinance of 2014; Part I, Sections 57–60 of the Sexual Offenses Act (6,8)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Sections 259–263 of the Crimes Ordinance of 2014; Part I of the Sexual Offenses Act (6,8)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	17	Article 10 of the Falkland Islands Defense Ordinance (9)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Education Ordinance; Chapter 1, Section 12 of the Constitution Order (7,10)
Free Public Education	Yes		Chapter 1, Section 12 of the Constitution Order (7)

* Country has no conscription (2,11)

The minimum age of 14 for work and the minimum age of 16 for hazardous work are not in compliance with international standards. In addition, the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, which may encourage children to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (5,12) The Government of the Falkland Islands (Islas Malvinas) has not determined by national law or regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited for children, other than industrial undertakings. (4,5) The law also does not prohibit adults from using, procuring, or offering a child for the production or trafficking of drugs. In addition, there is no existing law that criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for enforcement actions to address child labor, including its worst forms. However, the Government of the Falkland Islands (Islas Malvinas) has established an institutional mechanism for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, although the absence of a labor inspectorate in the Falkland Islands (Islas Malvinas) may impede the enforcement of child labor laws (Table 3). (1)

Table 3. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Royal Falkland Islands Police	Enforce the laws of the Falkland Islands (Islas Malvinas), including those protecting children against abuses. Participate in the Safeguarding Children Board and lead the Board's trainings on understanding child sexual exploitation. (13-15)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for a mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for programs to address child labor.

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, the following actions would advance the continued prevention of child labor in the Falkland Islands (Islas Malvinas) (Table 4).

Table 4. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict.	2020 – 2022
	Ratify the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution, and Child Pornography.	2020 – 2022
	Ratify the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2020 – 2022
	Raise the minimum age for work from 14 to 16 to align with the compulsory education age.	2017 – 2022

In 2022, Fiji made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Fiji Bureau of Statistics carried out a Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey in 2021 and published the results in August 2022, providing new information on the prevalence of children engaged in child labor, including hazardous work. Additionally, the government convicted a child sex trafficker, resulting in a prison sentence. However, children in Fiji are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. Fiji's light work provisions are not specific enough to prevent children from being involved in child labor. Furthermore, the government lacks social programs to provide services to children exploited in commercial sexual exploitation and forced domestic work.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Fiji. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	29.3 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	97.0
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	50.0
Primary Completion Rate (%)		117.0

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2021, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2023. (1)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 6 (MICS 6), 2021. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Cutting† and harvesting† sugarcane (3,4)
	Fishing† and deep-sea diving for fish, shellfish, and sea cucumbers† (3-6)
Services	Street work, including vending, washing cars, and selling fruit and other foods (3,7,8)
	Domestic work (3)
	Working in garages, retail shops, or roadside stalls (3-5)
	Garbage scavenging† (5)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Collecting scrap metal† (3,4)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (5,9)
	Use in the production of pornography (5)
	Forced labor in domestic work (9)
	Use in illicit activities, including drug trafficking (3,10)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children younger than 15 are employed in agriculture, retail shops, roadside stalls, public markets, domestic work, automotive garages, and car washing businesses. Children also work part of the year as cane cutters during the sugar harvesting season. (5) The 2022 Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey found that 15 percent of children were involved in economic activities for more hours than legally allowed at their age. It also found that 18.4 percent of children in Fiji work under hazardous conditions that include carrying heavy loads, working with dangerous tools, operating heavy machinery, and exposure to extreme cold, heat, or humidity. (11)

Children are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation in Fiji, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, including by family members, taxi drivers, foreign tourists, businesspersons, and crews on foreign fishing vessels. (9,12) Research also shows that children in Fiji are subjected to online sexual exploitation, including child pornography. (5) Parents sometimes send their children to live with families in cities or near schools to facilitate their continuing education and to perform light household work. Research found that some of these children are vulnerable to involuntary domestic work or are forced to engage in sexual activity in exchange for food, clothing, shelter, or school fees. (9,12) In addition, children are sexually exploited in massage parlors and brothels owned by Chinese nationals, and child sex trafficking victims are driven to hotels or private yachts at the request of foreigners. (9)

Rising levels of poverty as a result of the COVID-19 pandemic and natural disasters, including Tropical Cyclone Cody, increased the number of children engaging in child labor, often in street work, during which they are vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking. (5,9) The pandemic continued to profoundly impact students' access to education in Fiji, particularly affecting children from low-income families and single-parent families, as well as children with special education needs. (3,5) Financial barriers also prevented parents from sending their children to school because they could not meet the costs of school supplies, footwear, school uniforms, and meals for their children. In addition, children in remote areas often do not have schools in their area and have issues connecting to the internet to access online learning materials. (5)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Fiji has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Fiji's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including identification of light work activities permissible for children.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 92 of the Employment Relations Promulgation (13)

Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Compulsory Education Orders 1997 and 1998 (22,23)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 31 of the Constitution of Fiji (24)

* Country has no conscription (21)

The Employment Relations Promulgation specifies the conditions under which children ages 13 to 15 may engage in light work, but it does not include a list of activities that are permissible. (13)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Employment, Productivity, and Industrial Relations (MEPIR)	The primary agency responsible for enforcing and ensuring compliance with child labor laws and monitoring the status of child labor employment. Under the Employment Relations Promulgation, labor inspectors of MEPIR can conduct workplace inspections to identify child labor law violations and issue penalties for breaches of child labor laws. (5) Maintains a 24-hour phone line to accept reports of child labor and refers children to social services when appropriate. (3,5) Children found working illegally during inspections are generally first returned to their families, and MEPIR will involve the Department of Social Welfare if it deems the situation warrants further intervention. (5) The Employment Relations Tribunal adjudicates alleged violations of child labor provisions. (5,25) Within MEPIR, the Labor Inspection Compliance Unit raises awareness on issues of child labor and is responsible for monitoring and training the labor inspectorate. As in previous years, MEPIR collected data on child labor cases and inspections but did not publish them. (5,6)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Fiji Police Force	Investigates criminal violations related to child labor, child trafficking, and commercial sexual exploitation. (5) Refers children found in cases of the worst forms of child labor on a case-by-case basis to the Department of Social Welfare. (3) Maintains a Human Trafficking Unit, Child Sexual Services Unit, and a separate Children's Unit, which screens cases involving children for trafficking indicators. Although anti-trafficking training is provided for new police officers, research suggests that these trainings are insufficient and investigations conducted by the police are inconsistent. (9)
Department of Immigration	Responsible for efforts to address human trafficking. (5) Enforces the Immigration Act, which includes the prohibition of trafficking in children. (5,16) Coordinates with the Fiji Police Force to investigate cases involving underage survivors of commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking, which are then tried in the criminal court system. (26) Department of Immigration officials and the police meet every quarter to discuss foreign nationals involved in human trafficking, but research was unable to determine if the department took actions to address foreign nationals involved in human trafficking in 2022. (5)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Fiji took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, the lack of available information hinders understanding of labor law enforcement efforts.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

‡ Data are from August 2022 to July 2023.

Inspectors were trained on the enforcement of child labor laws and hazardous child labor laws during the reporting period. Labor inspectors are legally allowed to enter, inspect, and examine workplaces; require employers to produce any worker or any documents or records, including registers of children; interview employers and workers; and issue penalties of $44.71 (FJ$100). (5) Labor inspectors are required by law to issue violations upon encountering child labor law violations. Targeted areas for inspections include high-risk areas, such as sugarcane farms located in the western and northern parts of the country. (5) The government did not provide information on the number of labor inspections and child labor violations in 2022. (5)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Fiji took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, the lack of available information hinders understanding of criminal law enforcement efforts.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Unknown (3)	Yes (5)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (3)	Unknown (5)

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (3)	Yes (5)

During the reporting period, the government sentenced a child sex trafficker to 30 months in prison. (9) The government did not provide information on the number of investigations and prosecutions initiated in 2022. (5)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of public reporting on activities.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Coordinating Committee on Children	Coordinates child labor and child safety enforcement efforts. Comprises the Fiji Police Force, the Public Prosecutor's Office, the Solicitor General's Office, the Department of Social Welfare, MEPIR, the Ministry of Health, the Ministry of Education, and NGOs that work on child labor issues. (5,26,28) Research was unable to determine whether the National Coordinating Committee on Children was active during the reporting period. (5,6)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
United Nations Pacific Strategy (2018–2022)	Addressed, developed, and implemented strategic economic development priorities in the South Pacific, including eliminating child labor and the worst forms of child labor. A multinational strategic framework program that consisted of 14 South Pacific nations. (29) Instrumental in shaping priorities to address child labor issues in the country. The government of Fiji continued to support the implementation of this strategy in 2022. (5)
National Action Plan to Combat Human Trafficking (2021–2026)	Sets yearly targets to achieve the goals outlined in the Human Trafficking Strategy. (30) Includes a special focus on assisting child survivors of trafficking and other objectives such as strengthening counter-human trafficking mechanisms, protecting survivors, suppressing criminal networks, prosecuting traffickers, and sharing intelligence to address the sexual exploitation of children. (30,31) In 2022, the government allocated funding and staff to implement the action plan. (9,32)

‡ The government has other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (3)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
UNICEF Pacific Multi-Country Child Protection Program (2018–2022)	Prioritized children's rights, including the elimination of the worst forms of child labor. Multi-country program in 14 Pacific Island countries aligned with the UN Pacific Strategy 2018–2022. (33,34) UNICEF Pacific facilitated the Child Protection Training for 27 welfare officers in 2022. (35-37)
Education Assistance Programs†	The Free Education Grant ensures that all children with Fiji citizenship have access to free and compulsory primary education. (38) Provides bus passes and free textbooks. Also supplies boats and motors so children and teachers can commute to school. (38,39) This grant continued during the reporting period. (5) The Food Voucher and Bus Fare Assistance program provides $24 in food vouchers and subsidized bus fares to families with combined annual income of less than $7,400 to offset the cost of education for children attending remote schools. (40) During the reporting period, the government continued to provide transport assistance to students, and allocated approximately $31 million for the Free Education Grant in fiscal year 2021–2022. (3,27) The government allocated $74.82 million to various programs promoting inclusive education for the 2022–2023 fiscal year. The government continued providing free education, free textbooks, transportation allowances, and tertiary education scholarships during the reporting period. (5)
Child Protection Program and Allowance‡	Ministry of Women, Children, and Poverty Alleviation (MWCPA) Child Protection Program that raises awareness of, and enacts recommendations from, the UN CRC. (39) MWCPA Child Protection Allowance assists single mothers, widows, and children. (41) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Child Protection Program and Allowance during the reporting period.

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of Fiji.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (5)

Although Fiji has programs to address education and poverty alleviation, it has no programs to address child labor, including for children who may be sent to live with other families and subjected to commercial sexual exploitation, human trafficking, and forced domestic work. (39,42) The Ministry of Women, Children, and Poverty Alleviation's Child Services Unit, in partnership with UNICEF, provided 5 modules of child protection training for 27 welfare officers on important aspects of case management, including interview skills, child development, and indicators of abuse. The last two modules took place in 2022. (35-37) The Department of Social Welfare operated four homes for child survivors of trafficking. (32)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Fiji (Table 11).

In 2022, Gabon made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government worked with the United Nations Children's Fund on a campaign to provide birth certificates to more than 10,000 children, and increased funding, bed capacity, and in-kind support for shelters. However, despite government initiatives to address child labor, Gabon is receiving an assessment of minimal advancement because it continued to implement a practice that delayed advancement to eliminate child labor. The government failed to provide evidence it conducted worksite inspections during the reporting period. Labor inspections are a key tool for identifying child labor violations, and their absence makes children more vulnerable to child labor. Children in Gabon are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in domestic work.

Furthermore, Gabonese law regarding minimum age for work provisions only applies to children in formal employment relationships, which does not conform to international standards that require all children to be protected by the minimum age for work. In addition, Gabon does not have a policy that addresses all relevant forms of child labor and lacks social programs to address child labor in domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Gabon.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	22.3 (83,073)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	94.4
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	23.3
Primary Completion Rate (%)		78.4

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Fishing, including the production and sale of smoked fish (3-6)
Industry	Working in sand quarries† (3,5-7)

Services	Domestic work (3,5,6,8)
	Street vending, including windshield cleaning, cleaning market spaces at night, and carrying heavy loads† (3,4,6,8)
	Garbage scavenging (3,5,6)
	Working in transportation, including minibuses,† and as mechanics (3,6,7)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced labor in markets, restaurants, handicraft shops, sand quarries, gold mines, farming, animal husbandry, fishing, domestic work, begging, and as mechanics (6,9)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,5,8,10)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Gabon is primarily a destination and transit country for victims of child trafficking from other countries in Central and West Africa. (3,6,11,12) Some families entrust their children to intermediaries who promise education and safe work opportunities; instead, these children are sometimes subjected to child trafficking for labor exploitation. (11) There are reports that child victims of forced labor mainly work in the informal sector as street vendors, often selling beauty products and fruits. Boys also often work in fishing, microbus transportation, mechanics shops, and cleaning market spaces after they have closed. (3,4,6,13) In addition, reports indicate that West African human traffickers exploit children from their countries of origin to work in Libreville markets and in other urban centers, including Port-Gentil. (1,3,13)

Although the Law on General Education guarantees the right to free and compulsory education, in practice, students must pay for school fees, which may be prohibitive. (5,14) Due to a lack of teachers and poor school infrastructure, education beyond primary school is often unavailable in rural areas. (3,6,15) In addition, children living in remote areas may not receive birth certificates, which are often required for school enrollment, and children who do not attend school are more vulnerable to child labor. (3,6,15) In 2022, as part of the Citizenship and Social Protection program conducted in conjunction with the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), the Gabonese Ministry of Social Affairs and Women's Rights delivered birth certificates to 10,196 children in the Estuaire Province. (16)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Gabon has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Gabon's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	16	Article 177 of the Labor Code; Article 2 of the Decree N° 0651/PR/MTEPS on Establishing Individual Exceptions to the Minimum Age for Admission to Employment (17-19)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 1 of the Hazardous Work List (17,18,20)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 2, 3, and 5 of the Hazardous Work List (17,18,20)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 225 to 225-7 of Gabon's 2020 Revised Penal Code; Articles 3, 12, and 13 of Law N° 09/04 Preventing and Fighting Against Child Trafficking; Article 4 of the Labor Code (17,21,22)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 3, 11–14, and 20 of Law N° 09/04 Preventing and Fighting Against Child Trafficking; Articles 225 to 225-7 of Gabon's 2020 Revised Penal Code (21,22)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 260, 261, and 263 of the Penal Code; Articles 225 to 225-7 and Articles 281-3 to 281-5 of Gabon's 2020 Revised Penal Code (22,23)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 281-1 of Gabon's 2020 Revised Penal Code (22)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 17 of the Law on the Organization of National Defense and Public Security (24)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes*		Article 17 of the Law on the Organization of National Defense and Public Security (24)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 1 of the Constitution; Article 2 of Act N° 21/2011 on General Education; Article 340-6 of the Revised 2020 Penal Code (14,22,25)
Free Public Education	Yes		Articles 1.18 and 1.19 of the Constitution; Article 2 of Act N° 21/2011 on General Education (14,25)

* Country has no conscription (9)

Although the Labor Code prohibits work by children under age 16, minimum age protections do not apply to children outside of formal work relationships, which does not conform to international standards that require all children be protected under the law. (17,21,22,26) In addition, Gabon's light work provision permits children under age 16 to perform light work with parental permission, but it does not set a minimum age, determine the activities in which light work may be permitted, prescribe the number of hours per week for light work, or specify the conditions in which light work may be undertaken. (19)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, the absence of worksite inspections conducted at the national level in Gabon may impede the enforcement of child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Employment, Public Function, Labor and Professional Training	Receives, investigates, and addresses child labor complaints. (6,15)
Ministry of the Interior's Police Force	Enforces laws, investigates violations of the worst forms of child labor, and refers cases to the Ministry of Justice for prosecution. (3,15) Refers survivors of child trafficking to the Ministry of Social Affairs, which assists vulnerable children by operating shelters, and facilitating their repatriation or resettlement processes. (3,13)
Ministry of Justice	Enforces child labor laws by prosecuting child labor cases. Coordinates the activities of agencies responsible for enforcing criminal laws against forced child labor, child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and the use of children in illicit activities. (3) Assists in supporting victims of child trafficking while prosecutors and investigators prepare their cases. (3,7)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, the absence of worksite inspections conducted at the national level in Gabon may have impeded the enforcement of child labor laws. (Table 6)

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown (3)	Unknown (6)
Number of Labor Inspectors	Unknown (3)	Unknown (6)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	Yes (17)	Yes (17)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	No (3)	No (6)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksite	0 (3)	0 (6)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	0 (3)	N/A (6)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	N/A (3)	N/A (6)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	N/A (3)	N/A (6)
Routine Inspections Conducted	N/A (3)	N/A (6)
Routine Inspections Targeted	N/A (3)	N/A (6)

Unannounced Inspections Conducted	No (3)	No (6)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (3)	Yes (6)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (3)	Yes (6)

The government failed to provide evidence it conducted worksite inspections during the reporting period. (6) Labor inspections are a key tool for identifying child labor violations, and their absence makes children more vulnerable to child labor. The government also did not provide information on labor inspectorate funding, or the number of labor inspectors. (6) While the number of labor inspectors is unknown, research suggests that Gabon does not have an adequate number of inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (6,27,28) In addition, research indicates that inadequate resources—including training for inspectors, transportation, and fuel—may have hampered the labor inspectorate's capacity to adequately conduct inspections, and enforce labor laws throughout the country. (3,6,13,15) Labor inspectors in Gabon are also responsible for reconciling labor disputes, which may detract from their primary duty of inspection. (17)

Although inspectors have the authority to propose penalties to the court in accordance with legal guidelines, they do not have the authority to impose penalties since this is the purview of the court. The police take note of violations of child labor law, carry out investigations when further information is necessary, and refer cases to the court system within the Ministry of Justice's jurisdiction. (6)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Gabon took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	No (3)	Yes (9)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (3)	Unknown (6)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (3)	Unknown (6)
Number of Convictions	6 (3,29)	10 (6,9)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (3,29)	Yes (6,9)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (3)	Yes (6)

The government did not provide information on the number of investigations conducted or the number of prosecutions initiated for inclusion in this report. However, during the reporting period, approximately 20 children received support from social services after being identified as alleged victims of child labor violations by NGOs or during other government inspections. (6,9) The government convicted 3 individuals on child trafficking charges, including a Togolese national, issuing prison sentences of 8 to 10 years. (9,30) In June

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

2022, the government provided capacity-building training on trafficking in persons to magistrates, which was organized by the Ministry of Justice and UNICEF. (31) Also in 2022, representatives from the Ministry of Justice, the Ministry of the Interior, the Ministry of Social Affairs and Women's Rights, the Ministry of Health, Social Protection and National Solidarity (MSPNS), as well as NGO representatives, worked together on an informal basis to identify cases of exploitative child labor. (6) Research indicates that other coordinating committees exist, but lack sufficient funding and members sometimes use their personal funds to support human trafficking survivors. (5,7,32)

Despite these efforts, research has shown that a lack of resources, including transportation, access to fuel, insufficient training, infrequent convening of the Criminal Court, a backlog of cases, and weak coordination among enforcement agencies hampered criminal enforcement efforts. In addition, evidence indicates that some child trafficking perpetrators falsified documents to make victims appear older than age 18 to avoid punishment under Gabon's child trafficking laws. (5,8,13,29,31)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of sufficient infrastructure and staff.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Observatory of the Rights of the Child (ONDE)	Coordinates the implementation of the UN CRC, including the promotion of children's rights to education, and protection against all forms of exploitation and abuse. Establishes and oversees committees to protect children's rights in all provinces. (3,33) Serves as a mechanism for cooperation and consultation between private and public sector actors who work on the rights of the child. Coordination efforts are limited due to the lack of an ONDE office and limited staff. (33) The Observatory was inactive during the reporting period. (9)

Although the National Observatory of the Rights of the Child exists, research found no evidence that the committee functions as a coordinating mechanism to address all forms of child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that the government has active policies to address child labor. (9)

Although Gabon has a National Youth Policy, child labor elimination and prevention strategies have not been integrated into it. (34) In 2022, the government signed the United Nations Sustainable Development Cooperative Framework (UNSDCF) 2023–2027 for Gabon. The new Cooperative Framework includes the aim of improving access to education, which helps reduce vulnerability to child labor. (35)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to preventing child labor (Table 9). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 9. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Shelters for Children in Need	Provide social services to survivors of child trafficking. The government provides support to shelters run by civil society organizations. (7,12,13,36) Victims receive medical care, literacy training, and reintegration support. (3,7) During the reporting period the government increased funding for shelters by 50 percent. The government specifically expanded support for the Angondjé shelter, in partnership with local NGOs, facilitating an increase in bed capacity for child trafficking survivors from 80 to 120. (6,31) Additionally, the government promoted capacity building among individuals who provide physiotherapy, and speech therapy to children with special needs. (6) However, research indicates that shelter space is still insufficient to accommodate all survivors of human trafficking as well as other vulnerable children due to inadequate funding. (3,5,7,10)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

Research found no evidence of a government program that aims to address child labor in domestic work or commercial sexual exploitation. (5,7)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Gabon (Table 10).

Table 10. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that minimum age protections are extended to children working outside of formal employment relationships.	2017 – 2022
	Ensure that the legal framework for light work establishes a minimum age no younger than age 13, determines activities that are considered light work, and specifies the conditions under which light work may be undertaken.	2013 – 2022
	Establish criminal prohibitions for the recruitment of children under age 18 for use in armed conflict by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2022
Enforcement	Publish information on the funding level for the labor inspectorate and number of labor inspectors, and ensure both labor inspectors and criminal investigators receive adequate funding, training, transportation, and fuel to carry out inspections and investigations.	2009 – 2022
	Employ at least 48 labor inspectors to ensure adequate coverage for the labor force of approximately 725,000 people.	2022
	Conduct worksite inspections, including routine and unannounced inspections and in both the formal and informal sectors, to identify child labor violations.	2014 – 2022
	Ensure that labor inspectors are not tasked with conciliation or arbitration duties so that they can carry out their primary duties of inspection and monitoring throughout the country.	2009 – 2022
	Ensure that the government conducts an adequate number of labor inspections and criminal investigations into alleged child labor crimes and publish data on criminal law enforcement efforts.	2018 – 2022
	Ensure that criminal law enforcement bodies, including the courts, have sufficient resources to investigate, prosecute, and impose penalties for violations related to the worst forms of child labor.	2022
	Ensure that the National Observatory of the Rights of the Child remains active and functions as a coordinating mechanism to address all forms of child labor and report on its activities.	2013 – 2022
Government Policies	Adopt a policy that addresses all relevant worst forms of child labor, including forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation.	2015 – 2022
	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into policies that aim to address child labor.	2014 – 2022
Social Programs	Ensure that children have access to education by eliminating school fees, increasing the number of teachers and schools in rural areas, and expanding efforts to provide all children with birth registration.	2010 – 2022
	Expand programs to address the scope of the country's child labor problem, including in domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation.	2010 – 2022
	Ensure that the government continues to provide adequate support to survivors of child labor, including sufficient shelter space for survivors.	2010 – 2022

In 2022, The Gambia made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government signed a Memorandum of Understanding with Nigeria to coordinate efforts to address the trafficking of women and children.

It also provided information regarding its criminal law enforcement activities during the reporting period. In addition, the government launched four centers to provide services to survivors of gender-based violence and trafficking in persons, including child victims. However, children in The Gambia are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in forced begging. Gaps in the law remain, including that the minimum age for work of 18 years old is higher than the compulsory education age of 16 years old. The Gambia also lacked resources to conduct adequate enforcement efforts and has insufficient social programs to address child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in The Gambia. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	22.6 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	78.2
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	21.7
Primary Completion Rate (%)		85.2

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2021, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2023. (1)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from the Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 6 (MICS6), 2018. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including protecting crops against animals (3,4)
Industry	Working in carpentry, masonry, sewing, plumbing, and in metal welding workshops† (3,4) Sand mining† (5)
Services	Domestic work (3,6) Street work, including begging and vending (3,6-8) Scavenging for scrap metal at dump sites, markets, garages, and car parks (4,6,9) Working as attendants for commercial vehicles in the transportation sector (3,8) Working as auto mechanics† (3,4,6)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,10-12) Forced begging by Koranic teachers (3,4,11) Forced labor in domestic work, farming, and street vending (4,11)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

In The Gambia, children are exploited in human trafficking and subjected to commercial sexual exploitation, as well as forced labor in domestic work, farming, and street vending. (11,12) Research suggests that before the COVID-19 pandemic, foreign nationals subjected children to commercial sexual exploitation in the Tourism Development Area, which consists of the areas around major beaches, hotels, and nightclubs. (4,11,13-16) The impact of the pandemic on the tourism industry reduced the prevalence of child exploitation in the tourism sector in 2020 and 2021—a trend which reportedly continued during the reporting period. (4,17) In The Gambia, it is common practice to send boys to receive education from Koranic teachers, or marabouts, who sometimes force students to engage in begging, street vending, and agricultural work. (3,12,14,18) In addition, children work in sand mines on the coast, shoveling white sand into trucks for use in the construction industry. (16)

The Constitution and Gambian law mandate free compulsory primary and lower-secondary education. Families, however, are often responsible for supplies and uniforms, exam fees, and contributions to school funds. (6,18,19) In addition, inadequate classroom infrastructure, low numbers of teachers in rural areas, lack of transportation, and limited access to clean water and toilets in schools create barriers for children to access education, increasing their vulnerability to child labor and exploitation. (3,4,6,18,20-22) Children with disabilities face significant barriers in accessing education, including the absence of special education programs outside of urban centers. (4,18,23)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

The Gambia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in The Gambia's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including that the age up to which children are required to attend school is below the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	18	Articles 2 and 45 of the Labor Act (24)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 2 and 44 of the Children's Act; Articles 46 and 48 of the Labor Act (25,24)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 42, 44, and 45 of the Children's Act (25)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 20 of the Constitution; Articles 2, 39–41, 47, and 58 of the Children's Act; Articles 2 and 28 of the Trafficking in Persons Act (19,25,26)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 2, 30, and 39 of the Children's Act; Articles 2, 28, 29, 38(c), and 56 of the Trafficking in Persons Act; Article 13 of the Tourism Offenses Act (25,26,27)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 26, 27, 29–32, and 34 of the Children's Act; Articles 7–9 of the Tourism Offenses Act (25,27)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 31 and 37 of the Children's Act (25)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 59 of the Children's Act (25)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 59 of the Children's Act (25)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 31(c) of the Children's Act (25)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16‡	Article 18 of the Children's Act (25)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 30 of the Constitution; Article 18 of the Children's Act (19,25)

‡ Age calculated based on available information. (28,29)

The Gambia permits children as young as 16 to engage in light work, and children as young as 12 to work as a child apprentice in the informal sector. While the Children's Act generally prohibits children from working in conditions that would be harmful to their health, education, or development, the Act does not determine the activities in which light work or apprenticeships may be permitted, prescribe the number of hours per week for light work or apprenticeships, or specify the conditions in which light work or apprenticeships may be undertaken. (25) The Children's Act provides for compulsory basic education. However, the law does not explicitly specify at what age basic education begins or how many years basic education lasts. (25) In addition, while children in The Gambia are required to attend school up to age 16 based on current policy, this standard makes children ages 16 through 18 vulnerable to child labor, as they are not required to attend school but are not legally permitted to work. (25)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Department of Labor	Receives complaints about child labor. Conducts labor inspections in the formal sector, mediates disputes between employers and labor representatives, and refers serious cases to the labor courts and the Industrial Tribunal. (4) Housed under the Ministry of Trade, Industry, and Regional Integration and Employment. (3,15) Research found that the Department of Labor was unable to fulfill its mandate during the reporting period due to funding shortfalls. (5)
Children's Court	Adjudicates criminal, civil, and care and protection cases involving children. Coordinates with social welfare officers from the Department of Social Welfare (DSW) for the referral and care of children. (4,25,30) Research did not find information on whether the Children's Court took actions to address child labor during the reporting period.
National Agency Against Trafficking in Persons (NAATIP)	Investigates suspected cases of human trafficking, provides support to survivors, coordinates efforts across government agencies, and maintains a database on trafficking cases. (31) Carries out awareness-raising activities and coordinates training for law enforcement officials. Oversees the National Referral Mechanism for the Protection of Vulnerable Migrants, including Victims of Trafficking in The Gambia. (32,33) Receives reports of child abuse complaints from The Gambia Police Force Child Welfare Unit, which has trained child welfare officers at all major police stations. (16,20,21,34) While NAATIP received more funding than in previous years, its resources were not adequate to fulfill its mandate, leaving it dependent on support from international partners. (31)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in The Gambia took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including a lack of funding.

In 2022, the government provided child labor training to the inspectorate's dedicated child labor inspector. (6,31) Although the number of child labor violations is unknown for the reporting period, reports state that three children were removed from worksites as a result of child labor inspections, two of whom received support from social services. (5) However, research indicates that The Gambia does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties, a problem exacerbated by reported insufficient funding of the labor inspectorate. The government funded only inspectors' salaries but did not provide funding for the inspectorate at large in 2022, preventing inspectors from traveling to worksites and conducting inspections in regions and sectors in which child labor is known to occur. (4,6,35,36) In addition, previous reports state that inspectors do not inspect private homes or farms in which children may work, despite being legally permitted to do so. (20,21,24)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in The Gambia took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including lack of training covering all worst forms of child labor.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Unknown (4)	Unknown (6,31)

In cooperation with the UNODC, the government convened a training on trafficking in persons for 30 law enforcement officials in May and a second training for 30 border control officers in October. (31) In cooperation with the IOM, the government also convened a training on trafficking in persons in September for 35 tourism security officers, and a separate training in November for 26 judicial officials on prosecuting trafficking cases using a survivor-centered approach. (31) Although investigators received training on trafficking in persons, they did not receive training on all other worst forms of child labor during the reporting period. (6) In 2022, the government reported investigating five new cases of child labor involving forced labor, trafficking in persons, commercial sexual exploitation, and other illicit activity. (6) The government also allocated a fully furnished office complex and a vehicle to support law enforcement efforts to prevent and address human trafficking. (31) Previous research indicates that penalties are not fully applied to criminal cases involving the worst forms of child labor, which can hinder criminal law enforcement efforts. (13,25,37,38)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of information on steps taken by the government coordination mechanism to address child labor during the reporting year.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Coordination Committee on Child Labor	Coordinates child labor enforcement processes, including prosecutions of the worst forms of child labor. Led by DSW and supported by UNICEF, comprises representatives from Department of Labor, UNICEF, DSW, NAATIP, Action Aid, Ministry of Basic and Secondary Education, Gambia Teachers Union, Young People in the Media, and the Inspector General of Police. (3) Research was unable to determine whether this coordinating body was active in 2022.

The National Agency Against Trafficking in Persons (NAATIP) chairs The National Task Force on Trafficking in Persons, which is intended to regularly assess progress and provide recommendations for combating trafficking in persons. The Task Force met four times in the reporting period, most recently in November 2022. (31)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including the lack of implementation of some policies related to child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Action Plan Against Trafficking in Persons (2021–2025)	Directs governmental efforts to address human trafficking. Includes strategies to improve legal framework, training of law enforcement and social services, prevention and awareness, and protection for human trafficking survivors. (39) In 2022, the government allocated a monthly budget to carry out activities in support of the National Action Plan, including awareness raising, capacity development and training, and community outreach. (31)
Regional Memoranda of Understanding (MOU)	Includes MOUs with both Senegal and Nigeria to coordinate efforts to address human trafficking. The MOU with Senegal commits both countries to information sharing; improved anti-trafficking in persons laws; and prevention, protection, and assistance activities. (4) During the reporting period, The Gambia signed the MOU with Nigeria, which included commitments to coordinate on prosecution, share information, coordinate identification and protection, and facilitate the safe return of human trafficking survivors to their country of origin. (31,40)
Code of Conduct of The Gambia Tourism Authority for the Protection of Children	Raises awareness of commercial sexual exploitation of children in the tourism industry and among tourists. (16,41) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Code of Conduct of The Gambia Tourism Authority for the Protection of Children during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (21,28)

During the reporting period, the Child Labor Office of the Department of Labor, with funding from UNICEF, drafted a national Child Labor Policy, which will be the government's primary instrument in eliminating child labor in the country. (6) The government also approved Ethical Recruitment Policy Guidelines, a Pre-Departure Training Manual, and a Labor Migration Strategy to protect Gambian labor migrants, many of whom are children, from exploitation and unfair treatment in 2022. (31,42) Research was unable to locate copies of these documents.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to fully address all worst forms of child labor.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
DSW Child Welfare Drop-in Centers†	Drop-in centers run by DSW with support from international organizations, foreign NGOs, and local businesses. Provide care, educational support, and counseling to child trafficking survivors, children removed from forced labor, street children, and children exploited by Koranic schools for forced begging. (4,16,20) Research was unable to determine whether the drop-in centers were operational during the reporting period.
Conditional Cash Transfers to Islamic Religious Schools ( Majaalis )†	Ministry of Education program in partnership with the Institute for Social Reformation, an Islamic NGO based in The Gambia, that gives Koranic schools approximately $2 monthly for each student if Koranic teachers do not force students to beg. (4,15,21) Provides curriculum standards to Islamic schools. (4,43) Each month, a joint team of ministry officials and Institute for Social Reformation and Action representatives travels to each Koranic school participating in the program. (4) Research was unable to determine whether the program was in operation during the reporting period.
Government-Run Shelters and "One-Stop" Centers†*	Includes DSW-run shelter, which has a 50-person capacity, supports vulnerable persons including trafficking survivors and children at risk of trafficking. (31) In 2022, the government launched four "one-stop" centers to provide services, including legal aid, shelter, health care, referral assistance, and psychological services to survivors of gender-based violence and trafficking in persons. (31)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of The Gambia.

Child trafficking survivors may receive care from the government-run drop-in centers, privately operated institutions, or in their own residence as appropriate, and still receive government-provided resources regardless of the chosen option. (32,44) Although The Gambia has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem. Programs do not reach all children working in agriculture and domestic work or those vulnerable to human trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, forced begging, and street work. (4,21)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in The Gambia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law's light work and child apprenticeship provisions specify the activities and conditions in which work may be undertaken, and prescribe the number of hours per week such work may be undertaken.	2017 – 2022
	Increase the compulsory education age from 16 years old to 18 years old to align with the minimum age for work.	2020 – 2022
Enforcement	Ensure that agencies responsible for labor law and criminal law enforcement—including the Department of Labor, the Children's Court, and the National Agency Against Trafficking in Persons—are adequately funded by the government and able to fulfill their mandates.	2018 – 2022
	Publish information on labor inspectorate funding and the number of child labor violations found on an annual basis.	2021 – 2022
	Strengthen the labor inspectorate by initiating routine inspections rather than performing inspections solely based on complaints received and ensure these inspections target sectors prone to the use of child labor.	2022
	Increase the number of labor inspectors from 4 to 24 to ensure adequate coverage of the labor force.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure the government conducts an adequate number of labor inspections.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that the labor inspectorate is fully funded and has the resources and capabilities to conduct inspections in all sectors, including at private homes and farms.	2017 – 2022

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Ensure that criminal law enforcement officers receive training related to child labor and ensure training covers all worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation, forced labor, and the use of children in illicit activity.	2022
	Ensure that criminal penalties for the worst forms of child labor are consistently applied to deter violations.	2016 – 2022
Coordination	Ensure that the National Coordination Committee on Child Labor is active and able to carry out its intended mandate of coordinating child labor enforcement processes, including prosecutions of the worst forms of child labor.	2018 – 2022
Government Policies	Ensure activities are undertaken to implement the Code of Conduct of The Gambia Tourism Authority for the Protection of Children and publish results from activities implemented during the reporting period.	2022
	Adopt, implement, and publish the National Child Labor Policy and ensure it addresses all relevant worst forms of child labor.	2021 – 2022
	Provide public copies of policies addressing child labor, including the Ethical Recruitment Policy Guidelines, Pre-Departure Training Manual, and the Labor Migration Strategy.	2022
Social Programs	Ensure that children can complete compulsory schooling by subsidizing or defraying the cost of supplies, uniforms, transportation, and other fees.	2010 – 2022
	Enhance opportunities for children to access education by providing adequate classroom facilities, clean water, and sanitation; ensuring accessibility for students with disabilities; and increasing the number of teachers in rural areas.	2017 – 2022
	Ensure activities are undertaken to implement key social programs, including the Child Welfare Drop-In Centers and the Conditional Cash Transfer Program, and publish results of activities implemented during the reporting period.	2022
	Expand existing social programs to address the full scope of the child labor problem, including all worst forms of child labor.	2010 – 2022

- 44 U.S. Embassy- Banjul. Reporting. February 1, 2022.

In 2022, Georgia made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Labor Inspectorate created a group of expert labor inspectors to identify instances of forced labor and trafficking for labor exploitation and opened branch offices in Batumi and Kutaisi to increase its operational presence in Western Georgia. The Prosecutor's Office adopted a new strategy for 2022–2027 to increase efforts to identify and effectively prosecute child trafficking and labor exploitation by using a victim-centered approach. In addition, the government approved a new National Strategy for the Protection of Human Rights in Georgia for 2022–2030, with a focus on protection of the rights of certain vulnerable groups, including children. However, children in Georgia are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including forced begging. Children also engage in agricultural labor. Georgia's minimum age for work does not meet international standards because it does not apply to children working in the informal sector. The Criminal Code does not explicitly prohibit the use of children in illicit activities. Furthermore, lack of effective coordination between the entities involved in addressing human trafficking hinders efforts to adequately assist child victims.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table I provides key indicators on children's work and education in Georgia.

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

	Raising cattle, activities unknown (7,9)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Estimates suggest that 1,000 to 2,000 children earn a living by begging in Georgia, primarily caused by poverty, homelessness, or domestic violence. (3,5,7,8,12,14) Many child beggars are from Roma communities. (11,13) Children also engage in seasonal labor migration, both within Georgia and to Türkiye, where children as young as age 13 work during the summers to harvest tea and hazelnuts, as well as in construction. (7,8) In the regions of Abkhazia and South Ossetia, which are occupied by Russian forces and not under control of the central government, lack of information limits an assessment of the types of work children perform and the sectors in which they work. (4,5,16,17)

Roma and Azerbaijani Kurd ethnic minorities and refugee and internally displaced children from Georgia, Armenia, and Moldova are subjected to forced begging and coerced into criminality in Georgia. (12-16) There are instances in which Georgia is a source and transit country for child trafficking, especially of girls being taken to Cyprus, Egypt, Türkiye, and the United Arab Emirates for the purpose of commercial sexual exploitation. (12-16) According to the IOM, child sexual exploitation is also an issue within Georgia. (8) Limited evidence indicates children may perform hazardous activities in construction. (10)

Children who do not attend school in Georgia are vulnerable to child labor. Some children systematically miss or drop out of school due to their involvement in seasonal work, household labor, or seasonal labor migration. (3,7) School employees, such as teachers and administrative personnel, do not always record absenteeism by students or the reasons for it. As a result, many cases of potential child labor are not recorded or investigated. (3,7,18) Migrant children and some Roma children may not attend school due to language barriers; however, there are some mixed language schools with Georgian, Russian, and Azeri or Armenian languages. (3,18,19) Socially vulnerable children, children from impoverished families, children with disabilities, Roma children, those who live in rural areas, and asylum-seeking and refugee children may have difficulty accessing education. This is in part due to a lack of identity documents, which help children access state-funded services, including social, medical, and educational programs. (4,8,20-22) UNICEF notes that some migrant and Roma families continue to destroy identification and other documents in an effort to avoid interaction with state officials. (9,12)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Georgia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Georgia's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including a lack of minimum age protections in the informal sector.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	16	Article 4 of the Labor Code of Georgia (23)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 4 of the Labor Code of Georgia; Articles 2 and 5 of the Law on Occupational Safety (23,24)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 4(4) of the Labor Code of Georgia; Articles 2 and 5 of the Law on Occupational Safety; Resolution 381 Approving the List of Dangerous, Heavy, Harmful, and Hazardous Works (23-25)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 30 of the Constitution of Georgia; Articles 143/1, 143/2, and 143/3 of the Criminal Code of Georgia; Law of Georgia on Combating Human Trafficking; Article 55 of the Code on the Rights of the Child (26-29)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 143/1, 143/2, 143/3, and 172 of the Criminal Code of Georgia; Law of Georgia on Combating Human Trafficking (27,28)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 143/1, 143/2, 143/3, 253–255, 255/1, and 255/2 of the Criminal Code of Georgia; Article 56 of the Code on the Rights on the Child (28,29)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No		Article 171 of the Criminal Code of Georgia (28)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 10 of the Law of Georgia on Military Duty and Military Service (30)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Articles 9 and 21 of the Law of Georgia on Military Duty and Military Service (30)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No		Article 410 of the Criminal Code of Georgia; Article 59 of the Code on the Rights of the Child (28,29)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15‡	Articles 2 and 9 of the Law of Georgia on General Education (31)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 22 of the Law of Georgia on General Education (31)

‡ Age calculated based on available information. (31)

No legislative changes were introduced during the reporting period. (8)

Labor Code provisions related to the minimum age for work are not in compliance with international standards because they do not apply to the informal sector. (23) In Georgia, some employers hire children informally specifically because they are not covered by the Labor Code. (7) Georgia's law on education allows children to leave school at age 15. (31) These children are vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor because they are no longer required to be in school but are not legally permitted to work full time until they are 16 years old. Article 4 of the Labor Code specifies conditions under which children ages 14 and 15 may perform light work, and Article 14 prescribes the number of hours that may be worked, but the law does not specify the activities in which light work is permissible. (23) Article 4 of the Labor Code stipulates that children under age 14 are allowed to work only in sport, art, and culture, as well as some advertising activities. (23) Lastly, Georgia's laws do not criminally prohibit the use of children in illicit activities, including the use, procuring, or offering of children for the production or trafficking of drugs. (28)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor, Health, and Social Affairs (MoLHSA)	The Labor Inspectorate under MoLHSA operates as a semi-autonomous legal entity of public law. (8,9) The Labor Inspectorate enforces labor laws related to forced labor, labor exploitation, and occupational safety and health norms through routine targeted and unannounced inspections. (8) Labor inspectors may inspect any facility or economic activity, including private farms and private residential houses where economic activity takes place. In 2022, labor inspectors went through 24 intensive short-term and long-term professional and technical trainings, to include occupational safety and health topics, labor rights, and child labor. (8) The Labor Inspectorate created a group of specialized labor inspectors to identify instances of forced labor and trafficking for labor exploitation, and opened branch offices in Batumi and Kutaisi to increase its operational presence in Western Georgia. (32) Additionally, 37 inspectors completed a training course on forced labor and labor exploitation organized by the Ministry of Justice, Labor Inspectorate, and the IOM, with the financial support of the Bureau for International Narcotics and Law Enforcement Affairs (INL) of the U.S. Department of State. (8,33) Throughout the year, the Labor Inspectorate conducted outreach to employers and the general population to share information on child labor and forced labor, with focus on the border regions with Türkiye where, according to reports, children engage in seasonal work in country and in Türkiye. (8) In addition, MoLHSA, through the Department of Labor and Employment Policy, revises laws and policies to be in accordance with international standards. (34) Through the Social Services Agency, administers social benefits such as targeted social assistance, health care, and vouchers for day care, and employs social workers who oversee child protection. (5) Receives complaints through the Child Protection and Social Programs sub-department and refers complaints of child labor violations to law enforcement agencies for investigation. (34) Operates a hotline in eight languages (Georgian, English, Russian, Turkish, Azeri, Armenian, Arabic, and Persian). (32)
Ministry of Internal Affairs (MoIA)	Enforces criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking. (3,4) Through the Human Rights Protection and Investigation Quality Monitoring Department, ensures prompt responses to human trafficking crimes, and suggests recommendations for investigations and for legislation implementation. (8) Identifies human traffickers and collates data on traffickers across various agencies through the Information-Analytical Department. (35) Within MoIA, the Central Criminal Police Department leads criminal investigations of human trafficking, including the trafficking of children, through the Division for Combating Human Trafficking and Illegal Migration. Operates a hotline that is available in Georgian, Russian, and English. (3,4,32,35) Mobile task force units within MoIA, dedicated to anti-trafficking activities, proactively interview individuals in vulnerable occupations and demographics, including hospitality workers and children living and working on the streets, to identify possible cases of labor exploitation and to advise them of their legal rights and available government services. (3,32,36) MoIA's National Police Academy is the primary institution responsible for training law enforcement officials on organized crime and trafficking, including referral procedures for child protection. (8) In 2022, MoIA launched child trafficking investigations of 15 cases of unlawful adoption of minors dating back to the 1980s. (8,37) In addition to initial trainings, 10 employees of the Division for Combating Human Trafficking participated in 10 trainings on the topic of transnational crime and human trafficking, to include child exploitation. Two investigators of the Police Department of the Autonomous Republic of Adjara (Adjara Police Department) of MoIA received trainings on child labor. (8)
Prosecutor's Office of Georgia (POG)	An independent entity, separate from the Ministry of Justice, which prosecutes criminal cases involving child exploitation, forced labor, and human trafficking. (15,38) Manages an interagency working group on child labor trafficking issues under the framework of the POG operational strategy. The working group was active during the reporting period. (3,32) In 2022, the POG adopted a new Strategy for 2022–2027, to include a child victim-centered approach and to increase efforts to identify and effectively prosecute child trafficking and labor exploitation. (8,39)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Georgia appeared to function adequately in addressing child labor (Table 6).

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$1,927,900 (3)	$2,041,903 (8)

Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	0 (3)	15 (8)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	0 (3)	15 (8)

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor (Cont.)

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (3)	Yes (8)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (3)	Yes (8)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (40)	Yes (40)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (3)	Yes (8)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (3)	Yes (8)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (3)	Yes (8)

During the reporting period, the Labor Inspectorate increased its staffing to 123 labor inspectors. Research indicates that Georgia has an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (8,41) There are two inspectors specifically assigned to monitor forced labor and child labor issues, but all inspectors are trained on six technical and general topics and provided with continuing education to have the skills required to detect and respond to child labor. (3,8)

The number of inspections decreased significantly during the reporting period; however, all inspections in 2022 were conducted on occupational safety and health issues and labor code violations, including child labor, compared to inspections conducted in 2021 that mostly focused on pandemic-related regulations. In 2022, out of 845 inspections conducted in different economic sectors, including agriculture, 830 were scheduled and 15 were unannounced. (8) During the reporting period, labor inspectors identified 15 cases of child labor (11 were found during scheduled and 4 during unannounced inspections), in wholesale and retail, accommodations, and food delivery services in the Tbilisi, Adjara, Shida Kartli, Mtskheta-Mtianeti and Imereti regions. (8,9) All of the companies were fined, and penalties were collected in the amount of $32,592 (85,300 GEL). (8) The Russia-occupied regions of Abkhazia and South Ossetia are not under the control of Georgian central authorities, who are prevented from carrying out inspections and law enforcement there. (4,14,17)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Georgia took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including limited efforts to investigate, prosecute, and convict child labor crimes during the reporting period.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (3)	Yes (8)
Number of Investigations	6 (3)	3 (8)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	2 (3)	1 (32)
Number of Convictions	2 (3)	0 (8)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (3)	No (8)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (3)	Yes (8)

The Georgian government made limited efforts to investigate, prosecute, and convict child labor crimes during the reporting period. In 2022, Georgian law enforcement agencies initiated three investigations of child labor exploitation cases (compared to six in 2021); two of those investigations remained ongoing at the end of the reporting period. (8) One case was referred for prosecution and involved child exploitation through forced begging and criminal activities. (32) Criminal investigators were unable to investigate and prosecute any potential human trafficking cases, including of children, in Abkhazia and South Ossetia, because they remain occupied by Russian forces and outside of central government control. (4,14,16) In addition, according to the IOM, the Central Criminal Police Department in Tbilisi still has no direct supervision over the team of specialized police investigators in the Adjara region and there are indications that the lack of effective communication between specialized investigators in Tbilisi and Batumi may hinder human trafficking investigations in the Adjara region. (9,32)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2022, 22 employees of the Prosecutor's Office (POG) and the Ministry of Internal Affairs (MoIA) completed a training course on investigating cases of child exploitation and conducting interviews of child victims, organized by the IOM with financial support from the Bureau for International Narcotics and Law Enforcement Affairs (INL). In addition, the IOM facilitated discussion for 20 government representatives, including the Ministry of Justice, MoIA, and POG employees, on the main challenges and performance of Georgia's law enforcement entities in investigating and prosecuting human trafficking. (32) During the reporting period, the Ministry of Justice, with financial support from the OSCE and the Swiss Embassy in Georgia, led the first national simulation-based training on human trafficking for 40 investigators, prosecutors, labor inspectors, psychologists, social workers, and staff working with human trafficking victims and survivors. (32)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of coordinating mechanism with sufficient scope to address all forms of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Interagency Anti-Trafficking Coordination Council for the Implementation of Measures Against Human Trafficking (A-TIP Council)	Coordinates government efforts against human trafficking, including efforts to protect and rehabilitate survivors. (15) Drafts national action plans and other strategic government programs to address human trafficking, and publishes biannual statistics on human trafficking, including sexual and labor exploitation of minors. Refers child survivors to shelters to receive social services. (3,4) Chaired by the Minister of Justice and comprises representatives from state agencies and non-state entities. (11,15) In December 2022, adopted a new National Action Plan (NAP) for 2023–2024 and issued a report on the implementation of the previous NAP for 2021–2022. (8,32,42) In addition, it adopted and submitted for the government's approval a Governmental Strategy on Protection of Homeless Children from Violence, including Trafficking in Persons (2023–2026). (8,32) The A-TIP Council published information and statistics on anti-trafficking efforts on the Ministry of Justice's website; however, observers continued to report the A-TIP Council did not provide regular public assessments of government efforts and, as a result, appeared to lack transparency. (9,16)

In December 2022, the Interagency Human Rights Council, in collaboration with the ILO, released an online training course, "Business, human rights, and decent work in Georgia," that included topics on elimination of child labor. (8,45,46) In addition, the Ministry of Labor, Health, and Social Affairs (MoLHSA)'s Labor Inspectorate and MoIA signed a Memorandum of Cooperation that allows carrying out joint inspections to counter trafficking of minors and to continue to identify children working on the street. (8) However, lack of effective coordination between the three entities involved in addressing human trafficking—the MoIA's Human Rights Department and victim assistance coordinators, the POG with its witness and victim assistance coordinators, and the Agency for State Care—may hinder efforts to assist child victims. (3,9)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including the insufficient scope of existing policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Action Plan on Trafficking in Persons (2021–2022)	Aimed to prevent human trafficking with improved detection mechanisms and effective criminal prosecution; promoted reintegration of victims, including child victims, into society; and improved interagency coordination in the fight against trafficking. (8)
Code on the Rights of the Child	Seeks to establish and implement a range of measures to protect children from violence and hazardous child labor. (4,5,29) In 2022, the Permanent Parliamentary Council for the Protection of Children's Rights, responsible for monitoring the Code's implementation, conducted an assessment of seven primary areas of the Code's Action Plan, including the deinstitutionalization process, alternative care systems, preventive and family support programs, child poverty, protection of children from violence, assessment of children's disabilities, and reform of the status-granting system. (8,47) Throughout the year, 10 municipalities either established or amended programs for protection and support of children's rights. (8)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (21,48)

In September 2022, the government adopted and submitted for Parliament’s approval the new National Strategy for the Protection of Human Rights in Georgia for 2022–2030. While the new strategy does not address all fundamental human rights and freedoms, it does put a special emphasis on the protection of the rights of certain vulnerable groups, including children. (8,49) The government drafted and submitted for adoption the Governmental Strategy on Protection of Homeless Children from Violence, including Trafficking in Persons 2023–2026, which covers child labor issues. (8) Although the government has established policies to address child begging, child trafficking, child labor in street work, and hazardous child labor, it does not have a policy to address child labor in agriculture or other forms of informal work.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the full scope of the country’s child labor problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Programs Administered by the Agency for State Care and Assistance for the Victims of Human Trafficking†	MoLHSA legal public entity that provides care and administers social benefits, including targeted social assistance for survivors of child labor, human trafficking, domestic abuse, and sexual violence, as well as for elderly, disabled, and orphan populations. (3,4) Operates six shelters and seven crisis centers for children living and working on the street. (8,14) Implements the government’s Rehabilitation and Reintegration Strategy, which includes operating shelters for survivors of human trafficking. (21) Operates eight mobile groups to identify street children. In addition, operates a hotline for potential victims of human trafficking with assistance available in eight languages. (32) The hotline provides both over-the-phone and in-person psychological support and counseling services for children and parents. (3) Continued to implement the Social Rehabilitation and Childcare program with an increased budget of $19.3 million (52.1 million GEL), up from $12.82 million (40.0 million GEL) in 2021. The program identifies and provides psychosocial rehabilitation and integration assistance to homeless children at high risk of abandonment or separation and provides placement of abandoned children into foster care, guardianship, or small group homes. (8) During the reporting period, assisted 296 street children, 151 of whom were directed to crisis centers and 67 of whom were directed to 24-hour shelters under MoLHSA management in four cities: Tbilisi, Rustavi, Kutaisi, and Batumi. (8,9)
Programs Overseen by the Ministry of Education, Science, Culture, and Sport (MoES)‡	MoES oversees national primary education curriculum and vocational training programs. (4) Funds programs that promote the inclusion of vulnerable children in education. (4,21) Initiatives include a program designed to increase the participation in school by street children, children forced into begging, and children who are seasonal agricultural workers; and a program to distribute free textbooks to public school students. (8,21) Conducts anti-trafficking activities in elementary schools, high schools, and institutions of higher education. (13) Addresses the educational needs of vulnerable children by funding education for children living in MoLHSA shelters, vocational programs, and a program to increase the number of Georgian language teachers in communities with a high number of ethnic minorities. (3) In 2022, the government approved a new Unified Strategy of Education and Science 2022–2030, aiming to ensure equal access to education for all children, including children with disabilities, minorities, and marginalized children, as well as those who are at risk of dropping out. (49,50)
Targeted Social Assistance Program and Child Benefit Program†	Social Services Agency-administered social assistance programs designed to eliminate poverty, especially child poverty. Provides a variety of services, including support for impoverished families, and daycare for vulnerable children. (3) In 2022, increased child monthly benefits from $37 to $56 (from 100 GEL to 150 GEL). (51)

† Program is funded by the Government of Georgia.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (4,8,11,21)

During the reporting period, the government continued to provide identification documents to street children to enable them to access healthcare, education, social and other state programs; however, government outreach remains insufficient to address the issue. (21,49,52) In 2022, the government conducted public awareness campaigns throughout Georgia to raise awareness of child labor and trafficking of minors. (8) In addition, the Public Defender of Georgia, with the support of UNICEF, published a Child Rights Impact Assessment of COVID-19 Related State Measures, including the impact on children living and working on the streets, and specific recommendations to other government agencies. (53) Although Georgia has programs that target child labor, including ones to address the problem of street children, their scope does not fully address the extent of the problem, sometimes due to limited resources at the local level. (4,7,8,54) Furthermore, according to the Public Defender, the number of shelters, day care centers, and specialists working with homeless children in the country remain insufficient and there are no additional rehabilitation and resocialization services or mechanisms to prevent these children from returning to the street. (8)

Additionally, the government adopted a simplified school enrollment procedure and opened classrooms in the Ukrainian language for Ukrainian refugee children. (17,55,56) Despite the government's efforts to implement an inclusive education system, the Public Defender of Georgia noted that educational access remains inadequate for vulnerable children, including students with disabilities, street children, and children in state care. (4,57)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Georgia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the minimum age for work applies to all children, including those in informal work.	2017 – 2022
	Raise the compulsory education age from 15 to 16 to be consistent with the minimum age for work.	2009 – 2022
	Ensure that the law's light work provisions are sufficiently specific, including the list of activities in which light work is permissible for 15-year-old children, to prevent them from involvement in child labor.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the use, procuring, and offering of children for the production and trafficking of drugs.	2019 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2022
Enforcement	Impose penalties for convictions related to the worst forms of child labor.	2022
	Continue to increase communication between the Ministry of Internal Affairs' specialized investigators across the country, including with investigators from Adjara region, to ensure coordinated human trafficking investigations.	2022
Coordination	Establish coordinating mechanisms to prevent and eliminate all worst forms of child labor.	2022
	Increase coordination between the Ministry of Internal Affairs, the Prosecutor's Office, the Agency for State Care, and other government agencies.	2018 – 2022
Government Policies	Adopt a policy that addresses all relevant forms of child labor, including child labor in agriculture and other forms of informal work.	2017 – 2022
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor, including in agriculture, to inform policies and programs.	2018 – 2022
	Make additional efforts to register all children in school, including those from Roma communities, provide them with identity documents, and ensure that these groups can access education.	2018 – 2022
	Improve access to education for children who speak languages other than Georgian or Russian, as well as for socially vulnerable children, children from impoverished families, children with disabilities, and children who live in rural areas.	2019 – 2022
	Expand existing programs to address the scope of the child labor problem, especially for street children, and increase resources available at the local level.	2018 – 2022

In 2022, Ghana made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government significantly increased the number of labor inspectors from 48 to 189 and labor inspections from 749 to 1,108. The government also supported the Alliance on Sustainable Cocoa, which works to improve the economic, social, and environmental sustainability of cocoa production and trade, including by addressing child labor. In addition, it improved its data sharing efforts with non-governmental organizations and other countries by providing timely responses to requests for information. However, children in Ghana are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in fishing and cocoa production. Prohibitions related to the commercial sexual exploitation of children do not meet international standards because protections do not extend to live performances. Ghana also does not prohibit the use of children for illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs. In addition, the government has not acceded to the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child's Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography. Lastly, resource constraints severely limited the government's ability to adequately enforce labor laws and implement social programs.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Ghana.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	13.0 (927,591)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	89.9

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Producing cocoa, including land clearing, using machetes and cutlasses for weeding, breaking cocoa pods, collecting cocoa pods with a harvesting hook, exposure to pesticides,† and carrying heavy loads† of water (2-9)
	Production of rice, palm oil and cotton, including weeding, and harvesting (10)
	Herding livestock, including cattle, hunting, and work in slaughterhouses (9)
Industry	Fishing, including for tilapia; preparing bait, nets, and fishing gear; launching, paddling, and draining canoes; diving for fish; casting and pulling fishing nets and untangling them underwater; sorting, picking, cleaning, smoking, transporting, and selling fish; cleaning and repairing nets; and building and repairing boats (3-5,9-13)
	Quarrying† and small-scale mining,† sometimes for gold, including the use of mercury,† digging in deep pits, crushing rocks by hand, carrying heavy loads,† and operating machinery† (5,7,9,11)
	Textiles, Manufacturing† (7,8)
	Construction and carrying heavy loads (3,7-9)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Sector/Industry	Activity
Services	Domestic work (4,5,9)
	Transporting heavy loads as kayayeri † (5,9,14,15)
	Work in transportation† (8)
	Street work,† including begging, (5,7,9)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,5,9,16-18)
	Forced labor in begging; agriculture, including cocoa; herding; fishing; artisanal gold mining; domestic work; and street work, including vending and carrying heavy loads (3,5,9,17-21)
	Forced ritual servitude for girls known as trokosi , including in domestic work for priests (16,19)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

NORC at the University of Chicago released a report detailing findings from a sectoral representative survey conducted in Ghana and Côte d'Ivoire during the cocoa harvesting season of 2018–2019. This report found an increase in child labor (and hazardous child labor) in cocoa production during the 10-year timeframe since the survey in 2008–2009. (6) A majority of children who are subjected to human trafficking in Ghana are exploited for labor in cocoa production, domestic work, commercial sexual exploitation, gold mining, and fishing. Children as young as age 4 are subjected to forced labor in fishing in the areas around Lake Volta, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (5,6,9,19,20,22) In addition, girls as young as age 13 from rural northern regions in Ghana travel to urban centers to work as kayayeri, or female porters, carrying heavy loads on their heads in markets, and are particularly vulnerable to sexual abuse and exploitation. (5,9,14,15)

According to the Constitution and the Education Act, primary education in Ghana is free from kindergarten through high school, though only compulsory through junior high school, and a birth certificate is not needed for enrollment. (9,23,24) The dual-track system, introduced in 2018, allows secondary school students to attend school in alternating semesters and take advantage of opportunities such as vocational training when they are not in school. (14,25) Although this has significantly increased the overall number of children attending school, reports suggest that opportunities to attend vocational training are often not readily available or affordable. As a result, these children are vulnerable to exploitation in child labor during the times when they are not in school. (2,3,11,16,17,26) In addition, factors such as a shortage of classrooms, administrative fees, expenses for school supplies and uniforms, long distances to schools, the absence of sanitation facilities, overcrowding in urban areas, sexual harassment of girls in schools, physical violence and verbal abuse in schools, and poor educational infrastructure, particularly in rural areas, severely limit access to education for many children. (2,3,5,9,11,19)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Ghana has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Ghana's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the lack of commercial sexual exploitation prohibitions for live performances.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Section 89 and 92 of the Children's Act (27)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Section 91 and 92 of the Children's Act (27)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 28.1d, 28.2, and 28.5 of the Constitution; Article 7 of the Labor Regulations Legislative Instrument; Sections 91 and 92 of the Children's Act; Article 58 of the Labor Act (23,27-30)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 16.1 and 16.2 of the Constitution; Articles 116 and 117 of the Labor Act; Sections 1–3 and 42 of the Human Trafficking Act; Sections 1 and 2 of the Human Trafficking Prohibition Legislative Instrument (23,28,31,32)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Sections 1 and 2 of the Human Trafficking Act; Sections 1 and 2 of the Human Trafficking Prohibition Legislative Instrument; Articles 21–25 of the Labor Regulations Legislative Instrument (29,31,32)

(29,33-35)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Ghana Armed Forces General Eligibility (Recruits) (36)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes*		Ghana Armed Forces General Eligibility (Recruits) (36)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15‡	Article 2.2 of the Education Act (37)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 25.1.a of the Constitution; Articles 1.1, 1.2, and 2.2 of the Education Act (23,37)

* Country has no conscription (36)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (37)

While Ghana does criminally prohibit the use, procuring, and offering of a child for electronic pornographic performances, the law does not extend to live pornographic performances. In addition, although Ghana has prohibited some hazardous work for children, the current hazardous work list does not cover all occupations or activities in which child labor is known to occur, including in cocoa production. (3,29,38,39) Furthermore, Ghana has not established a law that prohibits the use of children for illicit activities.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Employment and Labor Relations (MELR)	Enforces child labor laws. (14) Conducts national dialogue and a workshop on Child Labor-Free Zones to discuss child labor in the cocoa industry. (3)
Ministry of Local Government and Rural Development's District Assemblies	Through labor inspectors, investigates child labor violations, educates employers on compliance with child labor laws, and conducts inspections. (3,9,38) Through social services subcommittees, enforces child labor provisions in the informal sector. (3,27)

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of the Interior	Through its Ghana Police Service, investigates, arrests, and prosecutes cases related to the worst forms of child labor, and operates a 24/7 hotline for reporting crimes. (3,9) Within the Ghana Police Service, the Domestic Violence and Victim Support Unit and Anti-Human Trafficking Unit investigate cases and provide support to survivors. (3,40) Through its Ghana Immigration Service, combats human trafficking through Anti-Human Smuggling and Trafficking Units. (3)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Ghana took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Employment and Labor Relations that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient resource allocation.

While the labor inspectorate is unable to assess fines for child labor violations, they are able to refer violations to the Ghana Police Services who can issue them for violations. (9,28) Research indicates that Ghana does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (3,5,24,41) Additionally, research also found that inadequate resources, including funding, transportation, office space, and office supplies hamper the labor inspectorate's capacity to enforce child labor laws, particularly in the informal sector in which child labor is most common. (3,4,38) In addition, a formal referral mechanism continued to be hindered by the lack of funding, shelter space, and transportation for survivors. (3,4)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Ghana took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of criminal law enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient allocation of financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (5)	Yes (9)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (5)	46 (9)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	16 (5)	14 (9)
Number of Convictions	3 (5)	13 (9)

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (5)	Yes (9)

During the reporting period, the government organized 6 consultative stakeholder meetings to review and develop the new national plan of action on the worst forms of child labor; developed a communications strategy for the years 2022–2026 on human trafficking issues; and organized 5 capacity building trainings for over 300 government officials on irregular human trafficking migration patterns, definitions of forced and child labor, and capacity training which supported survivors of human trafficking. (42) However, criminal enforcement agencies lack the resources to properly monitor sectors in which the worst forms of child labor are known to occur. (5,6,9,17,19,43)

The Office of the Attorney General is responsible for prosecuting child trafficking violations. However, there was an insufficient number of state attorneys designated to prosecute human trafficking crimes. A majority of cases were handled by the Ghana Police Service's police prosecutors, whose lack of advanced legal training may impede their ability to prosecute complex criminal cases. (24,44,45) Research also indicates that slow communication and challenges in evidence collection between the Ghana Police Service and the Attorney General's office may have further hampered efforts to prosecute cases of child trafficking. (3) The IOM has also developed a Trafficking in Persons Information System to improve case tracking. While several ministries, including the Ministry of Employment and Labor Relations; the Ministry of Gender, Children, and Social Protection; the Ministry of Justice; and the Ministry of the Interior have committed to using this system, research shows that there was limited use of the Trafficking in Persons Information System during the reporting period. (3)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Steering Committee on Child Labor	Coordinates government efforts to address the worst forms of child labor, and oversees implementation of the National Plan of Action Phase II on the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor, which includes implementation of the Ghana Child Labor Monitoring System. (3,46) Led by MELR's Child Labor Unit, includes representatives from other ministries, employers' and workers' organizations, and civil society. (3,46,47) During the reporting period, the committee met on a regular basis and continued anti-trafficking prevention efforts. (9)

The Inter-Sectoral Standard Operating Procedure for child protection and family welfare provides a harmonized framework of agreed standards, principles, and procedures for all child protection and family welfare stakeholders to understand each other's roles and responsibilities. Under the supervision of the Ministry of Gender, Children, and Social Protection, it identifies specific procedures for the use of forms, tools, and guides by social services and other key stakeholders, and it holds stakeholders accountable to each other. (4,5)

During the reporting period, the government improved its data sharing efforts with NGOs and other countries by providing child labor figures, specifically those related to freshwater fishing. The information provided informed NGOs of how to better implement their programs. (9)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including the lack of a policy to address all worst forms of child labor.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
2010 Declaration of Joint Action to Support the Implementation of the Harkin-Engel Protocol and Its Accompanying Framework of Action	Joint Declaration by the Governments of Ghana, Côte d'Ivoire, and the United States with the International Cocoa and Chocolate Industry. (50,51) Provides resources and coordinates with key stakeholders on efforts to reduce the worst forms of child labor in cocoa-producing areas. (50,51) Ensures that all project efforts implemented under the Declaration and Accompanying Framework align with Ghana's national action plans to promote coherence and sustainability. (50,51) This strategy includes the Cocoa for Good Strategy, a $500 million investment to make cocoa in Ghana and Côte d'Ivoire more sustainable and transparent. In 2022, Ghana and Côte d'Ivoire, along with EU stakeholders, supported the Alliance on Sustainable Cocoa, which works to improve the economic, social, and environmental sustainability of cocoa production and trade, including by addressing child labor. (52,53)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (40,55)

Two new national action plans to address child labor and human trafficking were developed during the reporting period but have yet to be finalized. (9) As a result, Ghana lacks a policy to address all worst forms of child labor. In addition, research was unable to determine whether the Hazardous Child Labor Activity Framework and the Hazardous Child Labor Activity Framework for the Cocoa Sector, which was developed in consultation with workers' and employers' organizations to identify hazardous activities that should be prohibited for children, was implemented during the reporting period. (30,39) Moreover, although the government made strides in the implementation of its National Plan of Action for the Elimination of Human Trafficking in Ghana, research indicates that the government relied heavily on NGOs to implement the mandates of this policy. (17)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate funding and the inadequacy of programs to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Industry-Funded Projects	Projects that aim to increase sustainability in the cocoa sector; improve farmer livelihoods; improve access to education; and address the worst forms of child labor in cocoa-growing areas. Some projects may be in support of the World Cocoa Foundation's CocoaAction (2014–2020) initiative and the spirit of the 2010 Declaration. (56)
Ministry of Gender, Children, and Social Protection (MOGCSP) Programs‡	Programs that aim to support vulnerable children. Includes: the Program to Assist Kayayei , which provides rehabilitation and reintegration support; the temporary program "Get Off the Street," which aims to remove children from the street and reintegrate them into family and educational settings; the Human Trafficking Fund, which aims to provide financial support to victims; and the conditional cash transfer program, which aims to provide monetary support to poor households with orphans and vulnerable children on the condition that these children attend school. (57-59) During the reporting period, MOGCSP continued their advocacy efforts through TV and radio campaigns on topics related to child labor and human trafficking. (42)
Educational Programs‡	Ministry of Education-funded programs under the Free Compulsory Universal Basic Education aim to increase school attendance and enrollment. MOGCSP's Ghana School Feeding Program aims to reduce malnutrition, and improve attendance among students; its Capitation Grant Scheme helps defray the cost of basic education for students in public primary schools; and its Ghana Education Service—Girls' Education Unit places girls' education officers at the regional and district levels, and mobilizes communities to enroll more girls in school. (58,60) During the reporting period, the Ghana School Feeding Program fed 3,448,065 pupils in 10,832 public schools. (61)

† Program is funded by the Government of Ghana.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (45)

Although the government worked closely with industry, NGOs, and international organizations to implement child labor programs in cocoa production, fishing, and mining, the breadth of these programs remains insufficient to address the full scope of the problem. (5) Research indicates a lack of funding as one of the primary obstacles in implementing programs to address child labor. (3,5,57) In addition, shelters are needed in additional regions and districts for survivors of the worst forms of child labor, as well as more funding and logistics support for rescue operations and survivor protection. (3,17,19,24)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Ghana (Table 11).

Although research found no evidence that child labor exists in Grenada, in 2022, the government made no advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. The government's ability to prevent children from being subjected to the worst forms of child labor is limited because existing laws require the use of force, threats, abuse of power, or other forms of coercion, and therefore do not comprehensively prohibit child trafficking. Grenada has also not identified activities prohibited for children or criminally prohibited the use, procuring, or offering of a child for all forms of commercial sexual exploitation. In addition, the government has not published data on labor inspectorate funding.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Grenada. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable

Research found no evidence that child labor exists in Grenada.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 3). However, gaps exist in Grenada's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for hazardous work.

The government has not identified by national law or regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited for children; however, night work is prohibited for those under age 18. (3) Although Grenada's Employment Act and Education Act allow holiday employment for children over 14 years of age, this does not meet international standards as it does not determine the activities for which light work may be permitted or limit the number of hours for light work. (3,10) Despite establishing heightened penalties for traffickers of children, the Prevention of Trafficking in Persons Act does not sufficiently prohibit the trafficking of children because it requires the use of force, threats, abuse of power, or other forms of coercion to classify an act as human trafficking. (5) The Criminal Code, Electronic Crimes Bill, and Prevention of Trafficking in Persons Act also do not criminally prohibit the use, procuring, or offering of a child for all forms of commercial sexual exploitation. (5,7) Moreover, laws providing for free basic education do not meet international standards because they permit schools to charge tuition fees for some students who reside in Grenada but are not citizens. (10)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established relevant institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 4).

Table 4. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor	Enforces laws related to child labor through its Labor Commission, which generates a list of workplaces to inspect. (12) Inspections are conducted at random as well as based on complaints, and unannounced inspections can be conducted in any sector, including the private sector and on farms. (12) Although labor inspectors are not authorized to assess penalties, they inform the Royal Grenada Police Force (RGPF) if a child labor violation is found. The RGPF then conducts a criminal investigation, and charges can be laid against violators through the Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions (DPP). (12,13)

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Royal Grenada Police Force (RGPF)	Investigates crimes and enforces laws related to child labor. If child labor is confirmed, the RGPF is notified and works with the Child Protection Authority and Ministry of Social Development, Housing & Community Empowerment to have the child removed from the home, if needed. (14) Upon finding sufficient evidence of a criminal violation, submits findings for possible prosecution by the DPP. Helps the Child Protection Authority and the Ministry of Social Development, Housing & Community Empowerment provide emergency services to children. (15)
Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions (DPP)	Represents the State of Grenada and is responsible for prosecuting criminal cases in lower and high courts. Authorized to institute, overtake, or discontinue criminal prosecutions. (12) Functions independently, with overarching oversight of all public prosecutions. (12)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Grenada took actions to address child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient financial resource and human resource allocation.

While research indicates that the budget for the Ministry of Labor is estimated to have decreased from the previous year, the amount allocated to the labor inspectorate is unknown. (12) The government directly employed four labor inspectors to enforce labor laws, a decrease for the second year in a row. (12,13,15) Labor inspectors also did not receive training during the reporting period on laws and enforcement of laws related to child labor. (12) There were no child labor-specific inspections conducted as there is no evidence of child labor in Grenada. However, site visits were conducted in the construction, business services, manufacturing, agriculture, public service, telecommunications, and hospitality and tourism sectors. (12)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether criminal law enforcement agencies in Grenada took actions to address child labor. (Table 6).

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for mechanisms to coordinate efforts to address child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for programs to address child labor.

In 2022, Guatemala made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government enacted a decree amending the Penal Code to include and increase the penalties for online sexual exploitation crimes committed against children. The Labor Inspectorate also increased the number of its human rights inspectors from 4 to 11, whose purview includes child labor issues. In addition, the government relaunched the "Protecting our Greatest Treasure" media campaign to raise awareness of protecting children and adolescents from sexual exploitation and human trafficking in the tourism sector. However, children in Guatemala are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture, including in the production of coffee. Moreover, in Guatemala an insufficient number of labor inspectors limits the Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare's ability to address child labor. In addition, existing social programs are insufficient to reach all children engaged in exploitative labor, particularly those engaged in domestic work or agriculture.

	Use in illicit activities, including drug trafficking, and stealing and transporting contraband as a result of criminal and gang recruitment, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (4,12,17-25)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Indigenous children account for more than half of child laborers in Guatemala, and children in rural areas are more likely to work than children in urban areas. Most of these children are engaged in agricultural activity. (18,31) Children as young as age 5 work in coffee fields picking and carrying heavy loads of coffee beans. (32) In addition, reports indicate that children work as street performers or beggars. Some of these children are also sold to criminal organizations, work very long hours, and are at times forced to wear paint, which is often toxic, to attract more attention as they perform in the streets. (18)

Children, both Guatemalan-born and from other countries, are victims of commercial sexual exploitation, including in sex tourism. (16,28) Guatemala is a destination country for child sex tourists from Canada, the United States, and Western Europe. (4,30) Departments with high numbers of commercial sexual exploitation victims include Alta Verapaz, Escuintla, Guatemala, Huehuetenango, Quiché, and Quetzaltenango. (14) Girls, LGBTQI+ persons, and indigenous Guatemalans are particularly vulnerable to human trafficking. (28) In addition, some children are forced to engage in street begging and vending in Guatemala City and along the border with Mexico. (29,30) Furthermore, multiple sources indicate that children are recruited into gangs to serve as lookouts, couriers, and drug dealers, or to commit extortion. Moreover, criminal organizations, including gangs, exploit girls in sex trafficking. (3,16,18)

Significant barriers to accessing education exist in Guatemala, particularly for girls, indigenous children, and children in rural areas. (3) Although education is free in Guatemala, there is an insufficient number of primary and secondary schools to accommodate all children. (18,33) A lack of teachers, transportation, textbooks, and sanitary facilities at public schools, as well as the long distances some children must travel to get to school, also create barriers to education. (12,13,34) Other barriers to education include sexual violence, insecurity, crime and violence in the school's surrounding areas, and the risk of suffering violence during travel to school. (12) The education system is also unable to address the needs of students with disabilities, and the few existing education programs for children with disabilities rely mainly on non-profit support. (3,14,18,24) In addition, Girls in rural areas have lower enrollment rates in secondary school than boys, while indigenous children in general have lower enrollment rates compared to other children. (14,18,24,35,36) Furthermore, there are not enough qualified teachers to provide instruction in the predominant native languages, and classroom materials available in these languages are insufficient. (35-38)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Guatemala has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).
