In March 2022, the government enacted Decree 11-2022, which amended the Penal Code to include the crime of facilitating sexual acts with a third party through the use of technology and increases penalties for this type of sexual exploitation from between 1 and 3 years to 6 to 12 years. (34,52) Although Articles 32 and 150 of the Labor Code allow the Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare (MTPS) to authorize children under age 14 to work under exceptional circumstances—including if MTPS determines that children must work to support their family due to poverty—the law does not define the total number of hours, kinds of tasks, or age range applicable for this exception, which is inconsistent with international standards on light work. (39) However, the MTPS indicated that no such exceptions have been granted since 2016. (3,53,54) In addition, the MTPS previously approved Ministerial Agreement Number 260-2019, "Procedure for the effective application of Convention 138 of the International Labor Organization, regarding the Convention on the Minimum Age for Admission of Employment," which sets forth procedures for protecting adolescents between ages 15 and 18 from the worst forms of child labor. (18,41) However, the agreement does not explicitly cover children age 14, who are allowed to work under Guatemala's Labor Code (or children under age 14 who are allowed to work in exceptional circumstances). Therefore, it is unclear if this mechanism effectively raises the minimum age for work to age 15. (41) In addition, as the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of their compulsory education. (39-41,47-49)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare's (MTPS) Inspection Division	Enforces child labor laws, including prohibitions on the worst forms of child labor, by inspecting businesses and responding to child labor complaints. (18) Refers children found engaged in child labor to government social services, complaints of child labor to the MTPS Adolescent Workers Protection Unit, cases of the worst forms of child labor to the Secretariat Against Sexual Violence, Exploitation, and Trafficking in Persons (SVET), and unresolved cases to labor courts for review and sanctions, as appropriate. (12,55,56)
National Civil Police (PNC)	Investigate cases of child trafficking through the Trafficking in Persons and Forced Labor Unit located within the Special Investigation Police, and operate a hotline to receive reports of suspected child trafficking cases. Also conduct welfare inspections in child labor cases and refer cases to civil court. (12,18)
Public Ministry, Special Prosecutor's Office	Receives case referrals involving the worst forms of child labor from labor inspectors. Investigates cases of human trafficking and forced labor through the Special Prosecutor's Office Against Trafficking in Persons. (12)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Guatemala took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MTPS that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient inspection planning.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$4.96 million (57)	$5.73 million (34)

Number of Child Labor Violations Found	16 (12)	43 (34)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	4 (12)	15 (34)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	0 (12)	15 (34)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (12)	Yes (34)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (12)	Yes (34)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (39)	Yes (39)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (57)	Yes (34)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (12)	Yes (34)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (12)	Yes (34)

In 2022, the Labor Inspectorate expanded the number of specialized inspectors from 4 to 11 to cover human rights issues, including child labor. (34) The Inspectorate also hired an expert in childhood and adolescence to support the development of training materials for labor inspectors. (34) In addition, the Ministry of Labor's budget was increased in 2022, which allowed the ministry to purchase more vehicles for labor inspectors at the department level. (34) In June 2022, the government also launched a child labor training course for labor inspectors and administrative personnel from MTPS. The training course was developed with support from the Ministry of Labor of Costa Rica. (59)

Although laws governing the minimum age for work and hazardous work apply in both the formal and informal sectors, labor inspectors rarely inspect informal workplaces, in which child labor violations are most likely to occur. (3,14,18,24,54) The Ministry of Labor also does not routinely conduct unannounced inspections. (34,54) Research indicates that labor inspectors are not appropriately trained to perform inspections for child labor. (3,8,9,54) Furthermore, MTPS reported that inspectors conducted site visits in Spanish only, potentially hindering the effectiveness of these inspections when encountering indigenous language speakers. (14,54) Research also indicates that Guatemala does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (3,14,18,24,34,54,60,61) In addition, reports indicate that sometimes conciliations are being carried out in lieu of inspections and there are significant issues in the way conciliations are carried out in the country. (54,58) Reports have shown that in some conciliations, facts are not verified, workers have been coerced to accept partial benefits, and labor inspectors have received bribes. (10,58) Moreover, since many labor inspections are done by desk review instead of conducted at the worksite, fines are successfully challenged in court, leaving the government unable to collect penalties. (58) Reports also indicate that the government mechanism for filing child labor complaints is not efficient and coordination between agencies in cases of child labor is lacking and requires the intervention of NGOs or international donors. (3,18,24)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Guatemala took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the National Civil Police that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (12)	Yes (34)
Number of Investigations	201 (12)	365 (34)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	19 (12)	122 (34)
Number of Convictions	38 (12)	48 (34)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (12)	Yes (34)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (12)	Yes (34)

The Public Ministry identified and removed 17 child victims of labor exploitation from January to October 2022 in coordination with the Solicitor General's Office and the Ministry of Labor. (34) The Office Against Trafficking in Persons also received 106 complaints related to the commercial sexual exploitation of minors, and 2 complaints related to the recruitment of minors by organized criminal groups. (34) Additionally, 48 individual defendants were convicted for child labor crimes such as trafficking in persons and child pornography between January and October 2022. (34) However, local NGOs indicate that training is insufficient for enforcement personnel outside the capital. (3,24) Law enforcement agencies also lack sufficient vehicles, fuel, and criminal investigators, particularly outside Guatemala City. (14,54) Other agencies within the government have also noted that resources are inadequate to carry out criminal investigations related to the worst forms of child labor. (3,12) Moreover, the Public Ministry noted that the Special Prosecutor's Office Against Human Trafficking does not have an assigned budget, as it is instead dependent on the overall budget allocated to the Public Ministry. (14)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Communities in rural areas continue to suffer from a lack of government services when compared to urban areas, including government assistance for survivors of the worst forms of child labor. (54) However, in order to improve the referral process for victims of crime, the Public Ministry established a messaging system to support communication between the different institutions that offer social services to survivors. (62) The government also operated specialized courts to hear cases of human trafficking of adults and children and gender-based violence. Despite this, judges are often unable to schedule hearings and trials in a timely manner, and officials often lack sufficient training to properly identify human trafficking cases and pursue trafficking charges. (29,30)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that may hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including lack of coordination between agencies and civil society.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Inter-Institutional Coordinating Entity Against Labor Exploitation and Child Labor (CICELTI)	Aims to identify victims of human trafficking, make anti-trafficking in persons institutions more effective, and provide support to survivors to prevent them from being targeted again. Also coordinates efforts to address labor exploitation, forced labor, and child labor. (14) Launched in 2020 by MTPS, the Solicitor General's Office, the Public Ministry, and SVET. (14) In 2022, CICELTI received 55 complaints related to labor exploitation, forced labor, or the worst forms of child labor and added new members to support individuals rescued from labor exploitation, including the Ministry of Social Development (MIDES) and the Ministry of Public Health and Social Assistance (MSPAS). (34) However, reports indicate that challenges remain related to the provision of social services for children due to the lack of coordination between government agencies. (10)

‡ The government had other mechanisms that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (43,63)

Despite improvements in inter-agency coordination to address human trafficking, there continues to be a lack of effective coordination among other government institutions and civil society actors who provide services and protection to survivors of child labor. Some civil society organizations have indicated that despite being members of the Inter-Institutional Commission Against Trafficking in Persons (CIT), the commission is not fully inclusive of civil society perspectives, and these organizations participate on the commission primarily as observers. (29) Furthermore, reporting indicates that the Secretariat Against Sexual Violence, Exploitation, and Trafficking in Persons (SVET) lacks political support from other parts of the government and its small budget limits its reach beyond urban areas, even though it plays a significant role in addressing human trafficking in Guatemala. (29)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that may hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of implementation of key national policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
Comprehensive Health Care Protocol with Cultural Relevance for Children and Adolescents in Situations of Child Labor and its Worst Forms	Requires public health workers to enter information into a database about any child whose injuries may have been labor-related. Implemented by the Ministry of Public Health and Social Assistance (MSPAS). (64,65) In 2022, the government continued implementing this policy, however reporting indicates that the government was in the process of updating it during the reporting period. (54)
Inter-Institutional Protocol for the Protection and Attention of Victims of Human Trafficking	Provides instruction on how to process sex crimes, including commercial sexual exploitation of children, and how to assist suspected victims of human trafficking. (43) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.
Public Policy on Human Trafficking and the Comprehensive Protection of Victims (2014–2024)	Aims to guarantee protection for and comprehensive attention to human trafficking survivors, and promote prevention, detection, prosecution, and sanction of this crime. Includes a National Plan of Strategic Action that directs the government's actions on preventing and addressing human trafficking. (66) Reports indicate that the government was updating this policy in 2022. (54)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate efforts to address child labor in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Business Network for the Prevention and Elimination of Child Labor in Guatemala ( Red Empresarial )	Aims to promote the prevention and eradication of child labor. Members include the Ministries of Education and Agriculture, MTPS, the Thematic Working Group for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor, ILO, UNICEF, the UN Food and Agriculture Organization, and representatives from the private sector. (67) Reports indicate that this program was active in 2022, and continued to implement a variety of health, nutrition, education, and awareness programs in agricultural sectors. (54)
Ministry of Development's Social Poverty Reducing Programs†	Conditional Cash Transfer for Education and Health Program ( Mi Bono Social ) provides cash assistance to families with school-age children, conditioned on children's school attendance. (24) Similarly, the Conditional Cash Transfers for Food Assistance Program ( Mi Bolsa Social ) provides food assistance to poor families, with the requirement that their children attend school. (24,68) Social Dining Hall ( Mi Comedor Social ) provides access to food for people in situations of poverty, crisis, and emergency, including children. (14,68) Reporting indicates that all of these programs remained active in 2022, and that the government increased its budget allocations for all of them. (54) The Social Dining Hall Program received a budget increase of 61 percent, while the Conditional Cash Transfer for Education and Health Program received an increase of 18.9 percent. Lastly, the Conditional Cash Transfer Program for Food Assistance received a 5.6 percent increase. (54)
Mobile Units for the Prevention of Sexual Violence, Exploitation and Human Trafficking (UNIVET)	Established by SVET, with support from UNHCR. Consists of a fleet of seven vehicles that travel to areas in the country with little national government presence, with the aim of preventing and creating awareness about crimes related to exploitation, trafficking in persons, and sexual violence. (57,62,69) Carry out detection and awareness trainings on trafficking in persons within rural and often remote communities. (62) Provide information to survivors of crimes of trafficking in persons, but does not have authority to accept complaints or make referrals. Funded through bilateral and multilateral donors. (54,62) In 2022, the awareness trainings reached a total of 132,296 people, including 95,547 children and adolescents in 20 Departments and 163 municipalities. These awareness trainings included information sessions at schools about cybersecurity, how to avoid being targeted for crimes in cyberspace, and the available means to file complaints. (70,71)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (12,27,29,62,64)

During the reporting period, the Government of Guatemala continued implementation of the Child Labor Risk Identification Model (MIRTI) through its pilot in the Municipality of San Pedro Sacatepequez. This model was originally implemented with funding from the U.S. Department of Labor. (34) The government also relaunched the "Protecting our Greatest Treasure" media campaign to raise awareness on protecting children and adolescents from sexual exploitation and human trafficking in the travel and tourism sector, which reached 6,900 people. (34,72) However, reporting indicates that SVET and the Office of the Human Rights Ombudsman fail to regularly monitor the effectiveness of awareness campaigns beyond tracking the number of individuals reached. (29) In addition, given the scope and magnitude of the problem, the programs described are not sufficient to significantly reduce the incidence of child labor. (12) Civil society organizations also indicate that social programs are inadequately funded, susceptible to local political influences, and fail to reach the rural interior of the country outside urban areas. (3,14,18) Although the government has implemented programs to assist children and families, research found no evidence of government programs specifically designed to assist children engaged in hazardous work, including those in agriculture and domestic work. (54)

Conditions in government-run children's shelters are also not adequate, and the government has not ensured the protection and safety of children under its care. In addition, the environment for the implementation of social programs that address child labor remains unsafe in some areas. The government has done little to investigate or prevent further instances of threats, intimidation, and violence—such as the murders of individuals working in social programs, including NGO officials, human rights workers, judges, and labor activists. (29,54)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Guatemala (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Criminally prohibit the recruitment of children under age 18 into non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2022
	Eliminate the exception allowing some children under age 14 to work, or establish a light work framework for children ages 12 to 14 outlining restrictions on working conditions, type of work, and number of hours of work permitted.	2010 – 2022
	Clarify whether Ministerial Agreement 260-2019 raises the minimum working age to 15.	2019 – 2022
	Raise the minimum age for work from age 14 to 15 to align with the compulsory education age.	2022
Enforcement	Ensure that inspectors carry out inspections in the informal sector, an area in which child labor is known to occur.	2018 – 2022
	Improve the quality of inspections by ensuring that inspectors receive effective training, dedicate the necessary time to carry out more comprehensive inspections, and routinely carry out unannounced labor inspections.	2017 – 2022
	Ensure that labor inspectors are able to communicate with indigenous language speakers, including those who may be underage, to adequately conduct inspections for child labor violations.	2020 – 2022
	Increase the number of labor inspectors from 152 to 484 to ensure adequate coverage of the labor force of 7.3 million people.	2015 – 2022
	Strengthen the Labor Inspectorate to include more on-site investigations of worksites.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that conciliations are properly conducted and in accordance with the labor code.	2021 – 2022
	Improve effectiveness of child labor complaint and referral mechanisms to ensure timely responses to complaints.	2018 – 2022
	Ensure that fines for labor violations are collected.	2019 – 2022
	Dedicate more staff and train criminal law enforcement officials, particularly those outside the capital, on laws related to the worst forms of child labor.	2013 – 2022
	Ensure that hearings and trials addressing human trafficking and gender-based violence in specialized courts are scheduled in a timely manner and that judges and officials are trained in trafficking in persons concepts.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure that criminal investigators have sufficient resources and staff to conduct quality criminal investigations in all geographical areas of the country, such as assigning a budget specifically to the Special Prosecutor's Office Against Human Trafficking.	2009 – 2022
	Coordination	Strengthen coordination efforts to institutionalize relationships between civil society representatives and government agencies that provide services to survivors of child labor.	2013 – 2022
		Ensure that the Secretariat Against Sexual Violence, Exploitation, and Trafficking in Persons has the resources, authority, and political support necessary to combat human trafficking countrywide.	2019 – 2022
Government Policies	Ensure that activities are undertaken to implement key policies related to child labor and that data on these activities to address child labor are published during the reporting period.	2017 – 2022
Social Programs	Remove barriers to education for all children, including girls and indigenous children, children with disabilities, and children living in rural areas, by recruiting and training more qualified teachers, providing instruction in indigenous languages, building additional schools with appropriate facilities, increasing security, providing textbooks to all public schools, and removing school fees and transportation costs.	2015 – 2022
	Ensure that children removed from child labor and exploitation situations are provided with adequate social services.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that social programs are implemented, well-funded, able to carry out their objectives, and reach populations outside urban centers, and report on yearly activities.	2018 – 2022
	Initiate social programs to address child labor in agriculture and domestic work, and for children who perform other types of hazardous work.	2009 – 2022
	Regularly monitor the effectiveness and impact of social programs such as awareness campaigns beyond the number of citizens reached.	2017 – 2022
	Ensure high standards of safety and care for children in government-run shelters.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure the safety of NGO officials, human rights workers, judges, and labor activists to facilitate a secure environment for the implementation of social programs that address and prevent child labor.	2017 – 2022

In 2022, Guinea made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government substantially increased the budget of the labor inspectorate compared to the previous year. In addition, the government opened shelters for trafficking survivors, including child survivors, in Conakry and N'Zérékoré, and initiated a new trafficking in persons program with the International Organization for Migration. However, children in Guinea are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including forced labor in artisanal mining and forced begging. Laws related to the minimum age for work do not meet international standards because they do not include children working outside of a formal employment relationship or children who are self-employed. The government also lacks a coordinating mechanism and national policy to address all relevant worst forms of child labor, and social programs do not address the extent of the child labor problem.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Guinea. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	31.2 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	54.2
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	17.3
Primary Completion Rate (%)		59.4

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2020, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2023. (1)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from the Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 5 (MICS5), 2016. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming cashews, cocoa, coffee, rubber, and palm oil (3-5)
	Herding livestock (3,6)
	Capturing and processing fish, sometimes with exposure to inclement weather, dangerous water surfaces, dangerous equipment, poor sanitation, and lack of fresh food and water (3,6)
	Forestry (7)
Industry	Mining† granite, gold, and diamonds, including handling toxic chemicals, and quarrying gravel (3,6-13)
	Manufacturing, including soapmaking and dyeing, sometimes working with hazardous chemicals (6,7)
	Construction,† including carrying heavy loads, operating machinery, and fabricating construction materials, such as bricks (7,13-17)
Services	Street work, including vending, begging, shoe shining, and carrying heavy loads as porters in the transportation sector (6,7,18-21)
	Working in restaurants (6)
	Domestic work (3,6,7,22)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced labor in street vending, domestic work, artisanal mining, herding, fishing, and farming (3,6,14,23)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,6,23,24)
	Forced begging (14,21,25)
	Use in illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs (7)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Guinea

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Guinea is a source, destination, and transit country for child trafficking. Guinean girls are often subjected to domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation in various West African, Middle Eastern, and European countries, while Guinean boys are subjected to forced labor in gold and diamond mines. (3,23,26,27) Within Guinea, children are subjected to forced labor and hazardous conditions in the artisanal gold and diamond mining sectors, including frequent collapses of open pit mines, and the use of dangerous chemicals. (6,7,10,18,23,26,27) Research indicated that during the COVID-19 pandemic, more children and families moved to the gold mining regions, and a rising number of children have been subjected to forced labor in artisanal gold mining. (28) In addition, the commercial sexual exploitation of children is common in the capital city of Conakry and in the mining regions. (14,26)

Through the system of confiage, parents who are unable to care for their children send them to relatives or strangers, who are expected to provide food, shelter, and schooling for the children in exchange for housework. However, in many cases children are subjected to abuse, sexual violence, and forced labor in domestic work. (9,25) In addition, children in Guinea are sometimes subjected to forced begging, and research indicates that albino children are particularly vulnerable. In certain cases, traffickers promised to enroll the children in school, but instead they subjected the children to forced begging in Conakry. (6,14,21,26,29)

Significant factors hinder access to education and therefore leave children vulnerable to child labor. A third of children in Guinea receive less than 6 years of schooling. (21) Barriers to education include the limited number of public schools, poor school infrastructure and sanitation, lack of transportation, the lack of teachers (particularly in rural areas), and violence in schools. (6,7,14,30) Guinean families must pay school fees and other indirect costs, which can be prohibitively expensive. (6,18) Girls face particular barriers to school attendance and completion, and sometimes leave school early due to cultural barriers, pregnancy, and sexual harassment at school. (21,30) Finally, since children are required to have birth registration to attend school, some unregistered children are unable to access education. (31,32) Since the passage of the revised Children's Code in March 2020, the government has carried out multiple birth registration campaigns to provide documentation to children. (6) During the reporting period, the Guinean government also worked with UNICEF to streamline birth registration procedures. (33)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Guinea has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Guinea's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	16	Articles 121.4 and 137.5 of the Labor Code; Article 919 of the Children's Code (34,35)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 2–4 of Order 2791 Working Conditions for Employees Aged Under 18 Years; Article 137.4 of the Labor Code; Articles 922 and 925 of the Children's Code (34-36)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 2 and 4 of Order 2791 Working Conditions for Employees Aged Under 18 Years; Article 135 of the Mining Code; Article 137.6 of the Labor Code; Articles 909–936 of the Children's Code (34-37)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 6, 893–901, 902–905, 912–915, and 922–923 of the revised Children's Code; Articles 194, 195 and 323–329 of the Penal Code; Articles 2, 4, and 137.6–7 of the Revised Labor Code (2014) (34,35,38)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 195, 323, and 324 of the Penal Code; Articles 893–901 and 912 of the Children's Code (34,38)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 346–348 and 355 of the Penal Code; Articles 820 and 852–856 of the Children's Code (34,38)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 137.6 of the Labor Code; Article 890 of the Children's Code; Article 344 of the Penal Code (34,35,38)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 941 of the Children's Code (34)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 792.7 of the Penal Code; Article 941 of the Children's Code (34,38)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 6, Title I of Education Decree (39)
Free Public Education	No

* Country has no conscription (40)

The revised Children's Code of 2019 and the Labor Code allow children between the ages of 12 and 14 to perform light work, which does not meet international standards as it applies to children under the age of 13. (34,35) In addition, these laws do not prescribe the number of hours per week permitted for light work, nor do they specify the conditions under which light work may be done. Moreover, these laws only apply to workers with written employment contracts, leaving self-employed children and children working outside of formal employment relationships vulnerable to exploitation. (34,35,41) While Guinea's former Constitution stipulated free education up to the age of 16 under conditions provided by the law, the government did not enact legislation to institute free basic education standards within Guinea's legal framework, and during the September 2021 coup d'état, the transitional government dissolved the Constitution. (28,42,43) On September 27, 2021, Colonel Mamady Doumbouya released the Transition Charter, which supersedes the Constitution and law until a new Constitution is promulgated. Guinea's penal and civil codes remain in force. (40,43)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Guinea

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor and Public Services	Enforces all labor laws, including those related to child labor; through its General Labor Inspectorate. (6,18,35)
Ministry of Security and Ministry of Defense	The Ministry of Security's Office for the Protection of Gender, Children, and Morals (OPROGEM) investigates criminal cases related to the protection of minors, including the worst forms of child labor. (3,6,15,26,40) There is an OPROGEM representative in each of the 33 central police stations of the country who specializes in issues related to the trafficking of women and children. (26,44) The Ministry of Defense's Central Service for the Protection of Vulnerable Persons (SCPPV) investigates criminal cases related to the protection of minors, including the worst forms of child labor, in rural areas where there is less police presence. SCPPV was formed in January 2020, with the aim of reducing pressure on OPROGEM and allowing OPROGEM to focus on urban areas. (40)
Ministry of Justice	Delivers judgements through its Juvenile Court on all cases involving children, including child labor cases. (6) The Juvenile Court also collaborates and monitors cases with MOJ's National Directorate of Supervised Education and Judicial Youth Protection, which is the supervising body of public social services centers. (6,7,14,15)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Guinea took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient human and material resources.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$11,500 (6)	$174,182 (7)
Number of Labor Inspectors	167 (6)	159 (7)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	Yes (35)	Yes (35)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	Yes (6)	Yes (7)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksites	120 (6)	441 (7)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	0 (6)	Unknown (7)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	N/A (6)	Unknown (7)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	N/A (6)	Unknown (7)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (6)	Yes (7)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (6)	Yes (7)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (35)	Yes (7,35)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (6)	Yes (7)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (6)	Yes (7)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	No (6)	Yes (7,28,45)

The government significantly increased the budget for labor inspections in 2022, to over 15 times the 2021 budget. However, the labor inspectorate continued to maintain only a single vehicle, and provided insufficient resources for fuel, restricting the labor inspectorate's ability to conduct labor inspections. (7,14,15,46,47)

Reporting suggests that in 2022, 25 labor inspectors received training on trafficking in persons, including the responsibility of labor inspectors to refer children identified during their field inspections to social services. (7,28) In addition, a new referral mechanism was developed and implemented by the National Committee to Combat Human Trafficking and Similar Practices, with standard operating procedures for any individual or agency to identify and refer potential cases to the relevant specialized body or services. (28,45) In 2022, the labor inspectorate conducted inspections in Conakry, Boke in Lower Guinea, and Siguiri in Upper Guinea, and sectors inspected included mining, education, health, and auto garages. Research did not identify evidence that the government conducted inspections in the agriculture sector, in which child labor is known to be present. (7) The government did not provide full law enforcement data for inclusion in this report, including the number of child labor violations found, penalties imposed, and penalties collected. (7)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Guinea took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including the insufficient allocation of financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (24)	Yes (48)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (6)	Unknown (7)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (6)	Unknown (7)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (6)	Unknown (7)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (6)	Unknown (7)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Unknown (6)	Yes (7,28,45)

The Government of Guinea did not provide complete data on criminal law enforcement efforts for use in this report, including data on the number of investigations, prosecutions initiated, convictions, and penalties imposed. (7,28) During the reporting period, judicial sector officials in Guinea received training on trafficking in persons, funded by the European Union and the Government of Germany, at the request of the National Committee to Combat Trafficking in Persons and Similar Practices. Guinea's 2022 National Development Budget also financed some trafficking in persons training for National Police and National Gendarmerie officials. (48) Office for the Protection of Gender, Children, and Morals (OPROGEM) staff also received training on trafficking in persons during the reporting period, funded by Expertise France. (48) In December 2022, the government purchased 41 motorbikes in order to help OPROGEM investigators access remote areas of the country to reach victims of gender-based violence. (7,28) However, research has indicated that the OPROGEM Special Police Unit was underfunded and lacked sufficient office supplies, transportation, or fuel to enforce laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (3,6,15,28,49)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of efforts to address all forms of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Committee to Combat Trafficking in Persons and Similar Practices (CNLTPPA)	Coordinates anti-trafficking efforts. Led by the Ministry of Social Action and Vulnerable People, includes representatives from OPROGEM, the Ministry of Labor and Public Service, and other ministries. (23,50) Coordinates with civil society and foreign donors. Organizes awareness campaigns for human trafficking prevention. (23,50) During the reporting period, the committee met regularly, and was allocated funds by the government for equipment, supplies, and communications budget costs. (23,48) It also issued new standard operating procedures for detecting, reporting, and providing assistance to potential trafficking victims. (28,45) However, the CNLTPPA lacked authority to coordinate anti-trafficking efforts effectively. (23)

Although the government has established a coordination mechanism on child protection and human trafficking, research found no evidence of a mechanism that coordinates the government's efforts to address all forms of child labor. (26,28)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including covering all worst forms of child labor.

Guinea

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Action Plan for Trafficking in Persons (2020–2022)	Focused on strategies to address child trafficking, including strengthening the legal framework, reinforcing prevention devices, promoting assistance and support of survivors, strengthening cooperative partnerships, and improving monitoring and evaluation. (23,26,52) Implemented by CNLTPPA. (7) Although the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, together with the International Organization for Migration (IOM), held a technical workshop during the reporting period to develop an action plan, the National Action Plan expired at the end of 2022, with no known replacement plan in place. (7,48,53)
Ten-Year National Education Plan for Guinea (2020–2029)	Launched under the third tier of the National Economic and Social Development Policy. Sets the goal of progressively providing free primary education in Guinea, and makes provisions to ensure that vulnerable students, such as orphans and disabled and albino students, have access to education. (54) Implemented by the Ministry of National Education and Literacy at the primary school level and covers the 10-year period from 2020 to 2029. (21,54) Has received over $60 million in funding from the Global Partnership for Education, the French Development Agency, and UNICEF. The plan was active during the reporting year, but research was unable to determine what specific activities were undertaken during this time. (7,55)

Although Guinea has a policy that addresses child trafficking, research found no evidence of a policy on other worst forms of child labor. (15,47)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate efforts to address child labor in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Temporary Reception and Child Protection Centers for Trafficking Victims	In 2022, the government opened shelters for trafficking survivors, including child survivors, as part of the National Action Plan for Trafficking in Persons, with funding from the EU and technical assistance from Expertise France. (7,56-58) The newly inaugurated children's shelter in the N'Zérékoré administrative region identified and sheltered child trafficking survivors during the reporting period. The OCPH CARITAS Guinea Sonfonia reception center in Conakry has capacity to shelter up to 66 trafficking survivors. (48,57) The centers were established through a partnership with CNLTPPA and the Ministry of Women's Promotion, Children, and Vulnerable People, as part of an EU project entitled "Support the Fight Against Human Trafficking in the States of the Gulf of Guinea," which aims to prevent human trafficking in six countries in the Gulf of Guinea. (7,56,59,60) In addition to the newly inaugurated shelters, SCPPV runs a shelter in Conakry, with accommodations for child trafficking victims. (48)
Guinea Project for Results in Early Childhood and Basic Education (2019–2024)	$50 million World Bank-funded project implemented by the Ministry of Pre-University Education and Literacy that aims to increase access to quality early childhood and basic education, and strengthen the overall capacity of the education system. (61) After a pause in 2021 due to political unrest, the project was relaunched in March 2022. During the reporting period the project resumed planning and took steps toward teacher recruitment and digital device acquisition. (28,62,63)
IOM Trafficking in Persons Program*	New trafficking in persons program initiated in 2022 by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs with IOM, which includes a focus on the collection, analysis, centralization, and observation of data on trafficking in persons. In addition, one component of the program is a Financial Support Fund to provide financing and training for trafficking survivors returning to Guinea. (48)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

Although Guinea has established a trafficking in persons program and inaugurated new shelters for trafficking survivors, research found that the scope of programs implemented by the government is insufficient for the extent of the problem, including the need to address children engaged in agriculture, domestic work, forced begging, mining, and street work. (21,66,67)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Guinea (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum age for light work to age 13 to comply with international standards; ensure that the law's light work provisions specify the conditions in which light work may be undertaken and the number of hours that are permitted for children engaged in light work.	2015 – 2022
	Ensure that all children are protected by the minimum age for work laws, including children working outside of a formal employment relationship and children who are self-employed.	2009 – 2022
	Establish by law free basic education.	2019 – 2022
Enforcement	Ensure that the government conducts an adequate number of labor inspections.	2021 – 2022
	Conduct labor inspections in the agricultural sector.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that labor inspectors and criminal law enforcement officers, including the Special Police Unit of the Office for the Protection of Gender, Children, and Morals, receive adequate human and material resources to enforce labor laws, including office supplies, fuel, and vehicles.	2020 – 2022
	Publish data on labor law enforcement, including the number of labor violations found and penalties imposed and collected.	2022
	Publish data on criminal law enforcement efforts to address the worst forms of child labor, including the numbers of investigations, violations found, prosecutions initiated, convictions, and penalties imposed.	2011 – 2022
Coordination	Ensure that the National Committee to Combat Trafficking in Persons and Similar Practices has the authority to coordinate all anti-trafficking efforts in Guinea.	2022
	Establish a coordinating mechanism to prevent and eliminate all forms child labor.	2021 – 2022
Government Policies	Adopt a policy that addresses all relevant worst forms of child labor.	2014 – 2022
	Ensure that a new national action plan is created and implemented to continue addressing child trafficking.	2022
	Ensure that activities are undertaken to implement the Ten-Year Education Program for Guinea and make information about implementation measures publicly available.	2021 – 2022
Social Programs	Enhance efforts to make education accessible for all children by eliminating fees and associated costs, improving school infrastructure and sanitation, providing transportation, protecting students from violence and sexual harassment in schools, ensuring that pregnant students may continue their studies, and increasing school and teacher availability.	2010 – 2022
	Provide all children with access to birth registration.	2020 – 2022
	Institute programs to address the worst forms of child labor, including in agriculture, domestic work, forced begging, mining, and street work.	2010 – 2022

In 2022, Guinea-Bissau made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor.

The National Guard began training border officials on how to detect human trafficking situations and created grassroots committees within villages near border locations to aid in identifying human traffickers using illegal border crossings. The newly developed case management and referral system, under the lead of the National Institute for Women and Children, was also used by 28 institutions during the reporting period, and although the National Emergency Plan for the Prevention and Combat of Trafficking in Persons expired in 2021, it continued to be implemented and contributed toward the identification and reintegration of 198 child trafficking victims at the national and transnational levels. However, children in Guinea-Bissau are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging. Children also engage in child labor in agriculture. Prohibitions against the commercial sexual exploitation of children do not meet international standards since the prostitution of children is not criminally prohibited in the country's legal framework. In addition, even though a new labor code was put into effect in 2022, the minimum age for work is not in compliance with international standards since the law's minimum age protections do not apply to children without a work contract. Furthermore, law enforcement officials do not receive sufficient resources to adequately conduct inspections and prosecute cases of child labor, and social programs do not fully address the extent of the problem in the country.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Guinea-Bissau. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	18.8 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	97.6
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	20.6
Primary Completion Rate (%)		Unavailable

Primary completion rate was unavailable from UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2023. (1)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 6 (MICS6), 2019. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including the production of cashews (3-6)
	Fishing (4,7)
Industry	Construction (7)
Services	Domestic work (3,4,8,9)
	Street work, including shoe-shining and vending (10)
	Working as mechanics, including maintaining and repairing automobiles (4,7)
	Working in nightclubs, including dishwashing and custodial work (7,11)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (12,13)
	Forced labor in domestic work, agriculture, mining, and street work, including begging (8,9,13)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Guinea-Bissau

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

According to the latest national child labor survey, more than 169,200 children between the ages of 5 and 17 work; 85 percent of these children work in agriculture. (4) Organized networks of human traffickers affiliated with Koranic schools also force boys to beg within the country and in Senegal, and, to a lesser extent, in The Gambia, Guinea, and Mali. Although many Koranic school teachers provide religious education as traditionally intended, some force students, known as talibés, to beg on the streets for money and food. (8,13-15) Most talibés originate from the areas of Bafatá and Gabú in the eastern region of the country. (13,14,16) Bissau-Guinean boys are forced to work in street vending domestically; they are also transported by human traffickers to Senegal for forced labor in agriculture, mining, and street vending, particularly in the cities of Kolda and Ziguinchor. In addition, boys from Guinea-Bissau and from neighboring countries are forced to beg and harvest cashews domestically. (6,8,13) Furthermore, girls are subjected to forced labor in street vending and domestic work, and children in the Bijagós, an archipelago largely devoid of government and law enforcement presence, are vulnerable to sex trafficking. Children are also vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation in bars and hotels on mainland Guinea-Bissau. (9,13,15)

During the reporting period, school closures due to teacher strikes limited children's access to education. Reports also indicate that during the cashew harvesting season, children who assist their families are less likely to attend school. (6,11,17,18) Other educational barriers included inadequate school infrastructure and long distances to schools, particularly in rural areas. (5) In addition, in May 2022, the President of Guinea-Bissau dissolved parliament, and while parliamentary elections have been scheduled for June 2023, the government's ability to address the worst forms of child labor may have been impacted. (19,20)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Guinea-Bissau has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Guinea-Bissau's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including minimum age protections that do not apply to children working without a contract.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	16	Articles 1, 3, 288, 347, 350, and 520 of the Labor Code (21)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 354 and 355 of the Labor Code (21)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 354 and 355 of the Labor Code (21)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 2–4 and 15 of the Law to Prevent and Combat Human Trafficking; Article 106 of the Penal Code (22,23)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 2–4 and 15 of the Law to Prevent and Combat Human Trafficking (23)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 3–5 and 15 of the Law to Prevent and Combat Human Trafficking; Articles 134 and 136 of the Penal Code (22,23)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 3 and 7 of the Decree on Narcotic Substances (24)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	17	Article 31 of Law No. 4/99 (25)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 2 of Law No. 4/99 (25)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15‡	Articles 12 and 13 of the Education System Law (26)
Free Public Education	No		Article 12(2) of the Education System Law (26)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (26,27)

In 2022, a new Labor Code went into effect raising the minimum work age to 16; however, the law only applies to workers who perform work under a formal employment agreement, which does not conform to international standards that require all children to be protected by the minimum age to work. (21,28)

The law also does not sufficiently prohibit commercial sexual exploitation because the use of children in prostitution is not criminally prohibited. (22,23) In addition, the Education System Law states that basic education is compulsory and lasts 9 years; however, it only makes basic education free through grade six, leaving children in grades seven through nine without access to free basic education. (26) Moreover, as the minimum age for work is 16, children age 15 are vulnerable to exploitative child labor because they are not required to attend school while also not legally permitted to work. (21,26)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor and Public Administration	Enforces child labor legislation in collaboration with the Ministries of the Interior and Justice, and the National Institute for Women and Children (IMC). (5,7)
Ministry of the Interior's Public Order Police and National Guard	Enforce laws related to the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking, and refer relevant cases to IMC and NGOs for referral to social services providers. (7)
Judicial Police's Women and Children Brigade	Investigates cases involving the worst forms of child labor, apart from child trafficking, and refers these to IMC and NGOs. Comprising 10 officers. (5,7,29)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Guinea-Bissau took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Public Administration that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient allocation of financial and human resources.

In 2022, the Ministry of Labor and Public Administration, along with the ILO, conducted a week-long training initiative for approximately 100 technicians from different government departments, trade unions, and employers; the trainings promoted actions related to Decent Work, such as addressing forced labor, child labor, and human trafficking for commercial sexual exploitation. Participants discussed various topics, including the minimum age for work. (31)

Reports indicate that the number of labor inspectors is insufficient to target the scope of the problem in the country. Although the government provides salaries to labor inspectors, there is no additional budget to conduct investigations, which severely hindered the Ministry of Labor and Public Administration's ability to enforce child labor laws. (7) Reports also indicate that labor inspectors often rely on their personal means, including using their own vehicles and paying for their own gas, to perform labor inspections. Furthermore, due to a lack of funding, inspectors respond mainly to complaints rather than initiating targeted inspections based on risk-prone sectors and patterns of serious incidents. (7) In 2022, there were no child labor specific inspections identified. (7)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Guinea-Bissau took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient allocation of financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Number of Investigations	0 (11)	8 (7)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	0 (5)	8 (7)
Number of Convictions	0 (11)	0 (7)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (5)	0 (7)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (5)	Yes (7)

During the reporting period, the National Guard began training border officials on how to detect potential human trafficking situations and created grassroots committees within villages near border locations to aid in identifying human traffickers utilizing illegal border crossings. In addition, the National Guard conducted four separate human trafficking presentations on national radio, including on the identification and support available for human trafficking victims. (32) The Judicial Police created an anonymous hotline to identify child victims of abuse, including victims of child labor violations, and an awareness campaign was conducted over the radio and in schools to inform the public about the hotline. (7) However, reports indicate that criminal enforcement agencies lacked an operating budget and had very limited resources, hindering criminal law enforcement from investigating cases outside of the capital of Bissau, including in Gabú and Bafatá, where child labor is known to occur. (5,7,33,34)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that may hinder the adequate coordination of efforts to address child labor, including the lack of an established stakeholder responsible for the standardized and consistent entry of cases into the referral and case management system.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Interministerial Commission to Fight Child Labor	Coordinates the government's efforts to prevent and eliminate child labor. (35) In 2022, held four meetings to validate the Decent Labor report. (36)

In 2022, under the lead of the National Institute for Women and Children (IMC), a referral and case management system implemented to improve coordination efforts was utilized by 28 institutions. A total of 515 cases were reported and managed within the system; however, the lack of an established stakeholder responsible for the standardized and consistent entry of data and the broad range of cases entered made it difficult to isolate child labor cases. (7)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Policy for the Protection of Children and Adolescents (2021–2032)	Guides the government's policies for addressing violence toward children, including the worst forms of child labor. (37) Although the plan has not yet been approved by the Council of Ministers, research indicated that it was implemented during the reporting period. (38)
National Emergency Plan for the Prevention and Combat of Trafficking in Persons	Aims to prevent and reduce human trafficking by strengthening legislation, coordinating actions and initiatives among government agencies, promoting the coordination and collaboration of relevant stakeholders, and improving protective services and assistance to victims. Led by the IMC with the collaboration of national and international NGOs and relevant government entities. (39) Although the plan officially expired in 2021, it continued to be implemented during the reporting period, including through the rescue and reintegration of 198 child trafficking victims at the national and transnational levels. In addition, awareness and advocacy activities on human trafficking issues, particularly those related to children, continued. (38)
Code of Conduct Against Sexual Exploitation in Tourism	Seeks to raise awareness of commercial sexual exploitation of children and child trafficking in Guinea-Bissau, including in the Bijagós Archipelago, Bubaque, São Domingos, and Bissau. (36) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Code of Conduct Against Sexual Exploitation in Tourism during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating and preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Guinea-Bissau

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Friends of the Child Association Shelters (Associação dos Amigos da Criança)†	Donor-funded shelters, with government support, in Bissau and Gabú. (32) Operated by a national NGO providing social services to vulnerable children, including victims of the worst forms of child labor. In 2022, conducted a campaign to identify Bissau-Guinean children found begging in Senegal. (7,32)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of Guinea-Bissau.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (40)

In 2022, the IOM completed a project supporting the development and implementation of a national strategic plan to prevent and protect victims of human trafficking. Outcomes included the capacity building of 60 border authorities and stakeholders on child trafficking and national referral mechanisms for the protection of victims. (7) The project also supported the return of 164 talibé children from Senegal and helped conduct a census of 780 talibé children throughout 22 Koranic schools. (7) However, reports suggest that the government did not conduct any national public awareness-raising campaigns on human trafficking, including child trafficking. (34) Reports also indicate that due to funding constraints, services provided by shelters may not have met quality-of-care standards. (41) In addition, although Guinea-Bissau has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Guinea-Bissau (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the minimum age for work applies to all children, including children without a formal employment agreement.	2015 – 2022
	Ensure that laws criminally prohibit the use of a child for prostitution.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure that all nine years of basic education are free.	2015 – 2022
	Raise the compulsory education age from 15 to 16 to be consistent with the minimum age for employment.	2018 – 2022
Enforcement	Ensure that the number of law enforcement officials is sufficient to address the scope of the problem, and that both law and criminal enforcement officials receive adequate resources to inspect, investigate, and prosecute cases of child labor throughout the country, including in Bafatá and Gabú, where child labor is known to occur.	2009 – 2022
	Strengthen the labor inspectorate by initiating routine inspections and targeting inspections based on the analysis of data related to risk-prone sectors and patterns of serious incidents.	2016 – 2022
	Publish information on labor enforcement data for the reporting period, including the amount of funding provided to the labor inspectorate, the number of labor inspections conducted at worksite, the number of child labor violations, penalties imposed and collected for child labor violations, whether routine inspections were conducted and targeted, and whether unannounced inspections were conducted.	2009 – 2022
Coordination	Establish a stakeholder to be responsible for standardized and consistent data entry into the referral and case management system to ensure child labor cases can easily be identified.	2022
Government Policies	Ensure a policy that addresses all relevant worst forms of child labor, like the National Policy for the Protection of Children and Adolescents, is approved.	2022
	Ensure that activities are undertaken to implement the Code of Conduct Against Sexual Exploitation in Tourism and publish results from activities implemented during the reporting period.	2017 – 2022
Social Programs	Significantly increase efforts to raise national awareness of human trafficking, including child trafficking.	2018 – 2022
	Ensure that facilities, including shelters, have adequate resources to assist victims of the worst forms of child labor.	2015 – 2022
	Expand existing programs to address the scope of the child labor problem, including in street work, particularly begging, and agriculture.	2009 – 2022
	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education accessible for all children by improving school infrastructure and providing transportation, particularly in rural areas.	2019 – 2022

In 2022, Guyana made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government funded a training program for 1,661 officials and civil society representatives on human trafficking issues and increased funding from $100 to $125 for vouchers to purchase school uniforms, shoes, and backpacks. However, children in Guyana are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in mining. Guyana does not meet the international standard for hazardous work for children because it allows children ages 16 to 17 to conduct night work in industrial activities. Guyanese law does not sufficiently prohibit all commercial sexual exploitation of children because it does not prohibit the use of children for prostitution, although it prohibits other forms of sexual exploitation of children. In addition, law enforcement agencies have insufficient resources to conduct inspections in remote areas, including a lack of transportation and accommodation, and struggle to prosecute cases even with abundant evidence. The government did not publicly release information on its labor law enforcement or criminal law enforcement efforts.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Guyana. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	10.1 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	96.9
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	18.5
Primary Completion Rate (%)		Unavailable

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 6 (MICS 6), 2019–20. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming,† including the production of cabbage, cherries, limes, rice, squash, sugarcane, and charcoal (3-6)
	Forestry, including logging† and work in sawmills† (3,7)
	Fishing,† activities unknown (3,8)
Industry	Construction,† activities unknown (3,8)
	Mining,† including gold mining and bauxite mining (3,7)
Services	Domestic work (3)
	Welding† (3)
	Working in stores, bars, and restaurants (3)
	Street work, including selling fruit, washing cars, and begging (3)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,8-10)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Guyana

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Children in Guyana are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation in Georgetown and in the country's interior. There are also reports of young girls in mining communities being subjected to commercial sexual exploitation as a result of human trafficking. (10,11) In addition, children are engaged in informal, small-scale mining in which they wash gold, operate dangerous machinery, and are exposed to hazardous chemicals. (4,12) Children in Guyana's interior and rural areas have limited access to education due to poor infrastructure, long distances to schools, transportation costs, and a shortage of qualified teachers. (3,12)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Guyana has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Guyana's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including a lack of prohibitions for child prostitution.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Sections 2 and 3, and Part 2, Article 2 of the Employment of Young Persons and Children Act; Articles 17–22 of the Education Act (13,14)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No	18	Part 1, Article 2, and Part 2, Article 3 of the Employment of Young Persons and Children Act; Articles 17, 41, 46, and 75 of the Occupational Safety and Health Act (14,15)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		List of Hazardous Occupations and Processes in Guyana; Part 1, Article 2 of the Employment of Young Persons and Children Act; Articles 17, 41, and 75 of the Occupational Safety and Health Act (14-16)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 2, 3, and 8 of the Combating of Trafficking in Persons Act; Article 140 of the Constitution (17,18)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 3 of the Combating of Trafficking in Persons Act (17)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 2(e) and 3(2) of the Combating of Trafficking in Persons Act; Article 50(3) of the Protection of Children Act (17,19)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No		Article 50(1) of the Protection of Children Act (19)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 18 of the Defense Act and Defense Amendment Act (20,21)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Article 38E of the Constitution; Articles 13 and 22 of the Education Act (13,18)
Free Public Education	Yes		Articles 27 and 149H of the Constitution (18)

* Country has no conscription (22)

Guyana's hazardous work prohibitions for children do not meet international standards because children ages 16 to 17 are permitted to perform night work in industrial activities. (14) Moreover, although Article 50(1) of the Protection of Children Act and the Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act both prohibit selling or giving drugs to children, the law does not specifically prohibit the use, procuring, or offering of a child for the production and trafficking of drugs. (10,19,23,24) In addition, Guyanese law does not sufficiently prohibit all commercial sexual exploitation of children because it does not prohibit the use of children for prostitution. (17) Moreover, Guyanese law does not criminally prohibit the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor	Investigates reports of child labor, conducts routine labor inspections, and refers children identified during labor inspections to the Ministry of Human Services and Social Security's (MHSSS) Countering Trafficking in Persons Unit (C-TIP) and the Childcare and Protection Agency. (12,25) Inspectors are permitted to conduct unannounced inspections in all sectors, but they are not authorized by law to assess penalties for labor law violations. When general labor violations are found, the employer is informed of the labor violation(s) and is given a period to rectify the violation. (3) If inspectors find child labor violations, they may report the employer to the Chief Labor Officer or police for investigation. (3,14) The Chief Labor Officer can file a case against an offending employer with a magistrate judge, who may impose a civil penalty. The welfare and social service officers of MHSSS have the right to access private premises if there is a child labor investigation. (3) C-TIP, under the supervision of the Director of Public Prosecutions, prosecutes trafficking in persons cases. (12) In 2022, held an event with public stakeholders and agencies for World Day Against Child Labor. (26)
MHSSS	Monitors and enforces child labor laws in collaboration with the Ministry of Education, Forestry Commission, Geology and Mines Commission, National Insurance Scheme, and Guyana Police Force. The Chief Labor Officer handles special investigations stemming from child labor complaints and oversees routine labor inspections. (4) Includes a Trafficking in Persons Unit (staffed by five personnel) and the Childcare and Protection Agency, to which children identified during labor inspections are referred. (4,27)
Guyana Police Force (GPF)	Enforces criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. Works in consultation with the Director of Public Prosecutions, Ministry of Home Affairs (MOHA), MHSSS, Ministry of Education, and Ministry of Indigenous Peoples' Affairs, depending on the circumstances of each case. (4) GPF's Trafficking in Persons Unit also investigates reports of human trafficking. (28)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Guyana took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient resources to conduct inspections in some areas.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (3)	Yes (3)

Labor officers conducted impromptu visits to work sites in the mining sector, logging districts, and capital to investigate labor practices and possible violations. (28) However, the government has acknowledged challenges enforcing Articles 41 (relating to child labor in factories) and 46 (relating to employer duties) of the Occupational Safety and Health Act, which aim to protect children from hazardous work. (30) The government also did not provide information on the funding for the labor inspectorate, the number of labor inspections conducted, the number of labor inspectors, the status of training for inspectors, and the number of child labor violations found. Research indicates that inspectors need additional resources, including transportation and accommodation, to conduct inspections in remote regions and that the government struggles to prosecute cases even with abundant evidence. (3,12,31)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Guyana took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including lack of data on criminal prosecutions and convictions.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (3)	Unknown
Number of Investigations	8 (3)	6 (28)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (3)	2 (28)
Number of Convictions	0 (3)	0 (28)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	No (3)	0 (28)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (3)	Yes (28)

In 2022, only data on child trafficking was reported by the government, and information about the number of investigations, prosecutions, convictions, and penalties imposed for other worst forms of child labor is not known. During the reporting period, there were six investigations into forced labor and one ongoing prosecution, involving two non-Guyanese adult workers. Additionally, one individual was prosecuted for forced labor involving a female child while another individual was prosecuted in a case of sex trafficking involving a female child. (28) The government and NGOs reported that shelter accommodations, work permits and employment opportunities for non-Guyanese victims, counseling, medical checkups, and support for court appearances are available to human trafficking survivors. (28)

The MHSSS Countering Trafficking in Persons Unit (C-TIP) reported that during the reporting period it trained 1,661 government officials and civil society representatives using its own funds, and trained an additional 400 persons using funds from the Ministerial Taskforce on Trafficking in Persons and the Guyana Police Force. Information regarding training related to children was not specified, but topics included an overview of the Trafficking in Persons Act 2005, victim identification, the roles of various actors, and training for new and current officers on the general indicators of human trafficking. (28)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to adequately address child labor, including efforts to address all forms of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Ministerial Taskforce on Trafficking in Persons	Reports on human trafficking in Guyana and documents the government's response. Also addresses the worst forms of child labor, including the commercial sexual exploitation of children and use of children in illicit activities, and acts as the management body for child labor referrals. (3,32) Divided into a ministerial arm and a technical arm, with six subcommittees co-chaired by MOHA and MHSS. (3,11,33) In 2022, the committee met monthly and held several awareness-raising sessions for indigenous communities in the interior. In addition, the Taskforce compiled trafficking in persons awareness pamphlets in Indigenous languages and started research on the primary causes of human trafficking in the country. (28)

Guyana's Commission on the Rights of the Child, which protects and promotes children's rights, including by addressing the worst forms of child labor, is not represented on the Ministerial Taskforce on Combating Trafficking in Persons. (3,12,34,35) Although Guyana has a Ministerial Taskforce on Combating Trafficking in Persons to coordinate efforts to address trafficking in persons, it does not have coordinating mechanisms to address other forms of child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of implementation of the National Child Labor Policy and National Action Plan for the Elimination of Child Labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Child Labor Policy and National Action Plan for the Elimination of Child Labor (2019–2025)	Aims to prevent and eliminate child labor in all its forms by 2025 by reconciling gaps and inconsistencies between existing national policies and ratified international conventions. Establishes a national framework to coordinate, enforce, monitor, and evaluate efforts to address child labor. (12,36,37) However, research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the plan during the reporting period.
Ministerial Task Force on Combating Trafficking in Persons Action Plan (2021–2025)	Seeks to prevent and raise awareness about human trafficking, provide direct assistance to survivors, improve law enforcement's capacity to identify and respond to human trafficking, and strengthen inter-agency coordination and referral mechanisms. (9,38) With a budget of $329,944, the plan also provides for the review and amendment of the Combating Trafficking in Persons Act. (27,39) To implement the plan, the government conducted several raids in the mining regions and recruited additional staff to work as interpreters, investigators, and monitoring and evaluation officers. (28) The government also conducted anti-human trafficking awareness campaigns that were tailored to hotel owners, community leaders, maritime and port officials, parents, teachers, and private security firms. (28)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (40)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address the problem in all sectors.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Shelter for Domestic Violence Victims†	Two government-funded, NGO-run shelters. Together in Peace Home caters exclusively to child survivors of human trafficking and accommodates 15 persons. Help & Shelter provides services to women and children who are survivors of human trafficking and other crimes. (28)
Government-Funded School Programs‡	Government-funded school programs aim to deter early school dropouts by providing job skills to at-risk youth who may not otherwise be able to complete their formal education. (4) All students in public and private schools from, nursery to secondary school, were eligible to receive government vouchers to purchase school uniforms, shoes, and backpacks. (3,27,41) In 2022, cash vouchers were increased from $100 to $125. (31,42) The government also has programs to improve access to education that provide hot meals to 16,000 students at schools in the interior, transportation for students in several remote areas, and books for school children. (9,12,27,41,43,44)
Child Advocacy Centers	Funded by private sector donations and UNICEF, and implemented by MHSSS, the UN Population Fund, and NGOs to provide services for abused children. (45) The MHSSS Childcare and Protection Agency oversees the 12 centers and makes referrals. (45-47) Child Advocacy Centers received a modest increase in budgetary allocations in 2022. (31)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of Guyana.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (3)

The government operates three 24/7 hotlines to report human trafficking, two for English speakers and the third for Spanish speakers. (28) While Guyana is a part of the Regional Initiative Latin America and the Caribbean Free of Child Labor, research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the program during the reporting period. (48) Moreover, the scope of government programs targeting the worst forms of child labor is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, including child labor in the mining industry and the commercial sexual exploitation of children. (6)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Guyana.

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law sufficiently prohibits all commercial sexual exploitation of children by prohibiting the use of children in prostitution.	2010 – 2022
	Ensure that the law sufficiently prohibits the use of children for illicit activities by prohibiting the use, procuring, or offering of a child for the production or trafficking of drugs.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure that the law sufficiently prohibits children ages 16 to 17 from engaging in hazardous work that may jeopardize their health, safety, or morals.	2021 – 2022
Enforcement	Publish information on labor law enforcement, including inspectorate funding, number of inspectors, number and type of inspections conducted, and child labor violations found.	2015 – 2022
	Publish information about the training system for labor inspectors.	2022
	Remove barriers to enforcement and prosecution by strengthening the judicial system.	2022
	Ensure that the labor inspectorate receives sufficient resources to monitor the interior, where child labor is most prevalent, and other remote areas.	2011 – 2022
	Ensure the appropriate application of Articles 41 and 46 of the Occupational Safety and Health Act to protect children from work that may harm their physical health or emotional development.	2015 – 2022
	Publish information on criminal labor enforcement for all worst forms of child labor, including training for investigators, the number of investigations, prosecutions initiated, number of convictions, and number of imposed penalties.	2022
Coordination	Permit the Commission on the Rights of the Child to join and participate in the Ministerial Taskforce on Combating Trafficking in Persons.	2021 – 2022

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Government Policies	Ensure that activities are undertaken to implement key policies, including the National Child Labor Policy and National Action Plan for the Elimination of Child Labor.	2020 – 2022
Social Programs	Ensure that children are not prevented from attending school because of transportation costs and lack of infrastructure, and increase the number of qualified teachers, particularly in rural and interior areas.	2015 – 2022
	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor, including in fishing and construction, to inform policies and programs.	2020 – 2022
	Develop new initiatives and expand existing programs to reach all children involved in the worst forms of child labor, including programs addressing child labor in the mining industry and the commercial sexual exploitation of children.	2010 – 2022

In 2022, Haiti made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government certified 29 new labor inspectors and trained them on child labor issues in the informal sector. Additionally, with the support of the United Nations Children's Fund, the government created a new coordination mechanism dedicated to child protection issues. However, children in Haiti are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture and domestic work. Minimum age protections for work apply only to children with a formal employment contract, which does not comply with international standards that require all children to be protected. In addition, Haiti lacks a clear minimum age for domestic work and a list of hazardous occupations prohibited to children. Furthermore, social programs to address child labor are insufficient to adequately address the extent of the problem, particularly in domestic work, agriculture, and child trafficking.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Haiti. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	34.4 (815,993)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	92.4
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	34.9
Primary Completion Rate (%)		Unavailable

Primary Completion Rate was unavailable from UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2023. (1)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Enquête Mortalité, Morbidité et Utilisation des Services (DHS), 2012. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Raising livestock (3)
	Fishing (3-6)
Industry	Construction (4-6)
Services	Domestic work (5,7)
	Selling alcohol† and tobacco (3,4)
	Street work, including vending, begging, and washing cars (4-9)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced labor in domestic work, agriculture, street vending, and begging (4,5,7-10)
	Use in illicit activities, including by criminal groups in drug trafficking, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,7,10,11)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (7,10)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Reports indicate there are between 150,000 and 300,000 child domestic workers in Haiti. (8) Many of Haiti's human trafficking cases involve children subjected to forced labor as domestic workers. These children, exploited in what is commonly referred to as the restavèk system, are often physically abused, sexually exploited, and uncompensated for their services. (5,12) Some parents who are unable to care for their children send them to residential care centers or to relatives or strangers who are expected to provide the children with food, shelter, and schooling in exchange for household work. In practice, some of these children receive care and access to education, while many others become victims of labor exploitation and abuse. (7,13-15) In addition, Haiti has more than 750 orphanages that house more than 30,000 children who may be vulnerable to human trafficking and child labor. Research indicates that some children in orphanages engage in child labor as domestic workers and are prevented from attending school. (10,16-18) Children are also often forced into commercial or transactional sex to fund basic needs such as school-related expenses. (19) In addition, criminal gangs recruit children as young as age 10 and subject them to sexual exploitation, pornography, and forced criminal activity. (9,19)

Many children in Haiti are not registered at birth, and unregistered children are not able to access social services and educational programs provided by the government. (3) According to reports, approximately 30 percent of children ages 1 to 5 five lack birth certificates or any other official documentation. Children born in rural communities are less likely to be documented than children in urban areas. (20)

There are significant barriers to education in Haiti, especially in rural areas, including the country's extreme poverty, security risks, language barriers, limited availability of teachers, dilapidated school premises, and overall lack of school infrastructure. (10,21) Moreover, because approximately 80 percent of all existing schools are private, most Haitian children are enrolled in private schools that charge tuition and other fees, making education prohibitively expensive for many families. (10,21,22) In addition, estimates show that approximately 10 percent of students drop out of school before grade six and 40 percent before the end of grade nine, making these children more vulnerable to child labor, including its worst forms. (21,23) Another factor limiting access to education is the Ministry of Education's requirement that only children between the ages of 11 and 13 are allowed to transition to secondary school, while over this age limit must integrate into a special group that attends school during the evening. (24,25) However, research did not find evidence that schools provide instruction during the evening for special groups. (26) Research also indicates that less than 14 percent of children with disabilities attend school, with only 3.5 percent of an estimated 120,000 children with disabilities attending school in Port-au-Prince. (19,20)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Haiti has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Haiti's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work that does not meet international standards.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	16	Articles 2, 340 513, and 515 of the Labor Code; Article 10 of the Law Organizing and Regulating Labor (27,28)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 10, 333–335, 513, and 515 of the Labor Code; Article 2 of the Act on the Prohibition and Elimination of All Forms of Abuse, Violence, Ill Treatment, or Inhumane Treatment Against Children (Act of 2003) (27,29)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No		Articles 333–336 of the Labor Code (27)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	No		Articles 4, 513, and 515 of the Labor Code; Article 2 of the Act of 2003; Articles 1.1, 11, 15, and 21 of the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Law (27,29,30)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 2 of the Act of 2003; Articles 1.1, 11, 12, 15, and 21 of the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Law (29,30)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 2 of the Act of 2003; Article 281 of the Penal Code; Article 1.1, 11, 12, and 21 of the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Law (29-31)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 47–51, and 72 of the Law on the Control and Suppression of Illicit Drug Trafficking; Article 2 of the Act of 2003 (29,32)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	No
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 268 of the Constitution (33)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No		Article 70 of the Penal Code; Article 2 of the Act of 2003 (29, 31)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Article 23 of the Decree on the Reorganization of the Haitian Education System (34)
Free Public Education	Yes		Articles 32.1 and 33 of the Constitution (33)

The Labor Code, which establishes the penalty for violations of the minimum age for work, applies only to workers with a formal employment agreement, a stipulation that does not conform to international standards that require all children to be protected under the law establishing a minimum age for work. (27,35) Furthermore, as the minimum age for work is 16, children age 15 are vulnerable to exploitative child labor because they are not required to attend school but also are not yet legally permitted to work. (27,34) It is also unclear whether there is a minimum age for domestic work because the Act on the Prohibition and Elimination of All Forms of Abuse, Violence, Ill Treatment, or Inhumane Treatment Against Children of 2003 (Act of 2003) annulled Chapter 9 of the Labor Code, which set the minimum age for domestic work at age 12. (27,29,35) The labor Code prohibits children under age 18 from working in establishments that sell alcohol and from working at night in industrial enterprises. (28,36) However, the types of hazardous work prohibited for children do not cover agriculture, an economic sector in which children are exposed to hazardous substances and to temperatures that can damage their health. (28,35-37) Furthermore, although the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Law criminalizes trafficking for forced labor, servitude, and debt bondage, slavery is not criminally prohibited. (30) Research could not find evidence of any other legal provision criminally prohibiting slavery. Moreover, while Haiti's Constitution establishes the age for compulsory military recruitment at age 18 and sources suggest recruitment materials set the minimum age for voluntary recruitment at that age, research could not find evidence of a law that establishes the age for voluntary recruitment. (3,33,38,39)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Haiti

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Social Affairs and Labor (MAST)	Enforces laws related to child labor by receiving complaints, conducting investigations, referring cases to juvenile courts, and issuing employment permits to approve certain forms of labor for children between ages 15 and 18. (7,8,28) Develops and implements programs to raise awareness of child labor and provide social services to child survivors of labor exploitation. Its agents at the Institute of Social Welfare and Research (IBESR) perform child protection inspections, which include following up on reported incidents of child labor and are responsible for accrediting residential care centers. (7)
Brigade for the Protection of Minors (BPM)	Investigates crimes involving the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation. Submits investigations to judicial authorities for criminal prosecution and refers child survivors to IBESR. (7) Housed within the Haitian National Police, maintains 22 offices around the country, including 2 offices along the Haiti-Dominican Republic border. (7)
POLIFRONT	Enforces Haiti's Customs Code and investigates transnational crimes, including child trafficking. (7) Also responsible for referring cases of vulnerable migrants, including minors, to IBESR. Serves as the Border Police Unit of the Haitian National Police. (7) Operates at the border crossings of Ouanaminthe, Anse-à-Pitres, and Malpasse. (9,40,41)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Haiti took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, the government did not provide sufficient data on its labor law enforcement efforts, which limits the ability to assess its efforts.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown (10)	Unknown (8)
Number of Labor Inspectors	Unknown (10)	Unknown (8,9)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	Yes (27)	Yes (27)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	Yes (10)	Yes (8)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksite	Unknown (10)	Unknown (8)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	Unknown (10)	Unknown (8)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	Unknown (10)	Unknown (8)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	Unknown (10)	Unknown (8)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (10)	Yes (8)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (10)	Yes (8)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (27)	Yes (27)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (10)	Unknown (8)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (10)	Yes (8)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (10)	Yes (8)

In February 2022, the Haitian government, in partnership with the ILO, Lumos Foundation, and Better Work Haiti, conducted training on preventing forced labor and labor trafficking with focused sessions on the vulnerabilities faced by children living in orphanages and working in the informal sector. This training resulted in the certification of 29 new labor inspectors. (8) However, reporting indicates that the lack of sufficient resources, such as for transportation, fuel, and appropriately equipped workplaces, hampers the Ministry of Social Affairs and Labor's (MAST) enforcement efforts. This includes the Institute of Social Welfare and Research's (IBESR) capacity to enforce child labor laws by conducting an adequate number of labor inspections. (3,4,7,11) In addition, the prevalence of gang-controlled areas in the country also hampers general law enforcement, including labor law enforcement. (9) According to IBESR, inspectors receive insufficient training overall on child labor issues. (10) Research also indicates that Haiti does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (3,4,7,11,42,43)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Haiti took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient allocation of financial and human resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (26)	Yes (8)
Number of Investigations	466 (10)	Unknown (8)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	24 (10)	32 (9)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (10)	Unknown (8)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (10)	Unknown (8)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (10)	Yes (8)

In 2022, reports indicate that the Brigade for the Protection of Minors (BPM) continued to lack an adequate number of agents, and that training, equipment, transportation, and funding are deficient, all of which hampered BPM's ability to enforce laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (4,6-10,40) However, a referral mechanism between BPM, IBESR, and NGOs is in place to provide reintegration services to survivors of the worst forms of child labor. (3-10,26) BPM also manages the “1-8-8” hotline, which receives notifications of alleged violations related to the worst forms of child labor. (3,44) However, the hotline functions exclusively in Port-au-Prince, which makes reporting cases involving the worst forms of child labor more difficult in rural areas. (6,9,16)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Tripartite Committee for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Develops policies, approves programs, and coordinates, monitors, and evaluates efforts to address child labor in Haiti. (10,26,45) Chaired by MAST and receives technical support from ILO. (10,45) Reports indicate it was active in 2022. (8)

In 2022, the government created the Child Protection Sub-Sector under the direction of IBESR and with the support of UNICEF to improve coordination of child protection issues. (8,9)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a policy related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of implementation of the key national policy.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Social Protection and Promotion Policy	Aims to build institutional resilience for social protection and promotion in response to economic shocks and health crises such as the COVID-19 pandemic. Initiated under a safety net program called Kore Lavi and funded by USAID. (7,46) Consists of four major pillars, including childhood social care and efforts to support employment and employability. Lines of effort under these two pillars include identification and removal of children from work and vocational training for youth, among other activities. (7) Past efforts include the World Bank partnering with MAST and WFP to deliver cash transfers to targeted households, and IDB partnering with WFP and the Economic and Social Assistance Fund to deliver food and cash to vulnerable households in several departments of the country. (7,46) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Special Program of Free Education (PROSGATE)†	Replaced the National Free Education Program. (47) Aims to increase poor children's access to education. Includes school grants intended to eliminate school fees and for accelerated learning programs for students who are behind in school. (48-50) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this program during the reporting period.
Providing an Education of Quality in Haiti (2016–2022)	$30 million World Bank-implemented program that aims to strengthen public management of the education sector; improve learning conditions, and increase enrollment of students in selected public and non-public primary schools. Reporting indicates this program was active in 2022. (51)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of the Republic of Haiti.

Although Haiti has programs that target child labor and its root causes, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, particularly in domestic work, agriculture, and child trafficking. (6,7)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Haiti (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that minimum age for work protections apply to all children, including those without formal employment contracts.	2014 – 2022
	Clarify the minimum age for work, including for domestic work.	2009 – 2022
	Adopt a list of hazardous occupations and activities, and ensure that the hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children are comprehensive and include work in hazardous agricultural environments.	2009 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits slavery.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that the law establishes a minimum age for voluntary recruitment by the state military, at age 18 or at age 16, with safeguards for voluntariness.	2018 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2021 – 2022
	Raise the compulsory education age from 15 to 16 so that it aligns with the minimum age for work.	2017 – 2022
Enforcement	Collect and publish information on labor law enforcement efforts, including on labor inspectorate funding; the number of labor inspectors; the number of labor inspections conducted; the number of violations found and total penalties imposed and collected; and whether unannounced inspections were carried out.	2013 – 2022
	Ensure that the number of labor and criminal law enforcement agents, training, and material and financial resources for labor and criminal law enforcement agencies are sufficient to adequately enforce laws related to child labor, including its worst forms.	2013 – 2022
	Expand the reach of hotlines operated by the Brigade for the Protection of Minors and the Institute of Social Welfare and Research to facilitate reporting of child exploitation cases in areas beyond Port-au-Prince, including in rural areas.	2013 – 2022
	Collect and publish complete information on the number of investigations undertaken, convictions achieved, and penalties imposed related to child labor crimes.	2020 – 2022
	Employ at least 129 labor inspectors to ensure adequate coverage of the labor force of approximately 5.2 million people.	2020 – 2022
Government Policies	Ensure that the National Social Protection and Promotion Policy is implemented.	2017 – 2022

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Social Programs	Ensure all children are able to obtain birth registration documents and expand access to identity documents to ensure children have access to education and other social protection mechanisms.	2022
	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers to education and increase accessibility for all children by increasing the number of public schools and teachers, especially in rural areas; improving school infrastructure and safety; ensuring that public schools address language barriers; meeting the specific educational needs of vulnerable populations, including unregistered children and children with disabilities; and ensuring that children who start their education late or repeat grades are allowed to transition to secondary school.	2009 – 2022
	Expand existing social programs to address the scope of the child labor problem, particularly in domestic work, agriculture, and child trafficking.	2010 – 2022
	Ensure that all social programs designed to address child labor are active and fulfilling their mandates as intended.	2019 – 2022
	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2021 – 2022

In 2022, Honduras made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The National Commission for the Gradual and Progressive Eradication of Child Labor updated the hazardous work list, which awaits ministerial approval, and held a public expo to raise awareness of child labor. The Ministry of Labor and Social Security also approved the creation of a child labor seal to incentivize the private sector to implement good practices and promote compliance with child labor prohibitions.

In addition, the government replaced the Better Life

Voucher program with the Solidarity Network conditional cash transfer program for families in some of the poorest towns in the country to ensure children stay in school. However, children in Honduras are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. They are also used to carry out illicit activities, including selling and trafficking drugs. Children also engage in child labor in the production of coffee, melons, and lobsters. Labor law enforcement agencies lack the financial and human resources necessary to fulfill their mandates, identifying no child labor law violations in 2022 and decreasing the number of criminal investigations conducted and prosecutions initiated compared with the previous reporting period. Additionally, social programs that aim to address child labor in agriculture have failed to address the problem, and other social programs are needed to address child labor in fishing, mining, domestic work, and forced begging.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Honduras.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	9.0 (168,348)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	87.9

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst	Forced labor in fishing, mining, construction, and in the hospitality industry (9)
Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced begging, street vending, and domestic service (5,6,8,9,14)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (5,6,8-10)
	Use in illicit activities, including by gangs in committing extortion, and selling and trafficking drugs, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (5,6,8-11,15)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

According to Honduras' National Institute of Statistics, 325,499 children between the ages of 5 and 17 were working in 2022, with 62 percent working in rural areas and 41 percent working in agriculture or fishing. (8) These numbers do not incorporate estimates for children used by gangs. (8) Reports indicate that children from indigenous and Afro-descendant groups are particularly vulnerable to child labor, including its worst forms. (8,11) In particular, boys from the Miskito Afro-descendant community are vulnerable to forced labor in fishing, mining, construction, and hospitality industries. (9) Many of these children choose to migrate and, once en route, these migrant children are vulnerable to human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation. (16)

Children in Honduras are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes by family members and friends. (5,8-10) Children are also forced to work as street vendors and domestic servants. Gangs force children to commit extortion, engage in prostitution, transport weapons, traffic drugs, and serve as lookouts. (5,8-10) In addition, Honduras is a destination country for child sex tourists from the United States and Canada. (9)

In 2022, barriers to education in the country continued due to COVID-19 pandemic related school closures and children's lack of access to the internet, cellphone coverage, or technical equipment required to attend virtual classes. (5,6,8) Hurricanes Eta and Iota worsened pandemic related school closures by further damaging infrastructure. (8) Access to education is often limited, especially for children living in rural areas, where there is a lack of funding for schools, and in many cases, limited infrastructure. (11) Reports indicate that in some regions of the country, especially in La Mosquitia, language barriers exist as the teachers do not speak local languages or dialects. (5,8,17) Violence originating from gang activity, including recruitment and territorial disputes, also presents barriers to access for both children and educators, causing some schools to drastically reduce their enrollment. (5,8,10,11) Additionally, children from indigenous and Afro-descendant groups face persistent difficulties in obtaining access to education. (17,18) There is also a particularly high dropout rate among children of indigenous and African descent. (17,18) Finally, children with disabilities attend schools at a lower rate than the general population, and the National Center for Social Sector Information states that 43 percent of persons with disabilities received no formal education. (19) Schools throughout the country have shortages of materials, personnel, and infrastructure. Other Barriers to education include a lack of sanitation and electricity in schools, a lack of transportation to school, and the costs of school fees, uniforms, and supplies. (5,8,10)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Honduras has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government's laws and regulations are in line with relevant international standards (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	18	Article 120 of the Code on Childhood and Adolescence; Article 15 of the Executive Agreement STSS-211-01; Article 32 of the Labor Code (20-22)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 1 and 122 of the Code on Childhood and Adolescence; Articles 2 and 10 of the Executive Agreement STSS211-01; Article 1 of the Executive Agreement STSS-441-2016 (20,21,23)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 1 of the Executive Agreement STSS-441-2016; Article 8 of the Executive Agreement STSS211-01 (20,23)

Free Public Education	Yes		Articles 7, 13, and 21–23 of the Fundamental Law of Education; Article 36 of the Code on Childhood and Adolescence; Article 171 of the Constitution (21,27,28)

* Country has no conscription (20)

During the reporting period, the government proposed an update to its hazardous work list. This update would expand the list to include domestic work and the production and handling of textile boards, car accessories, harnesses, and electrical circuits. (8) This reform is pending ministerial approval. (8) Despite the minimum working age being set at 18, children in Honduras are required to attend school only up to age 17. This standard makes children age 17 vulnerable to child labor as they are not required to attend school but are not legally permitted to work without restriction on hours and times of work. (20-22,27)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Honduras

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor and Social Security (SETRASS)	Conducts labor inspections and enforces child labor laws through the General Directorate of Social Welfare and the General Directorate of Labor Inspections. Created by the Labor Inspection Law enacted in 2017 through Decree Num. 178-2016. (5,29,30)
Public Ministry	Carries out criminal prosecutions and directs the investigation of crimes in the country, including those related to the worst forms of child labor. (10,31) Through its Office of the Special Prosecutor for Children, prosecutes crimes with child victims, including crimes related to child trafficking, forced labor, and the commercial sexual exploitation of children. Also coordinates with the National Police to investigate crimes and protect survivors. (10,31) Through its Technical Agency for Criminal Investigations, investigates and provides technical support for criminal prosecutions, including by the Office of the Special Prosecutor for Children, such as those related to human trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and child pornography. (10) Through its Unit Against Trafficking in Persons, Commercial Sexual Exploitation and Illicit Human Smuggling (UTESCTP), coordinates with domestic and international enforcement agencies to carry out anti-trafficking in persons operations and prosecutions. (14,32)
National Police	Investigates crimes related to the worst forms of child labor, through their Police Investigation Directorate. Also works with the Public Ministry and the Directorate of Childhood, Adolescence, and Family (DINAF), as well as other government entities on operations to remove children from child labor. (5)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Honduras took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Social Security (SETRASS) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including an insufficient number of labor inspectors.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$3,300,000 (6)	$3,496,488 (8)
Number of Labor Inspectors	162 (6)	109 (8)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	Yes (22)	Yes (22)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	Yes (6)	Yes (8)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksites	14,299 (33)	19,825 (8)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	1 (6)	0 (8)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	0 (6)	0 (8)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	0 (6)	0 (8)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (6)	Yes (8)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (6)	Yes (8)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (22)	Yes (22)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (6)	Yes (8)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (6)	Yes (8)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (6)	Yes (8)

The Government of Honduras decreased the size of its inspectorate by 53 following staffing changes related to the start of the new administration and does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (6,8,34) Reports also indicate that additional training on child labor issues is needed for labor inspectors. (33) Despite these gaps, 19,825 labor inspections were conducted in 2022. Of these inspections, 278 inspections were directly related to child labor. (8) This is a high number of inspections conducted by each inspector, and it is unknown whether this high number affects the quality of such inspections. (35) These inspections were carried out in the language spoken by most workers and in the commercial, service, and agricultural sectors. (8) However, the number of inspections conducted is still insufficient to address the scope of labor violations in the country, including child labor violations. (5,6,8,11) Reports indicate that most inspections are conducted in the urban areas of Tegucigalpa and San Pedro Sula, leaving rural areas and indigenous communities, in which hazardous activities in agriculture, fishing, and diving are concentrated, with insufficient inspections to address the scope of the problem. (9) Inspectors also do not conduct inspections in the informal sector unless there is a formal complaint. (5,6,8) In addition, reports indicate that the level of funding and resources for the General Directorate for Labor Inspections is insufficient. (5,8,11) In particular, inspectors did not have sufficient transportation and travel funding to carry out inspections. (6,8,33) Finally, although a reciprocal mechanism exists between labor authorities and social services, there is no evidence to suggest that this mechanism has been used to assist any children. (36)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Honduras took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient allocation of financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (6)	Unknown (8)
Number of Investigations	10 (6)	4 (8)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	12 (6)	3 (8)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (6)	1 (8)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (6)	Unknown (8)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (6)	Yes (8)

Reports indicate that criminal law enforcement agencies in the country have a limited capacity to investigate trafficking in persons cases in most regions of Honduras due to staffing limitations. (37)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Commission for the Gradual and Progressive Eradication of Child Labor	Coordinates government policies and efforts on child labor issues. Chaired by SETRASS and includes officials from eight government ministries, DINAF, the Supreme Court, and other government entities. (29,38) Oversees regional sub-commissions, led by SETRASS and DINAF officials, which implement national efforts at the local level. (29,38) During the reporting period, the commission reviewed advancements and challenges related to the 2021–2025 Roadmap for the Elimination of Child Labor, voted to approve an updated hazardous work list, and held a public expo to raise awareness about child labor. (8,39) The commission's technical committee met on several occasions with private sector and labor groups to get their input on a revised hazardous work list and review a special compliance seal to incentivize business compliance with child labor laws. The technical committee also met to craft a planning strategy for the commission. (8)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
Roadmap for the Elimination of Child Labor in Honduras (2021–2025)	Aims to eliminate all forms of child labor by 2025. Established in 2021 by the National Commission for the Gradual and Progressive Eradication of Child Labor. (6,8) The plan calls for increased efforts to identify risk factors for vulnerability to child labor; establish a common, integrated protocol for responding to child labor situations; and increase awareness of child labor laws and labor rights. (8) Works at the national, regional, and sub-regional levels and addresses poverty, health, education, and social development. The government continued to support this policy in 2022 by meeting several times throughout the year to review advancements and challenges related to the roadmap. (6,35,40)

Policy	Description & Activities
Strategic Plan to Combat Commercial Sexual Exploitation and Human Trafficking in Honduras (2016–2022)	Established national priorities to address commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking in four principal areas: (1) prevention and awareness; (2) investigation, prosecution, and punishment of violations; (3) detection, assistance, and protection of victims; and (4) coordination and cooperation. (33,41) During the reporting period, members of the Inter-Institutional Commission against Sexual and Commercial Exploitation and Trafficking in Persons announced the launch of "Blue Hearts", the objective of the program is to spread awareness of human trafficking crimes among government agencies, local committees, the private sector, NGOs, and civil society. This project is guided by the Strategic Plan against Commercial Sexual Exploitation and Trafficking in Persons. (42)
U.S.-Honduras Labor Rights Monitoring and Action Plan	Aims to improve the enforcement of labor laws, including laws related to child labor, by implementing legal and policy reforms, strengthening SETRASS, enhancing enforcement activities, and increasing outreach efforts. (43) USDOL and SETRASS continued activities and coordination during the reporting period. (8) As part of this effort, the USDOL and USDOS continued to finance programs to educate youth who are at-risk of labor exploitation, provide technical assistance for an electronic case management system to improve enforcement of labor laws, and develop a system to detect and prevent child labor in the coffee sector. The Government of Honduras continued to maintain a dialogue with the private sector and labor leaders to address systemic labor challenges. (8)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (44,45)

In 2022, SETRASS introduced a child labor seal to incentivize the private sector to implement good practices and promote compliance with national and international standards for preventing child labor. (8)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Solidarity Network ( Red Solidaria )†	Created in 2022 to replace the Better Life Voucher. Consists of a conditional cash transfer of $163 annually to 350,000 families in some of the poorest towns in the country, with the condition that families vaccinate their children and keep them enrolled in school. (8) The program also includes $32.4 million in investments in health, education, preventing teenage pregnancy, infrastructure, and housing projects. (8)
Program to Combat Child Forced Begging†	DINAF program that identifies and rescues children who are subjected to forced begging and raises awareness of child forced begging through media. (8) During the reporting period, this program carried out a campaign to assist children living and working on the streets by providing humanitarian aid to families and referring them to the appropriate government services. DINAF also reported providing protection services to children who were being used for street begging. (46) The program also supported a government expo to raise awareness of child labor as part of activities to commemorate International Day Against Child Labor. (8)
Program to Prevent Sex Tourism Involving Children and Adolescents†	Government program that aims to raise awareness and provide training on preventing sex tourism for the tourism industry. The Honduran Tourist Board, the Ministry of Tourism, and the Honduras Tourism Institute jointly implemented this program. (8, 11) The Honduran Tourism Institute and the Ministry of Tourism participated in a 3-day training on preventing sexual exploitation in travel and tourism. (8)

† Program is funded by the Government of Honduras.

Although the Government of Honduras funds or participates in social programs to address child labor, research did not identify programs to assist children working in sectors such as fishing, mining, and domestic work, or that address the illegal recruitment of children into gang-related activities. In addition, social programs that address child labor in agriculture do not appear to sufficiently address the scope of the problem. (33)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Honduras (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the compulsory education age from 17 to 18 to align with the minimum age for work.	2021 – 2022
Enforcement	Carry out labor inspections in areas in which child labor is prevalent, such as rural areas, the informal sector, and indigenous communities in which children engage in hazardous activities.	2017 – 2022
	Ensure that labor and criminal law enforcement agencies have sufficient funding and transportation to carry out their mandates nationwide.	2010 – 2022
	Increase the number of labor inspectors from 109 to 278 to provide adequate coverage of the labor force of approximately 4.2 million people.	2010 – 2022
	Ensure that all labor inspectors receive sufficient training on child labor issues to effectively carry out their duties.	2014 – 2022
	Publish criminal law enforcement information on the training for criminal investigators and penalties imposed related to the worst forms of child labor.	2015 – 2022
	Ensure that the referral mechanism is being used by the labor inspectorate to refer children to the appropriate social services.	2022
	Ensure the number of inspections conducted by labor inspectors is appropriate to ensure the quality and scope of inspections.	2022
Social Programs	Increase access to education by increasing funding to schools; ensuring that teachers speak local languages or dialects; building more schools, particularly secondary schools, and schools in rural areas; enhancing efforts to protect students from gang recruitment and violence; ensuring children with disabilities have access to schooling; and removing barriers such as school fees, costs for uniforms, and lack of transportation.	2014 – 2022
	Ensure that social programs reach the children who are most vulnerable to child labor, including children of African descent and indigenous children.	2017 – 2022
	Expand social programs that address child labor in agriculture and create programs to assist children engaged in child labor in fishing, mining, domestic service, and illicit gang activity.	2009 – 2022

In 2022, India made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Railway Protection Force launched a nationwide campaign that intercepted 183 children from human trafficking perpetrated on trains and in railway stations. In Haryana, the police department removed 1,760 children from child labor, while the Haryana state Anti-Human Trafficking Unit reunited 378 child trafficking victims with their families. Additionally, from April 2021 to March 2022, the National Child Labor Project Scheme removed and rehabilitated 13,271 from child labor. However, children in India are vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in garment production, stone quarrying, and brickmaking. Existing hazardous work prohibitions do not include all occupations in which children work for long periods in unsafe and unhealthy environments, and penalties for illegally employing children are insufficient to deter violations. Reports of corruption at varying levels among police and other government officials, leading to the mistreatment of victims and delayed prosecutions of child labor offenses remained a concern. Children continue to experience commercial sexual exploitation and other forms of abuse in shelter homes that operate without sufficient government oversight. In addition, the Government of India continued to restrict foreign donations to NGOs, many of which work on human and child rights issues, through an amendment to the Foreign Contribution Regulation Act. The authorities sometimes used the threat of cancelling or revoking this Act to silence or restrict civil society organizations that might be working to address human rights concerns, including the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in India.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	1.4 (3,253,202)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	90.7
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	0.3
Primary Completion Rate (%)		97.4

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including ploughing land; producing hybrid cottonseed and vegetable seeds; cultivating cotton and rice; harvesting sugarcane, tea, coconut, eucalyptus, and ginger; and performing peripheral work, such as removing weeds (3-7) Processing sugarcane, cashew nuts,† and seafood (3,8,9)
Industry	Manufacturing garments, weaving silk fabric and carpets,† producing raw silk thread (sericulture), spinning cotton thread and yarn, and embellishing textiles with silver and gold (zari)† (4,6,10-12) Quarrying and breaking sandstone† and granite,† producing bricks,† and mining and collecting mica† and coal† (4,6,7,13-14) Polishing gems† and manufacturing glass bangles,† imitation jewelry, locks,† and brassware† (4)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Sector/Industry	Activity
Industry	Rolling cigarettes ( bidis )† and manufacturing incense sticks ( agarbatti ), fireworks,† and matches† (4,15)
	Manufacturing footwear and bags; producing leather goods and accessories,† fans, and toys; and stitching soccer balls (4,16)
Services	Domestic work† (4,6,17)
	Working in restaurants, hotels, food service, and tourism services (4,7,18)
	Street work, including scavenging, sorting garbage, selling trinkets, and organized begging (4,6,7)
	Working in automobile workshops and repairing vehicles (4,10,13,19)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced labor in agriculture, including producing hybrid cottonseed, cultivating rice, and harvesting sugarcane (6,7)
	Forced labor in producing bricks, quarrying stones, and in rice mills (6,7,20)
	Forced labor in producing garments and carpets, spinning cotton thread and yarn, and embroidering silver and gold into textiles ( zari ) (11,18,21)
	Forced labor in producing bangles, imitation jewelry, leather goods, toys, fans, plastic goods, footwear, and bags (6,16,22,23)
	Forced labor in domestic work and begging (4,6,24)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (4,6,7,24)
	Recruitment of children by non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict (6,10,25)
	Use in illicit activities, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, including the use of children to commit theft, traffic other children, and recruit other children for commercial sexual exploitation (4,26,27)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Child victims of commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor are typically from marginalized groups, such as low-caste Hindus, members of tribal communities, or religious minorities. (7,28) Human traffickers fraudulently recruit Nepali, Bangladeshi, and Burmese girls into commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor in India. (6,29) Both registered and unregistered spas also exploit girls in sex trafficking, as the government lacks sufficient oversight of such establishments. (6,30,31) Despite rescue operations by authorities, trafficked children are vulnerable to exploitation in some of Tamil Nadu's 7,000 garment and spinning factories, where the state has yet to implement an effective inspection system. (6) In addition, children are forced to work as bonded laborers alongside their families in brick kilns and stone quarries to pay off debts owed to moneylenders and employers. (6,7) Non-state armed groups reportedly recruit children as young as age 14 for use in direct hostilities against the security forces of Jammu and Kashmir. (6,32,33) In addition, Maoist groups sometimes use children as human shields in confrontations with security forces, and commanders of non-state armed groups recruit girls for sexual exploitation, including practices indicative of sexual slavery. (34,35)

Children have limited access to education, particularly in overcrowded urban slums, due to budgetary constraints and a lack of separate and sanitary washrooms for girls, adequate infrastructure, and transportation. (10,13) Furthermore, children from marginalized groups may face additional barriers to accessing education, including discrimination and harassment by education officials. (13,36,37) Lower-caste children in some schools are segregated in classrooms, sometimes resulting in higher dropout rates. (13,38) The Government of India does not collect or publish data on child labor. (13,18)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

India has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor (Cont.)

Convention	Ratification

UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations to address child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in India's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including a lack of comprehensive child trafficking prohibitions.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Section 3(1) of the Child and Adolescent Labor (Prohibition and Regulation) Amendment Act (39)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Section 3A of the Child and Adolescent Labor (Prohibition and Regulation) Act (39)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Schedule to the Child and Adolescent Labor (Prohibition and Regulation) Act; The Occupational Safety, Health and Working Conditions Code (40,41)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Sections 2(g), 4, and 16–19 of the Bonded Labor System (Abolition) Act; Sections 367, 368, 370, 371, and 374 of the Penal Code; Section 79 of the Juvenile Justice (Care and Protection of Children) Act (42-44)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Sections 366A, 366B, 370, and 372 of the Indian Penal Code; Sections 2, 5, 5A, and 5B of the Immoral Traffic (Prevention) Act; Article 23 of the Constitution (43,45,46)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Sections 366A, 366B, 370A, 372, and 373 of the Indian Penal Code; Sections 4–6 of the Immoral Traffic (Prevention) Act; Sections 13–15 of the Protection of Children from Sexual Offences Act; Section 67B of the Information Technology Act (43,45,47,48)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Sections 76, 78, and 83(2) of the Juvenile Justice (Care and Protection of Children) Act; Sections 15–18, 20–23, and 32B(c) of the Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substance Act (42,49)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	16	Codified Military Rules (50)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Section 1(2) and 83 of the Juvenile Justice (Care and Protection of Children) Act (42)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	14	Section 3 of the Right of Children to Free and Compulsory Education Act (51)
Free Public Education	Yes		Section 3 of the Right of Children to Free and Compulsory Education Act (51)

* Country has no conscription (52)

India's hazardous work regulations for children ages 14 to 18 do not include sectors in which children are known to work for long hours, including spinning mills, garment production, and carpet making. (4,40,53) The Occupational Safety, Health, and Working Conditions Code (OSH) has not been adopted at the state level and the deadline for state-level adoption remains unknown. (41,54) Furthermore, the OSH Code covers only establishments with 10 or more employees, factories with 20 or more employees, and manufacturing facilities

India

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

with 40 or more employees, leaving workers in smaller workplaces unprotected. (41) India's child trafficking laws do not meet international standards as they require the use of force, fraud or coercion to establish child sex trafficking offenses. (45) Although sources report that the minimum age for voluntary recruitment into India's Armed Forces is age 16 and that individuals must be age 18 to be deployed, research could not identify these criteria in Indian law. (55,56)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
State Government Labor Ministries	Conduct labor inspections, including inspections for child labor, and assess penalties for violations. (7) Also refer children to Child Welfare Committees for protection and rehabilitation services. (42)
State and Local Police	Enforce laws pertaining to the worst forms of child labor. (53) Submit information to District Magistrates to determine whether a case should be prosecuted in District Court. (7) Also refer children to Child Welfare Committees for protection and rehabilitation services. (42) The Criminal Investigation Department (CID) (also referred to as the "Crime Branch") is a unit of the police force in each state. There are 36 CIDs across India. (52,57)
Trafficking Enforcement Bodies	The National Investigation Agency investigates and prosecutes international cross-border human trafficking cases. (18,24,55,58) In February 2022, the Ministry of Home Affairs reported 696 state- and district-level Anti-Human Trafficking Units (AHTU) in India, with 75 in Uttar Pradesh alone. AHTUs manage the 24-hour Helpline No. 011 for reporting cases of human trafficking, although there were likely fewer functional AHTUs with allocated budgets. (45,59) During the reporting period, the government of Puducherry announced the establishment of an AHTU. (60) Although the state of Andhra Pradesh issued an order to establish 10 AHTUs in 2020, these AHTUs have yet to be established. (61) In April 2022, the National Commission for Women (NCW) launched a unit to improve anti human-trafficking responses and build the capacity of AHTUs. (60) Research was also unable to determine whether there are AHTUs in other states. (38,61) Sources indicate that only 27 percent (271) of AHTUs across India are fully functional, with 32 percent existing only on paper. (38,62,63) A lack of financial resources and adequately trained staff also hinder the effectiveness of AHTUs. (58,64) Police officers assigned to an AHTU reportedly view these positions as undesirable; as a result, some are occupied by near-retirees or officers with poor performance records. (6,38) Anti-Human Trafficking Cells (AHTCs) provide intelligence gathering on human trafficking cases; each AHTC consists of an Assistant Commissioner of Police/ Deputy Superintendent of Police, inspector, and sub-inspector. (57,65)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in India took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of state-level labor inspectorates that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including a lack of human and financial resources.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (10)	Yes (7)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (10)	Yes (7)

The Government of India did not provide information about its labor law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report. (7) Research indicates that training for labor inspectors is inadequate, and the number of labor inspections carried out is insufficient to meet the demands of India's workforce of over 523.8 million people. (7,64) NGOs also note that the time between when a complaint is received and when a labor inspection is conducted is too long. (7,10,18,66) While penalties for hiring children under the age of 14 include imprisonment up to 2 years and fines up to $700, this has not deterred employers from hiring children. Furthermore, labor inspectors do not impose the maximum permissible penalty amount. (7,18,39,67) National Crime Record Bureau (NCRB) data indicate that convictions related to child labor violations also remain low. (68) Despite government efforts, in 2022, authorities documented corrupt practices such as official misconduct and bribery at various levels of government, contributing to widespread impunity on alleged trafficking cases. (69,70)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in India took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws, including low prosecution rates and an environment of impunity.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (38)	Yes (7)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (10)	Unknown (7)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (10)	Unknown (7)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (10)	Unknown (7)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (10)	Unknown (7)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Unknown (10)	Unknown (7)

The Government of India did not respond to requests for information on its criminal law enforcement efforts for this report. (7) However, the Railway Protection Force removed 151 boys and 32 girls from railway trafficking hotspots in 2022. (71) The Haryana police department also released 1,760 children from exploitative labor, while the Haryana Anti-Human Trafficking Unit (AHTU) reunited 378 trafficked children with their families. In addition, the Odisha police department arrested 65 suspected traffickers and identified 707 survivors, including children. (72,73)

India's prosecution rate for suspected traffickers was significantly lower with relatively low convictions than in previous years, although the government convicted more traffickers for bonded labor. (38,60) According to the NCRB, courts completed trials in only 12 percent of cases and convicted merely 16 percent of the defendants whose trials reached conclusion. (74) In 2022, 90 percent of cases under the Protection of Children from Sexual Offences (POCSO) courts remained pending. (75-77) Twenty-six states, except Chhattisgarh and West Bengal, have not adhered to the prescribed case completion time period of 1 year. State authorities also report that judges and prosecutors at POCSO courts sometimes do not have training or expertise in addressing child sex crimes. (35) To address this, state governments and NGOs in Tamil Nadu provided competency training to public prosecutors in 2022. (6,60,78) In addition, four states implemented child-friendly procedures in courtrooms, including some that allowed victims to testify via video conference. (6) However, some victims refused participation in trials due to inadequate implementation of victim protection measures and lack of legal assistance. (21)

India

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

There is a lack of public information about how many prosecutions and convictions involve child victims. (74) Moreover, as child sex traffickers increasingly use electronic means to reach buyers and receive payments, eliminating the need to operate in physical locations, such as brothels, apprehending perpetrators has become more challenging for law enforcement officials. (21,24,79) Public prosecutors and local law enforcement sometimes accepted bribes to influence trafficking prosecutions and arrests. (60) There are also incidences of police alerting human traffickers of forthcoming law enforcement operations and refusing to file reports against accused officials. (6,24,57) In Assam, West Bengal, and Jharkhand, police were ordered by state officials to register human trafficking cases as kidnapping cases to reduce the official number of human trafficking cases. In addition, some victims of human trafficking across the country faced mistreatment from the police, and some authorities arrested, fined, penalized, and deported some child trafficking survivors for crimes their human traffickers compelled them to commit. (6) Though banned in 1988, the jogini system, in which girls as young as age 12 from some the lower castes are married to a local deity and used as sex slaves, is still prevalent in some parts of India. (65,80) Enforcement of laws prohibiting this practice is rare. (81)

There is insufficient enforcement of the Bonded Labor System (Abolition) Act, including a lack of prosecutions and proper victim identification. (13,44,57,82) Case acquittals are common due to inadequate preparation, court backlogs, and a lack of prioritization. (68,83,84) In addition, local and state politicians avoided prosecution for holding workers in bonded labor in agriculture or brick kilns by leveraging their political connections. (6,13,21,57) While some states have standard operating procedures to assist survivors of bonded labor and the worst forms of child labor, other state governments lacked similar procedures and did not issue release certificates or provide adequate financial assistance to bonded labor victims without significant advocacy from NGOs. (6,24,59) Children were rarely classified as bonded labor victims due to lack of identity documents and inconsistent testimony. (6) Moreover, the penalties assessed for bonded labor crimes were insufficient to deter violations. (6) Reports also indicate that employers trap more than 60 percent of survivors back in bonded labor after they are freed. (6)

A dearth of investigations into human trafficking crimes and the sexual and physical abuse of human trafficking victims at government-run and private shelters has reportedly encouraged a sense of impunity for shelter employees. (6,85,86) Moreover, some human trafficking survivors remained in state-run shelters for an extended time due to a lengthy repatriation process, further exacerbating their vulnerability. (6,85,86) In addition, staff members lacked proper training to recognize signs of abuse and to alert the authorities. (6) Research was unable to determine whether programs to protect children from physical and sexual abuse in shelter homes have since been implemented.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Child Labor Coordinating Bodies	The Task Force to Implement the Child Labor Act (CLA) coordinates implementation of child labor laws, led by the Ministry of Labor and Employment (MOLE), and comprises 12 officials from the federal and state governments. (87) This task force met twice in 2022 to issue instructions to states on the implementation of the CLA. (7) MOLE also instructed states to input child labor enforcement data into a common portal, PENCIL. (60) The Central Advisory Board on Child and Adolescent Labor also monitors the implementation of existing legislation and programs related to child labor. Chaired by MOLE and comprises 45 board members, including government officials and NGO representatives. (88) The board met once in 2022. (7)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of action by some states to establish action plans to eliminate child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Policy on Child Labor	Aims to address child labor and includes specific activities for the provision of assistance to children. (89) Overseen by MOLE and the Ministry of Women and Child Development. (18,57,90,91) In 2022, actions taken under this policy have provided services to help rehabilitate thousands of children from child labor. (10,50)
National Plan of Action for Children	Identifies priority actions for achieving the objectives set out in the National Policy for Children, including age-appropriate classes for children released from child labor and child trafficking. (18,92,93) Seeks to develop community-based prevention, identification and release procedures, victim services, and reintegration mechanisms, and strengthen institutions to address the worst forms of child labor. (92,93) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Plan of Action for Children during the reporting period.
State Action Plans on Child Labor	Exist in only 11 out of 28 states and Union Territories: Andhra Pradesh, Bihar, Delhi, Gujarat, Jharkhand, Karnataka, Meghalaya, Odisha, Punjab, Tamil Nadu, and Uttar Pradesh. (50,56,59,94) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement these state action plans during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs to eliminate child labor (Table 10). However, gaps persist in these social programs, including the exclusion of government-run, government-funded, and privately-run shelter homes that provide assistance to survivors of the worst forms of child labor.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
National Child Labor Project (NCLP) Scheme†	MOLE program that operates at the district level to identify working children, removed them from hazardous work, and provide them with education and vocational training. (4,90) Comprised of approximately 3,000 NCLP Special Training Centers (STCs) with approximately 120,000 children who receive support such as stipends, meals, and health checkups. (90) From April 2021 to March 2022, during the pandemic, the NCLP program removed 13,271 children from child labor and provided services to victims, a decrease from 58,289 releases from the previous reporting period. (7,10) The decrease is due to the merging of the scheme with the Department of Education's Samagra Shiksha Abhiyan (SSA, or Comprehensive Education Campaign) towards the end of 2022. (7) In March 2022, the government discontinued the STCs and encouraged states to send former child labor victims to local schools. Observers note that since the closures of the STCs, many children have re-entered the labor market as local schools cannot accommodate all released children and do not provide the aftercare services that child laborers require. (95,96)
Central Sector Scheme for Rehabilitation of Bonded Laborers‡	MOLE program that provides released bonded laborers with financial assistance and social protection services. (90) Supports funding of surveys at the district level on the prevalence of bonded labor. (97) In 2022, the government increased the compensation for bonded labor survivors from USD $125 to $375. (7,98,99) However, research was unable to determine whether this program has effectively provided services to former bonded laborers. Recent media reports suggested that as of April 2022, some released bonded laborers have yet to receive compensation. (100)
Anti-Human Trafficking Activities‡	Ministry of Women and Child Development-operated anti-human trafficking activities, in collaboration with NGOs and state governments. (101) Support projects to help reintegrate, provide services, and repatriate human trafficking survivors, including children, through the Ujjwala and Swadhar Greh projects. (101) In 2022, the Ministry of Women and Child Development merged the Ujjwala and Swadhar Greh schemes in the Shakti Sadan scheme, with is an integrated relief and services project. These homes have provisions for shelter, food, clothing, and primary health. (60) Observers have reported that government supported trafficking shelters have not received adequate funding and many have been operating at a deficit. (102) Due to unsafe conditions coupled with alleged abuse by caretakers, authorities reported multiple instances in 2022 in which children ran away. (6)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of India.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor.

In 2022, the District Legal Services Authority helped 280 children working in brick kilns join schools under the new initiative Ek Adhera Se Ujale Ki Aur ("From Darkness Towards Light"). (103) The National Commission for the Protection of Child Rights (NCPCR) also developed a new protocol to assist Child Welfare Committees in repatriating children in need of care back to their families. (104) Moreover, the NCPCR identified and provided aftercare services to 20,000 street children in 2022. (105)

The Government of India continued to restrict some foreign donations to NGOs, some of which work on human and child rights issues in India, through enhanced enforcement of the Foreign Contribution Regulation Act (FCRA). (102,106,107) Research was unable to determine how the FCRA amendment has impacted organizations that provide services to children, including child labor survivors. However, reports indicate that the government is using the FCRA to decline or cancel registrations, which makes operating in the country illegal, as well as to silence and restrict civil society organizations from working to address human rights concerns that the Indian authorities perceive as critical of the government. (102,107,108)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in India (Table I I).

Table I I. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the types of hazardous work prohibited for children under age 18 include sectors in which children work in unsafe and unhealthy conditions for long periods of time, such as in spinning mills, garment production, carpet making, and domestic work.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure that India's child trafficking laws do not require threats, the use of force, or coercion to be established for the crime of child trafficking.	2022
	Publish the legal instrument that establishes the minimum age for voluntary recruitment into India's armed forces.	2018 – 2022
Enforcement	Employ at least 34,922 labor inspectors to ensure adequate coverage of the labor force of approximately 523.8 million people.	2021 – 2022
	Collect and publish national-level data on labor law enforcement, including the amount of funding for the labor inspectorate, the number of labor inspectors, the number and type of inspections conducted, the number of child labor violations found, and the number of child labor violations for which penalties were imposed and collected.	2014 – 2022
	Ensure adequate training for labor law inspectors and criminal law investigators.	2019 – 2022
	Ensure that law enforcement officials investigate child labor crimes and register police complaints in a timely manner, including for cases involving bonded labor.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that penalties are consistently imposed for violations related to child labor, including the worst forms of child labor, to meaningfully deter violations, and ensure that a reciprocal referral mechanism exists between criminal authorities and social services.	2021 – 2022
	Collect and publish national-level data from all state governments on criminal law enforcement efforts, including trainings for criminal investigators, the number of criminal investigations, the number of violations found, the number of prosecutions initiated, and the number of convictions.	2009 – 2022
	Ensure that the Anti-Human Trafficking Units are fully established.	2019 – 2022
	Enforce laws related to bonded labor and labor trafficking under the Bonded Labor System Abolition Act and ensure that survivors are properly compensated in accordance with the law.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that bonded labor cases are fast tracked and that state governments issue release certificates and provide financial assistance for bonded labor victims, including full compensation for those freed from bonded labor.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that law enforcement officials who mistreat human trafficking survivors or delay registering human trafficking cases, face proper disciplinary action.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that all the states in India adhere to the 1-year timeline for prosecution mandated for crimes covered by the Protection of Children from Sexual Offences Act.	2022
	Increase prosecution rates for human trafficking cases and seek appropriately stringent sentencing following convictions.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that politically connected individuals on the local and state levels face prosecution for holding agricultural and brick kiln workers in bonded labor.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that public officials who facilitate or participate in the worst forms of child labor are held accountable, including officials who accept bribes in exchange for protection from the law.	2018 – 2022
	Ensure that there is implementation of survivor protection measures in courts and ensure that judges and prosecutors at Protection of Children from Sexual Offences Act courts have adequate training or expertise on crimes involving the commercial sexual exploitation of children.	2020 – 2022
Ensure laws prohibiting the practice of the Jogini system is adequately enforced.	2022
Investigate suspected abuses and misconduct at government-run and government-funded, and privately-run shelter homes, and ensure that all shelter homes are registered and subject to adequate oversight, have mechanisms in place to protect children from physical and sexual abuse, and that all staff members receive adequate training on how to recognize and report signs of abuse.	2018 – 2022

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Government Policies	Encourage states and territories that do not currently have action plans for the elimination of child labor to establish such plans.	2011 – 2022
	Ensure that activities are undertaken to implement the National Plan of Action for Children, and the State Action Plans on Child Labor and publish results from activities undertaken to implement these plans.	2018 – 2022
Social Programs	Ensure that enforcement actions, coordination efforts, policies, and programs are informed by publicly available data.	2022
	Ensure equitable and broad access to education, including for children from lower-castes, provide adequate financial resources for remote learning assets and penalize education officials who engage in discrimination and harassment of children.	2014 – 2022
	Reduce barriers to education, in particular for refugee children and children from marginalized communities, by providing sufficient training for teachers, providing separate and sanitary washrooms for girls, and increasing the number of available schools, especially in urban slums where inadequate infrastructure options limit access to education.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that data on exploitative child labor is collected and findings made available to the public, including findings from district-level bonded labor surveys and raw data from the national census.	2009 – 2022
	Ensure that children removed from child labor situation receive adequate aftercare services and are prevented from re-entering the labor market.	2022
	Ensure that shelters are safe and not operating as hostels by providing accommodations to non-survivor guests.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure the impact of the Foreign Contribution Regulation Act on civil societies working to address child labor exploitation is minimized.	2022
	Ensure that funding for human trafficking shelters is adequate and released in a timely manner.	2022

In 2022, Indonesia made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Ministry of Women's Empowerment and Child Protection, together with the United Nations Children's Fund, launched the Prevention of Online Child Sexual Exploitation and Abuse program, a 3-year partnership in response to a report on Indonesian children being victims of online sexual exploitation. The Ministry of Manpower also increased funding for the labor inspectorate from $12.2 million in 2021 to $15.1 million in 2022, and increased its number of labor inspectors by 267, for a total of 1,570. However, children in Indonesia are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in plantation agriculture, including in palm oil and tobacco production. Despite increases in funding and inspectors in 2022, the Ministry of Manpower continues to lack the financial resources and personnel necessary to fully enforce child labor laws throughout the country. In addition, Indonesia's prohibitions against child trafficking are inconsistent with international law because the Law on the Eradication of the Criminal Act of Trafficking in Persons requires that a demonstration of threats, the use of force, or coercion be established for the crime of child trafficking to have occurred.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Indonesia.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	10 to 14	3.7 (816,363)
Attending School (%)	10 to 14	92.4

	Domestic work (8,16)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, including use in the production of pornography, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (8,9,24,25)
	Forced domestic work, fishing, and mining (8,9,11,16,18,20)
	Use in illicit activities, including the sale, production, and trafficking of drugs, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (9,11,15)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children are subjected to forced domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation, both domestically and abroad. (8-10,16,18,24) During the COVID-19 pandemic, Indonesia closed its borders to foreign tourists and limited domestic tourism, which may have had an effect on reducing the prevalence of commercial sexual exploitation by Indonesians and foreigners. (10) Meanwhile, perpetrators are increasingly using online and social media platforms to recruit victims of commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking, and to coerce children to engage in sexual activities through promises of money or gifts. (9,26,27) The pandemic kept many children at home with no access to school services, and perpetrators may have used this opportunity to target minors with access to the internet and more unsupervised time. (24)

Children working in tobacco farming and on agricultural plantations, including palm oil and rubber plantations, are exposed to hazardous working conditions. (4,8,12,28,29) Children on palm oil plantations are often recruited by family members to help adult laborers meet harvest quotas, which sometimes results in children working long hours into the night or dropping out of school. (3,5-7,10) Children in the city of Bima, on the island of Sumbawa, work as horse jockeys and face a number of health and safety hazards, including the risk of bone injuries and fatal falls. In addition to safety concerns, participation in horse racing may impact school attendance. (22,23)

The Ministry of Women's Empowerment and Child Protection (MoWECP)'s 2020 Indonesian Children's Profile report, the most recent source of government child labor data, is missing data for child laborers ages 5 to 10. (30) The ILO's findings based on the National Workforce Surveys (SAKERNAS) from 2011–2020 data reveal a decreasing trend for child labor in Indonesia, but further studies are needed to determine the impact of the pandemic on child labor. (31) However, research indicates that not all government ministries are using the most recent child labor data to inform programs. (8,10) Although the Act on the National Education System mandates free education, schools impose additional fees on students to cover items such as books, uniforms, transportation, and other non-tuition costs, which may hinder the ability of students, particularly those from low-income families, to attend school. (32,33) Refugee children, and Indonesian children without proper birth documentation or a government-sponsored identification card, face a barrier to accessing education, because Indonesia's formal education system is only accessible to citizens and individuals with officially granted residency. (8,30,33,34) In addition, children with disabilities report high rates of non-registration, and therefore may also face similar challenges. (35)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Indonesia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Indonesia's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including insufficient prohibitions against child trafficking.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Law on the Ratification of ILO C. 138; Article 69 of the Manpower Act (36,37)

Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Articles 1–6 and 17 of the Law on the Eradication of the Criminal Act of Trafficking in Persons; Article 83 of the Law on Child Protection (39,40)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 74 of the Manpower Act; Articles 81 and 82 of the Law on Child Protection; Section 3 of the Law on the Ratification of the Rights of the Child Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution, and Child Pornography; Articles 4–12 and 37 of the Law on Anti-Pornography; Article 297 of the Penal Code (37,40-43)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 74 of the Manpower Act; Articles 67, 78, and 89 of the Law on Child Protection (37,40)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes		Article 28 of Law on the Indonesian National Armed Forces (44)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 28 of Law on the Indonesian National Armed Forces (44)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 3(d) of Law on the Ratification of the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the Involvement of Children in Armed Conflict (45)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Article 48 of the Law on Child Protection; Articles 6 and 34 of the National Education System Act (32,40)
Free Public Education	No		Articles 12, Section 2(b), and 34 of the National Education System Act (32)

Indonesia's prohibitions against child trafficking are inconsistent with international law because the Law on the Eradication of the Criminal Act of Trafficking in Persons requires a demonstration of threats, the use of force, or coercion to be established for the crime of child trafficking. (39,40) Although Indonesia does specify the conditions in which light work may be undertaken and limits the number of hours for light work, it does not list activities in which light work may be permitted. The types of hazardous work prohibited for children also do not cover horse jockeying, a type of work in which there is evidence that Indonesian children are exposed to physical dangers. (38) In addition, although the National Education System Act provides for free basic education, Article 12, Section 2(b) of the Act also requires students to pay prescribed fees unless those fees are waived. (32)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established relevant institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Manpower (MoM)	Through the Directorate General of Labor Development and Supervision, enforces the country's labor laws relating to child labor through labor inspections and formulates policies, standards, norms, guidelines, and mechanisms on labor inspections. Provides information to employers on child labor laws and regulations and works with law enforcement officials to prosecute child labor violators. (46) Through the Directorate of Norms Supervision of Women and Child Workers, responds to complaints of child labor by telephone, fax, or e-mail. Refers children found during inspections to the local Women's Empowerment and Family Planning Body or to the Integrated Service Center for Empowering Women and Children for appropriate social services, coordinated by the Ministry of Women's Empowerment and Child Protection (MoWECP) and the Ministry of Social Affairs (MoSA). (8)
Indonesian National Police, including Women and Children's Service Unit	Handle investigations involving child trafficking. (8) Conduct inspections and raids, and make arrests in response to crimes, including those related to the worst forms of child labor. (47)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Indonesia took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Manpower (MoM) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient human resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$12.2 million (10)	$15.1 million (8)
Number of Labor Inspectors	1,503 (10)	1,570 (8)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	No (37,48)	No (37,48)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	Yes (10)	Yes (8)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksite	12,419† (10)	14,627 (8)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	0 (10)	0 (8)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	N/A (10)	N/A (8)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	N/A (10)	N/A (8)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (10)	Yes (8)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (10)	Yes (8)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (48)	Yes (48)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (10)	No (8)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (10)	Yes (8)

† Data are from January 2021 to September 2021.

As the law in Indonesia treats child labor as a criminal offense, labor inspectorates may initiate investigations for violations related to child labor, which may result in prosecutions and criminal penalties. (37,48) Child labor cases are investigated by MoM civilian investigators who collect evidence and prepare information that is passed to the Attorney General's Office for subsequent prosecution. (18)

During the reporting period, MoM conducted 14,627 labor inspections in 12,280 worksites, including child labor inspections in 11 palm oil companies, and did not find any instances of child labor in the formal sector; however, labor organizations and MoM officials suspect child labor violations occurred. (8) Indonesia does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. Officials at MoM disclosed that there are insufficient inspectors to cover all formal workplaces, and MoM continued to rely on community-based monitors and neighborhood chiefs to report incidences of child labor. (8,18,34,49,50) Despite the budget increase, officials noted that funds are insufficient to cover office infrastructure, transportation, and fuel for vehicles, which hampered labor inspectors' ability to carry out inspections. (8)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Indonesia took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	No (10)	No (8)
Number of Investigations	3 (24)	Unknown (8)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (24)	Unknown (8)
Number of Convictions	2 (24,51)	Unknown (8)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	2 (24)	Unknown (8)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (10)	Yes (8)

The Indonesian National Police's Criminal Investigation Division maintains an informal database of cases involving child trafficking. However, these statistics are not comprehensive of all child trafficking crimes or other worst forms of child labor and reports of the number of violations found and prosecutions initiated do not specify whether they were for the worst forms of child labor offenses or human trafficking offenses. (24) The government does not have a centralized system for aggregating information on criminal law enforcement information related to child labor and its worst forms and lacks the resources to consolidate data in a central database. (8,24) The decentralized nature of criminal law enforcement data and voluntary reporting by precincts may have contributed to the underreporting of criminal law enforcement information related to the worst forms of child labor. (10,47)

The anti-trafficking task forces at the national, provincial, and local levels continue to lack sufficient funding to conduct investigations and carry out their mandate according to the government's anti-trafficking in persons policies and regulations. (9)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key coordinating mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Indonesian Child Protection Commission (KPAI)	Monitors the implementation of the Child Protection Law and child protection policies and provides recommendations on child protection framework to the President of Indonesia. (40) Includes the MoWECP; MoSA; the Ministry of Education, Culture, Research, and Technology; the Ministry of Health; Ministry of Agriculture; the Ministry of Law and Human Rights; the Indonesian National Police; and the National Narcotics Agency. (52) During the reporting period, KPAI conducted activities related to child rights and protection, including releasing a number of cases relating to violation of children's rights and issuing recommendations to local and regional governments and ministries relating to child protection and rights fulfillment. (53)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Plan of Action (NPA) for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2002–2022)	Provided a policy framework for the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms. (54) Specific activities conducted during the third phase of the NPA included developing a set of recommendations with international and local NGOs, increasing awareness-raising and advocacy efforts, and integrating child labor in formulating sectoral policies and regulations. Established a program to create a series of industrial zones free of child labor, as well as the National Movement for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor to integrate the issue of child labor as the government develops sectoral policies and programs. (10) During the reporting period, MoM raised awareness on child labor through forum discussions and webinars, and participated in discussions with the Ministry of Law and Human Rights to draft policies on child labor in the tourism sector. MoM is currently reviewing the NPA for next steps, as it expired during the reporting period. (8)
Roadmap Toward a Child Labor-Free Indonesia in 2022 (2014–2022)	Supported the implementation of the NPA for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor. Aimed to mainstream the elimination of the worst forms of child labor into relevant national policies; strengthen coordination between stakeholders at the national, provincial, and district levels; and enhance the capacity of stakeholders to eradicate child labor. (55) During the reporting period, the government continued to disseminate recruitment guidelines for employers, labor unions, and companies, as well as education and empowerment programs designed for low-income families. (8) The government is reviewing its Roadmap Toward a Child Labor-Free Indonesia, which expires during the reporting period, with a focus on programming in rural areas. (31)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (18,56)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including education-related fees for children to attend school.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Child Trafficking Services†	Provide social rehabilitation and shelter services for child survivors of human trafficking. Led by MoSA and other government agencies. (8,16) During the reporting period, the government allocated $67 million for social rehabilitation programs. (8)
Cash Transfer Programs†	Provide conditional cash transfers to help with formal and informal education opportunities and health expenses for vulnerable groups, including street children, abandoned children and infants, children facing criminal charges, children with disabilities, the poorest families, and child laborers who dropped out of school. Includes the Healthy Indonesia Card ( Kartu Indonesia Sehat , KIS) for 100 million Indonesians who are struggling to meet basic needs, thereby reducing the risk of child labor; the Smart Indonesia Program ( Kartu Indonesia Pintar , KIP), a card that provides educational grants to all school-age children whose families have a Family Welfare Card or meet eligibility criteria covering both formal and informal education; Child Social Welfare Program ( Program Kesejahteraan Sosial Anak ), which provides conditional cash transfers to children; Family Welfare Card ( Kartu Keluarga Sejahtera ), which provides a bank account and consolidates all financial assistance programs, including children's education and health funds, for low-income families; and the Family Home Program ( Program Keluarga Harapan , PKH), which provides conditional cash transfers for children's education to the poorest 5 percent of households. (8,34,35,47) During the reporting period, the government continued its cash transfer programs, including providing KIP cards to 17.9 million students from poor families and allocating $2.04 billion for the PKH program, which provided services to 10 million beneficiaries. (8)
Education Programs‡	School Operation Assistance ( Bantuan Operasional Sekolah ) grant program, funded at IDR 51.6 trillion (approximately US$3.48 billion) during the reporting period, compensates schools for the loss of income from waiving school fees for poor and vulnerable children in primary, junior secondary, and senior high schools. (8,53) Minimum Service Standards of Basic Education Program improves access to quality public education by limiting the distance of primary and junior secondary schools from children's households, specifying minimum teacher-student ratios, and identifying minimum teacher education qualifications. (57) Community Learning Centers provide education for children of migrant palm oil workers. (16) Research was unable to determine whether the Minimum Service Standards of Basic Education Program or the Community Learning Centers were active during the reporting period. (53)

† Program is funded by the Government of Indonesia.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (35,58)

During the reporting period, the MoWECP and UNICEF launched the Prevention of Online Child Sexual Exploitation and Abuse program, a 3-year partnership in response to key findings from a report by UNICEF, Interpol, and ECPAT, which found that 500,000 children between ages 12 and 17 reported being victims of online sexual exploitation between November 2020 to February 2021. (26)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Indonesia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that threats, the use of force, and coercion do not need to be established for the crime of child trafficking to be proven.	2018 – 2022
	Ensure that the hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children include sectors in which child labor is known to occur, including jockeying in horse racing.	2019 – 2022
	Ensure that the labor law's light work provisions specify the activities in which light work may be permitted for children.	2020 – 2022
	Establish by law free basic public education by removing provisions that permit schools to charge fees.	2020 – 2022
Enforcement	Ensure that labor inspectorate funding is sufficient to cover office infrastructure, transportation, and fuel requirements to enable labor inspectors to carry out inspections.	2018 – 2022
	Increase the number of labor inspectors from 1,570 to 9,047 to provide adequate coverage of the labor force of approximately 135.7 million people.	2010 – 2022
	Ensure that labor inspectors have the legal authority to conduct inspections in the informal sector, including on private farms and homes, in which child labor often occurs.	2018 – 2022
	Ensure that all criminal law enforcement personnel receive adequate training on child labor regulations and relevant criminal laws.	2017 – 2022
	Strengthen the inspection system by conducting unannounced inspections.	2022
	Publish criminal law enforcement information, including the number of investigations conducted, prosecutions initiated, convictions achieved, and penalties imposed for violations relating to child labor, including its worst forms.	2009 – 2022
	Provide resources to collect and centralize national data on child labor, making reporting by precincts mandatory, and specifying to which child labor crimes the collected data refers.	2022
	Sufficiently fund the anti-trafficking task forces at the national, provincial, and local levels to conduct investigations and carry out their intended mandates.	2016 – 2022
Social Programs	Conduct research to determine the types of labor activities carried out by children, including in the construction and street work sectors, to inform social policies and programs.	2014 – 2022
	Collect and publish prevalence data on child laborers between the ages of 5 and 10.	2019 – 2022
	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers to education, including ensuring that all children are able to obtain a government-sponsored identification card so they can attend school.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure that the most recent source of government child labor data is used consistently across all ministries to inform programs.	2022
	Ensure that activities are undertaken to implement the Minimum Service Standards of Basic Education Program and make information about implementation publicly available.	2022
	Ensure that activities are undertaken to implement the Community Learning Centers and make information about implementation publicly available.	2022

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2022, Iraq made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs' Child Labor Unit identified 109 children under the age of 15 engaging in child labor and 604 children under the age of 18 working in hazardous conditions, although it is unknown whether these children were provided with social services after they were identified. Despite this effort, Iraq is assessed as having made only minimal advancement because it continued to implement a practice that delays advancement to eliminate child labor. During the reporting period, Iraqi and Kurdistan Regional Government authorities inappropriately detained or punished children allegedly affiliated with ISIS—some of whom were victims of forcible recruitment or use. Children in Iraq are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in forced begging. The government also did not provide information on its criminal law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report. In addition, it continues to lack social programs that focus on assisting children involved in child labor, including demobilizing and reintegrating child soldiers.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Iraq. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	4.8 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	78.4
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	4.2
Primary Completion Rate (%)		Unavailable

Primary completion rate was unavailable from UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2023. (1)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 6 (MICS 6), 2018. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including the production of dairy products (3,4)
	Fishing, activities unknown (3)
Industry	Construction, † activities unknown (5)
	Making bricks, including transporting bricks and working in kilns (3,6-8)
	Working in factories, producing glass, household cleaners, paint, steel, garments and textiles, perfume, and electrical materials, and recycling plastic (6-8)
Services	Street work, including selling goods, pushing carts, cleaning cars, and begging (6,8-11)
	Working at gas stations† and auto repair and other shops (6)
	Working in landfills, scavenging and collecting garbage† and scrap metal (7,12)
	Domestic work (6)
	Working in hotels, restaurants, bars, nightclubs,† and brothels (6,9,10)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Use in illicit activities, including cross-border smuggling and drug and weapons trafficking (3,6,8-10,13-15)

Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor†	Forced begging (3,13,16-19)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,6,13,16-21)
	Recruitment of children by non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict (22)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

There is evidence that child labor in brickmaking in Iraq is widespread. (3,6,7) Brickmaking exposes children to hazardous working conditions such as high heat, polluted air, exposure to the sun, and carrying heavy loads. (7) These children often lack protective equipment and are sometimes housed on the factory compound. (7) Reporting indicates that the Kurdistan Workers' Party and ISIS recruited and used children in armed conflict in 2022. (22) Girls were also subjected to commercial sexual exploitation through temporary marriages. (14,20) Iranian-aligned militia groups have profited from and protected "marriage offices" operated by clerics who facilitate the commercial sexual exploitation of children through "temporary marriages." (14,16,18) In addition, Syrian girls from refugee camps in the Kurdistan Region were sometimes forced into early or temporary marriages with Iraqi or other refugee men; some Kurdistan Regional Government (KRG) authorities allegedly ignored or accepted bribes to ignore such cases, including those in which girls were sold multiple times. (14) Research found that women and girls in IDP camps whose family members have alleged ties to ISIS endure sexual exploitation, sex trafficking, and abuse by armed actors residing in the camps, security and military officials, and camp personnel controlling access to humanitarian assistance and services. (17)

Children in Iraq face numerous barriers to accessing education, including displacement, the lack of local schools, the use of schools as shelters by IDPs, costs of transportation and school supplies, and the lack of sufficient educational facilities. (3,5,10) Sources report severe teacher shortages in Sinjar district as the result of teachers being displaced. (3) Insufficient access to transportation and destruction of schools during the conflict with ISIS also continued to limit access to education; according to UNICEF, over half of the schools in Iraq require repairs. (3) Children of parents whose marriages were informal due to the woman being a minor, some displaced persons, and some children with suspected ties to ISIS lack identification documents required for school enrollment. (3,23,24) Displaced children and refugee children are especially vulnerable to educational barriers, including the cost of transportation and school supplies, the lack of documentation, and host community children being given priority for classroom seats. (3) Secondary and higher education systems sometimes refuse to accept students who previously studied at schools that used the Latin rather than Arabic alphabet; many of these students drop out as a result. (3) Children with special needs had limited access to education due to a lack of specialized teachers and school infrastructure. (3) UNICEF reports that, while almost 92 percent of children enroll in primary schools, only half of children from economically disadvantaged families complete primary school and less than a quarter complete secondary education. (25)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Iraq has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓

Convention	Ratification
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Iraq's and the KRG's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the requirement that force, fraud, or coercion be present for child trafficking crimes.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 7 of the 2015 Labor Law (26)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 95 of the 2015 Labor Law (26)

Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 9 and 11.2 of the 2015 Labor Law (26)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Articles 1 and 6 of the Law to Combat Human Trafficking (28)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 399 and 403 of the Penal Code (29)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Section 6(2) of the CPA Order 22 (30)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	No	12‡	Articles 8.1.1 and 11.1 of the Education Law; Article 1.3 of the Law on Compulsory Education (31,32)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 34.2 of the Constitution; Article 9 of the Education Law (31,33)

* Country has no conscription (30)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (31,32)

Article 117 of the Constitution of Iraq recognizes Kurdistan, which comprises the provinces of Dohuk, Erbil, Sulaymaniyah, and Halabja, as a federal region. (33-36) Article 121 grants the Kurdistan Region the right to exercise legislative, executive, and judicial powers. (33) The Iraqi Kurdistan Parliament must endorse any laws that the Government of Iraq passed after 1991 for such laws to enter into force in the Iraqi Kurdistan Region. (34-36) Under the Iraqi Education Law and under the Law on Compulsory Education, children are required to attend primary school for only 6 years, which is typically up to age 12. (31,32) This leaves children ages 12 to 15 particularly vulnerable to child labor, because they are not required to be in school, yet they are not legally permitted to work. (37) However, in Kurdistan, compulsory primary education is 9 years, typically to age 15, in accordance with international standards. (50)

In Iraq, Article 1 of the Law to Combat Human Trafficking requires force, fraud, or coercion to be present as an element to constitute the crime of child sex trafficking, which is inconsistent with international standards, including Article 3 of the Palermo Protocol. (28) As the Iraqi Kurdistan Parliament endorsed the Iraqi Law to Combat Human Trafficking, the human trafficking standard in the Kurdistan Region is also not in compliance with international standards. (38) In addition, while the KRG's laws meet international standards for the prohibition of commercial sexual exploitation under Articles 91.3(b), 91.4, and 97 of the 1987 Labor Law, Iraq's laws do not prohibit the use of children in prostitution and do not clearly prohibit the use, procuring, and offering of children for the production of pornography or pornographic performances. (27,29) Furthermore, Iraq's laws do not prohibit the use of children in illicit activities, while the KRG prohibits such use under Articles 91.3(c), 91.4, and 97 of the 1987 Labor Law. (27) Moreover, Iraqi law does not prohibit recruitment and use of children by non-state armed groups.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs (MOLSA)	Enforces child labor laws and regulations through its Child Labor Unit. (10) Conducts research on child labor through its Childhood Welfare Authority. Receives complaints of child labor cases. (10) The Kurdistan Regional Government's (KRG) MOLSA (KMOLSA) also enforces child labor laws and regulations. (10)
Ministry of Interior	Enforces criminal laws on the worst forms of child labor. Collaborates with MOLSA, the Iraqi Industries Federation, and the Confederation of Trade Unions to conduct inspection campaigns. (10) Maintains a hotline for victims of human trafficking, with calls routed directly to the Ministry's Anti-Trafficking Directorate. (10) KRG's Ministry of the Interior also enforces child labor laws and regulations, investigates cases of commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking, and includes a Counter Trafficking Directorate. (10,38)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Iraq took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs (MOLSA) and the KRG's Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs (KMOLSA) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including an insufficient number of labor inspectors.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown (6)	Unknown (8)
Number of Labor Inspectors	Unknown (6)	Unknown (8)

Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Unknown (6)	Unknown (8)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (6)	Yes (6)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (6)	Yes (6)

In 2022, MOLSA's Child Labor Unit conducted 328 inspections throughout the country. Additionally, MOLSA identified 109 children under the age of 15 engaging in child labor and 604 under 18 years old. (8) It is unknown if or how MOLSA or other agencies supported these children after they were identified. MOLSA officials have stated that enforcement of child labor laws remains weak and ineffective due to insufficient penalties to deter violators. (8) Although the number of labor inspectors is unknown for 2023, 2019 reporting indicates that Iraq employed 98 labor inspectors. (8) Research indicates that Iraq does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (6,39,40)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

KMOLSA did not provide information on its labor law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report. Reporting indicates that KMOLSA and the KRG's Ministry of Interior were responsive to complaints of child labor in the Kurdistan Region but would only conduct child labor inspections in response to a complaint. (6,8) KMOLSA indicated that funding is insufficient to carry out its duties. (3)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Iraq took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including inadequate and ineffective planning for prosecutions.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Unknown (6)	Unknown (8)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (6)	Unknown (8)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (6)	Unknown (8)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (6)	Unknown (8)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (6)	Unknown (8)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (6)	Yes (6)

In 2022, authorities continued to inappropriately detain or punish children allegedly affiliated with ISIS—some of whom were victims of forcible recruitment and use. (14,22,41-45) The government also did not investigate or hold anyone criminally accountable for allegations of unlawful recruitment and use of child soldiers. (14,19) Some victims of human trafficking, including children who were forcibly recruited and used, are punished for unlawful acts their traffickers compelled them to commit. (14,36,46) In addition, an NGO reported that police occasionally detained children engaged in street begging and kept them in custody before releasing them; police did not screen these children as possible victims of human trafficking or refer them to appropriate protection services. (9,14)

Although the Ministry of Interior has reported in the past that it investigated police officers for involvement in sex trafficking, research indicates that security and management personnel in IDP camps continue to be complicit in the sexual exploitation and trafficking of girls. (6,13) Moreover, research indicates that children are sentenced to up to 8 years in prison for prostitution, rather than being treated as victims of trafficking or commercial sexual exploitation of children. (47) Additionally, the government did not provide information on its criminal law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of coordination among agencies.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Interministerial Committee on Child Labor	Coordinates overall government efforts to address child labor, researches policies regarding child labor, and designs and manages projects. Members include representatives from MOLSA and four other ministries. (9) The committee does not sufficiently coordinate among agencies to effectively process cases of children suspected of having ties to ISIS or children who are victims of human trafficking. (8) However, the committee continued to coordinate with the UN to address grave violations of children's rights in 2022. (8)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including covering all worst forms of child labor, including forced begging and commercial sexual exploitation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
Child Protection Policy (2017–2022)	Outlined a comprehensive approach to addressing child protection, including addressing child labor through prevention, protection, and rehabilitation programs, such as a poverty alleviation initiative and educational and mental health services. Included a component to provide rehabilitation and reintegration activities for children previously engaged in armed conflict and children who experienced trauma during the period of ISIS occupation. (10,48) The policy did not specifically cover other worst forms of child labor present in Iraq, including forced begging and commercial sexual exploitation. (48)
National Plan on Combating Human Trafficking in Iraq	Aims to address human trafficking by outlining steps to be taken by authorities represented on the Central Committee to Combat Trafficking in Persons. Focuses on prevention, protection, prosecution, and regional and international cooperation, and includes considerations for child victims. (49)

Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement these policies during the reporting period. Additionally, research was unable to identify any child labor policies in the Kurdistan Region. (6)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Informal Education†	Government-supported informal education systems, including evening school programs and accelerated education that encourages children ages 12 to 18 who have dropped out of school to continue their education. (10) Research was unable to determine what steps were undertaken in 2022 to implement this program.
Conditional Subsidies Program†	Provides assistance to low-income families for children to stay in school and out of the workforce. (6) Active in 2022. (8)

† Program is funded by the Government of Iraq.

The Government of Iraq did not provide protection services to demobilized child soldiers of ISIS or the Popular Mobilization Forces in 2022. Failing to reintegrate former child soldiers leaves them vulnerable to re-victimization or re-recruitment into armed groups. (46) Likewise, research was unable to find evidence of specific active programs to support children subjected to commercial sexual exploitation or other worst forms of child labor, including child soldiering. Existing programs do not sufficiently address the lack of access to education in Iraq and the Kurdistan Region. Government-run shelters are reportedly unable to house child victims, sending them to MOLSA orphanages instead, due to a lack of funding and suitable accommodations. (19,47)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Iraq (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the laws comprehensively prohibit child trafficking in all parts of Iraq, including the Kurdistan Region, and do not require force or coercion for their application, in accordance with international standards.	2015 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the use of a child in prostitution and the use, procuring, and offering of a child for the production of pornography and pornographic performances.	2019 – 2022
	Ensure that the law in Iraq criminally prohibits the use of children in illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs.	2015 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2013 – 2022
	Raise the compulsory education age of 12 years in Iraq to age 15, the minimum age for work.	2009 – 2022

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Ensure that children are not arrested, detained, tortured, or denied services on the basis of their or their family members' perceived ties to ISIS.	2015 – 2022
	Ensure that armed groups that recruit and use children are held criminally accountable.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure that allegations of sexual exploitation and trafficking of girls in IDP camps by government officials are investigated and those responsible are held criminally liable.	2019 – 2022
	Publish labor law enforcement information, such as labor inspectorate funding, number of labor inspectors, number of labor inspections conducted at worksite, number of child labor violations for which penalties were imposed, number of child labor penalties imposed that were collected, whether routine inspections and targeted inspections were conducted, and whether unannounced inspections were conducted.	2011 – 2022
	Employ at least 690 labor inspectors to provide adequate coverage for the labor force of approximately 10.3 million people and ensure adequate funding to enforce legal protections against child labor.	2011 – 2022
	Ensure that children who are victims of trafficking are not imprisoned and are granted access to social services providers and humanitarian assistance.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that routine labor inspections are carried out in the Kurdistan Region of Iraq.	2019 – 2022
	Ensure that labor inspectors and criminal investigators receive training on child labor and that they have sufficient resources to carry out their duties.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure that children picked up by authorities for begging are screened for trafficking indicators.	2021 – 2022
	Publish information on criminal law enforcement on the worst forms of child labor in Iraq and the Iraqi Kurdistan Region.	2013 – 2022
Coordination	Ensure that the Interministerial Committee on Child Labor effectively coordinates among agencies to process cases of children suspected of having ties to ISIS or children who are victims of human trafficking.	2022
Government Policies	Renew the Child Protection Policy in Iraq and adopt a child labor policy in the Iraqi Kurdistan Region for other worst forms of child labor present in Iraq, including forced begging and commercial sexual exploitation.	2018 – 2022
Social Programs	Implement programs to ensure that children are discouraged from enlisting in armed groups and receiving military training.	2015 – 2022
	Ensure that universal access to education is consistent with international standards, including for refugee and internally displaced children and children with special needs, and that programs address barriers to education, including the lack of teachers, the destruction and lack of local schools, costs of transportation and school supplies, and lack of infrastructure, especially during school closures. Ensure that the lack of identification documents does not hinder access to education, including for IDPs and refugees, children with suspected ties to ISIS, and children born of “informal” marriages.	2013 – 2022
	Implement programs to address child labor in relevant sectors in Iraq, such as the provision of services to children in commercial sexual exploitation, to demobilize and reintegrate children engaged in armed groups, and to provide informal education programs and shelters for human trafficking victims.	2009 – 2022

In 2022, Jamaica made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Ministry of Labor and Social Security increased the number of labor inspections from 1,679 in 2021 to 2,319 in 2022. It also drafted a new policy to reduce child labor through 2027 that awaits Cabinet approval. In addition, the Office of the National Rapporteur on Trafficking in Persons signed a cooperation agreement with government departments and NGOs to collect and report national human trafficking data. However, children in Jamaica are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and use in illicit activities. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture and street work. Jamaica's laws do not provide higher penalties for using, procuring, or offering children for the production and distribution of drugs than penalties imposed for these same crimes when the victims are adults. Moreover, the law providing for free basic education does not meet international standards because free education is only guaranteed for Jamaican citizens.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Jamaica.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	6.2 (30,111)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	98.9
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	7.2

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming,† activities unknown (3,4)
	Fishing, activities unknown (3)
Industry	Construction (3)
Services	Working in shops and markets (4,5)
	Domestic work (4,5)
	Street work, including begging† and vending (4-6)
	Wholesale and retail (3)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (4,7,8)
	Forced domestic work (4,6,7)
	Use in illicit activities, including executing financial scams, recruitment into criminal organizations, and serving as drug and gun couriers (4,5,7)
	Forced begging (4)
	Forced work in shops and markets (4)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Jamaica

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Children in rural areas are more likely to work than their urban counterparts; they are also more likely to work longer hours and to engage in hazardous work. (3) Some young boys and girls from rural areas who are sent to live with more affluent family members or acquaintances become victims of forced labor in private households, markets, and shops. (4) Some children from Jamaica are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation, particularly in or near the tourist attractions of Negril, Montego Bay, and certain urban areas of Kingston. (4,5) Cases may involve girls from poor urban and rural households trafficked for commercial sexual exploitation in brothels, nightclubs, massage parlors, and strip clubs. Recently, victims have been lured by traffickers who advertise false jobs on social media or in newspapers. (4,5,9) Girls, immigrant children, LGBTQI+ youth, children from poor families, and children from rural areas are particularly vulnerable to sex trafficking. (4,8,10,11) Of the LGBTQI+ youth exploited in commercial sex, many were children fleeing their families or communities in fear of persecution or bullying. (4) Children also continue to be recruited by criminal organizations to engage in illicit activities, such as gang violence, drug and gun smuggling, and financial fraud, including lottery scamming when criminals contact victims abroad and allege a processing fee must be paid to claim a large cash prize. (4,7,8,11) In 2022, the suspected perpetrators in child trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation cases identified by authorities were most often family members or other caretakers of the victim. (4,9)

The cost for transportation, food, books, and uniforms creates barriers to education for some children. (12) Although the Jamaican government has unified all post-primary schools, an unofficial division remains and government officials and education professionals in Jamaica reported a significant divide between traditional high schools and non-traditional secondary schools, in which the latter purportedly left students without adequate education, training, and certification, perpetuating a cycle of poverty. (4,5,9) While access to primary education is guaranteed, reports indicate that some children with disabilities received no education, particularly in rural areas without adequate transportation and facilities, or when parents chose not to send their children. (4,9) Truancy officers in Jamaica have not been active for several years. (9) In late 2021, UNICEF reported that schools lost contact with approximately 120,000 Jamaican students due to school closures during the COVID-19 pandemic. (4,8) As of December 2022, over 3,000 students remained unaccounted for and are believed to have started working or become involved in criminal activities. (4,8)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Jamaica has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Jamaica's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including failure to sufficiently criminalize the use of children in illicit activities.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Articles 34(1) and 36 of the Child Care and Protection Act (13)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 34(3) and 36 of the Child Care and Protection Act (13)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 34(3)(b), 39, and 41 of the Child Care and Protection Act; Section 55 of the Factories Act: Docks (Safety, Health and Welfare) Regulations; Section 49(2) of the Factories Act: Building Operations and Works of Engineering Construction Regulations; Section 18 of the Mining Act (13-16)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Sections 2, 4(1)(a), and 4(2)–4(9) of the Trafficking in Persons (Prevention, Suppression and Punishment) Act; Section 2 of the Trafficking in Persons (Prevention, Suppression and Punishment (Amendment) Act, 2021 (17,18)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Section 10 of the Child Care and Protection Act; Sections 2, 4, and 4A of the Trafficking in Persons (Prevention, Suppression and Punishment) Act; Section 2 of the Trafficking in Persons (Prevention, Suppression and Punishment (Amendment) Act, 2021 (13,17,18)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Sections 2, 4, and 4A of the Trafficking in Persons (Prevention, Suppression and Punishment) Act; Sections 18, 21, and 36 of the Sexual Offences Act; Sections 3 and 4 of the Child Pornography (Prevention) Act (17-20)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No		Section 4 of the Criminal Justice (Suppression of Criminal Organizations) Act (21)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Section 18(2) of the Defense Act (22)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Sections 28 and 89 of the Child Care and Protection Act (13)
Free Public Education	No		Section 13(k) of the Jamaican Charter of Fundamental Rights and Freedoms (23)

* Country has no conscription (17)

Jamaica allows children ages 13 to 14 to engage in light work but has not determined the specific light work activities and hours permissible to facilitate enforcement. (5,13) Jamaica also does not sufficiently prohibit the commercial sexual exploitation of children because the law does not specifically criminalize the use of a child for prostitution. (17-20) In addition, the laws related to the use of children in illicit activities do not specifically include higher penalties for perpetrators who use, procure, or offer a child for the production and distribution of drugs. (13,24) Furthermore, the law does not criminally prohibit military recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups. Jamaica also does not meet the international standard for free public education as free education is only guaranteed for Jamaican citizens, leaving those without citizenship vulnerable to child labor. (23) Moreover, as the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (13)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MLSS)	Enforces and administers child labor laws through the labor inspectorate, in both the formal and informal sectors of the economy. (25) Responsible for policy development as well as the management of government agencies involved in child labor enforcement. (4,9) In 2022, its Child Labor Unit trained approximately 85 inspectors and social workers on MLSS's Standard Operating Procedures, which outline how to identify, report, refer, and treat suspected cases of child trafficking and child labor. (8) MLSS also organized outreach sessions on child labor and labor trafficking through workshops with key populations and vulnerable groups. (8)
Jamaica Constabulary Force (JCF)	Investigates, through the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Vice Squad (A-TIP Vice Squad), cases of child trafficking including forced child labor, commercial sexual exploitation, and the use of children in illicit activities in which human trafficking is involved. (8,25) The A-TIP Vice Squad has over 250 officers and leads operations and case management activities for human trafficking cases. In 2022, the A-TIP Vice Squad conducted operations in areas at high risk for commercial sex. (8) Through the Center for the Investigation of Sexual Offenses and Child Abuse, investigates sex crimes against children and educates the public about these crimes. (25) Authorized to assess penalties when child labor violations are found. (4) Receives referrals of suspected child labor law violations and other abuses for criminal enforcement from the Ministry of Education and Youth, Child Protective and Family Services, and the MLSS. The Ministry of National Security, through the JCF, is the only government body with the power to conduct arrests. (4)
Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions	Prosecutes cases involving the worst forms of child labor. (26) Receives referrals of suspected child labor law violations for possible prosecution from the Ministry of Education and Youth, Child Protective and Family Services, and the MLSS. (4)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Jamaica took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MLSS) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient human resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$3,200,000 (5)	$3,500,000 (4)
Number of Labor Inspectors	39 (27)	41 (4)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	Yes (13,28)	Yes (13,28)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	N/A (5)	Yes (4)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksite	1,679 (5)	2,319 (4)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	0 (5)	0 (4)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	N/A (5)	0 (4)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	N/A (5)	0 (4)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (5)	Yes (4)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (5)	Yes (4)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (28)	Yes (28)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (5)	Yes (4)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (5)	Yes (4)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (5)	Yes (4)

Research indicates that Jamaica does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (29,30) Inspectors are not allowed to enter and inspect private residences; however, labor inspectors may coordinate visits with social workers who are allowed to enter private residences and are trained to watch for indicators of child labor. (5) Inspectors do not have authority to assess penalties, but if a labor inspector observes a suspected child labor violation during an inspection, the case is referred to the MLSS Child Labor Unit for investigation and possible referral for legal action through the courts. Fines and penalties can be levied or collected upon summary conviction in court. (4) NGO leaders point to a lack of new initiatives and programming, staffing issues, and budgetary shortfalls within relevant government institutions as negatively impacting efforts toward the elimination of child labor. (4)

In 2022, the labor inspectorate employed 41 inspectors and an additional 111 social workers. The MLSS reported that 85 members of its staff, including some labor inspectors, received refresher training on child labor and human trafficking, with the primary goal of the training being identification of child labor violations. (4) Labor inspections were conducted at formal and informal worksites including shops, factories, port facilities, and construction sites. During the reporting period, child labor investigations primarily focused on drinking establishments where teenage girls are known to work exceptionally long hours and be denied their pay; however, the government identified no child labor violations. (4) In 2022, the MLSS implemented a new General Compliance Inspection Form to enable greater volume and standardization in inspections. (4)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Jamaica took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient allocation of financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (5)	Yes (4)

Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (5)	No (4)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (5)	Yes (4)

The Government of Jamaica made progress in prosecuting human trafficking cases, as the criminal justice sector increased investigations across the island and nearly doubled its prosecutions from the previous year. Key ministries, departments, and agencies developed and implemented counter-trafficking procedures to improve victim identification and referral services. (8) In 2022, the government reported that 202 police officers and 95 other enforcement officials received trafficking in persons training, including training on child labor violations. (4) Various government agencies, often in partnerships with NGOs, offered training on identifying human trafficking victims and on the National Referral Mechanism for child trafficking. (8)

Based on referrals from the National Children's Registry, the government conducted 36 investigations into potential child trafficking cases during the reporting period. In March 2022, authorities arrested a suspected trafficker and four alleged clients in a case involving a child under age 16 working in a bar who was exploited in sex trafficking; the pimp was prosecuted and convicted and was awaiting sentencing at the close of the reporting period. (4,9) The clients were also prosecuted. In 2022, the government opened three new Child-Friendly Spaces for interviewing and assisting suspected victims and participated in trainings for criminal justice professionals and social services providers who may come into contact with child trafficking victims. (9) The government also identified six additional victims of child labor crimes, including commercial sexual exploitation, and placed them in state care where they received counseling, mental health screening, and educational support. In contrast, law enforcement authorities detained and imprisoned children for alleged participation in illegal activities, including violent crimes and involvement with gang activities; it did not screen all of those children for trafficking victimization. (4) In addition, an NGO reported that not all cases of child abuse were routinely screened for signs of human trafficking. (8)

Jamaica's Office of the National Rapporteur on Trafficking in Persons (ONRTIP) reported several law enforcement challenges, including the use of evolving social media tactics by perpetrators, difficulties in getting survivors to self-report, child victims who become adults and no longer want to pursue cases in court, the lengthy judicial process, attrition rates of investigators and prosecutors, and financial and human resource constraints. (4,8) During the reporting period, ONRTIP developed a TIP Data Capacity Assessment of Ministries,

Departments, and Agencies to create a more objective reporting system on human trafficking in Jamaica. It also signed a Cooperative Agreement with government departments and NGOs that allows ONRTIP to routinely collect, analyze, and report high-quality data on human trafficking. (8)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Steering Committee on the Prevention and Elimination of Child Labor	Provides leadership and guidance on policies and programs aimed at reducing and eliminating child labor. Partners with the MLSS Child Labor Unit and National Task Force Against Trafficking in Persons (NATFATIP), a multi-agency body comprising various ministries, departments, agencies of government, and representatives of three NGOs. (4,8) Conducted interventions and engagement sessions geared toward children living in high-risk communities, virtual sensitization sessions for government workers and municipal children's clubs, and outreach to teenagers at a symposium for those considering the transition from school to work. (4)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to adequately address child labor, including a lack of implementation of a new national child labor plan.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Plan of Action for Combating Trafficking in Persons	Identifies objectives, actions, and responsible agencies to prevent and eliminate human trafficking, including commercial sexual exploitation of children and forced child labor, through prevention, protection, prosecution, and partnerships. (12,31) Guides the activities of NATFATIP. (8) Though the plan expired at the end of 2021, the government reported it continued to guide NATFATIP's activities. (9)
National Plan of Action for an Integrated Response to Children and Violence (NPACV)	Provides a coordinated and structured approach to addressing the key issues and challenges pertaining to child violence and abuse. (32) Outlines a range of strategies and programs that will be implemented over 5 years across multiple stages in a child's life. The NPACV is implemented, monitored, and evaluated by an Inter-Sectoral Committee on Children and Violence. (6) The government continued to support and implement this policy during the reporting period, including the launch of Project Birthright, an initiative to provide free birth certificates to undocumented Jamaicans, especially vulnerable children. (4,9,33)

During the reporting period, the MLSS drafted a new 2022–2027 roadmap, the National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor in Jamaica, to reduce child labor. However, this roadmap has not yet been implemented, as it is awaiting full approval by the Cabinet. (4)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Program for Advancement through Health and Education† (PATH)	Government of Jamaica and World Bank-funded conditional cash transfer program launched in 2002 that helps reduce child labor by requiring participants to attend school at least 85 percent of the academic days in a month. (5,25,34,35) The MLSS expanded PATH payments to more than 150,000 students and payments in 2022 totaled approximately $38.3 million. The government provided additional benefits in the form of nutritional assistance and funding for school supplies totaling more than $13.3 million. (4)
Regional Initiative Latin America and the Caribbean Free of Child Labor (2022–2025)	An intergovernmental cooperation platform made up of 30 countries, with active participation of employers' and workers' organizations. (36) Seeks to declare Latin America and the Caribbean as the first developing region free of child labor by 2025. Drawing on the knowledge, experience, and accumulated capacity of key public and private actors, aims to address the persistence of child work. (37) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the program during the reporting period.

Program	Description & Activities
U.S.-Jamaica Child Protection Compact Partnership (CPC Partnership) (2018–2022)	A 4-year plan partially funded by the U.S. Government that enhanced the efforts of the Government of Jamaica to address child trafficking. (10) In 2022, opened three new Child-Friendly Spaces to support survivors and participated in trainings for criminal justice professionals and social services providers who may come into contact with child trafficking victims. (4)

† Program is funded by the Government of Jamaica.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (4)

The government conducted 14 awareness-raising sessions and 5 outreach workshops on child labor and human trafficking, mostly in the high-risk communities of Kingston and Montego Bay, that reached an estimated 1,200 community members. (4) In addition, the MLSS Child Labor Unit launched a video competition for students to produce short video monologues discussing their feelings about child labor in Jamaica. Child Labor Unit personnel also conducted workshops for students and teachers in Portland and Trelawny, parishes identified by the Child Labor Risk Identification model as being at particular risk for increases in child labor, that facilitated discussions on strategies to combat child labor. (4) Furthermore, the government participated in the Angel Watch program that facilitates information sharing on individuals attempting to enter the country who have been charged with sexual offenses. (8) Although Jamaica funds education-related social programs, current resources are insufficient, and social programs do not fully address the scope and magnitude of the problem. (11) Research found no evidence of programs designed for children working in agriculture or street work, or for those subjected to commercial sexual exploitation.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Jamaica (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that laws include higher penalties for the use of children in the production and distribution of drugs.	2009 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure that legislation criminally prohibits the use of a child for prostitution.	2021 – 2022
	Raise the minimum age for work from 15 to 16 to align with the compulsory education age.	2021 – 2022
	Establish by law that free basic public education is available to all children, regardless of citizenship.	2021 – 2022
	Pass legislation that will determine the specific light work activities and hours permissible for children ages 13 and 14 to facilitate enforcement.	2014 – 2022
Enforcement	Increase the number of labor inspectors from 41 to 88 to ensure adequate coverage of the labor force of approximately 1.3 million people.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that initiatives and programming, staffing levels, and the budget for agencies, including the Ministry of Labor and Social Security, are sufficient to identify child labor violations and fulfill their mandates.	2022
	Ensure that children, including those participating in illicit activities and victims of child abuse, are adequately screened for indicators of human trafficking, including forced labor.	2022
Government Policies	Increase the integration of child labor elimination and prevention strategies into existing and future policies.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that the roadmap developed by the Ministry of Labor and Social Security aimed at reducing child labor is implemented.	2022
Social Programs	Ensure that social programs adequately address child labor, including in street work, commercial sexual exploitation, agricultural work, and other worst forms of child labor, particularly in rural areas.	2013 – 2022
	Ensure that school costs, such as uniforms, books, food, and transportation, do not diminish access to free public education, including for students at traditional and non-traditional schools.	2017 – 2022
	Implement a program to report, identify, and find missing children who may have been forced into child labor.	2020 – 2022
	Conduct research to determine the activities carried out by children working in farming and fishing to inform policies and programs.	2021 – 2022

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Social Programs	Ensure that children with disabilities, particularly in rural areas, have access to an education, and resume visits by officers to ensure attendance.	2022
	Ensure that activities are undertaken to implement the Regional Initiative Latin America and the Caribbean Free of Child Labor and make information about such measures publicly available.	2022

In 2022, Jordan made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government amended the Penal Code to increase penalties for enabling or encouraging a child under the age of 16 to beg or collect donations, including imprisonment of not less than 2 years for forced child begging. The government also investigated 42 cases involving the use of children in the production and trafficking of drugs and updated the National Framework for the Reduction of Child Labor, extending it to 2030. However, children in Jordan are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging and use in illicit activities, including drug trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. Moreover, Syrian children still face barriers to accessing education due to socioeconomic pressures, bullying, and the costs associated with transportation and supplies, among other issues. In addition, the scope of government programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of child labor, including in construction and street vending.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Jordan.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	1.0 (33,182)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	94.8

	Driving animals to transport tourists (10)
	Street work,† including vending (3,9,11,12)
	Scavenging scrap metal and waste† (7,13,14)
	Begging (3,11,15)
	Domestic work† (9)
	Food services, including working in restaurants and bakeries and selling coffee (4,7-9)
	Hotel services† (4,7,9)
Working in retail, including cleaning shops (3,4,7)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor†	Use in illicit activities, including drug trafficking (8,16,17)
	Forced begging (3,8,11,15,18,19)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (8,20,21)
	Forced labor in agriculture (21)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

The majority of children working in Jordan are engaged in the agricultural and services sectors. (7) In agriculture, children perform tasks such as weeding, planting, and harvesting on non-industrial scale farms and are exposed to hazardous conditions. (3,7,22) In the services sector, children work in small retail shops, auto-repair shops, domestic work, and street work, such as peddling goods. (3) Children in Jordan are also subjected to forced labor in agriculture, forced begging, and use in illicit activities. (21) Sources indicate that, rather than attending school, Syrian refugee children are sometimes forced to work alongside their families in agriculture and the services industries. (6,18,23) In addition, child beggars are sometimes used to sell drugs. (16) In the one reported case of commercial sexual exploitation, the children were trafficked by their mother. (8)

In 2022, Jordan once again waived a requirement for identity documentation to expand access to education for Syrian children for the 2022–2023 school year. (8) The government provided double-shift schools to address overcrowding, with Jordanian children attending in the morning and Syrian children in the afternoon. (3,17,23,24) However, both Jordanian and Syrian children attending double-shift schools were vulnerable to child labor because school hours are considerably shorter, and fewer school hours leave more time for work. Despite a government guarantee of equality of access to education, children still sometimes face de facto barriers to education, including bullying and harassment, and the costs of transportation, uniforms, and school materials. (3,14,23,25,26) In addition, children of Jordanian mothers and non-Jordanian fathers, as well as non-Jordanian children who do not belong to refugee groups, lack access to public education. (17)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Jordan has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Jordan’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the lack of prohibitions related to the military recruitment of children by non-state armed groups.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 73 of the Labor Code (27)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 74 of the Labor Code; Article 2 of the Ministerial Order of 2011 (27,28)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 2 of the Ministerial Order of 2011 (28)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 3(a) and 3(b) of the Law on the Prevention of Human Trafficking (29)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 3(a) and 8–11 of the Law on the Prevention of Human Trafficking (29)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 298, 299, 306, 310, 311, 315, and 319 of the Penal Code; Articles 3(a) and 3(b) of the Law on the Prevention of Human Trafficking (29,30)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 8 of the Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act (31)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	16	Article 5(b) of the Military Service act; Article 13(b) of the Officer's Service Act (32,33)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 3(a) of the National Service Act (34)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No		Article 141 of the Penal Code (30)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Articles 7(a.2) and 10(b) of the Education Act (35)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 10(a) of the Education Act; Article 20 of the Constitution (35,36)

In 2022, the government amended the Penal Code and increased the penalty for enabling or encouraging a child under the age of 16 to beg or collect donations to a period of no less than 3 months imprisonment and not more than 12 months for the first offense, and no less than 6 months and not more than 12 months for subsequent offenses. The amendment also specifies imprisonment of not less than 2 years for forcing a child under the age of 16 to beg or collect donations. (8) Additionally, the amended Penal Code now stipulates 2-year minimum prison sentences for forced begging in cases that do not reach the legal threshold to be prosecuted under the human trafficking law. (8)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor (MOL), Central Inspection Directorate	Enforces labor laws, including those on child labor. Identifies cases of child labor through worksite inspections and registers instances of child labor in a National Child Labor Database, which allows ministries to monitor and track children as they are identified and referred to social services. (37) Maintains a hotline, website, and mobile app to receive labor-related complaints, including complaints of child labor. (13,17) The hotline has operators during office hours, although operators who speak foreign languages were not always available. The hotline has an automated message recording after 3 p.m. (38,39) The phone number is difficult to locate and, based on available information, operators rarely responded to voicemails left after working hours. (38,39)
Public Security Directorate, Criminal Investigation Unit	Investigates and prosecutes violations of the Penal Code, including allegations of the worst forms of child labor. Operates a section to combat human trafficking. (13,21)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Joint Anti-Trafficking Unit of MOL and the Public Security Directorate	Investigates cases of human trafficking and forced labor, refers cases for prosecution, and coordinates with foreign embassies to identify victims of human trafficking and, when needed, to repatriate foreign workers. (23)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Jordan took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor (MOL) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient financial resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$353,107 (3)	$423,000 (8)
Number of Labor Inspectors	170 (3)	172 (8)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	Yes (27)	Yes (8)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	Yes (3)	Yes (8)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksite	71,686 (3)	37,741‡ (8)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	923 (3)	374 (8)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	97 (3)	98 (8)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	Unknown (3)	98 (8)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (3)	Yes (8)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (3)	Yes (8)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (3)	Yes (8)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (3)	Yes (8)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (3)	Yes (8)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (3)	Yes (8)

‡ Data are from January 1, 2022, to October 31, 2022.

In 2022, MOL facilitated training for its labor inspectors and officials in the inspections and complaints department on trafficking in persons. (40) However, research indicates that Jordan does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (8,41) Additionally, the high number of inspections per inspector raises concerns that inspectors may not have the time to adequately identify and remediate labor law violations. In addition, MOL reported that inspections in the agricultural sector were insufficient to meet the demands of Agricultural Workers Bylaw No. 19. (3) While the government increased the inspectorate's budget by almost 20 percent in 2022, sources report that the inspectorate has insufficient financial resources to hire a sufficient number of labor inspectors. (8)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Jordan took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including a lack of information on its criminal law enforcement efforts.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Unknown	Yes (8)
Number of Investigations	Unknown	Unknown (8)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown	Unknown (8)
Number of Convictions	Unknown	Unknown (8)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown	Unknown (8)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (19)	Yes (8)

The government did not provide complete information on its criminal law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report. However, criminal law enforcement agencies investigated a case of child sex trafficking involving two girls during the reporting period. The girls' mother was charged under the trafficking law and remained imprisoned through the end of the reporting period. The government further stated that the trafficker was aided by foreigners who subsequently left the country. (8) A further 42 cases involving the use of children to sell, distribute, and promote drugs were investigated. (8) Additionally, the Counter-Trafficking Unit and the Ministry of Social Development (MOSD) referred a total of five cases of forced child labor to shelter services. (40)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Committee on Child Labor	Formulates new policies, amends legislation as necessary, and oversees the implementation of child labor policies. Led by MOL, members include three other ministries, plus international and civil society organizations. (8) In 2022, the National Committee on Child Labor helped draft the National Strategy for the Reduction of Child Labor (2022–2030). (8)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Strategy for the Reduction of Child Labor (2022–2030) †	Outlines the roles and responsibilities of key government agencies, including the Ministries of Education, Labor, and Social Development; NGOs; and other stakeholders involved in identifying and responding to cases of child labor. Based on the Framework to Reduce Child Labor, MOL inspectors monitor child labor and refer cases to the Ministry of Social Development (MOSD) and the Ministry of Education for the provision of services. (42,43) Approved in 2022. (8)
Jordan Response Plan for the Syria Crisis (2018–2022)	Integrated a refugee-oriented humanitarian response with a strategic plan for increasing the resilience of local communities. The plan had a particular focus on economic strengthening, education, and social protection. (44) Active in 2022. (45)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (46)

The government has yet to implement the Plan of Action to Eliminate Child Labor in Tourism in Petra since passing it in 2015. (46)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of services to address child labor in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Child Labor Units †	Consists of Child Labor Units within MOSD and MOL. The MOSD unit provides support to children engaged in child labor, returns them to school, and provides services to their families; provides vocational training for youth; organizes training on child labor for families; and maintains the website of the National Child Labor Database. (47) Provides services to children engaged in child begging through centers in Madaba and Deleil (Zarqa). (39) Active in 2022. (8) The MOL unit coordinates government campaigns against child labor, conducts training, and raises awareness about child labor issues. (7) Manages the Child Labor Monitoring System, a case management tool that helps coordinate efforts by relevant government agencies and civil society organizations to ensure that children are removed from child labor and provided with critical social and educational services. (23)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Program	Description & Activities
Addressing the Worst Forms of Child Labor in the Agriculture Sector†	Aims to reduce child labor in the agriculture sector, taking into consideration vulnerabilities of children and their families, with field visits by joint teams of MOL inspectors and behavior monitors from MOSD and the Family Healthcare Institute of the Noor Al Hussein Foundation. (48) Works in informal tented settlement communities in rural and remote parts of Mafraq and the Jordan Valley that have not received child labor protection support. (3)
Program to End the Worst Forms of Child Labor in Zarqa and Amman	Funded by UNICEF, implemented by the Rowad al Khair Society and with the participation of MOL, this program aims to identify 400 of the most vulnerable children in Zarqa and Amman to receive psychosocial support, access to education, and other training to reduce the number of children subjected to the worst forms of child labor. (49)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of Jordan.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (13,17,51-53)

Although Jordan has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs does not fully address the extent of the problem, including child labor in construction and street vending.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Jordan (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 into non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2022
Enforcement	Improve the quality of the Ministry of Labor's hotline by making it easier to locate and ensuring that operators, including those who speak foreign languages, are available outside of business hours, and that all messages are addressed.	2018 – 2022
	Increase the number of labor inspectors from 172 to 195 to provide adequate coverage of the labor force of approximately 2.9 million people.	2020 – 2022
	Publish information on criminal law enforcement efforts, including the number of investigations, prosecutions, and convictions.	2019 – 2022
	Ensure that the labor inspectorate has sufficient resources to fulfill its mandate.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that the number of inspections conducted per labor inspector affords inspectors enough time to adequately identify and remediate labor law violations, including in the agricultural sector.	2019 – 2022
Government Policies	Implement the Plan of Action to Eliminate Child Labor in Tourism in Petra.	2018 – 2022
Social Programs	Continue to expand access to education for all children including Syrian and non-Syrian refugees, ensuring that students have transportation, are able to purchase supplies and uniforms, students are not bullied or harassed, and school hours are extended.	2013 – 2022
	Institute programs to address the worst forms of child labor in construction and street vending.	2013 – 2022

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2022, Kazakhstan made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government provided data on labor inspectorate funding for the first time since 2020 and increased that funding significantly. Training for labor inspectors was also provided, and new courses were created on the identification and remediation of child labor, including child trafficking. However, despite new initiatives to address child labor, Kazakhstan is assessed as having made only minimal advancement because it continued the implementation of the revised Entrepreneurial Code that delays advancement to eliminate child labor. On December 30, 2021, the President of Kazakhstan signed a law significantly restricting the circumstances under which unannounced inspections can be performed. The new law, which came into effect on January 1, 2023, codifies and expands the government's existing practice under which unannounced inspections are prohibited in all cases, except in the presence of compelling grounds, and supporting evidence enclosed to such a complaint, or if an inspection is mandated by judicial or tax authorities. The lack of unannounced inspections may leave potential violations of child labor laws and other labor abuses undetected in workplaces. Children in Kazakhstan are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in markets. The government lacks current, comprehensive, and detailed research on child labor, including in cotton production. In addition, the government extended a moratorium through December 2022 under which labor inspections of small enterprises were permitted only in cases that pose a mass threat to life and health, law and social order, or national security.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Kazakhstan.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	3.2 (79,690)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	90.7
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	3.6
Primary Completion Rate (%)		102.0

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2020, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2023. (1)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 3 (MICS 3), 2006. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including harvesting vegetables, weeding, collecting worms, and harvesting cotton† and tobacco† (3-6)
	Milking cows, tending livestock, including horses and goats (4,7)
Industry	Construction† and road repair, activities unknown (3,4,8)
Services	Working in markets and on the streets, including transporting and selling items† (3,4,8-12)
	Domestic work, including childcare (3,4,8,13)
	Working in gas stations† (3)
	Car washing† (3,12)
	Working in catering and in restaurants† as waiters (3,12,14)
	Working as bus conductors† (3)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor ‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,15)
	Forced begging (15,16)
	Use in illicit activities, including selling drugs (3,15,17)

There is no current and comprehensive research on child labor in Kazakhstan that can provide details about the number of children working in different sectors (including in construction, services, or the cultivation of cotton or other forms of agriculture), the nature of their work, or the hazards involved. (9) However, research indicates that children from the Kyrgyz Republic, some of whom may be unaccompanied, are reported to engage in work in Kazakhstan. (4) Migrant children seeking work are often unable to work legally, limiting their entitlement to work protections. Although migrant children theoretically have the right to part-time work once they are 16, in practice, many are unable to obtain work permits because they do not list "work" as their purpose for visiting the country when entering Kazakhstan. (4, 15) Fear, corruption, and discrimination against migrants can also prevent migrant children from the Kyrgyz Republic from obtaining legal work permits. Kyrgyzstani migrant children over the age of 16 who have an irregular migration status are particularly vulnerable to administrative fines, arrest, and detention with adults. (4)

Migration authorities sometimes register migrant children under age 16 as unnamed family members, rather than under their own names, which prevents them from receiving Kazakhstani identification documents. (18,19) Some of these undocumented migrant children fall victim to forced child labor, and commercial sexual exploitation in Kazakhstan. Undocumented children may also face difficulties accessing health and education services. (3-5,15) Although Kazakhstan guarantees free education regardless of migration status, migrant children face barriers to accessing education. Children may enroll in school without identification documents; however, these documents are required to receive an official diploma. (3) Additionally, landlords often do not register migrant tenants, which may prevent migrant children from enrolling in local schools. (19)

Children with disabilities in Kazakhstan face challenges accessing education due to inaccessible school buildings, a lack of specialists able to provide inclusive education services, and official disability evaluations that render children eligible for at-home education only or ineligible for education entirely. (19,20) Children with disabilities who live in specialized, closed-care institutions may be compelled to assist with caring for younger children, including feeding, changing diapers, bathing, and dressing them. (13) In addition, disabled children who are unable to access mainstream education are at greater risk of being sent to such state institutions where they may not be able to access education and may be subjected to labor exploitation. (13,20)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Kazakhstan has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Kazakhstan’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the exclusion of informal work from labor legislation.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	18	Articles 31 and 69 of the Labor Code; Article 153 of the Criminal Code (21,22)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No	18	Article 26.1(2) of the Labor Code; Article 153 of the Criminal Code (21,22)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 26.1(2) of the Labor Code; Decree of the Minister of Health and Social Development No. 944 of 2015 (21,23)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 7 of the Labor Code; Articles 3, 128, and 135 of the Criminal Code (21,22)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 135 of the Criminal Code (22)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 134, 135, and 312 of the Criminal Code (22)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 132, 133, and 135.2(9) of the Criminal Code; Article 26.1(2) of the Labor Code (21,22)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	19	Article 38.1(2) of the Military Service Act (24)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 31 of the Military Service Act (24)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 41 of the Law on Children’s Rights; Articles 132 and 267 of the Criminal Code (22,25)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	17‡	Article 30 of the Constitution; Articles 12 and 30 of the Law on Education (26,27)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 30 of the Constitution (26)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (28,29)

In 2022, the Ministry of Internal Affairs (MOIA) developed a draft bill targeting trafficking in persons, which is designed to improve Kazakhstan’s legal framework on human trafficking in accord with international recommendations. Among other changes, the draft bill adds child trafficking as a specific offense. (17) However, the Labor Code’s protections, including the minimum age for employment and prohibitions on hazardous work, do not meet international standards because they do not cover children working without a written employment contract. (21) Although Article 134 of the Criminal Code of the Republic of Kazakhstan criminalizes involving a minor in prostitution, and Article 135 of the Criminal Code criminalizes trafficking of minors, including for the purpose of sexual exploitation, no law clearly criminalizes the users (clients) of prostitution involving children. (22) However, government officials report that any users identified in the course of a prostitution investigation involving minors will be charged under Article 122, which criminalizes adult sexual relations with persons under the age of 16. (17,30) Children in Kazakhstan are required to attend school through the completion of secondary education, which typically ends when they are around 17. This standard makes children age 17 vulnerable to child labor as they are not required to attend school but are still subject to legal restrictions on the hours and times of day they may work. (21,26,27)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Kazakhstan

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor and Social Protection (MLSP)	Enforces child labor laws and conducts labor inspections through the Ministry's Committee on Labor and Social Protection. Responsible for implementation and control functions in the fields of labor, employment, and social protection. (3,8,9) Implements the special social services program that funds shelters for survivors of trafficking, including children. In 2022, the MLSP's Committee on Labor, Social Protection, and Migration split into two different committees, with one focused on labor and social protection and the other on migration. (3) The chairperson of the labor and social protection committee holds the position of Chief Labor Inspector and coordinates the work of labor inspectors in the regions. (3)
Ministry of Internal Affairs (MOIA)	Oversees police and specialized law enforcement officials, including an Anti-Trafficking Unit. Identifies and carries out initial investigation of criminal cases involving the worst forms of child labor and hazardous child labor and refers cases to the Prosecutor General's Office for prosecution. (3) Engages in identification and protection of human trafficking victims, including child victims. In February and September of 2022, conducted activities under the ongoing multi-year operation "Stop-Trafficking," which identified five cases of trafficking of minors and six cases of coercion of minors into prostitution. (3)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Kazakhstan took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Social Protection (MLSP) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including lack of an appropriate number of inspectors.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown	$5.2 million (3)
Number of Labor Inspectors	256 (8)	261 (3)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	Yes (21,31)	Yes (21,31)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	No (8)	Yes (3)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksite	4,300 (8)	4,920 (3)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	9 (8)	3 (3)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	9 (8)	5 (3)

During the reporting period, the government significantly increased funding for the labor inspectorate since the last time data were available in 2020, when its budget was $3.1 million. In addition, the Research Institute for Labor Protection under the MLSP conducted periodic recertification of labor inspectors, which required them to demonstrate competence in all facets of labor inspection. (3) In 2022, an advanced training course was conducted for labor inspectors and social workers, and the government developed a training program on the application of labor legislation and compliance enforcement, which included the eradication of child labor. (3) During the reporting period, labor inspectors identified three cases of child labor in the catering sector, and imposed administrative penalties against the employers. (3)

However, on December 7, 2022, the President extended a labor moratorium on small businesses until January 1, 2024. (3) Under this moratorium, an inspection can only occur at a small enterprise in cases that pose a mass threat to life and health, law and social order, or national security. (33,34) Small enterprises include businesses with fewer than 100 employees, and average revenue below a government-determined threshold. (32) Under the newly revised Entrepreneurial Code, beginning in 2023, all small businesses are exempt from inspections in their first 3 years after registration. (32,35)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Furthermore, additional restrictions came into force in 2023 that prohibit unannounced inspections unless there are convincing grounds and supporting evidence for suspected violations, or the inspection is mandated by judicial or tax authorities. (3,35) This law officially codifies what has been standard practice since 2020, and is in part a response to complaints from business owners that labor inspectors use unannounced inspections as a pretext to solicit bribes. (30) Under current law, labor inspectors generally must notify entities at least 1 full day prior to a site visit or inspection unless the Entrepreneurial Code provides for an exception to this notice requirement. (3,32) Labor inspectors from the MLSP are empowered to conduct unplanned inspections on the basis of complaints, which are only considered valid if they are not anonymous. These notice requirements limit inspectors' ability to check that working conditions comply with national labor laws, including those related to child labor. (3,32) Labor inspectors are currently authorized to conduct unannounced inspections of businesses on the basis of requests from law enforcement agencies, in response to complaints related to certain extreme health and safety hazards, and in cases in which the worksite is in a remote location. (3,8,9,32) In addition, labor inspectors can conduct routine inspections on the basis of risk assessment reports. (8,32)

The government also works with NGOs to conduct raids to detect child labor violations during annual, interministerial campaigns to raise awareness about, detect, and address incidences of child labor. These campaigns are widely publicized, limited in duration, and occur at approximately the same time each year. (8,9) As a result, the raids conducted during these campaigns may fail to adequately detect child labor in seasonal agriculture or in businesses that conceal violations in anticipation of these high-profile campaigns. There is also no indication of any inspections or raids specifically targeted at agriculture, which remains a high-risk sector for child labor. (4)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Kazakhstan took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of law enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including a failure to obtain convictions against those who exploit children in the worst forms of child labor.

In 2022, police investigated 12 cases related to sexual exploitation of minors, including 2 cases of trafficking in minors for the purpose of sexual exploitation, 4 cases of coercion of minors into prostitution, and 6 cases of production of pornographic materials with the participation of minors. Authorities also investigated 12 incidents in which minors were involved in the sale and possession of drugs. (3) Nine cases were prosecuted, but no convictions were obtained during the reporting period. Police officers also identified a trafficking ring of 11 people who recruited women and minors into commercial sexual exploitation through false promises of high paying employment. Six minors were removed from trafficking as a result of the investigation, and the alleged traffickers remain in custody awaiting trial. (3) All child survivors of trafficking were provided with social assistance through government-funded shelters, including the Ministry of Education's regional Centers for the Adaptation of Minors. (3,17)

MOIA's Academy trained 21 investigators on investigation of violent crimes against women and children, and 40 police officers were trained on the prevention of trafficking in minors, commercial sexual exploitation of minors, and the involvement of minors in illegal activities. (3) Additionally, MOIA's Investigative Department introduced a training program for investigators on anti-corruption legislation that strengthened the liability for committing sex crimes against minors, and worked with the Department for Combating Organized Crime to develop methodological recommendations for the investigation of human trafficking crimes, including trafficking in minors. (3)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Coordination Council on Combating the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Implements the National Action Plan (NAP) for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor 2020–2022. (36) In 2022, the Council met to discuss implementation of the NAP, and draft legislation which would further clarify the types of light work permitted for children ages 14–16. (3)

The Ministry of Education (MOE), previously the Ministry of Education and Science, also coordinates child protection activities, including response to child labor complaints. MOE's regional Departments of Education and regional Centers for the Adaptation of Minors are responsible for the coordination and management of all child protection activities, including providing services for child survivors of trafficking. (3, 17) An official from the regional-level Department of Education responds to reports of child labor and determines whether law enforcement should investigate cases of alleged child labor. (37) If the case is in agriculture, local officials meet with parents and school officials to reinforce that children should be in school during the academic year. MOE's Center for the Adaptation of Minors provides assistance to survivors of the worst forms of child labor and makes referrals to appropriate government services or NGOs for further assistance. (37) MOE's Child Protection Committee also runs a hotline to receive reports of child labor. (3)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including insufficient implementation of policies related to child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Action Plan (NAP) for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2020–2022)	Addressed three priority areas, which included (a) the creation of policies and laws to eliminate the worst forms of child labor; (b) the creation of programs to monitor vulnerable communities and sectors with the highest risk of child labor, and provide services to children who have been exploited in child labor; and (c) raising awareness about the worst forms of child labor. (36) During the reporting period, the government published a report on activities undertaken in 2022 to implement the NAP. (3)
National Action Plan to Counter Trafficking in Persons (2021–2023)	Includes legislation improvements to provide shelter assistance to non-citizen survivors, align the legal definition of human trafficking with international standards, and improve identification procedures for front-line officials. (3,8) Some of the planned activities specifically target the worst forms of child labor, including efforts to prevent forced child labor, including the exploitation of child labor in cotton and tobacco fields and at construction sites; monitor and exchange data between competent agencies on advertisements of human trafficking and child pornography; and conduct human trafficking prevention and awareness campaigns for children. (3,8) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Action Plan to Counter Trafficking in Persons during the reporting period.
Roadmap to Strengthen the Protection of the Rights of Children, Counter Domestic Violence, and Address Suicide Among Adolescents (2020–2023)	Addresses issues related to children's mental health and social well-being. (38) In 2022, under this policy, the government implemented anti-bullying protocols in schools, and created a framework to identify children requiring additional support. Teachers and psychologists assisted over 7,000 children through this policy during the reporting period. (3)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (9,38)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate efforts to address child labor in all sectors.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Juvenile Care Centers†	MOE-run centers for minors located throughout Kazakhstan. Provide temporary shelter and assistance to vulnerable children, including child survivors of the worst forms of child labor, and street children. (9,39) Research was unable to determine whether the centers were active during the reporting period.
Shelters for Trafficking Victims†	Funded by the government and operated by NGOs, they provide legal, psychological, medical, and educational services to survivors of human trafficking, including minors, in seven provinces and two cities, including Almaty. (15,39) In 2022, the government removed all identified child survivors of sexual exploitation from the circumstances of exploitation, and referred them to government-funded shelters for social services and other assistance. (3)
Awareness-Raising Campaigns‡	Raise public awareness on child labor issues, including the annual "Twelve Days Against Child Labor" campaign, conducted June 1–12, 2022, in which the government and NGOs organized over 7,100 joint checks to inspect over 10,300 sites, including local markets, gas stations, and construction sites. The national campaign reportedly reached over 900,000 children and 420,000 parents and employers. (3)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of Kazakhstan.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (40)

Although the Government of Kazakhstan implemented programs in 2022 to protect vulnerable children and raise awareness about child labor, research found no evidence that it has carried out programs to assist children engaged in child labor in agriculture or service sectors.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Kazakhstan (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that minimum age provisions and hazardous work prohibitions apply to all children, including those working without an employment contract.	2016 – 2022
	Increase the compulsory education age from 17 years old to 18 years old to align with the minimum age for work.	2022
	Criminally prohibit and penalize the use of a child for prostitution.	2019 – 2022
Enforcement	Strengthen the labor inspection system by eliminating barriers for onsite and unannounced inspections, as well as targeting high-risk industries for inspections.	2020 – 2022
	Lift the moratorium on labor inspections at small enterprises and ensure that the labor inspectorate conducts routine, targeted, and unannounced labor inspections at such businesses as appropriate.	2020 – 2022
	Strengthen detection of child labor by ensuring that targeted enforcement efforts, such as raids and unannounced labor inspections, are undertaken throughout the year and in all sectors in which children are vulnerable to child labor, including in agriculture.	2020 – 2022
	Publish information on penalties imposed for criminal cases of the worst forms of child labor.	2022
Government Policies	Publish information on activities undertaken to implement the National Action Plan for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor.	2020 – 2022
Social Programs	Conduct research to gather comprehensive data on child labor, including the activities carried out by children working in agriculture, in construction, and in the service sector, to inform policies and programs.	2013 – 2022
	Remove barriers that prevent migrant children, ages 16 and 17, from obtaining legal work permits for light work.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that migrant children who must be detained are housed in appropriate facilities separate from adult detainees.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that all children have access to education and may receive official diplomas, including children with irregular migration status and children with disabilities, and raise awareness in vulnerable communities about existing remedies for denial of school enrollment.	2018 – 2022
	Ensure that Juvenile Care Centers continue to operate and publicize information on activities undertaken during the reporting period.	2021 – 2022
	Institute programs to address child labor, particularly in the agriculture and service sectors.	2014 – 2022

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2022, Kenya made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government enacted the Children's Act, strengthening legal protections for children from child labor, including mandating the development of a light work framework, and outlining child protection mandates of government agencies, such as protecting children from armed conflict. In addition, the government substantially increased the number of worksite inspections for the reporting period, while achieving convictions and imposing sentences on two individuals for crimes related to human trafficking of children. However, despite new initiatives to address child labor, Kenya is assessed as having made only minimal advancement because it continued a practice that delays advancement to eliminate child labor. Elements within the Kenyan Defense Forces likely sustained in-kind support of a Somali federal member state group that has been implicated in the recruitment and use of child soldiers. Children in Kenya are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and forced domestic service. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. Key coordinating committees related to the elimination of child labor lack adequate resources to carry out their mandates, and the labor inspectorate does not have sufficient financial and human resources, affecting its ability to ensure that child labor laws are enforced.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Kenya.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	11.6 (1,468,203)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	93.9
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	11.5
Primary Completion Rate (%)		99.7

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming,† including the tilling of land, weeding, pruning, harvesting, transportation, and scaring off animals for production of tea and coffee, khat ( mira ),† rice, sisal, sugarcane, tobacco, corn, and flowers (3-16)
	Herding and guarding cattle and livestock† (8,9,13-17)
	Fishing,† including for tilapia, sardines, Nile perch, and other fish, handling nets, cleaning fish and utensils, disposal of waste, and cleaning boats (14-19)
	Forestry, including cutting trees, fetching and burning wood to produce firewood and charcoal (9,14,20)
Industry	Construction,† including carrying bricks and transportation of materials (8,14)
	Quarrying,† including crushing rocks and stones, ferrying stones and gravel, and harvesting coral (8,11,14,16,21)
	Harvesting sand† (8,14-17,19,22-24)
	Making bricks† (9,14,21)
	Mining† for gold (14,16-26)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Services	Domestic work,† including caregiving (13-15,19,27,28)
	Street work, including vending (8,14,17,27)
	Transporting goods and people by bicycle,† motorcycle,† and handcart† (8,14,29,27)
	Garbage scavenging,† including for scrap materials (12,14,16,30-32)
	Begging† (13,14,29,33)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (9,13,19,29,33-38)
	Use in illicit activities, including in drug trafficking, intelligence gathering to plan for criminal operations, and providing security for criminal operations (12,13,29,39-42)
	Forced labor in slaughterhouses, sand harvesting, begging and street vending, domestic service, herding livestock, fishing, and agricultural work (13,19,27,43-46)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children work at informal gold mining sites in western Kenya, using pickaxes and other dangerous tools, working underground, and carrying heavy loads. (25,26,47,48) In some instances, children working at mining sites have been trapped in collapsed mines, suffocated, or exposed to mercury poisoning. (25-29) In addition, children working in domestic service are often subject to long work hours and physical and sexual abuse. (45) Research indicates rising cases of children working in the harvesting of sand, which sometimes involves exploitation by criminal syndicates. (12,23,24)

Kenyan children are subjected to forced labor, including in domestic service, and commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, both within and outside the country. (19,45,46) Human traffickers exploit children from neighboring East African countries in domestic servitude, work in slaughterhouses, agriculture, and in commercial sexual exploitation. (12,49) Both boys and girls are also subjected to commercial sexual exploitation in tourism-heavy areas on the Kenyan coast, near gold mines and khat production sites, along major highways, and in Nairobi and Kisumu. (29,37,38,45,50,51) Commercialized sexual exploitation increasingly occurs in private villas and vacation homes to avoid law enforcement detection in hotels, and there is research indicating increasing use of online recruitment tactics to lure children into commercialized sexual exploitation. (19,52) Children living in refugee camps, especially those who identify as LGBTQI+, are targeted for commercial sexual exploitation. (19,53) Moreover, traffickers increasingly exploit children with disabilities from Tanzania and other neighboring countries in forced begging. (19)

Reports indicate local elements of the Kenyan Defense Forces (KDF) maintain ongoing support of Jubaland Security Forces (JSF), a federal member state group in Somalia, that the UN and other organizations report as recruiting and using children in armed conflict. Such support has included training, provision of transportation (including armed vehicles), intelligence sharing, payment of salaries of JSF combatants, and allowing JSF regiments to garrison in northern Kenya, near the border of Somalia. (13,54-56) Local NGOs and community leaders in both northern Kenya and Jubaland have likewise observed recruitment by the JSF, sometimes even occurring on the Kenyan side of the border, with some KDF elements providing direct training to child recruits. (13,57) Research cannot identify any screening or mitigation procedures within the KDF to ensure that children recruited by the JSF and their respective units are not benefiting from Kenyan training and other forms of tactical support. Reports also indicate that criminals involved in terrorist networks lure and recruit Kenyan children to join non-state armed groups, primarily Al Shabaab, in Somalia, sometimes with fraudulent promises of lucrative employment. (52)

Despite the reopening of schools following the COVID-19 pandemic, some children have not returned and are in child labor. (15,58,59) A severe drought and food shortages have increased school absenteeism and child labor vulnerabilities, particularly in Kenya's northern counties. (14,15,60-62) Some children living in Kenya also lack birth registration and national identification documents, resulting in difficulties in accessing services and education. (14,63,64) Although Kenya law mandates free basic education and prohibits schools from charging tuition fees, the cost of unofficial fees levied by local schools, as well as the cost of books and uniforms, prevents some children from attending school, particularly at the secondary level. (16,37,63,65,66) Long travel distances, teacher and staff shortages, and sexual abuse within schools further contribute to children in Kenya dropping out of school and becoming vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. (67-69) Furthermore, children seeking asylum or of refugee status are often restricted to living in designated areas, such as the Kakuma and Dadaab refugee camps, where there are limited schools and existing facilities lack sufficient teachers, textbooks, electricity, and latrines. Children who are refugees are particularly vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking. (43,50,70,71)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Kenya has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Kenya's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the gap between the compulsory education age and the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Sections 2, 52, and 56 of the Employment Act; Sections 12 and 16 of the Employment (General) Rules; Section 10.4 of the Children Act; Sections 18.1 and 18.2 of the Children Act of 2022 (66,72-74)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Sections 2, 53.1, and 64 of the Employment Act; Sections 2 and 10.1 of the Children Act; Sections 2 and 18 of the Children Act of 2022 (66,72,74)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Sections 2 and 52 of the Employment Act; Section 12 and the Fourth Schedule of the Employment (General) Rules (72,73)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 30 of the Constitution; Sections 2, 4, and 53.1 of the Employment Act; Sections 174 and 254–266 of the Penal Code; Sections 2, 3, and 4 of the Counter-Trafficking in Persons Act; Section 13.1 of the Children Act; Section 18.3 of the Children Act of 2022 (66,72,74-77)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Sections 2 and 3 of the Counter-Trafficking in Persons Act; Sections 2 and 13 of the Sexual Offenses Act; Section 13.1 of the Children Act; Sections 2, 4, and 53.1 of the Employment Act; Sections 174 and 254–265 of the Penal Code (66,72,76-78)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Sections 2 and 13–16 of the Sexual Offenses Act; Sections 2 and 53.1 of the Employment Act; Sections 2 and 15 of the Children Act; Sections 2 and 22 of the Children's Act of 2022 (66,72,74,78)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Sections 2 and 53.1 of the Employment Act; Sections 2 and 16 of the Children Act; Section 24.1(b) of the Children Act of 2022 (66,72)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Sections 2 and 10.2 of the Children Act; Sections 6, 242, and 243 (1) of the Kenya Defense Forces Act (66,79)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*		Section 243 (1) of the Kenya Defense Forces Act (79)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Section 2, 3, and 10 of the Counter-Trafficking in Persons Act; Sections 19 and 246 of the Children Act of 2022 (74,77)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	18	Sections 2, 28, and 30 of the Basic Education Act; Section 2 and 13 of the Children Act of 2022 (63,74)
Free Public Education	No		Section 7.2 of the Children Act; Sections 28–29 and 32 of the Basic Education Act; Article 53(b) of the Constitution; Section 13 of Children Act of 2022 (63,66,75)

* Country has no conscription (79)

Children ages 13 to 16 are only permitted to perform light work. However, Kenya's laws do not meet international standards because they do not limit the hours for light work, except for agricultural and horticultural work. (73) As the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (63,72,73,80) Moreover, although the Basic Education Act establishes free basic education and stipulates that children should not be denied admission to school on account of not paying fees, the law does not meet international standards because it permits schools to levy tuition for children who reside in Kenya but do not have Kenyan citizenship. (63)

In 2022, the government enacted the Children Act of 2022. (74) The law directs the Cabinet Secretary of Labor to enact regulations prescribing the types and conditions of work that children aged 13 to 15 and 15 to 17 can undertake, and includes specific protections for children from online recruitment and use in commercial sex and production of pornography. (74) The law also directs the state to establish mechanisms to facilitate the protection, rehabilitation, care, recovery, and reintegration of children who may have been recruited or affected by armed conflict, social strife, or natural disasters. (74) Kenya's legal framework, however, does not fully meet international standards for the protection of children from armed conflict, because the Counter-Trafficking in Persons Act does not criminalize recruitment of children in the absence of force or fraud. (77) Although the Children Act of 2022 addresses this gap by prohibiting the use of children by armed groups both within Kenya and across the border, the penalty of imprisonment not to exceed 12 months is not commensurate with crimes of similar gravity. (74)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of child labor laws.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor and Social Protection (MLSP)	Conducts labor inspections and enforces labor laws, including those related to child labor. (47) Directs activities to promote awareness and withdraw children from child labor through its Child Labor Division. (12,47,81) Following the 2022 elections, the Ministry was reorganized to include the State Department for Labor and Skills Development (SDLSD), which includes the Child Labor Division, and the State Department for Social Protection and Senior Citizens' Affairs (SDSPSCA), which is responsible for general child protection issues through its Department of Children Services. (14) The Department of Children Services maintains a Child Protection Information Management System that collects, aggregates, and reports on child protection data, including child labor violations, to assist child protection officials to track and report on child protection activities. (14,67) In 2022, approximately 166 cases of child labor were reported in the Child Protection Information Management System. Research, however, indicates there are gaps in coordination in information sharing and case management between the SDLSD and the SDSPSCA, and thus it is not clear whether these cases derived from labor inspections or other social protection interventions. (14,82) In March 2023, the Department of Children Services conducted a training on the Child Protection Information Management System to newly recruited child protection officers. (83)
National Police Service	Investigates and enforces laws related to the worst forms of child labor, in coordination with MLSP and the Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions. (47) Includes the Anti-Human Trafficking and Child Protection Unit, which carries out investigations related to commercial sexual exploitation of children, child trafficking, and other worst forms of child labor. (43,67,84,85)
Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions	Enforces laws through the prosecution of criminal offenses, including labor-related offenses. The Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions directs the National Police Service to investigate cases. (47) Research indicates magistrates lacked specialized knowledge in children's laws, policies, and rights that relate to the worst forms of child labor, including the Sexual Offenses Act and the Children Act. (84) In response to these challenges, the National Commission on Administration of Justice held trainings for court users, including trainings in Nairobi and Kiambu counties held in May 2022. In addition, ILO trained four investigators on the new Children Act in December 2022. (14)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Kenya took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the SDLSD that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient financial resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown (12)	Unknown (14)
Number of Labor Inspectors	130 (86)	130 (14)

Research indicates that Kenya, although significantly increasing the number of worksite inspections, does not have adequate number of labor inspectors, and a lack of material resources, including facilities and transportation, likely hinders their capacity to enforce child labor laws and other labor standards, including in the agricultural sector. (14,90-92) Labor inspectors, moreover, are often tasked with mediating individual and collective labor disputes, which come at the expense of carrying out inspection visits. (93)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Kenya took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including a lack of training.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Unknown (12)	Yes (62)
Number of Investigations	38 (94)	Unknown (14)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	22 (94)	Unknown (14)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (12)	2 (95)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (94,96)	Yes (95)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (12)	Yes (14)

The government did not provide comprehensive statistics on its criminal law enforcement efforts related to the worst forms of child labor in 2022, but it reported at least two new convictions related to child trafficking, sentencing both convicted individuals. (95) The Kenyan Police also conducted an investigation in response to a media report highlighting human trafficking of Tanzanian children with physical disabilities, resulting in the removal of two children from forced begging. (95) However, a Kenyan appeals court overturned a previously reported conviction related to commercial sexual exploitation, in which some of the exploited individuals were children, for unspecified reasons. (95)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including inefficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Steering Committee on Child Labor	Oversees efforts to prevent and eliminate child labor and comprises government agencies, private employers, and workers' organizations. Chaired by the Principal Secretary for Labor, with coordination duties performed by the Child Labor Division of the SDLS. (12) The technical team of the National Steering Committee on Child Labor engaged in planning meetings during the reporting period but produced no concrete outcomes. (86) Children Area Advisory Councils complement the National Steering Committee by steering child labor prevention efforts at the county level. (14,62) In 2022, ILO worked with county-level Children Area Advisory Councils to conduct trainings and integrate child labor prevention strategies into their work, including by convening workshops in Bungoma, Nairobi, and Kajiado counties during the reporting period. (62)

Research indicates that a lack of sufficient funding likely inhibits the National Steering Committee on Child Labor and other coordinating bodies from meeting and undertaking activities according to their mandates. (47)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Policy on the Elimination of Child Labor	Proposes strategies to prevent and eliminate child labor, including its worst forms, while providing support and rehabilitation for children removed from child labor. Includes measures to establish child labor-free zones, increase financial support for labor law enforcement, raise awareness, improve accessibility to education and social protection programs, and integrate child labor into corporate responsibility programs. (97)
National Plan of Action for Children in Kenya (2015–2022)	Provided an operational framework for coordinating, planning, implementing, and monitoring programs for children's welfare. Also outlined programs, awareness-raising activities, and research, with the goal of reducing child labor and other child exploitation cases by 50 percent by 2022. (98-100)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (67,100-104)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement key policies related to child labor in Kenya during the reporting period. (14) Insufficient funding for public institutions has led to delays in both the development of new policies and the implementation of existing policies to eliminate the worst forms of child labor in Kenya. (100)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
National Safety Net Program (2013–2026) †	Government-funded, social safety net program, with support from the World Bank. (67) During the reporting period, the National Safety Net Program supported 278,945 households with orphans and vulnerable children. (89) In addition, the government allocated approximately $11 million (1.1 billion Kenyan shillings) to respond to the drought and food crises facing Kenya's northern counties, reaching 58,000 families as of August 2022. (105) These actions likely partially mitigated vulnerabilities of climate shocks and extreme poverty that contribute to child labor in Kenya.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (67, 106)

In September 2022, the Ministry of Labor and Social Protection (MLSP) and the ILO convened a national symposium on social protection as a means of addressing child labor and forced labor, responding to key recommendations from the 5th Global Conference on the Elimination of Child Labor. The symposium focused on four areas—enhancement of access to social security and social protection, universal access to education, ending child labor in agriculture, and financing of intersectional interventions around child labor—resulting in strategies to catalyze policy and programming development by government and non-state actors and elevate the importance of universal social protection as a means of responding to child labor in Kenya. (14,62) The workshop resulted in a workplan for the development of policy and implementation frameworks to strengthen social protection mechanisms, including interventions targeting elimination of child labor, which will be developed by the MLSP in collaboration with civil society stakeholders. (62) However, although Kenya has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, especially the commercial sexual exploitation of children.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Kenya (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Accede to the CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography.	2013 – 2022
	Broaden light work regulations to limit the number of hours for all light work activities, including for work outside of agriculture or horticulture.	2019 – 2022
	Raise the minimum age of work from 16 to 18 to align with the compulsory education age and ensure that children up to the compulsory education age are covered by the light work provisions.	2020 – 2022
	Ensure that laws providing free basic education cover all children in Kenya, including non-citizens.	2020 – 2022
	Increase penalties for all recruitment of children by non-state armed groups, whether by force or not, to be commensurate with crimes of similar gravity, such as forcible recruitment for armed conflict	2022
Enforcement	Publish information about labor law enforcement efforts, including the funding of the labor inspectorate, the number of child labor violations, and the number of child labor violations in which penalties were imposed and collected.	2009 – 2022

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Increase the number of labor inspectors from 130 to 1,314 to ensure adequate coverage all sectors, including agriculture, while reducing labor arbitration responsibilities that limit time dedicated for onsite labor inspections.	2015 – 2022
	Ensure that the Ministry of Labor has sufficient material resources, including transportation and offices, to address labor violations in all sectors, including agriculture.	2017 – 2022
	Publish information about criminal law enforcement efforts related to the worst forms of child labor, including the number of investigations and prosecutions initiated.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that magistrates handling child protection cases receive training on policies, laws, and procedures, including the Sexual Offenses Act and the Children Act.	2019 – 2022
Coordination	Strengthen coordination between the Child Labor Unit and the Department of Children Services, including sharing of child protection data and referral of child laborers for rehabilitation services, to better facilitate management and resolution of child labor cases.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that all coordinating bodies, including the National Steering Committee on Child Labor, receive sufficient funding to fully carry out their intended mandates of overseeing efforts to eliminate child labor across government agencies, civil society organizations, and employer organizations.	2016 – 2022
Government Policies	Ensure that activities are undertaken to implement key policies related to child labor and publish results from activities implemented during the reporting period, including implementation of outlined strategies to increase child labor awareness, establish child labor free zones, and improve accessibility to education and social protection programs.	2017 – 2022
	Provide sufficient fiscal resources for public institutions mandated to develop and implement child labor policies, including the State Department for Labor and its National Steering Committee on Child Labor, as well as the State Department for Social Protection.	2021 – 2022
Social Programs	Put in place measures to strengthen the monitoring and prevention of child recruitment into armed conflict, including by armed groups receiving financial, training, transportation, and other forms of in-kind support from Kenyan Defense Forces, and develop accountability mechanisms to hold perpetrators of the worst forms of child labor, including child soldiering, accountable.	2020 – 2022
	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education accessible for all children, including girls and refugee children, by improving access to birth registration documents, increasing the number of schools, and improving existing educational facilities in refugee camps.	2010 – 2022
	Improve access to education by increasing the number of schools and teachers, addressing sexual abuse in schools, and eliminating or defraying the cost of school fees, books, and uniforms.	2010 – 2022
	Expand existing programs to address the scope of the child labor problem, including establishing interventions to support children engaged in commercial sexual exploitation.	2009 – 2022

In 2022, Kiribati made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. In 2022, the Ministry of Women, Youth, Sports, and Social Affairs launched a child protection case management and referral system called SafeNet, which allows personnel from the government, churches, and NGOs to share information and assist child victims, including those found in exploitive situations. Although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Kiribati are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. Existing laws do not identify hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children. The law also does not specify the conditions under which light work can be undertaken. In addition, the government has not adopted a national policy to address the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Kiribati. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	14.6 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	95.8
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	29.7
Primary Completion Rate (%)		93.4

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2020, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2023. (1)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 6 (MICS 6), 2018–2019. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Industry	Construction and cargo loading (3)
Services	Street work, including vending and working in kava bars (4,5)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, including on foreign fishing vessels (3,6,7)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)-(c) of ILO C. 182.

In 2022, children were found street vending, selling food at night, and working in kava bars. They worked late hours and were exposed to extreme weather and other physical safety hazards. (5) A survey conducted in 2018 and 2019 found that 7 percent of children (approximately 357 individuals) worked in economic activities for more than the legally permitted number of hours. Moreover, 9 percent of children (approximately 463 individuals) were similarly involved in household chores at or above the age-specific thresholds, and 15 percent of children (approximately 750 individuals) were engaged in hazardous activities. (8)

Underage girls have been subjected to commercial sexual exploitation by crew members from foreign vessels. (3,6) However, there have been no reports of this occurring in the last 2 years as COVID-19 pandemic-related regulations have restricted entry of vessels into Kiribati. (4,5)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Kiribati has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Kiribati's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the identification of hazardous occupations or activities prohibited for children.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Section 115 of the Employment and Industrial Relations Code (9)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Section 117 of the Employment and Industrial Relations Code (9)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Sections 244 and 249 of the Penal Code; Sections 118(1)(a, c, d) and 122 of the Employment and Industrial Relations Code (9,10)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Sections 2, 43, and 44 of the Measures to Combat Terrorism and Transnational Organized Crime Act; Section 118(1)(b) of the Employment and Industrial Relations Code (9,11)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Sections 136, 141, and 142 of the Penal Code; Sections 118(1)(f), 118(1)(g), and 118(2) of the Employment and Industrial Relations Code (9,10)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Section 142 of the Penal Code; Sections 118(1)(h) and 118(1)(i) of the Employment and Industrial Relations Code (9,10)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	N/A†
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A†
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Sections 118(1)(e) of the Employment and Industrial Relations Code (9)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Section 7 of the Education Act (12)
Free Public Education	Yes		Section 11 of the Education Act (12)

† Country has no standing military (13)

The government has not identified by national law or regulations the types of hazardous work prohibited for children. Also, under Article 116 of the Employment and Industrial Relations Code, the laws do not specify the activities and hours of work per week that are acceptable for children engaged in light work, or the conditions under which light work can be undertaken. (9) In addition, as the minimum age for work of 14 is lower than the compulsory education age of 15, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (9,12)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Employment and Human Resources	Enforces labor laws, including those related to child labor. (4)
Kiribati Police Services	Enforce criminal laws related to forced child labor, child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and the use of children in illicit activities. (5) Investigate cases of human trafficking and sexual exploitation of children through a special Domestic Violence and Sexual Offenses Unit. (14)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Kiribati took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Employment and Human Resources that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including a lack of training for labor inspectors.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$17,300 (4)	Unknown (5)
Number of Labor Inspectors	5 (4)	5 (5)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	Yes (9)	Yes (5)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	No (4)	No (5)

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (4)	Yes (5)

During the reporting period, virtual trainings for labor inspectors were conducted with the ILO, although trainings were not focused on child labor issues. (5) Although the number of labor inspectors meets the ILO's technical advice, the government's ability to inspect and report on child labor issues was affected by geographical distances, isolation, sparse population, and Internet connectivity challenges. (3) In addition, research indicates that labor inspections have not been extended to informal and high-risk sectors with evidence of child labor, including its worst forms, such as fishing vessels, kava bars, domestic work, and nightclubs. (15) Resource and capacity constraints restrict the government's services and activities related to labor law enforcement, including training for labor inspectors. (4)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether criminal law enforcement agencies in Kiribati took actions to address child labor (Table 7).

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	No (4)	No (5)
Number of Investigations	0 (4)	0 (5)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	0 (4)	0 (5)
Number of Convictions	0 (4)	0 (5)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	0 (4)	0 (5)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (4)	Yes (5)

Financial resource constraints hampered the government's ability to provide trainings for criminal investigators. (4)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Child Protection Working Group	A government interagency group coordinated by the Ministry of Women, Youth, Sports, and Social Affairs. (5) Oversees the implementation of the Child, Young People and Family Welfare Act. (3) The Child Protection Working Group remained active during the reporting period. (16)

In November 2022, the government launched the Child Protection Referral Pathway. (16-18) In December, the Ministry of Women, Youth, Sport, and Social Affairs held a week-long training on child protection for social welfare officers and counselors. The new Child Protection Referral Pathway was a main topic of this training. (19) In addition, the government continued to use and strengthen SafeNet, a child protection case management and referral system. (5, 16, 20)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including coverage of all worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
Children, Young People, and Families Welfare System Policy	Focuses on strengthening the welfare system, in part by implementing services to prevent the abuse, violence, neglect, and exploitation of children and young people, including in hazardous labor. (21) During the reporting period, the government remained active in strengthening child protection activities and continued implementing this policy. (5)
United Nations Pacific Strategy (2018–2022)	Addressed, developed, and implemented strategic economic development priorities in the South Pacific, including eliminating child labor and the worst forms of child labor. This multi-national strategic framework program covered 14 South Pacific nations. (22,23) Activities were conducted under the UNICEF Pacific Multi-Country Child Protection Program (2018–2022). (22,23) Research was unable to determine whether activities took place in Kiribati in 2022.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (3, 6, 15)

Research found no evidence of a policy that focuses specifically on addressing the worst forms of child labor. (6)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy to address child labor in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
UNICEF Pacific Multi-Country Child Protection Program (2018–2022)	Prioritized children's rights including the elimination of the worst forms of child labor. This was a multi-country program in 14 Pacific Island countries aligned with the UN Pacific Strategy (2018–2022). (23,24) Research was unable to determine whether activities took place in Kiribati in 2022.
Hotlines†	Child Protection Officer-, Ministry of Women, Youth, Sports, and Social Affairs- and police-supported 24-hour hotlines for children to report violations, request information, or obtain access to services. Hotlines remained active in 2022. (5,16)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of Kiribati.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (4,25)

Foreign development partners supported funding for counseling and shelter services for vulnerable women and children experiencing domestic violence and exploitation. The geographical distance, isolation, and sparsely populated nature of Kiribati's islands challenges the government's ability to provide public services. (5) Although the government has implemented programs to assist children in exploitative and abusive situations, research found no evidence that the government has carried out programs specifically designed to assist children who are engaged in construction and street vending work, or young girls subjected to commercial sexual exploitation with crew members from foreign fishing vessels. (5)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Kiribati (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum age for work from 14 to 15 to align with the compulsory education age.	2018 – 2022
	Ensure that the law specifies the activities and number of hours of work per week that are acceptable for children engaged in light work, and the conditions under which children can engage in light work.	2015 – 2022
	Determine by national law or regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited for children, after consultation with employers' and workers' organizations.	2011 – 2022
Enforcement	Institutionalize training on child labor laws for labor inspectors and criminal investigators and allocate funding for this training.	2017 – 2022
	Ensure that labor inspectors are inspecting informal and high-risk sectors where there is evidence of child labor violations, including its worst forms.	2021 – 2022
	Publish labor law enforcement information, including labor inspectorate funding and the number of labor inspections conducted at the worksite.	2022
Government Policies	Adopt a policy that addresses the worst forms of child labor.	2014 – 2022
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor in all sectors to inform policies and programs.	2017 – 2022
	Implement social programs to address all relevant forms of child labor, including in construction and street vending.	2017 – 2022

In 2022, Kosovo made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government adopted the Law on Crime Victim Compensation, which expands the existing victims' compensation program and assists child victims of human trafficking and forced labor. Additionally, it adopted the Strategy for Advancement of the Rights of Roma and Ashkali Communities 2022–2024 that includes a focus on providing inclusive education for children from these communities. The government also worked with Save the Children to develop manuals for social services providers, which resulted in improved communications between providers when assisting vulnerable children. However, children in Kosovo are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in street work, including begging and loading and transporting goods. The Labor Inspectorate and Centers for Social Work face financial and human resource constraints, which may impede their ability to adequately address child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Kosovo. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	9.0 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	95.6
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	11.7
Primary Completion Rate (%)		Unavailable

Primary completion rate was unavailable from UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2023. (1)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 6 (MICS 6), 2019–2020. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including operating agricultural machinery† (3-6)
	Forestry, including operating machinery and transporting wood (4,7)
Industry	Mining, including underground extraction of coal by hand† (4-6)
	Construction and manufacturing, including operation of tools in hazardous worksites† (4,6,7)
Services	Street work,† including vending small items,† manual transport of goods,† and begging† (4-7)
	Garbage scavenging at dumpsites† (5,6,8,9)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced begging (3,5,6,10,11)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,5-7,10)
	Use in illicit activities, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (5,6,12)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Kosovo is a source and destination country for child trafficking, especially of girls. (4,7,13) Children are also sometimes forced to work in massage parlors by organized criminal groups. (13-15) In addition, Kosovan children and children from neighboring countries, especially Albania, are forced into street work, including begging, primarily in Prizren and Pristina. Most of these children come from the Roma, Ashkali, and Balkan Egyptian minority ethnic groups. (7,10,11,13-21) Economically vulnerable Kosovan children also sometimes work in construction and agriculture to support their families. (7,13,22,23)

Children from minority ethnic communities, especially girls, sometimes experience difficulty accessing education, in part due to a lack of native-language educational materials and insufficient subsidized transportation for rural children. In addition, according to national standards on education, children should not be excluded from schooling due to a lack of birth documentation, but some undocumented child laborers encountered challenges to school enrollment. (13) Children who do not attend school are vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. (24)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Kosovo holds a unique status vis-à-vis UN recognition that complicates its ratification of international agreements (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	N/A
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A
 UN CRC	N/A
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	N/A
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	N/A
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	N/A

Article 22 of Kosovo's Constitution incorporates the UN CRC into its national legal framework. (30) Despite Kosovo's unique status, the country worked with the UN through the Sustainable Development Cooperation Framework (2021–2025), which was implemented by the UN Kosovo Team and focused on promoting international standards and human rights. (31)

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 7 of the Law on Labor (30)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 20, 23, 26, 27, and 45 of the Law on Labor (30)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Administrative Instruction No. 05/2013; Article 45 of the Law on Labor; Administrative Instruction No. 2008 (30-32)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 1 and 6 of the Law on Labor; Articles 163 and 165 of the Criminal Code; Articles 1 and 5 of the Law on the Prevention and Elimination of Human Trafficking and Protection of the Victims of Trafficking (27,30,31)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 165 and 166 of the Criminal Code; Law on the Prevention and Elimination of Human Trafficking and Protection of the Victims of Trafficking; Articles 21 and 22 of Administrative Instruction No. 10/2017 (33-35)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 232 and 234 of the Criminal Code; Articles 47 and 62 of the Law on Child Protection (34,36)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 267-273 of the Criminal Code; Article 43 of the Law on Child Protection (36,38)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 6 of the Law on the Kosovo Security Force (37)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 149 of the Criminal Code; Articles 38 and 39 of the Law on Child Protection (36,38)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15‡	Article 9 of the Law on Pre-University Education (39)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 47 of the Constitution of the Republic of Kosovo; Article 9 of the Law on Pre-University Education (25,35)

* Country has no conscription (40)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (39)

During the reporting period, the Law on Crime Victim Compensation was adopted to ensure coverage for child victims of multiple categories of abuse. In addition, multiple agencies throughout the government adopted Administrative Instructions that clarified the roles and operations of government entities involved in the preservation of children's rights. (13)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the framework of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Labor Inspectorate	Operates under the Ministry of Finance, Labor, and Transfers (MFLT). Conducts inspections to enforce child labor laws, removes children engaged in hazardous work, and refers children engaged in hazardous work to regional Centers for Social Work. (13)
Kosovo Police (KP)	Enforce criminal laws on forced child labor and commercial sexual exploitation of children. Through the Anti-Trafficking Directorate, enforce laws on child trafficking. (3,4,6) Operate under the Ministry of Internal Affairs. (5)
Ministry of Justice (MOJ)	Enforces criminal laws on forced child labor, child trafficking, and commercial sexual exploitation of children through special anti-human trafficking coordinators and mechanisms. (10)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Kosovo took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Finance, Labor, and Transfers that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient human resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$920,700 (4)	$874,798 (46)
Number of Labor Inspectors	37 (45)	35 (46)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	Yes (30)	Yes (46)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	N/A	Yes (46)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksite	10,162 (45)	5,457 (46)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor (Cont.)

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	0 (45)	1 (16)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	N/A	1 (16)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	N/A	1 (16)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (45)	Yes (16)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (45)	Yes (16)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (30)	Yes (35)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (45)	Yes (16)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (4)	Yes (16)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (4)	Yes (16)

The Labor Inspectorate's mandate allows it to investigate employment contracts for working children between ages 15 and 18 who have entered into an employment contract for a limited period. When child labor is discovered, the Labor Inspectorate issues the penalty and works with the Kosovo Police (KP) to remove the child from child labor. (5,27-29) In addition, the Labor Inspectorate coordinates inspections with CSWs for suspected abuse of children under age 15. According to NGO and media reports, the number of cases reported does not fully reflect the actual number of child labor cases due to the high level of labor market informality. (6,7,38) Labor inspectors also have the authority to inspect private farms in Kosovo; however, due to a lack of human resource capacity to adequately cover all sectors and regions, the Centers for Social Work (CSWs), which also face human resource and budgetary constraints, typically conduct these inspections. (5,24,39,40)

There is limited inter-ministerial communication between the Ministry of Internal Affairs and other government entities on issues concerning policymaking and enforcement related to child labor. (4,5,13,41) Multiple entities have reported that there is insufficient institutional capacity at the central and municipal levels and a need to improve funding and human resources for the CSWs. This lack of institutional commitment compromised the ability of CSWs to address cases of child labor in a competent and adequate manner. (5,12,13,42,43)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Kosovo took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including a lack of training for criminal investigators on the identification of forced begging cases.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	No (5)	Yes (16)
Number of Investigations	124 (4)	44 (16)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	67 (4)	33 (16)
Number of Convictions	7 (4)	14 (16)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown	Unknown
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (4)	Yes (16)

During the reporting period, criminal law enforcement authorities attended a number of relevant trainings, including several workshops on the Law on Child Protection, roundtables on policies affecting asylum-seeking, refugee, and immigrant children, and a study visit to a children's shelter. (13) However, authorities did not consistently identify cases of forced begging, which are instead typically classified as parental neglect or abuse. (6,14,44)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Committee for Prevention and Elimination of Hazardous Forms of Child Labor	Coordinates government policies to combat child labor. Oversees and provides policy guidance for activities to prevent and eliminate child labor. (6) Chaired by the Minister of Finance, Labor, and Transfers. (5) Comprises representatives of government agencies, KP, trade unions, and an NGO. (3) Research was unable to determine whether the committee was active during the reporting period.

Since 2013, the government has been collecting and processing data on labor violations, which it then makes available to all ministries and law enforcement bodies. (3)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
Children's Rights Action Plan (2021–2025)	Aims to improve social, economic, and legislative rights and the protection of children through developing institutions at the local and national levels. (44,45) Includes the accompanying Strategy on the Rights of the Child (2019–2023). (49) The policy was renewed and active during the reporting period. (13)
Strategy on the Rights of the Child (2019–2023)	Calls for a comprehensive framework of policies for the protection of children's rights, including the prevention, protection, and reintegration of children involved in hazardous child labor practices such as street work and underground ore extraction. (6) Active during the reporting period. (13)
Strategy for the Inclusion of Roma and Ashkali Communities (2022–2024)	Focuses on employment, social issues, healthcare, and housing for the Ashkali and Roma communities. Aims to strengthen individuals' rights and full integration into society. (46) Includes targeted components that promote inclusive education for children from the Ashkali and Roma communities. The policy was renewed and active during the reporting period. (13,46)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, which cover the main sectors where child labor has been identified in the country (Table 10).

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Hope and Homes for Children†	Government-funded NGO shelter. Accommodates child victims of abuse and human trafficking. (40) Active during the reporting period. (16)
UN Kosovo/UNICEF Program (2021–2025)	Aims to increase availability of early childhood education opportunities, inclusion of children with disabilities, and justice for children through data generation and evidence-based policymaking. (26,47) Active during the reporting period. (13)
The Helpline‡	Government-operated hotline for victims of domestic violence and human trafficking. (14) Active during the reporting period. (13)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of the Republic of Kosovo.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (5,48,49)

Social services professionals in Kosovo estimate that approximately 4,300 children receive assistance per year. (50) During the reporting period, the Ministry of Justice (MOJ) notified civil society organizations that CSWs and domestic violence shelters would become the responsibility of the MOJ beginning in early 2023. (13) In addition, the government collaborated with Save the Children to develop manuals for social services case management. The collaboration also resulted in the creation of a mutual assistance protocol that allows both formal and informal services providers to more efficiently coordinate outreach and follow-up activities when assisting children who are more at-risk of falling outside of the system (e.g., those living in rural and remote areas). (13,51)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Kosovo (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Ensure that Centers for Social Work have sufficient capacity, funding, human resources, and training to address the specific needs of child labor victims.	2018 – 2022
	Ensure that the Kosovo Police are trained to identify and properly classify cases of forced begging.	2020 – 2022
	Publish information on the number of child labor violations for which penalties were imposed.	2022
	Ensure that labor inspections are conducted in the informal sector, including in markets.	2022
Coordination	Ensure that inter-ministerial communication between the Ministry of Internal Affairs and other government entities on issues concerning policymaking and enforcement related to child labor is improved.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that the Committee on the Prevention and Elimination of Hazardous Forms of Child Labor is fully funded and active and able to carry out its mandate to coordinate government policies to combat child labor.	2022
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor in Kosovo to inform policies and programs.	2017 – 2022
	Eliminate barriers and make education accessible for all children, including by making additional efforts to register Ashkali, Balkan Egyptian, and Roma children at birth and ensuring the availability of native-language teaching materials and subsidized transportation.	2011 – 2022

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW AND PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2022, the Kyrgyz Republic made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Ministry of Internal Affairs continued to conduct raids of businesses at high risk for labor law violations, including raids to identify vulnerable children and child labor. The Criminal Code was also amended to strengthen penalties for sexual abuse of children and involving children in illicit activities. In addition, the government funded the construction and staffing of 31 new schools to improve educational access. However, despite new initiatives to address child labor, Kyrgyz Republic is assessed as having made only minimal advancement because it continued a law and practice that delays advancement to eliminate child labor. A new general moratorium on labor inspections was put into place from January 1 through December 31, 2023. The lack of unannounced inspections may leave potential violations of child labor laws and other labor abuses undetected in workplaces. Children in the Kyrgyz Republic are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in agriculture. Minimum age protections are not extended to children engaged in non-contractual employment, and research indicated that labor law enforcement efforts are not targeted to all sectors in which children are vulnerable to child labor, especially agriculture. In addition, the scope of social programs to address child labor is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in the Kyrgyz Republic. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	34.0 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	94.7
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	38.4
Primary Completion Rate (%)		102.4

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2021, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2022. (1)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization’s analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 6 (MICS6), 2018. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Cultivating or harvesting cotton, walnuts, tobacco,† rice, potatoes, beans, dried fruits, and onions (3-12)
	Herding cattle (3,13,14)
Industry	Coal mining† (3,5,15)
	Brickmaking (3,11,15)
	Construction (3-6,11)
	Manufacturing (3)
Services	Working in bazaars and markets, including portering, shining shoes, and selling items, including food and beverages (3,7,10)
	Washing and repairing cars (3,6,11)
	Working in restaurants and cafes (3,6,7)
	Street work, including begging and collecting and sorting plastics (3,9,10)
	Domestic work, including child care (16)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW AND PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of trafficking (3,11,17-19)
	Use in illicit activities, including trafficking drugs, as a result of human trafficking (20)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Child labor is most prevalent in Naryn province and hazardous child labor is most prevalent in Osh province. (5) According to UNICEF, an estimated 650,000 to 750,000 citizens of the Kyrgyz Republic work abroad, and an additional 1 million are internal migrants. Children of migrants, particularly girls, are especially vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation and are frequently targeted by traffickers. (7,21) Children from the Kyrgyz Republic who travel to Kazakhstan to work, either with their parents or unaccompanied, cannot attend school due to a lack of documentation. These children engage in child labor in Kazakhstan in construction, farming, herding, or selling products in markets; some fall victim to forced child labor. (16,22) Within the Kyrgyz Republic, children of labor migrants have been identified engaging in child labor in markets. (23)

In the Kyrgyz Republic, school registration documentation requirements continue to prevent some children from enrolling in schools, particularly children whose parents are labor migrants. (3,4) Some children who have either migrated to the Kyrgyz Republic with their parents or were left behind when their parents migrated for work to other countries or other areas of the Kyrgyz Republic cannot access their birth certificates or guardianship documents, which are required for school enrollment. (8,21) Children living in rural areas and those with disabilities also have difficulty accessing education. (3) In rare cases, some parents prevent children from attending school for religious reasons, or require older children to miss school to care for their younger siblings. (3,4,8,24) However, during the reporting period the government made efforts to expand access to education by building 31 new schools and increasing staffing. (3)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

The Kyrgyz Republic has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in the Kyrgyz Republic’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including minimum age protections that do not extend to children working in the informal sector.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW AND PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	16	Articles 6 and 18 of the Labor Code (25)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 294 and 446 of the Labor Code; Article 72 of the Code on Administrative Liability; Article 15 of the Code on Children (25-27)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 294 of the Labor Code; Decree 565 on the List of Works Prohibited for Persons Under Age 18 (25,28)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 10 and 446 of the Labor Code; Article 15.2 of the Code on Children; Article 1 of the Law on Preventing and Combating Human Trafficking; Articles 166 and 170 of the Criminal Code (25,26,29,30)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 1 of the Law on Preventing and Combating Human Trafficking; Articles 166 and 167 of the Criminal Code (29,30)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 166–168 of the Criminal Code; Articles 5 and 15 of the Code on Children (26,29)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 19, 180, 181, 282, and 283 of the Criminal Code; Articles 5 and 15 of the Code on Children (26,29)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 24.1 of the Law on Military Service (31)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Articles 17.1 and 22.1 of the Law on Military Service; Article 392 of the Criminal Code (29,31)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Articles 392 and 395 of the Criminal Code (29)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	17‡	Article 16 of the Law on Education (32)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 16 of the Law on Education (32)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (32)

In August 2022, the Criminal Code was amended to include protections for children from sexual abuse and involvement in criminal activity. The amendments also increased fines for sexual and moral offenses against children and prison terms to include the possibility of life in prison. (3) Despite these efforts, the labor law governing the minimum age for work is not in compliance with international standards because it does not apply to informal work. According to Article 6 of the Labor Code, protections to children granted in the Labor Code, such as the minimum age for employment, are not extended to children engaged in non-contractual employment. (25) In addition, as the minimum age for work stated in the Labor Code is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (32,33)

Article 18 of the Labor Code prohibits children age 14 and under from working during school hours, and requires that parents give written permission for children age 14 to work. Children age 15 may work only for employers who have received permission from a worker's organization or a government regulatory body. (25) Articles 91 and 95 of the Labor Code also restrict the number of hours that children under age 16 may engage in light work. Children ages 14 and 15 may not work more than 24 hours per week, and daily shifts may not exceed 5 hours during school breaks or 2.5 hours when school is in session. (25) Despite these protections, the Kyrgyz Republic does not have a list of activities in which light work may be permitted. (34) Additionally, although Article 166 of the Criminal Code criminalizes the involvement of children in prostitution, no law clearly criminalizes the users (clients) of prostitution involving children. In addition, prohibitions under Article 167 against offering children for prostitution do not cover children ages 16 and 17. (29,35)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, lack of authorization to conduct unannounced inspections in the Kyrgyz Republic may impede the enforcement of child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor, Social Security, and Migration (MLSSM)	Monitors worksites and refers child laborers to social services. (3) Coordinates with the Inspectorate for Minors' Affairs in the Ministry of Internal Affairs (MOIA), the Prosecutor General's Office, and regional State District Administration authorities to enforce child labor laws. (4, 11, 15, 33) Identifies at-risk children, refers them for social services, and monitors their well-being, including the prevention of their involvement in child labor. Runs a hotline to which anyone can report child abuse and exploitation, including the worst forms of child labor, and refers cases for criminal prosecution, if appropriate. (3) In 2022, the MLSSM developed a revised Program for the Protection of Children for 2023-2026, which includes additional measures to prevent the involvement of children in the worst forms of child labor. The MLSSM also resumed labor inspections, intensified efforts to develop Child Protection Plans at the local level, and created a web-based platform which allows individuals and businesses to address labor law compliance issues electronically. (3) Operates a hotline through which children, parents, and legal guardians can report child abuse and exploitation, including the worst forms of child labor, and receive referrals for services. (36, 37)
Ministry of Internal Affairs (MOIA)	Enforces criminal laws related to child labor, including its worst forms. Conducts independent inspections and joint raids with MLSSM to identify violations, which can be referred to the Prosecutor General's Office for prosecutorial action. (3, 11)
Prosecutor General's Office	Implements and enforces state policies and laws related to child protection, including guaranteeing children's rights and enforcing laws prohibiting the worst forms of child labor by identifying and prosecuting offenders. (3, 13)

The government has also established a National Referral Mechanism, which sets procedures and policies for (a) identification of victims of human trafficking, (b) referrals for and provision of social services to victims, and (c) protection of victims' personal data. (38, 39)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in the Kyrgyz Republic took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, lack of authorization to conduct unannounced inspections in the Kyrgyz Republic may have impeded the enforcement of child labor laws.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW AND PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

A government moratorium on labor inspection of business enterprises expired on January 1, 2022, and routine labor inspections resumed. (3) However, in November 2022, the President issued a decree instructing the Cabinet of Ministers to pass a new general labor inspection moratorium for January 1, 2023 through December 31, 2023, which remains in effect. (43) These restrictions on unannounced inspections severely limit the State Inspectorate's ability to detect violations of labor laws, including those related to child labor. (44)

The Ministry of Labor, Social Security, and Migration (MLSSM) conducted 711 inspections during the reporting period, though it is unknown how many of these inspections took place on site. (3) The Ministry of Internal Affairs (MOIA) reports that is conducted an additional 176 unannounced inspections or investigations of child labor allegations, and 887 raids to identify working, neglected and homeless children. Labor inspectors also regularly participated in trainings, including a trafficking in persons simulation exercise and trainings on ILO standards. (3) Though the MOIA is authorized to conduct unannounced raids, in practice these investigations often require coordination across several government ministries and are frequently announced in advance. (3) Labor inspectors are also often reluctant to impose penalties or refer cases for criminal prosecution, instead preferring to recommend remediation of observed violations. Although the government notes 25 child labor violations were identified during the reporting period, no penalties were imposed for these offenses. (3) In addition, the government did not provide information regarding the budget of the labor inspectorate or the number of inspectors in 2022. However, research indicates that the State Labor Inspectorate employed fewer than 50 labor inspectors, and therefore, the Kyrgyz Republic does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (3,7,45-46) All labor inspectors are centrally dispatched from Bishkek and, due to a lack of both staffing and resources, seldom undertake efforts to detect child labor in rural areas, where children are especially vulnerable to child labor in manufacturing, crop cultivation, and cattle herding due to economic pressures and permissive social attitudes. (3,13)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in the Kyrgyz Republic took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including prosecution planning.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (4)	Unknown (3)
Number of Investigations	3† (4)	Unknown (3)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	3 (4)	Unknown (3)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (4)	Unknown (3)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (4)	Unknown (3)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (47)	Yes (3)

† Data are from January 1 to September 30, 2021.

The government did not provide comprehensive information on its 2022 criminal law enforcement efforts related to child labor for inclusion in this report. However, the government did report investigating six cases of enticing a child to engage in pornography and one case of child trafficking. (3,19) Non-governmental organizations report that child survivors of trafficking are often questioned by law enforcement without appropriate psychological support. (19) In addition, reports suggest that Kyrgyz police officers engage in misconduct, including allegations that police threaten and extort sex trafficking victims, including minors; reports also indicate that police accept bribes from alleged traffickers to drop cases. (20) Judicial officials have also been reported to be an obstacle to prosecution of human trafficking offenses, including those involving children, by prosecuting cases under lesser statutes, accepting bribes, or warning suspects prior to raids. (14)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Council for Women, Children, and Gender Equality	Coordinates government action to advance the rights of women and children. In 2022, proposed the creation of a Committee for the Protection of the Rights of Women and Children to be housed within the presidential administration. (3) Also met with members of parliament, state bodies, representatives of civil society, and human rights activists to discuss an action plan to advance the rights and opportunities of women and children for 2022–2024. (48)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
Program for the Support of Family and Protection of Children (2018–2028)	Includes action items on addressing child labor, including revising the hazardous work list for children, enhancing social services for vulnerable children and families, and creating an Action Plan on the Prevention and Elimination of Child Labor. (49) Research was unable to determine whether the Program was active during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Cash Transfer Program†	Government-funded cash transfer program for families living in difficult situations, including families with children engaged in child labor. (47) However, based on available information, the amount of assistance appears to be low, and some families face barriers to accessing these benefits. (50,51)
Ministry of Education and Science (MOES) National School Attendance Database‡	Unified online database maintained by MOES to monitor school enrollment and attendance. Based on these data, government ministries and local government officials can identify and assist children who may be vulnerable to child labor. (8,47)
Shelters for Human Trafficking Victims†	Includes two 24-hour shelters funded by the government and operated by NGOs that serve victims of violence of all ages, including child trafficking survivors. One center is located in Bishkek and the other is in Osh. (36) MOIA also operates two daytime children's shelters, also located in Bishkek and Osh. (36)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of the Kyrgyz Republic.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (52)

In July 2022, the Cabinet of Ministers approved a regulation on social assistance which provides low-income families with social assistance in the amount of $1,160 (100,000 Kyrgyz soms) per year through territorial subdivisions of the MLSSM. Although the Kyrgyz Republic has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, particularly in commercial sexual exploitation and in agriculture, including cultivating cotton. (3) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement social programs to address child labor in the Kyrgyz Republic during the reporting period.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW AND PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in the Kyrgyz Republic (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law's minimum age provisions apply to all children, including those working without an employment contract.	2014 – 2022
	Raise the minimum age for work from 16 to 17 to align with the compulsory education age.	2021 – 2022
	Criminally prohibit and penalize the use of a child for prostitution, including the users (clients) of prostitution involving children, and ensure that laws prohibiting the offering of children for prostitution cover all children under age 18.	2019 – 2022
	Ensure that the law's light work provisions specify the activities in which children may undertake light work.	2020 – 2022
Enforcement	Ensure that the labor inspectorate conducts unannounced, onsite labor inspections, and assesses penalties as appropriate.	2018 – 2022
	Publish complete information about the Ministry of Labor, Social Security, and Migration's efforts to enforce prohibitions on child labor, including information on the inspectorate's funding and the number of labor inspections conducted at worksites.	2011 – 2022
	Ensure that child labor violations identified by criminal enforcement agencies are appropriately referred for investigation and prosecution.	2020 – 2022
	Increase the number of labor inspectors from around 50 to 144 labor inspectors to provide adequate coverage for the labor force of approximately 2.9 million people and ensure that inspectors have adequate resources to conduct inspections in rural areas.	2012 – 2022
	Conduct targeted inspections in all sectors in which children are highly vulnerable to child labor, including in rural areas, agriculture, and manufacturing.	2020 – 2022
	Publish complete information about criminal law enforcement efforts to enforce prohibitions on child labor, including information on training, number of investigations, number of violations found, number of prosecutions initiated, convictions for child labor violations, and penalties imposed for the worst forms of child labor.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that criminal law enforcement agencies investigate, prosecute, and impose penalties for violations related to the worst forms of child labor under the appropriate statutes, including cases of possible law enforcement and judicial complicity in abusing victims and protecting offenders.	2015 – 2022
	Require law enforcement officials to follow established procedures and ensure that child survivors or trafficking are not subjected to questioning without the support of a social worker or psychologist.	2022
	Government Policies	Ensure that activities are undertaken to implement the Program for the Support of Family and Protection of Children and make information about implementation measures publicly available.
Social Programs	Improve understanding of child labor issues in the Kyrgyz Republic by regularly collecting and maintaining data on child labor.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that all children have access to free education, including children with disabilities, children in rural areas, those lacking residence registration, and those without birth certificates and guardianship documents.	2009 – 2022
	Ensure that social programs, such as the Cash Transfer Program, provide sufficient benefits to reduce vulnerability to child labor and are accessible to families.	2019 – 2022
	Expand existing programs to address the scope of the child labor problem, particularly in commercial sexual exploitation and in agriculture, including cultivating cotton.	2014 – 2022
	Ensure that activities are undertaken to implement key social programs to address child labor and make information about implementation measures publicly available.	2021 – 2022

In 2022, Lebanon made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. In June 2022, the United Nations Children's Fund expanded a national grant for children called Haddi. The program provides cash assistance to children at risk of child labor and child marriage, and to children with disabilities, children in non-formal education, and children needing nutrition support. However, children in Lebanon are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in forced labor in agriculture. Children also engage in child labor in the production of potatoes and tobacco. Furthermore, government officials continued to indicate that governmental funding is insufficient to properly carry out their duties. In addition, Lebanese law prohibits inspectors from inspecting informal workplaces, where the majority of child labor occurs, and social programs targeting child labor remained insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Lebanon. Data on key indicators on children's work and education are not available from the sources used in this report.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Use in illicit activities, including the production and trafficking of drugs, and arms dealing (4,6,11,12,16)
	Forced begging (9,12,15,16,20)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (4,11-13,21)
	Forced labor in agriculture (3,5,6,12,13)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Child labor in Lebanon is largely concentrated in agriculture, wholesale and retail, and street vending. (11) Children working in agriculture are exposed to harmful chemicals and long hours in the sun as they work mostly as farmhands. (10) Children also work in collecting garbage and scrap metal. (11,13) Child labor is prevalent among refugee communities in Lebanon. (14) An estimated 75 percent of Syrian refugee children working in the Bekaa Valley do so in agriculture. (22)

NGO reporting indicates that children are used in smuggling illicit fuel across the border with Syria. (11) Children, particularly Syrian refugee children, are forced to beg throughout the country. (4,20) Children involved in street begging are at increased vulnerability for further exploitation and abuse. (11) Syrian refugee children are also subjected to forced labor in agriculture. (3,5,13) In addition, some Syrian refugee children and their families in the Bekaa Valley are kept in bonded labor in agriculture to pay for makeshift dwellings. (23)

Both Lebanese and Syrian refugee children face barriers to accessing education because of public sector strikes, which include teachers. Additionally, Syrian refugee children face other difficulties, such as the cost of transportation and supplies, fear of passing checkpoints or of violence, lack of private sanitation facilities for girls, discrimination, bullying, corporal punishment, and a different curriculum in Lebanon than in their country of origin. (5-7,11,24) In 2022, the government continued its policy of admitting all refugee children regardless of whether they have the required documentation for school enrollment. (11) However, the public school system in Lebanon lacks the capacity to accommodate the large number of school-age Syrian refugee children. (14) Despite the official policy of schools being open to all, in practice, a small number of refugees have been denied access to schools. (6) In addition, children with two Lebanese parents are sometimes prioritized in school enrollment over children with a non-Lebanese father. (25) Students without transcripts are only eligible to receive a certificate, rather than a diploma, causing some undocumented students to drop out. (6) Children with disabilities, including refugee children, were unable to attend school due to insufficient accessibility or inadequacy of facilities, lack of specialized facilities, or unavailability of tailored services for children with disabilities. (26)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Lebanon has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Lebanon's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	14	Article 22 of the Labor Code (27)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 1 and 2 and Annex 2 of Decree No. 8987 (28)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Annex 1 of Decree No. 8987 (28)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 8 of Decree No. 3855; Articles 569 and 586.1 of the Penal Code (29,30)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 586.1 and 586.5 of the Penal Code (30)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 506, 523, 525–527, 586.1, and 586.5 of the Penal Code; Decree No. 8987 (28,30)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 586.1, 586.5, and 618 of the Penal Code; Article 13 of the Law on Drugs (30,31)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 30 of the National Defense Law (32)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 586.1 of the Penal Code; Annex 1 of Decree No. 8987 (28,30)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15‡	Article 49 of the Education Law (33)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 49 of the Education Law (33)

* Country has no conscription (34)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (33)

The Labor Code applies only to workers who perform work in industrial, trading, or agricultural enterprises and excludes domestic work and non-industrial, non-trade agriculture. (27) This does not conform to international standards that require all children to be protected by the minimum age for work. In addition, as the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (33)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor (MOL)	Enforces child labor laws through desk review and workplace inspections. (11) MOL's Child Labor Unit acts as government focal point for child labor issues and raises public awareness about child labor and the right to education. Receives complaints of child labor violations on its Child Labor Unit hotline. (11) According to local observers, MOL's hotline is not fully functional and works for a limited number of hours on official workdays. It does not have a system to register incoming calls. (16)
Internal Security Forces (ISF)	Enforce laws regarding child labor through the Anti-Human Trafficking and Moral Crimes Unit. (11) The ISF's anti-trafficking unit is reportedly underfunded and understaffed, and it has no field offices outside Beirut. (3)
Ministry of Justice (MOJ)	Prosecutes violations of the Penal Code in coordination with ISF. Maintains general data and statistics on criminal violations involving child labor. (11) Refers at-risk children to shelters and protection services. Coordinates, through signed agreements, with civil society organizations to provide social workers who oversee court proceedings involving juveniles and deliver services to them, including children engaged in begging. (11) MOJ has stated that a lack of sufficient human resources hindered the government's ability to address child labor. (14)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Lebanon took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Labor (MOL) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the lack of a mechanism to assess civil penalties.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown (4)	Unknown (11)
Number of Labor Inspectors	34 (35)	Unknown (11)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	No (36)	No (36)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	Unknown (4)	Unknown (11)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksite	Unknown (4)	Unknown (11)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	Unknown (4)	Unknown (11)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	Unknown (4)	Unknown (11)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	Unknown (4)	Unknown (11)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Unknown (4)	Unknown (11)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Unknown (4)	Unknown (11)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (36)	Yes (36)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Unknown (4)	Unknown (11)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (4)	Yes (11)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (4)	Yes (11)

Lebanese law prohibits inspectors from inspecting informal workplaces, where the majority of child labor occurs. (6) In August 2022, Lebanese civil servants went on an open-ended strike over low pay and poor working conditions. (11) Due to the strike, civil servants are only showing up to work once or twice a week, including labor inspectors who had already curtailed the number of inspections they conducted in 2021. (7,11) Reporting continues to indicate that labor inspectorate funding is insufficient for inspectors to properly carry out their duties. (11,24) According to local observers, the MOL's hotline is not fully functional and works for a limited number of hours on official workdays. It does not have a system to register incoming calls. (16) Research also indicates that Lebanon does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (11,37) In addition, the government did not provide information on its labor law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Lebanon took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient allocation of financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (4)	Yes (11)
Number of Investigations	46 (4)	77 (11)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (4)	Unknown (11)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (4)	Unknown (11)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (4)	0 (11)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (4)	Yes (11)

The government did not provide information on the number of prosecutions initiated or number of convictions. In 2022, an NGO provided additional training to the Internal Security Forces (ISF), local police, and municipalities to help authorities address the needs of street children. (11)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including lack of efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Steering Committee on Child Labor	Raises awareness; coordinates efforts among government agencies; establishes standard practices; develops, enforces, and recommends changes; and ensures that government agencies comply with the law. Led by the MOL, includes representatives from six other ministries and other institutions and international organizations. (14) Research was unable to determine whether the National Steering Committee on Child Labor was active during the reporting period.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including lack of a comprehensive policy on eliminating child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Action Plan to End Street Begging by Children	Seeks to end child begging by ensuring legal protection for street children, building capacity to protect street children, rehabilitating and reintegrating street children, and conducting outreach regarding the problem. (11)
Policy for the Protection of Students in the School Environment	Protects children's right to education and promotes non-violence in schools by establishing mechanisms to receive complaints of violence, mistreatment, and bullying, and addresses those cases while safeguarding children's privacy. Conducts training for school staff and officials on identifying risk factors. (39,40)
Work Plan to Prevent and Respond to the Association of Children with Armed Violence in Lebanon	Provides the policy framework for the prevention of children's involvement in armed conflict. (41)

Although Lebanon has adopted policies to address children's participation in street begging and armed conflict, research found no evidence of a policy on other worst forms of child labor, as the National Action Plan on the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor expired in 2019. In addition, research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement key policies related to child labor in Lebanon during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
UNICEF Programs	UNICEF implements several programs with the Ministry of Social Affairs to address child labor through interventions. (11) In June 2022, UNICEF expanded a national grant for children called Haddi . The program provides cash assistance to children at risk of child labor and child marriage, and to children with disabilities, children in non-formal education, and children needing nutrition support. (11) The program pays between $40 and $80 to Lebanese, Syrian, and Palestinian families. Since Haddi's inception as an emergency program in 2021, it has paid out over $43 million to vulnerable families and reached over 130,000 children. (42) Additionally, UNICEF continued to implement a 2019 program to reduce child labor in Tripoli. (11)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Although Lebanon has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, including in construction and forced child labor in agriculture. Moreover, some officials are reluctant to remove children trafficked by their families due to a lack of adequate social services. (9)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Lebanon (Table I I).

Table I I. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Accede to the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict.	2013 – 2022
	Raise the minimum age for work from 14 to 15 to align with the compulsory education age.	2018 – 2022
	Ensure that the minimum age for work applies to all children, including informal workers, domestic workers, and all agricultural workers.	2019 – 2022
Enforcement	Ensure that there is an adequate mechanism to receive and log child labor complaints and refer them for investigation.	2017 – 2022
	Track and publish information on labor law enforcement on an annual basis.	2009 – 2022
	Establish a mechanism to assess civil penalties and allow inspections of informal workplaces.	2015 – 2022
	Provide Ministry of Labor inspectors with proper funding and resources.	2011 – 2022
	Employ at least 120 labor inspectors to ensure adequate coverage of the labor force of approximately 1.8 million people.	2016 – 2022
	Publish information on the number of prosecutions initiated and number of convictions for violations of criminal laws.	2009 – 2022
	Ensure that criminal law enforcement agencies, including the Internal Security Forces' anti-human trafficking unit, have the necessary funding and staff to investigate and prosecute criminal cases of child labor in accordance with the law and establish field offices outside of Beirut.	2017 – 2022
Coordination	Ensure that the National Steering Committee on Child Labor meets on a regular basis and coordinates activities to address child labor.	2019 – 2022
Government Policies	Ensure that activities are undertaken to implement key policies related to child labor during the reporting period and that data on these activities are published on an annual basis.	2021 – 2022
	Adopt a policy that addresses all relevant worst forms of child labor, such as a new National Action Plan on the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor.	2020 – 2022
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2020 – 2022
	Ensure access to public education for all children, including refugees, by improving transportation, addressing bullying and harassment, accommodating students with disabilities, ending corporal punishment, improving facilities, and accommodating students coming from a different curriculum than in Lebanon.	2010 – 2022
	Expand programs, including social services for human trafficking survivors, to fully address the extent of child labor, including in construction and forced labor in agriculture.	2013 – 2022

In 2022, Lesotho made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government of Lesotho organized 17 radio programs and 39 school seminars with a focus on human trafficking and finalized a report with recommendations on how to improve the criminal justice system's response to human trafficking. The government also placed additional officers at the Moshoeshoe International Airport to help identify human trafficking victims and the Lesotho Police Forces rescued four girls from being trafficked. However, children in Lesotho are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in animal herding. Lesotho's compulsory education age of 13 is below the minimum age for work, which is 15, leaving children between these ages vulnerable to child labor. The government also lacks effective coordination mechanisms to address child labor, and labor inspections are not conducted in high-risk sectors, including the informal sector, in which child labor is prevalent.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Lesotho. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	30.1 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	93.8
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	32.1
Primary Completion Rate (%)		90.7

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2019, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2023. (1)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 6 (MICS 6), 2018. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Herding animals, including cattle† (3-8)
	Farming, including planting, applying pesticides, and harvesting (5-7,9,10)
Services	Domestic work (3-7)
	Street work, including vending and trading (5,7,9)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, domestic work, and animal herding, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,4)
	Use in illicit activities, including burglary and theft (7,9)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Lesotho is a source, transit, and destination country for human trafficking. Children involved in animal herding are exposed to harsh weather conditions, sometimes leading to death. (3,4,11-13) Children, especially orphans, also sometimes voluntarily travel to other countries, including South Africa, for domestic work, and upon arrival they are subsequently detained in prison-like conditions and sexually exploited. (3,4,12) In addition, due to the high rate of HIV among adults, many children in Lesotho become orphans and are vulnerable to human trafficking. (3,4)

Lesotho

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In Lesotho, primary education is free; however, secondary education incurs a fee that is cost prohibitive for many families. (3,5,14,15) Many children face limited access to education due to a shortage of teachers and schools, which causes them to travel long distances. In addition, the absence of sanitation facilities in schools remains a barrier for many children to access education, especially girls who are unable to access sanitary pads. (5-7) Children with disabilities also encounter difficulties with ill-equipped educational facilities and untrained teachers. Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, many children dropped out of school to support their families. (7,13) These factors increase a child's vulnerability to the worst forms of child labor, such as human trafficking. (3,13) According to the Ministry of Social Development, children must produce copies of birth certificates to qualify for the Orphans and Vulnerable Children program that provides school fees and uniforms for orphans and vulnerable children. Research suggests that the low number of birth registrations results in children becoming stateless, making them more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. (6,16)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Lesotho has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Lesotho's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including a low compulsory education age.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 228(1) of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act; Article 124(1) of the Labor Code (14,17)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 230(1) of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act; Article 125(1) of the Labor Code (14,17)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 230(3) and 231 of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act (14)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 7(1) of the Labor Code; Article 9(2) of the Constitution; Article 5 of the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Act (17-19)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 5 of the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Act; Anti-Trafficking in Persons (Amendment) Act (2021) (19,20)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 77 of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act; Articles 10–14 of the Sexual Offenses Act (14,21)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 45(b) of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act (14)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 22(o) of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act (14)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*		Article 22(o) of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act (14)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 22(o) of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act (14)
Compulsory Education Age	No	13‡	Part I Article 3(a), and Part II Articles 6 and 7(3)(c) of the Education Act (15)
Free Public Education	Yes		Part II Article 4(1)(a) and 4(1)(b) of the Education Act; Article 22(k) of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act (14,15)

* Country has no conscription (14)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (15)

As Lesotho's compulsory education age is less than the minimum age for work, children ages 13 and 14 are more vulnerable to child labor because they are not required to be in school or legally permitted to work. (14,15,17)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor and Employment (MOLE)	Enforces minimum age requirements under child labor laws, including for hazardous occupations, and assesses compliance with child labor laws as part of general labor inspections. Assigns labor inspectors to operate a Child Labor Unit within the Ministry and provides recommendations that support the expansion of labor inspections. (22)
National Police	Investigate criminal child labor violations and work in conjunction with MOLE to enforce child labor laws, including those related to hazardous and forced child labor. Manage all trafficking in persons-related cases within the Lesotho Mounted Police Service and refer cases for prosecutions to the Public Prosecutor's Office. (7,22,23)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Lesotho took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Employment (MOLE) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	N/A (6)	$151,036 (7)
Number of Labor Inspectors	27 (24)	29 (7)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Lesotho has a referral mechanism that is maintained through the collaboration of different ministries. When a case of child labor is found by MOLE, the Ministry's inspectors refer the case to NGOs and the Ministry of Social Development. (5) NGOs usually provide immediate material assistance, such as food, cash, or shelter, and the Ministry of Social Development conducts site and family visits and assists eligible children to register for a child grant program. (5) MOLE also receives walk-in complaints daily as well as whistleblower complaints. In addition, the Ministry of Social Development has a child helpline that addresses general child protection issues. (6)

Reports indicate that funding is inadequate for the labor inspectorate to carry out inspections and a large share of the money was used to pay for salaries. In addition, labor inspections are not conducted in high-risk sectors, including the informal sector in which child labor is known to occur. (5-8,22)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Lesotho took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including limited funding.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	No (6)	No (7)
Number of Investigations	1 (6)	2 (7)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	0 (6)	0 (7)
Number of Convictions	0 (6)	0 (7)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	No (6)	No (7)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (6)	Yes (7)

In 2022, four girls were rescued by the National Police Forces from traffickers in South Africa and were referred to a local NGO in Lesotho. (7) Although research could not determine the budget for criminal law enforcement during this reporting period, there is evidence that funding and resources were insufficient. (7)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Program Advisory Committee on Child Labor/National Task Team	Led by MOLE's Child Labor Unit, includes representatives from government ministries, trade unions, NGOs, and international organizations. (5) During the reporting period, held two meetings to review the report on the National Action Plan on the Elimination of Child Labor and its Implementation Plan. (7)

During the reporting period, the Multi-Sectoral Committee on Combating Trafficking in Persons organized 17 radio programs that informed listeners about the issue of human trafficking and provided trainings for 22 diplomats in South Africa. In addition, students at 39 schools throughout the country were educated on human trafficking issues. (7,25) The government also finalized a report with recommendations on how to improve the criminal justice system's response to human trafficking, and outlined the strengths and weaknesses of their response. (25)

Cross-border enforcement mechanisms exist between Lesotho and the Republic of South Africa, and during the reporting period, both governments held two sensitization trainings on trafficking in persons for their respective staffs. (6,25,26) The enforcement entities are coordinated by different ministries—Home Affairs, Local Government, or Police and Public Safety. (6) There is, however, a lack of coordination between these bodies, which negatively impacts implementation as some efforts are duplicated, while unclear lines of responsibility mean that other efforts are not undertaken. (6)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of a policy to address all worst forms of child labor in the country.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Anti-Trafficking in Persons Strategic Framework and Action Plan (2021–2026)	Supports national and international obligations and commitments regarding human trafficking in line with the vision to eliminate all forms of trafficking in persons in Lesotho. Provides victim protection, guidance for the successful arrest and prosecution of offenders, and preventive measures. (22,27) In 2022, the government worked on strengthening border security to identify possible cases of human trafficking by placing additional security at Moshoeshoe International Airport. The government also held informational sessions on the dangers children face while herding and performing domestic work. (26)
Kingdom of Lesotho: Poverty Reduction Strategy Paper—National Strategic Development Plan (2018–2023)	Identifies child protection services (from the Child and Gender Protection Unit, social welfare and health agencies, and the justice system) and their capacity to respond adequately to cases of violence, abuse, and exploitation of children, including child labor. Outlines prevention measures. (3,28) During the reporting period, the Ministry of Social Development continued to operate the Child Helpline Lesotho initiative, which provides 24-hour services, emergency assistance, and long-term resources to children who have experienced any form of violence and need care. (7,29)

‡ The government has other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (3,9,22)

In 2022, MOLE began to draft the second National Action Plan on Elimination of Child Labor and a plan for its implementation. (26)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to fully address the scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Orphans and Vulnerable Children Scholarship Programs†	Government program that pays for tuition, uniforms, supplies, and boarding fees for orphans and vulnerable children. (3) Benefited over 26,500 orphans and vulnerable children during the reporting period. (7)
School Feeding Program	Provides incentives for primary school children from impoverished backgrounds to attend school and improves retention. (3) Provided meals to over 50,000 pupils during the reporting period. (7)
Child Grant Program	Provides social cash transfers to the impoverished and households with orphans and vulnerable children with the aim of increasing access to basic needs such as food, health, and education. Implemented by the Ministry of Social Development and funded by the EU with technical support from UNICEF. (3,30) Benefited 46,000 households during the reporting period. (7)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Lesotho (Table 11).

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum age for compulsory education from 13 to 15 so it is consistent with the minimum age for admission to work.	2010 – 2022
Enforcement	Provide adequate funding and training for labor inspectors to carry out mandated duties.	2009 – 2022
	Ensure that criminal law enforcement agencies receive an adequate amount of funding, training, and resources with which to conduct investigations.	2020 – 2022
	Ensure that labor inspections are conducted in all relevant sectors, including the informal sector.	2014 – 2022
	Establish a mechanism to assess civil penalties for child labor violations.	2009 – 2022
Coordination	Improve coordination and communication among coordinating bodies to clarify mandates to address all forms of child labor.	2021 – 2022
Government Policies	Adopt a policy that addresses all relevant worst forms of child labor, such as livestock herding and commercial sexual exploitation.	2021 – 2022
Social Programs	Institute programs that mitigate the impacts of HIV and support orphans and vulnerable children.	2017 – 2022
	Ensure that children with disabilities have equal access to education.	2018 – 2022
	Address educational and logistical gaps resulting in reduced opportunities for secondary education, including the shortage of teachers and schools, sanitation facilities, and secondary school fees.	2018 – 2022
	Increase birth registrations of children to reduce their vulnerability to the worst forms of child labor.	2017 – 2022
	Expand existing programs to address the full scope of the child labor problem, including child trafficking and the commercial sexual exploitation of children.	2015 – 2022

In 2022, Liberia made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. During the reporting period, the government signed a new hazardous work list, which identified specific occupations and tasks prohibited for children, including sugarcane cleaning and harvesting, rubber tapping, palm cutting, bush clearing, and harvesting cocoa. The government also almost doubled the number of labor inspections it conducted, from 556 in 2021 to 1,044 in 2022. Finally, the government designed Standard Operating Procedures to guide the operations of Liberia's child labor monitoring systems at the district level. However, children in Liberia are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced domestic work. Children also perform dangerous tasks in the production of rubber and the mining of gold and diamonds. Liberia has yet to accede to the United Nations Committee on the Rights of the Child's Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict or the Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution, and Child Pornography. Moreover, social programs are not sufficient to address the scope of the problem in the country.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Liberia. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	30.4 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	80.1
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	28.6
Primary Completion Rate (%)		60.6

These data are not comparable with data presented in last year's report due to changes in survey source, survey questionnaire, or age range surveyed.

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Demographic and Health Survey (DHS), 2019–2020. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of rubber, including cutting trees with machetes and using acid (3-7)
	Production of charcoal and bricks (4,5,7)
	Farming activities, including production of cocoa, coffee, cassava, and sugarcane (4,5,7)
Industry	Mining diamonds and gold, including washing gravel and using mercury and cyanide (3-5,7,8)
	Crushing stone (5,6)
	Construction, including carrying heavy loads† (5,7)
Services	Domestic work (4,7)
	Street work, including vending, begging, and selling goods (4-7)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Use in illicit activities, including selling drugs (4,5,7)
	Forced labor in domestic work, street vending, mining, begging, and work on small rubber plantations. (3,4,7,8)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3-5,7)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

While the government has yet to collect comprehensive data on child labor activities to inform policies and social programs on a national level, there are reports that children in rural communities engage in rubber tapping and coal burning activities, while children in cities and surrounding urban communities crush rocks, engage in domestic work, and sell goods. There are also reports that some children are subjected to hazardous labor in the artisanal mining of gold and alluvial diamonds, with tasks that include washing gravel and working in mining shafts. (4,5,7) There have been anecdotal reports that children are also used to sell illicit drugs within the country by adults as a cover to evade arrest by law enforcement. (4,5,7) Human traffickers generally operate independently and are often family members or respected members of the community who promise poor rural relatives and neighbors better economic or educational opportunities for themselves (in the case of young women) or their children, but instead the young women and children are subjected to domestic servitude, forced begging, forced labor, street vending, and occasionally sex trafficking. Children are also transported from Liberia to Côte d'Ivoire, Guinea, Nigeria, and Sierra Leone for work. (4,9,10) In addition, there are reports that children residing at various orphanages within the capital of Monrovia and in other parts of the country are vulnerable to sexual exploitation due to a lack of basic necessities at the orphanages, including food. (5)

Section 9 of the Children's Law mandates free basic education from grades one to nine, but the cost of registration fees, uniforms, transportation, books, and school supplies limits access to education for some children. In addition, family members often require children to work long hours, denying them the ability to attend school, even if they could afford to do so. (4,5) In schools throughout rural communities, few teachers are on the official Ministry of Education payroll and communities supplement their school's teaching force by recruiting and paying small stipends for volunteer teachers. (11) For secondary school students (grades 10–12), reports indicate there is a shortage of teachers, insufficient learning materials, a lack of educational facilities, and inadequate transportation, all of which limit access to education. (4-6) In addition, some teachers sexually exploit students in exchange for the promise of good grades, resulting in children avoiding or dropping out of school. (4-6) Research also indicates the ongoing practice of temporarily removing boys and girls from formal schooling to participate in initiation rituals that transition a child into adulthood; many of these children may not return to school after their participation in these initiation ceremonies, making them more vulnerable to child labor. (4-6)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Liberia has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Articles 2.3 and 21.2 of the Decent Work Act (12)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 7 and Section 9.1 of the Children's Law (13)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 21.4 of the Decent Work Act, Hazardous and Light Work List of 2023. (12,14)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 2.2 of the Decent Work Act; Article 7, Section 8 of the Children's Law; Article 12 of the Constitution; Article 1 of the Act to Ban Trafficking in Persons Within the Republic of Liberia (12-15)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 7, Section 8 of the Children's Law; Article 1 of the Act to Ban Trafficking in Persons Within the Republic of Liberia (13,14,16)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 2.3 of the Decent Work Act; Article 3, Section 21 of the Children's Law; Article 1 of the Act to Ban Trafficking in Persons Within the Republic of Liberia (12-14,16)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 2.3 of the Decent Work Act; Chapter 16 of the Penal Code (12,17)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 2.3 of the Decent Work Act; Article 3, Section 22 of the Children's Law (12,13)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*		Article 3, Section 22 of the Children's Law (13)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 3, Section 22 of the Children's Law (13)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	14	Article 3, Section 9 of the Children's Law; Chapter 4 of the Education Reform Act (13,18)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 3, Section 9 of the Children's Law; Chapter 4 of the Education Reform Act (13,19)

* Country has no conscription (20)

During the reporting period, the Ministry of Labor (MOL) signed the Hazardous and Light Work List for Children under age 18 which identifies specific occupations and tasks prohibited for children, including sugarcane cleaning and harvesting, rubber tapping, palm cutting, bush clearing, and harvesting cocoa. In addition, 750 copies of the updated list were sent to regional labor ministries throughout the country for distribution. (7,19) In 2022, Liberia ratified ILO Convention No. 138: Convention Concerning Minimum Age for Admission to Employment. This convention will go into effect on June 13, 2023. (21)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor (MOL)	Conducts worksite inspections and addresses child labor violations. (4,5)
Ministry of Justice (MOJ)	Promotes and executes the rule of law for public safety, including the prosecution of child labor perpetrators. (8)
Women and Children Protection Section	A division within the Liberia National Police (LNP) that investigates child endangerment cases and human trafficking in cooperation with the LNP's Anti-Trafficking Unit and the Liberia Immigration Service. (5)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Liberia took actions to address child labor. However, gaps exist within the operations of the MOL that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient financial resource allocation (Table 6).

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$25,000 (4)	$25,000 (7)
Number of Labor Inspectors	55 (4)	54 (7)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	No (23)	No (23)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	No (4)	Yes (7)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksites	556 (4)	1,044 (7)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	0 (4)	0 (7)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	N/A (4)	N/A (7)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	N/A (4)	N/A (7)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (4)	Yes (7)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (4)	Yes (7)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (23)	Yes (23)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (4)	Yes (7)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (4)	Yes (7)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	No (4)	No (7)

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for Liberia's workforce which includes approximately 2.4 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in transitioning economies, Liberia would employ about 60 labor inspectors. (7)

During the reporting period, the government trained 14 inspectors on child labor laws in Montserrado County. In addition, the MOL awarded contracts to ten local NGOs to conduct awareness training on Trafficking in Persons. (24,25) The government has a draft referral mechanism for child labor but, due to resource capacity and coordination constraints, cases were still handled outside the formal pathways. (7)

Generally, labor inspections are conducted in the formal sector and not in the informal sector in which children are more likely to be engaged in child labor. Inspectors are able to inspect private farms or homes for domestic child laborers but did not do so in practice during the reporting period. (5) In addition, lack of funding and logistical support results in the underutilization of the labor inspectorate's complaint mechanism. (4,9) Although inspectors cannot assess penalties, they can impose corrective measures, such as issuing notices of compliance, filing a complaint with the hearing board, and reporting violations to the MOL, which can assess penalties for violations. (5,6,25) However, the lack of penalty assessment authorization, limited funding, and insufficient fines, combined with poor opportunities for revenue generation, hamper the labor inspectorate's enforcement of child labor laws. (4,6,9,13) Law enforcement officials have reported that, due to lack of funding, officials who identify child labor or human trafficking cases are often expected to become personally responsible for the survivors' welfare, whether by providing financial support or taking children into their own homes. In addition, child labor is typically addressed as an issue of child endangerment, thereby causing a lack of reliable data on violations of child labor laws. (6,9,14)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Liberia took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient financial resource allocation.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (4)	Yes (7)
Number of Investigations	8 (4)	0 (25)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (4)	0 (25)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (4)	0 (25)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (4)	0 (25)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (4)	Yes (7)

Although the MOL maintains a human trafficking hotline that can receive calls related to child labor, very few child labor calls come in and the hotline is irregularly staffed by contractors for only part of the day. (5,7,25)

Research indicates that the Liberia National Police (LNP)'s Women and Children Protection Section had limited training, financial, and physical resources, which hampered its ability to carry out investigations and other enforcement duties. (7,9)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of financial support.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Commission on Child Labor (NACOMAL)	Coordinates government and civil society activities concerning child labor. Led by the MOL and comprising representatives from 16 organizations, including international and civil society organizations. Assists in coordinating child labor investigations. (4,7) Seeks to reform national child labor laws and create a national child labor database, which would assist surveys on the extent of child labor issues in Liberia. (26) During the reporting period, and in addition to other trainings throughout the year, NACOMAL participated in a 2-day workshop along with civil society partners and NGOs, organized by the Winrock ATLAS Project, to design Standard Operating Procedures for the Child Labor Monitoring Systems at the district level in Liberia. NACOMAL also increased communication and trainings with other government agencies and NGOs to improve efforts to address child labor and human trafficking issues. (7) Despite these efforts, NACOMAL reported insufficient funding to pursue their mandates and continuing coordination issues remained, specifically with the anti-human trafficking task force. (5,7)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Action Plan on the Elimination of Child Labor	Aims to reduce child labor and the worst forms of child labor by 50 percent by 2030 through three strategic objectives, including increasing public awareness on the causes and consequences of the worst forms of child labor; strengthening the legal and institutional frameworks to reduce child labor; and increasing social services and protection for children of vulnerable households. (27)
National Action Plan for Trafficking in Persons (2019–2024)	Outlines the government's anti-trafficking efforts, including those for child victims, and creates benchmark goals related to human trafficking. (8,28) Establishes roles and responsibilities for coordinating government assistance to human trafficking victims and provides shelter and care to children who may have been victims of human trafficking. (28)
National Child Welfare, Social Welfare, and Protection Policy	Focuses on the implementation and enforcement of existing child protection laws and prioritizes the development of action plans and policies that aim to assist children subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking. (29)

Child labor elimination and prevention strategies are not included in the Revised National Youth Policy, the Education Sector Plan, the Rubber Industry Master Plan, nor the National Employment Policy. (18,30-33)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequacy to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Anti-Trafficking Awareness Campaign†	Aims to raise public awareness of human trafficking through the use of radio and billboard messages. During the reporting period, with international support, Liberian security agencies conducted events for the World Day Against Trafficking in Persons, which included trainings on human trafficking for security officials. (7)
Shelters‡	Ministry of Gender, Children and Social Protection-operated shelters for vulnerable street children in Lofa and Nimba Counties. (6,22) During the reporting period, the Government of Liberia provided additional financial resources for the establishment of a new shelter for survivors of child labor and human trafficking. (7)
U.S. Government-Funded Projects	Projects that aim to improve access to education and improve child protection. Includes the USAID School Feeding Program II and the McGovern-Dole International Food For Education and Child Nutrition Program, implemented by USDA. (22,35) In addition, the International Development Law Organization, with funding from the USDOS Bureau of International Narcotics and Law Enforcement Affairs, strengthened the capacity of 170 law enforcement officers from the Liberia Drug Enforcement Agency, Liberia Immigration Service, LNP, MOJ, and MOL on trafficking in persons prevention and response. (4)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of Liberia.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (36)

Although the government funds social programs, they are not sufficient to address all sectors in which child labor occurs, including in domestic work, the production of rubber and timber, and the mining of gold and diamonds. (22)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Liberia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Accede to the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography.	2013 – 2022
	Accede to the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict.	2013 – 2022
Enforcement	Ensure that penalties for employing children under the minimum age for work are stringent enough to deter violations.	2014 – 2022
	Ensure that labor inspections are conducted in all sectors in which children work.	2016 – 2022
	Authorize the labor inspectorate to assess penalties for child labor violations.	2017 – 2022
	Ensure that the labor inspectorate's complaint and referral mechanism is adequately supported and operational.	2017 – 2022
	Ensure adequate funding for child labor enforcement agencies, such as the Ministry of Labor, the Liberia National Police, and the Women and Children Protection Section, and provide necessary training for such officials to enforce child labor laws.	2010 – 2022
	Disaggregate the child endangerment cases prosecuted through the Ministry of Justice to determine the number of cases related to the worst forms of child labor.	2016 – 2022
Coordination	Ensure adequate funding for the National Commission on Child Labor's program activities to address child labor.	2017 – 2022
	Ensure that coordinating bodies, including the Anti-Human Trafficking Task Force, are implementing effective case referral mechanisms.	2019 – 2022
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into relevant policies.	2010 – 2022

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Social Programs	Collect and publish comprehensive research data to determine child labor activities and to inform policies and programs.	2013 – 2022
	Improve access to education by subsidizing school-related costs, and reduce barriers to education by building additional schools, hiring more rural teachers, providing sufficient learning materials, addressing sexual abuse in schools, and providing adequate transportation.	2012 – 2022
	Ensure that children do not leave school before the completion of compulsory education.	2017 – 2022
	Expand existing social programs to address the scope of the child labor problem, especially in forced domestic work, the production of rubber, commercial sexual exploitation, and the mining of gold and diamonds.	2009 – 2022

In 2022, Madagascar made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government launched a new national action plan on trafficking in persons, and the Regional Committee in the Fight Against Child Labor of Fianarantsoa conducted field visits to markets, brickmaking sites, and stone quarries to monitor child labor and raise awareness among parents. In 2022, for the first time in several years, the Ministry of Labor also compiled reports from 11 of its regional offices on child labor-related activities between 2019 and 2021, which identified 922 children working in various sectors. Finally, the government expanded daily school meals from roughly 1,200 to 2,209 public primary schools. Although Madagascar made meaningful efforts in all relevant areas, the government failed to investigate reports of some officials accepting bribes to produce and issue false identity documents to facilitate the commercial sexual exploitation of minors. Children in Madagascar are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and forced labor in domestic work. Children also perform dangerous tasks in the mica mining sector and in agriculture, including in the production of vanilla. Limited resources for the enforcement of child labor laws may impede government efforts to protect children from the worst forms of child labor, and Madagascar does not have a current national action plan for the elimination of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Madagascar. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	43.2 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	68.8
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	33.8
Primary Completion Rate (%)		63.3

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of vanilla and rice† (3-5)
	Fishing and deep-sea diving,† including for lobster (5,6)
Industry	Mining† gold, sapphires, quartz, mica, and tourmaline, and transporting† blocks and stones at mining sites (5-10)
	Quarrying† and crushing† stone and making gravel (6,11,12)
	Brickmaking† (5,12)
	Sorting and processing mica, sometimes using sharp tools and carrying heavy loads (5,8,13)
Services	Street work, including begging, washing cars, market vending, transporting goods, cleaning the marketplace, and scavenging garbage (5,11,14,15)
	Working as waitresses and maids at hotels and restaurants (11)
	Domestic work† (5,6,12)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (6,11,15,16)
	Forced labor in mining, fishing, quarrying, begging, and domestic work (6,11,15,16)
	Use in the production of pornography (5,15)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Children in Madagascar perform dangerous tasks in mining and agriculture, including in the mining of mica and the production of vanilla. (3,5,17) Recent reports indicate that an estimated 10,000 children work in the mica sector, including in digging mine shafts, underground mining, hoisting loads of mica out of mines, and collecting mica waste. (5,8,11,13,17) Children also sort mica at sorting companies that prepare mica for export. (8) In addition, children are involved in mining gold, sapphires, and various crystals and gems. (9) Children in the mining sector experience hazards including work in extreme heat, carrying heavy loads and using sharp tools, underground work without proper safety equipment or sufficient oxygen, and exposure to dust and other particles. (5,6,8,9,11,16) In northern Madagascar, children engage in smallholder vanilla farming, which exposes them to long working hours and sharp tools. (3,4,11) There are also reports that children are increasingly recruited by adults to steal vanilla because they are less likely to be pursued by security forces, or subjected to mob retaliation. (18)

Children in Madagascar are vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation, including child sex tourism and use in the production of pornography, domestic servitude, and forced begging. (5,6,16) Sources indicate that some local government officials issue false identity documents to minors in exchange for bribes to facilitate child commercial sexual exploitation. (5,16,19) Family members also sometimes encourage and facilitate the commercial sexual exploitation of children in tourist locations, cities, vanilla-growing regions, and mining areas. (5,7,14-16,20) Traffickers also use children in the production of pornography, including livestream performances, in exchange for international money transfers. (5,11,15,16) In addition, child domestic workers are subjected to harsh working conditions, including long hours, poor accommodations, and low salaries, and face a higher risk of sexual abuse or commercial sexual exploitation. (5-7,11,21)

Extreme weather events, including cyclones in early 2022 and several years of droughts in the southern region of Madagascar, have exacerbated food insecurity and poverty, increasing children's vulnerability to labor exploitation. In 2022, half of the population of southern Madagascar faced acute food insecurity, while half a million people were acutely malnourished. (15,19,22) Access to education is often limited for some children, which also increases their vulnerability to child labor. The birth registration system is not uniformly enforced, and unregistered children typically are not eligible to take official exams. (5,23) While the constitution guarantees free compulsory education, some public schools require parents to pay informal fees to subsidize teacher salaries and operating costs. (5,8,24) In addition, some girls face difficulties remaining in school due to a lack of appropriate hygiene facilities and menstrual hygiene products. (5,23) Additional barriers to education include a lack of school infrastructure, insufficient numbers of teachers, food insecurity, and limited transportation to schools in rural areas. (5,23)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Madagascar has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government's laws and regulations are in line with relevant international standards (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 24 of the Constitution; Article 100 of the Labor Code; Article 2 of Decree 2018-009 (24-26)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Civil Services and Labor's Division for the Prevention, Abolition, and Monitoring of Child Labor	Enforces child labor laws, coordinates and evaluates efforts to eliminate child labor, and oversees national and regional child labor coordination committees. (5,32)
Ministry of Justice	Enforces laws pertaining to violence against children, including human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation. (5,32) Works with department-level courts to prosecute child labor cases. (5)
Criminal Investigation Agencies	The Ministry of National Defense's National Gendarmerie enforces laws in rural areas, while the Ministry of Public Security's National Civil Police Force Morals and Minors Brigade enforces laws in urban areas. Investigate criminal cases involving minors, including cases related to human trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and the worst forms of child labor. (5,15,16,32)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Madagascar took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Civil Services and Labor that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient allocation of financial and human resources.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$27,000 (11)	$14,600 (5)
Number of Labor Inspectors	190 (11)	187 (5)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	Yes (25)	Yes (5)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	Yes (11)	Yes (5)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksites	Unknown	Unknown
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	Unknown	Unknown
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	Unknown	Unknown
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	Unknown	Unknown
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (11)	Yes (5)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (11)	Yes (5)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (25)	Yes (5)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (11)	Yes (5)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (11)	Yes (5)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (7)	Yes (11)

In June 2022, the ILO provided training to 30 labor inspectors as part of its Vision Zero Fund project on how to identify cases of the worst forms of child labor. (5) In 2022, for the first time in several years, the Ministry of Labor compiled reports from 11 of its regional offices on child labor-related activities between 2019 and 2021. They were able to identify 922 children working in various sectors, including domestic work, artisanal mining, begging, street work, quarrying, brickmaking, cattle herding, agriculture, restaurants, and firewood cutting and selling. (5) The Ministry of Labor also reported that between November 2021 and April 2022, it inspected 230 companies. However, the government did not provide comprehensive information for the 2022 reporting year on the number or types of inspections conducted, violations found, or penalties imposed and collected for inclusion in this report. (5)

Research indicates that Madagascar does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (5,33) Four labor inspectors are mandated to coordinate anti-child labor efforts. (5) The government itself has noted that the current number of inspectors is insufficient, indicating that its labor inspectors are not even able to cover the formal sector, much less the informal sector, in which most child labor occurs. Labor inspectors are also not permitted to enter private homes without coordination with the judicial police, which restricts their ability to conduct labor inspections among domestic workers, many of whom are children. (5) In addition, the concentration of labor inspectors in the capital, along with lack of funds for transportation at regional offices, hampers the enforcement of child labor laws in rural areas. (11) Even though the labor inspectorate has the authority to conduct proactive unannounced and routine inspections, in practice most inspections occur in response to complaints received. (11) While new labor inspectors undergo a 40-hour course on child labor, the Ministry of Labor considers this training inadequate as it does not cover child labor in the informal sector. (5) In addition, although Madagascar's list of hazardous occupations for children was expanded in 2018, reports indicate that the government was slow to disseminate the law's new requirements and has not taken steps to enforce it. (19)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Madagascar took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient allocation of financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (11)	Yes (5)
Number of Investigations	Unknown	63 (5,15)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown	60 (15)
Number of Convictions	Unknown	Unknown (5)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (11)	Unknown (5)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (11)	Yes (5)

In 2022, the National Police and Gendarmerie continued to collaborate with the U.S. Federal Bureau of Investigation on a case that led to the conviction of an American offender for online sexual exploitation of underage Malagasy girls. (15) The Protection of Minors Police Service (PMPM) also identified 60 cases of child labor during their investigations, while the police cybercrime unit identified 3 cases of online sexual exploitation of children. (5) During the reporting period, PMPM investigators received training on trafficking in persons, including victim identification and referral. In addition, criminal investigators received trainings organized by UNICEF and Interpol on the online sexual exploitation of children. (5) Child protection networks managed by the Ministry of Population also provided support to child survivors of several types of abuse, including the worst forms of child labor, and coordinated across government entities on child protection issues in 2022. (5)

However, research found there is a lack of funding, equipment, and transportation at all levels of government to adequately conduct criminal law enforcement efforts related to the worst forms of child labor. (5,21,34) Trafficking cases involving children are often investigated as child abuse, and thus outside the purview of courts with human trafficking expertise. In addition, criminal appeals procedures often result in suspects being released from custody, and eventually evading imprisonment. (34)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including insufficient allocation of financial resources.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Council to Combat Child Labor (CNLTE)	Coordinates programs and advises on child labor legislation and regulations. (14,35) Complements efforts of regional committees, which work in each of Madagascar's regions to identify activities to promote the elimination of child labor, and gather data as well as coordinate, monitor, and evaluate efforts. (5,11) During the reporting period, both the national and regional child labor committees held awareness-raising activities and events, including radio and television programming. (5) The regional committee of Fianarantsoa in the Matsiara Ambony region also conducted field visits to markets, brickmaking sites, and stone quarries to monitor child labor and raise awareness among parents. Finally, the regional child labor committee of Tolagnaro, which covers the Anosy region, convened a coordinating meeting in June 2022 for NGOs implementing child labor prevention programs, including those working to address child labor in the mica sector. (5) The CNLTE and regional committees lack sufficient funding to effectively operate and coordinate efforts to address child labor. (5,7,36)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including the lack of a national policy covering all worst forms of child labor.

Madagascar

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
Joint Action Plan to Address Issues Affecting Children and Households in Mica Exploitation in the Anosy Region	Developed through a joint initiative between the Ministries of Mines, Labor, and Population, aims to reduce child labor in the production of mica in the southern region. (5,37) During the reporting period, a working group continued to organize relevant ministries and organizations to define stakeholders' roles and duties in the implementation of the action plan. (5)
National Action Plan on Trafficking in Persons†	Outlines strategy and policy to address trafficking in persons in Madagascar. In December 2022, the government officially launched the policy. (15)
Code of Conduct for the Protection of Children in the Tourism Industry	Aims to prevent the commercial sexual exploitation of children in the tourism industry. Implemented by the Ministry of Tourism and supported by ILO and UNICEF. (38) During the reporting period, the Ministry of Tourism held a workshop in Antananarivo to validate the updated version of the code. (5,15)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

Madagascar's National Action Plan to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor expired in 2019, and the government has not adopted a new action plan. (5)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Social Support and Reintegration Centers‡	Government programs that provide social and reintegration services for survivors of child labor exploitation. Include the Ministry of Labor's Manjary Soa Center, which provides educational support and other services to survivors of child labor. The Center for Emergency Shelter Service ( Centre d'Accueil d'Urgence ) in Antananarivo assists children referred by the police, including children exploited in domestic work and other urban sectors. (6,11,16) During the reporting period, the Manjary Soa Center hosted 35 children removed from child labor or who were at risk of the worst forms of child labor. (5)
Elimination of Child Labor in Madagascar's Mica Sector	Targets child labor in the mica sector in southern Madagascar by removing children from mines, facilitating education access for survivors of child labor, improving the mica supply chain, and providing families with income-generating alternatives. Implemented by Terre des Hommes, Netherlands. (17) During the reporting period, Terre des Hommes held the in-country project launch event in Fort Dauphine, and participants included representatives from the government, UNICEF, and mica exporters. (39)
Education and School Canteen Programs	Programs to provide access to meals in school and re-integrate out-of-school children into the education system. Include school canteen programs coordinated with the Ministry of National Education, and funded by partners including the World Food Program and the World Bank; Mavitrika Mianata , a school canteen program run by Catholic Relief Services and Global Communities with funding from the U.S. Department of Agriculture; and remedial classes, run by the Ministry of Education with UNICEF support, to reintegrate out-of-school children back into the public school system. (5) During the reporting year, the government expanded daily school meals from roughly 1,200 to 2,209 public primary schools across the country, and 1,200 children received remedial classes through the Ministry of Education. (5)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of Madagascar.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (5,11,32,40)

Although Madagascar has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to address the extent of the problem, particularly in agriculture, commercial sexual exploitation, domestic work, forced begging, and mining.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Madagascar (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Publish complete labor law enforcement information related to child labor, including the number and types of labor inspections conducted, the number of violations found, and penalties imposed and collected during the reporting year.	2013 – 2022
	Ensure that labor inspectors receive adequate training on child labor in the informal sector and the 2018 updated hazardous work list.	2019 – 2022
	Increase the number of labor inspectors from 187 to 387 to ensure adequate coverage of the labor force of approximately 15.5 million people.	2015 – 2022
	Ensure that the labor inspectorate receives adequate funding, including for transportation, to conduct inspections in rural areas and the informal sector.	2009 – 2022
	Publish criminal law enforcement data on the number of convictions and if penalties were imposed for violations concerning the worst forms of child labor.	2013 – 2022
	Ensure that criminal law enforcement agencies have sufficient staff, equipment, and transportation to address the worst forms of child labor.	2019 – 2022
	Ensure that criminal offenses related to the worst forms of child labor are investigated and prosecuted under the relevant laws.	2020 – 2022
Coordination	Ensure that the National Council to Combat Child Labor and regional child labor committees received adequate funding to carry out their mandates.	2014 – 2022
Government Policies	Adopt a national policy to address child labor, including its worst forms.	2019 – 2022
Social Programs	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education accessible for all children, including those in rural communities, by removing informal fees; improving school infrastructure, feeding programs, staffing, and transportation services; providing access to sanitation facilities and feminine hygiene products; and increasing birth registration rates.	2011 – 2022
	Expand the scope of programs to address child labor in agriculture, domestic work, begging, mining, and the commercial sexual exploitation of children.	2014 – 2022

In 2022, Malawi made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. Criminal law enforcement officials increased the number of convictions related to the worst forms of child labor and participated in ten trainings on laws protecting children from child labor. In addition, Malawi's Ministry of Labor began piloting a child labor monitoring system to enhance data collection, identification of working children through school attendance data, and improve coordination within the tobacco sector. However, children in Malawi are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including forced labor in the farming of tobacco and in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Despite its legal abolition, many families are still working under the tenancy system, which frequently leads to these families and their children falling into situations of debt bondage. In addition, minimum age protections do not cover children working in domestic households or non-commercial farms.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Malawi.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	26.3 (1,456,305)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	83.3
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	28.4
Primary Completion Rate (%)		89.0

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Integrated Household Survey (IHS), 2020. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of tea and household crops (3-5)
	Planting and harvesting tobacco,† including land preparation, weeding, harvesting, and shelling (3,5-8)
	Herding livestock (5,9)
	Fishing (5)
Industry	Brickmaking† (9)
	Construction† (5,9)
Services	Domestic work (5,10-12)
	Begging† (5)
	Vending (5,12-14)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,5,15-17)
	Forced labor in herding goats and cattle, farming including tobacco, fishing, brickmaking, domestic work, and work in small businesses such as rest houses and bars (3,5,17-20)
	Forced begging (17)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children in Malawi are engaged in hazardous work in the production of tobacco. (18,21-23) Children who handle tobacco risk illness from nicotine absorption, including green tobacco sickness. (22,24) They are also exposed to pesticides, chemicals, and harsh weather conditions. (22) Some children work alongside family members who are tenants on tobacco farms. (22,25,26) In the tenancy system, the quantity and quality of the tobacco sold to farm owners after the harvest season determines the pay tenants receive, incentivizing parents to use their children as workers to increase their earnings. Tenants often incur loans from farm owners during the growing season; in many cases they are unable to repay these debts, resulting in tenants, and often their families, falling into debt bondage. (25,27) Although the government legally abolished the tenancy system in 2021, research indicates the continued exploitation of children in conditions of forced labor related to the production of tobacco, indicating the need for targeted government programs and interventions to support the transition of tenant farmers and their families to alternative systems of livelihood. (7) In 2022, the government, with support from the ILO, conducted a survey, including validation of data, to provide quantitative information on the tenancy system to inform future programming and policy reforms. (28) The UN reported that a large number of children working on tobacco farms have remained out of school since the COVID-19 pandemic. (7)

Although primary education is tuition-free, considerable barriers to education exist, including families' inability to pay required school-related expenses, such as books and uniforms. (18,29,30) In addition, long distances, a lack of teachers, safety concerns related to sexual violence within schools, poor school infrastructure, and the lack of desks, water, electricity, feminine hygiene products, and sanitation facilities also negatively impact children's attendance at school. (10,11,18,23,30,31) Orphaned children and children with family members with HIV/AIDS may need to assume responsibility as heads of their households, including working to support their families. These children, especially those who become orphaned, are at increased risk of leaving school early and entering into the worst forms of child labor. (32,33) Moreover, rural households are particularly vulnerable to both economic and climate shocks, likely contributing to the use of child workers as a coping strategy. (29)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Malawi has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Malawi's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including lack of legal protections for children working in private homes and on farms.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	14	Section 21 of the Employment Act (34)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Section 22 of the Employment Act; Section 23 of the Constitution (34,35)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Sections 1–9 and Paragraph 6 of the Employment (Prohibition of Hazardous Work for Children) Order (36)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Section 4 of the Employment Act (2021); Section 27 of the Constitution; Sections 140–147 and 257–269 of the Penal Code; Sections 79 and 82 of the Child Care, Protection and Justice Act; Sections 2 and 14–16 of the Trafficking in Persons Act (35,37-40)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Sections 140–147 and 257–269 of the Penal Code; Section 79 of the Child Care, Protection and Justice Act; Sections 2, 15, and 16 of the Trafficking in Persons Act (38-40)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Sections 137, 138, 140, 142, 147, and 155 of the Penal Code; Sections 23 and 84 of the Child Care, Protection and Justice Act; Sections 15 and 20 of the Trafficking in Persons Act (38-40)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Section 19 of the Defense Force Act (41)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	18	Article 13 of the Education Act (42)
Free Public Education	Yes		Articles 2 and 13 of the Education Act (42)

* Country has no conscription (41)

Section 21 of the Employment Act sets the minimum age for employment at age 14 for agricultural, industrial, or non-industrial work. (34) The Act, however, exempts work performed in homes and non-commercial farms, leaving children working at these sites without minimum age protections. (34,43) The minimum working age also is lower than the compulsory education age, which may encourage children to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (42) In addition, Malawian law does not have criminal provisions for the use of children in illicit activities, such as the selling of drugs. Furthermore, although non-state armed groups are not known to recruit children for military activities in the country, Malawi law does not meet international standards because it does not explicitly prohibit this practice. (44)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor (MOL)	Performs inspections and investigates all labor complaints, including those related to child labor and child trafficking. (5) Through its Child Labor Unit, monitors and implements child labor law compliance through child labor monitoring visits. (18,45) Coordinates with the Ministry of Homeland Security and the Ministry of Gender, Children, Disability and Social Welfare (MGCDSW) to conduct investigations and refer children for social services. (18) District child labor offices enforce child labor and human trafficking laws at the district level, including monitoring child labor data and school attendance. (18) With support from the Eliminating Child Labor in Tobacco foundation, a tobacco industry-funded foundation for elimination of child labor, MOL is piloting a Child Labor Monitoring System to strengthen data collection, improve identification of working children through school attendance data, and enhance coordination. (5)
The Malawi Police Service and Ministry of Justice	Investigate child labor and forced labor cases. Prosecute criminal offenders of the worst forms of child labor through MOL. (5) Coordinate with the Ministry of Homeland Security on child trafficking cases, particularly those involving a cross-border dimension. (5)
Tobacco Commission	Oversees regulation of the tobacco industry and enforcement of the Tobacco Industry Bill, including child labor issues. Receives annual reports from tobacco growers on child labor issues in their supply chains, including efforts to prevent and eliminate child labor, and may impose penalties, including canceling the registration of growers who fail to satisfactorily report on child labor in their annual reports to the Commission. (18,46)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Malawi took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor (MOL) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient financial resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown (18)	$100,000 (5)
Number of Labor Inspectors	Unknown (18)	165 (5)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	No (18,34)	No (34)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	Unknown (18)	Yes (5)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksite	676 (47)	307 (48)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	111 (47)	700 (48)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	14 (18)	Unknown (5)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	Unknown (18)	Unknown (5)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (18)	Yes (5)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (18)	Yes (5)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (34)	Yes (34)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (18)	Yes (5)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (18)	Yes (5)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (18)	Yes (5)

Under Malawian law, child labor is a criminal offense, and as such, labor investigators refer violations related to child labor to criminal law enforcement authorities for investigation and the imposition of penalties. (34) Research indicates that Malawi does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors, vehicles, and other material resources to carry out their mandated duties, particularly in the agricultural sector in which child labor is particularly prevalent. (5,49) Moreover, to increase monitoring of the tobacco sector, MOL and tobacco companies have a memorandum of understanding that includes industry support for training of labor inspectors and financing of labor inspections on tobacco farms, such as covering transportation costs to inspection sites. (18,50) The agreement also establishes a complaint mechanism by which field technicians working for tobacco companies report child labor findings to labor officers for follow-up investigation and response. (50,51)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Malawi took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Malawi Police Service that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including inappropriate detention of victims of child labor.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (18)	Yes (5)
Number of Investigations	3 (5)	3 (5)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	3 (5)	3 (5)
Number of Convictions	1 (5)	3 (5)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (18)	Yes (5)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (18)	Yes (5)

The government does not operate a hotline; rather, it works with a local NGO that operates a 24-hour National Helpline Service. During the reporting period, the NGO received 119 calls related to human trafficking, of which 51 pertained to children. (18) In 2022, the Malawi Police Service offered three trainings for new criminal investigators, and ten trainings on laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (5) Although the government provided some information on investigations, it generally does not provide disaggregated information on the ages of human trafficking victims or the nature of exploitation, which may lead to gaps in the coordination between agencies and the ability of rehabilitation services to account for the special needs of children. (8)

Many children in Malawi lack birth certificates. The inability of law enforcement officials to verify the ages of child survivors of human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation may have impeded efforts to prosecute traffickers under the Child Care, Protection and Justice Act, and the Trafficking in Persons Act. (52) In addition, police sometimes arrest and detain child sex trafficking survivors alongside adults. In some instances, these children fall victim to abuse, including sexual extortion, by the police. (18,53)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of clarity of institutional mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Steering Committee on Child Labor (NSCCL)	Provides policy guidance to support the elimination of child labor and implementation of the National Action Plan on Child Labor. Chaired by the Ministry of Agriculture, with MOL acting as the main technical advisor and secretariat, and includes representatives from government ministries, including Homeland Security and MGCDSW, as well as trade unions, employers, development partners, and civil society organizations. (18,54,55) Local coordination of child labor and child welfare issues occurs through District and Community Child Labor Committees. (18,56,57) Although the government confirmed the NSCCL was active during the reporting period, it did not provide information on its activities to verify it is functioning according to its intended mandates. (5)

Although MOL officials and the District and Community Child Labor Committees receive training on child labor issues, there is lack of standard guidance related to child labor definitions and concepts, which results in lapses in coordination on identifying and responding to children in child labor. (51)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including insufficient mainstreaming of child labor issues into relevant national policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Action Plan on Child Labor (2020–2025)	Outlines the government's strategies for the elimination of the worst forms of child labor, with a focus on six critical areas: (1) laws and policy; (2) the institutional and human resource capacity of stakeholders involved in child labor elimination; (3) public education and awareness; (4) prevention, withdrawal, rehabilitation, and social re-integration of children in child labor; (5) mitigating HIV/AIDS and other chronic illnesses; and (6) improving the availability of information on child labor. (58)
National Child Labor Mainstreaming Guide	Provides guidance to government ministries, departments, and agencies, as well as other social partners in addressing child labor through integration of child labor elimination strategies into key policies. Aims to also enhance responsive planning and service delivery, and multi-sectoral collaboration in addressing child labor. (49,59)
National Children's Policy (2019–2025)	Aims to facilitate the coordination of policies related to the needs of children to ensure child protection, with an emphasis on prevention of child labor and human trafficking. (5,18,60)

‡The government has other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (5,57)

Research indicates that the government continued to support key national policies, but could not determine specific activities undertaken to implement them during the reporting period; financial constraints limit the scope and implementation of national policies. (5) In addition, the Government of Malawi has adopted a National Youth Policy and a National Education Sector Plan. However, child labor elimination and prevention strategies have not been integrated into these policies, despite their potential impact on child labor. (61,62)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including lack of implementation of programs.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
National Social Cash Transfer Program†	MGCDSSW-led program that supports low-income families in high-risk districts to enable children to stay in school and prevent child labor. (18,51) As of September 2022, the program provided monthly/bi-monthly cash transfers to approximately 300,000 households, benefiting around 1.4 million individuals. (5) An evaluation of the National Social Cash Transfer Program found that, although the program provided benefits for other aspects of children's well-being, it had achieved little reduction of child labor as the work of children only shifted from external employment to labor within the household, due to families using funds from the program to expand their household agricultural activities. (63) In 2022, the government published an updated strategic plan to support the Social Cash Transfer Program, which outlines plans for increasing coverage of social protection support, improving the sensitivity of the program to address vulnerabilities and respond to economic shocks, strengthen delivery mechanisms and financing capacities, and develop mechanisms for regular adjustment of transfers to account for inflation. (64) The updated plan, however, does not include specific child labor elimination strategies to mitigate the issues raised in the program evaluation.
Education Assistance Programs‡	Government-funded programs to provide educational assistance and support for vulnerable families by addressing educational barriers contributing to child labor. (51) Includes the Complementary Basic Education Program, a $1.1 million project that promotes school enrollment for children removed from child labor. (18) Also includes MGCDSSW 's Early Childhood Development Program that provides services to 2.4 million children through preschools and parenting groups. (18) In 2022, the government planned 150 new Community Based Care Centers to expand preschool and early-childhood care facilities. (5)
Accelerating Action for the Elimination of Child Labor in Supply Chains in Africa (ACCEL)	Government of Netherlands-funded program, implemented by the ILO, totaling $9.7 million, aimed at promoting employment, inclusive growth, and social protection; acceleration of progress towards Sustainable Development Goals; elimination of child labor; addressing decent work deficits in the tobacco sector; and other issues related to work and social protection. (65) During the reporting period, the ILO and the government participated in a planning workshop outlining Malawi's commitments and policy priorities as an Alliance 8.7 Pathfinder Country, prioritizing ratification and domestication of relevant international labor standards on child labor and forced labor. (66) The ILO also supported the Employer's Consultative Association of Malawi in developing and launching an updated employer's guide and code of conduct for child labor elimination. (67) Finally, ACCEL worked with the Tea Association of Malawi (TAML) to establish a compliance task force and district-level points of contact to support child labor monitoring among TAML members and smallholder farmers. (5)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (5,51,68)

The government, with the European Union, UNICEF, and the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, provides ongoing support for programs to increase birth registration and data collection in various districts across the country. (69,70) However, although Malawi has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem in all relevant sectors, including in domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Malawi (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that all forms of children's work, including work conducted by children in homes and on non-commercial farms, receive legal protection, including a minimum age for work that complies with international standards.	2009 – 2022
	Raise the minimum age for work from 14 to 18 to align with the compulsory education age.	2018 – 2022
	Update the legal framework to explicitly criminalize the use of children by adults for illicit activities.	2020 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2022

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Publish information on the number of civil penalties imposed and collected for child labor violations.	2016 – 2022
	Increase human and material resources, such as vehicles, to the labor inspectorate to conduct regular labor inspections, particularly in the agricultural sector.	2009 – 2022
	Ensure that child survivors of commercial sexual exploitation do not fall victim to sexual extortion and are not arrested or detained.	2018 – 2022
	Maintain and publish disaggregated information on criminal law enforcement efforts related to the worst forms of child labor, including ages of exploited children and the nature of exploitation.	2021 – 2022
Coordination	Standardize approaches for training and responding to child labor to strengthen coordination and case management among key stakeholders involved in the protection of children.	2020 – 2022
	Ensure that the National Steering Committee on Child Labor is operating according to its mandates and publish information about its activities.	2022
Government Policies	Ensure sufficient financial support and that activities are undertaken to implement national policies related to prevention and elimination of child labor and publish results from activities implemented during the reporting period.	2020 – 2022
	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the National Education Sector Plan and the National Youth Policy.	2011 – 2022
Social Programs	Develop social programs to support families and children transitioning from the tenancy system, including prevention of child labor.	2022
	Take measures to address barriers to education, including by defraying auxiliary educational costs, improving school infrastructure, increasing the number of teachers, increasing schools and transportation resources serving rural areas, and instituting mechanisms to address sexual violence occurring within schools.	2012 – 2022
	Ensure that all children are registered at birth and increase efforts to register children who were not issued birth certificates.	2018 – 2022
	Support targeted programs that expand educational opportunities for orphan-headed households and families affected by HIV/AIDS.	2022
	Improve harmonization of child labor prevention and elimination measures into the National Social Cash Transfer Program to increase its effectiveness in preventing and removing children from child labor.	2020 – 2022
	Increase the scope of social programs to reach more children at risk of the worst forms of child labor and develop specific programs to target children in domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation.	2011 – 2022

In 2022, Maldives made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government significantly increased the number of labor inspections from 124 inspections in 2021 to 656 in 2022. It also increased the budget for labor inspections and the number of labor inspectors from 23 to 32. Moreover, the government began conducting a baseline study on trafficking in persons throughout the country's atolls. However, children in Maldives are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced domestic work, illicit activities, and commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in domestic work. Information on children's work is limited because a national survey on child labor has not been conducted. Laws in Maldives also do not sufficiently prohibit commercial sexual exploitation because the use, procurement, and offering of a child for pornographic performances are not criminally prohibited.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Maldives.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	3.9 (2,364)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	79.5
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	4.0
Primary Completion Rate (%)		91.7

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2019, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2023. (1)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Demographic and Health Survey (DHS), 2009. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Services	Domestic work (3)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3-8)
	Forced labor in domestic work (9)
	Use in illicit activities, including the trafficking of drugs (3,4,6,10)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Information on children's work is limited because a national survey on child labor has not been conducted. (11) Moreover, the prevalence of child labor may be higher due to the number of undocumented migrant children from Bangladesh and other South Asian countries in Maldives. Some undocumented migrant girls are reported to be targeted for commercial sexual exploitation by traffickers. (3,11,12) Maldivian children from the outer islands are brought to the capital, Malé, for domestic work. Once there, some of these children, including some from impoverished families, may be more vulnerable to sex or labor trafficking. (3,8,12) There are also reports of foreign tourists engaging in the commercial sexual exploitation of children. (7,13) Maldivian children, especially boys, are also forced by traffickers to engage in the transportation of drugs for criminal gangs. (3,8,14)

The right to free primary and secondary education is provided to all children, but there is a shortage of trained teachers, classrooms, as well as teachers and resources for students with disabilities, in Maldives. (11,14-17) Girls are less likely to be enrolled in lower secondary education than boys, increasing their risk to child labor. (8,14,18)

Maldives

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In addition, while there are primary schools on all islands, some students must travel to other islands to attend secondary school. In these instances, some children participate in domestic work in exchange for room and board; however, this practice has decreased in recent years. (6,14)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Maldives has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Maldives' legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including a failure to prohibit the use, procurement, and offering of a child for pornographic performances.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Sections 6 and 12 of the Employment Act; Article 26 of the Child Rights Protection Act; Section 8 of the General Regulation on Child Rights Protection (10,15,19,20)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Sections 7 and 12 of the Employment Act (19)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Section 10 of the General Regulation on Child Rights Protection (10,20,21)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	No		Section 3 of the Employment Act; Sections 10–14, 16–18, 21, and 25 of the Prevention of Human Trafficking Act; Sections 3–8 and 11 of the 2nd Amendment to the Prevention of Human Trafficking Act; Article 25 of the Constitution; Sections 26 and 122 of the Child Rights Protection Act (15,16,19,22,23)

* Country has no conscription (28)

The Second Amendment to the Prevention of Human Trafficking Act expressly criminalizes the trafficking of children across borders and internally for purposes of exploitation. (23) The definition of exploitation in the Act includes forced labor, forced marriages, and forced engagement in sexual activities or prostitution. (10,13,23,29) However, the laws prohibiting forced labor in Maldives are not sufficient overall as they do not criminalize slavery. Laws prohibiting child trafficking are also insufficient because they require the use of force, fraud or coercion for the crime of child trafficking. (22,23) Moreover, laws in Maldives do not sufficiently prohibit commercial sexual exploitation, because the use, procurement, and offering of a child for pornographic performances are not criminally prohibited. (15,23,24)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Labor Relations Authority, Ministry of Economic Development	Conducts labor inspections and issues fines for violations in accordance with the Employment Act. (10,19) All labor inspections look for child labor violations related to minimum age requirements as well as forced labor and hazardous work, but there are no officers dedicated to child labor issues. (10) Penalties can be assessed during or after inspections, but are not enforced during initial inspections. (11) If violations are identified, a timeline is given to rectify violations. Follow-up inspections are then conducted to check compliance with the recommendations of the Labor Relations Authority. (11) Penalties are imposed in the event of noncompliance. If the Labor Relations Authority identifies a child employed in violation of child labor laws during inspections, a referral letter is sent via government intranet to the Child and Family Protection Service, who then takes over the case. (11) Inspections are carried out based on a schedule published at the beginning of every year, with a focus on sectors and establishments that employ large numbers of employees and on establishments that have a history of cases filed with the Labor Relations Authority. During 2022, inspections were carried out in Greater Malé Area and in every atoll of the Maldives, including in tourist resorts and islands with larger populations. (11) Received nine recommendations from the Children's Ombudsperson on implementing monitoring mechanisms, formulating a standard operating procedure, and maintaining statistics. (30) Moreover, a 2-day training on human trafficking, human smuggling, and survivor assistance, including for child survivors of such cases, was conducted for 38 labor inspectors, including officers from the awareness unit. (11)
Maldives Police Service	The Family and Child Protection Department investigates complaints of child labor and commercial sexual exploitation. Refers cases to the Prosecutor General's Office for prosecution and to the Ministry of Gender, Family, and Social Services to provide survivor services. (11) The Anti-Human Trafficking Department investigates human trafficking-related offenses and enforces laws prohibiting trafficking in persons, including cases of child trafficking. (6,13)
Prosecutor General's Office	Raises charges and oversees the conduct of criminal matters on behalf of the state, including for cases of child exploitation referred by the Maldives Police Service. (4,10) In cases regarding child exploitation and trafficking, a victim support officer from the Prosecutor General Office's Witness and Victims Support Service Unit and a prosecutor will join the case to identify imminent threats or probable risks and ensure the safety of the child survivor. ### Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Maldives took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Labor Relations Authority that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient financial and human resource allocations.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$44,419 (31)	$116,731 (11)

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (10,32,33)	Yes (10,11,32,33)

During the reporting period, all cases of child labor that were identified occurred within the tourism industry. The Labor Relations Authority faced challenges in enforcement due to the insufficient number of labor inspectors and travel budget to regularly inspect the country's many islands, including outlying atolls, despite increased budget in 2022. (11,31) Moreover, inspectors used their own personal vehicles for transportation for inspections that occurred within the Greater Malé Area, as the budget did not cover vehicle acquisition cost. There were reports that Labor Relations Authority inspectors accepted bribes and that the Labor Relations Authority lacked the institutional independence from the Ministry of Economic Development to fulfill its mandate and was subject to influence by politicians. (3,11)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Maldives took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Family and Child Protection Department of the Maldives Police Service that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including a lack of resources for investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (10)	Yes (11)
Number of Investigations	0 (33)	66 (31)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	0 (10)	3 (31)
Number of Convictions	0 (10)	0 (31)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (10)	N/A (31)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (10)	Yes (11)

In 2022, the Maldives Police Service did not report any investigations of commercial sexual exploitation of children, compared to investigating 291 incidents in the previous reporting period, including referring 115 cases for prosecution; the status of these 115 cases and whether the government initiated any prosecutions or achieved any convictions is unknown. (3) Sri Lankan police arrested a former senior Maldivian government official in July 2021 for alleged involvement in a child sex trafficking ring in Sri Lanka; however, the Maldivian government did not report an investigation of the case in 2022. Law enforcement, prosecutors, and judges' lack of awareness, sensitization, and training on the differences between child labor cases and other labor-related cases, distinguishing between sex trafficking and sexual abuse of children, and the Prevention of Human Trafficking Act may have contributed to a lack of successful prosecutions. (3,11,29) Though some trainings covered aspects of child labor, prosecutors did not participate directly in trainings that specifically focused on child labor. (11) There were also concerns that traffickers could use resorts and guesthouses to facilitate commercial sexual exploitation of children during travel because no government agency has the authority or resources to monitor these establishments for such crimes. (3)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of a coordination body to address all forms of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Anti-Trafficking in Persons Office	Established at the Ministry of Defense to implement the Anti-Human Trafficking National Action Plan and undertake prevention efforts. (32) In 2022, the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Office received a budget of $64,850, implemented the 2021–2022 National Action Plan, and drafted the 2023–2024 National Action Plan. Moreover, the Office participated in several workshops and webinars on labor migration and human trafficking in the Maldives. (3,35)

Although Maldives has the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Office to coordinate efforts to address the trafficking of children, it does not have coordinating mechanisms to address other forms of child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of coverage of all worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
Anti-Human Trafficking National Action Plan (2020–2022)	Established the government's goals to address human trafficking, including of children, by creating institutions, coordinating activities, raising awareness, and building capacity. (36) During the reporting period, began conducting a baseline study on human trafficking throughout the country's atolls, reviewed draft Victim Assistance and Shelter Service regulations, and held workshops for law enforcement officials. (11,35)

NGOs have stated that the lack of cohesive standard operating procedures delineating specific roles for all agencies, as well as procedures referring survivors to care and support services, may have resulted in a lack of referrals and the possibility that survivors were not identified, given the large number of migrant workers present in the country and the small number of survivors identified. (3,29) Research found no evidence of a policy designed to address other relevant forms of child labor, such as forced labor in domestic work or drug trafficking.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate efforts to address child labor in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Family and Children's Service Centers†	Nineteen Ministry of Gender, Family, and Social Services-operated centers that provide psychosocial support for child survivors of abuse and exploitation, four of which provide temporary shelter for survivors. (4,37) However, Family and Children's Service Centers and shelters lack adequate financial and human resources, and staff are inadequately trained to deal with cases involving abused and exploited children. (37) While reported to be active during the reporting period, research was unable to determine which activities were undertaken. (11,38)
National Victim Support Hotline (Number 1696)†	A 24-hour hotline dedicated to receiving reports of human trafficking and child labor. Formerly operated by the Maldives Police Service, but is in the process of being relocated to the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Office. (33) During the reporting period, the hotline was suspended due to lack of staff, resulting in the Maldives Police Service's Anti-Trafficking Department operating a temporary hotline to address this need. (3,35)

A temporary shelter for human trafficking survivors was closed, but two survivors in need of services were provided temporary shelter in guesthouses. (35) Existing social programs do not specifically address commercial sexual exploitation of children, use of children for drug trafficking, or forced labor in domestic work. Furthermore, no actions were taken to reduce demand for commercial sex or commercial sexual exploitation of children during travel during the reporting period. (11,29)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Maldives (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that laws prohibiting forced labor criminalize slavery.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that laws prohibiting child trafficking do not require the use of force, fraud and coercion.	2021 – 2022
	Criminally prohibit all forms of commercial sexual exploitation of children, including procuring, offering, and using children for pornographic performances.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2022
Enforcement	Ensure that the Labor Relations Authority has institutional independence from the Ministry of Economic Development to fulfill its mandate and is not subject to influence from politicians.	2022
	Ensure that investigators have the resources necessary, including transportation and adequate number of staff, to enforce laws on the worst forms of child labor.	2013 – 2022
	Ensure that law enforcement officials, prosecutors, and judges receive training on the appropriate handling of child labor, sex trafficking, and sexual abuse cases, as well as the proper application of the Prevention of Human Trafficking Act to cases.	2020 – 2022
	Ensure that government officials are investigated and, where appropriate, prosecuted for involvement in the commercial sexual exploitation of children.	2022
Coordination	Establish coordinating mechanisms to prevent and eliminate all worst forms of child labor.	2022
Government Policies	Adopt a policy to address all relevant forms of child labor and forced child labor, including domestic work and drug trafficking.	2014 – 2022
	Ensure that adequate standard operating procedures for victim identification and referral, as well as the provision of needed victim services, are developed and effectively implemented.	2021 – 2022
Social Programs	Conduct and publish a national child labor survey that includes both Maldivian and migrant children.	2009 – 2022
	Improve access to secondary education, particularly for girls, by ensuring adequate resources, secondary schools, and number of teachers, including for students with disabilities.	2021 – 2022
	Publish information about activities undertaken to implement social programs, including the Child Helpline and Family and Children's Service Centers.	2017 – 2022

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Social Programs	Provide sufficient funding, human resources, and staff training for Family and Children's Service Centers and shelters that serve abused and exploited children.	2018 – 2022
	Implement and provide sufficient resources for programs that address the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation of children, use of children for drug trafficking, and forced labor in domestic work.	2009 – 2022
	Ensure that adequate victim referral mechanisms, including the National Victim Support Hotline, are established, operational, and sufficiently staffed.	2021 – 2022

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2022, Mali made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The transition government recruited three additional labor inspectors. However, despite this initiative to address child labor, Mali is assessed as having made only minimal advancement because it continued to implement a practice that delays advancement to eliminate child labor. The transition government used children in its armed forces during the reporting period in violation of national law. Children in Mali are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in hereditary slavery and in armed conflict. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture, particularly in the production of cotton and rice, and in artisanal gold mining. Although Mali's 2012 Trafficking in Persons Law criminalizes trafficking for the purpose of slavery, it does not more broadly criminalize the act of slavery. Malian law also does not explicitly prohibit using, procuring, or offering children for illicit activities, and allows children under the age of 18 to be penalized for acts they were forced to commit as a direct result of being recruited and used by armed groups. In addition, Mali lacks a national action plan to address all worst forms of child labor that exist in the country, and social and rehabilitation services remain inadequate for child labor victims.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Mali.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent

	Forced recruitment of children by state armed groups for use in armed conflict (9,19,20)
	Hereditary slavery (3,9,16,21)
	Forced begging by Koranic teachers (6,7,9)
	Use in illicit activities, including in the trafficking of drugs (4,6,9)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

There was an increase in the worst forms of child labor in Mali due to insecurity from armed conflict and deteriorating socioeconomic conditions in 2022. (9) During the reporting year, non-state armed groups forcibly recruited and used children as combatants and in support capacities. (9) Non-state armed groups also controlled some artisanal gold mines in northern Mali and used children for forced labor at those locations. (4,10,22) In addition, despite the Ministry of Defense banning the military from recruiting and using children under the age of 18 in armed conflict in 2020, the Armed Forces of Mali (FAMa) used children in its forces during the reporting period. (19,23)

Children, especially from the Bellah community, are subject to hereditary slavery in northern and southwestern Mali. (6,9,10,24) Some children are born into slavery, while others are born free but remain in dependent status. As a result, these children, along with their parents, are forced to work for their parents' former masters in exchange for food, money, and lodging. (24) Enslaved children perform agricultural or domestic labor and are often sexually abused. (24) In addition, research indicates that children were abducted from Timbuktu and Gossi to be used as slaves during the reporting period. (9) Children, particularly those of Songhai ethnicity, also work in debt bondage in the northern salt mines of Taoudenni. (24) Moreover, as many as 45,753 children in the north, south, and west are also involved in artisanal gold mining, in which they are exposed to toxic substances and extreme temperatures, transport heavy loads of water and minerals, and work long hours. (4,6,9,14,22) Around mining sites, children also are victims of commercial sexual exploitation and domestic servitude, and are involved in trafficking narcotics. (4,6,9) Many of the children working in mines are from neighboring countries in the region. (6,9)

Some boys placed in the care of Koranic teachers for education are forced by their teachers to beg on the street or work in fields, after which they must surrender the money that they have earned to their teachers. (3,9,24) Research indicates that children forced to beg were not only from Mali, but also from neighboring countries, including Burkina Faso, Senegal, and Côte d'Ivoire. (4,6) While the transition government frequently encounters cases of child begging, it does not have the capacity or the appropriate facilities to provide shelter and social services to these children, given the widespread nature of this issue in the country. (4,6,9)

The Constitution guarantees free and compulsory education for citizens; however, many children, especially girls, do not attend school because parents are expected to pay fees for registration, uniforms, transportation costs, and supplies, as well as teachers' additional salary payments, all of which are cost prohibitive for many impoverished families. (3,6,8,15,25,26) Long distances between villages and schools, and lack of schools, classes, and teachers, are also significant barriers to education. (4,6) In addition, many children in Mali are not registered at birth, which may prevent them from accessing services such as education. (3,15,25,27) Research indicates that there are hundreds of thousands of children in Mali without birth certificates, and that while lack of documentation does not exclude children from schooling, these students may not be allowed to take national exams. (4,6) Evidence also suggests that incidences of physical, psychological, and sexual abuse, including corporal punishment, prevent some children from remaining in school. (16,25) Furthermore, internally displaced children faced interruptions in their education and barriers to enrolling in school after fleeing their homes. (4,6) Ongoing insecurity and attacks on schools have resulted in as many as 1,731 school closures by 2022. (20,28)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Mali has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The transition government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Mali's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the lack of criminal penalties for crimes related to the recruitment of children by non-state armed groups.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 326 of the Labor Code; Article L.187 of the Law 2017-021 modifying the Labor Code (29,30)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Hazardous Occupations List; Article 1 of the 2017-4388 Amendment to Hazardous Occupations List; Articles 326 and D.189.14 of the Labor Code (29,31,32)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

The Education Law only formally guarantees the right of education for citizens. (37) Articles 189.35 and 189.36 of the Labor Code allow children between the ages of 12 and 14 to perform domestic or light seasonal work, as long as it does not impede school attendance or exceed 4.5 hours of work per day. (29) However, Mali's light work framework does not meet international standards because it applies to children under the age of 13 and does not specify the conditions under which light work may be undertaken. (30,38) Although Mali's Trafficking in Persons Law criminalizes human trafficking for the purpose of slavery, it does not more broadly criminalize the act of slavery, and Mali's Labor Code, while prohibiting forced labor generally, does not specifically prohibit hereditary slavery. In addition, Malian law does not prohibit using, procuring, or offering a child for the production and trafficking of drugs as established by international standards. (15,21,33,35)

While the Child Protection Code provides protection for children under age 18, and the Penal Code establishes criminal penalties for several forms of child labor, some offenses included in the Child Protection Code do not carry criminal penalties, such as the prohibition of child recruitment by non-state armed groups. (34,35,39) Moreover, although the Child Protection Code prohibits children under age 18 from participating in armed conflicts or joining the national armed forces, it only provides for imprisonment of those who recruit children in cases of repeat offenses. Meanwhile, the Penal Code only provides criminal penalties for child recruitment if the children recruited are under age 15. (34,35) Article 28 of the Penal Code states that crimes committed out of self-defense or under a force that could not be resisted should not be penalized as prescribed in other articles of the Penal Code. Although a 2013 Interministerial Circular on the Prevention, Protection, and Rehabilitation of Child Soldiers states that Article 28 of the Penal Code is applicable to children involved in armed conflict, the Circular does not define the age range of the children it covers. (34,40) This means that some children under age 18 who are affiliated with non-state armed groups may be penalized for crimes they were forced to commit as a direct result of being a victim of child labor. (34,40)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The transition government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor, Civil Service and Social Dialogue (MOL)	Enforces labor laws and investigates Labor Code infractions, including those regarding child labor. (8,9,25) Chairs the National Unit to Fight Against Child Labor (CNLTE), which coordinates Mali's efforts to eliminate child labor and includes representatives from other government ministries, civil society, and worker and employer organizations. (8,15,41,42) One labor inspector in each region is designated as the point of contact for CNLTE staff to facilitate regional coordination. (3,4,15,43) During the reporting period, CNLTE only received 25 percent of its budget. The available funds it received were insufficient to cover its facilities and transportation needs. (9)
Ministry of Justice's Special Judicial Office and Specialized Investigation Brigade	Enforce criminal laws, including those related to child labor, child trafficking, child commercial sexual exploitation, recruitment and use of child soldiers, and the use of children in illicit activities. (3,4,6,8,44,45)
Ministry of Security's Police Brigade for the Protection of Morals and Children (BPMC), and the Brigade to Fight Migrant and Human Trafficking	Investigate crimes against children, including human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation. (3,6,9,15)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Mali took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor, Civil Service and Social Dialogue (MOL) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient financial and human resource allocation.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$115,000 (6)	$17,250 (9)
Number of Labor Inspectors	113 (6)	116 (9)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	Yes (29)	Yes (29)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	N/A (6)	Yes (9)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksite	571 (6)	Unknown (9)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	Unknown (6)	Unknown (9)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	85 (6)	Unknown (9)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	45 (6)	Unknown (9)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (6)	Yes (9)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (6)	Yes (9)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (29)	Yes (9)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (6)	Yes (9)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (6)	Yes (9)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (6)	Yes (9)

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Mali's workforce, which includes approximately 6.5 million workers. Research indicates that Mali does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (43,46) There are 15 inspectors and comptrollers dedicated to child labor issues. (6) Although all regions have labor inspectors, government services are limited or non-existent in some areas due to the insecurity caused by the presence of non-state armed groups. (3,15,43) In addition, reports indicate that a lack of trained staff, equipment, vehicles, and funding hampered the labor inspectorate's ability to conduct child labor inspections and legal proceedings, especially in remote areas of northern Mali. (3,8,25,43,47) Moreover, the transition government rarely collects statistics on the matter, and there is no central database to maintain any data related to the worst forms of child labor. (10) Finally, the reported number of child labor victims is likely lower than the actual number of victims, given the widespread nature of child labor and inadequate enforcement of child labor laws in Mali. (3,4)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Mali took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient financial and human resource allocation.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	No (6)	Yes (9)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (6)	Unknown (9)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (6)	Unknown (9)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (6)	Unknown (9)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (6)	Unknown (9)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (6)	Yes (9)

Reports indicate that because of political instability, which hinders labor and criminal law enforcement efforts in western and northern Mali, the prevalence of hereditary slavery, forced labor, and human trafficking worsened in 2022. (3,8,9,24,25,43,48) Mali also lacked trained staff and funding to adequately conduct criminal law enforcement efforts related to the worst forms of child labor, particularly in remote areas. (3,24,43) For example, the number of law enforcement agents working for the Brigade for the Protection of Morals and Children (BPMC)–54—is inadequate given the prevalence of the worst forms of child labor in the country. (3,6) Research also showed that the BPMC's budget was insufficient, and it had only three vehicles to conduct inspections and very limited amounts of fuel for each quarter in 2022. Additionally, there were reports that staff did not receive office materials and had to use personal resources for official documents and furniture. (6,9)

The government did not provide information on whether new criminal investigators received initial training, whether refresher courses were provided, the number of investigations carried out, whether violations were found, whether prosecutions were initiated, the number of convictions, or imposed penalties for violations related to the worst forms of child labor for inclusion in this report. (9) Many justice sector actors also noted government officials' interference in cases involving slavery-related practices in an effort to have the charges dismissed. (49,50)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The transition government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of clarity about the roles of coordinating bodies.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Committee to Track Child Labor (CDN)	Functions under MOL and acts as the main coordinating body for the elimination of child labor in Mali. Composed of several ministries, NGOs, business organizations, and trade unions. (9) During the reporting period, CDN held regular meetings. (9)

Reports indicate that there is confusion with regard to roles and a lack of coordination between the National Unit to Fight Against Child Labor (CNLTE) and the National Coordinating Committee for the Fight Against Trafficking in Persons and Associated Practices. (8,24,48,51)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The transition government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of a national child labor action plan covering all worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Plan of Action to Combat Trafficking in Persons (2018–2022)	Aimed to enhance the legal framework to prevent human trafficking, improve enforcement efforts, and provide effective protection and care for survivors. Led by the National Coordinating Committee for the Fight Against Trafficking in Persons and Associated Practices. (52) Called for the establishment of a formal body to coordinate government efforts to address human trafficking, and allocated a budget of $10 million for the 5-year period, or $2 million per year. The transition government pledged to contribute $350,000 annually. (22,51) In 2022, several anti-trafficking trainings, workshops, and community outreach events were carried out. (8)
Interministerial Circular and the Protocol on the Release and Transfer of Children Associated with Armed Groups and Armed Forces	Provides a framework that highlights the responsibility of the government to prevent children's involvement in armed conflict, and to protect and reintegrate those children who become involved. (15,53,54) During the reporting period, at least 14 child soldiers were removed from armed groups. (9)

‡ The transition government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (3,15,55)

In 2020, the National Plan to Eliminate Child Labor (PANETEM) ended, and a new PANETEM is being developed, but has not yet been finalized. (6) Although Mali has adopted the National Plan of Action to Combat Trafficking in Persons, research found no evidence of a policy on other worst forms of child labor.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the transition government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate efforts to address child labor in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Mali Government and NGO-Implemented Programs†	The Directorate for the Promotion of Children and Family (DPCF), led by the Ministry for the Promotion of Women, Children, and the Family (MPFEF), coordinates issues related to child labor and child protection. (4,6,8) Additionally, the “Child Travel Card” program ( Titre de Voyage pour Enfant ), created by DPCF in 2002, remained a part of the directorate's efforts to address child trafficking by facilitating proper identification of children traveling within and outside Mali. Failure to show a child travel card will prompt follow-up actions to confirm whether the child is a victim of human trafficking for forced labor, commercial sexual exploitation, or forced migration. (6,9) Research indicates that this program does not cover foreign citizens. (10) Also led by MPFEF, the Interministerial Committee to Prevent Grave Violations Against Children conducts awareness-raising campaigns to prevent the recruitment and use of children in armed conflict, implements reintegration programs for former child soldiers, and conducts joint missions with international partners to determine the presence of children in armed conflict. (8,15) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the programs during the reporting period.
ILO-Implemented Projects to Combat Child Labor	ILO-implemented projects to address child labor and forced labor in supply chains. These projects included the CLEAR Cotton Project on Child and Forced Labor (2019–2022), an $8.5 million EU and Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO)-funded global project to address child labor and forced labor in cotton and textile supply chains, and ACCEL Africa (2018–2022), a $26.5 million Government of Netherlands-funded regional project to address child labor in gold mining and cotton supply chains. (6,43,56-58) The South-South Project on Decent Work ( Programme Sud-Sud sur le Travail Décent ) was funded by the government of Brazil ($400,000) and implemented by the ILO, and was extended until December 2022. The program aimed to provide labor inspection training and capacity building to labor inspectors, and to improve working conditions in cotton production areas by promoting decent work principles and providing social protections to producers. (4,9) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the CLEAR Cotton Project on Child and Forced Labor or the South-South Project on Decent Work during the reporting period.
Foreign Government and Company-Implemented Programs	Fighting Child Labor in the Value Chain of the Cotton, Clothing, and Textile Industries ( Lutte contre le Travail des Enfants dans la Chaîne de Valeur Coton, Textile, et Habillement ) was funded by the EU and FAO and implemented by the ILO between 2018 and 2022. The project reinforced the national legal framework for addressing child labor and forced labor in the cotton sector. (4,9) The project included mapping the supply chain of cotton and clothing, taking into account gender considerations. (4,9) Promoting the Principles and Fundamental Rights in the Cotton Supply Chain Work Environment (2018–2022) was a project funded by Inditex, a Spanish multi-national company working in the cotton sector. This project targeted cotton producers in the cotton-producing region of Sikasso and aimed to promote a favorable work environment for the protection of fundamental worker rights. (4,6) Included awareness campaigns and trainings for relevant partners, local associations, and community leaders toward developing a monitoring system that ensured respect for fundamental worker rights in the cotton sector. The program also promoted women's rights and women's leadership in cotton producer organizations and cooperatives. (4) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Fighting Child Labor in the Value Chain of the Cotton, Clothing, and Textile Industries program or the Promoting the Principles and Fundamental Rights in the Cotton Supply Chain Work Environment program during the reporting period.

‡ The transition government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (3,15,59,60)

An informal referral mechanism exists among NGOs, UN bodies, police, and other government agencies to allow the withdrawal of children from armed conflict and to provide social services to survivors of the worst forms of child labor. (3,43,51) Despite these efforts, reports indicate that resources and facilities available to social services agencies are inadequate. (3,4,25,43) In addition, while Mali does not fund or participate in programs to address child labor in domestic work, forced begging, or commercial sexual exploitation, it provides in-kind and financial support to NGOs working on these issues. (8)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Mali (Table 11).

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that laws providing free basic education include all children in Mali, including non-citizens.	2022
	Ensure that the Labor Code establishes a minimum age no younger than age 13 for light work and specifies the conditions under which light work may be undertaken, in accordance with international standards.	2015 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits hereditary slavery.	2017 – 2022
	Criminally prohibit the use, procurement, or offering of children for illicit activities, including for the production and trafficking of drugs, in accordance with international standards.	2009 – 2022
	Criminally prohibit the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups for use in any armed conflict.	2013 – 2022
	Revise the Interministerial Circular on the Prevention, Protection, and Rehabilitation of Child Soldiers to include the specific ages of children covered by the Circular, while ensuring that these ages are in compliance with international standards. Ensure that children under age 18 are not penalized for acts committed as a result of being forcibly recruited into armed groups or used in armed conflict.	2009 – 2022
Enforcement	Increase labor inspectorate funding and resources, including training, equipment, and transportation to carry out inspections, especially in remote areas of northern Mali.	2012 – 2022
	Increase the number of labor inspectors from 116 to 162 to ensure adequate coverage of approximately 6.5 million workers.	2012 – 2022
	Publish information on labor law enforcement efforts, including the number of child labor violations found and the number of inspections conducted at the worksite.	2010 – 2022
	Collect child labor statistics regularly and create a centralized database to track data on the worst forms of child labor.	2021 – 2022
	Publish information on criminal law enforcement, including whether new criminal investigators received initial training and whether refresher courses were provided, the number of investigations, violations found, and prosecutions initiated, and whether penalties for violations of the worst forms of child labor were imposed.	2020 – 2022
	Implement the provisions of the Interministerial Circular and the UN-signed Protocol, which require that children in detention for their association with armed groups be transferred to social services or to UN child protection agencies for appropriate reintegration and social protection services.	2013 – 2022
	Ensure that criminal law enforcement efforts related to child labor are properly funded and resourced.	2020 – 2022
	Ensure that government officials are held accountable for interference in legal cases related to crimes concerning the worst forms of child labor, including in cases of slavery and the recruitment and use of child soldiers.	2019 – 2022
	Ensure that perpetrators of the worst forms of child labor are prosecuted and convicted in accordance with the law.	2013 – 2022
	Ensure that children are not imprisoned for their association with armed groups.	2022
	Ensure that children under age 18 are not recruited into or used in the national armed forces, in compliance with national law.	2022
	Demobilize any child currently serving in the national armed forces and provide all appropriate social services.	2022
	Coordination	Ensure that all coordinating bodies are active and able to carry out their intended mandates.
Clarify roles for the National Unit to Fight Against Child Labor (CNLTE) and the National Coordinating Committee for the Fight Against Trafficking in Persons and Associated Practices coordinating mechanisms addressing child labor, and improve coordination among relevant agencies.		2010 – 2022
Government Policies	Adopt a national policy that addresses all forms of child labor that are prevalent in Mali, such as a national plan to eliminate child labor.	2012 – 2022
Social Programs	Revive and undertake activities to implement social programs to address child labor and make information about implementation measures publicly available.	2021 – 2022
	Expand the Child Travel Card program, which provides identification to Malian children when they are traveling within and outside of the country, to also provide identification to foreign citizen children.	2021 – 2022
	Eliminate barriers to and make education accessible for all children, including girls and those living in conflict-affected areas, by removing school-related fees, expanding school infrastructure, increasing teacher availability, providing free school supplies, and taking measures to ensure the safety of children and teachers in schools.	2010 – 2022
	Increase birth registration rates to ensure that children have access to social services, including education.	2010 – 2022
	Institute new programs to address child labor in all relevant sectors, including domestic work, forced begging, and commercial sexual exploitation.	2009 – 2022
	Ensure that government social services have sufficient resources and facilities to provide the necessary care for survivors of the worst forms of child labor, including for children subjected to forced begging and children used in armed conflict.	2016 – 2022

In 2022, Mauritania made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. In February 2023, the government created the Instance Nationale, an organization mandated to combat hereditary slavery and human trafficking by coordinating cross-government efforts, cooperating with international partners, providing assistance to victims, maintaining a database of trafficking cases, and working with civil society organizations. However, despite new initiatives to address child labor, Mauritania is assessed as having made only minimal advancement because it continued to implement a law that delays advancement to eliminate child labor.

Mauritania’s Civil Status Code requires a copy of the biological parents’ marriage license for children to obtain a birth certificate. As a result, children born out of wedlock and many Haratine and Sub-Saharan ethnic minority children, including those of slave descent, have been prevented from being registered at birth. Because birth certificates are required for enrollment in secondary school in Mauritania, children as young as age 12 cannot access education, making them more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, including in indentured and hereditary slavery. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture, particularly in herding cattle and goats. Research is needed on the prevalence of child labor in the country, and social programs are insufficient to adequately address the extent of the problem. In addition, the government did not publish comprehensive information about its labor law enforcement efforts.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Mauritania. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	19.7 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	68.3
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	15.8
Primary Completion Rate (%)		72.9

Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced begging,† sometimes as a result of criminal gang recruitment and coercion by Koranic teachers (4,5,8,17,18)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (14,19,20)
	Use in illicit activities, including the production and transportation of drugs, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (16,19,21)
	Indentured and hereditary slavery (3-6,18,19,22)
	Forced labor in domestic work† (4,5,16,21)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children in Mauritania, especially from the Haratine ethnic minority, continue to be exploited as slaves and endure slave-like practices, particularly in rural and remote areas of the country. (20,23) Some children are born into slavery; others are born free but remain in a dependent status and are forced to work with their parents for their former masters in exchange for food, money, and lodging. (9,14,19) Enslaved children herd animals, such as cattle and goats, and perform domestic labor. (4,5,12,19) Young girls from poor families of Haratine, Wolof, Halpulaar, and Soninké communities are sometimes forced to work as domestic servants in Mauritania's urban areas. (4) In Mauritania, it is a traditional practice to send children to Koranic teachers (marabouts) to receive an education. However, some Koranic teachers force their students (talibés) to beg on the streets for long hours and to surrender the money they have earned. (4,5,8,10,19,21,24)

In July 2022, Mauritania's National Assembly adopted the Education Reform Law, which aims to transition all students to public schools and end private education. The reforms unintentionally created a new barrier to education access by creating an overwhelming demand for public education, and a structural scarcity of adequate public-school buildings, qualified teachers, and textbooks, especially given that many school buildings continued to be used as emergency shelters after catastrophic flooding events. (8) The lack of school infrastructure and limited availability of teachers in rural areas also impedes access to education, which may increase children's vulnerability to the worst forms of child labor. (4,15,25) In addition, children from families of slave descent, especially from the Haratine ethnic minority, face barriers to accessing education due to ethnic discrimination. (6,13,26) Furthermore, refugee children may have difficulty accessing education or finding available classrooms, which makes them particularly vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. (7,13,19,25,27)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Mauritania has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Mauritania’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the compulsory education age being lower than the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 76 of the General Child Protection Code (28)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 76 of the General Child Protection Code; Article 247 of the Labor Code (28,29)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 76 and 77 of the General Child Protection Code; Article 4 of the List of Hazardous Work Forbidden to Children (28,30)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 1, 3, and 4 of the 2003 Anti-Trafficking Law; Article 1 and 2 of the 2013 Law Against Slavery and Torture Crimes; the 2015 Bill modifying the Anti-Slavery Law; Article 54 of the Penal Protection Code for Children (31-34)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 1 and 3 of the 2003 Anti-Trafficking Law; Article 54 of the Penal Protection Code for Children; Articles 2 and 4 of the 2020 Law Regarding the Prevention and Suppression of Trafficking in Persons and Victim Protection; Articles 18, 43, and 67 of the 2020 Law Regarding the Fight Against Migrant Trafficking (31,34-36)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 72 and 76 of the General Child Protection Code; Article 1 of the 2003 Anti-Trafficking Law; Articles 24–26 of the Penal Protection Code for Children; Article 2 of the 2020 Law Regarding the Prevention and Suppression of Trafficking in Persons and Victim Protection (28,31,34,35)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 3–5 and 14 of Law 93-37 on the Prohibition of Production, Trafficking, and Use of Drugs and Illicit Substances (37)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 7 of the 1962 Military Recruitment Law (38)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 43 of the Penal Protection Code for Children (34)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	14	Article 1 of the Basic Education Law (39)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 1 of the Basic Education Law (39)

* Country has no conscription (13)

The 2011-003 Civil Status Code requires a copy of the biological parents’ marriage license for children to obtain a birth certificate. (40) As a result, children born out of wedlock and many Haratine and Sub-Saharan ethnic minority children, including those of slave descent, have been prevented from being registered at birth. While students no longer need to possess birth certificates to take part in national examinations to obtain the Certificate of Primary Education Studies, birth certificates are still required to take exams necessary to enroll in secondary school. (4,7,8,12) As a result, many children as young as age 12 cannot access secondary education, making them more vulnerable to child labor. (5,6,14,16,18,41,42) Moreover, although all families are required to register children for birth certificates, research found that the civil registration process, which includes obtaining birth certificates, is confusing and time consuming. Applicants have faced additional hardship due to the closure of registration centers outside the capital, and a lack of training for registration center staff. (28,40) To address some of these challenges, the Ministry of Social Affairs, Childhood, and the Family (MASEF) and the National Child Protection Council work nationwide to identify cases of citizens—including children—who are unable to access birth certificates and provide them with the support needed to complete the registration process. (43) Mauritania also has a special committee to review cases of unregistered applicants and facilitate documentation processes for marginalized and vulnerable communities, including by conducting site visits to civil registration centers where they provide support to individuals with the civil registration process. (43,44) The government also continued to collaborate with UNHCR to issue birth certificates to Malian refugee children during the reporting period. (8)

The Labor Code allows children ages 12 and older to perform light work as long as it does not impede their school attendance, does not exceed 2 hours per day, and is authorized by the Ministry of Labor. (29) However, the Labor Code does not specify the activities in which light work may be permitted. (45) In addition, children in Mauritania are required to attend school only up to age 14. This leaves children ages 14 through 16 vulnerable to child labor because they are not required to attend school but are not legally allowed to work. (28,39)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor and Professional Education's Directorate of Labor and Inspection (MFTPMA)	Enforces labor laws and investigates labor code infractions, including violations related to minimum wage and hazardous work. (8,26)
Ministry of the Interior's Special Brigade for Minors	Investigates crimes against children, including human trafficking, and monitors religious schools ( mahadras ) to ensure that children are not forced to beg on behalf of their teachers. Mainly operates in the capital, Nouakchott. (8,13,26,46)
Ministry of Justice (MOJ)	Responsible for enforcing Mauritania's anti-slavery and anti-trafficking laws. The MOJ's Directorate of the Judiciary for the Protection of Children assists with the enforcement of child protection issues and oversees tribunals responsible for sentencing offenders. (8,13) Manages the anti-slavery courts, which prosecute crimes related to slavery, and provides free legal assistance to survivors, including children. Anti-slavery courts are located in Néma, Nouakchott, and Nouadhibou. (8,19,20,47)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Mauritania took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Professional Education's Directorate of Labor and Inspection (MFTPMA) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient allocation of financial resources.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2022, the MFTPMA provided training to labor inspectors on the country's hazardous work list. (8) New inspectors also receive training on the Labor Code, child labor laws, and on all labor-related conventions the country has ratified. (49) Labor inspectors prepare reports when they find a labor violation and may include a recommendation for a penalty, but they are not allowed to assess penalties. However, inspectors must file labor violation reports with the Ministry of Justice (MOJ) and the MOJ assesses the penalty for the violation. (4,12) Research found that the MFTPMA lacked equipment, training, transportation, and funding necessary to conduct inspections, especially in remote locations and in the informal sector, which employs more than 60 percent of the workforce. (4,8,50,51)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Mauritania took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient investigation and prosecution of criminal cases related to hereditary slavery.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	No (4)	No (8)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (4)	4 (20)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (4)	6 (8)
Number of Convictions	2 (7)	0 (8)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (4)	Unknown (8)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (4)	Yes (8)

In 2022, the government carried out numerous informational campaigns around the country to address indentured and hereditary slavery. (20,52) In October, the Office of the Commissioner for Human Rights, in collaboration with several human rights organizations, carried out a nationwide awareness raising campaign on anti-slavery and anti-trafficking in persons laws, which reached an estimated 63,000 people. (20) Also in October, MOJ carried out its own campaign to raise awareness about existing anti-slavery and anti-trafficking in persons laws, with the objective of providing training to judges and prosecutors in rural areas. (20) In addition, the National Commission for Human Rights also led an awareness campaign into several regions of the country, which was joined by several foreign ambassadors at different times, as well as by the representative of the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights in Nouakchott. This campaign trained local stakeholders and government agencies how to properly identify and report slavery and trafficking in persons cases, as well as how to use the newly established toll-free number to forward and follow up on those types of cases. (20) This toll-free number will provide witnesses, survivors, and other individuals an opportunity to report potential cases of trafficking and slavery anonymously, safely, and securely. (20)

Despite these efforts, more actions are needed from criminal law enforcement agencies to address the worst forms of child labor, including hereditary slavery, given the magnitude of the problem. (11,16,18,23,53,54) In some cases, insufficient action may be due to corruption, misunderstanding of anti-slavery laws, or a lack of political will to prosecute suspected slaveholders in rural areas. (4,10,53) For instance, some police and prosecutors have failed to investigate cases of slavery, even when a complaint has been filed. (55) There are also reports of investigative judges unlawfully dismissing cases of slavery, pressuring victims to drop their cases, and other judges reclassifying slavery cases as a lesser crime. Often it is accepted to use social mediation in lieu of prosecution, including the acceptance of direct payment made by the perpetrator as compensation instead of using the criminal justice system. (5,10,11,21,25,50,51,55,56) Research also indicates that enforcement agencies, including the anti-slavery courts, lack personnel and funding to adequately enforce laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (6,10,19,22,50,57) In addition, improperly documented evidence gathered during investigations, a lack of specialized prosecutors and judges, and a lack of training for police and judicial officials often resulted in victims of slavery or trafficking not being identified. (11,25,50,51,56) Furthermore, perpetrators found guilty in

Mauritania

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

slavery cases often avoid justice by escaping into neighboring countries. (25) Although the government regularly publishes circulars to describe the process of investigating slavery cases and provide victims with services, research indicates that not all officials may be following the circular's guidance. This includes the joint circular 104-2021, which requested that judicial actors address cases under the Anti-Slavery and Anti-Trafficking laws with an appropriate level of seriousness, and also called for greater assistance to victims. (25,52,58)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Commissariat on Human Rights, Humanitarian Action, and Civil Society Relations	Coordinates the development and implementation of government policies related to human rights, including those related to the worst forms of child labor. Carries out awareness-raising campaigns to combat slavery and human trafficking, and acts as a semi-autonomous body under the supervision of the Office of the Prime Minister, which is also a member of the Human Rights Inter-Ministerial Committee. (19,59) The Commissariat on Human Rights, Humanitarian Action and Civil Society Relations has the power to act as a civil party on behalf of victims of slavery. (10) In 2022, the Commissariat's budget was increased to $6.5 million from $4 million the previous year. (52)

In May 2022, at the government's invitation, the UN Special Rapporteur on Contemporary Forms of Slavery Including its Causes and Consequences visited Mauritania, meeting with the President, Prime Minister, other ministers, as well as civil society and international partners. (60) In addition, in February 2023, the government created the National Authority to Combat Trafficking in Persons and Smuggling of Migrants (INLCTPTM), or Instance Nationale, an organization mandated to combat hereditary slavery and human trafficking by coordinating cross-government efforts, cooperating with international partners, providing assistance to survivors, maintaining a database of trafficking cases, and working with civil society organizations. (20,25) The INLCTPTM also manages a fund to provide lodging, meals, and financial support to survivors of slavery and their families both during and after prosecution of their cases in the anti-slavery courts. (13,25)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including insufficient funding to implement national action plans and strategies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Child Protection Strategy (2020–2025)	Aims to protect children against violence, exploitation, abuse, and neglect. Specifically includes children exploited at work, child survivors of human trafficking, children living on the streets, and children who are survivors of violence or sexual exploitation. (5,8,61) As in the previous year, research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Child Protection Strategy during the reporting period.
National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons (2020–2022)	Adopted in March 2020, aimed to address forced child labor, forced child begging, forced prostitution, slavery, and other forms of child exploitation. Overseen by the Commissariat on Human Rights, Humanitarian Action, and Civil Society Relations with a budget of $145,946 (5.4 million MRU) for implementation. (17,62) During the reporting period, 20 awareness-raising campaigns on human trafficking aimed at NGOs were carried out. Additionally, 14 trainings on anti-trafficking in persons legislation were organized for administrative, judicial and security officials. (13)
Strategy for Accelerated Growth and Sustainable Development (2016–2030)	Aims to reduce poverty, promote sustainable development, and increase access to fundamental social services. Overseen by the Ministry of Economic Affairs and Development. (63) Integrates strategies to increase birth registration and access to compulsory education, strengthen social protection systems for children, and support efforts to combat slavery, including its vestiges. (63) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Strategy for Accelerated Growth and Sustainable Development during the reporting period.

Efforts to implement key policies related to child labor continue to be delayed due to insufficient allocation of resources. (7,11,56,64)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate efforts to address child labor in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Program to Eradicate the Effects of Slavery†	Government program functioning under the Taazour Administration that supports the reintegration and rehabilitation of former slaves. (65) As in past years, research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Program to Eradicate the Effects of Slavery during the reporting period.
Ministry of Social Affairs, Childhood, and the Family (MASEF) Office of Childhood Programs†	Government programs to protect vulnerable children, including victims of the worst forms of child labor. (14,20) During the reporting period, the MASEF and the NGO Save the Children trained 200 child protection actors on ways to identify child abuse (including violence and exploitation), and put in place a strategy to enable vulnerable children to access preschool education. (8) A total of 150 establishments throughout the country have been set up, including 100 facilities opened in Nouakchott in 2022. (8) Also in 2022, MASEF created additional child protection committees to cover all districts, and continued to operate their Centers for the Protection and Social Integration of Children. (8) In collaboration with the ILO, the MASEF has also begun engaging with domestic workers, employers, and farmers, respectively, to increase social dialogue and improve livelihoods and labor conditions, thereby reducing vulnerabilities to forced labor and risk of continued enslavement. (25)
Model Mahadras Program†	Ministry of Islamic Affairs-funded program that provides monthly cash transfers of approximately $27 to parents whose children are enrolled in Model Mahadras . Also operates adult literacy classes for 8,000 religious leaders ( imams ) across Mauritania to raise awareness of children's rights, including information on child labor and child trafficking. (21) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Model Mahadras Program during the reporting period.

In March 2022, the government co-chaired a sub-regional symposium on slavery, which marked the first of its kind to take place in Mauritania and included civil society actors from multiple countries. (8) The government also made some efforts to combat forced child begging, which included visiting some Koranic schools and working with religious leaders to raise awareness of child protection issues. (8) Moreover, the Government of Mauritania, in collaboration with the IOM and the U.S. government, launched an anti-trafficking project to develop the capacity of law enforcement officials, local authorities, and NGOs to address trafficking in persons. As a result of this project, a guide known as the "Code of Good Practice" was created and shared with social services providers. Despite these efforts, the scope of social programs in Mauritania is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, especially in agriculture, herding livestock, domestic work, and for children in hereditary and indentured slavery. (4,10) In addition, the lack of recent data on slavery limits the government's ability to develop effective social programs to comprehensively address this issue, and more awareness-raising efforts on anti-slavery laws are needed throughout the country. (51)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Mauritania (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Accede to the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict.	2019 – 2022
	Ensure that labor laws specify the activities in which light work may be permitted.	2015 – 2022
	Raise the compulsory education age from 14 to 16 to align with the minimum age for work.	2018 – 2022
Enforcement	Publish complete information on labor law enforcement efforts, including the number of child labor law violations found, the number of child labor violations for which penalties were imposed, the number of child labor penalties imposed that were collected, and whether routine inspections were targeted.	2019 – 2022
	Increase training and resources for labor and criminal law enforcement agencies, including the anti-slavery courts, to adequately enforce labor laws, especially in remote areas and in the informal sector.	2010 – 2022

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Increase efforts to ensure that cases of the worst forms of child labor, including hereditary slavery and forced begging, are fully investigated, brought to court, and prosecuted in accordance with the law.	2016 – 2022
	Improve evidence gathering and documentation processes during slavery case investigations and provide the necessary specialized training for prosecutors and judges in the anti-slavery courts.	2022
	Ensure presumptive pretrial detention for defendants in hereditary slavery cases so that perpetrators found guilty in slavery cases are not able to escape into neighboring countries.	2022
	Ensure all officials involved in slavery or trafficking in persons cases follow the existing circular 104-2021, and that the circular is as widely shared as possible in order to reach all officials.	2022
	Ensure that judicial officials can properly identify cases of slavery and trafficking and that they do not improperly dismiss or fail to refer appropriate cases to the anti-slavery courts.	2020 – 2022
	Take appropriate corrective action to hold accountable any government officials who do not properly enforce, or who prevent the enforcement of the laws related to the worst forms of child labor, including hereditary slavery.	2022
	Ensure that all cases of slavery and slavery-like practices are tried in the anti-slavery court system and in instances in which they are being tried outside the system, ensure that cases are appropriately transferred.	2022
	Ensure slavery victims are aware of their rights afforded to them by the judicial system.	2022
	Increase collaboration and coordination between labor and criminal law enforcement agencies.	2020 – 2022
Government Policies	Ensure that key policies related to child labor receive sufficient resources, including funds, for effective implementation.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure activities are undertaken to implement key policies related to child labor and publish results from activities on an annual basis.	2021 – 2022
Social Programs	Ensure ongoing reforms guarantee enough schools and teachers, in order to provide every child with access to education.	2022
	Ensure activities are undertaken to implement key social programs to address child labor and make information about implementation measures publicly available on an annual basis.	2021 – 2022
	Expand the scope of programs to address child labor, including in agriculture, herding, domestic work, and hereditary and indentured slavery.	2009 – 2022
	Implement a continuous awareness-raising program for government officials on the laws related to slavery and child labor.	2012 – 2022
	Conduct research and collect data on slavery to inform the development of effective policies and programs to identify and protect children who are at risk.	2010 – 2022
	Increase funding for social programs that provide services to formerly enslaved persons.	2015 – 2022
	Ensure that all children are able to obtain birth certificates to increase their access to secondary education and reduce their vulnerability to child labor.	2016 – 2022
	Increase funding dedicated to improving school infrastructure and teacher availability, especially in rural areas, to eliminate barriers to and make education accessible for all children, including those from families of slave descent, refugees, and ethnic minorities.	2011 – 2022

In 2022, Mauritius made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. In January 2022, the government enacted three laws, the Children's Act 2020, the Children's Court Act 2020, and the Child Sex Offenders Register Act 2020, aimed at reinforcing the legal framework on the protection of children. The three laws intended to harmonize Mauritius' domestic laws with the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child and the African Charter on the Rights and Welfare of the Child. The government also increased its number of labor inspectors from 109 in 2021 to 164 in 2022 and adopted a 2022–2026 national action plan to combat human trafficking, with support from the International Organization of Migration. However, some children in Mauritius are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation and illicit activities, including selling drugs. Children also engage in child labor in construction and street vending. The government should consider implementing policies and social programs to improve the standard of care and availability of housing for victims of child commercial sexual exploitation. In addition, the police are in need of sufficient human resources, training in child-sensitive interview techniques, and adequate procedural mechanisms for investigation of child labor crimes, such as those involving commercial sexual exploitation. In addition, gaps remain in the implementation of key policies and social programs related to child labor, including the worst forms of child labor.

Agalega Islands, Cargados Carajos Shoals, and Rodrigues are not shown.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Mauritius. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		96.4

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2021, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2023. (1)
Data were unavailable from International Labor Organization's analysis, 2021. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including animal rearing (3,4)
	Fishing, including diving, and casting nets and traps (3-5)
Industry	Construction (3,4)
Services	Domestic work (3)
	Working in shops and restaurants (4-7)
	Street work, including vending, begging, and in the transportation sector (3,4,8)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,4)
	Use in illicit activities, including selling drugs (3,4)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Reporting from 2022 showed that children from low-income families in Mauritius engaged in child labor activities on construction sites and in street vending, domestic work, animal rearing, agriculture, and the transportation and selling of goods. (3,4) Children were exposed to risks of health hazards and accidents while working without personal protective equipment, including drowning due to deep fishing, contracting sexually transmissible diseases and unwanted pregnancies, alcohol and drug addiction, and stymied physical and psychological development. (4) In addition, some children in Mauritius are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation by their peers or family members, or through fraudulent offers of other employment. (4,7,9) There are also reports that some children in Mauritius are sexually abused and exploited through online channels. (3,4,10,11) Because Mauritius has never conducted a national child labor survey, information on the prevalence of child labor in the country is limited. (3,12,13)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Mauritius has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

On July 1, 2021, the government ratified ILO C.190, which obligates each Member State to respect, promote, and realize the fundamental principles and rights at work, including the effective abolition of child labor. (14,15) The Convention entered into force for Mauritius on July 1, 2022. (16)

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Mauritius's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the lack of prohibitions for the military recruitment of children by non-state armed groups.

In January 2022, the government enacted three laws aimed at reinforcing the legal framework on the protection of children. (3,4,27) The three laws intended to bring Mauritius' domestic laws in line with the rights and obligations outlined in the UN CRC and the African Charter on the Rights and Welfare of the Child. (23) The Children's Act, which replaced the Child Protection Act, aims to address the limitations of the Child Protection Act by aligning with international standards on children's rights. The Children's Act also criminalizes child abuse, including abandonment, corporal punishment, child pornography, child grooming, and bullying. (23) Further, the Children's Act protects children under the age of 16 who have been victims of child trafficking, forced labor, slavery, or child labor. (23) The second law is the Children's Court Act, which establishes a court exclusively for criminal and protection cases related to children, as outlined in the Children's Act 2020. (28) The Children's Court Act establishes a Protection Division with jurisdiction over issues affecting the welfare of children and a Criminal Division with jurisdiction over criminal offenses against children and crimes committed by children. (28) The third law, the Child Sex Offender Register Act, seeks to reduce the risk of sexual offenses against children by establishing a Child Sex Offender Register that will assist in monitoring, tracking, and investigating sexual offenses against children. (29)

The Workers' Rights Act specifies that a child under age 16 may not be employed to work in any occupation but allows for children to do light jobs in family businesses that are not harmful to their health, development, or education. However, the law does not limit the number of hours for light work. (12,17)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor, Human Resource Development and Training	Enforces all labor laws, including those related to child labor. (3,30,31)
Office of the Ombudsperson for Children	Investigates any suspected or reported cases of child labor or violation of a child's rights, proposes laws and policies to advance children's rights, and implements trainings on child protection laws and prevention. (10,32,33)
Police Brigade for the Protection of Minors (Family Protection Brigade) and Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions	Coordinate to investigate and prosecute crimes related to the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking, use of children in illicit activities, and commercial sexual exploitation. (3,6) Maintain a database of all human trafficking incidents involving children and refers all cases of commercial sexual exploitation to the Child Development Unit (CDU). (34)

The Ministry of Gender reported 10 alleged cases of child labor, 35 alleged cases of child mendicity, and 3 alleged cases of child trafficking during the reporting period. However, non-government reports indicate that the actual number of child labor cases, including the worst forms of child labor, are significantly higher and rising. (4,35) In addition to existing agencies that protect children, the Mauritius Probation and Aftercare Service was established under the 2020 Children's Act and appointed to monitor and assess the sound physical, psychological, intellectual, emotional, and social development of children in probation, detention, and post-detention circumstances. (4)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Mauritius took actions to address child labor (Table 6). Notably, the government increased its funding for the Labor Inspectorate, which coincided with increases in the number of inspectors recruited and the frequency of inspections carried out. However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor, Human Resource Development and Training (MOLHRDT) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient coverage in inspection planning.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$1,456,841 (3)	$2,347,852 (4)
Number of Labor Inspectors	130 (3,36)	164 (4)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	Yes (17)	Yes (17)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	Yes (3)	Yes (4)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksite	6,890 (36)	7,024 (4)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	2 (3)	0 (4)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	1 (3)	0 (4)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	1 (3)	0 (4)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (3)	Yes (4)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (3)	Yes (4)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (17)	Yes (17)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (3)	Yes (4)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (3)	Yes (4)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (3)	Yes (4)

In 2022, the MOLHRDT held 27 training sessions for new recruits and 99 training sessions for other officers. The ministry's Labor and Industrial Relations Division also received training on child labor regulations enumerated in the Workers' Rights Act. (3,4) This division is responsible for enforcing child labor law compliance and manages complaints—including those related to child labor—at 17 regional labor offices. However, the hotline service operated by the MOLHRDT did not receive any calls related to child labor during the reporting period. (4) Section 34 of the Children's Act imposes a mandatory reporting obligation on persons performing professional or official duties with respect to children, including health care professionals, employees of childcare institutions, and social workers. Failure of these professionals to report cases in which a child has been or is likely to be exposed to harm makes them liable to a fine of up to $4,500 and to imprisonment of up to 5 years. (23,36)

The MOLHRDT reported that no children were removed from child labor due to labor inspections during the reporting period. (4) Although the government conducted labor inspections during the reporting period, it is unknown whether the government adequately verified if children were found to be involved in child labor or hazardous work. (4) While the Workers' Rights Act permits unannounced inspections, the MOLHRDT has previously reported that labor inspections are not carried out on private properties with small farms unless the farm is registered as a business; otherwise, labor inspectors are required to receive permission from the owner to conduct an inspection. (3,6,37,38)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Mauritius took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including a lack of training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (3)	Yes (4)
Number of Investigations	3 (3)	3 (4)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	0 (3)	0 (4)
Number of Convictions	2 (3)	0 (4)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (3)	N/A (4)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (3)	Yes (4)

In 2022, new employees of the Mauritius Police received initial training, which covered the worst forms of child labor and the three new laws (the Children's Act, the Child Sex Offender Register Act, and the Children's Court Act). (3,4) The Ministry of Gender reported on three alleged cases of child trafficking during the reporting period as well as one case of drug trafficking involving a 14-year-old, which is still under investigation as of January 2023. (4)

Research indicates that the Mauritius Police lacked both sufficient human resources and an adequate procedural mechanism for investigations of commercial child exploitation, especially those related to online sexual exploitation. (4,39) Additionally, criminal law enforcement agencies continue to lack training, equipment, and technology to properly enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor, including capacity building on child-sensitive interview techniques. (3,4)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including the lack of a coordinating body primarily focused on child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
CDU	Enforces legislation related to children; implements policies and social programs related to child development; and provides social services to survivors of the worst forms of child labor, including human trafficking. Also provides trainings and awareness campaigns on human trafficking, including the commercial sexual exploitation of children, and operates the 113 hotline for any offenses involving children. (3,40-42) Managed by the Ministry of Gender Equality and Family Welfare (MOGE), the budget for child protection, welfare, and development was $4.5 million for fiscal year 2022–2023, which mainly funded CDU. (4,6)

The Inter-Ministerial Committee on Human Trafficking comprises representatives from the Attorney General's Office, the MOLHRDT, the Ministry of Gender Equality and Family Welfare, and other ministries. Chaired by the Attorney General's Office with the purpose of coordinating anti-trafficking efforts in Mauritius, this committee was reactivated by the cabinet in 2021 and met once in 2022. (3,4,43,46) The Children's Act that took effect in January 2022 provides for the creation of a Child Services Coordinating Panel, which is responsible for the coordination of all activities relating to the implementation of this new law, the UN CRC, and the African Charter on the Rights and Welfare of the Child. The panel met six times during 2022. (3,4,23,46)

The government's efforts to address the worst forms of child labor were hindered by a lack of coordination, interagency communication, and information sharing between key coordinating mechanisms. In addition, there is no coordinating body whose primary focus is child labor. (3,4,6)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of coverage of all worst forms of child labor.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
Nine Year Continuous Basic Education Policy (2017–2030)	Aims to enable all students to successfully complete 9 years of basic schooling and forms part of a package of reforms designed to strategically transform the education system in Mauritius. Also referred to as Nine Year Schooling. (47,48)
National Action Plan to Combat Human Trafficking (2022–2026)†	On December 09, 2022, the Government of Mauritius approved a new national action plan to combat human trafficking for implementation. (46)
National Sport and Physical Activity Policy (2018–2028)	Provides a structured sports program available to all ages. Focuses on children and young adults, offering after-school recreational activities to help reduce children's vulnerability to child labor and illicit activities. (38,49)

†The policy adopted was created during the reporting period.

Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement key policies related to child labor in Mauritius during the reporting period. (3,4) Although the Government of Mauritius has adopted the Nine Year Continuous Basic Education Policy and the National Sport and Physical Activity Policy, research found no evidence of other policies to address the worst forms of child labor, such as commercial sexual exploitation. In December 2022, the government formally adopted a national action plan to combat human trafficking, which was initially drafted in 2016 and revised in 2022. (4,36,39,43,46,50)

Despite positive developments in recent years, discrimination against children with disabilities continues in Mauritius, with many being excluded and denied the right to an education. (4) Children with physical disabilities have the right to attend public schools, but are often turned away because they could not be accommodated. Additionally, children with mental disabilities attended separate schools that received inadequate government funding. (51)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate efforts to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
National Children's Council†	Overseen by MOGE, offers a wide range of services and facilities, including day care, shelters, creativity centers, children's clubs, and school child protection clubs around the island. (7,52) Awareness-raising campaigns reached 10,266 primary and secondary school students from January to October 2022. (4) The government has established the National Children's Council to improve the effectiveness of institutional care facilities and shelters. During the reporting period, MOGE provided training on child abuse and commercial sexual exploitation for staff working in residential care facilities and delivered psychological support and counseling for child residents (4,5) However, evidence suggests that there continues to be a lack of appropriate standards of care, inadequate provision of services, and overcrowding in some centers that house orphans, child survivors of commercial sexual exploitation, and child survivors of other types of abuses. (5)
Eradication of Absolute Poverty Program†	Provides support to families living in absolute poverty through empowerment and income programs administered by the Ministry of Social Integration, Social Security and National Solidarity. Activities include a monthly child allowance, provision of free school materials, examination fees support, medical screening, housing support, and counseling. (5) Research could not determine activities conducted during the reporting period. (43)
Awareness-Raising Programs on Commercial Sexual Exploitation and Human Trafficking†	Educate the public on preventing commercial sexual exploitation of children and human trafficking, created by MOGE. (3,7) Between January and October 2022, MOGE, through CDU, participated in six radio and television programs to raise awareness on children's rights and child abuse. CDU also organized a high-level training on the commercial sexual exploitation of children in November 2022 for approximately 33 people. (4)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Mauritius (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 into non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure that the law's light work provisions limit the number of hours for light work.	2019 – 2022
Enforcement	Ensure that labor inspections are conducted in all sectors in which children work, including in the informal sector.	2018 – 2022
	Increase the amount of training, human resources, and funding for agencies responsible for enforcing criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor.	2011 – 2022
Coordination	Ensure that all coordinating bodies are active and are able to carry out their intended mandates.	2018 – 2022
	Ensure that coordination mechanisms to address the worst forms of child labor share information and policy-making decisions, improve coordination, and prevent overlap.	2012 – 2022
	Ensure that a coordinating body exists that comprehensively addresses child labor.	2019 – 2022
Government Policies	Adopt a policy that addresses the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation.	2014 – 2022
	Ensure that activities are undertaken to implement key policies related to child labor and publish results from activities implemented.	2019 – 2022
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor in Mauritius to inform policies and programs.	2013 – 2022
	Ensure that all children, including those with disabilities, have equal access to education.	2014 – 2022
	Ensure that child survivors of commercial sexual exploitation have access to comprehensive and quality social services and standards of care.	2010 – 2022
	Publish activities undertaken to implement the Eradication of Absolute Poverty Program.	2019 – 2022

In 2022, Mexico made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government approved the ratification of the International Labor Organization's Protocol of 2014 to the Forced Labor Convention and increased the number of municipal-level bodies responsible for coordinating efforts to address child labor. In addition, the government's Benito Juárez Wellbeing National Scholarship Program reached 1.2 million more students in 2022 than in 2021. However, children in Mexico are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in illicit activities, such as the production and trafficking of drugs. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture, including in the production of chile peppers, coffee, sugarcane, and tomatoes. Although 55.2 percent of all employment in Mexico occurs in the informal sector, federal and some state-level labor inspectors carry out inspections in that sector only after receiving formal complaints. Further, the Secretariat of Labor and Social Welfare does not have an internal system to track cases of child labor violations, and the 529 federal labor inspectors in the country are likely insufficient to cover the country's more than 57 million workers. Criminal law enforcement agencies also lack human and financial resources, and social programs to prevent and eliminate child labor are insufficient.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Mexico.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced labor in domestic work, street vending, and begging (12,21,24,26-31)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, including in the production of pornography, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (5,9,12,21,32-36)
	Use by cartels to perform illicit activities, including the production of poppies for heroin, drug trafficking, stealing fuel, and carrying out armed attacks, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (12,21,26,36-44)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children's work in agriculture often includes long working hours, use of sharp tools, handling pesticides, and carrying heavy loads. (4,45,46) Indigenous children, migrant children, and those working in agriculture are particularly vulnerable to child labor. (26,31,32,47,48) Children from indigenous populations are more likely to work across all sectors, including in agriculture, than non-indigenous children. (31,49,50) Indigenous children are also less likely to attend school due to the lack of schools near their homes, educational materials, and instruction in native languages. (51,52)

Organized criminal groups operating in rural areas throughout the country actively recruit children. (36,44,53,54) These children serve as lookouts, carry out armed attacks against authorities and rival cartels, and are used in the production, transport, and sale of drugs. (26,42,43,55,56) Children in Mexico are also subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking within the country. In addition to organized criminal groups, perpetrators of child trafficking crimes are often family members or acquaintances of the victim. (9,26,36,57) The Secretariat of Health’s National System for Integral Family Development (SNDIF) estimates that each year at least 70,000 children are trafficked for the purpose of commercial sexual exploitation. (21,58) Migrant children from El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, and Haiti, and internal migrant children from Mexico, especially those traveling by themselves, are more vulnerable to human trafficking, forced recruitment by organized criminal groups, and other worst forms of child labor. (26,59,60)

The Secretariat of Public Education reported that over 512,000 fewer students enrolled in basic and lower secondary education in 2022 compared to the prior year. (12,61,62) It has also been reported that at least half of Mexican households do not have computers or internet access, while 80 percent of indigenous or rural households lacked computers or internet access, limiting the ability of these children to participate in distance learning programs. (63,64)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Mexico has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government ratified the Protocol of 2014 to the Forced Labor Convention, 1930 on November 10, 2022. (65)

The government's laws and regulations are in line with relevant international standards (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 123 of the Constitution; Article 22 bis of the Labor Code; Article 47 of the Law on the Rights of Children and Adolescents; Article 6 of the General Education Law (66-69)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 23 and 175 of the Labor Code (69)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 175 and 176 of the Labor Code (69)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 1 and 5 of the Constitution; Articles 11, 12, and 22 of the Trafficking in Persons Law; Article 47 of the Law on the Rights of Children and Adolescents (65-67,70)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 10 of the Trafficking in Persons Law; Article 47 of the Law on the Rights of Children and Adolescents (67,70)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 200–205-Bis of the Federal Penal Code; Articles 13 and 18 of the Trafficking in Persons Law; Article 47 of the Law on the Rights of Children and Adolescents (67,70,71)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 196 and 201 of the Federal Penal Code; Article 24 of the Trafficking in Persons Law; Articles 2, 4, and 5 of the Law on Organized Crime (70-72)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 5 of the Military Service Law (73)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 24 of the Military Service Law (73)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Articles 123 and 201 of the Federal Penal Code; Articles 16 and 47 of the Law on the Rights of Children and Adolescents (67,71)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	18	Articles 6 and 129 of the General Education Law (68)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 3 of the Constitution; Article 7, Section IV of the General Education Law (66,68)

In 2022, the Mexican Senate revised the Military Service Law to remove the exception that allowed children aged 16 and 17 to enroll in voluntary state military service. (73-76) In April 2022, Mexico also amended the Labor Code to allow children as young as age 15 to work in some forms of agricultural employment. Previously, all work in agriculture was considered hazardous; under the new provision, only work using chemicals, handling machinery, operating heavy machinery, and determined by the Secretariat of Labor and Social Welfare (STPS) is considered hazardous. (69,77-79) In addition, as the minimum age for work at age 15 is lower than the compulsory education age of 18, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (78,80)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of child labor laws.

Mexico

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Secretariat for Labor and Social Welfare (STPS)	Leads efforts to enforce child labor laws, conduct labor inspections, and refer cases for investigation. (69,81-86) The STPS inspectorate is responsible for labor law enforcement in 22 industrial sectors under federal jurisdiction, including the sugar and tobacco industries, three types of enterprises, and labor matters affecting two or more states. The state-level labor inspectorates are responsible for labor law enforcement in all other situations. (66,69,87) Federal and state labor inspectorates carry out labor inspections in formally registered businesses. (81,82,88,89) The Federal Attorney for the Defense of Labor (PROFEDET), a decentralized unit of STPS, receives and prosecutes labor rights violations, including cases involving workers under age 18. (12)
Office of the Attorney General of the Republic (FGR)	Prosecutes crimes involving human trafficking, including those considered as categorical worst forms of child labor, such as human trafficking. (72,90) The FGR's Specialized Unit for Crimes against Women and Trafficking in Persons (FEVIMTRA) and the Specialized Unit on Trafficking in Minors, People, and Organs (UEITMPO) are responsible for investigating and prosecuting human trafficking cases at the federal level, while the Specialized Office for Organized Crime (FEMDO) investigates and prosecutes cases linked to commercial sexual exploitation of children. (12,26,75,86,91-93) In addition, all 32 states have specialized trafficking in persons prosecutors or units, which are responsible for investigating and prosecuting cases of human trafficking at the state level. (93-96) Federal and state trafficking in persons units also receive some cases of child trafficking from the National Institute of Migration and the Mexican Commission for Refugee Assistance. (97,98)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Mexico took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of STPS that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the lack of unannounced inspections being conducted in all sectors.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

† Data are for federal inspectorate only. (9,12)

Mexico added 58 labor inspectors at the federal level in 2022, bringing the total number of federal labor inspectors to 529, with 178 state-level labor inspectors in eleven states. (12) However, research indicates that Mexico does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (101,102) This was reported by state-level officials in Baja California Sur, Nuevo Leon, and the State of Mexico. (12) In 2022, the federal inspectorate identified no child labor violations, while eleven local-level state authorities reported identifying a total of 58 violations related to child labor, compared to 215 in 2021. (12) The states did not provide information on penalties imposed or collected. (9,41,82,86,91,103) Moreover, research could not verify that all state-level labor ministries conducted child labor inspections, sanctioned establishments in violation of the Labor Code, or applied the guidelines on identifying and sanctioning child labor violations as outlined in the "Labor Inspection Protocol to Eradicate Child Labor and Protect Adolescent Workers." (9,41,82,86,91,92) Further, the total number of child labor complaints received is unknown, as STPS does not have an internal system to track cases of child labor violations, hindering the Mexican government's ability to report on the outcomes and the prevalence of child labor violations. (87,89,104,105) STPS only conducts unannounced inspections in the informal sector for child labor violations in response to complaints, and child labor inspections must be coordinated with representatives from the Secretariat of Health's National System for Integral Family Development and the local Office of the Attorney General of Mexico (FGR). (12) As the informal sector accounts for 55 percent of employment in Mexico, including agricultural employment, the lack of inspections in this sector leaves children vulnerable to labor exploitation. (5,81,83,88,106,107) Moreover, concerns remain regarding Mexico's lack of inspections in rural areas and at small and medium enterprises, particularly in the agricultural sector. (56,108,109) Furthermore, due to limited information sharing between federal and state-level inspectorates, some establishments may not be inspected for labor law violations. (81,89,104)

Federal and state labor inspectors have the authority to recommend administrative penalties, and the STPS Directorate of Judicial affairs is responsible for determining penalties in cases under federal jurisdiction. In turn, the Directorate notifies its determination to the local-level finance authorities. (12,104) Funds collected remain with the local finance authority, which do not report the collection of sanctions to STPS. When the Directorate identifies evidence of potential crimes, it notifies the FGR and state prosecutors of child labor violations so that they can investigate and prosecute criminal acts related to these cases and coordinate with service providers to support victims of child labor. (12,81,100)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Mexico took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient financial resource allocation.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (9)	Yes (12)
Number of Investigations	484† (110)	383 (12,111)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (9)	27 (12)
Number of Convictions	42‡ (56)	25 (12)

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (9)	Yes (12)

† Data are from January 1, 2021, to July 31, 2021. (110)

‡ Data reported may not be complete. (56)

The Specialized Unit for Crimes against Women and Trafficking in Persons (FEVIMTRA) and Mexico's National Guard participated in trainings on child trafficking and other crimes against children, including some aimed at identifying commercial sexual exploitation cases. (12) However, reports indicate that the lack of training for criminal law enforcement officers on how to perform prosecutorial and police investigative functions hampered their ability to adequately investigate and prosecute cases involving child labor. (9,26,56,110,113,114) In addition, the inadequate capacity of prosecutors and judges to try criminal cases related to human trafficking meant that many suspected traffickers were incorrectly prosecuted for minor offenses or were acquitted. (9,26,56,110,113) Moreover, state prosecutors had limited financial resources available for investigations, training, and outreach. (110,113-115) Since 2019, the Government of Mexico has implemented austerity measures that left many secretariats and agencies, including the FGR and the National Human Rights Commission, at both the federal and state levels, without the appropriate personnel, expertise, and leadership to carry out core government functions, such as enforcing laws and establishing and implementing policies and programs related to child labor. (9,12,56,88,89,113,114) Additionally, although the government provided some information on its criminal law enforcement efforts related to the worst forms of child labor at the federal level and for the states of Aguascalientes, Chiapas, Mexico City, and Puebla, weak coordination and inconsistent data sharing among government agencies prevented comprehensive statistics from being compiled. (12,56,110)

Mexico

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Inconsistent data collection and the lack of coordination among government ministries, including those at the state level, may hinder criminal prosecutions and impact government efforts to provide victim services. (12,36,56,94,110,113,116,117)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including low levels of participation by state authorities in coordinating mechanisms.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Inter-Institutional Commission for Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor and the Protection of Adolescent Workers of the Permitted Age in Mexico (CITI)	Coordinates Mexico's activities to develop policies, approve programs, and monitor and evaluate efforts to eliminate child labor. Meets on a quarterly basis, chaired by STPS, and includes representatives from the secretariats of the Interior, Economy, Foreign Affairs, Wellbeing, Agriculture, Transportation, Education, Health, Tourism, Social Security, System for Integral Family Development (SNDIF), and FGR, and NGO networks and international technical and financial partners, such as ILO, UNODC, IOM, and academia. (12,100) There are also state level (CITI Estatales) and municipal-level committees through a National Network of Local Commissions for Preventing and Eradicating Child Labor and Protecting Adolescent Workers (CITIs Network). However, some states do not have active CITI committees, and only about half of the 32 states engaged with CITI at the federal level. (12) In addition, of the active state CITIs, only the state CITIs of Baja California Sur, Chihuahua, Coahuila, Jalisco, and the State of Mexico reported on their activities during the reporting period. (9,12) CITI also began implementing its Plan of Action on Child Labor 2021–2024. (9,100,104) Although this plan requires the CITI Secretariat to conduct monitoring activities on a quarterly basis, it lacks an accompanying budget for activities. (118,119)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of coverage of all worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Program for the Secretariat of Labor and Social Welfare (2020–2024)	Seeks to strengthen worker rights in Mexico and increase the participation of workers in the formal sector. (12) The program prioritizes addressing child labor as part of STPS's social inclusion strategy. (120) In 2022, STPS, in collaboration with Save the Children, trained 44 civil servants from the state government of Aguascalientes on child labor issues. (12,121)
National Program for Children and Adolescents (PRONAPPINA) (2021–2024)	Aims to guarantee the rights of children and adolescents by establishing mechanisms to support their growth and development. (12,122) In February 2022, the government launched an action plan to accompany PRONAPPINA. (123) In addition, under this program, the government published the Strategy for the Prevention of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children and Adolescents and delivered a technical training to develop indicators on the rights of children and adolescents. (12,124)
National Action Plan on Trafficking in Persons (PNTdP)† (2022–2024)	Guides the work of the Inter-agency Commission to Prevent, Sanction, and Eradicate Crimes on Human Trafficking and for the Protection and Assistance to Victims of Human Trafficking, under the General Law on Human Trafficking. (125) Published by the Secretariat of the Interior (SEGOB) in December 2022, this program delineates the Government of Mexico's public policy on human trafficking, in alignment with the National Development Plan 2019–2024. (9,12,126) Thirteen federal government agencies, including SEGOB, STPS, and the Secretariat of Tourism, are responsible for implementing the plan. (125) PNTdP has five key objectives: (1) promoting amendments to the legal framework on human trafficking at the federal level, (2) outlining coordination efforts on human trafficking at the national level, (3) strengthening services to survivors of human trafficking, (4) promoting research to inform actions and public policies, and (5) promoting the human rights of survivors of human trafficking. (125)

‡ The government has other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (127)

Although the government has policies to address some of the worst forms of child labor, research could not confirm whether there is a policy to address the use of children in illicit activities. (100,120,128)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

The government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including a lack of programs to address child labor in all sectors and in all states.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Benito Juarez Wellbeing National Scholarship Program†	A $39.3 million Secretariat of Public Education cash transfer program that offers scholarships for families living in poverty and students at risk of school desertion. The Wellbeing Basic Education Family Scholarship provides bimonthly payments of $92 per household for all children under age 15 enrolled in school, while the Benito Juarez Scholarship provides bimonthly payments of $92 to each child enrolled in high school. (129-131) Although the program reached 11 million students in 2022, it has been criticized for providing insufficient cash transfers, lacking monitoring and evaluation, and having implementation issues. (132-137)
Education Programs‡	Managed by the National Institute of Indigenous Peoples, the Indigenous Education Support Program (PAEI) promotes access to public education for children and adolescents from indigenous and Afro-Mexican communities through scholarships, lodging, and nutritional assistance. (138) With funding close to $87 million, the program helped 80,607 students in 2022. (138) However, during the reporting period, the government eliminated the Indigenous People's Education Diversity Program, the Educational Program for Migrant School Population, and the Full-Time Schools Program. (9,139-141) The termination of the Full-Time Schools Program impacted 3.6 million students. Starting in April 2022, due to advocacy and legal action by parents, civil society organizations, and state-level authorities, Secretariat of Public Education expanded the scope of The School is Ours (LEEN) program from its initial focus on building and improving educational infrastructure to also include an extended school schedule and meal services. (139,142-144)
Assistance for At-Risk Children and Adolescents Program (PAMAR)†	Implemented by SNDIF at the state and municipal levels to assist youth at risk for child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and in illicit activities, by providing shelters, psychosocial assistance, and training. (9,56) Research could not confirm whether the program was active in all states and municipalities where the program is needed.

† Program is funded by the Government of Mexico.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (12,48,100,145-147)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Mexico (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum age for work from 15 to 18 to align with the compulsory education age.	2019 – 2022
Enforcement	Increase the number of labor inspectors from 529 to 3,835 to ensure adequate coverage of the labor force of approximately 57.5 million people.	2019 – 2022
	Expand access to trainings for federal and state-level labor inspectors on child labor protocols and ensure that protocol guidelines related to identifying, sanctioning, and referring for criminal investigation of child labor violations are followed.	2019 – 2022
	Ensure that the Secretariat of Labor and Social Welfare at the federal and the state-level Secretariats of Labor conduct targeted routine and unannounced labor inspections in all sectors, including in the informal sector and in rural areas.	2019 – 2022
	Improve cooperation and information sharing between federal and state-level labor inspectorates and among officials in different states.	2019 – 2022
	Publish information at the federal and state levels on the number of child labor violations identified, fines for child labor violations that were collected, and cases referred to prosecutors for criminal investigation.	2019 – 2022
	Create a case tracking system equipping the Secretariat of Labor and Social Welfare to identify disaggregated data for cases of child labor violations.	2019 – 2022
	Ensure that criminal law enforcement agencies and government service providers receive sufficient funding to conduct investigations and prosecutions related to alleged child labor crimes and to provide services to survivors.	2019 – 2022

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Increase coordination and data sharing among government ministries to ensure adequate criminal prosecutions of suspected perpetrators of child labor crimes.	2019 – 2022
	Increase training for enforcement officials and prosecutors on territorial jurisdictions and on how to perform prosecutorial and police investigative functions. In addition, train prosecutors and judges on prosecuting human trafficking crimes.	2019 – 2022
Coordination	Ensure the active participation and continued engagement of all states and relevant stakeholders within the framework of the Inter-Institutional Commission for Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor and the Protection of Adolescent Workers of the Permitted Age in Mexico.	2019 – 2022
Government Policies	Adopt policies that address all worst forms of child labor, including the use of children in illicit activities.	2019 – 2022
Social Programs	Expand access to education by increasing funding to schools, extending school schedules, improving school infrastructure, providing education materials and instruction in native languages, and fostering internet access for learning purposes.	2019 – 2022
	Ensure that unaccompanied migrant children are screened for indicators of human trafficking or other victimization, are placed in child protection centers instead of detention centers, and receive access to education.	2019 – 2022
	Screen for indicators of human trafficking among children used in illicit activities by organized criminal groups and ensure that they are provided with adequate social services.	2019 – 2022
	Provide additional support to indigenous, migrant, internally displaced, and refugee children, and fund social programs to increase their access to education and reduce their risk for child labor.	2020 – 2022
	Ensure that the Benito Juárez Wellbeing Scholarship Program provides sufficient cash transfers to vulnerable students, while also receiving regular monitoring and evaluation to ensure its effective implementation.	2019 – 2022
	Expand social protection programs throughout the country for victims of child labor in all relevant sectors, including in commercial sexual exploitation and illicit activities.	2019 – 2022

In 2022, Moldova made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. Moldova enacted a law in December 2022 which authorizes labor inspectors to perform onsite, unannounced inspections if inspectors have information or suspicion that certain types of labor violations may be taking place, including child labor and trafficking in persons. In addition, the government reactivated the National Council on the Protection of the Rights of Children, established a new National Program for Child Protection, and signed a joint order between three ministries to identify and assist children at risk of child labor. Although the government made meaningful efforts in all relevant areas during the reporting period, it does not meet the international standard for the minimum age for work because the Labor Code's minimum age provisions do not apply to all children working in the informal sector. Children in Moldova are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in agriculture.

Trafficking of children, particularly those from rural or poor families, continues to be a concern in Moldova, including in the separatist region of Transnistria which is outside of the de facto control of the Moldovan government. (3,4,16,17) Traffickers exploit both boys and girls ages 5 to 14 for the purpose of commercial sexual exploitation as well as in forced labor. (4,14) Children abandoned by parents who have migrated abroad, living on the street, or those who are refugees remain particularly vulnerable, and observers express concern that corrupt management in state residential institutions like orphanages exploit children in domestic services or on farms. (3,4,16,18) Online commercial sexual exploitation of children has increased in recent years, partially as a result of the COVID-19 pandemic. (3,4,8,18) Lack of information limits an assessment of the types of work that children perform and the sectors in which they work, including in the separatist region of Transnistria, which is not under the de facto control of Moldovan authorities. Civil society sources report that the child labor situation in Transnistria does not differ significantly from the rest of Moldova. (3) However, survivors of child labor and human trafficking in Transnistria do not have access to Moldovan legal protections or social services. (4)

Children in Moldova are guaranteed free transportation to school, and no fees are required for schooling through grade 10. However, students in grades 10 through 12 are often charged fees to rent textbooks. (3) Children from Roma communities also continue to be less likely to enroll in school and at higher risk of dropping out due in part to discrimination by school officials and distrust of public institutions by Roma families, and are more vulnerable to child labor and human trafficking. (3,5,14) Schools in rural areas often lack a sufficient number of teachers, and public schools lack adequate resources to address the needs of children with disabilities. (3,5,6)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Moldova has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Moldova’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including minimum age protections that do not extend to children working in the informal sector.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	16	Article 46 of the Labor Code (19)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 255 of the Labor Code; Article 3 of the Collective Convention on Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor (19,20)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Government Decision No. 541; Articles 2 and 3 of the Collective Convention on Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor; Articles 103, 105, 255, and 256 of the Labor Code (19-21)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 44 of the Constitution; Article 168(b) of the Criminal Code; Article 7 of the Labor Code; Collective Convention on Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor (19,20,22,23)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 2 and 25–30 of the Law on Preventing and Combating Trafficking in Human Beings; Collective Convention on Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor; Article 206 of the Criminal Code (20,23,25)

Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 208 and 217 of the Criminal Code; Collective Convention on Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor (20,23)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 12 of Law No. 162-XVI on the Status of Military Servicemembers (28)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 28 of Law No. 1245-XV on the Preparation of Citizens for Homeland Defense (29)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 26 of the Law on the Rights of the Child; Article 206(d) of the Criminal Code (23,26)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	18	Articles 13 and 152 of the Education Code of 2014 (30)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 35 of the Constitution; Article 9 of the Education Code of 2014 (22,30)

On December 22, 2022, Moldova's Parliament passed a law which came into effect in March 2023 and newly empowers the State Labor Inspectorate (SLI) to conduct unannounced visits at worksites if they have information or indications of certain violations, including trafficking in persons or labor exploitation. (3,18) However, as this law does not grant the authority to conduct unannounced inspections if there are any other direct or indirect means of obtaining the necessary information, potential violations of child labor laws and other labor abuses may remain undetected. The government also amended Law 316/2022 to certify that during the investigation of cases of sexual abuse or exploitation of children, minors should be interviewed in special settings in accordance with international standards. (18) However, the Labor Code's minimum age provisions do not meet international standards because they do not apply to all children working in the informal sector. Although Article 46(3) of the Labor Code permits children as young as age 15 to work, the law also does not specify the conditions in which light work may be undertaken. (19) In addition, the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, which may encourage children to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (19,30)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, restrictions on unannounced inspections conducted at the national level in Moldova may have impeded the enforcement of child labor laws during the reporting period.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Health, Labor, and Social Protection's (MHLSP) State Labor Inspectorate (SLI)	Enforces child labor laws through inspections of labor relations of enterprises, institutions, and organizations. (5,6,9,31) Publishes an annual report on the previous year's activities. (5,32) Also operates a dedicated children's hotline which refers child survivors of trafficking for specialized legal, psychological, and social services under the National Referral System (NRS). (3,5,18)
Ministry of Internal Affairs	Oversees law enforcement agencies such as the National Center for Combating Trafficking in Persons (CCTIP), which leads criminal investigations against perpetrators of human trafficking crimes, including the trafficking of children for labor or commercial sexual exploitation. (3,14) The CCTIP also cooperates with the Border Police Inspectorate, National Anti-Corruption Center, and Customs Service, and provides partial funding for the operation of a 24/7 trafficking in persons hotline. (3,4) Also contains the Center for Combating Cybercrime, which investigates cybercrime, including online commercial sexual exploitation of children, and is the unit with primary responsibility for investigating these crimes at the National Inspectorate for Investigations of the General Police Inspectorate of the Ministry of Internal Affairs. (5,33)
Specialized Prosecution Office for Organized Crime and Special Cases and Anti-Trafficking Bureau within the Prosecutor General's Office (PGO)	Monitors and analyzes human trafficking cases in the Anti-Trafficking Bureau within the PGO. (6,8,11) Includes a unit that investigates and prosecutes cases, including online and digital child sexual exploitation cases. (3)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, the lack of authorization to conduct unannounced inspections at the national level in Moldova may have impeded the enforcement of child labor laws (Table 6).

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In 2022, the SLI supported several training sessions on safe working conditions for all employees, including those under 18 years old, as well as on the prevention and disruption of informal work, forced labor, and human trafficking. These trainings included both new employee trainings and refresher courses for experienced inspectors, as well as training focused specifically on child labor. (3) Between January and November 2022, SLI labor inspectors conducted approximately 1,600 onsite inspections, of which 16 were targeted at identifying child labor violations. During the reporting period, the SLI responded to four direct complaints and six referrals from the police of suspected child labor. (3) The SLI identified 18 labor law violations involving minors, and courts imposed fines against 6 employers. The SLI also reported that eight children were removed from child labor as a result of labor inspections. (3)

In October 2022, Government Decision number 725 was signed into law which decreased the SLI staff limit to 84 directly hired labor inspectors. The MHLSP states that this change is intended to improve the SLI by increasing salaries to attract and retain highly qualified inspectors. (3) During the reporting period, only 66 of these

84 positions were filled, which approximates ILO recommendations for the size of Moldova's workforce. (3,36) However, the SLI has reported that its funding is insufficient to procure modern equipment, and that this hinders labor law enforcement. (3,5,6,9) Revisions to Law No. 131 on State Control of Entrepreneurial Activity were passed in December 2022 which granted the State Labor Inspectorate authority to directly issue penalties for some labor law violations which had previously required judicial approval. If an inspector finds that certain non-criminal violation of labor law has occurred, excluding informal employment or underdeclared labor, they must issue recommendations to the offender on how to resolve the violation. (3) If the violation is not resolved after the prescribed period (no less than 30 days, but no more than 90 days), then the SLI may refer the case to a competent court. This approach often results in employers making the recommended remediation to avoid a fine, then resuming the offending practice after the case has been cleared. (3)

Although Law No. 131 empowers inspectors to perform unannounced onsite inspections if labor exploitation is alleged or suspected, laws and practices introduced as part of government restructuring in 2017 and 2018 continued to limit the power of the State Labor Inspectorate (SLI) to enforce child labor laws. Laws No. 179 and No. 131 mandated that all labor inspections begin with a desk review and permit site visits only if the subject of an inspection provides insufficient documentation or if a risk assessment procedure finds reasonable indicators of a possible violation. (3,5,6,9,14,35,37) Site visits, including those conducted in response to complaints, could not take place until after the target of an inspection had 5 days to respond to a request for documents, which served as de facto advance notice of an inspection. (6,8,9,35,37) Inspectors were only permitted to forgo the documentary inspection and proceed directly to an onsite inspection with managerial approval if a risk assessment indicates an immediate threat to the environment, life, health, or property. (35,37) Furthermore, onsite labor inspections could focus only on the potential violations that have been identified in advance through either the complaint process or a desk review, even if other violations, such as child labor, were observed. (8,38,39) In 2022, these strict measures continued to limit the number and scope of onsite inspections, including unannounced inspections, that labor inspectors were empowered to conduct, and labor inspectors are still not authorized to perform routine, on site, unannounced inspections as a standard practice. (3)

When reporting inspection data, the SLI divides inspections into two categories—those that appear on the annual inspection plan and those that arise during the year when triggered by complaints or incidents. The latter are considered to be unannounced whether they are preceded by a desk audit or not. (3,5) It is therefore not possible to determine whether any truly unannounced inspections took place in 2022, and if so, how many. (3) Both government and NGO sources reported that the child labor violations identified by the government during the reporting period did not reflect the magnitude of the child labor problem in Moldova due to an insufficient number of labor inspectors, budget limitations, cultural acceptance of child labor on family farms, and legal limitations on the government's ability to conduct inspections. The number of child survivors of abuse, trauma, and exploitation supported by NGOs is substantially greater than the number of government investigations of such cases. (3,5,8) The Transnistrian region is not under the de facto control of Moldovan authorities, who are prevented from carrying out inspections and law enforcement there. (3,5,8)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Moldova took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including a lack of funding for new criminal investigators.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2022, 15 new law enforcement officers attended 3 initial training sessions on trafficking in persons and child labor laws. Authorities also opened 22 new cases, initiated the prosecution of 26 individuals for crimes involving the worst forms of child labor, and the CCTIP identified a case of suspected forced labor involving six boys. (3) The PGO sentenced three individuals convicted of trafficking children to prison terms of between 6 and 10 years. In addition, five survivors of trafficking successfully filed civil cases against the defendants, each of whom was awarded 20,000 MDL ($1,043.80). (3) Criminal investigators within the CCTIP have well-furnished offices as a result of U.S. Government support over the last 12 years. However, the CCTIP does not have sufficient vehicles or fuel allocations for its daily investigation activities, nor does it have updated computer equipment. (3) High staff turnover in the past year has also hindered the CCTIP's effectiveness. (3,4) Many authorities still lack adequate training to identify potential child trafficking victims. (8)

Within the judiciary, specialized judges are trained specifically to handle cases involving human trafficking and other related crimes, such as child pornography, but special interview services for child survivors of human trafficking are also not uniformly applied which can result in re-traumatization of survivors. (4,10) In 2022, the government amended the law exempting child victims and at-risk victims from required attendance in court proceedings and began implementing video recording of interviews to prevent re-traumatization. The government also amended the law to ensure child victims of sexual abuse or exploitation, including trafficking, were interviewed in specially equipped rooms in accordance with international standards. (41) While NGOs had previously reported that judges sometimes reclassified cases from human trafficking crimes to crimes with lesser penalties, such as pimping, there were no such instances reported in 2022 and the practice was not reported to be widespread. When such reclassification occurs, victims of human trafficking are no longer protected by the provision of the criminal code that exempts trafficking victims from criminal liability for offenses committed because of their exploitation. (4,8)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of coordination among bodies responsible for identifying children in child labor and providing services for their rehabilitation.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Center for Combating Trafficking in Persons (CCTIP)	Coordinates efforts to prevent and eliminate child trafficking and child sexual exploitation. Members include SLI, Security and Intelligence Service, Agency for Public Services, and other government departments. (3) In June 2022, met to present and approve a policy on preventing and eliminating trafficking in persons and to implement the recommendations of international monitoring mechanisms. (3)

In 2022, the government reactivated the National Council on the Protection of the Rights of Children (NCCRP), and the MHLSP implemented an intersectoral cooperation mechanism for the identification, assessment, referral, assistance, and monitoring of child victims and potential victims of violence neglect, exploitation, and trafficking. However, civil society organizations have reported limited services for resocialization and reintegration for child survivors of sexual exploitation and sexual abuse, and there is room for increased cooperation between social protection, health, and law enforcement in this regard. (3,4)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Program for Child Protection (2022-2026)†	Sets the objectives and priority actions for the next five years which aim to strengthen children's social protection system. Includes an Action Plan containing 72 actions to address child sexual abuse and sexual exploitation, including through online means. (3,42)

† Policy was established during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (9,43)

On November 17, 2022, Moldova's Parliament approved the National Development Strategy “European Moldova 2030,” which includes provisions to improve working conditions and reduce informal employment. (3)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including insufficient services for resocialization and reintegration of child survivors of sexual exploitation and sexual abuse.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Decent Work Country Program (2021–2024)	ILO program that aims to gather statistics on the prevalence of child labor, build the capacity of the labor inspectorate, and eliminate labor exploitation in the construction and agriculture sectors. (44)
Center for Protection and Assistance for Victims of Human Trafficking†	Government-funded shelter for survivors of human trafficking from Moldova that offers accommodations, rehabilitation, and reintegration services, and which contains a special wing for child survivors. The shelter remained active through the reporting period. (3)
Social Aid Program and Social Support for Families with Children‡	Provides cash assistance to families. The Social Aid Program, implemented by the district departments of social assistance and family protection, has provided aid for low-income families since 2008. (5,6,45)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of Moldova.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (9,11,15)

To strengthen the child protection system, the MHLSP signed a memorandum of cooperation with UNICEF to provide support for 25,000 families with children from September 2022 to September 2023. (3,46) Additionally, on November 25, 2022 the MHLSP, the Ministry of Health, and the Ministry of Education and Research signed a joint order approving new reporting on child welfare issues. (3) Observers report there are insufficient services for resocialization and reintegration of child survivors of sexual exploitation and sexual abuse. (5,6,8,10)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Moldova (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the Labor Code covers children working in the informal sector.	2020 – 2022
	Ensure that the law's light work provisions are sufficiently specific to prevent children from involvement in child labor.	2020 – 2022
	Raise the minimum age for work from 16 to 18 to align with the compulsory education age.	2018 – 2022
Enforcement	Ensure that labor inspectors are empowered to identify and assess penalties for child labor violations detected during inspections, even if the inspection was not conducted in response to a child labor complaint.	2019 – 2022
	Increase funding for the State Labor Inspectorate and the National Center for Combating Trafficking in Persons to ensure that they provide inspectors and investigators with the resources necessary to inspect for child labor.	2012 – 2022
	Ensure that labor inspectors receive training specific to child labor.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that judicial authorities and investigators, including police officers and National Center for Combating Trafficking in Persons investigators, receive training on laws and investigative techniques related to the worst forms of child labor, especially related to online child pornography and children left without parental care.	2016 – 2022
Coordination	Pursue prosecution of child labor crimes under appropriate statutes and maintain protection under the law for victims who commit crimes as a result of their exploitation.	2020 – 2022
	Improve cooperation among social protection, health, and law enforcement entities with regard to providing appropriate services and reintegration assistance to child survivors of labor exploitation and trafficking in persons.	2019 – 2022
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs, including for the separatist region of Transnistria.	2013 – 2022

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Social Programs	Provide adequate resources for schools in rural and poorer communities, as well as those serving children with disabilities.	2020 – 2022
	Implement oversight of state residential children's institutions to prevent exploitation of children by management.	2021 – 2022
	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers to education by removing informal fees for school supplies, including textbooks.	2018 – 2022
	Institute targeted support programs that eliminate discrimination and violence against Roma children and promote equal access to education.	2014 – 2022
	Ensure sufficient social, psychological, and financial support for child survivors of trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and abuse, and children working in agriculture.	2015 – 2022

In 2022, Mongolia made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. Mongolia's revised Labor Law includes a formal prohibition of child labor exploitation and sets the minimum age for work at age 15. The National Human Rights Commission of Mongolia also published a qualitative study on child labor with support from the International Labor Organization. In addition, under the Child Protection Compact Partnership, the government trained community social workers and educators on trafficking in persons prevention and victim identification.

Children in Mongolia are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging and commercial sexual exploitation. Children also engage in dangerous tasks in horse jockeying and mining. The revised Labor Law legalized unannounced labor inspections that can result in sanctions. However, confusion remains amongst inspectors on whether unannounced inspections are permitted, which may impede enforcement of child labor laws. Lastly, due to a lack of training and formalized screening procedures, criminal law enforcement officials sometimes detain child victims of prostitution rather than referring them to social services.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Mongolia. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	11.4 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	94.8
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	12.6
Primary Completion Rate (%)		97.7

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2022, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2023. (1)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 6 (MICS 6), 2018. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Animal husbandry,† including herding† (3,4)
Services	Working in restaurants/canteens,† bars,† and food processing facilities.† (5)
	Horse jockeying† (3,6,7)
	Scavenging in garbage dumpsites (3,4)
	Handling freight† (3,5)
	Domestic work† (3-5)
	Ticket-taking for public transportation† (3)
Industry	Street work and begging (3)
	Construction† (3,5)
	Mining† coal,† gold, and fluorspar (3,8)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, including use in the production of pornography, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3-5,9)
	Forced labor in begging and stealing (4)
	Forced labor in construction, mining, horse jockeying, animal husbandry, and contortionist work (4)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2022, the National Human Rights Commission of Mongolia published a qualitative study on child labor and included information about the results of the study in its 21st Annual Status Report on Human Rights and Freedom. (3,5,10) This study included a survey on work hazardous to the health of a child, which confirmed that children continue to be working at night, carrying loads, and working in construction, in bars and restaurants, and in food processing. (5) In 2022, at least 34,051 children were horse jockeys in Mongolia, with more than 32,000 not meeting safety requirements. Research indicates that 330 children fell off their horses between May 1 and November 1 of the reporting period, and 3 children died falling during races. (3,11) Races also continued through the winter despite a ban. (5)

Mongolian children are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation in saunas, bars, hotels, karaoke clubs, and massage parlors. (4,7) Mongolian girls are vulnerable to sexual exploitation in communities near mining towns or are recruited through social media. They are also forced to work as contortionists, domestically and in Turkey. (4,5,8,9,11)

Poverty, family debt, and a lack of educational opportunities are major reasons that children engage in child labor. (9,12,13) Roughly one-fourth of Mongolia's population live in poverty, and two-fifths of poor people in Mongolia are children under the age of 15. (14) Mongolian children encounter numerous education barriers due to an insufficient number of schools, overcrowding, a lack of trained teachers, inadequate school dormitories in rural areas, and a lack of accessibility for children with disabilities. (3,8,11,15)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Mongolia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Mongolia's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including a minimum age for work that is lower than the compulsory school age.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	15	Articles 2, 3, 142.1, and 165 of the Revised Labor Law (16)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 2, 3, and 142.2 of the Revised Labor Law; List of Jobs and Occupations Prohibited to Minors; Article 16.10 of the Criminal Code (16-18)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 2 and 3 of the List of Jobs and Occupations Prohibited to Minors; Article 8 of the Law on the National Naadam Holiday (17,19)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 142.2 of the Revised Labor Law; Articles 13.1, 16.4, and 16.10 of the Criminal Code; Articles 2, 3, 15, and 17 of the Law on Combating Trafficking in Persons; Article 7 of the Law on Labor; Article 7 of the Law on the Rights of the Child (16,20-23)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 3 of the Law on Combating Trafficking in Persons; Article 13.1 of the Criminal Code (18,23)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 12.3, 13.1, 16.8, 16.9, and 115 of the Criminal Code; Articles 8.1.3 and 10.2 of the Combating Pornography and Prostitution Act; Article 3 of the Law on Combating Trafficking in Persons (21,23,24)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 142.2 of the Revised Labor Law; Article 192 of the Criminal Code (16,18)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 12 of the Law on Military (25)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 12 of the Law on Military (25)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Article 46 of the Law on Education (26)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 16 of the Constitution of Mongolia; Articles 6.1–6.3 of the Law on Education (26,27)

Mongolia's revised Labor Law of January 1, 2022, sets the minimum age for work at 15, with light work permitted for children ages 13 and older. It also allows unannounced labor inspections in the formal sector. (3,16,28) The minimum age for work provisions do not meet international standards because they do not provide penalties for violations of these provisions. (16)

During the reporting period, the Ministry of Labor and Social Protection (MLSP) issued decree No.A/123 that outlines the type of light work allowed for children between the ages of 13 and 15 years. (29) In June 2022, the Law on Naadam Festival was also amended to raise the minimum age for horse jockeying from 7 to 8 years old and requires all child jockeys to have 1-year accident insurance to cover their time spent training and racing. (3) While this law makes it illegal for children younger than 8 to race horses, this age is far below the minimum age for hazardous work, which is set at 18. (16,19,20,30)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has other established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
General Agency for Specialized Inspection	Was the central agency for inspections, including labor inspections. It also previously enforced labor laws, including those related to child labor. (9,28) In November 2022, Mongolia moved its labor inspectorate from the General Agency for Specialized Inspection to the Ministry of Labor and Social Protection (MLSP). (3,31)
Criminal Police Department (CPD)	Oversees several specialty units that enforce child labor laws. (32) CPD oversees the Anti-Trafficking Unit and the Organized Crime Division which uses an 11-question risk assessment to accurately identify human trafficking victims and uses referrals to open criminal investigations into human trafficking and sexual exploitation cases. (3,15) The Division for Combating Against Domestic Violence and Crimes Against Children comprises 10 officers who provide guidance to police units and protection services for survivors of child labor. (31) The National Police Agency assigned 53 police officers nationwide to exclusively mitigate crimes against children. (9,31) Cybercrimes involving children are investigated by the Division to Combat Cyber Crimes. (3) This includes cases of online sexual exploitation of children. (31)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
MLSP	In November 2022, the labor inspectorate was moved to MLSP. In April 2022, it adopted guidelines for identifying and referring victims of human trafficking. (3) The Family, Child, and Youth Development Agency (FCYDA) within the MLSP employs 41 child rights officers who oversee child protection issues, including child labor. They can identify and remove children working under hazardous conditions. (3,10) FCYDA also runs a child safety complaint hotline, helped translate an online training package on child labor, and maintains a database that tracks the case status and social service needs of vulnerable children. (3)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Mongolia took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including a lack of training on collecting data that would be useful for prosecutors.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

† Data are from March 1, 2022, to November 1, 2022. (3)

In 2022, there were 1,835 agricultural labor inspections that could only result in recommendations and educating employers on child labor regulations. Inspectors found 1,074 children working during these inspections. (31) The inspectors issued 29 recommendations and wrote 64 letters to employers requesting that they address child labor issues. In addition, 39 labor inspections conducted by the Family, Child, and Youth Development Agency (FCYDA) were specific to child labor and resulted in sanctions. (31) Research found that the FCYDA and the General Agency for Specialized Inspection (GASI) collected approximately $11,888 (41,000,000 MNT) in fines from child labor penalties from March 1 to November 1, 2022. (3)

Mongolia's revised Labor Law permits its labor inspectorate to conduct unannounced inspections. This law supersedes the Law on State Inspections, which prohibited unannounced inspections, but confusion remains amongst inspectors on whether unannounced inspections are permitted. (16,31,34) In addition, GASI inspectors lacked training on what labor inspection information to collect that would be useful to prosecutors. This may have impeded the number of penalties imposed related to labor law violations. (31,35) After GASI was dismantled, research could not confirm whether labor inspections were conducted by the FCYDA, the Criminal Police Department, or the labor inspectorate recently moved to the MLSP. (3,31) In addition, there is a lack of information about labor law enforcement efforts that were undertaken before GASI was dismantled. (3)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Mongolia took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including a lack of training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Unknown (28)	Yes (3)
Number of Investigations	23 (28)	75 (3,31)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (28)	Unknown (3)
Number of Convictions	0 (28)	0 (31)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (28)	Unknown (3)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (28)	Yes (31)

In January 2022, 40 criminal investigators attended a training called Ending Online Child Sexual Exploitation and Abuse, conducted by the International Center for Missing and Exploited Children. (9,36) While the number of prosecutions related to child labor is unknown, the Prosecutor General reported prosecuting crimes involving children in sexual exploitation, prostitution, pornography, and human trafficking. The Anti-Trafficking in Persons Unit found 22 children involved in commercial sexual exploitation and 52 children involved in pornography. (3)

While the Criminal Police Department has a risk assessment checklist to identify survivors of human trafficking, district police officers have not been trained to use this checklist to identify potential cases that should be referred to specialized investigators. There are concerns that many cases of child trafficking have been dropped at the district police level for this reason. (3) Research indicates that perpetrators are able to evade punishment due to a lack of training relating to the Child Protection Law and the Criminal Code. (3,37,38) Additionally, criminal investigators lack sufficient funding and training focused on child labor. (3) Mongolia has a mechanism for referrals between authorities and social services, but it is ineffective. (31) Formal labor inspections regularly include both the police and the FCYDA, so referrals usually occur informally while they are working together. (3)

There continues to be a misconception among many government officials that only girls can be victims of human trafficking. As a result, many cases involving boys are not prosecuted under the human trafficking article of the Criminal Code, but instead under other offenses that carry lighter penalties. (4,8) No boys have been identified as victims of human trafficking in 10 years, despite continued reports that Mongolian boys are being trafficked. (4) Research noted that complex case initiation and referral procedures, coupled with restrictions on contact between anti-trafficking police and prosecutors, at times hindered investigations and prosecutions. (4,15,39) Due to a lack of understanding of victim protection in relation to the Law on Petty Offenses, research found that police reportedly continued to detain child victims as a direct result of the unlawful acts they were forced to commit. (3,9,40,41) The Anti-Trafficking in Persons Unit acknowledged that underage girls are sometimes arrested and detained for prostitution due to a lack of formalized screening procedures and undertrained new police officers. (4,9)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of formal guidelines and referral procedures.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Multidisciplinary Task Force (MDTF)	Coordinates inter-agency efforts on child protection, investigates cases of child labor, and prosecutes criminals. (9,42) Includes 18 representatives from key government ministries and 1 NGO. (3,4) Supported NGOs and the Ministry of Education in training teachers from high-risk schools to implement after-school programs that helped high schoolers recognize and prevent child forced labor and sex trafficking. (3,9) Opened three safe spaces for children in police stations and provided guidelines for the use of those spaces. The government reported that more than 100 children benefited from these spaces during 2022. (3,9) Members of the MDTF participated in training on trauma-informed, child-friendly approaches to human trafficking cases. (9) The success of this task force was hindered by a lack of formal guidelines and referral procedures. This inhibited referrals for criminal investigation, social services, and reintegration assistance for cases involving children. (3)

In February 2022, the Prime Minister issued an order to renew the mandate of the National Committee for Children, which serves as the coordinating body for child protection efforts. (3,43) The National Anti-Trafficking Sub-Council and the Crime Prevention Coordination Council continue to address human trafficking, including the trafficking of children. (3,9)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including the lack of a policy to address child labor in all its forms.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
Child Protection Compact Partnership (2020–2024)	$5 million USD cooperative agreement between the Government of Mongolia, the United States Government, and NGOs. (42,44,45) Consists of 18 governmental and non-governmental organizations to fund victim-centered, collaborative, and sustainable approaches to identify child trafficking victims. (28,46) Created the Multidisciplinary Task Force (MDTF) under the National Sub-Council on Trafficking in Persons. (3,42) Works with the Crime Prevention and Coordinating Council and National Sub-Council on Trafficking in Persons. (42,45) They also trained 200 Home Visitors who will educate communities on human trafficking prevention and victim identification. (3)

Research was unable to determine whether a policy exists that address child labor in all its forms.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the lack of programs to address child protection and raise awareness on child labor.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Enabling Equity to Advance Learning (EQUAL) (2022–2025)*	Supports children with disabilities in schools and improves school lunches and education. The Global Partnership for Education awarded this grant to the Ministry of Education. (47)
Children's Money Program†	Distributes a monthly stipend to vulnerable children under age 18 and aims to prevent child labor by offsetting costs related to food, school, and clothing. Operated by the General Agency for Social Welfare and Service, the General Agency for State Registration, and the Human Development Fund. (48,49) This program accounts for 3 percent of the GDP. Remained active during the reporting year. (50)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Mongolia.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (9,51)

During the reporting period, the government has been implementing plans and programs to help children reintegrate into school and deter them from dropping out. (30) The Minister of Education and Science created a plan for the 2021–2022 school year, which resulted in students returning to the classroom who had been considered at risk of dropping out. The Green Light action plan was also implemented in the 2021–2022 academic year, and it focused on supporting the reintegration of children back into school who had suffered due to the COVID-19 pandemic. (30) In 2022, the social programs run by the government faced challenges due to inflation and increased unemployment. (3)

The government collaborates with NGOs to provide survivors with victim services. (3,4) The government ran at least two shelters that housed children who had been trafficked, but these children were not separated from the general population. Multiple children have been sexually abused at these shelters due to poor oversight. (4,52) The shelters that can accept child victims of child labor and sexual exploitation are temporary and can house children for 6 months at most. Additionally, all shelters are inaccessible for people with disabilities. (9)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Mongolia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Establish legal penalties for violations of minimum age restrictions.	2022
	Ensure that laws adequately prohibit children under age 18 from horse racing at all times of the year.	2017 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2022
Enforcement	Ensure that labor inspectors are authorized to enforce labor laws and receive training on data collection, the revised Labor Law, and the legalization of unannounced inspections that can result in sanctions.	2022
	Establish a functional, formalized mechanism for referrals between enforcement authorities and social services.	2022
	Allow anti-trafficking police and prosecutors to work with one another and ensure that evidence related to human trafficking cases is collected to support investigations.	2020 – 2022
	Ensure that the procedural checklists used to identify human trafficking victims are used consistently.	2019 – 2022
	Provide adequate funding for law enforcement agencies.	2022
	Strengthen the inspection system by conducting unannounced inspections and imposing penalties for any violations found.	2022
	Ensure that child trafficking victims are not fined, arrested, detained, or charged with crimes and administrative offenses as a result of having been subjected to human trafficking.	2020 – 2022
	Ensure that criminal law enforcement officials receive training on new laws related to child labor.	2018 – 2022
	Provide trainings for police officers and government officials on criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor, including the Child Protection Law and the Law on Petty Offenses, to ensure that child labor offenses are prosecuted fully, convicted traffickers are appropriately punished, and police discontinue the practice of detaining child victims.	2011 – 2022
	Publish criminal law enforcement data, including the number of investigations, prosecutions, and convictions, and whether penalties are imposed for violations relating to the worst forms of child labor.	2017 – 2022
Coordination	Create formal guidelines and referral procedures for the Multidisciplinary Task Force.	2022
Government Policies	Implement a policy to address child labor in all its forms.	2020 – 2022
Social Programs	Expand existing programs to address the scope of the child labor problem and ensure that they are sufficiently funded and staffed.	2020 – 2022
	Increase the number of schools to help eliminate overcrowding, increase the number of trained teachers, ensure that appropriate technology is available to all students, and provide infrastructure to allow full accessibility options for children with disabilities.	2019 – 2022
	Increase the length of stay available for children in shelter homes.	2019 – 2022
	Ensure that all government-run and -funded shelter homes separate children from adults, are provided proper oversight so children are protected from sexual abuse, and are accessible to children with disabilities.	2019 – 2022

In 2022, Montenegro made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government of Montenegro increased cash benefit payments to families with children at risk for child labor and allocated funding for the construction of the country's first shelter dedicated to children who are survivors of human trafficking. However, children in Montenegro are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Research found that the scope of programs to address child labor in street work is insufficient.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Montenegro. (1-3) Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	17.3 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	95.0
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	20.5
Primary Completion Rate (%)		101.1

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2021, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2022. (4)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 6 (MICS 6), 2018. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Services	Street work, including vending small goods and begging (7)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,2,8)
	Forced begging (7)
	Forced domestic work (3,5,8)
	Use in illicit activities, including the harvesting and trafficking of drugs (1,6,7)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Montenegro is a source, destination, and transit country for trafficking of children for forced labor, including forced begging, especially among Roma children. (1,7,9) Some Roma, Ashkali, and Balkan Egyptian girls from Montenegro are sold and forced into domestic servitude in both Montenegro and Kosovo. (10,11) Children, especially girls, are victims of trafficking for commercial sexual exploitation internally and transnationally within the region. (1,7)

The inability to enroll in school makes some Montenegrin children vulnerable to child labor. Some Roma, Ashkali, and Balkan Egyptian children, as well as some Kosovar children of persons displaced due to conflict, have difficulty accessing education services (along with other social services) because they lack birth registration documents. (12) In addition, some children with disabilities experience difficulty physically accessing educational facilities and have limited government social services available to them. (13,14)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Montenegro has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government's laws and regulations are in line with relevant international standards (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 16 of the Labor Law (16)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 17, 172, and 173 of the Labor Law (16)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 104 and 106 of the Labor Law; Articles 7 and 8 of the Regulations on Measures of Protection in the Workplace (16,17)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 444 of the Criminal Code; Articles 28 and 63 of the Constitution (18,19)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 444–446 of the Criminal Code (19)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 209–211 of the Criminal Code (19)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 300 and 301 of the Criminal Code (19)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Articles 47, 188, and 195 of the Declaration of the Law on the Army of Montenegro; Articles 162 and 163 of the Law on the Armed Forces (20,21)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*		Articles 47, 188, and 195 of the Declaration of the Law on the Army of Montenegro; Articles 162 and 163 of the Law on the Armed Forces (20,21)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 444 of the Criminal Code (19)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Article 4 of the Law on Primary Education (22)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 75 of the Constitution (18)

* Country has no conscription (20)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Labor Inspectorate	Leads and monitors the enforcement of labor laws, including those that protect working children. (9,22,23) Part of the Inspectorate General and has 15 offices that proactively plan labor inspections. (22) The Labor Inspectorate also maintains a national call center and an e-mail line for receiving complaints. (22,23)
Ministry of Interior	Houses the Police Directorate and the Office for the Fight Against Trafficking in Humans (Trafficking in Persons Department). An eight-member unit within the Police Directorate investigates human trafficking, forced labor, and illegal migration. (23) Also investigates reports of child begging, develops policy to prevent future cases of forced begging, and removes child beggars from the streets through the Beggar Task Force. (7,24) Through its TIP Department, coordinates government efforts against human trafficking, harmonizes legislation, maintains data on human trafficking, and funds hotlines for reporting human trafficking cases. (23) Police refer children found begging or requiring social assistance to public institutions that provide accommodation, protection, education, and therapy for vulnerable children. (6,22) During the reporting period, the TIP Department continued to expand staff capacity to coordinate the identification and referral of victims of human trafficking. Additionally, TIP Department staff members participated in anti-trafficking in persons trainings facilitated by the IOM and the OSCE Mission to Montenegro. (25)
Supreme State Prosecutor	Investigates and enforces criminal laws on forced labor and human trafficking for commercial sexual exploitation. (24) Collects data on the number of police investigations, convictions, and court rulings, and submits them to the TIP Department. (24)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Montenegro took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Finance and Social Welfare that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including inadequate resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Labor inspectors can inspect registered farms, and the staff of the Social Welfare Centers (SWCs) can inspect unregistered farms to detect child labor. (3) Children found during labor inspections can be referred to SWCs and accommodated in a government-financed, NGO-run shelter for human trafficking victims. (3) If child labor is found by SWCs, social workers cooperate with labor inspectors and criminal law enforcement to ensure that children receive proper support and protection from further exploitation. Labor inspections increase during the summer months, particularly in the tourism sector throughout the coastal region. (3,22,27) Reports indicate that the number of inspectors is insufficient to adequately enforce its labor laws, particularly in cases involving the agricultural and domestic labor sectors. (5) In addition, the government maintains a database on children involved in begging, but it does not collect or publish data on child labor. (14)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, the government's criminal law enforcement agencies appeared to function adequately in addressing child labor (Table 7).

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (6)	Yes (28)
Number of Investigations	4 (6)	5 (28)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	0 (6)	4 (28)
Number of Convictions	1 (6)	0 (28)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (6)	Yes (28)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (6)	Yes (28)

In 2022, police across Montenegro continued to implement "Operation Beggar" to discourage forced begging. Eleven children were also referred to the Shelter for Victims of Trafficking in Persons, including four children engaged in forced begging. (5)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including the lack of a mechanism to coordinate efforts to address all worst forms of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Coordination Body for Monitoring and Implementing the Protocol on the Treatment of Bodies, Institutions, and Organizations in Montenegro with Children Involved in Street Life and Work	Created to coordinate intergovernmental work on issues specifically affecting children engaged in street labor. In November 2022, new members of the coordinating body were nominated, and the Ministry of the Interior led the process of revising sections of the Protocol. (5)

While the government continues to support the Office of the National Anti-Trafficking Coordinator and the National Council for the Rights of Children, there isn't a mechanism to coordinate efforts to address all worst forms of child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Strategy for Combating Human Trafficking (2019–2024)	Outlines objectives for addressing human trafficking by raising public awareness, strengthening the capacity for victim identification and services provision, improving interagency coordination, and raising the efficiency of prosecutions. (28) During the reporting period, the Government of Montenegro implemented the 2022 national action plan associated with this strategy. (5,25)
Strategy for Exercising the Rights of the Child in Montenegro (2019–2023)	Seeks to enhance the ability of children to exercise their rights by improving the application of laws related to children; supporting vulnerable children, including those with disabilities; and improving protections for violence against children, including from child trafficking, child prostitution, child pornography, and involvement in armed conflict. A working group is tasked with producing an annual report detailing the steps it has taken toward achieving the plan's goals. (29) Research was unable to determine whether the policy was active during the reporting period.
Strategy for the Social Inclusion of Roma and Egyptians (2021–2025)	Aims to create social inclusion of Roma and Egyptians by increasing school attendance and birth registration while preventing child begging and human trafficking. Implemented by the Ministry of Justice, Human, and Minority Rights. (6,31) Research was unable to determine whether the policy was active during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (6)

During the reporting period, the Government of Montenegro implemented the National Action Plan for 2022 associated with the National Strategy for Combatting Human Trafficking (2019–2024). Additionally, government institutions continued to adhere to the Protocol on the Treatment of Bodies, Institutions, and Organizations in Montenegro with Children Involved in Street Life and Work to continue promoting the safety and wellbeing of children in economically vulnerable situations. (5)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
UNICEF Country Program (2017–2022)	Addressed access to social services for children, synchronized the legal framework with EU and UN standards, implemented and monitored policies relevant to children, and applied the principles of the UN CRC. During the reporting period, UNICEF continued to administer country program-associated activities in conjunction with the Government of Montenegro. (31)
Development of Standard Operating Procedures for the Treatment of Children Deprived of Parents or Unaccompanied	Implemented by the Ministry of Interior's TIP Department and UNICEF. (25) Goals include standardizing procedures among all relevant institutions for dealing with unaccompanied children and children separated from parents, and ensuring compliance with both international and national laws for children. (33) Includes procedures on identifying, serving, and integrating these children. (33) Research was unable to determine whether the program was active during the reporting period.
Hotline for Victims of Human Trafficking†	SOS Hotline funded by the TIP Department and run by the NGO Montenegrin Women's Lobby. Provides advice, connects victims with service providers, and raises public awareness. During the reporting period, the Hotline continued to receive calls from victims of trafficking. (5)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of Montenegro.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (7,38,39)

The Government of Montenegro increased the availability of social assistance to vulnerable children, including an expansion of cash benefits beginning in October 2022. (31) Additionally, the government approved the construction of the country's first state-operated shelter for child victims of human trafficking. (5) Provision of services to individuals with disabilities who are victims of human trafficking remains limited, and though the Government of Montenegro has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, especially for street work and forced begging. (5)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Montenegro (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Consistently track and publish information about children involved in the worst forms of child labor, including data on the sectoral distribution of child labor.	2017 – 2022
Coordination	Establish a mechanism to coordinate efforts to address all worst forms of child labor.	2022
Government Policies	Ensure that activities are undertaken to implement key policies related to child labor during the reporting period and that data on these activities are published.	2020 – 2022
Social Programs	Build the capacity of schools and other services and programs to accommodate and provide support for children with disabilities.	2015 – 2022
	Expand existing programs to address the scope of the child labor problem, especially in street work and forced begging.	2018 – 2022

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Social Programs	Make additional efforts to bolster birth registration for children from the Ashkali, Balkan Egyptian, and Roma communities to ensure equity in children's access to the educational and social welfare systems.	2019 – 2022
	Ensure that activities are undertaken to implement key social programs to address child labor during the reporting period and make information about implementation measures publicly available.	2020 – 2022

Although research found no evidence that child labor exists in Montserrat, in 2022, the government made no advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. Montserrat also continued to implement a law that delays advancement to prevent the worst forms of child labor. Labor inspectors do not have the authority to conduct unannounced inspections, as they must obtain either the business owner's consent or a search warrant to enter a business for the purposes of performing an inspection. The lack of unannounced inspections may leave potential violations of child labor laws and other labor abuses undetected in workplaces. In addition, the Labor Code allows children as young as age 14 to engage in light work; however, Montserrat does not have a list of activities that constitute light work, nor does it specify the conditions under which light work may be undertaken or limit the number of hours for light work. Additionally, the government has not determined by national law or regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited for children nor criminally prohibited the use of children in illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides one key indicator on children's education in Montserrat.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Data were unavailable from International Labor Organization's analysis, 2023. (2)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

British Overseas Territories recognize the jurisdiction and sovereignty of the UK but are constitutionally not part of the UK. They are self-governing, except in the areas of foreign affairs and defense. (3) Domestic UK law does not generally apply unless explicitly extended to Montserrat. (3) Under Article 35(4) of the ILO Constitution, when the UK ratifies a Convention, the Territory must consider if it will accept the Convention. If the Convention is accepted, it is considered applicable to that Territory. (3,4) No key international conventions concerning child labor have been accepted by Montserrat (Table 2).

Table 2. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor
 UN CRC
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The Government of Montserrat has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 3). However, gaps exist in Montserrat's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including a failure to criminalize the use of children in illicit activities.

Free Public Education	Yes		Chapter II, Part I of the Education Act (8)

* Country has no conscription (3)

The Labor Code allows children as young as age 14 to engage in light work; however, Montserrat does not have a list of activities that constitute light work, nor does it specify the conditions under which light work may be undertaken or limit the number of hours for light work. (5) The Minister of Labor for Montserrat is responsible for deciding what constitutes hazardous work; however, Montserrat has not determined by national law or regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited for children. (5,9) In addition, the law does not criminally prohibit the use of children in illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs. (5,9)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for enforcement actions to address child labor, including its worst forms. However, Montserrat has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 4).

Table 4. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Department of Labor	Conducts labor inspections pursuant to the Labor Code under the Labor Commissioner. (9) According to Article 8 of the Labor Code, labor inspectors must obtain either the employer's permission or a search warrant to enter a business for the purposes of performing an inspection. As a result, labor inspectors do not have the authority to conduct unannounced inspections. (5)
Royal Montserrat Police Service	Enforces the laws of Montserrat, including worst forms of child labor laws. (10) Responsible for criminal investigations and pursuing criminal proceedings in cases of child abuse of any kind. (11)
Department of Social Services	Verifies the credibility of reports on the abuse of children. (11) If the allegations are true, the Social Services Department meets with the police to decide on a course of action with the child in mind. The police will take over the criminal investigation while Social Services ensures the protection of the child. (11)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for a mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for programs to address child labor.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, the following actions would advance the continued prevention of child labor in Montserrat (Table 5).

Table 5. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify ILO Convention 182 on the Worst Forms of Child Labor.	2020 – 2022
	Ratify the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child.	2020 – 2022
	Ratify the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict.	2020 – 2022
	Ratify the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution, and Child Pornography.	2020 – 2022
	Ratify the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2020 – 2022
	Determine the types of hazardous work prohibited for children, in consultation with employers' and workers' organizations.	2017 – 2022
	Ensure that laws criminally prohibit the use of children in illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs.	2020 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2022
Enforcement	Ensure that the law's light work provisions specify the activities/conditions in which light work may be undertaken by children as young as age 14 and limit the number of hours for light work.	2020 – 2022
	Ensure that the labor inspectorate is authorized to conduct unannounced inspections.	2019 – 2022

In 2022, Morocco made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government convicted five civil servants on charges related to the sexual exploitation of children or forced child labor. It also drafted a national strategy against human trafficking and developed a guide to help government ministries identify trafficking victims. Additionally, the government increased the number of labor inspectors by over 23 percent, from 404 in 2021 to 500 in 2022. However, children in Morocco are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including forced domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation. The Labor Code's minimum age for work provisions do not meet international standards as children 15 years of age and under are not protected when working in traditional artisan and handicraft sectors. Furthermore, the scope of government social programs is insufficient as they do not fully address children exploited through domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation.

Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, as a result of human trafficking (3,4)
	Forced domestic work (4,7,8)
	Forced begging (4,6)
	Forced labor in artisanal crafts, textile, construction, and mechanics (4)
	Use in illicit activities, including the trafficking of drugs, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,4)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Approximately 2 percent of Moroccan children, between the ages of 7 and 17, are economically active, with more children working in rural areas than urban areas. (3) Of these economically active children, 6 out of 10 are performing hazardous work. (9) Roughly 80 percent of child labor victims are boys from rural areas. (3) Rural Moroccan girls, some as young as age 8, are recruited for domestic work in private urban homes, a practice known locally as petites bonnes. (8,10) Some of these girls are subjected to physical and verbal abuse, excessive working hours, confiscation of identity papers, and denial of access to educational opportunities by their employers. (7-11) In addition, exploitation in domestic work makes children vulnerable to child sex trafficking within Morocco and elsewhere, such as Spain and the Persian Gulf. (12)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Research identified an increase in migrant children—both Moroccan natives and sub-Saharan Africans immigrating through Morocco—traveling to Europe, particularly Spain. Most of these children were unaccompanied and lacked access to stable housing, exposing them to poverty and social exclusion, increasing their vulnerability to child labor. (13,14) Children in Morocco, particularly in rural areas, also face barriers to education, including the cost of school materials, poor facilities, and transportation issues. (15) Approximately 85 percent of children who are economically active have left schooling. (3) Some children must reside in boarding houses to attend school due to long commutes, and some families are reluctant to allow children—particularly girls—to make the daily journey for fear of exposure to risks associated with traveling to school. Other barriers to education include fees associated with after-school activities and the required documentation for school enrollment. (15) Identification documents are sometimes denied to children in rural areas who are born to unmarried parents. (16)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Morocco has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Morocco's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including a minimum age for work that does not meet international standards.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	15	Articles 4, 143, and 151 of the Labor Code; Article 6 of Law No. 19-12 (17,18)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 147 and 150 of the Labor Code; Article 6 of Law No. 19-12 (17,18)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Hazardous Child Labor List, Decree No. 2-10-183; Articles 179 and 181 of the Labor Code (17,19)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 448.1, 448.4, and 448.5 of the Law on Trafficking in Human Beings; Articles 10 and 12 of the Labor Code; Article 467-2 of the Penal Code (17,20,21)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 448.1, 448.4, and 448.5 of the Law on Trafficking in Human Beings (21)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 497–499, and 503-2 of the Penal Code; Articles 448.1 and 448.4 of the Law on Trafficking in Human Beings (20,21)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Law number 1-73-282; Article 467-2 of the Penal Code; Articles 448.1 and 448.4 of the Law on Trafficking in Human Beings (20-22)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	No

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 4 of Law No. 44-18 (23)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Articles 448.1 and 448.4 of the Law on Trafficking in Human Beings (21)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Article I of Law No. 04-00 (24)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article I of Law No. 04-00 (24)

The 2016 Law on Setting Up Employment Conditions of Domestic Workers prohibits employing children under the age of 18 in domestic work with a transition period of five years. During the reporting period, the minimum age for domestic work was 16. (18) However, the Labor Code does not apply to children who work in traditional artisan or handicraft sectors for family businesses with five or fewer employees. (17)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Economic Inclusion, Small Business, Employment and Skills (MEIPEEC)	Enforces child labor laws with its 54 inspection offices throughout the country. (3,6) Partners with civil society organizations working to remove children from child labor and provide them with an education or vocational training. (3,25) MEIPEEC's priorities in the 2022 National Labor Inspection Plan include upholding workers' representation rights and focusing inspections on temporary work agencies, security, gardening, construction, and cleaning companies. (3)
Ministry of the Interior	Through the General Directorate of National Security, enforces prohibitions on trafficking in persons, prostitution, and other exploitative crimes involving minors, as established in the Penal Code. (3)
General Prosecutor	Prosecutes criminal offenses against children and processes cases involving children in the court system. Serves independently as a judiciary body separate from the Ministry of Justice. (3)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Morocco took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Economic Inclusion, Small Business, Employment and Skills (MEIPEEC) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including an insufficient number of labor inspectors.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown (6)	$750,000 (3)
Number of Labor Inspectors	404 (6)	500 (3)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor (Cont.)

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (17)	Yes (3,17)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (6)	Yes (3)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (6)	Yes (3)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	No (6)	No (3)

Between January 2022 and February 2023, 522 children were removed from hazardous working conditions, with 332 of these children being younger than 15 years of age. (3) The National Observatory for Children's Rights also established an online portal and reporting mechanisms on its website to provide more ways to report child abuse, including child labor. This complements the hotline already in use for formal child labor complaints. (26) In 2022, the government increased the number of labor inspectors by over 23 percent, from 404 to 500 in total. (3,6) Of the 500 labor inspectors in Morocco, 101 are contractors rather than public servants. (3) Due to the instability of contract employment, the authority and training of these labor inspectors may be called into question. Despite this increase in inspectors, research indicates Morocco does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (27-29)

The official procedure to process a child labor violation requires the participation of several agencies, which places considerable administrative burden on labor inspectors. In some areas, there are informal referral mechanisms between labor inspectors and social services maintained through the court system, but coordination varies from region to region. (3,30) Despite the existence of regulations on implementing the 2016 Law on Setting Up Employment Conditions of Domestic Workers, enforcement remains challenging, as unannounced inspections of private residences, in which many child domestic workers are employed, cannot be conducted without a court order in accordance with 2018 Labor Law (Law 19-12). (6,31) Penalties for employing children in hazardous work are also insufficient to act as a deterrent to child labor, as labor inspectors generally recommend removing children from their employers before imposing any penalties, and may not impose penalties if the employer ends the employment of children. (15,32,33)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Morocco took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including the lack of publication of criminal law enforcement data.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (6)	Yes (3)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (6)	Unknown (3)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (6)	Unknown (3)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (6)	Unknown (3)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (6)	Unknown (3)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	No (30)	Yes (26,34)

In 2022, law enforcement agencies identified 27 child victims of servitude and forced labor, and 66 child victims of commercial sexual exploitation. (26,35) Also during the year, five civil servants were convicted on charges related to sexual exploitation or forced labor of minors. (35) However, the government did not provide information on the number of investigations conducted, prosecutions initiated, convictions achieved, or penalties imposed for the worst forms of child labor for inclusion of this report. (3)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of coordinating bodies to address all forms of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Commission for the Coordination of Measures to Combat and Prevent Trafficking in Persons	Coordinates the government's efforts to address trafficking in persons. Led by the Ministry of Justice, with 22 members representing various ministries and civil society organizations. (3,4,26) In 2022, the Commission completed a guide for human trafficking indicators to help government ministries identify trafficking victims and organized a workshop on establishing strong national referral mechanisms for trafficking victims. (35) In March 2023, the Commission also enacted a new trafficking strategic plan. (34)

Although Morocco has a committee to coordinate efforts to address trafficking in persons, as well as the Technical Committee Under the Special Ministerial Commission for Children for the Protection and Improvement of Childhood to address child protection in general, it does not have an active coordinating mechanism to address all forms of child labor. (3)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards related to child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
Ministry of Solidarity, Social Inclusion, and Family (MSISF) Integrated Public Policy on the Protection of Children in Morocco	Promotes an interdisciplinary approach to respond to the exploitation of children and other issues. (36) Implemented by MEIPEEC. (3,26)
National Strategy to Address Trafficking in Persons†	Aims to raise awareness of human trafficking and improve the identification and referral of victims to services. Enacted in March 2023 with assistance from international partners. (34,35)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

In late 2022, MEIPEEC made arrangements with the ILO and NGOs to draft a strategic action plan to address the worst forms of child labor. (3,26)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate efforts to address child labor in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Social Cohesion Support Fund†	Programs that aim to improve access to education. Include the MSISF-funded Tayssir Conditional Cash Transfer Program, which provides direct cash transfers to qualifying families whose children meet school attendance criteria. (15) These cash transfers continued in 2022. (26)
Government-Funded Projects‡	Projects that aim to assist vulnerable children, including the After-School Program for a Second Chance, which provides students with after-school educational assistance as part of non-formal education programs; Mouwakaba, a MSISF-funded project that assists nearly 2,700 at-risk youth in 6 cities with vocational training; and "Cities Without Street Children," which provides assistance to homeless children in Casablanca and Méknes. The projects remained active in 2022. (37-40)
AMAL Program	Supports the efforts of the Moroccan authorities to ensure an environment conducive to the development and autonomy of children and young people in migration and refugee status. Implemented by UNHCR, IOM, and UNICEF under the coordination of the UN's Office of the Resident Coordinator. (30,41) The AMAL program was active in 2022. (3)

† Program is funded by the Government of Morocco.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (15)

Morocco

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Although the government has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, including for children engaged in forced domestic work. This is especially apparent in rural areas, given the extent to which children engaged in labor and commercial sexual exploitation is likely underreported. (40)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Morocco (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that all children age 15 and under are protected by law, including children who work in the traditional artisan and handicraft sectors for family businesses.	2009 – 2022
	Ensure that the law establishes 16 as the minimum age for voluntary recruitment by the state military with safeguards for voluntariness.	2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the use of a child for prostitution.	2022
Enforcement	Increase the number of labor inspectors from 500 to 819 to provide adequate coverage of the labor force of approximately 12.3 million people.	2012 – 2022
	Ensure that the labor inspectorate is made up of public servants rather than contractors to avoid complications related to the training and authority of these inspectors.	2022
	Publish information on labor law enforcement efforts, including penalties imposed and collected for violations of the worst forms of child labor.	2015 – 2022
	Impose penalties whenever child labor violations are found.	2012 – 2022
	Reduce administrative burdens for inspectors referring children to services and streamline child labor enforcement procedures among government agencies.	2013 – 2022
	Publish information on criminal enforcement efforts, including the number of investigations, prosecutions initiated, number of convictions, and penalties imposed for violations related to the worst forms of child labor.	2012 – 2022
	Establish referral mechanisms between labor law enforcement authorities and social services where they do not currently exist and strengthen existing informal networks for this purpose to ensure effective coordination on child labor cases.	2021 – 2022
Coordination	Establish a mechanism to coordinate government efforts to address all worst forms of child labor.	2022
Social Programs	Expand existing programs to address the full scope of the child labor problem, including in rural areas and in forced domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation.	2013 – 2022
	Collect and publish information on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs, including in farming and forestry.	2016 – 2022
	Remove barriers to education, such as insufficient facilities and a lack of reliable and safe transportation, particularly in rural areas.	2013 – 2022

In 2022, Mozambique made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government convened its first annual National Conference on the Elimination of Child Labor and held awareness campaigns about child labor in all provinces. However, children in Mozambique are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced domestic work. Children also engage in dangerous tasks in the production of tobacco. In addition, the established minimum age for work is not in compliance with international labor standards because it does not extend to informal employment. Lastly, existing social programs are insufficient to fully address the extent of the child labor problem in Mozambique.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Mozambique.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	16.2 (1,270,866)
Working children by sector	5 to 14
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	63.6
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	10.2
Primary Completion Rate (%)		58.2

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of cashews, coconuts, cotton,† sugarcane,† tea, tobacco,† and tomatoes (3-6)
	Fishing,† including handling nets (6-9)
	Forestry,† including cutting wood, and climbing trees to collect fruit (3,6,9)
	Herding livestock, including cattle (3,6)
	Hunting, including small and wild animals (3,4)
Industry	Artisanal mining,† including gold and gemstones,† and breaking stone† (3,6,7,9,10)
	Construction† (3,7)
	Brickmaking (6)
Services	Domestic work,† including childcare† (3,6,7,10)
	Street work, including car washing† and street vending (3,6,9-11)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,6,7,9,12,13)
	Forced labor in agriculture, domestic work, mining, and vending (6,14)
	Use in illicit activities, including drug trafficking, stealing, and assisting poachers in the illegal poaching industry (3,6)
	Recruitment of children by non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict (6,15)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Mozambique

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Mozambican children, lured from rural areas with promises of work and educational opportunities, are subjected to forced domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation in urban areas in Mozambique and South Africa. Research indicates that Mozambican children are also trafficked to South Africa for forced labor in agriculture, mining, and street vending. (6,7,12,16) Research found that children in larger cities and along transit corridors are at risk of commercial sexual exploitation. The U.S. government-designated terrorist group ISIS-Mozambique also abducted and used children as soldiers, cooks, and laborers in northern Mozambique. (6,15)

Although primary education is free through the ninth grade, families must provide school supplies and uniforms. (7,9,17) Barriers to education for children also include a lack of schools, classroom space, and trained teachers. Many students, particularly in rural areas, face difficulties traveling long distances to get to school. (6,18,19) In addition, physical and sexual abuse is common in schools and research found that some male teachers coerce female students into sex. (5,20) The government estimates that only 49 percent of children complete their primary education. (5,6,9,21) Further, some LGBTQI+ students faced discrimination at secondary schools, with documented cases of discrimination in the major cities of Beira, Maputo, and Nampula. (5,6,9) By the end of 2022, approximately 1 million people, more than 50 percent of them children, were displaced due to increased terrorist-related violence in Cabo Delgado Province, up from more than 800,000 people the previous year; the increased rate of displacement creates additional barriers to secondary education for some children due to a lack of secondary schools or overcrowding. (5,6,9,22-24)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Mozambique has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Mozambique's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including a lack of minimum age protections for children without formal employment relationships.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	15	Article 26 of the Labor Law; Article 4 of the Regulations on Domestic Work (25,26)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 23 of the Labor Law (26)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes	18	Hazardous Work List (27)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 10, 11, and 17 of the Trafficking in Persons Law; Articles 196 and 198 of the Penal Code (28,29)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 5, 10, and 11 of the Trafficking in Persons Law (28)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 5, 10, and 11 of the Trafficking in Persons Law; Articles 226 and 227 of the Penal Code (28,29)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 33 and 40 of the Law on Drugs (30)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Articles 2 and 23 of the Law on Military Service (31)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 2 of the Law on Military Service (31)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Articles 5 and 10 of the Trafficking in Persons Law (28)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15‡	Article 41 of the Law of Basic Child Protection; Article 7 of the Law on the National System of Education (32,33)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 41 of the Law of Basic Child Protection; Article 7 of the Law on the National System of Education (32,33)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (32,33)

The Labor Law's minimum age protections do not meet international standards as they do not apply to children working outside of formal employment relationships. (26,33-35) The Labor Law also states that children between the ages of 12 and 15 may work under certain conditions defined by the Council of Ministers, and the Regulations on Domestic Work allow children between the ages of 12 and 15 to perform domestic work with the permission of their legal guardian. (25,26) However, this minimum age of 12 for light work is not in compliance with international standards, as the age for light work should be 13 years old. (34,36)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MITESS)	Enforces child labor laws and regulations. The labor inspectorate works with the National Police Force to enforce criminal law. (9) Monitors implementation of the National Action Plan to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor. (6,9,17,37) During the reporting period, MITESS trained police units and community leaders on child labor prevention. Additionally, it held awareness campaigns about child labor and child labor trafficking in informal markets, schools, religious sites, and communities in all provinces. (6,15) In April 2022, MITESS convened the government's first annual National Conference on the Elimination of Child Labor, and subsequently held eight province-level conferences on child labor and trafficking. Government agencies, civil society organizations, and other partners were included in these discussions. (15)
Ministry of Industry and Commerce's General Inspectorate of Economic Activities	Enforces child labor laws and regulations related to business activities and holds awareness-raising events on child labor. (6,9,17)
Ministry of Interior and the Attorney General's Office	The National Police Force functions under the Ministry of the Interior and enforces all criminal laws, including those related to the worst forms of child labor. Through its seven-person National Criminal Investigation Service, located within the Ministry of the Interior, investigates and refers cases of human trafficking and violence against women and children to the Attorney General's Office. (6,9,17) The Attorney General's Office coordinates the government's efforts against human trafficking and child labor, and leads the National Reference Group for the Protection of Children and Combating Trafficking in Persons. (6,9,17)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Mozambique took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MITESS) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including a lack of financial resources.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown (9)	Unknown (6)
Number of Labor Inspectors	129 (9)	156 (6)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	Yes (26)	Yes (26)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	Yes (9)	Yes (6)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksite	8,650 (9)	7,647 (6)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	0 (9)	0 (6)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	N/A (9)	N/A (6)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	N/A (9)	N/A (6)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (9)	Unknown (6)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Unknown (9)	Unknown (6)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (26)	Yes (26)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Unknown (9)	Unknown (6)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (9)	Yes (6)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (9)	Yes (6)

Mozambique hired an additional 27 labor inspectors in 2022. (6) Limited resources, such as insufficient fuel and vehicles, may also hamper the labor inspectorate's ability to enforce child labor laws. (6,7,9,17) MITESS officials can refer survivors of child labor to either the police or social workers from the Ministry of Gender, Children, and Social Action (MGCAS) for family assessments and potential placement of these children in foster homes. (7,9) During the reporting period, MITESS worked with police and immigration officials to conduct awareness-raising activities in markets, schools, and locations where there may be child labor. These activities included disseminating information about work considered dangerous for children and the risk of trafficking children for labor purposes. (5,9)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Mozambique took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including the absence of published criminal enforcement data related to child labor.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (9)	Yes (6)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (9)	2 (6)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (9)	Unknown (6)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (9)	Unknown (6)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (9)	Unknown (6)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (9)	Yes (6)

The government did not publish data on some criminal law enforcement efforts, such as the number of prosecutions initiated, convictions secured, and whether penalties for violations related to the worst forms of child labor were imposed. (6) However, in 2022, the government trained judicial officials on issues related to the worst forms of child labor and hosted several other trainings for border officials on child labor and human trafficking. (6) Criminal law enforcement officials also worked with the MGCAS and the National Reference Group for the Protection of Children and Combating Trafficking in Persons to refer vulnerable children to social services providers. (17) The MGCAS has a standard operating procedure with guidance on how to assist survivors of domestic abuse, including human trafficking survivors. This standard operating procedure incorporates an intake form used nationwide by law enforcement officials, including border officials, to collect the necessary data from survivors and ensure that they receive professional care and referrals to appropriate services. (36)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including the lack of coordination between existing mechanisms.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Multisectoral Group on Child Labor	Led by MITESS, serves as the main coordinating mechanism for child labor, and is responsible for implementing the National Action Plan on Child Labor. Includes representatives from every ministry, reports to the Prime Minister, and submits regular reports to the Council of Ministers. (6) In collaboration with the National Reference Group, assists children found in child labor, including its worst forms. (6) Research was unable to determine whether the Multisectoral Group on Child Labor was active during the reporting period.

The National Reference Group (NRG) supports efforts to prevent human trafficking and is the main coordinating body for addressing human trafficking nationally. Led by the Attorney General, in partnership with local leaders and NGO stakeholders, the NRG holds regular meetings to discuss child labor issues. (9,16) In collaboration with provincial-level groups, the NRG uses a national referral mechanism to connect child labor and human trafficking survivors to services, and facilitates training of officials and awareness-raising campaigns. (5) The government has also set up cross-border groups with each of its neighbors. (9) Research indicates that there is a need to clarify responsibilities and strengthen coordination between the Multisectoral Group on Child Labor and the NRG. (6) The Council of Ministers is charged with monitoring the government's coordination efforts in addressing child labor, and each ministry has a designated point of contact for child issues. (8) During the reporting period, the NRG and its sub-national groups met regularly to discuss child labor and human trafficking cases. (15) The government also held sensitization campaigns nationwide, raising awareness about child labor and human trafficking issues on community radio. (6,15)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Action Plan to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2017–2022)	Addressed the underlying reasons for child labor and geographic regions of concern (Tete, Manica, Maputo Province, and Maputo City), and focused on principal sectors in which child labor occurs (mining, domestic work, and agriculture). (7) Included activities such as mapping 70 percent of occurrences of the worst forms of child labor by province, and withdrawing 20,000 children from the worst forms of child labor and enrolling them in the Basic Social Subsidy program. (37) Mandated the coordination of several key government agencies, including the Attorney General's Office and the Office for Assistance to Families and Children Victims of Violence in the Ministry of Gender, Children, and Social Action (MGCAS), among others. Also created a multi-sector group comprising representatives from the government, civil society, unions, and employers in the formal and informal sectors to collaborate on issues identified in the plan. (7) During the reporting period, the government trained judicial officials, including judges, and border officials on the contents of the plan. (6)
Strategic Plan for the Preparation, Response and Recuperation of the Education Sector in Cases of Emergency	A 10-year strategic plan that aims to provide safe and quality education nationwide during and after emergency situations, focusing on the need for strong interventions to protect children, as well as the harmful effects of child labor. (9,38) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Strategic Plan for the Preparation, Response and Recuperation of the Education Sector in Cases of Emergency during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate efforts to address child labor in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Memorandum of Understanding to Combat Child Labor in Tobacco Growing (2018–2024)	$1.2 million, 3-year project funded by the Eliminating Child Labor in Tobacco Growing Foundation, focusing on education, awareness raising, institutional capacity building, and revision of the government's legal framework. Incorporated training for law enforcement officials. (39-41) Although the program was extended until 2024, research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Memorandum of Understanding to Combat Child Labor in Tobacco Growing program during the reporting period. (6)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

During the reporting period, the NGO-funded Child Talk Line (Linha Fala Criança), which is a hotline that receives complaints of child abuse, including those related to child labor and sexual exploitation, received at least 45 calls related to child labor. The government continues to provide technical support, and the hotline referred calls to the police and judicial actors. (6) However, research found no evidence that the government has carried out programs to assist children engaged in domestic work, and the scope of existing programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the child labor problem.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Mozambique (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Extend minimum age protections for all children, including children working outside of formal employment relationships.	2015 – 2022
	Raise the minimum age for light work from 12 years old to 13 years old to comply with international labor standards.	2018 – 2022
Enforcement	Publish all data on labor law enforcement efforts, including the labor inspectorate's funding and whether targeted and unannounced inspections were carried out.	2009 – 2022
	Provide labor inspectors with adequate financial resources, including vehicles and fuel, to ensure their capacity to enforce child labor laws.	2009 – 2022
	Publish data on criminal law enforcement efforts, such as the number of prosecutions initiated, convictions secured, and whether penalties for violations related to the worst forms of child labor were imposed.	2009 – 2022
Coordination	Ensure responsibilities between the Multisectoral Group on Child Labor and the National Reference Group are clearly defined, and strengthen coordination between the two agencies.	2022
	Ensure the Multisectoral Group on Child Labor effectively coordinates efforts to address child labor and reports on its activities on an annual basis.	2022
Government Policies	Finalize and fully implement the National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons.	2021 – 2022
Social Programs	Take measures to ensure that all children, including children in displaced communities, have access to education by providing supplies, uniforms, and an adequate number of schools, classroom space, and trained teachers; address barriers for children from rural areas; take preventative steps to protect children from physical and sexual abuse in schools.	2010 – 2022
	Publish activities undertaken to implement the Memorandum of Understand to Combat Child Labor in Tobacco Growing.	2018 – 2022
	Institute programs to address child labor in domestic work and expand existing programs to address the full scope of the child labor problem.	2010 – 2022

In 2022, Namibia made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. In March, the government launched the Social Protection Policy to provide a framework to strengthen existing protection mechanisms, including the Child Disability Grant and the Orphans and Vulnerable Children Grant, both of which provide monthly supplemental payments to children vulnerable to child labor. However, children in Namibia are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in agricultural work, domestic work, and street work. Prevention and elimination of child labor are not integrated into key national policies, and social programs do not address child labor in agriculture and domestic work. The government also did not publish data on labor law or criminal law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Namibia. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		109.7

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2021, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2023. (1)
Data were unavailable from International Labor Organization's analysis, 2023. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Working on farms and gardens (3-8)
	Fishing, activities unknown (8,9)
Services	Domestic work (5,6,8-11)
	Street work, including begging and food service, including selling fruits, phone vouchers, and small goods (7,8,10-14)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, including in the production of pornography, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,8,10,11,15-17)
	Use in illicit activities, including organized begging, selling of drugs, and smuggling of fuel, diamonds, and wildlife products (8-11)
	Forced labor in agriculture, fishing, and domestic work (8,16-18)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

An extended drought and economic downturn in northern Namibia and southern Angola have likely affected children's vulnerability to child labor, including its worst forms. Children from rural areas move to urban centers, such as Windhoek, in pursuit of supplemental income for their families, and some of these children engage in selling drugs, organized begging, and commercial sexual exploitation. (3,7,8,10,12) There was a significant increase

Namibia

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

in the number of Angolans migrating to Namibia as a result of climate change-induced drought, which has led to emerging trends of locals hiring Angolan children as domestic workers, for street vending, and for agricultural activities. In addition, NGO and local media reporting indicates children of refugee status along the border of Namibia and Angola are increasingly recruited by criminal organizations to smuggle drugs, fuel, diamonds, and wildlife products. (8,11,18,19) The majority of child victims of trafficking in persons are recruited under the pretext that they will be given the opportunity to attend school. (20)

Children are trafficked within Namibia and from neighboring countries, such as Angola, Zambia, and Zimbabwe, for forced labor in agriculture, domestic work, and commercial sexual exploitation. (9,18) Commercial sexual exploitation most commonly involves girls and occurs in cities and transit corridors, especially along the Namibian and Angolan border. Both girls and boys increasingly are subjected to internet-based forms of sexual exploitation, including use in the production of pornography. (3,8-11,21) It is also a common practice for parents to place their children in the care of relatives and kin relations for expanded education opportunities; in some cases, these children are subjected to forced labor. (18) Children of the San and Himba ethnic groups are particularly vulnerable to forced labor on farms and in homes. (7,17,21,22) Research indicates that some child domestic workers are subjected to physical abuse by their employers. (23)

Both primary and secondary education are free by law; however, long distances to schools, particularly in rural and remote locations, may deter some children from attending school and increase their vulnerability to child labor. (24-26) In addition, educational completion is beyond the means of many families, especially in rural areas; the barriers faced by rural learners were exacerbated by the COVID-19 pandemic-related school closures. (8) The Education Act stipulates that no child be denied education due to documentation. (8,11,25) However, reporting indicates inconsistent regional enforcement of this law, and that some children from nomadic communities or migrant families have difficulty securing birth registration and other identification documents, which sometimes results in delays in enrollment and school admission. (11,27) Furthermore, children orphaned by the HIV/AIDS epidemic or other causes sometimes become heads of households, which may require them to leave school to find work. (24) Reports also highlight that the educational needs of children with disabilities or special learning needs have not been addressed due to lack of qualified inclusive education teachers, disability-friendly infrastructure, teaching and learning materials, and assistive technologies. (8,11)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Namibia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	18	Chapter 2, Article 3(2) of the Labor Act (28)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Chapter 2, Article 3(4) of the Labor Act; Article 2(2) of the Labor Act (Regulations Related to Domestic Work); Article 15(2) of the Constitution (28-30)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Chapter 2, Articles 3(3)(d) and 3(4) of the Labor Act (28)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Chapter 2, Article 4 of the Labor Act; Article 9 of the Constitution; Articles 202 and 234 of the Child Care and Protection Act; Section 15 of the Prevention of Organized Crime Act (28-31)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Sections 202 and 234 of the Child Care and Protection Act; Section 15 of the Prevention of Organized Crime Act; Chapter 2, Article 3(2) of the Combating of Trafficking in Persons Act (30-32)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Section 2 of the Combating of Immoral Practices Amendment Act; Section 234 of the Child Care and Protection Act (30,32)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Section 234 of the Child Care and Protection Act (30)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Section 17 of Defense Act I of 2002 (Government Notice 189 of 2010) (33)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Section 234(1)(b) of the Child Care and Protection Act (30)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	18	Section 9 of the Promulgation of Basic Education Act, 2020 (34)
Free Public Education	Yes		Sections 19 and 67 of the Promulgation of Basic Education Act, 2020 (34)

* Country has no conscription (35)

The Namibian Parliament passed an updated Promulgation of Basic Education Act in 2020, which raised the age of compulsory education up to age 18 or until the completion of secondary school. (19,34) Although Namibia's light work framework for children ages 14 to 18 has a list of activities that are not permitted—including work done underground, in construction or demolition, in places in which goods are manufactured, and in places in which electricity is generated or distributed—and prohibits night work, Namibia's light work framework is insufficient because it does not prescribe the number of hours children ages 14 to 18 may work. (28)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor, Industrial Relations and Employment Creation (MLIREC)	Enforces child labor laws and investigates allegations of violations, including forced labor; cases involving human trafficking, and the commercial sexual exploitation of children. Works on child labor matters with the Ministry of Home Affairs, Immigration, Safety, and Security (MHAISS); the Ministry of Gender Equality, Poverty Eradication, and Social Welfare (MGEPEWSV); the Namibia Central Intelligence Service; and the Ministry of Education. (13,36) Refers children removed from child labor during inspections to MGEPEWSV for placement in social services. (37) Operates an SMS line for labor complaints, including child labor. (13)
Ministry of Justice (MOJ)	Along with the Namibian Police Service (NAMPOL), responsible for enforcing criminal laws against forced child labor, child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, recruitment/use of child soldiers, and/or use of children in illicit activities. MOJ coordinates enforcement efforts of criminal laws against child labor and NAMPOL is responsible for the arrest of those offending and contravening the law. (8)

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Home Affairs, Immigration, Safety, and Security (MHAISS)	Enforces criminal laws through NAMPOL. Coordinates with the labor inspectorate of MLIREC to investigate criminal labor violations, including child labor. (36,38,39) Through NAMPOL's 15 Gender-Based Violence Protection Units, collaborates with MGEPEWS and MLIREC to remove children from human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation, while providing medical and psychosocial care for survivors. (36)

Labor Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether labor law enforcement agencies in Namibia took actions to address child labor (Table 6).

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$2,809,065 (11)	Unknown (8)
Number of Labor Inspectors	Unknown (11)	Unknown (8)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	Yes (28)	Yes (28)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	Unknown (11)	Unknown (8)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksite	2,582 (40)	Unknown (8)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	0 (41)	Unknown (8)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	Unknown (11)	Unknown (8)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	Unknown (11)	Unknown (8)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (41)	Unknown (8)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (41)	Unknown (8)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (28)	Yes (28)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (41)	Unknown (8)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (13)	Yes (13)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Unknown (11)	Unknown (8)

The government did not provide information about labor law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report. (8) Research suggests that while the number of labor inspectors is unknown in Namibia, the current number is likely inadequate to carry out their mandated duties. (9,42) Additionally, the Ministry of Labor, Industrial Relations and Employment Creation (MLIREC) did not make public the number of child labor complaints received through their 24-hour short message service (SMS) for labor complaints in 2022. (19)

The data related to child labor are provided by the Ministry of International Relations and Cooperation (MIRCO), which is the main source of information on child labor in Namibia. Government ministries and agencies, including MLIREC and the Namibian Police Service (NAMPOL), as well as NGOs can only submit data to MIRCO, which then screens, filters, packages, and submits the information to relevant stakeholders. (8) This data consolidation process presents difficulties when comparing official data to information supplied by NGOs because there is no longer a separation between the two data sets. (8)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether criminal law enforcement agencies in Namibia took actions to address child labor (Table 7).

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Unknown (11)	Unknown (8)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (11)	Unknown (8)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (11)	Unknown (8)
Number of Convictions	0 (16)	Unknown (8)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (11)	Unknown (8)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Unknown (11)	Unknown (8)

The government did not provide information on its criminal law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report. The government does not maintain centralized statistics for regional magistrate court cases, which limits information on criminal law enforcement efforts in response to the worst forms of child labor. (24) Law enforcement officials report that, as children are increasingly exposed to online sexual exploitation and abuse of children (OSEAC), they face difficulties in investigating reported cases due to limited legislation, lack of training and funding, insufficient standard operating procedures related to OSEAC, and the absence of a relevant database. (43) In addition, although there are 15 Gender-Based Violence Protection Units in Namibia, previous research indicates considerable variation in the operational performance of these units. Due to resource constraints, only the Windhoek-based unit operates at full capacity, and several other units are unable to function according to their intended mandates. (9,13)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of coordination across government agencies and with civil society organizations.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Interministerial Committee on Child Labor	Coordinates government policies and efforts to prevent and eliminate child labor. Comprises officials from MLIREC, the Ministry of Education, MGEPEWSV, and MHAISS. (44) Research was unable to determine whether the Interministerial Committee on Child Labor was active during the reporting period. (19)

During the reporting period, there were reports of communication breakdowns between government ministries and civil society, likely minimizing the effectiveness of the ministries in addressing child trafficking and child labor. (20)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Agenda for Children (2018–2022)	Led the strategy around child welfare issues with a focus on strengthening the protection of children in need of care, including enforcement of laws protecting children from child labor. (45) Outlined procedural instructions for each ministry and stakeholder to respond to cases of child mistreatment. (36,38,46) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Agenda for Children during the reporting period.
Social Protection Policy (2022–2030)†	Launched by MGEPEWSV during the reporting period. Aims to improve coordination of social protection mechanisms and provides a framework to strengthen child grants through the optimization of child grant-related data, reviewing and developing the implementation mechanism, and creating linkages between relevant government agencies. (47,48)
National Development Plan V (2017/2018–2021/2022)	Outlined goals for addressing child trafficking and protection concerns. (36,49) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Development Plan during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (50,51)

In May 2022, the Ministry of Labor and a delegation comprising its social partners participated in a conference in Durban, South Africa to contribute to a call for action to eliminate child labor in Africa. (11,22) Although the 5-year National Plan of Action Against Trafficking in Persons for 2022–2027 was due to launch in late 2022, coordination issues at the operational level—including unclear delineation of responsibilities among the agencies involved in its development and implementation—delayed adoption. (18) Furthermore, the Ministry of Gender Equality, Poverty Eradication and Social Welfare's 2019–2023 National Action Plan on Gender-Based Violence does not address worst forms of child labor, such as physical abuse occurring in domestic service and commercial sexual exploitation. (51) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Action Plan on Gender-Based Violence during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Social Protection Grants†	MGEPEV-funded grants to support vulnerable children and households. (52) Includes child maintenance grants, place-of-safety allowances, and foster care grants. Child maintenance grants provide monthly stipends to single-parent families and are contingent upon school enrollment of all school-age children; place of safety and foster care grants provide support for people and places that provide temporary care for children. (53-55) During the reporting period, the government approved increases for the Child Disability Grants and the Orphans and Vulnerable Children Grant, effective in 2023. (56)
Shelters and Victims Services‡	Government and NGO shelters provide safe accommodations, meals, clothing, toiletries, psychosocial support, legal assistance, medical services, and access to education. (13,44) Registered residential childcare facilities provide services for children experiencing mistreatment and neglect. The government provides subsidies, either per child or as a percentage of operating expenses, for private shelter facilities. (46,57) Research found that government shelters were not active during the reporting period. (19)
Decent Work Country Program (2018–2023)	ILO-funded program to promote decent work in Namibia, including the elimination of child labor, through employment promotion, enhanced social protection, and social dialogue and collaboration. (6,58) Prioritizes institutional capacity for implementation of child labor policies, and research and data collection on child labor and trafficking in persons. (6) Research was unable to identify activities undertaken to implement the program during the reporting period. (19)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of Namibia.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (36,59,60)

During the reporting period, the Government of Namibia established a high-level task force to operationalize goals set at the UN's Transforming Education Summit and aimed at creating inclusive, equitable, and safe schools in the country. (47)

Although the government provided assistance and services to vulnerable children and some victims of child labor, research found no evidence of programs specifically addressing children working in agriculture or domestic work. (8,20)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Namibia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that Namibia's light work framework prescribes the number of hours children ages 14 to 18 may work.	2022
Enforcement	Publish information on criminal and labor law enforcement efforts undertaken during the reporting period, including labor inspectorate funding; number of labor inspectors; training for labor inspectors and criminal investigators; number and types of labor inspections conducted; child labor violations found; child labor-related penalties imposed and collected; number of criminal investigations; prosecutions initiated; number of convictions; and information about reciprocal referral mechanisms.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that training is provided to labor inspectors, including training of new inspectors and refresher courses.	2021 – 2022

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Ensure that training is provided to criminal law enforcement investigators on laws related to child labor, including training for new investigators.	2018 – 2022
	Employ at least 64 labor inspectors to ensure adequate coverage of the labor force.	2019 – 2022
	Publish information on the Ministry of Labor, Industrial Relations and Employment Creation's SMS hotline, including the number of child labor complaints reported through the mechanism.	2020 – 2022
	Ensure clear procedures at the Ministry of International Relations and Cooperation for receiving, consolidating, and preparing child labor-related data submitted by stakeholders and publish data stratified by source to ensure information transparency.	2022
	Establish a mechanism to compile and publish comprehensive statistics related to labor and criminal law enforcement, including convictions for crimes related to the worst forms of child labor.	2019 – 2022
	Ensure that all Gender-Based Violence Protection Units have adequate resources, including consistent funding, to operate according to their intended mandates.	2018 – 2022
	Ensure that criminal law enforcement agencies are sufficiently funded and resourced in order to adequately address online sexual exploitation and abuse of children, as well as other worst forms of child labor.	2022
Coordination	Ensure that the Interministerial Committee on Child Labor is funded, fully active, and able to carry out its intended mandate of coordinating policies and efforts to prevent and eliminate child labor.	2020 – 2022
	Improve ministries' effectiveness in addressing child labor by establishing a framework for communication between government ministries and civil society organizations for prompt referral of cases.	2022
Government Policies	Ensure activities are undertaken to implement policies relevant to child wellbeing, including the National Action Plan on Gender-Based Violence, and publish results from activities implemented on an annual basis.	2016 – 2022
	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies as well as other worst forms of child labor into key national policies, including the National Action Plan on Gender-Based Violence.	2019 – 2022
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor in all sectors it is known to occur, including fishing, to inform policies and programs.	2013 – 2022
	Enhance efforts to make education accessible and affordable for all children, particularly in rural areas; including by expanding social support to orphaned children, reducing long travel distances to schools or improve transportation to schools, increasing the number of qualified teachers, and addressing the needs of students with disabilities and special learning needs.	2019 – 2022
	Expand opportunities for birth registration and national documentation for all children, including children of nomadic and migrant communities, to improve access to education and social programs.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure activities are undertaken to implement the Decent Work Country Program and the government-run shelters for victims of exploitation and make information about implementation measures publicly available.	2021 – 2022
	Institute programs or expand existing programs to address child labor in agriculture and domestic work.	2009 – 2022

In 2022, Nepal made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government of Nepal announced the liberation of the Haruwa-Charuwa agricultural bonded laborers and promised to establish a recovery program and provide restitution for this group. The police also removed 27 children exploited as bonded laborers from brick kilns in southern Nepal and the Nepal Child Rights Council provided assistance to 11,696 children across 47 districts through 417 children's homes. However, children in Nepal are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and forced begging. Children also perform dangerous tasks in producing bricks. Nepal's law related to child trafficking is insufficient because it does not clearly criminalize recruitment, harboring, receipt, or transportation in the absence of force, fraud, or coercion. The law prohibiting the use of children in illicit activities is also insufficient because it does not prohibit the use of children in the production of drugs. In addition, the Ministry of Labor, Employment, and Social Security lacks sufficient resources and labor inspectors to adequately enforce laws related to child labor. Moreover, the government did not publicly release information on its criminal law enforcement efforts.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Nepali women and girls are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, both within and outside Nepal, including to India, the Middle East, Asia, and Sub-Saharan Africa. (13,19) Traffickers use the open border between India and Nepal to transport women and children for sex trafficking. (13) One study found that 17 percent of workers in the adult entertainment sector are under age 18, and 62 percent of adult women in that industry started as minors, some as young as 7 years old. (20)

More than half the children working in Nepali brick kilns are from India. (5) Children engaged in the production of bricks are exposed to hazardous working conditions, including carrying heavy loads and using dangerous machinery. (5) Most child labor occurs in the informal sector, including brick kilns. (7) Research indicates that climate-related disasters have often led to child labor, including increased levels of child labor following the 2017 floods in southern Nepal. (21) Moreover, children in Nepal’s unregistered shelters are exploited in forced begging and children are trafficked into exploitative or fraudulent orphanages, which suffer from lack of government oversight, where they are used to solicit money from foreign donors. (22,23)

Some children, particularly girls, face barriers to accessing education due to a shortage of sanitation facilities, geographic distance, costs associated with schooling, need to complete household chores, and an absence of parental support. (24-26) In Nepal, lack of separate toilet facilities for girls deters them from attending school, especially when they are menstruating. (24) Barriers to attending school for school-age boys include pressure to find employment or migrate to work outside of Nepal, and issues with drugs and alcohol. Children with disabilities face additional barriers to accessing education, including denial of school admission. (7) Furthermore, pandemic closures affected nearly 9 million children and a substantial number of children from rural areas suffered from learning loss due to an unavailability of alternative learning modalities. (8,17,27) School closures during the pandemic disproportionately affected girls, who are expected to perform household services, and children with disabilities. (8) Refugee children in Nepal face legal obstacles regarding access to education resulting from lack of official recognition and official documentation by the Nepali government. (8,28) The government, however, allows NGOs to provide primary and secondary-level schooling to refugee children without documentation. (28)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Nepal has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Nepal's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including a lack of prohibitions for using children in the production of drugs.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Section 3 of the Child Labor (Prohibition and Regulation) Act (29)

Free Public Education	Yes		Section 16D of the Education Act; Section 20 of the Free and Compulsory Education Act; Article 31 of the Constitution (36-38)

* Country has no conscription (36)

The minimum age for hazardous work is not consistent with international standards because it does not prohibit children age 17 from engaging in hazardous work. (29) Furthermore, the types of hazardous work prohibited for children do not include brickmaking and stone breaking, sectors in which there is evidence that work involves carrying heavy loads and being exposed to hazardous substances. (5,29) However, Nepal's National Master Plan on Child Labor (2018–2028) has identified children working in brick kilns as a group particularly vulnerable to hazardous child labor. (39,40) In addition, the law related to child trafficking is insufficient because it does not

Nepal

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

clearly criminalize recruitment, harboring, receipt, or transportation of children in the absence of force, fraud, or coercion. (32,41) The law prohibiting the use of children in illicit activities is insufficient because it does not prohibit the use of children in the production of drugs. (42) Furthermore, although the Constitution prohibits the recruitment of children by non-state armed groups, there is no specific legislation penalizing this practice. (36) Nepal ratified the Palermo Protocol in 2020 and the government is in the process of aligning its legal framework for human trafficking with international standards, including broadening its definition of human trafficking and better addressing child trafficking. (10,43)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Department of Labor (DOL), Ministry of Labor, Employment, and Social Security (MoLESS)	Enforces labor laws, including those involving child labor. (10,44) Conducts studies, provides training on child labor prevention, and monitors Nepal's child labor prevention program. (44)
Nepal Police	Investigate crimes involving women and children, including crimes related to human trafficking, through the Anti-Human Trafficking Bureau (AHTB). (45) Assist in children's rescue, rehabilitation, and coordination for the arrest of perpetrators in cases of the worst forms of child labor. (46) In cases of hazardous child labor, coordinate with and hand over cases to MoLESS. (10,17)
Monitoring Action Committees, Ministry of Women, Children, and Senior Citizens (MWCSC)	Investigate reports of commercial sexual exploitation at the district level, including the exploitation of children in the adult entertainment sector. (47) Contribute to investigations through Helpline No. 104 and Child Helpline 1098. Provide temporary shelter to child survivors through the Nepal Child Rights Council (NCRC) and support operations of the victim services center for children. (48)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Nepal took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Department of Labor (DOL) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient human resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

† Data are from July 2020 to July 2021.

‡ Data from July 2021 to July 2022.

Only 11 of 28 labor inspector positions in Nepal are currently filled, and these inspectors oversee a workforce of approximately 8.7 million workers. (8,49,50) The ILO and NGOs report the number of labor inspectors and inspections in Nepal is insufficient given the size and population of the country. (8,50) During the reporting period, inspectors did not receive adequate training or refresher on laws related to child labor or hazardous work for children. (8) Reports confirm that funding for the Ministry of Labor, Employment, and Social Security (MoLESS) remains low and indicate that addressing child labor is a low funding priority for the government. (8) According to NGOs, more than 70 percent of child labor occurs in the informal sector, including in companies with fewer than 10 employees and those that are not registered with the government. (8,10,23) However, the government conducted most of its labor inspections in the formal sector and rarely conducted unannounced inspections. (8)

NGOs report that the fines and employer-paid compensation outlined in the Child Labor (Prohibition and Regulation) Act are not adequate deterrents to child labor violations. (8,10) Cases are also often resolved through negotiation, and MoLESS encourages mediation over prosecution, resulting in mild punishments for perpetrators. (8,41) In addition, business owners reportedly pressure labor inspectors to settle disputes outside courts and officials request bribes to move cases forward. (8) Furthermore, NGOs stated that officials are sometimes paid to not move child labor cases forward, or parents are given nominal compensation to abandon cases. (8) While the Supreme Court compiles case data on cases heard by the labor court, it does not disaggregate data regarding child labor.(22)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Nepal took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient allocation of financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (17)	Yes (8)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (17)	Unknown (8)

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (17)	Yes (8)

In 2022, the Government of Nepal announced the liberation of the Haruwa-Charuwa agricultural bonded laborers who belong to impoverished and marginalized Dalit communities. The ILO previously estimated that over 120,000 adults and children were in forced Haruwa-Charuwa labor. (51) Although the Bonded Labor Prohibition Act of 2002 abolished bonded labor in Nepal, the Haruwa-Charuwa were not previously part of government liberation or victim services programs. (30,51) As part of the Haruwa-Charuwa freedom proclamation, the government also promised to establish a victim services program and provide restitution for this group. (52)

Within the federalist government structure, child rights committees, which are formed at the provincial and local levels, coordinate with Nepal Police on child labor issues. (8) However, the government lacks both the human resources and financial capacity to enforce laws prohibiting crimes related to child labor or to maintain a centralized database of criminal cases involving child labor, including child trafficking. (8,10,11,53) The Nepal Police do, however, collect and disaggregate data related to human trafficking cases; in fiscal year 2021–2022, the Nepal Anti-Human Trafficking Bureau (AHTB) reported identifying 209 trafficking victims and temporarily detaining 284 suspected traffickers. However, 109 suspected traffickers absconded, and only 174 suspected traffickers were officially arrested. (54) Moreover, during the reporting period, AHTB conducted trainings for 66 police personal on investigating human trafficking and legal procedures. (55)

Nepal

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

The government convicted fewer traffickers during this reporting period compared to the previous year, and corruption as well as official complicity in trafficking crimes remains a concern. The AHTB and other enforcement agencies lacked resources to coordinate with NGOs or victims and were unable to register cases against traffickers. (23) Moreover, most human trafficking cases were treated as labor violations that MoLESS resolved with minor fines rather than opening criminal investigations. (56) The AHTB lacked a victim-centered approach to handling serious cases, and law enforcement relied on civil society to identify trafficking cases, undermining evidence collection and prosecution efforts. (23)

According to reports, in November 2022, Nepal Police released 38 Indian nationals, including 27 children, who had been exploited as bonded laborers in brick kilns in southern Nepal. (57) However, the government did not make efforts to investigate and prosecute suspects for bonded labor crimes and did not provide data on other bonded labor cases. (23) Moreover, cases of bonded labor are rarely reported to the police. (56)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Child Labor Prevention and Occupational Safety Section, MoLESS, and MWCSC	Coordinates policymaking and monitors implementation of child labor inspection guidelines. (44) Consists of an Under Secretary, one section officer, and one factory inspector. (58) Confers with the MWCSC, the National Child Rights Council, MoLESS, and District Labor Offices. (59) The National Child Labor Elimination Committee operates under the direction of the Secretary of MoLESS. There is also an ongoing interagency working group to address child labor and a Child Rights System at the local level. (8) In fiscal year 2021–2022, MoLESS declared 22 municipalities as "child friendly governments," integrating child participation and child-friendly practices in local governance. (55,60) The MWCSC coordinates the implementation of anti-human trafficking laws, policies, and programs at the central, district, and local levels of government. (4,23) During the reporting period, the MWCSC provided anti-human trafficking training to rehabilitation centers. (55) In conjunction with the AHTB, the MWCSC also provided information-awareness programs on cybercrime and online trafficking to some districts. (55)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including updating existing policies to better align with the constitutional transition to federalism.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Master Plan to End Child Labor (July 2018–July 2028)	Prioritizes ending the worst forms of child labor by 2022, and all forms of child labor by 2025. (17) Includes a strategy to establish at the local and provincial levels a fund to help release child victims. (17,61) The Nepal Master Plan-II (NMP-II) has incorporated five strategies to eradicate child labor, including regular search and monitoring, victim release, and services for survivors. (8) The National Plan of Action designates the Ministry of Land Management, Cooperatives and Poverty Alleviation as the lead ministry to establish targeted programs for children involved in forced child labor and their families, particularly in the agricultural sector. (8,48) The ministry carries out awareness programs through cooperatives at local and provincial levels. (8,48) Ensures the poverty alleviation program provides economic empowerment to families to decrease the number of children from economically disadvantaged and marginalized families entering the labor market. (48) The NMP-II includes some indicators to ensure that inspections are performed properly. (8,17) Research was unable to determine if the action plan carried out any activities to address child labor during the reporting period.

Policy	Description & Activities
School Education Plan	Expands access to education to all children, improves the quality of education, and facilitates improved management and governance of schools. The program will impact 8.2 million schoolchildren in Nepal. (62) The New School Education Plan succeeded the former School Sector Development Plan, which was discontinued in July 2022. (63) For fiscal year 2022–2023, the program launched the School-Based Assessment pilot study to assess new curricula introduced for elementary education and draw recommendations for wider implementations. (64) The program also hosted capacity-building projects for local governments and teachers. (64) The policy implemented a web helpdesk for local governments for technical and administrative support. (64)
National Plan of Action on Combating Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children (2011–2022)	Promoted and protected the rights of human trafficking victims and survivors, and outlines policies for prosecuting and sentencing human traffickers. (65,66) During the reporting period, the government drafted a new national plan of action against human trafficking to replace the current action plan and better align with the Palermo Protocol. The action plan will be finalized and released in 2023. (55)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (10)

The Fifteenth National Plan of Nepal (2019/2020–2023/2024) includes ending child labor as one of its objectives and makes necessary legal provisions to end all forms of child labor and increase the target number of inspections for child labor in each Nepali fiscal year, which begins and ends in July. (8,10,67)

Nepal's new federalist structure replaced all districts with newly drawn provinces. There are 753 new municipalities from 77 districts along with new local governance. (68) However, Nepal requires improved coordination across all levels of government and guidance on responsibilities to effectively address gaps in implementation of services under the new federalist structure. (68) The absence of new policy frameworks for a multitude of issues and a lack of data to inform actions have reduced child labor abuses to a low priority. (68)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Child Rights, Rescue and Rehabilitation Program†	NCRC coordinates and facilitates monitoring, evaluation, and reviewing of local child rights on the provincial and local levels. (17,69) In fiscal year 2021–2022, the council provided protection to 11,696 children, including shelter, family reintegration, education support, and medical treatment. (8) The council also supported 10,905 children in 417 children's homes across 47 districts. (8) In addition, the NCRC monitored 164 children's homes across 43 districts and provided services to 72 children removed from unregistered shelter homes while reintegrating 1,200 children with their families. (55) During the reporting period, 308 local municipalities adopted the Child Rights Protection and Promotion Procedures and child rights committees were formed in 222 local governments. (8) The child protection procedures include collecting data on child labor and child trafficking, removals, and services for survivors, and establishing funds at the local level to support children who are at risk of child labor. (55) Child welfare officers were appointed in 219 local governments and children's funds were established in 195 local municipalities. (8) Child rights committees served more than 406,000 children. (68)
Helpline and Hotline Programs†	Child Helpline—1098 is an MWCSC- and Child Workers in Nepal-funded helpline. (7) Responds to calls about missing children, child abuse, child labor, child trafficking, and child sexual abuse in 18 locations in Nepal and Bangladesh, Bhutan, India, Maldives, Pakistan, and Sri Lanka. (10,70) NGO and government officials stated that the response time to investigate allegations of child labor reported through the helpline is slow. (8) National Center for Children at Risk—Hotline No. 104 is a hotline operated from Kathmandu, which is jointly run by the Central Child Welfare Board and Nepal Police. (17,47) These hotlines cover cases for 74 out of the total 77 districts in Nepal. (8) According to the Nepal Police, four to five children on average are removed from child labor every month in the informal sectors, such as transportation, domestic work, tea shops, and restaurants through the complaints received through Hotline No. 104. (41) The NCRC reported that the agency removed 69 children from potential hazardous work conditions through the hotlines and provided them with victim services and shelter. (22) The government installed two digital boards with information on human trafficking awareness in border crossing areas and other key locations. (55)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Program	Description & Activities
Support for Schools†	MoLESS program that supports schools for children ages 5 to 16 who are at risk of working in the worst forms of child labor. Provides scholarships to cover associated schooling costs for children outside the Kathmandu Valley to attend a local public school and works with local NGOs to verify that children are attending classes. (71) The government continues to provide lunches and sanitary napkins to encourage students to attend school to reduce the likelihood of their entry into child labor. (22) In fiscal year 2021–2022, the Ministry of Education provided scholarships worth $300 (40,000 rupees) per child for 250 child laborers and children who experienced homelessness. (8)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of Nepal.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (10, 11, 55, 72, 73)

The government of Nepal allocated $35,380 (45.3 million rupees) for activities to eliminate child labor in fiscal year 2022–2023. Activities include contributions to the Child Labor Elimination Fund and the Rehabilitation Fund, awareness programs against child labor, and consultations with local governments to declare municipalities free of child labor. (8) Although Nepal has programs that target child labor, gaps exist in these social programs, including a lack of programs that support child victims of commercial sexual exploitation and children working in the production of bricks.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Nepal (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum age for entry into hazardous work to 18 years old.	2009 – 2022
	Ensure that the types of hazardous work prohibited for children are comprehensive and include sectors in which there is evidence of child labor, including brickmaking, breaking stones, and weaving carpets.	2015 – 2022
	Ensure that the legal framework comprehensively and criminally prohibits the human trafficking of children without requiring proof of the use of force, fraud, or coercion.	2015 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the use of children in illicit activities, including the production of drugs.	2015 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally penalizes the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2022
Enforcement	Ensure that the criminal and labor law provisions against child labor are meaningfully enforced against perpetrators, and cases are resolved through prosecution, where appropriate, rather than negotiations and minor fines.	2018 – 2022
	Ensure that the Ministry of Labor's budget is sufficient to adequately enforce child labor laws.	2016 – 2022
	Expand child labor enforcement through complaint based and routine targeted inspections, including unannounced inspections, to all sectors, including the informal sector and small factories that employ less than 10 workers.	2018 – 2022
	Increase the number of labor inspectors from 11 to 218 to provide adequate coverage of the labor force of approximately 8.7 million people.	2010 – 2022
	Provide training to labor inspectors on laws related to child labor, including its worst forms, on an annual basis.	2019 – 2022
	Publish data on criminal law enforcement actions, including training for criminal investigators and the number of investigations conducted, prosecutions initiated, convictions achieved, and penalties imposed for child labor crimes.	2009 – 2022
	Create and utilize a centralized database to track and monitor cases of child labor, disaggregated by type of activity and gender, including labor court data related to child labor.	2009 – 2022
	Investigate, prosecute, and, where appropriate, convict and sentence perpetrators of bonded labor.	2022
	Ensure the government investigates and criminally prosecutes cases of human trafficking and bonded labor.	2022
Government Policies	Ensure that the implementation of services under the new federalist system, including a new policy framework to address child labor abuses, is carried out.	2018 – 2022

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Social Programs	Conduct research to determine the types of work activities carried out by children, including in the construction sector, to inform social policies and programs.	2019 – 2022
	Ensure that survivors calling the national helpline receive timely support and intervention.	2022
	Eliminate barriers to education for children with disabilities and refugee children and address barriers related to lack of sanitation facilities at schools, long distances to schools, fees associated with schooling, pressure to find work, migration to work outside of Nepal, and issues with drugs and alcohol.	2013 – 2022
	Create social programs that support all victims of commercial sexual exploitation and children working in the brick industry.	2018 – 2022

In 2022, Nicaragua made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government established the new National Strategic Plan for the Prevention, Care, Investigation, Persecution, and Sanction of Human Trafficking. However, children in Nicaragua are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. Laws do not establish a clear compulsory education age, and the government lacks adequate services for human trafficking survivors, such as shelters. In addition, labor and criminal law enforcement agencies lack the financial and human resources necessary to fulfill their mandates. Furthermore, the government lacks a specific and consistent mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Nicaragua. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	10 to 14	47.7 (342,076)
Attending School (%)	10 to 14	88.3
Combining Work and School (%)	10 to 14	40.3

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and use in the production of pornography (9,12,16-18)
	Forced labor in domestic work, agriculture, construction, and mining (12,18)
	Forced begging (12,13,19)
	Use in illicit activities, including in drug production and drug trafficking, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (7,11,12)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Information about the prevalence of child labor in Nicaragua is limited because the last known national survey on child labor was published in 2012. (7,20,21) Due to the COVID-19 pandemic and a stalled economy, many Nicaraguans established informal family businesses, which are more likely to use child labor. (9) Reports also indicate that as a direct result of the pandemic, child labor increased in Nicaragua, with a visible increase of children working at traffic lights. Children in Nicaragua are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation, particularly in Granada, Managua, the Caribbean Autonomous Regions, and San Juan del Sur. (13,22,23) Children from poor rural areas, those in the Caribbean Autonomous Regions, and migrants from the Northern Triangle countries are particularly vulnerable. (13,24) Children who lack identification documents, sometimes due to a lack of birth registration, may not have access to social services and are at an increased risk of human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation. (25)

Research indicates that the government continues to impede the work of civil society organizations by threatening them with fines or closure if deemed in opposition to the government. (9) Over 3,300 national and international civil society organizations have been closed by the government since 2018, with approximately 3,100 of these closures happening in 2022 alone. (11,26-34) Among the organizations affected by the closures, there are many that provided social services to prevent child labor and aid to child labor survivors, as well as other services to children survivors of violence. In particular, NGOs associated with the Nicaraguan Coordinating Federation of NGOs that Work on Children and Adolescent Issues (CODENI) have been threatened by the regime and risk closure themselves. (11,27,30-33) As a result, numerous civil society organizations were forced to close or suspend their activities in the country in 2022, which may increase the vulnerability of children to exploitation. (11,34)

Education is free and compulsory in Nicaragua; however, the costs associated with school supplies and transportation make it difficult for some children, particularly those from poor backgrounds and rural areas, to attend school. (7,16) Another barrier facing children from rural areas is long distances and a lack of secure transportation. (9,11) There are also reports of poor preschool education, particularly among disadvantaged rural households, insufficient learning materials, as well as a lack of quality and limited school infrastructure. Only 50 percent of schools in the country provide basic drinking water. (35,36) School infrastructures are also very susceptible to damage or destruction during natural disasters. Children from indigenous groups and African descent face significant discrimination in accessing education. (35)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Nicaragua has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Nicaragua's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the lack of a compulsory education age that equals the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Articles 130 and 131 of the Labor Code; Articles 2 and 73 of the Childhood and Adolescence Code; Article 84 of the Constitution (37-40)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 130, 133, and 135 of the Labor Code; Article 1 of Ministerial Agreement No. JCHG-08-06-10; Articles 2 and 74 of the Childhood and Adolescence Code (37-39,41)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 1 and 6 of Ministerial Agreement No. JCHG-08-06-10; Articles 133 and 135 of the Labor Code (37,41)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 40 of the Constitution; Articles 5, 6, and 61 of the Law Against Trafficking in Persons; Articles 16, 182, 182 bis , and 315 of the Penal Code (40,42,43)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Part III and Articles 3, 6, and 61 of the Law Against Trafficking in Persons; Articles 16, 182, and 182 bis of the Penal Code; Article 40 of the Constitution (40,42,43)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 6 and 61 of the Law Against Trafficking in Persons; Articles 175, 176, 178–180, 182, and 182 bis of the Penal Code; Articles 5 and 26 of the Childhood and Adolescence Code (39,42,43)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 6 and 61 of the Law Against Trafficking in Persons; Articles 182, 182 bis , 349, 351, 352, 359, and 362 of the Penal Code (42,43)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Annex I of the Code on the Organization, Jurisdiction, and Social Welfare of the Military (44)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 509 of the Penal Code; Article 79 of the Childhood and Adolescence Code; Article 95 of the Constitution (39,40,42)
Compulsory Education Age	No	12‡	Article 121 of the Constitution; Articles 19 and 23 of the Education Law; Article 43 of the Childhood and Adolescence Code (39,40,45)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 121 of the Constitution; Articles 8, 19, and 23 of the Education Law; Article 43 of the Childhood and Adolescence Code (39,40,45)

* Country has no conscription (40)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (39,40,45)

Nicaraguan law is not clear regarding the age up to which education is compulsory. Article 121 of the Constitution states that primary school education is compulsory; however, it does not specify an age. (40) Under

Nicaragua

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Articles 19 and 23 of the Education Law, education is compulsory only through the sixth grade, which it specifies is up to age 12 and the end of primary school. The Education Law defines secondary education as between the ages of 12 and 17. (45) Meanwhile, Article 43 of the Childhood and Adolescence Code states that both primary and secondary school education are compulsory. (39) If the compulsory education age is 12, children ages 12 to 14 may be vulnerable to child labor and its worst forms because they are not permitted to work but are also not required to be in school. However, if the compulsory education age is 17, the lower minimum age for work may encourage children to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (39,40,45)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor (MITRAB)	Enforces labor laws and sets child labor policy priorities. Conducts labor inspections through its General Labor Inspectorate and conducts child labor inspections through its Child Labor Inspections Unit. (9,18) Conducts training on child labor issues and inspections. Maintains a mailbox in each of Nicaragua's 17 departments to receive complaints of child labor violations. (9,18)
Nicaraguan National Police	Address cases of child labor and human trafficking through the Police Intelligence Unit, which detects crimes, and the Special Crimes Unit, which investigates crimes. Maintains a hotline for reporting violations of children's rights. (9,18)
Prosecutor's Office	Prosecutes cases of child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and the use of children in illicit activities. Contains 2 national-level and 35 department-level prosecutors who prosecute these and other crimes. (9,18)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Nicaragua took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor (MITRAB) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient human resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$1,310,000 (9)	$1,295,677 (11)
Number of Labor Inspectors	97 (9)	Unknown (11)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	Yes (37)	Yes (37)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	Yes (46)	Unknown (11)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksite	Unknown (9)	Unknown (11)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	3 (46)	Unknown (11)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	Unknown (9)	Unknown (11)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	Unknown (9)	Unknown (11)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (9)	Unknown (11)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (9)	Unknown (11)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (47)	Yes (47)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (9)	Unknown (11)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (9)	Yes (11)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (9)	Yes (11)

Reports indicate that funding levels for the labor inspectorate are insufficient to address the scope of the child labor problem in the country. (11) The government has indicated that approximately 42 percent of MITRAB's overall budget goes to labor inspections. (9,46) Nicaragua has a large informal and rural workforce, and the Labor Inspectorate is unable to adequately cover the country's vulnerabilities to, and the magnitude of, labor violations. Moreover, most labor inspections are focused on the formal sector, which represents only an estimated 15 percent of the economy, instead of in the informal sector, which is where most child labor occurs. (8,11,16) Research also indicates that Nicaragua does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (48-51)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Nicaragua took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including deficient structures for investigation and prosecution of the worst forms of child labor.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Unknown (9)	Unknown (11)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (48)	Unknown (11)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (48)	Unknown (11)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (48)	Unknown (11)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (48)	Unknown (11)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (9)	Yes (11)

As the government does not provide access to judicial proceedings, independent observers are unable to verify arrests, detentions, and convictions of individuals. (51) Research indicates that criminal law enforcement agencies lack effective investigation, prosecution, and prevention efforts. (52) In addition, government efforts related to the worst forms of child labor do not adequately address the scope of the problem, as there are very few, if any, human trafficking investigations, including in cases related to child exploitation, that lead to prosecutions, with very few victims being identified by the state. (52,53) Although the Ministry of the Family, Adolescence, and Childhood (MIFAN) also maintains a guide for assisting child victims of commercial sexual exploitation, the government has no formal procedures for the identification of human trafficking victims among high-risk populations, including children who are trafficked for commercial sexual exploitation, particularly in rural areas and the Caribbean Coast. (34,53) While there is a reciprocal referral mechanism between criminal authorities and social services in the country, there is no information as to the extent it is used or the effectiveness of the mechanism. (9)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Social Welfare System (SNBS)	Coordinates efforts on child labor and ensures that government institutions protect the rights of children and provide social services to them as part of their mandate to assist the Nicaraguan population. Comprises various government ministries, including MITRAB; the Ministry of the Family, Adolescence, and Childhood (MIFAN); the Ministry of Education (MINED); the Ministry of Health (MINSAs); and the Ministry of Governance. (9) SNBS does not have a specific and consistent coordinating mechanism due to limited coordination among constituent ministries and a lack of financial resources dedicated to addressing child labor. (15) Research was unable to determine whether the SNBS Coordinating Body carried out activities to address child labor during the reporting period.

Reports indicate that the National Coalition Against Trafficking in Persons (NCATIP) continues to not engage with local civil society, despite being required to do so by law. Local civil society organizations were also unable to corroborate increased NCATIP activity in the local working groups, and in general, the government did not coordinate with or fund NGOs. (9,11,13,16,17,22,24,53,54) A significant number of NGOs that provided services for survivors of human trafficking have been stripped of their legal status and had their property seized by the government. (34) Some civil organizations have reported a continued dismantling of once-active NCATIP regional committees and state that NCATIP has had no measurable impact since its creation. (24,51) NCATIP has still not announced or appointed a person to the position of Executive Secretariat, which is mandated by the Law Against Trafficking in Persons. (9,16)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including coverage of all worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
Good Government Plan	Sets development goals for government ministries, including MITRAB, MINED, and MINSa. Prioritizes human trafficking investigations; aims to protect children from commercial sexual exploitation; and commits to training teachers by creating 1,000 primary school teaching positions and increasing access to education, including for indigenous and Afro-descendant children. (55) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken during the reporting period to implement the Good Government Plan.
National Strategic Plan for the Prevention, Care, Investigation, Persecution, and Sanction of Human Trafficking (2023–2027) †	Launched in March 2022. Seeks to implement actions to prevent, investigate, prosecute, and sanction human trafficking, as well as to provide assistance and protection to survivors in a comprehensive manner. (56) As part of these efforts it will carry out awareness raising, trainings, and capacity-building activities. It will also seek to generate and improve coordination mechanisms between agencies to efficiently respond to complaints. (56)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the insufficient scope of their operations.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Love Program ( Programa Amor ) †	MIFAN program that supports vulnerable or impoverished children, including children involved in child labor such as street work. Provides educational assistance for children and vocational training for parents. (57) Promotes school attendance, house-to-house and school visits, and extra-curricular activities. (16) Overseen by Nicaragua’s Vice President in coordination with MINED, MINSa, MITRAB, and the Ministry of Governance. (57) Allows MIFAN to carry out activities with other government institutions, civil society, and religious organizations, as well as with communities and families. (16) Its Love Program for the Smallest Ones includes children from birth to age 6. (57) Reports indicate this program was active in 2022, and continued to provide services to children. (58)
Educational Bridges ( Puentes Educativos ) †	MITRAB and MINED public-private partnership implemented by World Vision that provides education to children of coffee workers to prevent child labor during coffee harvests. (59) In 2022, it continued to provide services by providing day care and schooling to children of coffee workers while their parents worked in the field. (5)
School Supply and Meal Programs †	Aim to assist children in the country in an attempt to improve school attendance and completion rates. The Integral School Meal Program ( Merienda Escolar ) is a MIFAN and WFP initiative that provides children and adolescents with meals at school to address poverty and improve attendance. (60) Reports indicate the government continued to provide school meals through this program in 2022, by providing thousands of quintals of rice, beans, cereals, corn, and other foodstuff products to schools throughout the country. (61,62)  National School Supply Program ( Paquetes Escolares Solidarios ) is a MINED program that distributes packages of school supplies to preschool, primary, and secondary school children in the poorest districts to increase attendance and completion rates. (63) In 2022, the government once again provided over 1 million school supply packages to students and 60,000 briefcases to teachers. (64)

For information about USDOL’s projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of Nicaragua.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (9,16,46)

The scope of Nicaragua's social programs is not sufficient to assist children who are subjected to child labor or engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation. (11,18) Although MIFAN coordinates services for child trafficking survivors, including by providing access to education, medical, and legal services, the country still lacks adequate services for human trafficking survivors, such as shelters and specialized services for males and those with disabilities. (19,46,53)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Nicaragua (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law is consistent and that the compulsory education age matches the minimum age for work.	2014 – 2022
Enforcement	Employ at least 215 labor inspectors to ensure adequate coverage of approximately 3.2 million people, especially in rural areas and the informal sector.	2009 – 2022
	Ensure that all criminal investigators receive training on child labor and its worst forms.	2019 – 2022
	Collect and publish information on labor law enforcement efforts, including the number of labor inspectors and whether they received training, the number of labor inspections conducted at worksites, the number of child labor violations found for which penalties were imposed and collected, whether routine inspections were conducted and targeted, and if unannounced inspections were conducted.	2015 – 2022
	Ensure that the Ministry of Labor has sufficient funding to enforce labor laws, including those related to child labor, and that resource needs are met.	2018 – 2022
	Ensure that criminal law enforcement efforts are sufficient to address the scope of the problem and that agencies have the funding and resources necessary to carry out their duties.	2014 – 2022
	Establish an adequate mechanism for identifying human trafficking victims, particularly children, among high-risk populations.	2018 – 2022
	Publish criminal law enforcement information on efforts related to the worst forms of child labor to allow for the verification of the information.	2021 – 2022
Coordination	Ensure that the National Social Welfare System has a specific and consistent mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor, including with NGOs, is fully funded, and publicly report on these efforts.	2014 – 2022
	Ensure that the National Coalition Against Trafficking in Persons works with relevant local stakeholders to address human trafficking issues, and ensure that it establishes a person in the position of Executive Secretariat, as mandated by the Law Against Trafficking in Persons.	2015 – 2022
Government Policies	Ensure that activities are undertaken to implement the Good Government Plan policy and that data on these activities to address child labor are published during the reporting period.	2009 – 2022
Social Programs	Collect and publish updated data on the prevalence of child labor in the country.	2018 – 2022
	Expand birth registration programs to ensure that children have the necessary documentation required for access to basic services.	2009 – 2022
	Remove barriers to education, such as transportation and the cost associated with school supplies, for all children, particularly those from poor backgrounds and rural areas; improve school infrastructure and access to learning materials.	2009 – 2022
	Implement social programs that address the full scope of the worst forms of child labor in the country, including commercial sexual exploitation.	2009 – 2022
	Develop social services for human trafficking survivors, such as shelters and specialized services, and ensure that services are available throughout the country, especially in areas where children are most vulnerable.	2010 – 2022
	Ensure that civil society organizations and NGOs working on child labor and children's issues are able to carry out their work freely and independently.	2021 – 2022

In 2022, Niger made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government created a new committee to combat forced begging and held a workshop to revise the draft National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor. However, children in Niger are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in hereditary slavery and mining, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks herding livestock. The minimum age for work does not meet international standards because it does not apply to children in informal work. In addition, the government made limited efforts to address the ongoing practice of wahaya, a form of child slavery that was upheld as illegal by a Nigerien court in 2019. Lastly, there are persistent gaps in labor law enforcement, including insufficient funding for labor inspectors to conduct inspections.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Niger.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	42.9 (2,516,191)
Attending School (%)	7 to 14	48.0
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	22.1
Primary Completion Rate (%)		57.9

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2021, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2023. (1)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Demographic and Health Survey (DHS), 2012. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of rice, fruits, nuts, and vegetables (3-5)
	Herding and caring for livestock, including cattle, sheep, goats, and fowl (5-7)
	Fishing, including river net casting (8)
Industry	Quarrying† and mining† for trona, salt, gypsum, and gold (3,7,9-12)
	Metal work† (13)
	Working in construction,† tanneries,† and slaughterhouses† (3,5,7,12,14)
	Brick making (12)
Services	Street work, including as market vendors, and begging† (3)
	Garbage scavenging (3)
	Domestic work (3,12,15)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,7,9,12)
	Recruitment of children by non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict (7)
	Hereditary and caste-based slavery, including for cattle herding, agricultural work, domestic work, and sexual exploitation (3,7,9,12)
	Forced begging (7,9,16-18)
	Forced labor in domestic work and mining (7,9,12)
	Use in illicit activities, including trafficking drugs (7)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Niger

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Children in Niger, especially boys and girls from the Arab, Djerma, Peulh, Tuareg, and Toubou ethnic minorities, continue to be exploited as slaves and endure slavery-like practices, particularly in the regions of Tahoua and Agadez. (3,14) Some children are born into slavery; others are born free but remain in a dependent status and are forced to work with their parents for their former masters in exchange for food, money, and lodging. (5,12,20,21) A particular form of slavery in Niger is the wahaya practice, in which men buy girls born into slavery, often between ages 9 and 14, as “fifth wives.” Even though Niger’s Supreme Court set a legal precedent by ruling wahaya to be illegal in 2019, the government has made limited efforts to inform the public of the court’s ruling. (3,7,8,22) Child slaves, including those involved in the practice of wahaya, are forced to work long hours as cattle herders, agricultural workers, or domestic workers, and are often sexually exploited. (12,23) As with those involved in hereditary slavery, the children of wahaya wives are considered slaves, and are passed from one owner to another as gifts or as part of dowries. (6,12,23) During the reporting period, children were also forcibly recruited and used as child soldiers by non-state armed groups. (7)

In Niger, some Koranic teachers known as marabouts subject their students, boys known as talibés, to manual labor or forced begging rather than providing them with a religious education. (3,7,9) Children in Niger participating in seasonal migration or migrant children from West Africa traveling to Algeria and Libya may also be subject to forced begging or commercial sexual exploitation. (16,18,24-26) In addition, Niger has a form of internal child trafficking called confiage, in which family members send their children to live with relatives or friends with promises of better educational or trade learning opportunities. However, some children are instead subjected to exploitation, including forced labor, sex trafficking, and domestic work. (7,12)

Although the Constitution guarantees free education, school fees are often required. A lack of school infrastructure and school materials, and the limited availability of teachers, especially in rural areas, impedes access to education, which may increase the vulnerability of children to child labor. (3,7) Due to insecurity, hundreds of schools were closed during the reporting period. (13)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Niger has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Niger’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including a lack of minimum age protections for children working in the informal economy.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	14	Article 106 of the Labor Code (27)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 159 of Decree No. 2017-682 (28)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 159–161 and 164–171 of Decree No. 2017-682; Article 181 of the Penal Code (28,29)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 14 of the Constitution; Article 4 and 107 of the Labor Code; Article 158 of Decree No. 2017-682; Article 270 of the Penal Code; Articles 2 and 10 of the Law on Combating Trafficking in Persons (27-31)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 107 of the Labor Code; Article 158 of Decree No. 2017-682; Articles 2 and 10 of the Law on Combating Trafficking in Persons; Article 16 of the Law 2015-36 on Illicit Traffic of Migrants (27,28,31,32)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 107 of the Labor Code; Article 158 of Decree No. 2017-682; Articles 291 and 292 of the Penal Code; Articles 2 and 10 of the Law on Combating Trafficking in Persons (27-29,31)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 107 of the Labor Code; Article 158 of Decree No. 2017-682; Article 181 of the Penal Code; Articles 10 and 16 of the Law on Combating Trafficking in Persons (27-29,31)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 107 of the Labor Code (27)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 107 of the Labor Code (27)
Compulsory Education Age	No		Article 8 of Decree No. 2017-935; Article 2 of the Law on the Orientation of the Educational System (33,34)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 23 of the Constitution; Article 8 of Decree No. 2017-935; Article 2 of the Law on the Orientation of the Educational System (30,33,34)

* Country has no conscription (35)

Although the Labor Code establishes age 14 as the minimum age for work, it does not apply to workers in the informal economy, which does not conform to international standards requiring all children to be protected under the law. (27,36) In addition, Article 2 of the Law on the Orientation of the Educational System in Niger guarantees education for all children ages 4 to 18, and Article 8 of Decree No. 2017-935 states that the government is required to promote access to compulsory education, particularly for young girls. However, Niger's law does not clearly articulate to which age groups the latter provision applies, thereby leaving some children at risk of not being covered and increasing the risk of children's involvement in child labor. (33,34)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Employment, Labor and Social Security (MELSS)	Enforces labor laws and investigates Labor Code infractions, including those on child and forced labor. Conducts awareness-raising programs to address child labor. (3,26,37)
National Civil Police Force Morals and Minors Brigade	Investigates criminal cases involving minors, including issues pertaining to human trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and hereditary slavery. Housed under the Ministry of Interior and Public Security. (3)
National Human Rights Commission	Receives complaints related to child labor, including its worst forms, and conducts investigations of human rights violations, including hereditary slavery. (3,37)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Niger took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Employment, Labor and Social Security (MELSS) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including a lack of adequate human resources.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown (3)	$90,000 (7)
Number of Labor Inspectors	60 (3)	60 (7)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	Yes (27)	Yes (27)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	Yes (3)	Yes (13)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksite	Unknown (3)	117 (7)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	Unknown (3)	Unknown (7)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	Unknown (3)	Unknown (7)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	Unknown (3)	Unknown (7)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (3)	Unknown (7)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (3)	Unknown (7)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (27)	Yes (27)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (3)	Unknown (7)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (3)	Yes (7)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (3)	Yes (7)

The MELSS's number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Niger's workforce, which includes approximately 9.8 million workers. (3,7,14) While the government reported having 60 labor inspectors, only 10 of them were located in the field carrying out inspections. (7) In addition, the MELSS does not have the necessary funds or resources to be able to carry out inspections in all regions, especially in the informal sector and in remote locations where most child labor occurs. Moreover, although the government did not provide the number of child labor cases found in 2022, the MELSS noted that children are only removed from child labor situations in extreme cases of exploitation, such as child trafficking or forced labor. (3,38)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Niger took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient allocation of financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (3)	No (7)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (3)	Unknown (7)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (3)	Unknown (7)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (3)	Unknown (7)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (3)	Unknown (7)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (3)	Yes (7)

Research found that inadequate resources, including insufficient personnel, funding, and training, hamper the capacity of criminal law enforcement authorities to coordinate and enforce laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (3,39,40) The National Agency to Fight Against Trafficking in Persons and Illegal Migrant Transport maintains a hotline to report human trafficking crimes, but the number of calls received by the hotline that involve child trafficking is unknown. Even though the Nigerien Supreme Court ruled the practice of wahaya to be illegal in 2019, reinforcing the 2003 Penal Code that prohibits this practice, research found enforcement to be negligible and that it remains common practice in some parts of the country. (13,29) Furthermore, many victims do not come forward or file complaints against their former masters due to dependency on their former masters and a lack of reintegration services. (5,11)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Steering Committee to Combat Child and Forced Labor	Led by MELSS, includes 17 Nigerien ministries and agencies with the purpose of finalizing the next phase of Niger's National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor. (3,41) Also intends to develop a new hazardous work list. (3,7,41) During the reporting period, the Committee held a workshop to revise the National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor. (7)

During the reporting period, Niger created an interministerial committee to combat forced begging, chaired by the Prime Minister's Deputy Chief of Staff. (13,50)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of coverage of all worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons (2019–2023)	Aims to enhance the legal framework to prevent human trafficking, adequately implement the laws, and provide effective protection and care for victims, including children. Led by the National Agency to Fight Against Trafficking in Persons and Illegal Migrant Transport. (11,51,52) While it was active during the reporting period, research was unable to determine what activities were undertaken to implement the National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons during the reporting period. (13)
National Social Protection Strategy	Aims to improve the quality of, and access to, basic education and health services; includes strategies to address child labor. Overseen by the Ministry for the Promotion of Women and Child Protection. (53) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Social Protection Strategy during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (42)

Although Niger has adopted the National Plan of Action to Combat Trafficking in Persons, research found no evidence of a policy on other worst forms of child labor.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate efforts to address the problem in all sectors, including agriculture, herding, mining, and caste-based servitude.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Centers for the Prevention, Protection, and Promotion of Persons†	Government program replacing the Judicial and Preventive Education Services, in collaboration with UNICEF, to provide food, shelter, education, and vocational training to street children, many of whom are survivors of child labor. (7,15,47) In 2022, the program continued but research could not find information on its activities or how many of the 54 existing centers continue to be operational.
UNICEF Country Program (2019–2022)	UNICEF-funded program that supported the government's efforts to improve children's education, birth registration rates, and social inclusion, and to strengthen child protection programs, including for children of refugees in the Diffa region. (57–59) The UNICEF Country Program ended in 2022. (3)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Although Niger has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the problem, especially in agriculture, herding, mining, and caste-based servitude. Niger also lacks a specific program to assist children exploited by religious instructors. (3,7,9,39) In addition, the resources and facilities available to social services agencies remain inadequate. (3,7,9,39)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Niger (Table I I).

Table I I. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law's minimum age for work provisions and protections apply to self-employed children and those in unpaid or non-contractual work.	2015 – 2022
	Establish a compulsory education age equal to the minimum age for work of 14 years.	2016 – 2022
Enforcement	Ensure that inspections and enforcement efforts take place in the informal sector, and in remote locations, where most child labor occurs.	2014 – 2022
	Publish complete information and data on the government's enforcement of child labor laws, including the number of worksite inspections conducted, violations found, and penalties imposed and collected.	2012 – 2022
	Increase resources, including funding and training available to enforcement agencies, increase the number of labor inspectors from 60 to 246 to ensure adequate coverage of a labor force of approximately 9.8 million people, and increase the number of criminal investigators to provide adequate inspection coverage.	2009 – 2022
	Disaggregate complaints made to the National Agency to Fight Against Trafficking in Persons and Illegal Migrant Transport's hotline so that the number of complaints related to children is known.	2013 – 2022
	Ensure that all survivors of the worst forms of child labor are removed from exploitative situations as appropriate.	2010 – 2022
	Publish complete information on the number of criminal investigations, prosecutions, and convictions related to the worst forms of child labor.	2020 – 2022
	Adequately enforce the Nigerien Supreme Court's ruling banning the practice of wahaya .	2019 – 2022
	Ensure that survivors of slavery are returned to their families, and have access to reintegration services, as appropriate, including educational opportunities and counseling.	2020 – 2022
Government Policies	Adopt and implement a national action plan to address child labor, including in hereditary slavery, mining, and agriculture.	2009 – 2022
	Publish information about efforts to implement the National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons and the National Social Protection Strategy on an annual basis.	2016 – 2022
Social Programs	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education accessible for all children, including girls, refugees, internally displaced children, and children in rural communities, by increasing school infrastructure, increasing the number of teachers, removing school fees, and providing more school supplies.	2013 – 2022
	Expand the scope of programs to address the worst forms of child labor, including in agriculture, herding, mining, and caste-based servitude.	2009 – 2022
	Implement a program to target and assist children exploited by religious instructors.	2011 – 2022
	Ensure that government social services providers have sufficient resources and facilities to provide the necessary care to all children withdrawn from forced labor and publish information on these activities.	2015 – 2022

In 2022, Nigeria made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. Five additional Nigerian Governors signed the Child Rights Act, which provides free and compulsory education for children and prohibits the use of children in illicit activities and by non-state armed groups. The government also hired over 180 labor inspectors and increased inspections from 10,526 in 2021 to 17,026 in 2022. In addition, the government established 11 community child labor monitoring committees, which oversee child labor projects and outreach efforts at the local level. Finally, the government adopted a new national action plan on human trafficking and conducted a national child labor survey in order to better inform their child labor policies. However, children in Nigeria are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and use in armed conflict, as well as quarrying granite and artisanal mining. Although the government made meaningful efforts in all relevant areas during the reporting period, protections related to the minimum age for work do not apply to children who are self-employed or working in the informal economy. In addition, the state of Kano does not prohibit the use of children in illicit activities.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Nigeria. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	15 (6,798,456)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	78
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	10.4
Primary Completion Rate (%)		Unavailable

Primary completion rate was unavailable from UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2023. (1)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, including use in the production of pornography, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (4,8,12,13)
	Forced labor in begging; domestic work; street vending; textile manufacturing; mining and quarrying gravel, granite, and artisanal gold; and agriculture, including in cocoa (4,9,12,13)
	Recruitment of children by non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict and in non-conflict support roles, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (8,9)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Nigeria continues to be a source, transit, and destination country for forced labor and sex trafficking of both adults and children. Trafficked Nigerians are recruited from primarily rural areas within the country, with women and girls recruited for domestic work and sex trafficking while boys are recruited for street vending, domestic work, mining, agriculture, and begging. (6,8) Benin City, the capital of Edo State, continues to be a major human trafficking hub in Africa, but increased enforcement efforts may have caused some human trafficking rings to shift their focus to other areas of southern Nigeria. (14) Rapid population growth in Nigeria is also driving the informal education sector, with several million boys in the north going to Quranic schools known as Almajiri. The government does not officially recognize these schools, and students attending Almajiri schools are officially considered to be out of school. (8) The Almajiri system includes a component of child labor, with some teachers tasking older children with menial jobs and other children forced into begging. (8,9,15) Despite notable military advances and proclamations of Boko Haram’s defeat by government forces, the group remained a security threat, with escalating attacks by both Boko Haram and ISIS West Africa in Nigeria’s northeastern regions. These attacks have contributed to the displacement of more than 2 million people, of which 56 percent were children. (6,16-18)

UNICEF reported that as of January 2022, at least 10.5 million children, or one-third of all Nigerian children, are out of school in Nigeria, making it the highest out-of-school rate in the world. Northeastern and northwestern states have female primary net attendance rates of 47.7 percent and 47.3 percent, respectively. (8,19) The widespread increase in kidnappings, killings, village raids, and cattle-rustling throughout the Northwest and North Central regions led by organized criminal groups has also contributed to the intermittent closure of schools throughout the region, with these challenges being more acute in rural areas. (8,19) Reports also suggest that children lacking birth certificates or other formal documentation have been denied access to public schools. Although it is unclear how widespread this issue is, research suggests that it is most common in the northeastern region and rural areas. (9)

Although free and compulsory education is federally mandated by the Education Act, little enforcement of compulsory education laws occurs at the state level. School fees are often charged in practice, and the cost of materials can be prohibitive for families. (4,9) When families experience economic hardship, the enrollment of boys is typically prioritized over the enrollment of girls. Other barriers to education include a lack of trained teachers, sexual harassment, inadequate sanitation facilities, poor infrastructure, and fear of abduction or attack by Boko Haram while at school, particularly for girls in the northeastern part of the country. (4,8,11,17,20,21)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Nigeria has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Nigeria's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including setting the minimum age for work at 12 years old.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	12	Section 59(1) and 91 of the Labor Act; Sections 28, 29, and 277 of the Child's Right Act (22,23)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Sections 59 (5) and (6) of the Labor Act; Sections 28, 29, and 277 of the Child's Right Act; Sections 23 and 82 of the Trafficking in Persons (Prohibition) Enforcement and Administration Act 2015 (22-24)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Sections 59–61 and 91 of the Labor Act; Section 28 of the Child's Right Act; (22,23)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Sections 13, 21–25, and 82 of the Trafficking in Persons (Prohibition) Enforcement and Administration Act 2015; Sections 28, 30, and 277 of the Child's Right Act; Article 34 of the Constitution (23-25)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Sections 13, 16, 17, 21–25, and 82 of the Trafficking in Persons (Prohibition) Enforcement and Administration Act 2015; Sections 30, 33, and 277 of the Child's Right Act (23,24)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Sections 13–17 and 82 of the Trafficking in Persons (Prohibition) Enforcement and Administration Act 2015; Section 23 of the Cybercrimes Act; Sections 30, 32, and 277 of the Child's Right Act (23-26)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No		Sections 25, 26, 30, and 277 of the Child's Right Act (23)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Section 28 of the Armed Forces Act; Sections 34 and 277 of the Child's Right Act (23,27)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No		Section 19 of the Trafficking in Persons (Prohibition) Enforcement and Administration Act (24)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Sections 2 and 15 of the Education Act; Section 15 of the Child's Right Act (23,28)
Free Public Education	Yes		Sections 2 and 3 of the Education Act; Section 15 of the Child's Right Act (23,28)

* Country has no conscription (27)

In 2022, five additional Nigerian Governors signed the Child Rights Act (CRA), which provides free and compulsory education for children and prohibits the use of children in illicit activities and by non-state armed groups. Each state must adopt and implement the act in its territory for the CRA to become law. (23,29,30)

Nigeria

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

However, only 35 of the 36 states have adopted and implemented the CRA, leaving the state of Kano in northern Nigeria with a legal statute that does not meet international standards for the prohibition against the use of children in illicit activities. (6,23,26,29,31) Furthermore, under the CRA, certain provisions of the labor act that are not in compliance with international standard may remain in force. This includes Section 59, which sets the minimum age for employment at age 12 in contradiction to the CRA, which only permits children under age 18 to engage in light work for family members. (22,23) The minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, which may encourage children to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (22,23,28)

The Labor Act also permits children of any age to do light work in agriculture and domestic work if they are working with a family member, which does not meet international standards. Furthermore, the minimum age protections in the Labor Act do not apply to children who are self-employed or working in the informal economy. (22,32) Lastly, children are not excluded from the Terrorism Prevention Act's penalty of life imprisonment for assisting in acts of terrorism and are implicitly included as people in Section 19 of the Trafficking in Persons (Prohibition) Enforcement and Administration Act. (24,33)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Labor Inspectorate, Ministry of Labor and Employment (MLE)	Deploys labor inspectors across 36 state labor offices and the federal capital territory to enforce federal child labor laws. In 2022, carried out activities to commemorate the International Year for the Elimination of Child Labor. (4,34-36)
Anti-Trafficking Agencies	Enforces laws against human trafficking and exploitative labor. Coordinates with the Ministry of Women's Affairs and Social Development and state governments to provide child labor survivors with social services and reunite trafficked children with their families. (4,12,34) Operates hotlines for survivors in Abuja and each zonal command center. Includes an Investigation and Security Unit tasked with the prevention and detection of human trafficking cases. (14,20,37)
Nigeria Police	Enforces all laws prohibiting forced child labor and commercial sexual exploitation. Collaborates with the National Agency for the Prohibition of Trafficking (NAPTIP) to address human trafficking issues. (4)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Nigeria took action to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Employment that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient human resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$515,375 (8)	$859,771 (37)
Number of Labor Inspectors	1,402 (8)	1,586 (37)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	Yes (22)	Yes (22)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	Yes (8)	Yes (6)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksite	10,526 (8)	17,026 (37)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	3,234 (8)	4,088 (38)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	0 (39)	2 (37)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	0 (39)	Unknown
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (8)	Yes (6)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (8)	Unknown

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor (Cont.)

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (22)	Yes (22)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	No (8)	Yes (6)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (8)	Yes (6)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (8)	Yes (6)

Enforcement of child labor laws was negatively impacted by a lack of resources for inspections, including office facilities, transportation, fuel, and other necessities to carry out inspections. While a reciprocal referral mechanism between labor authorities and social services exists, research did not find mechanisms to enforce existing protections for children in the informal sector. (8,9,40,41) Research also indicates that Nigeria does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (42)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Nigeria took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including the allocation of resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	N/A (8)	Yes (43)
Number of Investigations	6 (39)	Unknown
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	6 (39)	0 (38)
Number of Convictions	0 (39)	Unknown
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	0 (39)	Unknown
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (8)	Yes (8)

While criminal law enforcement information was provided, the information was not disaggregated by age. (43) In addition, research suggests that criminal enforcement agencies are underfunded and lack the necessary resources and vehicles to access remote areas of the country for inspections. (6)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Steering Committee for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Coordinates efforts to address child labor. Led by MLE and comprises representatives from seven governmental agencies, faith-based organizations, NGOs, ILO, and UNICEF. (4,9) Members are charged with leveraging resources for project implementation from their institutions and identifying synergies with other existing programs. (4,9) During the reporting period, the government established 11 Community Child Labor Monitoring Committees, which oversee child labor projects and outreach efforts. (6)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of implementation.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
NAPTIP National Action Plan on Human Trafficking in Nigeria (2022–2026)†	During the reporting period, the government adopted the National Action Plan on Human Trafficking in Nigeria for 2022–2026 and provided it with a $33 million budget. Provides a framework for mobilizing the action plan and all stakeholders involved in addressing human trafficking, with an emphasis on enforcement, prosecution, and provision of services to survivors. (6,9,44,45) During the reporting period, 12 action plan protection officers were trained and appointed to 6 areas throughout the country. The purpose of these officers is to assist survivors and coordinate the activities of the police forces to address human trafficking issues. (6,8,9,44,46) In addition, the action plan created and adopted a Disability Inclusion Plan in 2022, which includes procedures for an all-encompassing service delivery for survivors of human trafficking who may have a disability. (43)
National Social Behavioral Change Communication Strategy for Elimination of Child Labor in Nigeria (2020–2023)	Addresses child labor at the household and community levels through awareness-raising activities. (9) Research was unable to determine whether any actions were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.
National Action Plan for Preventing and Countering Violent Extremism	Designed to end the recruitment and use of children by the Civilian Joint Task Force (CJTF). Aims to promote the protection of children's rights, ensures that suspects under age 18 are treated in accordance with international law, and provides for disarmament, demobilization, and reintegration for children previously associated with CJTF. (47) The UN and CJTF, with the support of the government, continued to reintegrate children during the reporting period. (45) Since the signing of the National Action Plan for Preventing and Countering Violent Extremism, the UN has reported nearly no use of children by CJTF. (9,30,45)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (9)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
NAPTIP Shelters for Human Trafficking Victims†	Government-funded program that operates 10 shelters in Nigeria, capable of housing up to 315 trafficking survivors. Shelters provide legal, medical, and psychological services, as well as vocational training and business management skills, along with referring survivors to NGOs for additional care. (12,13,15) However, research found concerns regarding the conditions in shelters housing human trafficking survivors. These conditions include poor housing facilities, a lack of food, and insufficient stipends, along with reports of survivors being held against their will for extended periods at shelters run by NAPTIP. (41,48) During the reporting period, a new 28-bed shelter was developed while another shelter was renovated. In addition, NAPTIP hosted two co-mentoring sessions for survivors of human trafficking so that the government could provide a platform for survivors to engage with each other and discuss with government officials how to best support them. (44)
Accelerating Action for the Elimination of Child Labor in Supply Chains in Africa (ACCEL Africa) (2018–2022)	ILO-sponsored regional project aimed at eliminating child labor in supply chains, with particular focus on those involved in the production of cocoa, coffee, cotton, gold, and tea. Collaborated with global supply chain actors working in Africa on public policy, good governance, empowerment, representation, partnership, and knowledge sharing. (5,50) During the reporting period, the ACCEL AFRICA project sponsored a regional conference that brought together 14 African countries to discuss best practices for eliminating child labor. (6,50)
World Bank-Funded Programs	Projects aimed to improve access to education. Include: National Social Safety Nets Project (2016–2022), a $50 million project that aimed to provide primary school lunches and offered conditional cash transfers based on children's enrollment; and the Better Education Service Delivery for All (2017–2022), a $611 million project that aimed to increase access to education for out-of-school youth and improve literacy. (51–54) In 2022, the National Social Safety Nets Project enrolled participants in all 36 states across the country and delivered cash transfers to 2.7 million households. (54) Since its inception, the Better Education Service Delivery for All project has helped reduce the number of out-of-school children by 924,590, of which 633,772 were girls. (53,55)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of Nigeria.

During the reporting period, the government conducted a national child labor survey that helped improve knowledge and awareness surrounding child labor. (6,56) However, research found no evidence of programs to address all relevant worst forms of child labor, including the use of children in armed conflict, quarrying granite, artisanal mining, and commercial sexual exploitation. (9)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Nigeria (Table I I).

Table I I. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum age for work from 12 to 15 to align with the compulsory education age.	2012 – 2022
	Ensure that national legislation on the minimum age for work is consistent so that all children are protected, including those in the informal sector and who are self-employed.	2012 – 2022
	Harmonize the Child's Right Act and the Labor Act to ensure that their legal provisions do not contradict each other, including provisions on minimum age for work and light work.	2022
	Ensure that using, procuring, and offering a child for the production and trafficking of drugs are criminally prohibited in all states.	2015 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure that provisions related to light work conform to international standards by putting restrictions on domestic and agricultural work.	2009 – 2022
	Amend the Terrorism Prevention Act to prohibit the punishment of children for their association with armed groups.	2016 – 2022
Enforcement	Increase the number of inspectors from 1,402 to 4,885 to ensure adequate coverage of the labor force.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure that labor inspectors and enforcement agencies receive sufficient resources, including funding, resources for inspections, office facilities, transportation, fuel, and other necessities, to enforce child labor laws.	2016 – 2022
	Establish a mechanism to enforce existing protections for children working in the informal sector.	2009 – 2022
	Publish information on child labor law enforcement, including whether penalties were imposed and collected for child labor violations and whether targeted routine inspections were conducted.	2020 – 2022
	Publish disaggregated information on criminal law enforcement, including training for criminal investigators, number of investigations, prosecutions initiated, convictions, and imposed penalties for violations related to the worst forms of child labor.	2021 – 2022
Coordination	Ensure that the National Steering Committee for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor is active and able to carry out their mandates as intended.	2018 – 2022
Government Policies	Ensure that activities are undertaken to implement government policies and that data on these activities are published during the reporting period, specifically the National Social Behavioral Change Communication Strategy for Elimination of Child Labor in Nigeria (2020–2023).	2021 – 2022
Social Programs	Ensure that all states adopt programs to offer free education and expand existing programs that provide funds to vulnerable children, especially girls, to cover school fees and the cost of materials.	2014 – 2022
	Establish a robust mechanism to ensure that children are provided birth documentation so they are able to attend school.	2020 – 2022
	Ensure that there is an adequate number of trained teachers and provide sufficient educational infrastructure for children, particularly girls, to access schools.	2015 – 2022
	Ensure that there are proper protection protocols in place to keep schools safe, including from acts of terrorism and sexual violence.	2022
	Ensure that the National Agency for the Prohibition of Trafficking in Persons and Other Related Matters and related agencies provide appropriate facilities and resources, including livable stipends and adequate housing, to survivors, and that survivors are not held against their will in shelters.	2019 – 2022
	Establish programs that prevent and remove children from all relevant worst forms of child labor, including armed conflict, commercial sexual exploitation, and gold mining.	2009 – 2022

Although research found no evidence that child labor exists in Niue, in 2022, the government made minimal advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. The government partnered with the United Nations Children's Fund to launch the Pacific Islands Inclusive Educational Review to ensure that all children, including those with disabilities, have access to quality education. However, the government has not established adequate legal protections to prevent the worst forms of child labor. The law does not criminally prohibit the use, procuring, or offering of a child for prostitution; the production of pornography, or pornographic performances, or the use of children for illicit activities, including for the production and trafficking of drugs. In addition, Niue has not established a minimum age for work and lacks a law that prohibits hazardous occupations and activities for children.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides one key indicator on children's education in Niue.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Primary Completion Rate (%)		130.8

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2021, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2023. (1)

In 2022, the Government of Niue, in partnership with UNICEF, conducted a survey on the state of inclusive education. (2) The Pacific Region Inclusive Education Review, chaired by Niue's Minister for Social Services, found that handwashing and sanitation facilities are available at all schools, but menstrual hygiene management facilities are only accessible at about half of schools. (3)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Niue is self-governing in free association with New Zealand. (4,5) Since 1988, no treaty signed, ratified, accepted, approved, or acceded to by New Zealand extends to Niue, unless it was done expressly on behalf of Niue. (4) Niue has ratified one key international convention concerning child labor (Table 2).

Table 2. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 3). However, gaps exist in Niue's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including a failure to criminalize using children in illicit activities.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 3. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No		Article 24 of the Niue Public Service Regulations (6)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No
Prohibition of Forced Labor	No
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Articles 3 and 37 of the Terrorism Suppression and Transnational Crimes Act (7)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	17	Article 33 of the Government of New Zealand's Defense Act (8)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*†
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Articles 2 and 24 of the Education Act (9)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 19 of the Education Act (9)

* Country has no conscription (10)

† Country has no standing military (8)

New Zealand is responsible for the defense of the territory at Niue's request; therefore, Niue has no standing military or conscription. (8, 11) However, although there are no armed forces in Niue, the law does not criminally prohibit non-state armed groups from recruiting children under age 18. (12) Additionally, while Niue's Public Service Regulations prohibit the permanent employment in public service of any person under age 18, a minimum age for work in the private sector has not been established. (6, 12) Niue has not determined the minimum age for hazardous work nor the types of work that are hazardous for children. (4) The government also does not prohibit slavery or slavery-like practices such as forced labor. Niue's human trafficking provision does not clearly criminalize domestic trafficking or the trafficking of children in the absence of force, fraud, or coercion. (7) In addition, the government does not criminalize the use, procuring, or offering of children for prostitution, pornography, or pornographic performances. Niue has also not criminalized the use of children in illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs. (12)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for enforcement actions to address child labor, including its worst forms. However, the Government of Niue has established relevant institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 4).

Table 4. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Niue Police Department	Enforces all laws, including those related to child labor, on behalf of the Government of Niue. Niue's Department for Community Affairs handles case intake and referral of children's matters to the Niue Police Department, including allegations of child labor. (4)
Department of Justice	Investigates crimes, including cases involving the worst forms of child labor. (12)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for a mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor. However, the Government of Niue has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 5).

Table 5. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Coordinating Committee	Coordinates the implementation of the UN CRC, monitoring and implementing child protection policies at the national level. (4) Research was unable to determine whether the National Coordinating Committee was active during the reporting period.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor. However, the Government of Niue has established a policy related to child labor (Table 6).

Table 6. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
United Nations Pacific Strategy (2018–2022)	The United Nations Pacific Strategy was a multi-national strategic framework program comprising 14 South Pacific nations. The strategy aimed to address, develop, and implement strategic economic development priorities in the South Pacific, including eliminating child labor and the worst forms of child labor. (13) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the strategy during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for programs to address child labor.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, the following actions would advance the continued prevention of child labor in Niue (Table 7).

Table 7. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify ILO Convention 182, the convention concerning the prohibition and immediate action for the elimination of the worst forms of child labor.	2019 – 2022
	Ratify the UN CRC Protocol on Armed Conflict.	2022
	Ratify the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children.	2021 – 2022
	Ratify the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2021 – 2022
	Establish a minimum age for work of at least age 16 that equals the compulsory education age.	2013 – 2022
	Establish age 18 as the minimum age for hazardous work and identify hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children.	2013 – 2022
	Ensure that laws criminally prohibit forced labor, including debt bondage and slavery.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure that laws criminally prohibit the use, procuring, and offering of a child for prostitution, the production of pornography, and pornographic performances.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure that laws criminally prohibit the trafficking of children domestically and internationally for commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor, and do not require that the use of force, fraud, or coercion be established for the crime of human trafficking.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure that laws criminally prohibit the use of children in illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs.	2013 – 2022
Coordination	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the forced or compulsory recruitment of children under age 18 into non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure the National Coordinating Committee is active and has the resources necessary to implement child protection policies at the national level and implement the United Nations Convention of the Rights of the Child.	2020 – 2022

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Government Policies	Ensure that activities are undertaken to implement the United Nations Pacific Strategy and that data on these activities are published during the reporting period.	2020 – 2022
Social Programs	Ensure that all schools have menstrual hygiene management facilities that are safe and accessible to all female students.	2022

Although research found that no child labor exists on Norfolk Island, in 2022, the government made moderate advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. During the reporting period, the Government of Australia ratified the International Labor Organization Protocol of 2014 to the Forced Labor Convention of 1930. In June 2023, the government ratified the ILO's Minimum Age Convention, 1973 (No. 138), which will enter into force on June 13, 2024. Additionally, the Government of Norfolk Island began transitioning its states' services from New South Wales to Queensland, which is expected to be fully complete by December 31, 2026. However, the government has not established laws that sufficiently protect children from commercial sexual exploitation because the use of a child for prostitution is not prohibited.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor exists on Norfolk Island. (1)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Norfolk Island is non-self-governing and is included as part of the territory of the Australian Commonwealth. (2,3) Under the Acts Interpretation Act 1901 (Cth), all laws of the Commonwealth are applicable to Norfolk Island as if it were a part of mainland Australia. (4) The following Conventions have been extended to Norfolk Island (Table 1).

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

In April 2022, Australia ratified the ILO Protocol of 2014 to the Forced Labor Convention 1930 (No. 29). (5) Australia also ratified the ILO's Minimum Age Convention, 1973 (No. 138) in June 2023, and the convention will enter into force on June 13, 2024. (6)

Norfolk Island is subject to the laws and regulations related to child labor of the Commonwealth of Australia and some of the laws and regulations related to child labor of the state of Queensland. Some laws specific to Norfolk Island also remain in force. (1,7) However, gaps exist in Norfolk Island's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for light work (Table 2).

Table 2. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 24 of the Employment Act 1988 (NI) (8)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Section 81 and 89 (2) (d) of the Work Health and Safety Regulations 2011 (Qld) (NI) (9,10)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Chapter 4 of the Work Health and Safety Regulations 2011 (Qld) (NI) (9,10)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Sections 270.6 and 270.7 of the Criminal Code Act 1995 (Cth); Sections 270.6, 270.7, and 271.9 of the Crimes Legislation Amendment Act 2013 (Cth) (11,12)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Division 270 and 271 of the Criminal Code Act 1995 (Cth) (11)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Divisions 270 and 271 of the Criminal Code Act 1995, Section 122 of the Criminal Code 2007 (NI) (11,13)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Divisions 309 and 310 of the Criminal Code Act 1995 (Cth); Sections 303–305 of the Criminal Code 2007 (NI) (11,13)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Canberra Act 2600 (14)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*		Canberra Act 2600 (14)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Sections 268.68 and 268.88 of the Criminal Code Act 1995 (Cth) (11)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Section 4 and 9 of the Education Act 2006 (Qld) (15)
Free Public Education	No		Section 51 of the Education Act 2006 (Qld) (15)

* Country has no conscription (14)

The Australian Government and the Queensland Government signed an Intergovernmental Agreement to support the provision of state services to Norfolk Island after the previous arrangements with the New South Wales Government ended on December 31, 2021. (16) In 2022, the Government of Norfolk Island started to transition its states' services from New South Wales to Queensland, which is expected to fully complete by December 31, 2026. (7) Only specific Queensland legislation is in force during this transition, including the Norfolk Island Applied Laws and Service Delivery (Queensland) Ordinance 2021, the Education (General Provisions) Act 2006 (Qld), and the Education (General Provisions) Regulation 2017 (Qld). (7) Although Norfolk Island's Criminal Code 2007 and the Commonwealth Criminal Code prohibits the offering and procuring of a child for sex, the law does not prohibit the use a child for prostitution. (11,13) Additionally, the Employment Act 1988 (NI) does not set a minimum age for light work or specify activities in which light work may be permitted, which is not in compliance with international standards. (8) However, local authorities have reported that no children under age 15 are currently employed on Norfolk Island. (1) Norfolk Island also does not meet the international standard for free public education because under the newly applicable Queensland Education Act, 2006, free education is only available to Australian citizens, permanent residents, or children of citizens of permanent residents. Fees may be charged to attend school for people outside those categories. (15) Lastly, although the minimum age for work, 15, is lower than the compulsory education age, 16, a guardian of school age children must not allow the child to be employed during the time the child is required to attend school. (10,15)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for enforcement actions to address child labor, including its worst forms. However, the Government of Australia has established mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, which apply to Norfolk Island. Norfolk Island also has its own institutional mechanisms to enforce labor laws and regulations on child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Norfolk Island Labor Inspectors	Inspect places of employment for violations. Authorized to issue stop-work orders when violations are found, including child labor violations. (1,8)
Child Welfare Officers	Enforce laws prohibiting commercial sexual exploitation of children. Provide outreach and establish community programs to raise awareness about commercial sexual exploitation of children. (17)
Australian Federal Police	Enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (1,18) Oversee the Child Protection Operations Team, which coordinates and investigates online and multi-jurisdictional child sexual exploitation issues, including child pornography; and the Human Trafficking Teams, which investigate human trafficking for the purposes of transnational sexual and labor exploitation. (19,20)

Labor Law Enforcement

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for labor law enforcement actions to address child labor.

Criminal Law Enforcement

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for criminal law enforcement actions to address child labor.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for mechanisms to coordinate efforts to address child labor. However, the Government of Australia has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 4).

Table 4. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Inter-Departmental Committee on Human Trafficking and Slavery	Deals with child labor law enforcement and policy, including the worst forms of child labor, from a counter-trafficking perspective. (1) Comprises 11 government agencies, including the Australian Federal Police, Department of Employment, and Department of Foreign Affairs, and is chaired by the Department of Home Affairs. (10,21) The Committee meets at least twice a year, including once at the ministerial level, and includes an Operational Working Group subcommittee that meets monthly and refers emerging policy issues for consideration. (1,22) In 2022, the Committee took multiple steps to implement the National Action Plan to Combat Modern Slavery, including extensive consultations with countries, businesses, and civil society groups. (23)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor. However, the Government of Australia has established a policy related to child labor (Table 5).

Table 5. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Action Plan to Combat Human Trafficking and Slavery 2020–2025	Sets five strategic priorities for addressing modern slavery, which the National Action Plan defines as trafficking in persons, slavery, slavery-like practices, and the worst forms of child labor. Priorities include: (1) prevention; (2) disruption, investigation, and prosecution; (3) support and protection for victims; (4) partnerships; and (5) research. (1,24) In December 2022, the Australian Attorney General convened the fourteenth Ministerial Meeting of the National Roundtable on Human Trafficking and Slavery, the government's key mechanism for consulting with civil society and industry stakeholders on modern slavery issues. (1)

In 2022, the Government of Australia issued its annual report detailing the previous year's activities related to implementation of the Modern Slavery Act, which requires businesses and organizations with an annual turnover of $70 million (AUD 100 million) or more to report on efforts made to reduce the risk of modern slavery, including the worst forms of child labor, in their supply chains. (1,25)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for programs to address child labor. However, the Government of Australia has established social programs that included the goal of preventing child labor. (Table 6)

Table 6. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Cash Assistance Programs	Child Care Subsidy Program provides support for the care of children ages 13 or younger using an approved childcare service, and the Parenting Program provides an income support payment for the principal caretakers of a child under age 8. (1)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, the following actions would advance the continued prevention of child labor on Norfolk Island (Table 7).

Table 7. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested

	Establish free education by law for all children on Norfolk Island, including those who are not citizens, permanent residents, nor children of permanent residents.	2022
	Raise the minimum age for work from 15 to 16 to align with the compulsory education age.	2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the use of a child for prostitution in line with international standards.	2022

In 2022, North Macedonia made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Parliament of North Macedonia adopted the new Law on Compensation of Victims of Violent Crime which provides financial, medical, and psychosocial support for victims of crimes, including children. Additionally, in 2022 investigators and prosecutors from the Ministry of the Interior received trainings related to child labor and juvenile justice from the Academy for Judges and Prosecutors. However, children in North Macedonia are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in forced begging. Additionally, the law's minimum age protections do not apply to children who are self-employed or working outside formal employment relationships.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in North Macedonia. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	18.8 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	97.6
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	20.6
Primary Completion Rate (%)		93.4

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2018, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2022. (1)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 6 (MICS 6), 2019. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, † including in production of tobacco (4)
Services	Street work, including vending small items, cleaning vehicle windshields, scavenging, and begging (4,7)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor ‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,5-7)
	Forced begging (4,7,9,10)
	Forced domestic work (3,6,7)
	Forced labor as wait staff and dancers in restaurants, bars, and nightclubs (4,8,11)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

Most children involved in child labor in North Macedonia engage in street work, with the majority from the Roma, Balkan Egyptian, and Ashkali ethnicities. (3,4,6,9) Child trafficking victims in North Macedonia are usually girls, between the ages of 12 and 18, who have been subjected to commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor in restaurants, bars, and nightclubs. (6,10-12) Roma girls are also victims of trafficking for forced marriages in which they are subjected to sexual and labor exploitation. (5,8,9,13,14) Migrant children from Afghanistan, Bangladesh, Iran, Syria, Pakistan, and other states continue to transit through the country and are vulnerable to human trafficking for labor and commercial sexual exploitation. (8,15,16)

North Macedonia

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

The Ministry of Labor and Social Policy (MLSP), schools, and civil society organizations offer assistance to Roma children who have difficulty accessing education due to a lack of birth registration and identity cards, which are required for attending school in North Macedonia. (4,10) However, the government continues to face challenges in meeting the educational needs of Roma children due to an ongoing shortage of qualified teachers who can provide instruction in Romani. (14,17)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

North Macedonia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in North Macedonia's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including a lack of minimum age protections for children who are self-employed or working outside formal employment relationships.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	15	Article 42 of the Constitution; Sections 63, 66, and 67 of the Labor Relations Act (18,19)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 265 and Sections 63, 66, and 67 of the Labor Relations Act (23)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Rulebook on the Minimum Occupational Safety and Health Requirements for Young Workers (24)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 11 of the Constitution; Articles 418(c) and 418(d) of the Criminal Code (22,25)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 418(c) and 418(d) of the Criminal Code (25)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 190–193b of the Criminal Code (25)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 201(4) of the Criminal Code; Article 12(3) of the Law on Child Protection (21,22)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 62 of the Law on Defense (27)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*		Article 62 of the Law on Defense (27)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Articles 122, 322a, and 404 of the Criminal Code (25)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Articles 4, 5, 47, and 172 of the Law on Primary Education; Article 3 of the Law on Secondary Education (28,29)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 44 of the Constitution (22)

* Country has no conscription (27)

In 2022, the Parliament of North Macedonia adopted the Law on Compensation of Victims of Violent Crime, which contains provisions to support child victims of trafficking. In addition to monetary compensation, individuals covered under the terms of the new law are also provided with access to medical support and additional counseling. (26,27) However, the minimum age for work does not comply with international standards because the law's minimum age protections do not apply to children who are self-employed or working outside formal employment relationships. (10,17,19) Because the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may also be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (21,22,28)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor and Social Policy (MLSP)	Collaborates with the police and the Ombudsman's Office to conduct investigations and identify children living and working on the streets, and monitors cases of forced child labor through the Department of Social Inclusion. (3) Refers children to 30 Centers for Social Work throughout the country, which serve to counsel, educate, shelter, and assist children in need and victims of trafficking in persons. (3,27)
State Labor Inspectorate	Enforces labor law in the formal sector, including child labor laws, by conducting at least 60 targeted and complaint-based inspections per month. Receives complaints of child labor, can assess fines at any point of the inspection, and refers cases to the Public Prosecutor. (3,19,30)
Ministry of the Interior (MOI)	Enforces laws related to hazardous child labor, child trafficking, and commercial sexual exploitation through its special police unit for organized crime, corruption, and human trafficking. (3,22,27)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in North Macedonia took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the State Labor Inspectorate that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the lack of a central database for tracking labor investigations.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$2,430,000 (5)	$2,510,000 (34)
Number of Labor Inspectors	130 (5)	127 (34)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	Yes (23)	Yes (31-33)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	Yes (5)	Yes (34)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksite	22,986 (5)	21,032 (34)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	0 (5)	0 (34)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	N/A (5)	N/A (34)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	N/A (5)	N/A (34)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (5)	Yes (34)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (5)	Yes (34)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (23)	Yes (32,33)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (5)	Yes (34)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (5)	Yes (34)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (5)	Yes (34)

The Labor Inspectorate has an annual plan that determines the number of worksite inspections to be conducted during the calendar year. Unannounced inspections in all sectors are permitted, including on legally registered private farms. (11,28) Inspectors can also inspect private homes and farms with a valid warrant. (9) The MLSP lacks a central database to track labor investigations; however, inspection results are disseminated throughout relevant departments within the MLSP. (12)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in North Macedonia took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including inadequate investigation planning.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	No (3)	Yes (4)
Number of Investigations	15 (5)	11 (4)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	5 (5)	13 (4)
Number of Convictions	1 (5)	17 (4)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (5)	Yes (4)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (5)	Yes (4)

In North Macedonia, legal requirements mandate that public prosecutors receive a 24-month general training, which includes the application of international legal standards. (12) Police investigators normally receive initial training, in addition to training when legislation changes. (34) North Macedonia's National Referral Mechanism enables law enforcement authorities to refer children found to be involved in the worst forms of child labor to social services, including those related to the protection, care, rehabilitation, and eventual reintegration of minor victims. (9,10) In 2022, the Academy for Judges and Prosecutors hosted trainings for investigators and prosecutors on how to properly identify child victims of sexual exploitation, providing alternative justice for child victims of labor abuses, and working with children who have previously entered the criminal justice system. (3,35) During the reporting period, the Ministry of the Interior (MOI) also continued to operate the “Red Button” hotline, a website application to report child abuse, human trafficking, hate crimes, and violence during the reporting period. (10) However, research indicates that some local police officials lacked knowledge on how to identify human trafficking victims and refer them to services. In addition, some members of the police were not aware of the specialized Anti-Trafficking in Persons Task Force (Task Force), even though both bodies are under the MOI. (9,11) Further, the lack of a digital case management system within the MOI has limited the ability to refer suspected human trafficking cases from local police to the Task Force or Public Prosecutor's Office. (10,36)

In 2022, the Public Prosecutor's Office and the MOI discovered seven human trafficking violations that involved children. One case involved trafficking for participation in forced begging. (3) Additionally, authorities identified another eight potential victims of human trafficking. (3)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Coordination Body for the Prevention and Countering of Abuse and Neglect of Children	Led by MLSP in conjunction with the Ministries of Interior, Education and Science, Health, and Justice, as well as UNICEF and multiple NGOs around the country. (9,10) During the reporting period, the National Coordination Body continued to support programs to assist vulnerable children, including mobile team visits from social workers, law enforcement authorities, and civil society representatives. (3)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including the lack of a policy that covers all worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Action Plan Against Trafficking in Persons and Illegal Migration (2021–2025)	Focuses on preventing human trafficking by reducing the vulnerability of at-risk populations, improving the identification of victims, and increasing efforts to address human trafficking and forced child begging. (9,37) In 2022, the government prepared its annual operational plan, which included activities to improve victim identification. (3)
National Action Plan for Education (2018–2025)	Aims in part to expand inclusive education and improve education for the Roma community. Seeks to increase the number of Roma students in preschools and elementary schools and decrease the number of Roma students who, based on ethnicity, are enrolled in primary schools for children with special needs. (16,34) In 2022, the government continued to implement activities associated with the Plan, including hiring more teachers, providing scholarships for vulnerable Roma children, and fostering inclusion of vulnerable children via adapted coursework for first-time and returnee students, as well as children with special needs. (4)
National Strategy (2020-2025) and Action Plan for the National Strategy for Prevention and Countering Abuse and Neglect of Children (2020–2022)	Presented the vision, goals, and strategic approach of the government and the activities to be undertaken annually in the prevention and protection of children from all types of violence. Prepared by the National Coordination Body for Prevention and Protection of Children from Abuse and Neglect. (39) During the reporting period, the government continued to implement activities as designated by the National Action Plan for 2020–2022. (3)

North Macedonia maintains bilateral agreements to address human trafficking with all its neighboring countries. (35,36)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
MLSP-Operated and Funded Centers and Shelters†	MLSP-operated and funded programs, sometimes in coordination with NGOs, which provide support and services to victims of human trafficking and vulnerable populations such as street children. Additionally, MLSP provides extensive support for a day center to assist children participating in street work, and funds another center operated by an NGO to provide services, healthcare, and counseling to children working in the streets. (7,11,42) MLSP also funds the Center for Victims of Human Trafficking (operated by NGO Open Gate/ La Strada ), a transit center for asylum seekers, and the MOI-operated Transit Center for Illegal Migrants. (9) During the reporting period, the MLSP Day Care Centers in Skopje assisted 36 children by providing educational support, healthcare, and counseling to children working in hazardous street settings. Additionally, the government continued to provide financial support for both the Center for Victims of Human Trafficking and the Transit Center for Illegal Migrants, plus two new temporary centers in Kumanovo and Gevgelija that provided assistance to migrants who are transiting through the country without proper legal documents. (3)
UNICEF Projects	UNICEF programs that work with the government to provide support to vulnerable children, including Roma and migrant children. (12) In 2022, the government continued to work with UNICEF to implement the Home for Every Child Program and a strategic plan targeting school violence. (12,43,44) UNICEF also facilitated the Early Warning System for Missing Children project in conjunction with the Macedonian Association of Young Lawyers, the NGO Journalists for Human Rights, and EKPAT-Austria. (3)
Child Allowance Program‡	Government-supported program providing monthly child allowance payments to low-income households and families receiving other forms of government assistance. (9) In 2022, the government continued to provide monthly allowances. (3)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of North Macedonia.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (3,45-48)

Day centers and other programs continue to serve children forced into begging rings; however, research has determined that gaps remain between some existing social programs and their capacity to serve children considered to be most at-risk for economic exploitation. (7,9)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in North Macedonia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that labor law protections apply to all children, including self-employed children and children working outside formal employment relationships.	2015 – 2022
	Raise the minimum age for work from 15 to 16 to align with the compulsory education age.	2018 – 2022
Enforcement	Provide labor inspectors and the Ministry of Interior with electronic systems to record and share data on inspections.	2009 – 2022
Social Programs	Conduct research to determine the activities carried out by children engaged in child labor in order to inform the development of social programs supporting children at highest risk for economic exploitation.	2013 – 2022
	Increase efficacy of programs dedicated to addressing child labor and ensure that child beggars, especially Roma children, receive the support needed to be removed from street work permanently.	2015 – 2022
	Reduce barriers to education by increasing the number of teachers who can provide education in the Romani language.	2021 – 2022

In 2022, Oman made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The National Committee to Combat Human Trafficking launched a new website in English and Arabic with information on how to report human trafficking crimes in 14 languages. Additionally, in cooperation with United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, the government drafted a new law to address human trafficking. It also continued its prosecution of two foreign nationals suspected of exploiting a Pakistani child in commercial sexual exploitation under the Law to Combat Human Trafficking. Child labor is not visible in Oman, although a small number may work informally with their families, including in fishing and farming. Survey data are needed on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Oman. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		99.2

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2021, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2023. (1)

Source for all other data: Data were unavailable from ILO's analysis, 2023. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, activities unknown (3)
	Fishing, activities unknown (3)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Oman has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Articles 1(f), 55, and 72 of the Child Law (6)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15‡	Article 36 of the Child Law (6,10)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 13 of the Basic Law; Article 36 of the Child Law (6,11)

* Country has no conscription (12)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (6,10)

In cooperation with UNODC, the government drafted and reviewed a new law to address human trafficking during the reporting period; enactment of the law is expected in 2023. (13)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established relevant institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/ Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor (MOL)	Monitors and enforces child labor laws, conducts labor inspections, and shares information with the Royal Oman Police on labor and criminal law violations when penalties are pursued. (14) According to the government, MOL conducts yearly inspections of all private institutions and re-inspections of workplaces found to be in violation of labor laws. Labor inspections are also conducted following a complaint. (14,15) If a violation is found, the institution is given a set period of time to address the problem. If an institution fails to address the violation, a fine may be levied. (14,15) MOL can refer cases of child labor to the Ministry of Social Development (MOSD) if the child is under the minimum age for work. MOL and MOSD can also coordinate with the Royal Oman Police to shelter child victims and refer suspected violators for criminal investigation. (14) In addition, the labor inspectorate has a specialized unit composed to two people to conduct inspections related to suspected human trafficking. The unit is charged with bringing indicators of trafficking to the ministry and transferring cases to the Public Prosecutor's Office for further investigation. (16)
Royal Oman Police	Monitor and enforce the Child Law, including its provisions related to child labor, and refer cases to the Office of the Public Prosecutor. (14) In 2022, the National Committee on Human Trafficking provided more than 20 trainings on preventing, identifying, reporting, investigating, and prosecuting human trafficking cases to police personnel and others in the government and private sector, including military attaches, airport security officers, labor inspectors, prosecutors, and hotel staff. (13)
Office of the Public Prosecutor	Investigates and prosecutes human trafficking and sexual exploitation cases with assistance from the Royal Oman Police. Maintains specialized interview rooms for child witnesses and assigns social workers to guide children through their interactions with the government. (16,17) During the reporting period, the government continued its prosecution of two foreign nationals suspected of exploiting a Pakistani child in prostitution under the Law to Combat Human Trafficking.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, the government's labor law enforcement agencies appeared to function adequately in addressing child labor (Table 6).

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown (14)	Unknown
Number of Labor Inspectors	282 (18)	Unknown
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	Yes (4,5,19)	Yes (4,5,19)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	Yes (18)	Unknown
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksites	Unknown (14)	Unknown
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	Unknown (14)	Unknown
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	Unknown (14)	Unknown
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	Unknown (14)	Unknown

Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (14)	Unknown
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (19)	Yes (19)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (14)	Unknown
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (14)	Yes (14)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (14)	Yes (14)

In 2022, the Ministry of Labor carried out labor inspections, including in sectors where child labor may be found such as street vending. (20,21) Additionally, the government did not provide labor law enforcement data for inclusion in this report.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, the government's criminal law enforcement agencies appeared to function adequately in addressing child labor (Table 7).

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (14)	Unknown
Number of Investigations	2 (22,23)	Unknown
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	2 (23,24)	Unknown
Number of Convictions	2 (22,23)	Unknown
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (23,24)	Unknown
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (14)	Yes

During the reporting period, the government continued its prosecution of two foreign nationals suspected of exploiting a Pakistani child in prostitution under the Law to Combat Human Trafficking. (16) Additionally, the government did not publish criminal law enforcement data for inclusion in this report.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Child Protection Committee	Consists of representatives from MOSD, the Ministry of Health, the Ministry of Education, and the Royal Oman Police. Receives complaints and reports of child labor and investigates reported cases to determine whether children are engaged in prohibited activities or whether working has negative effects on their health or education. Also refers children who are victims of abuse, neglect, or other related issues to social services, and works with UNICEF on several projects related to child protection. (3) Active in 2022. (25)

Oman additionally has a National Council on Combating Human trafficking (NCCHT), which consists of relevant government ministries, the Oman Human Rights Council, the Oman Chamber of Commerce, and the General Federation of Oman Workers. The NCCHT oversees the implementation of the National Action Plan for Combating Human Trafficking. (26)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Action Plan for Combating Human Trafficking (2021–2023)	Aims to educate stakeholders on their rights and responsibilities, trains authorities on addressing human trafficking, coordinates government services for survivors, and develops new policies and best practices. In 2022, the government held events and trainings on human trafficking issues throughout the country. (27)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of preventing child labor (Table 10).

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Social Security Cash Transfer Program†	Provides assistance to children in low-income families, including educational services. (14) Annual benefits under the program exceed $278 million. In 2022, 73,790 individuals benefited from the program, including 2,300 orphans and 59,030 students. (25)
Dar al-Wifaq Shelter†	MOSD operates a shelter, Dar al Wifaq, for women and child victims of human trafficking; 15 of the shelter's beds are allocated for children. The shelter provides a number of services for victims of human trafficking that include psychological counseling, health care, and pro bono legal advocacy through the Lawyers Association. (13) In 2022, the shelter accommodated several child trafficking victims from Pakistan and Yemen. (13)

† Program is funded by the Government of Oman.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Oman (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Collect and publish data on labor and criminal law enforcement efforts taken to address child labor.	2013 – 2022
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2017 – 2022

In 2022, Pakistan made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. Pakistan amended existing laws by increasing penalties for crimes related to child trafficking, child pornography, and employing of child domestic workers. The Punjab Labor Department also conducted over 6,000 inspections at brick kilns, identified 239 child labor violations, and arrested 60 perpetrators. Lastly, the Sindh provincial government created a task force to review child labor laws and recommend amendments to fill gaps in current provincial legislation. However, children in Pakistan are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in domestic work, brick manufacturing, and agriculture. Pakistan's provincial labor inspectorates do not have sufficient human and financial resources, and enforcement data are unavailable. Furthermore, police corruption, particularly the taking of bribes from suspected perpetrators to ignore child labor crimes and a lack of willingness to conduct criminal investigations, hindered Pakistan's ability to address child labor throughout the country.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Pakistan.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Sector/Industry	Activity
Industry	Mining coal† and gemstones, and crushing stone† (10,14,15)
	Construction (7)
Services	Domestic work (13,16,17)
	Working in hotels, restaurants, gas stations, automobile repair, and shoe shining (10,12,13,18)
	Scavenging† and sorting garbage and recyclables, begging, and street vending (12,18,19)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced labor in agriculture, brickmaking, carpet weaving, small shops, and coal mining (5,13,20)
	Forced domestic work (5,13,21)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, including use in the production of pornography, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (5,13,20,22)
	Forced begging (5,13)
	Recruitment of children by non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict (5,13)
	Use in illicit activities, including the trafficking and production of drugs (12,13,23)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Child laborers in Pakistan are sometimes subjected to sexual abuse at their places of employment, including in factories and workshops, or while scavenging on the streets. (13,18) They are also sometimes subjected to sexual exploitation to obtain or keep their jobs. (5) Moreover, one in every four households in Pakistan employs children as child domestic workers who sometimes work under conditions of forced labor, experiencing debt bondage, sexual assault, and physical abuse. (5,13,16,17) Since the 2022 floods, more children have entered domestic servitude to repay loans their parents have taken from landlords. (13) Furthermore, reports estimate that around 70 percent of bonded laborers in Pakistan are children, and they make up one-third of the 4 million people working in brick kilns, some working alongside other family members. (13,24) In Sindh Province, almost 700,000 children in the agricultural sector work as bonded laborers. (13)

Some children from Pakistan are kidnapped or sold into organized begging rings, domestic servitude, gangs, and child sex trafficking in Iran. (5,13,25) Organized criminal groups also reportedly force Afghan, Iranian, and Pakistani children, particularly from Dalbadin and Quetta in Balochistan, into drug trafficking. (5,20,25) In addition, children are used in drug smuggling operations along the Afghan border with Khyber Pakhtunkhwa. (13,19,26) Moreover, non-state armed militant groups reportedly kidnap children as young as age 12, coerce parents with threats, and recruit children forcibly from madrassas—Islamic religious schools that provide free education and meals to Pakistan’s poorest children—to spy, fight, and carry out suicide attacks. (26) Sexual abuse of children in madrassas is also of significant concern. (27,28)

Children in Pakistan face several barriers to education. (13,29) As of 2022, an estimated 22.8 million children in Pakistan were out of school. (13) Insufficient internet coverage in many rural areas, especially in the newly merged tribal districts of the former federally administered tribal areas and in Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Province, has hampered children’s access to meaningful learning. (13,29) Many other children face barriers to accessing education, including high rates of teacher absenteeism, inadequate facilities, lack of transportation, school fees, corporal punishment, and child sex abuse, all of which may deter children from attending school. (13,30,31) The 2022 floods further affected children’s access to schools, particularly in the rural areas, where 27,000 schools were severely damaged. (13) Schools in Pakistan may also be vulnerable to attacks by armed groups, disrupting children’s learning. (8,19,20,25,30,32)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Pakistan has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

In November 2022, Pakistan ratified the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons. (33,34)

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Pakistan's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the lack of a minimum age for hazardous work protections that extend to all children at the federal level and in some provinces.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	15	Section 50 of the Factories Act; Sections 2, 20, and 27 of the West Pakistan Shops and Establishments Ordinance; Sections 2 and 26 of the Mines Act; Sections 3 and 11 of the Road Transport Workers Ordinance; Sections 2, 3, 7, and 14 of the Pakistan Employment of Children Act (35-39)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

The Eighteenth Amendment to the Pakistani Constitution permits provinces to pass laws that govern labor law and children's welfare. (47,48) Federal law applies only until the province passes a law on the same subject. (47) During the reporting period, the Senate enacted the National Commission on the Rights of the Child (Amendment) Act of 2021, which allows appropriate government ministries to approve policies related to child rights issues without seeking approval from the cabinet, allowing for the issuance of policies in a timely manner. (49) In October 2022, the government also enacted the Islamabad Domestic Workers Act (2022), which applies to the Islamabad Capital Territory and prohibits the employment of children under 16 to work in a household, prescribes imprisonment of up to 1 month for employing children under the age of 12 and a fine of up to $175 (PKR 50,000) for employing a child under the age of 16, and provides other protections, including minimum wage provisions, restrictions on working hours, and regular time off. (13) In addition, the government amended colonial-era law by enacting the Children (Pledging of Labor) (Amendment) Act of 2022, which applies to the Islamabad Capital Territory and provides punishment for parents or guardians pledging the labor of their child to potential employers. (13)

Some of Pakistan's federal and provincial laws are not in compliance with international standards on child labor. The federal minimum age for work provisions and the minimum age for work laws in Khyber Pakhtunkhwa and Sindh Provinces do not extend to informal employment, such as domestic work. (35,38,50-53) In addition, as the hazardous work age at the federal level and in Balochistan is less than age 18, it does not meet international standards. (39,54) While the federal government and the four provinces have identified hazardous occupations and activities for children, hazardous work prohibitions do not cover brickmaking, for which there is evidence that children are exposed to environmental health hazards. (10,55) Additionally, hazardous work prohibitions for the federal and provincial governments do not cover child domestic work, for which there is evidence that children are exposed to physical abuse. (19,56) Punjab limits domestic work for children ages 15 to 18 to part-time work that is not likely to harm the health, safety, and education of a domestic worker, but does not prevent children under 18 from engaging in this work. (51) Although laws in Khyber Pakhtunkhwa, Punjab, and Sindh Provinces prohibit children under age 18 from working in underground mines or above-ground quarries, federal law—which also still applies in Balochistan—does not prohibit children ages 15 to 18 from working in mines, and there is evidence that children in Balochistan are engaged in coal mining, which involves exposure to hazardous substances, work underground, and lethal accidents. (37,47,50,52-54,57,58) Research was unable to identify a law explicitly establishing a minimum age for voluntary military recruitment.

Federal and provincial laws related to forced labor, child trafficking, and commercial sexual exploitation meet international standards. However, federal and provincial laws in Balochistan and Khyber Pakhtunkhwa do not prohibit the use of children in drug production and drug trafficking. (53,59,60) The federal and provincial governments in Balochistan and Khyber Pakhtunkhwa have not enacted laws that prohibit the recruitment and use of children by non-state groups in armed conflict. (52,59) Moreover, as the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (45,52,61-63)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Provincial and Regional Labor and Criminal Law Enforcement Agencies	Pakistan's provinces are responsible for enforcing labor laws, including those relevant to child labor. Provincial labor inspectors inspect industrial areas and markets to identify child labor violations, pursue legal action against employers, and collect enforcement data at the district level. (64) Refer children taken into custody to Child Protection Officers. (65,66) Provincial labor courts assess penalties for labor violations and are located in each province and the Islamabad Capital Territory (ICT). In addition, provincial and regional police enforce violations of federal and provincial laws concerning the worst forms of child labor, including the Pakistan Penal Code, the Prevention of Trafficking in Persons Act, and the Bonded Labor System (Abolition) Act. (20,25,67,68)
Federal Investigation Agency (FIA), Anti-Trafficking Unit	Enforces transnational human trafficking-related laws, particularly the Prevention of Trafficking in Persons Act. Cooperates with other governments on human trafficking cases, operates a hotline for survivors, and publishes information on anti-trafficking efforts on its website. (5,20,22,30) The Ministry of Interior and FIA, along with other civil society groups, published the National Action Plan to Combat Human Trafficking and Migrant Smuggling 2021–2025. (5)
District Vigilance Committees (DVCs)	Assist in rehabilitating bonded laborers according to the Bonded Labor System (Abolition) Act. Consist of members of the public, civil society groups, lawyers, members of the media, and local government officials and report to the District Magistrate. (25,40,69) Exist in Punjab, Sindh, Khyber Pakhtunkhwa, and the ICT, but not in Balochistan Province. (25) DVCs were functioning in all of Punjab Province's 36 districts and established in 14 districts in Sindh Province. However, Sindh DVCs were nonfunctional during the reporting period. (19,49,70) The Khyber Pakhtunkhwa government issued orders to establish DVCs in all of Khyber Pakhtunkhwa's districts in 2021; however, reports indicate there was only one DVC established and functioning in the Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Province during the reporting period. (71)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Pakistan took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the provincial labor departments that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including a lack of human and financial resources.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Unknown (19)	Unknown (13)

Pakistan's provinces are responsible for enforcing labor laws and collecting data on labor law enforcement efforts at the district level. However, there is neither a centralized federal repository for enforcement data nor any mechanism for reporting this information; therefore, limited labor inspection data were available for inclusion in this report. (13) Although provincial labor departments reportedly conducted routine inspections, it is unknown whether inspections were targeted in high-risk sectors. (13) Likewise, provincial labor departments permit unannounced inspections, but it is unknown whether unannounced inspections were conducted. Moreover, factory owners in the Sindh province often deny inspectors access to their facilities, and inspections are often announced in advance. (13) Some garment factories reportedly paid bribes to provincial labor officers to avoid inspections, and some factories prevented officials from conducting inspections. (5) However, research indicates that the Punjab Labor Department conducted 53,058 child labor inspections and reported 1,110 violations, resulting in 1,101 police reports that help initiate investigations. The Punjab Labor Department also conducted 6,983 inspections at brick kilns and found 239 child labor violations, making 60 arrests. (13) In addition, the Khyber Pakhtunkhwa region has eight child protection courts, but as of the end of 2022, these courts had not adjudicated any child labor cases. (13)

The ILO and NGOs report the number of labor inspectors and inspections in Pakistan is insufficient given the size and population of the country. (13,72) Sources also indicate that provincial labor departments lack funding for travel outside of major cities to conduct inspections and some labor inspectors use their personal resources to carry out inspections. (13) In addition, training provided to law enforcement officials during the reporting period was insufficient, and it is unknown whether a reciprocal mechanism exists between law enforcement and social services. (10,13)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Pakistan took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including reports of corruption and indifference to worst forms of child labor crimes on the part of investigative officials.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Unknown (19)	Yes (13)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (19)	Unknown (13)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (19)	Unknown (13)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (19)	Unknown (13)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (19)	Unknown (13)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Unknown (19)	Unknown (13)

The government did not publish data on efforts to enforce criminal laws prohibiting the worst forms of child labor, including data on the investigations conducted, prosecutions initiated, or convictions achieved for inclusion in this report. (3,13) Khyber Pakhtunkhwa did enact the Child Protection and Welfare (Amendment) Act, 2022, which provides sufficiently stringent punishment for perpetrators of child sexual abuse, child pornography, child trafficking, and other offenses related to child rights. (13) However, reports indicate that progress toward the implementation and enforcement of the law has been slow. (13) During the reporting period, the Federal Investigation Agency (FIA)'s Cyber Crime Wing made two arrests related to child pornography that were widely covered in national media. (13,73,74) FIA also conducted trainings on anti-human trafficking standard operating procedures in the capital and in provincial social welfare departments, labor departments, and child protection bureaus in 2022. In addition, FIA worked with the IOM to provide trainings on identifying, screening, and referring survivors of human trafficking and child labor. (13) However, training is inconsistent across Pakistan and omits information on child labor, child trafficking, and sexual exploitation of children. (13)

Police corruption—particularly taking bribes from suspected perpetrators to ignore alleged crimes or refusing to open investigations without bribes—continued to hamper Pakistan's ability to address child sex trafficking and child labor. (5,7) Reports indicated that police sometimes refused to file cases of child sexual exploitation, including sex trafficking, unless the victims paid a bribe. (5,15,19,24) Moreover, the government did not act against reports of official complicity with human trafficking crimes. (5,26) Furthermore, research identified a lack of consistent law enforcement efforts against those who exploit street children, including for forced labor and sex trafficking, and traffickers operate openly and with impunity. (5,20,25)

A majority of the estimated 18,000 brick kilns in Pakistan operates without registration or providing required benefits for workers, particularly those ages 14 to 18. (69,75) Survivors of bonded labor settled for financial compensation rather than criminal prosecution because guidance to pursue a formal criminal case is lacking. (5) Furthermore, some police and other local officials colluded with farm and brick kiln owners to create fake criminal cases against individuals who attempted to escape situations of bonded labor. (7) Research has also found that though the Bonded Labor System (Abolition) Act mandated the creation of District Vigilance Committees (DVCs) in each province to report and file cases, bonded labor survivors had to leave their landowners and file their own cases in court without DVC support. (5) In addition, in some situations in which bonded labor survivors filed cases, the courts either did not pursue prosecutions or notified the survivors' employers of the case. As a result, human trafficking survivors who came forward often faced retaliation from their exploitative employers. (5)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including inadequate funding and human resources at the provincial level for child protection units.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Child Coordination Bodies	Provincial Child Protection Units (CPUs) coordinate and initiate interventions against child labor at the provincial level. (76) Take into custody at-risk children, including those rescued from exploitative labor situations, and provide case management services. (76) Present cases of children to the Child Protection Court or other appropriate authorities. (76) Each CPU is led by a Child Protection Officer supported by social workers and psychologists and operates under the District Administrator. (25) As of 2022, there were 14 CPUs to support children in Balochistan, Sindh, and Khyber Pakhtunkhwa with additional CPUs in Punjab. (77,78) Despite passing legislation in 2016, Balochistan only has 1 CPU in Quetta with 33 CPUs yet to be established. (49) CPUs in Khyber Pakhtunkhwa remained unstaffed and non-functioning due to the COVID-19 pandemic and funding delays; the Chief Child Protection Officer position has remained vacant for 5 years. (13) In addition to CPUs, Pakistan has several provincial child protection commissions, bureaus, and authorities in each province with different mandates related to coordinating efforts to enhance safety and rights of children in Pakistan. (13,60,79) For example, during the reporting period, the Punjab Child Protection and Welfare Bureau rescued 9,673 children and provided shelter or reunited them with their families, as well as took custody of over 1,000 children. The bureau also organized awareness programs in schools, colleges, and universities, and held a training program for the Rawalpindi police. (13) In December 2022, the bureau organized a provincial conference on child protection in Lahore. (13) Similarly, the Sindh Child Protection Authority has been active in preventing underage marriages throughout the province. The Sindh helpline 1121 has been used to track and respond to complaints about child beggary and corporal punishment at the provincial level. (80) The Sindh government created a Child Protection Task Force, which will review all laws related to child protection and recommend amendments in 2023 to fill in gaps in existing legislation. However, the Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Child Protection and Welfare Commission did not hold its required quarterly meetings during the reporting period. (13)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including lack of implementation of key national policies.

Pakistan

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Labor Policy	Seeks to gradually eradicate child labor, collect child labor statistics, enforce the compulsory education law, assist children through referral mechanisms, educate families and key stakeholders about the negative effects of child labor, and collaborate with organizations to research and develop solutions to eliminate child labor. (81) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Labor Policy during the reporting period.
Punjab Labor Policy	Seeks to improve working conditions, eradicate child and bonded labor, and establish social safety for workers and their families. Includes the goal of ending all child labor in brick kilns, in addition to the construction of schools, hospitals, and residences for workers. (82) Consists of independent working and monitoring groups that include members of government, police, and civil society and are responsible for carrying out inspections, victim identification, and treatment of survivors under the guidance of this policy. (80) In 2022, the Punjab Labor Department conducted a series of special campaigns to raise awareness among workers and employers on their rights and obligations under the policy. (13) The Punjab Bureau of Statistics released results from a child labor survey on October 18, 2022, and reported child labor prevalence in the province at 13.4 percent. (6)
Sindh Labor Policy	Seeks to protect vulnerable workers, including children. Includes goals to enforce laws dealing with hazardous child labor, extend the minimum age for employment in domestic and home-based work, ensure minimum wages for working children, and increase access to education and training. (83) In 2021, the last date for which information is available, the Sindh Province Labor Department was undertaking a child labor survey to determine the prevalence of child labor in the province. (80) Research was unable to determine whether the survey was completed or if other activities were undertaken to implement the Sindh Labor Policy during the reporting period.

In 2022, the National Commission on the Rights of the Child and UNICEF issued a policy brief on child labor. (13) The brief examined the prevailing laws and enforcement mechanisms related to child domestic workers and street children and made recommendations to legislators, policy makers, and government agencies on how to address the prevalence of child domestic workers in Pakistan. (84,85) However, although both the federal and provincial governments have education policies and sector plans, which recognize the role of child labor in limiting student enrollment in schools, they do not offer child labor elimination and prevention strategies. (80)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Bait-ul-Mal Programs†	Government-funded programs that aim to remove children from child labor, including its worst forms, and to increase vulnerable children's access to education. Programs include the National Centers for Rehabilitation of Child Labor and the Child Support Program. (86,87) As of 2022, there were 159 Pakistan Bait-ul-Mal School for Rehabilitation of Child Labor centers in Pakistan, and around 17,000 students are enrolled in primary education. (88) The program also launched a new initiative to provide social protection and education to orphan girls, including cash transfers in the amount of $21 to $42 (PKR 6000 to 12000) to each family based on the number of orphan girls they foster. (89)
Hotlines and Institutes†	The Ministry of Human Rights (MHR) operates a helpline for reporting human rights violations, including child labor violations, and for providing referrals to legal aid and a network of NGOs to survivors of human rights abuses. (7,90) FIA also operates a 24/7 hotline to address human trafficking, including child trafficking, in Pakistan at the headquarters, ICT, and district levels. (22,90) In 2022, Child Protection and Welfare Bureau helpline received 2,626 calls which led to the rescue of over 1,000 children. (13) In 2021, MHR launched the Zainab app, which is integrated with the district police stations across the country and helps track and trace missing children as well as streamline efforts to address child abuse cases, including child labor cases in Pakistan. (91) Since its launch, the app has received 1,803 cases, with 710 cases being recorded in 2022. (13) However, reports indicate that the collection of provincial information for the app is decentralized, and the quality can vary from province to province. (13) During the reporting period, MHR helped establish a Child Protection Institute (CPI) in ICT under the Islamabad Territory Child Protection Act 2018 to provide services to at-risk and vulnerable children. The program will provide rehabilitation, rescue, shelter, counseling, and help with family tracing services for children who are survivors of trafficking and forced labor. (19,92) By the end of the reporting period, CPIs were functional in nine cities in Punjab, including Lahore, Rawalpindi, Faisalabad, Gujranwala, Sialkot, Multan, Bahawalpur, Rahim Yak Khan, and Sahiwal. In 2022, Punjab created two CPIs in Mandi Bahauaddin and Lodhran that registered abandoned children in the national database. (13)

The government allocated $5.2 million for provincial child labor surveys. Gilgit-Balistan published its survey online and Punjab completed its survey, publication pending. (13,100) The Gilgit-Balistan child labor survey shows that the average prevalence of child labor is around 13.1 percent, reaching 28 percent in some parts of the province. (101) The report also recommends the development of programs focusing on education, social protection, and laws to address child labor. (102) Khyber Pakhtunkhwa, Balochistan, and Sindh survey results are expected in 2023. (3,13)

Pakistan's social programs are insufficient to address the prevalence and scope of the country's child labor problem. In particular, existing programs do not provide sufficient protection and rehabilitation services for bonded child laborers and child survivors of human trafficking. (13,103) Government initiatives are also insufficient for children working in the informal sector, including for domestic workers. (19) In addition, there are no significant social programs to address sexual abuse of child workers or children attending madrassas in Pakistan. (80)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Pakistan (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Extend minimum age protections to all sectors and informal employment at the federal level as well as in Khyber Pakhtunkhwa and Sindh Provinces.	2011 – 2022
	Prohibit the employment of children under age 18 in hazardous work, such as brickmaking, mining, and domestic work, at the federal level and in Balochistan, Khyber Pakhtunkhwa, Punjab, and Sindh Provinces.	2009 – 2022
	Prohibit the use of children in illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs, at the federal level and in Balochistan and Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Provinces.	2011 – 2022
	Criminally prohibit the recruitment and use of children under age 18 by non-state groups, including at the federal level and in Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Province.	2015 – 2022
	Raise the minimum age for work from 15 to 16 to align with the compulsory education age.	2019 – 2022
	Ensure that the law establishes a minimum age for voluntary recruitment by the state military in accordance with international standards.	2022
Enforcement	Ensure there are at least 4,388 labor inspectors to provide adequate coverage of the labor force of approximately 65.8 million people.	2016 – 2022
	Establish District Vigilance Committees in Balochistan and Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Provinces, and ensure that these committees are able to conduct public outreach and report and file cases.	2013 – 2022
	Ensure that provincial labor inspectorates have enough financial and human resources to conduct inspections, including funding for travel outside of major cities.	2022
	Create a centralized repository for enforcement data and a regular mechanism for reporting enforcement information.	2018 – 2022
	Publish labor law enforcement information, including funding for provincial labor inspectorates, number of labor inspectors and whether they received training, whether reciprocal referral mechanisms exist between labor authorities and social services for all provinces, and the number of labor inspections conducted, child labor law violations found, and whether penalties were imposed and collected, routine inspections were targeted, and the number of unannounced inspections conducted.	2010 – 2022
	Establish a referral mechanism between labor authorities and social services in all provinces.	2017 – 2022
	Ensure that labor inspectors receive regular training on child labor issues, including its worst forms.	2022
	Conduct unannounced inspections and hold accountable individuals preventing labor inspectors from accessing worksites.	2022
	Publish information about criminal law investigations conducted, prosecutions initiated, convictions achieved, and sentences imposed, as well as training provided for criminal investigators.	2016 – 2022
	Establish sufficient laws to end police corruption, particularly the taking of bribes to create criminal cases against released bonded laborers, and from suspected perpetrators to ignore alleged human trafficking crimes.	2019 – 2022

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Ensure that criminal law enforcement agencies have enough human and financial resources to carry out investigations and prosecute perpetrators.	2022
	Prosecute and penalize employers who employ bonded laborers and ensure bonded labor survivors are protected from future retaliations for bringing their cases to court.	2020 – 2022
Coordination	Establish an adequate number of Child Protection Units in all provinces and ensure that they receive sufficient human and financial resources in a timely manner.	2017 - 2022
Government Policies	Publish information on the activities undertaken to implement key policies related to child labor, including the Khyber Pakhtunkhwa and Sindh Labor Policy.	2020 – 2022
	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into education policies and sector plans of provincial governments.	2014 – 2022
Social Programs	Establish programs that ensure that children are protected from sexual abuse in schools, including madrassas , and in workplaces, and while scavenging on the streets.	2021 – 2022
	Complete and publish child labor surveys at the federal and provincial levels.	2009 – 2022
	Improve existing programs to address the prevalence and scope of Pakistan's child labor problem, including providing enough protection and rehabilitation services for child domestic workers, bonded child laborers, child survivors of human trafficking, and other children working in the informal sector and in the worst forms of child labor.	2009 – 2022
	Ensure all children have access to free and compulsory education, as required by law, by implementing programs to address high rates of teacher absenteeism, inadequate facilities, school fees, lack of transportation, internet access in rural areas—especially in the former federally administered tribal areas and in Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Province—and use of corporal punishment.	2022

In 2022, Panama made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. Panama passed Law 285, establishing pecuniary penalties, suspension, and closure of commercial premises for companies found using child labor. The government also increased its number of labor inspectors from 105 to 198 and created new sub-committees to address child labor in the provinces of Chiriquí, Herrera, Panamá East, and Panamá Oeste. In addition, the government prepared a new 5-year National Action Plan Against Trafficking in Person and developed a network of private sector companies committed to eradicating child labor. However, children in Panama are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. Although the government made meaningful efforts in all relevant areas during the reporting period, Panamanian law allows minors under age 16 to engage in hazardous work within training facilities in violation of international standards. Moreover, labor law enforcement agencies lack the financial and human resources necessary to fulfill their mandates. Finally, existing social programs are insufficient to address the full scope of the child labor problem in the country, in particular for children living in rural areas and from indigenous and Afro-Panamanian communities.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Panama.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	4.5 (33,594)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	95.7
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	5.0
Primary Completion Rate (%)		94.2

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2021, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2023. (1)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Encuesta de Trabajo Infantil (ETI), 2016. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of coffee, melons, and onions (3,4-8)
	Raising livestock, including cattle and poultry (3,9,10)
	Fishing† (3,4,8-10)
Industry	Construction,† including painting and carpentry (8,9,11)
Services	Domestic work† (3,9,10,12,13)
	Waste collection in garbage dumps† (8,14)
	Street work,† including vending,† washing cars, shining shoes,† and collecting recyclables† (3,4,8,10,11,15)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced domestic work (16,17)
	Use in the production of pornography, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,4,8)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (4,8,12,16,18)
	Use in illicit activities, including in drug production and drug trafficking (8,10)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Panama

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Children in Panama are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation, as well as forced labor, particularly domestic servitude. (16) They also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture, for which their working conditions may involve the use of chemicals, machinery, machetes, and other dangerous tools. (8,12) In addition, children working as street vendors are vulnerable to exploitation, gang activity, harassment, abuse, and vehicular accidents. (12)

Although the Panamanian Constitution recognizes the right to education without discrimination, indigenous, migrant, and Afro-Panamanian children in rural communities face barriers to accessing education due to a lack of transportation, documentation, infrastructure, quality sanitation, technology, and teachers, particularly in autonomous indigenous areas, or comarcas. (4,8,10,11) Some schools lack potable water and electricity, and in some cases, students in different grades are forced to share the same classroom. (10) Children of indigenous descent often live in difficult to reach areas and face severe inequity in education access. (8) Indigenous children have very low school enrollment rates, especially in secondary and higher education. (19) Panamanian law requires that schools integrate children with disabilities, but most public schools do not have adequate facilities for these children. (20)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Panama has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Panama's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including regulations that permit children to perform hazardous work starting at age 14 while participating in training programs.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Article 70 of the Constitution; Articles 508, 509 and 716 of the Family Code; Articles 117, 119, and 123 of the Labor Code (21-23)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No	18	Article 510 of the Family Code; Article 203 of the Penal Code; Article 4 of Executive Decree No. 19 of 2006; Article 118 of the Labor Code (21-26)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 2, 2A, and 2B of Executive Decree No. 19 of 2006; Article 118 of the Labor Code (23,24,26)

Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 205–208 and 456 of the Penal Code; Article 489.17 of the Family Code; Article 63 of Law 79 on Human Trafficking (22,25,27)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 179–187, 189–191, 202, 203, 207, and 456 of the Penal Code; Article 63 of Law 79 on Human Trafficking (25,27)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 318, 333, and 336 of the Penal Code; Article 489.16 of the Family Code; Article 2.16 of Executive Decree No. 19 of 2006 (22,25,26)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	N/A†
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A†
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 448 of the Penal Code (25)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Articles 34 and 45 of the Law on Education; Article 489 of the Family Code; Article 95 of the Constitution (21,22,28,29)
Free Public Education	Yes		Articles 34 and 41 of the Law on Education; Article 95 of the Constitution (21,28,29)

† Country has no standing military (21)

In 2022, the Government of Panama ratified ILO convention 129 on inspection in agricultural work, which is meant to strengthen the country's labor inspection capacity in agricultural sectors. (30) Law 285 was also approved by the president on February 15, 2022. This law establishes protections for children related to economic exploitation, commercial sexual exploitation, and hazardous work. (31) The law also divided the responsibility for child labor issues between two agencies: the National Secretariat for Children, Adolescents and Family (SENNIAF) is now responsible for child labor issues in the informal sector, while the Ministry of Labor (MITRADEL) is responsible for child labor issues in the formal sector. In addition, the new law provides pecuniary penalties, suspension of business licenses or certificates of operation, and closure of commercial premises for companies promoting child labor. (8,31)

Panama has a list of hazardous occupations prohibited for children under age 18, but it permits children to perform hazardous work in training programs starting at age 14, in violation of international standards. (24) Although the Constitution, Family Code, and Labor Code set the minimum age for employment at age 14, the Family Code and Labor Code specify exceptions for agricultural work. (21-23) Article 119 of the Labor Code allows children between the ages of 12 and 15 to perform light work in agriculture if the work is outside of regular school hours. The Labor Code, however, does not define the kinds of activities children may perform as light work. (23) In addition, the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, which may encourage children to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (21-23,28,29)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor (MITRADEL)	Enforces child labor laws through two directorates with direct authority over child labor matters: the Directorate Against Child Labor and for the Protection of Adolescent Workers (DIRETIPAT), and the Labor Inspection Directorate. DIRETIPAT is responsible for overseeing the enforcement of laws related to working children, planning and executing public policies, and carrying out education programs on child labor for employers, parents, and children. (12,32,33) DIRETIPAT also manages the Direct Government Action Program for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor. Refers cases of children found in exploitative work to the Child and Adolescent Courts, or to the National Secretariat for Childhood, Adolescence, and Family (SENNIAF), which conducts inspections in the informal sector. (12) The Labor Inspection Directorate enforces the Labor Code in areas in which children may be working, particularly in the formal sector. (12)
Attorney General's Office	Investigates and prosecutes crimes of sexual exploitation. Investigations are initiated by the Judicial Investigative Directorate, after which cases are passed to the prosecutors. (12)
Juvenile Police	Assists, collaborates, and coordinates with authorities and organizations to address the education, prevention, protection, and rehabilitation of children, including those in child labor. (34) It is a special body of the National Police. (10)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Panama took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Labor (MITRADEL) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient allocation of financial resources.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$1,151,738 (10)	$1,071,188 (35)
Number of Labor Inspectors	105 (10)	198 (8)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	Yes (23)	Yes (23)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	Yes (10)	Yes (8)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksite	14,686 (36)	29,866 (8)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	4 (10)	7 (8)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	0 (10)	7 (8)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	0 (10)	Unknown (8)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (10)	Yes (8)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (10)	Yes (8)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (23)	Yes (23)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (10)	Yes (8)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (10)	Yes (8)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (10)	Yes (8)

In 2022, MITRADEL identified 49 cases of child labor. (8) It also nearly doubled its number of labor inspectors by adding 93 to its labor inspectorate in 2022, for a total of 198 inspectors. (8,37) However, MITRADEL reported that only 20 inspectors focus exclusively on child labor, and that this number is insufficient to ensure child labor prevention and compliance of existing laws. (8,35) The number of labor inspections conducted at the workplace is a high number of inspections conducted by each inspector, and it is unknown whether this high number affects the quality and scope of inspections. (38) MITRADEL also reported a need for additional funding for tools such as telephones, laptops, and vehicles to carry out their work. (4,8,10,39)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Panama took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient allocation of financial resources and a lack of enforcement data made available.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (10)	Unknown (8)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (10)	Unknown (8)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (10)	Unknown (8)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (10)	Unknown (8)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (10)	Unknown (8)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (10)	Yes (8)

The government did not provide information on the number of investigations and prosecutions, or the amount of funding provided for investigations for inclusion in this report. The Public Prosecutor's Office contains regional prosecutor offices that oversee indigenous issues in the country's comarcas; however, their effectiveness is hampered by the office's lack of fuel, boats, canoes, outboard motors, and four-wheel drive vehicles. (8) The Trafficking in Persons Commission and the Organized Crime Special Prosecutor's Office have both indicated that it is difficult to prosecute trafficking in persons cases, partially because judges lack knowledge of relevant laws. (40) The government also reported a number of cases in which companies sanctioned for violating child labor laws have not paid their required fines. (8,35)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Committee for the Eradication of Child Labor and the Protection of Adolescent Workers (CETIPPAT)	Public-private institution led by the First Lady of Panama and includes MITRADEL, the ministries of Education, Health, and Agriculture, and representatives from civil society and organizations of workers and employers. (10,12,41) Conducts various efforts to address child labor, including national child labor surveys. (42,43) During the reporting period, the committee created new sub-committees for the provinces of Chiriquí, Herrera, Panama East, and Panama West. In addition to these new sub-committees, it adopted two new technical procedures to guide the safety and prevention of hazardous work that pertain to car wash and grocery store workers. (8) These technical procedures cover a number of different aspects of the job such as storing equipment and packing and transporting goods. (35)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
Direct Government Action Program for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor	Provides a network of social and economic services to child workers and children at risk of child labor, including food and scholarships, support for sports activities, and social monitoring. (10,12) Led by MITRADEL and implemented through the Institute for Training and Utilization of Human Resources. (10) Replaced the Roadmap Towards the Elimination of Child Labor (2016–2019) in 2020. (4) In 2022, MITRADEL's child labor division registered 800 students nationally in the Direct Government Action Program for the 2023 school year. (8)
National Action Plan for the Prevention and Elimination of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children and Adolescents	Seeks to prevent and eliminate the commercial sexual exploitation of children and adolescents, including by providing services to survivors, strengthening the National Commission for the Prevention of Crimes of Sexual Exploitation (CONAPREDES), and raising awareness. Implemented by CONAPREDES, with support from the Public Ministry. (10,41,44) Research was unable to determine whether activities were taken to implement this strategy during the reporting period.
National Plan Against Trafficking in Persons (2012–2022)	Addresses human trafficking through prevention, victim assistance, and international cooperation. Includes provisions to protect child victims of human trafficking. (10,39,45) During the reporting period, the Government of Panama, through the Trafficking in Persons Commission, finished a new 5-year National Action Plan Against Trafficking in Persons (2022–2027), soon to be published. (18,46) The new plan includes lines of action such as developing new strategic alliances between government agencies to conduct joint labor inspections, building the first temporary shelter for the exclusive care of human trafficking survivors, and implementing new training strategies for the Public Prosecutor's Office and the Judiciary. (46) The plan is currently under the review of the Ministry of Security's legal office before obtaining presidential approval. (38)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including their ability to reach the most vulnerable populations.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
SENNIAF Programs†	Provides services to children engaged in the worst forms of child labor. (8,11) The Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor program identifies children engaged in the worst forms of child labor, removes them from exploitative situations, and connects them to a network of social and economic services offered by the government. Maintains a case processing system to efficiently manage reports and help reduce report processing times. (11) The Prevention and Care for Child and Adolescent Victims of Sexual Violence program identifies children engaged in commercial sexual exploitation, removes them from exploitative situations, and provides them with social services. Conducts training workshops nationwide for professionals providing direct care to child and adolescent survivors of sexual violence. (47) SENNIAC continued its existing social programs in rural and urban areas, as well as maintaining a network of government services to address the needs of children and offering guidance to parents during the reporting period. (8)
Network of Opportunities†	Ministry of Social Development (MIDES) program that provides families in extreme poverty with cash transfers that are conditioned on their children's participation in health and education services and the acquisition of a birth certificate. Offers training to project participants to improve income-generating opportunities. (8,10) MIDES continued the Network of Opportunities program without significant changes during the reporting period. (8)
El Plan Colmena†	Seeks to reduce poverty and inequality via a multisectoral strategy that includes local governments, public institutions, the private sector, civil society, and community leaders to promote development and address vulnerability. (8) Through these actors, the plan prioritizes 12 areas of intervention including comprehensive childhood care, improved nutrition, access to clean water and basic sanitation, health, education, and the development of productive capacities to ensure the sustainability of communities. (42) The program is also responsible for the creation of the "Child Labor Free Districts" strategy, in which MITRADEL engages with local municipal governments to identify cases of child labor. (8) During the reporting period, the government held several meetings to discuss progress in expanding the plan into the provinces of Panama Oeste, Panamá, Los Santos, Veraguas and Colón. (48)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of Panama.

During the reporting period, MITRADEL, in conjunction with the National Council of Private Enterprise (CONEP) launched the new initiative called Let's Stop Child Labor (Dejemos en Cero al Trabajo Infantil). The new initiative creates a network of private sector companies with the aim of eradicating child labor. (49) This network provides a training plan, a space to share international and national experiences, project coordination support with other companies, and coordination of MITRADEL's joint program for the employability of adolescents of legal working age. The project is supported by the Responsible Business Conduct in Latin America and the Caribbean, funded by the European Union, and executed by the ILO. (49) MITRADEL has also continued its work with NGO Casa Esperanza to provide care for 250 children and adolescents. (8)

Although the Government of Panama has expanded programs that reach children in rural areas and from indigenous and Afro-Panamanian communities, reports indicate that the scope of these programs is insufficient. (8) Despite policy efforts, the National Anti-Trafficking Commission acknowledges that funding and availability of services for human trafficking survivors remain insufficient to address the full scope of the problem. Furthermore, although survivors of child trafficking are able to receive services from local NGOs, Panama lacks programs to specifically address the needs of this population. (50) Government officials have also noted that despite funds dedicated to the prevention of crimes against children, Panama lacks a specific mechanism to direct funds toward child sexual abuse survivors. (51,52)

In the past, there were widespread allegations of abuse against children in SENNIAC facilities, specifically shelters, which were later verified through an independent investigation. Child trafficking survivors in Panama are referred by the government to SENNIAC to receive services, including shelter, which are administered by NGOs and religious organizations. (17) Yet children in these facilities are vulnerable to recruitment by human traffickers. Reports also indicate that SENNIAC's budget is insufficient to support restructuring or other largescale efforts needed to reduce children's risk of suffering abuse in these facilities, which heightens their vulnerability to exploitation. (17)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Panama (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law protects children from hazardous work by establishing a minimum age of 18 for all children or by ensuring that children receive adequate training in the type of work being done and that the health, safety, and morals of children are protected in accordance with international standards if children aged 16 or 17 are allowed to perform hazardous work.	2013 – 2022
	Establish regulations that define the types of activities that children ages 12 to 14 can undertake as light work.	2009 – 2022
	Raise the minimum age for work from 14 to 15 to align with the compulsory education age.	2019 – 2022
Enforcement	Allocate sufficient funding for resources such as telephones, laptops, and vehicles so that the labor inspectorate can meet its commitments for coordination, implementation, and monitoring related to child labor.	2014 – 2022
	Further increase the number of inspectors in the labor inspectorate to ensure adequate coverage of the labor force of approximately 1.9 million people.	2022
	Collect and make available information on the number of investigations, violations found, prosecutions initiated, convictions obtained, and penalties imposed and collected related to the worst forms of child labor.	2018 – 2022
	Ensure that judges are sufficiently trained on laws related to forced labor, the worst forms of child labor, and human trafficking to ensure that these crimes can be effectively prosecuted.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure the number of inspections conducted by labor inspectors is appropriate to ensure the quality and scope of inspections.	2022
Government Policies	Take steps to implement key policies related to child labor and publish information about these efforts on an annual basis.	2020 – 2022
Social Programs	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education accessible for all children, including children from rural areas and indigenous and Afro-Panamanian communities, by expanding existing programs to cover transportation and infrastructure for children with disabilities.	2014 – 2022
	Establish programs and ensure sufficient funding to address the needs of human trafficking survivors, including programs that provide services to child survivors of human trafficking and sexual abuse.	2018 – 2022

In 2022, Papua New Guinea made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. During the reporting period, the government reintroduced the Government Tuition Fee Subsidy Policy, which pledges to cover 100 percent of school fees for students. However, children in Papua New Guinea are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in mining and deep-sea fishing. Papua New Guinea's hazardous work prohibitions do not comply with international standards because they allow children ages 16 and older to engage in hazardous work, which is below the international standard of 18 years old. Papua New Guinea also does not have laws that sufficiently protect children from commercial sexual exploitation because using, procuring, and offering a child for pornographic performances are not criminally prohibited. Papua New Guinea also does not have sufficient prohibitions against child trafficking because the law requires that threats, the use of force, or coercion be established for the crime of child trafficking. Moreover, although exact funding levels are unknown, the labor inspectorate does not have sufficient resources to adequately enforce Papua New Guinea's labor laws, including sufficient trainings for labor inspectors.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Papua New Guinea. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Working in agriculture, including on coffee, tea, copra, and palm oil plantations (3,4)
	Deep-sea fishing (5)
	Herding of livestock (5)
Industry	Work in manufacturing (4)
	Mining and quarrying, including gold mining (4)
Services	Manual labor (6)
	Domestic work (4)
	Street work, including begging (4)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (6)
	Forced labor in domestic work, portering, and begging (6)
	Use in illicit activities, including selling drugs (4)
	Forced mining, including panning for gold (6)

Papua New Guinea

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Papua New Guinea is a source and destination country for child trafficking, especially of girls. Children exploited for sex trafficking or engaged in street work, such as begging or vending, are vulnerable to crime, traffic accidents, hunger, punishment from relatives, and illness. (4,6) Additionally, children are subjected to forced labor in industries such as mining, portering, and forced domestic work to pay off family debts. (6) Dangerous tasks in the mining industry, such as handling chemicals like mercury used in gold mining, are often performed without appropriate training and equipment. Similarly, in the agriculture sector, children are put at risk of drowning while deep-sea diving for sea cucumbers and pearls. (4)

During the reporting period, the Government of Papua New Guinea reinstated the Government Tuition Fee Subsidy Policy for students from age 6 through age 18. The policy pledges to cover 100 percent of school fees and the government has allocated a budget of more than $176 million (623 million Papua New Guinea kina) to support the policy. (4,7,8) However, schools are still allowed to collect project fees from parents. (7) Additionally, a lack of essential resources, such as classrooms and textbooks, and limited transportation remain a barrier to accessible education. (4,7) Some of the most pressing barriers to education include unpaid teachers, a lack of transportation, aging infrastructure, and a lack of reliable water supplies and sanitation facilities, all of which are exacerbated by the government frequently failing in its obligation to provide schools with sufficient funding. (4) In previous years, some schools did not receive a subsidy and subsequently closed due to aging infrastructure. (4,9) Schools also face disruptions due to natural disasters because almost 80 percent of schools lack electricity, limiting remote and online-based learning opportunities. (10,11) In addition, research found that the threat of gender-based violence prevents many girls from attending school. (12) Papua New Guinea lacks comprehensive research and data on child labor, which affects the government's ability to address child labor in the country. (4)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Papua New Guinea has ratified some key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Papua New Guinea's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of commercial sexual exploitation of children.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 103 of the Employment Act (13)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No	16	Article 104 of the Employment Act (13)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 23 and 43 of the Constitution of the Independent State of Papua New Guinea; Section 208 of the Criminal Code (14,15)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Section 208 of the Criminal Code (15)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 229J–229O, 229R, and 229S of the Criminal Code (16)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	16	Section 30 of the Defense Act (17)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	No
Free Public Education	No

* Country has no conscription (18)

Papua New Guinea's existing legal framework governing child labor does not meet international standards in a number of areas. Although Papua New Guinea meets international standards for the minimum age for work, Article 103 of the Papua New Guinea Employment Act permits children ages 11 through 16 to work under certain conditions, including with parental consent and if the child works only with members of the family. (13,19) Children as young as age 11 are permitted to perform light work, without enumerating what forms of labor may be classified as “light work” and without establishing a limit on the number of hours a child under age 16 may be made to work. (13,19) Papua New Guinea's existing law on the minimum age for hazardous work under Article 104 of Papua New Guinea's Employment Act sets the minimum age for engaging in hazardous labor activities at age 16 rather than age 18. Additionally, the law does not list hazardous occupations that are prohibited for children. (13,19) The National Education Plan does not include an age up to which education is compulsory. (8) However, although the Government Tuition Fee Subsidy Policy was reinstated in 2022, the policy allows schools to charge project fees. (7)

Papua New Guinea also does not have laws that prohibit using, procuring, or offering a child for illicit activities, including for the production and trafficking of drugs. (20) The law does not sufficiently protect children from commercial sexual exploitation because using, procuring, and offering a child for pornographic performances are not criminally prohibited. (16) Lastly, the prohibitions against child trafficking are insufficient because they require that threats, the use of force, or coercion be established for the crime of child trafficking. (15,21)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Department of Labor and Industrial Relations	Directly employs all labor inspectors in the country and identifies hazards that child workers are exposed to in various sectors. (4)
Department of Youth, Religion, and Community Development	Through the Office of Child and Family Welfare Services, implements, oversees, and enforces the Child Protection ( Lukautim Pikinini ) Act, including provisions on child labor and its worst forms, and has conducted trainings for Papua New Guinea's Child Protection Officers. (10,22,23)
Royal Papua New Guinea Constabulary	Enforces laws against commercial sexual exploitation of children. (10,24) Includes the specialized Family and Sexual Violence Unit, which protects children's rights and safety. (24)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Papua New Guinea took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the lack of a reciprocal referral mechanism between labor authorities and social services.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown (10)	Unknown (4)
Number of Labor Inspectors	Unknown (10)	Unknown (4)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	Yes (13)	Yes (4,13)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	Unknown (10)	Unknown (4)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksite	Unknown (10)	Unknown (4)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	Unknown (10)	Unknown (4)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	Unknown (10)	Unknown (4)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	Unknown (10)	Unknown (4)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Unknown (10)	Unknown (4)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Unknown (10)	Unknown (4)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (13)	Yes (13)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (10)	Unknown (4)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (10)	Unknown (4)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	No (10)	Unknown (4)

The Department of Labor and Industrial Relations lacks a data monitoring system to track child labor cases, which may hamper its efforts to address child labor concerns in Papua New Guinea. (10) Research was unable to determine whether there is a referral mechanism for survivors of child labor and exploitation. The Department of Youth, Religion, and Community Development has not yet implemented a system to refer children for protection and shelter. (4) The Department does conduct some trainings for Child Protection Officers who provide referrals for children and families. However, the scope of the training is unknown. (4)

The Government of Papua New Guinea did not respond to requests for information related to its labor law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report. (4) Research indicates that Papua New Guinea does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (4,25) Due to limited personnel capacity, labor inspectors generally respond to specific child labor violations on a case-by-case basis as complaints are filed. The labor inspectorate does not have sufficient resources to adequately enforce Papua New Guinea's labor laws, including sufficient trainings for labor officers. (4) Due to this lack of resources, the ability to conduct inspections outside of major urban centers, where most child labor occurs, is limited. When labor inspections do occur, they are conducted in all three of Papua New Guinea's major business languages (English, Hiri-Motu, and Pidgin/Tok Pisin). (4)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether criminal law enforcement agencies in Papua New Guinea took actions to address child labor (Table 7).

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Unknown (10)	Unknown (4)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (10)	Unknown (4)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (10)	Unknown (4)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (10)	Unknown (4)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (10)	Unknown (4)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	No (10)	Unknown (4)

The Government of Papua New Guinea did not respond to requests for information on its criminal law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report. (4) Although specific funding allocations are unknown, research indicates that there are generally not enough officers to conduct criminal investigations into child labor accusations due to a lack of funding, training, and report writing skills. (4) Research was unable to find evidence of trainings occurring in 2022 and was unable to determine whether training for prospective law enforcement officials addresses all child labor elimination components, including recognizing the worst forms of child labor, victim identification, and prevention strategies. (4) Additionally, poor prosecutorial efforts including a widespread observance of customary justice practices have resulted in a distrust of law enforcement among survivors of human trafficking. Furthermore, political will among law enforcement is lacking, stemming from insufficient funds to conduct investigations, particularly in rural areas. (6)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including the lack of a mechanism to address all worst forms of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Anti-Human Trafficking Committee (NAHTC)	Coordinates efforts to address human trafficking. NAHTC met once in March 2022 but continued to lack sufficient resources and commitment from the government. (6) In addition, as in previous years, NAHTC failed to appoint specific committee members to represent relevant agencies and effectively excluded non-governmental stakeholders. Moreover, some key interagency stakeholders and senior government officials were unaware of the Committee's existence. (6)

Although Papua New Guinea has the National Anti-Human Trafficking Committee to coordinate efforts to address human trafficking, it does not have a coordinating mechanism to address other forms of child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of implementation of key national policies. Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement key policies related to child labor in Papua New Guinea during the reporting period.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Action Plan to Eliminate Child Labor in Papua New Guinea	Promotes government coordination efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor through more effective prevention, protection, rehabilitation, and reintegration measures and capacity building. (3)
National Child Protection Policy (2017–2027)	Seeks to strengthen child protection laws, including increased data gathering and analysis, full implementation of the Lukautim Pikinini Act , and elimination of violence against children at the hands of the police. (29)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate efforts to address the full scope of the problem.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Child Care Centers†	Provide a safe location for children removed by Child Protection Officers from situations deemed to be harmful to their health and safety. (4,23) Research was unable to determine whether the Child Care Centers were active during the reporting period.
I-Tok Kaunselin Helpim Lain	Telephone hotline managed by ChildFund Papua New Guinea to report child welfare concerns and physical or sexual violence. The hotline was active in 2022, and staff received training from IOM staff on international legal frameworks on trafficking in persons, crisis intervention, and referrals during the reporting period. (30)

† Program is funded by the Government of Papua New Guinea.

Research was unable to determine whether the government carried out programs specifically designed to assist children engaged in commercial sexual exploitation, domestic work, or mining. Research found no evidence of any programs with the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (4,31)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Papua New Guinea (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Accede to the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict.	2018 – 2022
	Accede to the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography.	2014 – 2022
	Accede to the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2014 – 2022
	Raise the minimum age for light work from age 11 to age 13 to comply with international standards and ensure that the law's light work provisions are sufficiently specific to prevent children from involvement in child labor.	2015 – 2022
	Raise and establish the minimum age for hazardous work from age 16 to age 18 and identify hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children.	2009 – 2022
	Ensure that the law does not require threats, the use of force, or coercion to be established for the crime of child trafficking.	2019 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits using, procuring, and offering a child for pornographic performances.	2016 – 2022
	Establish a law that criminally prohibits using, procuring, and offering a child for illicit activities, including for the production and trafficking of drugs.	2014 – 2022
	Establish a law that criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2022
	Establish by law an age up to which education is compulsory that extends to age 16, the minimum age for employment.	2009 – 2022
Enforcement	Establish by law free basic public education, including fully funding education-related fees.	2021 – 2022
	Publish information on child labor law enforcement efforts undertaken, including labor inspectorate funding, the number of labor inspectors, whether training was provided for labor inspectors, and the number of inspections conducted at worksites.	2014 – 2022
	Publish information regarding the number of child labor violations found, the number of child labor violations for which penalties were imposed, and the number of child labor penalties imposed that were collected.	2022
	Publish information regarding whether routine inspections were conducted and targeted, and whether unannounced inspections were conducted.	2022
	Publish information regarding whether a mechanism for child labor complaints exists.	2022
	Publish information regarding the existence of a reciprocal referral mechanism between labor authorities and social services.	2022
	Establish a data monitoring system to track child labor cases.	2019 – 2022
	Establish a referral mechanism between labor and criminal law enforcement authorities and social services agencies to ensure that victims of child labor receive appropriate support services.	2014 – 2022
Employ at least 209 labor inspectors to ensure adequate coverage of the labor force of approximately 3.1 million people.	2017 – 2022

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Strengthen the inspection system by ensuring that inspectors conduct routine and targeted inspections in addition to those that are complaint driven.	2014 – 2022
	Provide inspectors with the resources necessary to conduct inspections and enforce laws that protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including funding, training, and report writing skills.	2009 – 2022
	Institutionalize and fully fund training on the worst forms of child labor for labor inspectors and criminal investigators, including training for new labor inspectors at the beginning of their employment.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure that labor inspections occur in all areas of Papua New Guinea, especially outside of urban areas.	2019 – 2022
	Publish information on criminal law enforcement efforts undertaken, including the number of child labor investigations initiated, the number of child labor penalties imposed, and the number of criminal law enforcement convictions secured.	2017 – 2022
	Standardize prosecutorial and law enforcement practices to increase trust amongst survivor communities and the general public.	2022
Coordination	Ensure that the National Anti-Human Trafficking Committee is active and meets regularly to implement measures to address human trafficking; there is senior governmental leadership and participation at meetings; and all anti-human trafficking stakeholders, including NGOs, are invited to and participate in National Anti-Human Trafficking Committee coordination, per the Committee's mandate.	2021 – 2022
	Establish a coordinating mechanism to prevent and eliminate all worst forms of child labor.	2009 – 2022
Government Policies	Ensure that all policies are funded and implemented according to their mandate, including the National Action Plan to Eliminate Child Labor in Papua New Guinea and the National Child Protection Policy.	2017 – 2022
Social Programs	Increase access to education by eliminating all school-related fees; increase funding for school infrastructure improvements, including essentials such as textbooks, electricity, and technology; ensure that teacher salaries are paid; address transportation challenges for students; institute programs to address gender-based violence against girls in schools; and ensure that all schools have reliable water supplies.	2014 – 2022
	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2017 – 2022
	Implement and fully fund programs and services that assist children engaged in the worst forms of child labor in all relevant sectors, especially commercial sexual exploitation, domestic work, and mining.	2010 – 2022
	Ensure that Child Care Centers are active, fully funded, and publish their activities undertaken during the reporting period.	2019 – 2022

In 2022, Paraguay made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government created nine new committees to address child labor at the regional level and passed the National Plan for Childhood and Adolescence 2022–2024, which focuses government efforts to protect children and promote their rights, highlighting child labor as particular violations to the rights of children. In addition, the Public Ministry increased the number of prosecutions initiated of alleged child labor crimes from 47 in 2021 to 69 in 2022. However, children in Paraguay are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in domestic servitude and in debt bondage in cattle raising, on dairy farms, and in charcoal factories. Children with disabilities as well as those from rural and indigenous communities face difficulties accessing and completing their education. In addition, law enforcement agencies lack the funding and resources needed to sufficiently identify, investigate, and prosecute child labor crimes. Social programs also lack the funding and coverage needed to address child labor in rural areas.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

	Commercial sexual exploitation (3,6,13-15,17,18)
	Forced domestic work (3,6,10,13)
	Use in the production of child pornography (3,5,6,8,10,13,15,19)
	Use in illicit activities, including drug smuggling and drug trafficking (3,6,8,10,15)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Criadazgo, a practice in which middle-class and wealthy families informally employ and house child domestic workers from impoverished families, is pervasive in Paraguay. (3,6,13,15,17,18) Many of these children are in situations of domestic servitude, subjected to violence and abuse, and highly vulnerable to sex trafficking. (9,12,14,15,18) Lack of political will continues to prevent Congress from considering previously drafted legislation that would criminalize criadazgo, in part because of civil society concerns that a wholesale criminalization of the practice would give rise to a host of new challenges for the children involved. (6,20,21) Children are also subjected to commercial sexual exploitation in Ciudad del Este; in the Tri-Border area between Paraguay, Argentina, and Brazil; and along commercial shipping routes on the Paraguay-Parana river system. (3,6,13,15,22) In addition, the government has indicated that it is investigating allegations that children are recruited for use in forced labor in the production of marijuana in the Department of Amambay. (3,6,15) Furthermore, children work alongside their parents in debt bondage on cattle ranches, on dairy farms, and in charcoal factories in the remote Chaco region. (3,5,6,8,12,13,15)

Children from rural and indigenous communities face difficulties accessing and completing their education due to language barriers, inadequate facilities and staff, lack of identity documents, and little to no internet connectivity. (3,8,15,23) A study released in 2019 by the Coordinator for the Rights of Infancy and Adolescence of Paraguay estimated that half of all children in indigenous communities do not attend school. (24) Approximately 13 percent of children engaged in child labor in agriculture also do not attend school. (4) Indigenous children are particularly vulnerable to exploitation. (18) The government has also noted that girls from rural areas leave school at an earlier age than boys and has estimated that more than 50 percent of children with disabilities could not attend school due to lack of access to public transportation. (5) Such challenges may leave these children more vulnerable to child labor.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Paraguay has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Paraguay's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the lack of a prohibition of child recruitment by non-state armed groups.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	18	Article 1 of Law No. 2332; Article 58 of the Childhood and Adolescence Code (25,26)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 54 of the Childhood and Adolescence Code; Article 3 of Decree No. 4951; Articles 122 and 125 of the Labor Code; Article 15 of the First Employment Law; Article 5 of Law No. 5407 on Domestic Work (25,27-30)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 54 of the Childhood and Adolescence Code; Article 2 of Decree No. 4951; Article 15 of the First Employment Law; Articles 122, 125, and 389 of the Labor Code; Article 5 of Law No. 5407 on Domestic Work (25-31)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 5–7 of the Comprehensive Law Against Trafficking in Persons; Articles 125, 129, 223, and 320 of the Penal Code; Articles 10 and 54 of the Constitution (32-35)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 5, 6, and 7 of the Comprehensive Law Against Trafficking in Persons; Articles 125, 129, and 223 of the Penal Code; Articles 10 and 54 of the Constitution (32-35)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 135 and 223 of the Penal Code; Article 2.19 of Decree No. 4951; Article 31 of the Childhood and Adolescence Code (25,27,33,35)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 1 of Law No. 1657; Article 32 of the Childhood and Adolescence Code (25,36)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Articles 3 and 5 of the Obligatory Military Service Law (37,38)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Articles 3 and 5 of the Obligatory Military Service Law (37,38)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	17	Article 2 of Law No. 4088; Article 32 of the General Education Law No. 1264; Decree 6162 (39-41)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 76 of the Constitution; Article 32 of the General Education Law No. 1264 (32,39)

Children in Paraguay are required to attend school only up to age 17. This standard makes children age 17 vulnerable to child labor as they are not required to attend school but are not legally permitted to work without restriction on hours and times of work. (25,26,39-41)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Paraguay

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor, Employment, and Social Security (MTESS)	Enforces laws related to child labor; inspects workplaces for child labor; and recommends penalties or fines for companies found in violation of labor laws. Refers cases involving criminal violations of child labor to the Ministry of Adolescents and Children (MINNA). (6)
Paraguayan National Police	Maintain a special unit of 40 police officers known as the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Unit, which handles trafficking in persons complaints, including in relation to children. Maintain offices in five cities across the country. (42)
Public Ministry (Attorney General)	Investigates and prosecutes criminal cases of forced child labor, child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, the recruitment and use of child soldiers, and use of children in illicit activities. (3,15) Maintains the Specialized Unit to Combat Human Trafficking and Sexual Exploitation of Children and Adolescents. (8) Comprises 5 specialized prosecutors based in Asunción and 44 assistants. (42)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Paraguay took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor, Employment, and Social Security (MTESS) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient financial resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$119,089 (6)	$119,089 (3)
Number of Labor Inspectors	25 (6)	23 (3)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	Yes (43)	Yes (43)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	N/A (6)	Yes (3)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksite	1,177 (44)	1,766 (3)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	9 (6)	15 (3)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	13 (6)	11 (3)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	4 (6)	5 (3)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (6)	Yes (3)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (6)	Yes (3)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (43)	Yes (43)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (6)	Yes (3)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (6)	Yes (3)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (6)	Yes (3)

Research indicated that Paraguay does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties (3,45,46) Government agencies, international organizations, NGOs, and labor organizations agree that inadequate funding for resources like transportation, fuel, and necessary office facilities, as well as the insufficient number of labor inspectors, hamper the labor inspectorate's capacity to enforce child labor laws, especially in the informal sector, including in agriculture and domestic work, and particularly in rural areas such as the Chaco region. (3,5,13,15) Moreover, the MTESS, other government agencies, and NGOs agree that labor inspectors receive useful and necessary training, but that inspectors could benefit from more training specific to child labor. (6,13,15) An additional constraint to labor law enforcement is the lack of efficient and timely cooperation by judicial authorities in granting workplace inspection search warrants to the Public Ministry and the MTESS when an employer does not permit an inspector to enter a workplace to conduct an inspection. (3,13,15) Research was unable to determine whether the government has implemented a 2016 agreement with judicial and law enforcement authorities that would accelerate the authorization of search warrants.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Paraguay took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including a lack of resources to sufficiently identify, investigate, and prosecute cases of the worst forms of child labor.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	N/A (6)	Yes (3)
Number of Investigations	170 † (6)	171 ‡ (3)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	47 (6)	69 (3)
Number of Convictions	24 (6)	Unavailable (3)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (6)	Unavailable (3)

During the reporting period, investigators received several trainings on trafficking in persons as it relates to child labor, including a Spanish International Development Cooperation Agency-funded course on trafficking in persons, three EU-funded trainings on trafficking in persons, and a training funded by Partners of the Americas on assessing damages to survivors of human trafficking. (3) Paraguay also increased the number of prosecutions relating to child labor from 47 in 2021 to 69 in 2022. (3,18) Despite these efforts, government agencies, international organizations, NGOs, and labor organizations have observed a nationwide need for more specialized prosecutors to support local prosecutors and increase the Public Ministry's ability to investigate and prosecute cases involving human trafficking. (11) In addition, Paraguay's criminal law enforcement agencies lack resources like funding and fuel to sufficiently identify, investigate, and prosecute cases of the worst forms of child labor, especially in remote areas. Moreover, inconsistent application of fines and criminal penalties remain significant challenges in the elimination of the worst forms of child labor. (6,15)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including insufficient financial and human resources.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Commission to Prevent and Eradicate Child Labor and Protect Adolescent Labor	Leads government efforts against child labor and includes representatives from MTESS, the Ministry of Justice and Human Rights, the Ministry of Women's Affairs, MINNA, and other government agencies, and labor union representatives, industry associations, and NGOs. (47) The commission met four times during the reporting period to facilitate interagency communication and to refer cases to the appropriate agencies. (3) Coordination between MTESS and the Ministries of Education and Health remains insufficient to address the worst forms of child labor. (8,17)

Despite new efforts to facilitate greater coordination between agencies, interagency communication was lacking during the reporting period. (3,17) In addition, because of this inefficiency, coordination bodies have been unable to gather and report relevant data on child labor. (17) Further, coordination bodies have reported a lack of financial and human resources needed to fulfill their mission of addressing child labor. (8,17,48)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Paraguay

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Strategy for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of Working Adolescents (2019–2024)	Focuses on raising awareness and strengthening enforcement of child labor laws. Provides child laborers with access to free quality education and offers livelihood alternatives for their families. (8,49) In 2022, nine new Departmental Committees for the Eradication of Child Labor were created under the strategy to carry out activities at the local level. (3,50)
The National Plan for Childhood and Adolescence (2022–2024)†	Focuses the protection of children and adolescents on four main axis points: (1) strengthening the protective role of the family; (2) comprehensive protection of the rights of children and adolescents, including labor rights; (3) promotion and communication of the rights of children and adolescents; and (4) strengthening the national system's ability to protect and promote the rights of children. Each point mentioned in the plan is supplemented by a number of strategic objectives, including the expansion of protection programs linked to child labor and its worst forms, identification of high-risk situations that can lead to instances of child labor, and strengthening of health and education services. (3,51)
National Plan for the Prevention of Trafficking in Persons (2020–2024)	Aims to guide government prevention, response, and protection actions and establish prosecution and penalty guidelines for trafficking in persons. Also prioritizes institutional capacity building and coordination between government entities. (15,52,53) During the reporting period, Paraguay continued to implement the national action plan by building the capacity of government officials to prevent trafficking in persons. (18)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate coverage and funding to fully address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Immediate Response Network†	Program created to provide support to street children. Under the " Dispositivo de Respuesta Inmediata ," MINNA employees with a range of specializations, including psychologists and social workers, respond to tips from the MINNA hotline for reporting mistreatment, sexual abuse, sexual exploitation, and negligence of children, as well as information from roving street patrols in high-risk areas. (3,13) During the reporting period, the Immediate Response Network continued to respond to calls into their MINNA hotline and continued to refer at risk children to the appropriate government services. (54,55)
Embrace Program ( Programa Abrazo )†	MINNA program to assist children engaged in exploitative work by providing them and their families with health and education services, food deliveries, and cash transfers conditioned on children's school attendance and withdrawal from work. (6,8) Currently operates 53 attention centers in 12 of Paraguay's 17 departments, benefitting more than 10,000 children. (3) During the reporting period, two Embrace Program Care Centers opened in Pilar and Santa María de Fe. These centers provide vulnerable children and their families with the Embrace Program's services. (56,57) The centers had over 100 children registered for assistance at the time of opening. (56,57)
Well-Being Conditional Cash Transfer Program ( Tekoporā )†	Government-administered program through the Ministry of Social Development. Provides conditional cash transfers to families in rural communities. (6) Incorporates aspects of the Embrace Program, such as the family monitoring methodology, to ensure that participant children do not engage in child labor. (58) During the reporting period, the Government of Paraguay announced an additional payment to existing Tekoporā beneficiaries. A total of 177,000 families will receive 40 percent of what they are given bimonthly for this additional payment. (59)

† Program is funded by the Government of Paraguay.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (8,13,60,61)

In 2022, the MTESS carried out a number of awareness campaigns including the new "Child Labor Eradication" awareness campaign. (3) The Ministry of Women's Affairs also made improvements to its shelters to create a more comfortable environment for survivors of trafficking. The Ministry of Women's Affairs also updated its procedures regarding home visits to support reintegration of survivors who have left shelters. (18)

The 2012 Law Against Trafficking in Persons requires the Ministry of Women's Affairs to provide compensation and financial assistance to survivors of sex and labor trafficking, including minors, but NGO and government officials report that compensation takes too long to be helpful. (11,22,34) Although Paraguay has programs that target child labor, the coverage and funding of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, and programs are limited by the absence of government funding in education and health services in rural areas. Additional programs are needed to reach the large numbers of working children, especially in agriculture, including cattle herding, and domestic work. (5,11,15) Civil society has also stated the need for public outreach and education campaigns to provide children and their families with additional information on criadazgo. (21)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Paraguay (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2022
	Increase the compulsory education age from 17 years old to 18 years old to align with the minimum age for work.	2021 – 2022
	Draft and enact legislation to protect children from labor abuse under criadazgo , a practice in which middle-class and wealthy families informally employ and house child domestic workers from impoverished families.	2019 – 2022
Enforcement	Increase the number of labor inspectors from 23 to 249 to provide adequate coverage of the labor force of approximately 3.7 million people.	2009 – 2022
	Provide office facilities, transportation, fuel, and increased funding to the labor inspectorate, specifically in the Chaco region, to build enforcement capacity to address child labor in the informal sector, including in agriculture and domestic work.	2009 – 2022
	Implement the 2016 agreement to accelerate authorization of workplace inspection search warrants to improve the cooperation mechanisms between judicial authorities and labor enforcement officials.	2013 – 2022
	Publish information on the number of convictions achieved and penalties imposed related to child labor crimes.	2020 – 2022
	Increase efforts to prosecute crimes related to the worst forms of child labor, including by hiring and training specialized criminal investigators and prosecutors.	2012 – 2022
	Provide increased resources, such as funding and fuel for law enforcement vehicles, to enable increased criminal investigations in remote areas.	2012 – 2022
	Ensure that fines and penalties for those convicted of child labor crimes are consistently applied.	2019 – 2022
Coordination	Provide additional financial and human resources to all coordinating mechanisms so that they can fulfill their mandate, which includes collecting and reporting on child labor statistics and addressing child labor issues.	2018 – 2022
	Strengthen interagency coordinating mechanisms, with particular focus on the communication between the Ministry of Labor, Employment, and Social Security and the Ministries of Education and Health, to address child labor, including its worst forms.	2013 – 2022
Social Programs	Increase access to education for children vulnerable to child labor, particularly children with disabilities, young girls, and children with language barriers living in rural and indigenous communities, by addressing the lack of identity documents, infrastructure, staff, internet connectivity, and transportation.	2014 – 2022
	Ensure that financial assistance programs for child trafficking and forced labor survivors are properly funded.	2018 – 2022
	Further expand government programs to assist more families and children affected by child labor in agriculture in rural areas, including cattle herding, and domestic work.	2010 – 2022
	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2022
	Create public outreach and education campaigns to provide youth and their families with more information on criadazgo .	2022

In 2022, Peru made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government added all agricultural activities to its hazardous work list for children and passed a new law, which imposed higher fines for cases of commercial sexual exploitation as a result of human trafficking. The government also trained 300 judges on child labor laws and nearly 1,500 government officials on preventing and eliminating trafficking in persons and forced labor. In addition, the Protocol of 2014 to the Forced Labor Convention, 1930, entered into force during the reporting year. However, children in Peru are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in mining and in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in the production of rice and Brazil nuts. Peruvian law allows children ages 12 to 14 to do light work without specifying the activities in which children may work. Labor law enforcement agencies in Peru still lack sufficient inspectors and training to adequately address child labor, and the government did not provide complete information on labor law and criminal enforcement efforts against child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Peru.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	18.7 (1,213,785)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	83.0
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	18.0
Primary Completion Rate (%)		116.2

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2021, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2023. (1)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Encuesta Nacional de Hogares (ENAHOG), 2021. (2)

These data are not comparable with data presented in last year's report due to changes in survey source, survey questionnaire, or age range surveyed.

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Transplanting and harvesting rice,† and collecting and harvesting Brazil nuts/chestnuts† (3)
	Fishing† (4-8)
	Logging† timber and clearing forestland for mining, including cutting down and burning trees (4-7,9,10)
Industry	Mining† (8,11,12)
	Production of bricks† and fireworks,† construction, and metal manufacturing (5-8,10-14)
Services	Street work,† including vending, begging, shoe shining, carrying loads, selling in kiosks and markets, collecting fares on public buses,† and washing cars (4-6,8,11-13,15)
	Treating leather, repairing shoes, and tailoring (11,16)
	Repairing motor vehicles† (9)
	Garbage scavenging† (17)
	Working in restaurants, domestic work,† and cleaning offices and hotels (6,8,11-13)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced labor in mining, including gold mining (8,9,12,13,18)
	Forced labor in logging timber, street vending, and begging (8,12,13,18)
	Forced domestic work (8,12,13,18)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, including in bars, nightclubs, brothels, and logging and mining camps, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (8,12)
	Growing and processing coca (stimulant plant) and transporting drugs (8,12,13,18,19)
	Counterfeiting lightbulbs (8,18,20,21)
	Recruitment of children by non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict (8,20-23)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children in Peru work in informal and small-scale mining, particularly for gold, sometimes in situations of forced labor, and are exposed to hazards, including mercury and harmful gases, wall and mine collapses, landslides, and explosives accidents. (5,8,9,12,13,18,24) Communities located near illegal mining operations are often isolated and lack a permanent government presence, increasing the likelihood of child trafficking and the use of children for commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor in bars, restaurants, and other types of service providers. (8,9,12,13,18,20,21) Girls from Colombia, Ecuador, and Venezuela are also subjected to commercial sexual exploitation, domestic work, and forced labor in mining regions of Peru. (8,13,21,25) Children from indigenous communities are particularly vulnerable to labor and commercial sexual exploitation. (8) In addition, the Militarized Communist Party of Peru (MPCP), a remnant of the Shining Path terrorist group active in the Valley of the Apurimac, Ene, and Mantaro rivers, continued to use children in combat, forced domestic work, and drug trafficking. (8,12,13,20-23) Some children are also subjected to forced labor in the production and trafficking of drugs and may be exposed to hazardous chemicals when processing coca or working as drug couriers. (8,12,13,18,19)

While in-person classes resumed in March 2022 and the government supported a distance learning program (Aprendo en Casa), problems such as limited class sizes, long distances to schools, and lack of necessary documentation such as birth certificates or passports continue to hinder education access for many children, including refugee and migrant children, and may have exacerbated their vulnerability to child labor and human trafficking. (8,26-28) While education is free, school retention of Venezuelan migrant and refugee students was often impacted by their families’ lack of economic resources and sustainable livelihoods. (8)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Peru has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

On June 18, 2022, Protocol of 2014 to the Forced Labor Convention, 1930, entered into force in Peru, one year after ratification. (29)

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Peru's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the lack of prohibition of recruitment of children by non-state armed groups.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Articles 1, 51, 69, 70, and 73 of the Child and Adolescent Code; Articles 4 and 5 of Law No. 29981 on SUNAFIL (30,31)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 1, 56-58, 69, 70, and 73 of the Child and Adolescent Code; Articles 4 and 5 of Law No. 29981 on SUNAFIL (31,32)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 1 and 2 of the Supreme Decree No. 009-2022-MIMP and its Annex; Article 58 of the Child and Adolescent Code (32-34)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 2 and 23 of the Constitution; Article 4 of the Child and Adolescent Code; Article 129-O of the Penal Code (32,35,36)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 4 of the Child and Adolescent Code; Articles 129-A and 129-B of the Penal Code (32,35)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 4 of the Child and Adolescent Code; Articles 129-A, 129-B, 129-H--129-J, 129-L, 129-M, 179--181-B, and 183 of the Penal Code (32,35)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 46-D, 128, 296, 296-A, and 297 of the Penal Code (35)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Articles 2 and 23 of Law No. 29248 Military Service (37)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Articles 2 and 6 of Law No. 29248 Military Service (37)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	17‡	Article 17 of the Constitution; Articles 12 and 36 of the General Education Law; Article 61 of Supreme Decree No. 011-2012-ED (36,38,39)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 17 of the Constitution; Article 4 of the General Education Law (36,38)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (36,38)

In 2022, the government issued a decree amending the Regulation to Law 28868, putting in place higher fines for tourist restaurants and travel agencies failing to take appropriate actions to prevent and report cases of children being subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. (8,40) Also during the reporting period, Peru updated its list of hazardous work for adolescents through Supreme Decree No. 009-2022-MIMP and its Annex. (33,34) This action expanded the list from agro-industrial activities, which expose children to chemicals and fumigation, to all agricultural activities. (33,34,41) However, the Child and Adolescent Code includes a light work exception for children as young as age 12 without specifying the activities or hours in which light work may be permitted. (12,30) In addition, as the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (32,36,38,39) Peru also lacks legislation to prohibit the recruitment of children by non-state armed groups.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor and Promotion of Employment ( Ministerio de Trabajo y Promoción del Empleo [MTPE] )	Responsible for supporting the National Labor Inspection Superintendency ( Superintendencia Nacional de Fiscalización Laboral [SUNAFIL] ), which enforces labor laws by inspecting workplaces with more than 10 registered workers and referring cases of child labor to the Ministry of Women and Vulnerable Populations ( Ministerio de la Mujer y Poblaciones Vulnerables [MIMP] ) and the Public Ministry ( Ministerio Público - Fiscalía de la Nación or MPFN ), as appropriate. (4,6,42,43) SUNAFIL maintains a dedicated unit of 10 inspectors who target forced labor and child labor violations and who train other inspectors on these topics. (4,43,44) SUNAFIL has regional offices in Apurímac, Ucayali, Huancavelica, and Tacna, covering all 26 subnational entities of Peru. (6,45) Regional Directorates for Labor consist of one representative of the regional government, one representative of MTPE, and one representative of SUNAFIL. These directorates conduct inspections in workplaces with fewer than 10 registered workers. (46) The MTPE maintains an online reporting service to receive complaints of labor law violations and implements the child labor-free supply chains program "Child Labor-Free Seal" ( Sello Libre de Trabajo Infantil [SELTII] ) to help agricultural producers comply with child labor laws, including in rural agricultural zones that are difficult for the labor inspectorate to regulate. (47) During the reporting period, six different organizations were recognized with the renewal of their SELTI, which is valid for two years. (48) In November 2022, MTPE in collaboration with the ILO developed and carried out the first edition of online training called "Child Labor and Social Dialogue" for 110 people, including officials from the Regional Directive Commissions to Prevent and Eliminate Child Labor (CDRPETI) and SUNAFIL as well as representatives from worker organizations. (49,50)
Municipal Ombudsman Office for Children and Adolescents ( Defensoría Municipal del Niño y del Adolescente [DEMUNA] )	Under the umbrella of the MIMP, the 1,890 local offices, including 459 accredited offices, are led by an ombudsman that coordinates government policies and programs that aim to protect and promote the rights of children and adolescents. (51) Each of the offices work collaboratively with the MTPE and local municipal officials, including police, using the Municipal Model for the Detection and Eradication of Child Labor ( Modelo de Identificación del Riesgo de Trabajo Infantil or MIRTI ) referral protocol to ensure adolescents who are removed from hazardous work receive appropriate social services. (47,52)
Ministry of the Interior ( Ministerio del Interior [MININTER] )	Investigates child trafficking cases and maintains a hotline to receive reports of human trafficking. (14) Provides survivors and the public with information on human trafficking, refers cases of human trafficking to relevant government offices, and coordinates services for survivors. (14) Within MININTER, the Peruvian National Police enforces criminal laws regarding child labor and child exploitation and maintains the Office to Address Human Trafficking and Illicit Migrant Smuggling ( Dirección Contra la Trata de Personas y Tráfico Ilícito de Migrantes [DIRCTPIM] ) which investigates cases of child trafficking for labor and sexual exploitation. (53,54) Coordinates with MPFN and MIMP to place survivors with family members or state social services. (4,55) DIRCTPIM has approximately 150 investigators. (5) Municipal police also use MIRTI to work collaboratively with DEMUNA to remove children and adolescents from hazardous work. (47) MININTER launched a national awareness raising campaign for the National and World Day Against Trafficking in Persons that reached over 6,000 people at local fairs. (49) MPFN coordinates with MTPE, SUNAFIL, and PNP to investigate and prosecute criminal violations of child labor laws. Maintains a specialized human trafficking prosecutorial unit in the National Prosecutor's Office which operated in 14 out of 25 regions in 2022. (6,8)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Peru took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Promotion of Employment (MTPE) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient financial resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$47,000,000 (12)	$49,000,000 (8)
Number of Labor Inspectors	822 (12)	787 (56)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	Yes (31)	Yes (31)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	Yes (12)	Yes (8)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksites	629 (12)	Unknown

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor (Cont.)

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	34 (12,21)	56 (8,21)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	50 (12)	Unknown
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	Unknown	Unknown
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (12)	Yes (8)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (12)	Yes (8)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (58)	Yes (58)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (12)	Unknown
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (12)	Yes (8)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (12)	Yes (8)

Research indicates that Peru does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (59-61) In addition, many of Peru's inspectors are "auxiliary" or junior-level inspectors with limited authority to conduct inspections until they complete 2 years of service and an examination. Auxiliary inspectors must have tenured inspectors supervise their inspection processes and review their inspection acts for any businesses with more than 10 employees. (57,62) Funding also remains inadequate to carry out sufficient inspections and maintain facilities, and enforcement in the informal sector, in which many child laborers are found, is also insufficient. (12,63) In addition, the National Labor Inspection Superintendency (SUNAFIL) prohibits inspectors from conducting routine inspections of any given worksite on the same subject or issue within the same year. (12,64) Civil society and labor sector experts reported that training for SUNAFIL's labor inspectors is inadequate as inspectors are in need of more training on labor law compliance, and trainings do not occur frequently enough and are limited outside of Lima. (6,57)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Peru took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient financial resource allocation.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (8)	Unknown (8)
Number of Investigations	Unknown	Unknown (8)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown	Unknown (8)
Number of Convictions	Unknown	Unknown (8)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (65-67)	Unknown (8)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (12)	Yes (8)

In August 2022, more than 300 judges took the second edition of the online course called "Legal Framework, Regulations, and Actions to Combat Child Labor" and nearly 1,500 government officials received training on preventing and eliminating human trafficking and forced labor. (49) Through the U.S.-Peru Child Protection Compact Partnership, the United States and Peru provided support to seven shelters in Peru for child victims of human trafficking. (57) Despite these efforts, there is an insufficient number of shelters for survivors of the worst forms of child labor throughout the country, including shelters to serve boys, and a lack of specialized services for survivors of human trafficking. (13,24,55,68,69) Research has indicated that investigations and prosecutions were inadequate to deter child trafficking, particularly in illegal mining areas and bars. Moreover, reports noted too few investigators, insufficient funding or resources to carry out investigations, low conviction rates, and inadequate training for MTPE investigators, police, and members of the judicial system. (8,10,12,14,20,24,68)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Multisectoral Permanent Commission for the Follow-up to the Implementation of the Multisectoral Policy for Children towards 2030*	Launched on January 28, 2022, and created by Presidential Decree No. 001-2022-MIMP, the Multisectoral Commission is led by the MIMP, through its Vice Ministry for Vulnerable Populations (Chair) and Directorate-General for Children (Secretariat). It comprises 22 government officials from 16 different agencies— including the Ministries of Labor, Interior, and Education, as well as nine entities from other levels of government— and invites public-private partnerships, civil society, and international cooperation actors to participate on an ad hoc basis. (8,70) Its three main duties are: a) follow-up of the Multisectoral Policy for Children towards 2030; b) publish reports on urgent measures to be adopted by service providers; and c) issue an annual technical report. (70) Although some regional commissions under CDRPETI created action plans to address child labor as required by their operating rules, research could not confirm whether all Regional Commissions had done so during the reporting period. Additionally, most Regional Commissions lacked the funding to carry out these action plans. (49)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
Multisectoral National Policy for Children towards 2030 (PNMNNA)†	Aims to eliminate the worst forms of child labor by improving livelihoods of low-income families, providing better working conditions for adolescents, raising awareness of child labor, and increasing child labor law enforcement. (4,15) Also seeks to improve the quality of child labor data in Peru. (15) Through ministerial resolution number 292-2022-TR, on November 7, 2022 the government developed the Multisectoral National Policy for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor, which reportedly covers the time period of 2022–2030. (71)
National Plan to Combat Forced Labor (2019–2022)	Established policies and plans to reduce forced labor. (72) In 2022, the government released a toolkit to help providers refer children and adult survivors of forced labor to relevant information and services at the regional level. (73) The Regional Directorates for Labor and Employment Promotion also incorporated forced labor prevention measures into their regional or local plans, and approved a new project to assist human trafficking survivors to access jobs. (49)
National Policy Against Trafficking in Persons and its Forms of Exploitation (2022–2030)	Serves as the roadmap to prevent, control, reduce, and prosecute human trafficking crimes at all levels. (13) MININTER is the lead on all efforts and the plan focuses on expanding preventative monitoring; improving inspection, prosecution, and criminal sanction systems; and strengthening attention to and reintegration of survivors. (74) Under this policy, the government operates seven specialized shelters exclusively for girls exploited in sex trafficking in the regions of Cusco, Lima, Loreto, Madre de Dios, and Puno with a capacity for approximately 120 survivors. (21)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequacy of efforts to address child labor in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Secondary Tutorial Program†	Rural basic education program supported by the Ministry of Education that includes school meal plans ( Qali Warma ) for rural students throughout the country, including hard-to-reach indigenous communities. (47) The government continued to implement the program during the reporting period. (21)
Learn Program ( Yachay )†	MIMP program to increase access to social services for children subjected to street work, begging, and commercial sexual exploitation. The Street Educators ( Educadores de Calle )† program is part of the broader Yachay Program and provides counseling and training to children engaged in child labor, begging, and street work. (4,75) Operates 71 centers at the national level for educational activities, parent training, and workshops. (4,75) Connects working children and their families to educational and social services to withdraw them from exploitative work and improve family welfare. (5,75-77) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this program during the reporting period.
Together Program ( Juntos )†	Ministry of Development and Social Inclusion program that provides cash transfers to low-income households in 15 of the country's 25 regions. (4,78) The government continued to implement the program during the reporting period. (21)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of Peru.

Reports indicate that existing social programs are not sufficient to fully address the problem of child labor in Peru, including the large number of children who perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. Peru also lacks targeted programs to assist children who are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation and children who work in mining, logging, and domestic work. (8,20)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Peru (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum age for work from 14 to 17 to align with the compulsory education age.	2018 – 2022
	Establish a law criminally prohibiting the recruitment of children younger than age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure that light work provisions determine the activities and the number of hours per week in which light work may be permitted.	2017 – 2022
Enforcement	Publish information on child labor violations found for which penalties were imposed, whether they were collected, and the number of labor inspections conducted at worksite.	2015 – 2022
	Increase funding and resources for labor and criminal law enforcement agencies.	2015 – 2022
	Ensure adequate enforcement of child labor laws, including in the informal sector.	2009 – 2022
	Increase training for enforcement personnel on child labor and forced labor issues.	2019 – 2022
	Increase the number of labor inspectors from 787 to about 1,247 to ensure adequate coverage of the labor force of approximately 18.7 million people.	2019 – 2022
	Remove the "auxiliary inspector classification" to increase efficiency in the labor inspection process and allow inspectors to conduct follow-up inspections at any time.	2017 – 2022
	Publish information on training for criminal investigators, the number of investigations conducted, prosecutions initiated, and convictions.	2015 – 2022
	Ensure that criminal law enforcement officials conduct adequate investigations in mining areas and bars and initiate prosecutions when violations are found to deter perpetrators of the worst forms of child labor.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure that there are sufficient shelters, including shelters for boys, and specialized services available for survivors of human trafficking.	2019 – 2022
Coordination	Ensure that Regional Commissions for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor develop action plans to address child labor and allocate sufficient funding to implement these plans.	2010 – 2022
	Ensure that key coordinating bodies related to the worst forms of child labor are active, publish information on annual activities, and carry out their mandates.	2020 – 2022

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Social Programs	Enhance efforts to make education accessible for all children, including migrant and refugee children, by addressing barriers such as limited class sizes, long distances to schools, and lack of necessary documentation.	2014 – 2022
	Publish information on activities taken under all social programs that address child labor.	2018 – 2022
	Expand social programs to reach a greater number of children who perform dangerous tasks in agriculture; initiate social programs to address child commercial sexual exploitation, child labor in mining, child labor in logging, and child domestic work.	2009 – 2022

In 2022, the Philippines made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government enacted the Expanded Anti-Trafficking in Persons Act to hold private sector entities responsible for addressing human trafficking. It also enacted the Anti-Online Sexual Abuse or Exploitation of Children and Anti-Child Sexual Abuse or Exploitation Materials Act, which, among other things, punishes perpetrators of online sexual abuse of children and provides penalties for the production, distribution, possession, and provision of access to child sexual abuse or exploitation materials. In addition, the government launched a plan to improve the quality and delivery of education, address access gaps, and build resilience of learners. However, children in the Philippines are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture and gold mining. The minimum age for work of 15 is lower than the compulsory education age of 18, making children ages 15 through 17 vulnerable to child labor. Social programs also do not sufficiently support child victims of online sexual exploitation, and enforcement of child labor laws remains a challenge throughout the country due to limited personnel and financial resources.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in the Philippines.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	1.9 (458,631)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	92.0
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	2.0
Primary Completion Rate (%)		94.8

Services	Domestic work (3,4,11,12)
	Street work, including scavenging, selling flowers, and begging (3,9,13,14)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, including use in the production of pornography, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (4,13-17)
	Forced labor, including domestic work (3,4,17,18)
	Recruitment of children by non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict (3,19,20)
	Forced begging (3,9,13)
	Use in illicit activities, including drug trafficking (14)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Philippine children are victims of online sexual abuse and exploitation of children (OSAEC), in which children perform sex acts at the direction of paying foreigners and local Filipinos for live internet broadcasts that take place in small internet cafes, private homes, or windowless buildings sometimes referred to as “cybersex dens.” (3,12,17,18,21-26) The sector is highly profitable and growing due to increasing internet connectivity, widespread English language literacy, gaps in existing legislation and financial systems, and high international demand. (26) According to the latest available information published in 2021, 20 percent of internet-using children between the ages of 12 and 17 in the Philippines have been subjected to OSAEC. (14,18,25-27) Children from rural communities, primarily girls, are also subjected to trafficking domestically in urban centers and tourist destinations for the purposes of domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation. (4,18,21) Children in disaster-affected areas are targeted for sex trafficking, domestic servitude, and other forms of forced labor. As the Philippines is vulnerable to natural disasters including typhoons, tsunamis, volcanic activity, droughts, and erosion—and models indicate that the frequency and scale of these disasters will escalate in the coming years—an increasing number of children may be exposed to child labor. (26,28,29) In addition, perpetrators of child trafficking use student and intern exchange programs, use fake childcare positions, and take advantage of porous maritime borders to facilitate the exploitation of children. (21)

The recruitment and use of children by non-state armed groups, primarily the New People's Army and Dawla Islamiyah, remains a concern in the country. These children are used in both combat and non-combat roles, including as supply officers, medics, and cooks, and for running errands. (14,30,31) In addition, the Islamic State's affiliated groups reportedly have subjected women and girls to sexual slavery. (21) Despite the new administration's commitment to rehabilitate drug users and address the root causes of drug abuse in the country, lethal clashes between civilians and law enforcement officials continue, which resulted in the death of 14 children during the last 6 months of the reporting period. (14,32) Children are used in drug trafficking as pushers, possessors, employees at “drug dens,” and cultivators. (14)

Although the Constitution establishes free, compulsory education through age 18, unofficial school-related fees, such as for school uniforms, are prohibitive for some families. Other barriers to education include substandard infrastructure, which makes traveling and access to schools challenging, especially for children in rural areas, and architectural barriers that pose challenges for children with disabilities. (24)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

The Philippines has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in the Philippines' legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including a minimum age for work that is below the compulsory education age.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 137 of the Labor Code; Section 12 of the Special Protection of Children Against Child Abuse, Exploitation and Discrimination Act; Section 16 of the Act Instituting Policies for the Protection and Welfare of Domestic Workers (33-36)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2022, the government enacted the Expanded Anti-Trafficking in Persons Act of 2022, which imposes requirements and responsibilities on a multitude of private sector entities—including internet intermediaries, tourism enterprises, and financial intermediaries—to address and prevent trafficking in persons, including children. The act also identifies penalties for private sector entities if they are found in violation of the requirements. (14,40) Additionally, the Anti-Online Sexual Abuse or Exploitation of Children and Anti-Child Sexual Abuse or Exploitation Materials Act became law during the reporting period. This act provides additional protection for children against digital sexual abuse and exploitation. (14,43,49,50) As the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age in the Philippines, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (24,33-35,46)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE)	Bureau of Working Conditions (BWC) manages the labor inspection program that oversees inspections conducted by DOLE regional offices nationwide. BWC also oversees training of labor inspectors, manages the DOLE Labor Inspection Management Information System, and responds to queries and complaints regarding labor standards and working conditions, including tips on potential child labor cases, received through the DOLE 1349 hotline. (4,51) Inspects establishments and monitors compliance with labor laws in the formal sector. (52) Bureau of Workers with Special Concerns (BWSC) oversees the Profiling Child Laborers Initiative, a program to identify child laborers and remove them from child labor situations. (3,53) Mandated to develop policies, programs, and systems that champion the development and protection of disadvantaged workers by contributing to their decent and productive employment. Provides advisory and technical assistance to the Labor Secretary and regional offices. (54) Also oversees the Rescue the Child Laborers Quick Action Teams ( Sagip Batang Manggagawa ) that detect, monitor, and rescue child laborers in hazardous conditions. (4,9,13,51,52) During the reporting year, DOLE held events to raise awareness of child labor, including for the annual World Day Against Child Labor. (50)
Criminal Law Enforcement Agencies: Philippine National Police (PNP), National Bureau of Investigation (NBI), and the Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency (PDEA)	PNP investigates and prosecutes cases related to the worst forms of child labor. (4,13) Its Women and Children's Protection Center (WCPC) enforces laws on child trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children and has 269 personnel nationwide. (18) NBI investigates and prosecutes child labor cases and operates a national Task Force on the Protection of Children from Exploitation and Abuse. (9,18) Oversees the Anti-Human Trafficking Division, which investigates trafficking and illegal recruitment of children nationwide. (17) PDEA enforces the Comprehensive Dangerous Drugs Act, maintains a national hotline for reporting cases of children used in illicit activities, and coordinates with the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD) to assist during rescue operations. (9,13)
Cybersecurity Law Enforcement Agencies: National Telecommunications Commission, Dept. of Justice–Office of Cybercrime, Philippines Internet Crimes Against Children Center (PICACC), Dept. of Information and Communication Technology–Cybersecurity Bureau	National Telecommunications Commission enforces the Anti-Child Pornography Law. Coordinates with internet service providers to block websites containing pornographic material involving children. (25,49) Department of Justice–Office of Cybercrime receives CyberTips reports from the U.S.-based National Center for Missing and Exploited Children regarding potential OSAEC cases, conducts initial investigation into CyberTips, prioritizes cases, and then sends cases to PNP's Internet Crime Against Children Center for follow up. (55) Comprises legal and investigative divisions. (55) PICACC aims to combat the online sexual exploitation of children. Comprises the PNP-WCPC Anti-Human Trafficking Division and NBI Anti-Human Trafficking Division and aims to coordinate WCPC and NBI investigation of internet crimes against children. (18,56,57) Coordinates international investigations with the United Kingdom's National Crimes Agency (UK NCA) and the Australian Federal Police (AFP). (16,17,57,58) Receives funding from the UK NCA, AFP, and the U.S. Government. (59,60) Department of Information and Communication Technology–Cybersecurity Bureau provides preventative technological assistance to law enforcement and protects cybersecurity of Filipino citizens. (61) Oversees an anti-OSEC program comprising awareness-raising programs, computer software, website monitoring, cybersecurity, and a visible internet application, a form of artificial intelligence that allows for remote screen access. Shows an educational anti-OSAEC video in local communities, in collaboration with the Philippines Online Corporation. (61) Consults with telecommunications companies and civil society organizations to produce the National Cybersecurity Strategy. (42,61,62) Oversees CyberSafePH, an awareness campaign and capacity-building program with a 3-year roadmap aimed at addressing OSAEC and cyberbullying. (17,21,63) Reporting indicates that all of the aforementioned bodies were active in combatting child labor during the reporting period. (64) In 2022, PICACC successfully conducted 26 anti-trafficking in persons (OSAEC) operations that resulted in the rescue of 60 victims, arrest of 9 suspected traffickers, initiation of 19 prosecutions, and conviction of 5 suspects. (50)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in the Philippines took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient financial and human resource allocation to the labor law inspectorate.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$3,657,520 (4)	$3,700,000 (14)
Number of Labor Inspectors	1,210 (4)	1,210 (14)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	No (34)	No (34)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	Yes (4)	Yes (14)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksite	58,363 (4)	81,314 (14)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	5 (4,65)	5 (14)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	Unknown (4)	0 (14)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	Unknown (4)	N/A (14)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (4)	Yes (14)

Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (4)	Yes (14)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (4)	Yes (14)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (4)	Yes (14)

Research indicates that the Philippines does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (14,66,67) A lack of funding, equipment, and data further prevents the labor inspectorate from conducting inspections in all provinces and in the informal sector. (14) The Bureau of Working Conditions acknowledged that more specialized training on child labor is needed to enhance labor inspectors' ability to readily identify and act on child labor situations. (3,13)

Enforcement of child labor protections for children employed in the informal sector and in small and medium-sized enterprises, particularly in agriculture and fishing, falls to DOLE, which has in the past lacked financial and human resources. (3,9,13,18,24) The Rescue the Child Laborers Quick Action Teams are permitted to conduct unannounced compliance visits to video karaoke bars, massage parlors, saunas and bathhouses, and farms, but they are not authorized to conduct visits to private homes to search for underage child domestic workers. However, there are mechanisms available to barangay (neighborhood level) officials to permit them to investigate domestic work-related complaints. (3,9,13,14,64)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in the Philippines took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the Philippine judicial system that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including inefficiencies in court proceedings, which prevent victims from obtaining justice and restitution.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (4)	Yes (14)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

The Philippine National Police continued to refer children involved in drug trafficking to the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD), after which they were placed in either juvenile detention centers or Houses of Hope, which, in practice, closely resemble detention centers. (9,24,68) In 2022, police killed a 17-year old suspect after he allegedly drew a weapon during a buy-bust police operation. (69,70) The Department of Justice claimed that it would review over 6,000 killings committed during drug war-related police operations, but the process has been slow and ineffective, with only 52 cases filed in the courts and only 5 convictions of offending police officers. (64)

During the reporting period, officials from law enforcement, courts, and other parts of the government participated in trainings related to OSAEC and trafficking in persons. (14) Philippine law allows judges to award civil compensation to human trafficking survivors based on damages arising from being trafficked, but survivors rarely receive this restitution since perpetrators often lack sufficient assets to pay. However, in cases for which perpetrators are financially able to pay this penalty, many are able to evade doing so due to ineffective, slow court procedures. (18,28,64) Due to the high volume of cybercrime tips related to child sexual exploitation received by the Office of Cybercrime each month, there is the need for additional law enforcement personnel, funds for operations, and equipment for forensic analysis of digital evidence. (24,28) Slow-moving courts, the need for additional training on handling digital evidence, a lack of understanding regarding application of the legal framework to cases, and too few prosecutors also hindered the effective and timely prosecution of human trafficking crimes. (12,18,22,28) Law enforcement agencies raised concerns about a lack of resources, including staff and a centralized database for tracking illegal recruitment and human trafficking. This lack of resources impedes their ability to act quickly on complaints of child labor, including those involving OSAEC, through conducting investigations and initiating prosecutions. (17,28,64)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Council Against Child Labor (NCACL)	Chaired by DOLE and co-chaired by DSWD. (14,71-74) Membership includes 19 government agencies and organizations. (4,72) Coordinates national efforts to combat child labor and implements the Philippine Program Against Child Labor. (14,74,75) Promotes information sharing at the national, regional, and provincial levels, and is tasked with establishing and disseminating a child labor reporting mechanism for use by local and national authorities. (3,17) During the reporting period, NCACL held 4 regular meetings and its technical working groups held 20 meetings. The council discussed the proposed assessment of the Philippine Program Against Child Labor Strategic Framework, the redevelopment of Child Labor Knowledge Sharing System website, approved the resolution Urging Council Members to Accelerate the Provision of Necessary Services to Profiled Child Laborers, and approved a resolution supporting the Durban Call to Action on the Elimination of Child Labor. (14)

During the reporting period, the Inter-Agency Council Against Trafficking established the National Coordination Center Against OSAEC under the DSWD. The center will develop and implement programs to prevent children from being victimized by online and commercial sexual exploitation, and to provide protective services to and reintegrate into society survivors of the crime. (14,50)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
Philippine Program Against Child Labor Strategic Framework (2020–2022)	Aimed to gradually reduce child labor through consultations with government institutions, local and international NGOs, civil society organizations, faith-based groups, professional associations, academia, the private sector, parents, and children. (9,13,83) Implementation of the framework was led by the NCACL with DOLE serving as Chairperson and DOLE's BWSC and BWC as Joint Secretariat. (14) During the reporting period, stakeholders conducted an assessment of the plan and developed recommendations for implementation of the policy. Additionally, stakeholders proposed a Program Against Child Labor Strategic Framework for 2023–2028. (14,84)
Basic Education Development Plan (BEDP) (2022–2030)†	Functions as a strategic roadmap to improve the government's delivery and quality of basic education. Aims to address the impacts of the COVID-19 pandemic on learning, participation in learning, access gaps, education quality, and resilience and rights of learners. (14,48) Implemented and assessed by the Department of Education. Each level of governance (school, division, region, and national) will formulate their own basic education policies that will work to meet the goals of the BEDP. Department of Education's planning offices review the policies and plans of each governance level to ensure congruency with the national plan. (14,48)
Anti-Trafficking Policies: National Strategic Action Plan Against Trafficking in Persons (2023–2027)†	Approved to replace the Third National Strategic Action Plan Against Trafficking in Persons during the reporting period. Provides an overall direction for the Philippines to address labor trafficking and sex trafficking, including online sexual abuse and exploitation of children. Chaired by the Secretary of the Department of Justice and co-chaired by the Secretary of DSWD. Employs a multi-stakeholder approach to fight human trafficking. (14) Mandated to prevent and suppress human trafficking, and ensure victim recovery, rehabilitation, and reintegration into society through four key result areas: (1) Prevention, (2) Protection and Reintegration, (3) Prosecution and Law Enforcement, and (4) Partnership and Networking. (14,85)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (38,92,93)

During the reporting period, the Inter-Agency Council Against Trafficking completed an assessment of the Third National Strategic Action Plan Against Trafficking, which the council utilized to finalize the fourth strategic action plan. (14)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including a lack of adequate services for survivors of OSAEC.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Anti-Child Labor Programs: Child Labor Prevention and Elimination Program,† Livelihood for Parents of Child Laborers ( Kabuhayan para sa Magulang ng Batang Manggagawa ),† and Pantawid Pamilyang Pilipino Program (Conditional Cash Transfer Program)	The Child Labor Prevention and Elimination Program is a DOLE anti-child labor program that implements local awareness-raising campaigns, institutes child labor-monitoring mechanisms, and requires neighborhoods to develop child labor elimination plans. (9) Includes a provision of livelihood assistance to parents of child laborers, Sagip Batang Manggagawa, and Project Angel Tree. (9,76) The government increased the program's budget by 30 percent during the reporting period. (14) Project Angel Tree is a social service with local government agency benefactors, known as "angels," who provide educational supplies to communities. (53,94) The program conducted 96 gift-giving activities during the reporting period. (14) Livelihood for Parents of Child Laborers is a DOLE program that provides livelihood assistance to parents, guardians, or other family members of child laborers. Seeks to prevent and eliminate child labor by providing necessary materials to start a livelihood undertaking. (4) During the reporting period, the program provided 5,512 parents of child laborers with livelihood assistance. (14) Conditional Cash Transfer Program is a DSWD national poverty reduction program that provides conditional grants, local awareness-raising campaigns, and child labor-monitoring mechanisms to assist poor families with children's access to health care, adequate nutrition, and education. (3,9,18,95) Includes a child labor module on family development for program participants. (9,96) Covers 1,627 cities and municipalities in 79 provinces in all 17 regions. (3,9) During the reporting period, the program published a third quarter report on its progress. (64)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Program	Description & Activities
Strategic Helpdesks for Information, Education, Livelihood and Other Developmental Interventions for Child Laborers (SHIELD Against Child Labor)†	DSWD-led project implemented in 14 barangays in Catanauan, Labo, Jose Panganiban, Paracale, Kananga, and Ormoc City, with support from the ILO CARING Gold Mining Project. (51,53) Comprises three components: Child Labor Local Registry; Helpdesk and Convergence of Services; and Advocacy, Organizing, and Capacity Building. (9,97) Focuses on areas with a high child labor incidence rate, with interventions based on data from the Child Labor Local Registry. (97) Aims to eliminate the worst forms of child labor in the small-scale gold mining, deep sea fishing, and sugarcane industries. (3,9,75,98) During reporting year, recorded and addressed 1,400 cases of child laborers.
Recovery and Reintegration Program for Trafficked Persons (RRPTP)†	RRPTP is a DSWD and Inter-Agency Council Against Trafficking program that provides recovery and reintegration services to survivors of human trafficking and raises awareness in vulnerable communities. Includes the National Referral System, which strengthens coordination among agencies providing services to human trafficking victims using standard referral and reporting forms. (18,99) During the reporting period, RRPTP conducted trainings on trauma-informed care and gender-responsive case management. The program also developed the Implementing Rules and Regulations for the Expanded Anti-Trafficking in Persons Act. (14)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of the Philippines.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (106,107)

The Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency (PDEA) continued to coordinate with DSWD when dealing with children allegedly involved in drug trafficking. From July 2016 to October 2022, Philippine law enforcement arrested 4,679 minors. (4,14) PDEA policy is to turn children over within 8 hours of their arrest to "Houses of Hope" (Bahay ng Pag-asa), which are rehabilitation and skills training centers for children in trouble with the law. (4,14,108) Previous reports indicate that although there is an accreditation process for these facilities administered by the federal Juvenile Justice and Welfare Council, only a small number of Houses of Hope have met the qualifications, which allows for corruption, maltreatment of residents, and failure to provide quality rehabilitative services. Research from previous years showed that many Houses of Hope essentially operated as youth detention centers, in which some children were subjected to physical and emotional abuse, deprived of liberty, and forced into overcrowded and unhygienic cells. (24,51,108,109) According to the Juvenile Justice Welfare Council, council employees regularly visited the centers during the reporting period to ensure compliance with set standards. Their reports note inadequate food and clothing, inadequate staffing, limited programs and services, prolonged stays in the center, typhoon damage, and absence of psychologists in the centers. (14)

DSWD works in consultation with parents and community leaders to determine how best to assist children suspected of being involved in the drug trade; however, DSWD does not have programs specifically designed to increase protections for or assistance to children engaged in drug trafficking. DSWD also lacks programming to address the heightened vulnerability of children impacted by the death of familial breadwinners in the drug war. (9,110) In addition, although some specialized resources exist to assist victims of human trafficking, the Philippines lacked sufficient programs to care for and rehabilitate children who have been victims of OSAEC. (25)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in the Philippines (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum age for work from 15 to 18 to align with the compulsory education age.	2018 – 2022
Enforcement	Increase funding to allow for the hiring of more law enforcement personnel, including police and prosecutors, training for forensic analysis of digital online sexual exploitation of children evidence, and creation of a centralized database to allow for quicker action on cases involving the worst forms of child labor.	2019 – 2022
	Establish a mechanism to assess civil penalties for child labor violations.	2015 – 2022
	Increase the number of labor inspectors from 1,210 to 2,834 to provide adequate coverage of the labor force of approximately 42.5 million people, and increase resources available to provide sufficient coverage of the workforce, particularly in the informal sector and in rural areas where child labor is prevalent.	2014 – 2022
	Develop and provide specialized training for labor inspectors on identification of child labor.	2019 – 2022
	Allow Rescue the Child Laborers Quick Action Teams to conduct unannounced compliance visits to private homes to ensure that there are no child domestic workers being illegally employed.	2018 – 2022
	Publish information on labor law enforcement efforts, including the number of child labor violations for which penalties were imposed and collected.	2015 – 2022
	Enhance efforts to prevent the inappropriate incarceration of, and violence against, children suspected to be engaged in the production and trafficking of drugs and those caught in the crossfire during anti-drug operations.	2017 – 2022
	Prosecute law enforcement officials and civilians responsible for the killing of children engaged in the drug trade and officials who are complicit in trafficking.	2017 – 2022
	Ensure that youth rehabilitation centers, including Houses of Hope ( Bahay ng Pag-asa ), are accredited and in compliance with standards set by the Department of Social Welfare and Development and Juvenile Justice and Welfare Council.	2020 – 2022
	Provide criminal law enforcement officials training on laws related to the worst forms of child labor, including the proper handling of digital evidence in criminal trials.	2020 – 2022
	Prosecute trafficking crimes in a timely manner and hire more criminal prosecutors to lessen the workload.	2020 – 2022
	Develop procedures to allow for the efficient collection of restitution from convicted human traffickers and its transfer to their victims.	2020 – 2022
	Social Programs	Increase access to free, compulsory education by eliminating unofficial school-related fees and addressing issues related to inadequate school infrastructure, including architectural barriers.
Develop programs to increase protections for and provide assistance to children engaged in drug trafficking and children impacted by the death of a familial breadwinner to address their heightened vulnerability to child labor.		2017 – 2022
Ensure that Houses of Hope ( Bahay ng Pag-asa ) child detention centers in the Philippines do not subject children to physical or emotional abuse, that those who commit such crimes are held accountable, and that centers are provided with adequate resources to remedy overcrowding and unhygienic conditions.		2017 – 2022

In 2022, Rwanda made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government significantly increased labor inspectorate funding and conducted awareness-raising campaigns aimed at ending child labor, child abuse, and addressing human trafficking. However, children in Rwanda are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced domestic work. Children also perform dangerous tasks in informal mining, including carrying heavy loads. Reports indicate that children subjected to commercial sexual exploitation and forced street begging have been detained by government officials in transit centers intended for individuals demonstrating so-called deviant behaviors, where they often experience physical abuse. In addition, inadequate resource allocation for the labor inspectorate, including an insufficient number of labor inspectors, may impede government efforts to protect children from the worst forms of child labor. Finally, social programs do not address all relevant sectors in which child labor is present.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Rwanda.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	6 to 14	5.4 (156,522)
Attending School (%)	6 to 14	89.4

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity (Cont.)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Services	Domestic work† (3,10,13)
	Repair of motorcycles and motor vehicles (12,13)
	Street work, including collecting scrap metal,† lifting and transporting heavy loads,† begging, and vending (3,10,13)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (10,13,14)
	Forced labor in agricultural work, mining, domestic work, and begging (8,14)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Rwanda is a source and transit country for child trafficking victims, primarily those from Rwanda and neighboring countries en route to exploitation in Saudi Arabia, Uganda, Kenya, and elsewhere in East Africa, the Middle East, and East Asia. (8,15-17) Within Rwanda, young girls are forced into domestic servitude and commercial sexual exploitation, and boys are exploited in forced labor in the agricultural and industrial sectors, including on plantations and in mines. (14,16-19) Children between ages 13 and 18 are often exploited in sex trafficking in hotels, at times with the cooperation of hotel owners. Reports indicate an increase in domestic human trafficking, possibly due to the COVID-19 pandemic and restrictions on cross-border travel. Homeless and orphaned children, children with disabilities, and girls are at particular risk of being exploited in human trafficking. (14)

The government identified street begging as a growing problem in the country, noting that some families were renting out their children to individuals who would collect earnings from the children and pay a percentage to the families. (6,8,15) The closure of schools due to the pandemic may have contributed to an increase in forced begging, and children who begged typically worked almost 11 hours per day and were at risk of not returning to school. (6,15) National data show that approximately 3.6 percent of all children in Rwanda are engaged in child labor, primarily in the agriculture and services sectors. (7,20) In a survey of working children between ages 5 and 17 from 11 districts in the country, Rwanda’s National Commission for Human Rights reported in 2020 that more than half of the respondents indicated that they performed some type of hazardous labor, including carrying heavy loads and working in construction, brick kilns, and informal mining. (6,21) Officials also indicated that children living in mining communities often drop out of school and work in abandoned artisanal mines with their parents. (6,22) Poverty was identified as the key factor contributing to child labor, which in turn led to an increased incidence of children dropping out of school. (6,21)

Although the Ministry of Education established a policy that provides free basic education for 12 years, of which the first 9 are compulsory, in practice, the costs of uniforms, school supplies, and unofficial school fees may preclude some families from sending their children to school. (20,22,23) Furthermore, children with disabilities face particular difficulties accessing education due to stigma and because schools lack the capacity to accommodate special needs. (6,15,22,23)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Rwanda has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Although Rwanda has adopted policies, separate from the 2020 Law Determining the Organization of Education, to implement fee-free 12 years of basic education and compulsory education through age 15, the national education law stipulates that primary education is free and compulsory only through the first 6 years of schooling and states that education is compulsory only up to age 12. (20,36,37) The national education law also establishes English as the primary language of instruction, which may create a barrier to education for children whose first language is not English. (36) Furthermore, the age up to which education is compulsory makes children between ages 12 and 15 vulnerable to child labor because they are not legally required to attend school but are not legally permitted to work.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Public Service and Labor (MIFOTRA)	Enforces labor laws, including laws on child labor, in coordination with other government entities at the national and district level. (22) In partnership with the Ministry of Education, reintegrates children withdrawn from child labor with their families and enrolls them in school. Mobilizes other ministries and agencies providing social services, including the Ministry of Gender and Family Promotion, the National Child Development Agency, the Ministry of Justice, and the Ministry of Local Government, to take an active role in child labor law enforcement. (6,38)
Ministry of the Interior	Oversees the Rwandan National Police, the Rwandan Investigation Bureau, and the National Public Prosecution Authority. (10) The Rwandan National Police enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor through its Child Protection Unit and Anti-Trafficking Unit. (23,38,39) The Rwandan Investigation Bureau, in turn, conducts criminal investigations, including child labor cases, and through its Directorate for Anti-Gender-Based Violence, assists victims of the worst forms of child labor through anti-gender-based violence officers at each of the country's 78 police stations. (38) Both the National Police and Investigation Bureau operate a free hotline to report these incidents. (40) Finally, the National Public Prosecution Authority is responsible for prosecuting violations of labor laws, including laws on child labor, and through its Anti-Gender-Based Violence unit dedicates 12 prosecutors to work with an additional 60 prosecutors trained in handling relevant cases at the district level. (41)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Rwanda took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Public Service and Labor (MIFOTRA) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient allocation of human resources.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$166,705 (22)	$484,080 (10)
Number of Labor Inspectors	37 (22)	37 (10)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	Yes (24,42)	Yes (24,42)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	Yes (22)	Yes (10)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksite	9,432 (22)	5,076 (10)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	253 (43)	27 (10)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	8 (22)	27 (10)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	8 (22)	27 (10)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (22)	Yes (10)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (22)	Yes (10)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (44)	Yes (44)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (22)	Yes (10)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (22)	Yes (10)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (22)	Yes (10)

Research indicates that Rwanda does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (10,45) Furthermore, despite MIFOTRA's indication that the labor inspectorate was sufficiently funded, research finds that limited resources, lack of personnel, high workloads, and insufficient training may limit labor inspectors' ability to enforce child labor laws and perform onsite inspections, and that officials, at the local level, may have difficulty identifying characteristics of child labor. (8,10,14,22,41)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Rwanda took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Rwandan National Police that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including inadequate victim screening and identification.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (22)	Yes (10)
Number of Investigations	8 (22)	27 (10)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	8 (22)	27 (10)
Number of Convictions	0 (22)	Unknown
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (22)	Yes (10)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (22)	Yes (10)

In 2022, several human trafficking trainings were provided to Rwandan government agencies, including to the Ministry of Justice and the Rwandan National Police. (40) However, scarce resources and limited capacity of criminal law enforcement personnel inhibited efforts to investigate human trafficking cases, prosecute suspected perpetrators, and convict human traffickers. Observers also reported continued challenges in officials' ability to distinguish human trafficking from other crimes and reported a need for Rwanda's law enforcement agencies to conduct additional training and capacity building on recognizing and addressing internal forms of human trafficking. (14) Moreover, agencies lack a centralized database to share among law enforcement agencies, hindering coordination efforts. (17)

Recent reports indicate occasional detention of children engaged in so called "deviant behavior," such as street children, children engaged in street vending, and children subjected to commercial sexual exploitation and forced begging. Sources also indicate that these children are often detained in transit centers before being transferred to rehabilitation centers partly due to inadequate screening by law enforcement officials when identifying victims of human trafficking. (10,14,46) Research indicates that children placed in the primary transit center located in Kigali, also known as Gikondo, faced overcrowding, unsanitary conditions, insufficient food or water, and physical abuse. (23,47) Rehabilitation services at the centers were limited, and children were detained for prolonged periods at transit centers before they were referred to a rehabilitation facility or released back into the street. (15,48,49)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including poor coordination, training, and lack of resources aimed at addressing human trafficking.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Interministerial Steering Committee on Child Labor	Coordinates government efforts related to the worst forms of child labor; reviews child labor laws, advocates for the inclusion of child labor policies in national development plans, oversees the implementation of child labor interventions, and conducts field visits to assess the prevalence of child labor and raise awareness of child labor. Led by MIFOTRA. (10) During the reporting period, convened every quarter to discuss progress made and to address any challenges encountered by the committees. (9)

Rwanda

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Reports indicate that poor coordination, training, and resource constraints hindered efforts to address human trafficking and that efforts were focused primarily on transnational rather than domestic human trafficking. (15,41)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
Strategic Plan for the Integrated Child Rights Policy 2019–2024	Aims to improve coordination and implementation issues in child protection, including strategies to address child labor. Focuses on key areas of identity and nationality; family and alternative care; health, survival, and standard of living; education; protection; justice; and participation. (50)
Anti-Human Trafficking Action Plan	Focuses efforts on human trafficking prevention, victim protection and assistance, prosecution, and strategic partnerships with various stakeholders. (17,51)
Rwanda Urban Development Project Labor Management Procedure	Lays out specific responsibilities for the Ministry of Local Government to monitor and enforce child labor laws at the local level. Mandates that appointed local authorities conduct inspections, enforce child labor laws for rural development projects, and field child labor complaints from Grievance Redress Committees established at local worksites. (6,52)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (53,54)

The National Social Protection Policy includes measures to ensure access to education for children and assists families living in poverty; however, it does not integrate the prevention and elimination of child labor into the policy. (55) In addition, research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement key policies related to child labor in Rwanda during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate efforts to address child labor in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Programs to Combat Child Labor and Raise Awareness†	Includes Ministry of Gender and Family Promotion's (MIGEPROF) campaign to teach parents and community leaders to recognize risk factors for human trafficking and to identify victims; and the Friends of the Family Program ( Inshuti Z'Umuryango ), which trains volunteers to prevent and respond to child protection issues and establishes monitoring committees at various levels to address child labor. (38) While the Friends of the Family Program remained active during the reporting period, research was unable to identify specific activities undertaken to address child labor. (10)
Victim Assistance Programs‡	Musanze Child Rehabilitation Center in Northern Province assists children separated from armed groups in the Democratic Republic of the Congo. (10,23) Gitagata Center provides education, vocational training, and psychosocial support, and aims to reunite former street children with their families. Isange One Stop Centers located in 44 hospitals and district capitals assist survivors of gender-based violence and human trafficking. (10,14) In 2022, rehabilitation centers reported the reunification of 3,096 street children and Isange One Stop Centers conducted awareness campaigns and trained police stations, village leaders, hospitals, and health centers on how to properly identify child victims of sexual exploitation and abuse to prevent wrongful arrests. (10)
It Takes Every Rwandan to End Child Exploitation	Advocacy campaign against child labor and sexual abuse of children supported by MIGEPROF and World Vision Rwanda. (10,56) In 2022, World Vision Rwanda, in collaboration with the Rwanda Extractive Industry Workers Union, conducted a week-long awareness campaign through various districts. The campaign focused on child labor and child sex abuse violations. (57)

† Program is funded by the Government of Rwanda.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (58)

During the reporting period, the Ministry of Justice conducted human trafficking awareness-raising campaigns in 111 schools, reaching over 56,000 students and teachers. Human trafficking survivors volunteered to share their stories during these campaigns. (40)

Although Rwanda has programs that target child labor, research did not identify sufficient programming to address the extent of child labor in the agriculture and mining sectors, in which child labor is prevalent. Observers indicate that despite efforts to protect and assist victims of human trafficking, the country's shelter system was focused on short-term needs, with few resources for individuals needing long-term support. (16,40) During the reporting period, there was a decrease in the scope of human trafficking trainings and awareness-raising campaigns, and service providers lacked sufficient training to properly identify victims of human trafficking. (40)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Rwanda (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Increase the compulsory education age from 12 to 16 to align with the minimum age for work.	2020 – 2022
	Establish by law free basic public education.	2020 – 2022
Enforcement	Increase the number of inspectors from 37 to 117 to ensure adequate coverage of the labor force of approximately 4.7 million people.	2009 – 2022
	Ensure that the labor inspectorate has sufficient resources, personnel, and training to enforce child labor laws and perform onsite inspections.	2017 – 2022
	Ensure that criminal law enforcement has adequate resources to investigate, prosecute, and convict child labor crimes, and has sufficient training and capacity to address the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking.	2022
	Cease the practice of detaining and physically abusing children who work on the street and ensure that any children in detention centers receive adequate screening and services and are not subjected to abuse or unhealthy detention conditions.	2018 – 2022
	Improve the ability of law enforcement agencies to share data relevant to the worst forms of child labor.	2021 – 2022
Coordination	Ensure that coordinating bodies receive adequate resources and are able to address both domestic and transnational human trafficking.	2019 – 2022
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the National Social Protection Strategy.	2011 – 2022
	Ensure that actions are taken to implement relevant key policies.	2019 – 2022
Social Programs	Ensure that activities are undertaken to implement social programs during the reporting period and make information about implementation measures publicly available.	2020 – 2022
	Remove barriers to education, such as language barriers for non-English speakers, costs for uniforms and school supplies, and unofficial school fees, and ensure access for children with disabilities.	2010 – 2022
	Expand existing social programs to address all relevant sectors of child labor, including agriculture and informal mining.	2017 – 2022
	Expand services for human trafficking survivors, including programs for long-term care in shelters.	2019 – 2022
	Ensure that service providers are properly trained to identify victims of human trafficking.	2019 – 2022

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Although research found no evidence that child labor exists in Saint Helena, Ascension, and Tristan da Cunha, in 2022, the government made minimal advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. In 2022, the Government of Ascension enacted the Employment Ordinance, which details the conditions under which children may work, including acceptable work activities and hours. However, despite new initiatives to address child labor, Saint Helena, Ascension, and Tristan da Cunha is assessed as having made only minimal advancement because it continued to implement a practice that delays advancement to eliminate child labor. Research indicates that Saint Helena, Ascension, and Tristan da Cunha lacks a functioning labor inspectorate for the enforcement of labor laws and regulations. Labor inspections are a key tool for identifying child labor violations, and their absence makes children more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. In addition, Saint Helena, Ascension, and Tristan da Cunha lacks legislation to criminally prohibit forced labor, debt bondage, slavery, and child trafficking.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor exists in Saint Helena, Ascension, and Tristan da Cunha. (1)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

British Overseas Territories recognize the jurisdiction and sovereignty of the UK but are not constitutionally part of the UK. They are self-governing, except in the areas of foreign affairs and defense. (2) Domestic UK law does not generally apply unless explicitly extended to these territories. Saint Helena, Ascension, and Tristan da Cunha are three separate territories that generally incorporate English Law Ordinances to the extent permitted by local circumstances and subject to modification by local laws; several Saint Helena laws also apply to Tristan da Cunha. (2-4) Under Article 35(4) of the ILO Constitution, when the UK ratifies a Convention, the Territory must consider if it will accept the Convention. If the Convention is accepted, it is considered applicable to that Territory. (2,5) The following Conventions have been extended to and accepted by Saint Helena, Ascension, and Tristan da Cunha (Table 1).

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The Governments of Saint Helena, Ascension, and Tristan da Cunha have each established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 2). However, gaps exist in their legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of forced labor.

* Country has no conscription (2)

† Country has no standing military (14)

Saint Helena, Ascension, and Tristan da Cunha are considered one territory, but they are each self-governing. (15) However, all three territories share a governor and attorney general. (16) In January 2022, the Government of Ascension enacted the Employment Ordinance prescribing conditions under which children may work, including acceptable work hours and types of work. The ordinance took effect on June 20, 2022. (1,17)

While Saint Helena and Tristan da Cunha meet the international standard for the minimum age for work, Ascension does not because it has set the minimum age for work at age 14, which is below the international standard of age 15. (4,6,17) Ascension allows children to work in part-time jobs that meet the criteria of light work laid out in the ordinance. Ascension also has Youth Trainee Agreements, which act as apprenticeships for children who leave school at age 14 and which serve as a continuation of their education. (1,17) Full-time employment can only be offered to those over the age of 18. (1) Furthermore, while Saint Helena and Tristan da Cunha have set their minimum age for hazardous work at age 18 and have identified hazardous occupations for children, Ascension has not set either a minimum age for hazardous work or developed a list of hazardous occupations for children. (4,6,9,10)

Saint Helena and Tristan da Cunha have a law against the use of children in illicit activities, but this law does not apply to Ascension. (4,6,10) The laws prohibiting forced labor in Saint Helena, Ascension, and Tristan da Cunha are also not sufficient because debt bondage and slavery are not criminally prohibited. (7,10) In addition, while the UK Sexual Offenses Act, which is applicable to this territory, prohibits trafficking for sexual exploitation, it does not specifically address the trafficking of children, and there are no laws prohibiting the trafficking of children for labor exploitation. (8)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

Saint Helena, Ascension, and Tristan da Cunha lacks a functioning labor inspectorate for the enforcement of labor laws and regulations. (I)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for a mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor. (I)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, the following actions would advance the continued prevention of child labor in Saint Helena, Ascension, and Tristan da Cunha (Table 3).

Table 3. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict.	2020 – 2022
	Ratify the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution, and Child Pornography.	2020 – 2022
	Ratify the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2020 – 2022
	Ensure that Ascension's laws establish a minimum age for work of at least age 15.	2022
	Ensure that Ascension establishes age 18 as the minimum age for hazardous work and identifies hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children.	2013 – 2022
	Ensure that forced labor, debt bondage, and slavery are criminally prohibited.	2017 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the trafficking of children for labor exploitation.	2014 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the use of children in illicit activities in Ascension.	2015 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2022
Enforcement	Establish a functioning labor inspectorate for the enforcement of labor laws and regulations, including laws pertaining to child labor.	2021 – 2022

In 2022, Saint Lucia made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government renewed its Trafficking in Persons National Action Plan through 2026 and launched a new Border Control Management System that will assist authorities in identifying trafficking in persons cases. Additionally, members of the Human Trafficking Task Force and the Royal Saint Lucia Police Force partnered with U.S. Homeland Security Investigations for training on trafficking in persons. Although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Saint Lucia are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Saint Lucia has not determined by national law or regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited for children and its laws do not sufficiently prohibit the commercial sexual exploitation of children.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Saint Lucia.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	7.5 (2,017)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	99.7
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	8.2
Primary Completion Rate (%)		100.4

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2020, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2023. (1)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 4 (MICS 4), 2012. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,4)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

As the most recent survey concerning child labor in Saint Lucia was completed by the ILO in 2017, Saint Lucia lacks detailed data on the extent of child labor in the country. (3) Some government officials and civil society members reported that anecdotally some children are encouraged or forced to engage in commercial sexual exploitation in exchange for goods or services. (4,5) In some cases, women or teenagers are reported to recruit younger children to engage in commercial sex. (4)

Children in Saint Lucia under the age of 16 are entitled to free public education. (6) General gang-related violence might hinder some children from attending school in select localities. (5,7) Children who do not attend school are vulnerable to engaging in child labor.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Saint Lucia has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Saint Lucia's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of commercial sexual exploitation of children.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 122 of the Labor Code (8,9)

Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Article 27 of the Education Act (6)
Free Public Education	No		Article 16 of the Education Act (6)

* Country has no conscription (15)

† Country has no standing military (15)

Saint Lucia has not determined by national law the types of hazardous work prohibited for children. The law allows a government minister to establish a hazardous work list by regulation, although research could not determine whether a list has been established. (8) The use of children for commercial sexual exploitation is not criminally prohibited. (11-13) In addition, the law providing for free basic education does not meet international standards because it permits schools to charge tuition fees for some students who reside in Saint Lucia but are not citizens. (6)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Public Service, Home Affairs, Labor and Gender Affairs	Enforces laws on child labor through labor inspections conducted by its Department of Labor. The Department of Labor is responsible for investigating labor violations. (7) If found, criminal violations are turned over to the RSLPF for investigation and then to the Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions for potential prosecution. (7)
Royal Saint Lucia Police Force (RSLPF)	Enforces criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (7) Through its Vulnerable Persons Unit, in collaboration with the Division of Human Services, RSLPF investigates cases of child labor, abuse, and neglect. (7, 16) The Vulnerable Persons Unit consists of 2 units of 12 officers each and leads in the enforcement of child labor laws. It uses a specific manual to investigate crimes related to children. (7) Three officers are dedicated to trafficking in persons investigations. During the reporting period, the RSLPF provided anti-trafficking enforcement training via the Police Training Academy, in partnership with a local NGO, for government officials. (16)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Saint Lucia took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient financial resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

The government reported that the Department of Labor conducts planned inspections that include child labor, in addition to those carried out in response to complaints. Inspections took place island-wide in the construction, hospitality, tourism, finance, mining and quarrying, wholesale and retail, and manufacturing sectors, with an emphasis on the population centers of the North and the South. (7) Inspectors look for child labor and forced labor violations during all inspections, and the government reported that inspections conducted by staff were sufficient. (5,7) However, insufficient funding may hamper the labor inspectorate's capacity to enforce child labor laws in all relevant sectors and there was no training for new inspectors provided by the Department of Labor during the reporting period. (5,7, 19) The inspectorate is not authorized to assess penalties. Instead, the Department of Labor can refer suspected child labor violations to the police and public prosecutor's office for investigation. (7) When a case of child labor is found, children are primarily referred to the Ministry of Social Transformation and the Department of Social Services for social services. (7)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, the government's criminal law enforcement agencies appeared to function adequately in addressing child labor (Table 7).

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (17)	Yes (7)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (18)	3 (7)

Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (18)	0 (7)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (18)	Yes (7)

In 2022, the government launched their new Border Control Management System, which will assist authorities in identifying trafficking in persons cases. (16) Members of the Human Trafficking Task Force partnered with U.S. and Saint Lucian trainers for programs, including an overview of Saint Lucia's trafficking law, and worked through culturally appropriate case studies, site visits, and staff training. (5,7) In addition, public awareness campaigns, including radio broadcasts and pamphlets at the main ports of entry, and trainings were organized by the government, local non-governmental organizations, and international partners to sensitize the public to trafficking in persons issues. (16) The Human Trafficking Task Force investigated three separate cases involving four children but determined that trafficking charges were not applicable in any of the cases. (7)

There is special funding to manage operations aspects related to trafficking in persons cases, as well as the ability to fast-track cases in court. (5) Investigators and prosecutors received training on addressing child trafficking. (7)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Human Trafficking Task Force	Coordinates the identification and referral of human trafficking cases among law enforcement, social services, and immigration officials, under the Counter-Trafficking Act. Includes public servants and representatives from, but not limited to, the Department of Labor, police, and victim services NGOs, and is led by the Department of Home Affairs. (5,11,16) Accepts complaints, including those about child labor, from government agencies, as well as civil society. In such cases, the task force works through an established standard operating procedure to organize resources for victim care and to launch criminal and legal proceedings against suspected perpetrators. (7) Convened stakeholders, including the RSLPF, customs, probation, and parole officers, to receive U.S. Homeland Security investigation training. During the reporting period, reviewed its Standard Operating Procedure to strengthen internal processes and improve interagency collaboration. (16,20) The Department of Home Affairs requests funding from the Minister of Finance for operations. (16)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including covering all worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
Trafficking in Persons National Action Plan (2023–2026)†	Ensures that the division of tasks and roles of different agencies are clear to help coordinate all counter-trafficking measures. (21) During the reporting period, was updated to be valid until 2026. (16)
National Social Protection Policy (2014–2024)	Aims to ensure that the government addresses all dimensions of poverty. (22) In 2022, the government held public consultations for updating its National Social Protection Policy to enhance the responsiveness of social protections programs. (7) Revised policy includes increased support for vulnerable citizens. (22)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

Although Saint Lucia has adopted the Trafficking in Persons National Action Plan, research found no other evidence of a policy on other worst forms of child labor.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of programs to address child labor in relevant sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Education Quality Improvement Project (EQuIP)	Caribbean Development Bank funds an EQuIP within the Ministry of Education to improve policy formulation and review the Education Act. The project recently graduated 75 teachers from a certificate course in special needs education, provided equipment for four special education centers, and made climate-resilient renovations to three primary schools. (7) EQuIP is also piloting the formation of parent-teacher-community associations at several schools. (7)
Education Access Fund†	Department of Education, Innovation and Vocational Training program to pay facility fees for public school students at the primary and secondary levels. (23)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of Saint Lucia.

The government increased subsidies for some school costs such as transportation and school lunch, and allocated additional resources for smart classroom technology. (5,7) Although the Government of Saint Lucia has implemented programs to aid access to education, research found no evidence that it has carried out programs specifically focused on addressing child labor in all relevant sectors.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Saint Lucia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Determine the types of hazardous work prohibited for children in consultation with employers' and workers' organizations.	2017 – 2022
	Ensure that laws criminally prohibit using a child for commercial sexual exploitation.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the military recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure that laws providing free basic education include all children in Saint Lucia, including non-citizens.	2022
Enforcement	Ensure that the labor inspectorate receives sufficient funding.	2015 – 2022
	Collect and publish labor law enforcement data, including information on labor inspectorate funding and the number of inspectors, and strengthen the labor inspectorate by initiating targeted inspections based on analysis of data related to risk-prone sectors and patterns of serious incidents.	2022
	Ensure that all inspectors receive training related to child labor.	2022
	Ensure that adequate resources are allocated to the labor inspectorate to enforce labor laws, including funding.	2022
Government Policies	Adopt policies that not only address trafficking in persons, but also address all worst forms of child labor.	2010 – 2022
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2017 – 2022
	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers to education, and make it accessible for all children by ensuring that gang violence does not affect school attendance.	2018 – 2022
	Design, implement, fund, and participate in social programs that specifically target and assist children engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation.	2013 – 2022

Saint Vincent and the Grenadines

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

In 2022, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government passed amendments to the Prevention of Trafficking in Persons Act to strengthen penalties for offenders. Although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Saint Vincent and the Grenadines engage in child labor in agriculture. Gaps remain in the legal framework, as Saint Vincent and the Grenadines does not fully meet international standards because the use of children for prostitution, pornography, or pornographic performances is not prohibited. In addition, the minimum age for hazardous work falls below international standards and there is no legislation prohibiting the using, procuring, and offering of children in illicit activities, including in the production of drugs. The government also did not publicly release information on its labor law enforcement efforts.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Saint Vincent and the Grenadines. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		115.6

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2020, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2023. (1)
Data were unavailable from International Labor Organization's analysis, 2023. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, activities unknown (3)

All children in the country are able to access education; however, inadequate public transportation for children in rural villages causes them to walk long distances to get to school, which may make attending school difficult. (4-7) Children out of school are vulnerable to engaging in child labor.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Saint Vincent and the Grenadines has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Saint Vincent and the Grenadines

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Saint Vincent and the Grenadines' legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including inadequate hazardous work protections.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Article 8 of the Employment of Women, Young Persons, and Children Act (8)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No	14	Schedule, Part I, Articles 1, 2, and 5 of the Employment of Women, Young Persons, and Children Act (8)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No		Part I, Sections 3 and 4, and Articles 1, 2, and 5 of the Employment of Women, Young Persons, and Children Act; Section VI(37) of the Saint Vincent and the Grenadines Occupational Safety and Health Act of 2017 (8,9)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Chapter XII, Part 207 of the Criminal Code (10)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Part II, Articles 5–8 of the Prevention of Trafficking in Persons Act (11,12)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Part II, Article 7 of the Prevention of Trafficking in Persons Act; Chapter VIII, Parts 130 and 131 of the Criminal Code; Section 15 of the Cybercrime Act (10-13)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	N/A*
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*†
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Part I, Article 2 of the Education Act (5)
Free Public Education	Yes		Part III, Articles 14–16 of the Education Act (5)

* Country has no conscription (14)

† Country has no standing military (15)

In March of 2023, Parliament unanimously passed amendments to the Prevention of Trafficking in Persons Act to strengthen penalties for offenders. (12, 16, 17) The amendments remove the possibility of receiving a monetary fine as a penalty for trafficking offenses, and instead impose criminal penalties. (12, 17)

Saint Vincent and the Grenadines does not meet the international standard for hazardous work for children because it allows children ages 14 to 17 to perform industrial activities, including mining and construction, and does not adequately protect children from hazardous work that may jeopardize their health, safety, or morals. (8)

Saint Vincent and the Grenadines

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

The government also has not determined by national law or regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited for all children under age 18. (8,9) In addition, laws have not been established that prohibit the use of children in illicit activities, including drug production. The law does not fully meet international standards for the prohibition of commercial sexual exploitation of children, as it does not prohibit the use of children for prostitution, pornography, or pornographic performances. (11) Moreover, as the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (5)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor	Enforces child labor laws through its Department of Labor and refers victims to appropriate social services. (4) If the Department finds a criminal violation, it forwards the case to the Royal Saint Vincent and the Grenadines Police Force. (18) Conducts inspections at businesses and workplaces, with the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Unit (ATIPU), to ensure labor laws are followed. (19)
Royal Saint Vincent and the Grenadines Police Force	Makes criminal arrests, including those involving the worst forms of child labor. Addresses human trafficking through its ATIPU; refers survivors to appropriate social services and funds financial requests made by ATIPU. (18,20) During the reporting period, held a "Walk Against Human Trafficking" and panel to raise awareness of labor and sex trafficking. (17)
Office of the Director of Public Prosecution	Prosecutes criminal violations, including those related to the worst forms of child labor. (18)

Labor Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether labor law enforcement agencies in Saint Vincent and the Grenadines took actions to address child labor (Table 6).

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$591,907 (7)	Unknown
Number of Labor Inspectors	6 (18)	Unknown
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	No (21)	No (21)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	N/A (7)	Unknown
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksite	35 (7)	Unknown
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	0 (18)	Unknown
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	N/A	Unknown
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	N/A	Unknown
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (18)	Unknown

Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (18)	Unknown
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (18)	Unknown
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (18)	Unknown

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Saint Vincent and the Grenadines took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient allocation of financial and human resources.

Saint Vincent and the Grenadines

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (22,23)	Yes (19)
Number of Investigations	0 (18)	0 (19)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	0 (18)	0 (19)
Number of Convictions	0 (18)	0 (19)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	No (18)	N/A (19)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (18)	Yes (19)

In 2022, only data on child trafficking was reported by the government, and information about the number of investigations, prosecutions, convictions, and penalties imposed for other worst forms of child labor is not known. Reports indicate that insufficient resources, including limited personnel and vehicles, hampered the capacity of the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Unit (ATIPU) to address human trafficking throughout the country. (20) In 2022, ATIPU was staffed by two people, which the government reported was inadequate. (24)

In 2022, ATIPU officers received training on evidence collection and increasing the quality of victim services in courses offered by the Federal Bureau of Investigations, the Bureau of International Narcotics and Law Enforcement Affairs, and regional counterparts from the Royal Jamaican Constabulary. (17) Training on child trafficking and victim identification was provided for 108 police recruits. (19) There is a dedicated human trafficking hotline and a monitored e-mail address to report suspected cases to ATIPU. (24) ATIPU increased patrols in at-risk areas and during Carnival. (17) When a victim is identified, they are interviewed by ATIPU then referred to the Crisis Centre or other social services while the investigation is launched. (19)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including the lack of a mechanism to address all forms of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Task Force Against Trafficking in Persons	Coordinates government policies and efforts to prevent and eliminate human trafficking, and coordinates training. Comprises senior officials within the government and members of civil society; chaired by the Prime Minister. (19) Develops plans to provide housing, employment, education, counseling, and other services to victims, and coordinates the collection and sharing of human trafficking data among government agencies. (11) The government did not report how often the National Task Force met during the reporting period. (24)

Although Saint Vincent and the Grenadines has a National Task Force Against Trafficking in Persons to coordinate efforts to address human trafficking, there is no coordinating mechanism to address other forms of child labor. (11)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including coverage of all worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Plan of Action Against Trafficking in Persons (2021–2025)	Establishes procedures to eradicate human trafficking, including training for frontline staff and other relevant stakeholders; conducts awareness-raising campaigns, and provides victim protection and assistance. (25) Government continued to fund and support the Plan during the reporting year, but did not report whether the budget was sufficient. (24)
Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) on Countering Human Trafficking in Saint Vincent and the Grenadines	Coordinates anti-TIP implementation efforts between signatory agencies and the ATIPU. Includes the Department of Labor, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Social Services Division, Police, and others. (20) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the MOU during the reporting period.

Although Saint Vincent and the Grenadines has adopted the National Plan of Action Against Trafficking in Persons, research found no evidence of a policy on other forms of child labor.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the lack of programs to address child labor in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Zero Hunger Trust Fund†	Government program that provides textbooks, cash for the purchase of school supplies, and daily meals to students in grades 4 and 5 in 12 primary schools. Seeks to alleviate poverty and improve the standard of living of primary school-age children through its "Adopt a Classroom" program. (26) Active in 2022. (26)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>
 † Program is funded by the Government of Saint Vincent and the Grenadines.

During the reporting period, the Government of Saint Vincent and the Grenadines provided resources toward human trafficking awareness campaigns, including placing banners at the cruise ship port and broadcasting a live radio program. (17, 19) Sessions on human trafficking were also organized for 341 individuals at children's summer camps and schools, providing training for at-risk populations. (17) Although the government has implemented a program to address educational and food needs, research found no evidence that it has carried out programs specifically to address child labor, including in agriculture.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Saint Vincent and the Grenadines (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Establish 18 as the minimum age for hazardous work and identify hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children.	2009 – 2022
	Ensure that laws criminally prohibit the use of children for prostitution, pornography, and pornographic performances.	2017 – 2022
	Ensure that laws criminally prohibit the use, procuring, and offering of children for illicit activities, including in the production of drugs.	2011 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2022
	Raise the minimum age for work from 14 to 16 to align with the compulsory education age.	2018 – 2022
Enforcement	Establish a mechanism to assess civil penalties for child labor violations.	2016 – 2022
	Increase resources, including personnel and vehicles, for the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Unit to expand their capacity to address human trafficking throughout the country.	2017 – 2022

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Collect and publish labor law enforcement data, including information on the number of inspectors, inspectorate funding, the number of worksite inspections, the number of unannounced inspections conducted, training, and number of child labor law violations.	2022
	Publish information about the complaint mechanism to receive child labor complaints and the referral mechanism between labor authorities and social services.	2022
	Publish comprehensive criminal law enforcement data on all worst forms of child labor.	2022
Coordination	Establish a coordinating mechanism to prevent and eliminate all worst forms of child labor.	2019 – 2022
	Publish information about the activities and meetings of the National Task Force Against Trafficking in Persons.	2022
Government Policies	Adopt a policy that addresses all relevant forms of child labor, such as farming.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that resources and budget for the National Plan of Action Against Trafficking in Persons are sufficient to support its activities.	2022
	Ensure that activities are undertaken to implement the Memorandum of Understanding on Countering Human Trafficking in Saint Vincent and the Grenadines and publish results from activities implemented on an annual basis.	2019 – 2022
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2017 – 2022
	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education accessible for all children, including children in rural communities, by providing public transportation.	2018 – 2022
	Institute a program to address child labor in agriculture.	2021 – 2022

In 2022, Samoa made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. In partnership with the International Labor Organization, the government conducted a Rapid Assessment Survey of Child Vendors, finding a 27 percent increase compared to the same study conducted in 2015. It also provided information on its labor law and criminal law enforcement efforts, including the number of labor inspectors, for the first time for inclusion in this report. However, although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Samoa are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in the production and trafficking of drugs. Children also engage in dangerous tasks in street work, including begging and vending. Samoa lacks laws that prohibit using, procuring, or offering children for illicit activities, including for the production and trafficking of drugs. Furthermore, as the minimum age for work of 15 is lower than the compulsory education age of 16, children in Samoa may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Samoa. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

In partnership with the ILO, the government conducted a Rapid Assessment Survey of Child Vendors, finding a 27 percent increase compared to the same study conducted in 2015. (4) The 2015 study found 106 children working as vendors in the streets in Samoa, while the 2022 study found a total of 135 child street vendors. (3,10) Children who participate in street vending may work long hours, work late at night, be exposed to exhaust fumes, and have an increased risk of being hit by passing traffic. (3,11,12)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Samoa has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Samoa's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including a failure to criminalize the use of children in illicit activities.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 51 of the Labor and Employment Relations Act (13)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 51 of the Labor and Employment Relations Act (13)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 51 of the Labor and Employment Relations Act; Article 21 of the Labor and Employment Relations Regulations; Government of Samoa Public Notice on Hazardous Work for Children (13-15)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	No		Article 8 of the Constitution; Articles 2 and 18 of the Labor and Employment Relations Act; Section 157 of the Crimes Act (13, 16, 17)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Sections 155–157 of the Crimes Act (17)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Sections 73, 74, 82, and 157 of the Crimes Act (17)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	N/A†
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A†
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No		Article 8 of the International Criminal Court Act (18)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 2 (Section 2) of the Education Amendment Act (19)
Free Public Education	No

† Country has no standing military (18)

The Labor and Employment Relations Regulations permit children between ages 12 and 14 to engage in light work for a limited number of hours; however, they neither specify the conditions under which light work may be undertaken nor define the activities that are permitted. The types of hazardous work prohibited for children do not cover street work, including begging and vending. (7, 13-15) As the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. The Education Amendment Act 2019 raised the compulsory education age to 16. (13) In addition, there is no free basic education for children in Samoa as established by law, increasing the risk of children's involvement in child labor. (19, 20)

Laws prohibiting forced labor are not sufficient because, while they do criminalize forced labor, they do not also criminalize slavery and practices similar to slavery or debt bondage. (13,16,17) Samoa does not meet the international standard for the prohibition of child commercial sexual exploitation because the Government of Samoa's Crimes Act does not protect children ages 16 to 18. (7,17) Research found no evidence of laws that ban using, procuring, or offering of children for illicit activities, including for the production and trafficking of drugs. (12,21) Samoa also does not meet the international standard for prohibiting non-state military recruitment because its International Criminal Court Act does not apply to children ages 15 to 18. (18)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Commerce, Industry, and Labor (MCIL)	Enforces the Labor and Employment Relations Act, which includes investigating complaints of child labor law violations. (22,23) Refers cases to the Ministry of Police and the Office of the Attorney General for enforcement. (23)
Ministry of Police, Prisons, and Corrections Services	Enforces criminal laws related to child labor. (11,23)
Office of the Attorney General	Prosecutes criminal cases of the worst forms of child labor. (23)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Samoa appeared to function adequately in addressing child labor (Table 6).

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown (11)	$47,514 (4)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, the government's criminal law enforcement agencies appeared to function adequately in addressing child labor (Table 7).

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Child Labor Taskforce	Comprises MCIL; Ministry of Police, Prisons, and Corrections; Ministry of Women, Community, and Social Development (MWCSD); and Ministry of Education, Sports, and Culture. Aims to reduce the prevalence of child vendors in towns and cities through patrol sweeps and conducting outreach activities. (23) Formerly the Child Vending Task Force. (23) During the reporting period, the Child Labor Taskforce held three meetings focused on the 2022 Rapid Assessment Survey of Child Vendors. (4)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Child Care and Protection Policy (2020–2030)	Sets a strategic and high-level direction for child protection in Samoa. Led by MWCSD. (4) Includes policies to prevent, eliminate, and address all forms of child labor and child trafficking, as well as to regulate, monitor, and evaluate child labor in the formal and informal business and employment sectors. (25) During the reporting period, MWCSD implemented community awareness programs and facilitated the Inter-Agency Essential Services Guide on a range of social issues pertaining to children. (26)
United Nations Pacific Strategy (2018–2022)	Addressed, developed, and implemented strategic economic development priorities in the South Pacific, including eliminating child labor and the worst forms of child labor. A multinational strategic framework program that consisted of 14 South Pacific nations. (27) Activities during the reporting period were conducted under the UNICEF Pacific Multi-Country Child Protection Program (2018–2022). (28,29)

The government has not integrated child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the Strategy for the Development of Samoa or the Education Sector Plan (2019–2024), which detail the Government of Samoa's goals and key outcomes regarding education and development priorities. (30,31)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate programs to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
UNICEF Pacific Multi-Country Child Protection Program (2018–2022)	$19 million, Government of Australia-funded, 4-year project implemented by UNICEF in 14 Pacific Island countries, aligned with the UN Pacific Strategy 2018–2022. Prioritizes children's rights including the elimination of the worst forms of child labor. (27,28) UNICEF has extended the program to 2023–2037, with approximately $27 million allocated for child protection programs, including programs focused on eliminating child labor. (32)
The Samoa School Fee Grant Scheme and Government Grant to Mission and Public Schools†	Provide financial support to families to assist with ancillary school fees, supplies, and equipment that their children may need during the school year. (11,33) Both programs were active during the reporting period. (26)
One Government Grant†	Provides direct financial support to Samoan primary and secondary public schools, mission and private schools, and primary schools for students with disabilities and special needs to offset fees normally charged to students. (34,35) The government allocated approximately $6.5 million for the One Government Grant in fiscal year 2022–2023. (26)

† Program is funded by the Government of Samoa.

Although the government has implemented educational support programs, research found no evidence that it has carried out programs specifically designed to assist children engaged in street work, including vending.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Samoa (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2017 – 2022
	Establish by law free basic public education.	2020 – 2022
	Ensure that the Labor and Employment Relations Regulations specify the conditions under which light work may be undertaken and define the activities that are permitted.	2013 – 2022
	Ensure that the types of work that children perform in Samoa that include work for long hours and in an unhealthy environment, including street work, are prohibited for children under age 18.	2022
	Raise the minimum age for work from 15 to 16 to align with the compulsory education age.	2019 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits using, procuring, or offering of a child for illicit activities, including for the production and trafficking of drugs.	2014 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits commercial sexual exploitation of children ages 16 to 18.	2018 – 2022
Enforcement	Ensure that laws prohibiting forced labor criminalize slavery and practices similar to slavery or debt bondage.	2021 – 2022
	Strengthen the inspection system by permitting and conducting unannounced inspections.	2022
Government Policies	Integrate strategies to eliminate and prevent child labor into the Strategy for the Development of Samoa and the Education Sector Plan.	2012 – 2022
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor in Samoa to inform policies and programs.	2017 – 2022
	Institute programs designed to address child labor in street work, including vending.	2009 – 2022

In 2022, São Tomé and Príncipe made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government continued to fund three centers run by NGOs that assist vulnerable families, orphans, and children living and working on the street. However, children in São Tomé and Príncipe are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. The Labor Code does not apply to children working outside of a formal labor relationship, such as children who are self-employed. Moreover, limited financial resources hampered law enforcement efforts, and policies addressing the worst forms of child labor do not exist.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in São Tomé and Príncipe. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	14.2 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	92.5
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	23.3
Primary Completion Rate (%)		84.4

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2017, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2023. (1)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 6 (MICS6), 2019. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming,† including weeding and fertilizing† (3-5)
	Fishing,† including line and hook fishing (3-6)
Industry	Carpentry and woodworking (6,7)
	Construction† (3,7)
Services	Working in shops, restaurants, and bars† (3,4,6,7)
	Street work,† including begging and street vending† (3,6,7)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation (7,8)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Reports indicate that children with a disability, especially those with mobility or hearing difficulties, may have limited access to education. (4,6)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

São Tomé and Príncipe has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

São Tomé and Príncipe

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in São Tomé and Príncipe's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including a lack of minimum age protections for children working outside of a formal labor relationship.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	15	Articles 268(2) and 269 of the Labor Code (9)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 273(2), 274, and 536 of the Labor Code; Article 171 of the Civil Code (9,10)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Hazardous Work List in Annex IV of the Labor Code (9)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	No		Articles 159 and 160 of the Penal Code (11)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 160 and 181 of the Penal Code (11)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 179–182 of the Penal Code (11)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 279, 280, and 289 of the Penal Code (11)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	17	Legislation title unknown (12)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 1 of Decree-Law 3/83 (13)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15‡	Articles 11 and 12 of the Basic Education System Law (14)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 12 of the Basic Education System Law (14)

‡ Age calculated based on available information. (14)

The Labor Code permits children, who have completed their compulsory education, to perform light work that is not deemed harmful to their health or development; however, this framework does not establish a minimum age for light work, and legislation specifying the activities and conditions in which light work may be undertaken has yet to be adopted. (9) Minimum age protections contained in the Labor Code also do not apply to children working outside of a formal labor relationship, such as children who are self-employed. (9,15) Furthermore, laws prohibiting forced labor are not sufficient as they do not criminalize practices similar to slavery or debt bondage and forced or compulsory labor. (11)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Health and Social Affairs (previously the Ministry of Labor, Solidarity, Family and Professional Training)	Enforces labor laws, including child labor. (6,7,16)
Ministry of Justice, Public Administration and Human Rights (MOJ)	Enforces criminal laws against the worst forms of child labor. (7,16)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in São Tomé and Príncipe took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Health and Social Affairs that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient financial resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$23,000 (4)	$86,000 (6)
Number of Labor Inspectors	6 (4)	5 (6)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	Yes (17)	Yes (17)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	No (16)	No (6,16)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksite	60 (4)	40 (6)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	0 (4)	0 (6)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	N/A	N/A
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	N/A	N/A
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (4)	Yes (6)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (4)	Yes (6)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (17)	Yes (17)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (4)	Yes (6)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (4)	Yes (6)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (4)	Yes (6)

Children found working as a result of labor inspections are referred to the Ministry of Justice, Public Administration and Human Rights or to the Directorate of Social Protection and Solidarity within the Ministry of Health and Social Affairs for integration at one of the three support centers. (6,7,16) Although inspections are permitted in all sectors, they are seldom conducted in the informal sector, in which child labor is more prevalent. (4,6) Despite the government's substantial increase in funding for the Labor Inspectorate, most of this money was not disbursed in a timely and effective manner. Additionally, there was a 33 percent decrease in the number of overall labor inspections conducted during the reporting period as compared to 2021. (6) Reports also indicate that the allotted budget for the Labor Inspectorate was insufficient to cover operating costs, including office facilities, fuel, and transportation. Inspectors' lack of technical training also hinders their ability to perform their duties. (4,6,18)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in São Tomé and Príncipe took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the authority of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient allocation of financial resources.

São Tomé and Príncipe

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	No (4)	No (6)
Number of Investigations	0 (4)	0 (6)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	0 (4)	0 (6)
Number of Convictions	0 (4)	0 (6)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown	Unknown (6)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (4)	Yes (6)

During the reporting year, investigators lacked resources, including transportation, fuel, and other necessities to carry out investigations. (4,6,7)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Anti-Child Labor Committee	Leads efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. (5,7) Led by the Ministry of Health and Social Affairs. No activities were undertaken by the committee during the reporting period, due to a lack of resources. (5)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including coverage of all worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Policy and Strategy for Social Protection (2014–2023)	Establishes social protection strategies to protect Santomeans by eliminating extreme poverty over a 10-year time frame, reinforcing the rights of children, and addressing child labor. (5,19) No activities under this strategy were taken during the reporting period, due to a lack of resources. (5)

Although São Tomé and Príncipe has adopted a social protection policy which includes child labor issues, research found no evidence of a policy on other worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded programs that may contribute to preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including a lack of social programs to cover all child labor issues.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Support Centers†	Three government-funded centers run by NGOs, operating in areas with high concentrations of poor families, orphans, and street children. Provide household stipends to keep children in school and teach income-generating skills. (20,21) Support centers were active during the reporting period. (5)

† Program is funded by the Government of São Tomé and Príncipe.

Research found no evidence that the government has carried out programs specifically designed to assist children who are engaged in agriculture or the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in São Tomé and Príncipe (Table II).

Table II. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Accede to the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography and the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict.	2014 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits practices similar to slavery or criminally prohibits debt bondage and forced or compulsory labor.	2021 – 2022
	Establish by law a minimum age for light work of no less than 13 years and adopt legislation defining the activities and conditions permissible for light work.	2018 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure that minimum age for work laws apply to all children in formal and informal work relationships, including children who are self-employed.	2015 – 2022
Enforcement	Strengthen the Labor Inspectorate by initiating targeted inspections based on analysis of data identifying risk-prone sectors and patterns of serious incidents and ensure that inspections are conducted in the informal sector in which child labor is known to occur.	2017 – 2022
	Ensure that labor inspectors are equipped with adequate resources needed to conduct inspections, including office facilities, fuel, and transportation, all disbursed in a timely and efficient manner, and ensure that they receive adequate technical training to strengthen their ability to perform their duties.	2009 – 2022
	Publish information on criminal law enforcement efforts undertaken, including data regarding imposed penalties for violations related to the worst forms of child labor.	2009 – 2022
	Ensure that criminal investigators are equipped with the necessary resources, including transportation, fuel, and other necessities to carry out investigations, and ensure they receive training to better address violations of the worst forms of child labor.	2009 – 2022
Coordination	Ensure that the Anti-Child Labor Committee is active and able to carry out its intended mandate.	2020 – 2022
Government Policies	Adopt policies to address the worst forms of child labor, including the commercial sexual exploitation of children.	2020 – 2022
	Ensure that activities are undertaken to implement the National Policy and Strategy for Social Protection and that data on these activities are published.	2021 – 2022
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2021 – 2022
	Increase access to education for children with disabilities, including creating programs that support children with mobility and hearing difficulties.	2021 – 2022
	Implement programs to address the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation.	2020 – 2022
	Implement programs that specifically address child labor in agriculture.	2010 – 2022

In 2022, Senegal made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. In cooperation with the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, the government developed and finalized new standard operating procedures on the identification and investigation of trafficking in persons cases. In an effort to prevent forced begging, the government also spent $603,000 to assist over 10,934 children in Koranic schools, or daaras, that met basic standards of care and child protection. Finally, it coordinated with the international partners in the launch of the Programs to Counter Sex Trafficking in Kédougou. However, children in Senegal are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in forced begging. Children also perform dangerous tasks in gold mining. Hazardous work prohibitions do not include domestic work or street work, areas in which there is evidence of potential harm to child workers. In addition, Senegal does not have a current national action plan, or a national coordinating body for the elimination of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Senegal. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	22.3 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	53.0
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	13.9
Primary Completion Rate (%)		63.0

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2021, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2023. (1)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Demographic and Health Survey (DHS), 2015. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Fishing, activities unknown (3)
	Farming, including during harvest season (3)
Industry	Mining gold and iron, including washing ore, crushing rocks, using mercury, and carrying heavy loads† (3-5)
Services	Welding and auto repair (3,6)
	Domestic work (3,7)
	Street work, including vending (3)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced labor in domestic work and gold mining (3,5,7-9)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,5,7-9)
	Forced begging (3,4,8,10,11)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Forced begging remains a significant problem in Senegal. (3,4,9) It is a traditional practice to send boys to Koranic schools called daaras, where students known as talibés receive a Koranic education from teachers known as

Senegal

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

marabouts. The traditional Islamic practice of asking for alms has in certain instances been corrupted, and some daaras force children to beg, often for long hours, to collect money to enrich the marabouts. (3,4,8,10,12) An estimated 100,000 talibés are subjected to forced begging, including over 30,000 in Dakar alone. (10) Talibés are often forced to live in overcrowded, unsanitary conditions, receive inadequate food and medical care, and are vulnerable to physical and sexual abuse. (3,4,10,11) Children from rural areas in Senegal and neighboring countries including The Gambia, Mali, Guinea-Bissau, and Guinea, are particularly vulnerable to this practice and are sometimes subjected to human trafficking. (3,8,10,13)

Children in Senegal are also exploited in domestic servitude and forced labor in gold mines and are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation. (3,7,8) Adolescent girls are often transported from other countries, including Nigeria, for the purpose of commercial sexual exploitation around the gold mines in Kédougou. Research shows that human traffickers often tell girls that they are going to Europe, then withhold their identity documents, and use debt bondage to force them into commercial sexual exploitation in Senegal. (3,5,7,8) Additionally, under a system known as confiage, Senegalese parents sometimes send their children, primarily young girls, to live with relatives or family friends to have better educational and economic opportunities, often in exchange for domestic labor. However, some girls are not sent to school, and are subjected to forced labor and sexual exploitation. (3,7-9)

While Senegalese law provides for free and compulsory education from ages 6 to 16, approximately one-third of children in this age group do not attend school. (14) In practice, only primary school is tuition-free, and supplementary fees are often charged for secondary school. (14,15) Other barriers to education include lack of birth registration documents, lack of schools and lack of access to transportation, and lack of accommodations for students with disabilities. (6,14,16) Poor sanitation infrastructure, including lack of running water and bathrooms, and sexual harassment in schools force some girls to leave school early. (14,17-19) According to one NGO, sexual harassment and abuse is widespread in secondary schools in Senegal. In certain cases, when girls attempted to reject their male teachers' advances, they were penalized with lower grades, and excluded from class activities. (14,17-19)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Senegal has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Senegal's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the lack of prohibition of military recruitment by non-state armed groups.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article L. 145 of the Labor Code; Article 6 of the Decree Establishing the Scale of Penalties for Violations of the Labor Code and Associated Rules for Application (20,21)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 1–3 of the Ministerial Order No. 3749 Determining and Prohibiting the Worst Forms of Child Labor; Article 1 of the Ministerial Order No. 3750 Determining the Types of Hazardous Work Prohibited for Children and Youth; Articles 1–3 of the Ministerial Order No. 3751 Determining the Categories of Business and Work Prohibited to Children and Youth (22-24)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 2 of the Ministerial Order No. 3749 Determining and Prohibiting the Worst Forms of Child Labor; Ministerial Order No. 3750 Determining the Types of Hazardous Work Prohibited to Children and Youth; Article 2 of the Ministerial Order No. 3751 Determining the Categories of Business and Work Prohibited to Children and Youth (22-24)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles L. 4 and L. 279 of the Labor Code; Articles 2 and 4 of the Ministerial Order No. 3749 Determining and Prohibiting the Worst Forms of Child Labor; Articles 1 and 2 of the Law Concerning the Fight Against Trafficking in Persons and Similar Practices and the Protection of Victims (20,24,25)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 1 of the Law Concerning the Fight Against Trafficking in Persons and Similar Practices and the Protection of Victims (25)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 2 of the Ministerial Order No. 3749 Determining and Prohibiting the Worst Forms of Child Labor; Articles 323 and 324 of the Penal Code (24,26)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No		Article 2 of the Ministerial Order No. 3749 Determining and Prohibiting the Worst Forms of Child Labor (24)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 19 of Law No. 2008-28 (27)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 19 of Law No. 70-23 on the Organization of National Defense; Law No. 2008-23.(27,28)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 3 of Law No. 2004-37 (29)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 3 of Law No. 2004-37; Articles 21 and 22 of the Constitution (29,30)

Ministerial Order No. 3749 Determining and Prohibiting the Worst Forms of Child Labor bans the use of children in illicit activities, but neither this law, the Penal Code, nor the Labor Code define specific criminal penalties for this offense. (24-26) The 2005 anti-trafficking law criminalizes forced begging. However, Section 245 of the Penal Code provides that “the act of seeking alms on days, in places and under conditions established by religious traditions does not constitute the act of begging”, which makes it unclear whether forced begging under these religious traditions is criminally prohibited. (4,25,26) Furthermore, the types of hazardous work prohibited for children do not include domestic work or street work, areas in which there is evidence of potential harm, including sexual abuse, to child workers. (7,22,24) Because the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (20,21,29)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Senegal

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor, Social Dialogue, and Institutional Relations (MOL)	Identifies and investigates labor code violations, including child labor cases. (3,20) Empowered to refer criminal cases to the Police or Gendarmerie. (17)
Ministry of Justice (MOJ)	Responsible for the enforcement and prosecution of all criminal laws, including criminal violations of child labor laws. (3,31) Through its Criminal Affairs and Pardons Branch, collects information and statistics on criminal cases involving forced child labor, child trafficking, and the commercial sexual exploitation of children. (3,31)
Ministry of the Interior and Public Security	Oversees all law enforcement agencies, including police officials who investigate cases of human trafficking and forced child begging, and arrests perpetrators of the worst forms of child labor. Houses the Children's Unit, located in Dakar, which employs three officers who specialize in child protection, victim identification, and reintegration. (31) Through its Children's Unit, receives assistance from the Vice Squad in child protection cases. Through its Air and Border Police ( Police de l'air et des frontières ), focuses on migrant smuggling and transnational crimes. (31)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Senegal took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the insufficient allocation of human resources.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown (17)	Unknown (3)
Number of Labor Inspectors	68 (17)	Unknown (3)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	Yes (20)	Yes (20)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	Yes (17)	Yes (3)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksite	Unknown (17)	Unknown (3)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	0 (17)	0 (3)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	N/A (17)	N/A (3)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	N/A (17)	N/A (3)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (17)	Yes (3)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (17)	Yes (3)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (20)	Yes (20)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (17)	Yes (3)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	No (17)	No (3)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (17)	Yes (3)

The labor inspectorate has assigned one inspector and one controller, who assists the labor inspector in their duties, to child labor cases. (17,20) While no new labor inspectors were hired in 2022, research was unable to confirm the total number of labor inspectors currently employed in Senegal. (3,32) While labor inspectors are allowed to conduct inspections in private homes and farms, where child labor is widespread, there were no inspections of these sites during the reporting period. (3) Anecdotal reports also indicate that there is a lack of child labor law enforcement in the informal sector, which employs the most children. Research suggests that the labor inspectorate only has sufficient funding to inspect the formal sector. (17) The Ministry of Labor, Social Dialogue, and Institutional Relations does not have a dedicated hotline or complaint mechanism to receive reports of child labor. (17)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Senegal took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (17)	Yes (3,33)
Number of Investigations	Unknown	Unknown (3)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown	Unknown (3)
Number of Convictions	Unknown	Unknown (3)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown	Unknown (3)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (17)	Yes (3)

In 2022, the government implemented new standard operating procedures (SOPs) for the identification and referral of trafficking cases. The government also held a 4-day training on the SOPs for agencies responsible for criminal law enforcement, including the Ministry of Justice and the Ministry of the Interior and Public Security (MOI). (3,9,33)

The authorities have had limited success in prosecuting cases related to forced begging due to a lack of government coordination, resource constraints, and lack of political support. (4,10,17,34,35) Judicial officials often drop, or reduce charges against Koranic teachers due to social and political pressures. (3,10) Although police stations in Senegal are expected to report cases involving children to MOI's Children's Unit, research found no evidence that this occurs regularly. Research was unable to determine how police stations handled cases that were not referred to the Children's Unit. (34) Many law enforcement and judicial personnel demonstrate insufficient understanding of Senegal's 2005 anti-trafficking law. Research also indicates that training for criminal investigators, which included content covering child labor laws and child protection, was cursory and insufficient to fully enforce existing laws protecting children against labor abuses. (3,8) The government's anti-trafficking database, Systraitte, collects law enforcement and victim protection data. It thus far has only been expanded to four regions, and the government has limited capacity to collect comprehensive criminal law enforcement data. (3,8,33,36,37)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including the lack of an entity dedicated to coordinating efforts to address child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Task Force Against Trafficking in Persons (CNLTP)	Leads efforts to address trafficking in persons, including child trafficking. (3,33) Housed under MOJ. Includes elected officials and representatives from the Ministry of Women, Family, Gender, and Child Protection, the National Police, and the Department of Social Services. (3,17,35) There are no representatives from MOL on the Task Force. (3) In 2022, in cooperation with UNODC, CNLTP developed standard operating procedures for the identification, investigation, and referral of cases concerning trafficking in persons. (9,33)

While various bodies coordinated efforts to address forced child begging and the commercial sexual exploitation of children, there is no comprehensive coordinating body dedicated to preventing and eliminating all worst forms of child labor, including in agriculture and domestic work. (17)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including the lack of a national policy covering all worst forms of child labor.

Senegal

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Human Beings (2021–2023)	Drafted and implemented by the National Task Force Against Trafficking in Persons (CNLTP). (3,17) Structured around four priority areas: (1) prevention; (2) protection and care of survivors; (3) pursuit; and (4) research, monitoring, evaluation, and partnerships. (38) Goals include raising awareness and advocating for legislation, conducting public awareness campaigns, improving the capacity of shelters and services for survivors, strengthening the capacity of criminal law enforcement and the judicial system, and improving regional cooperation. (38) In 2022, the government attended the Economic Community of West African States' annual summit on trafficking in persons; cooperated with INTERPOL in its activities to counter trafficking in persons; and coordinated with the U.S. Department of State and the African Programming and Research Initiative to End Slavery in efforts to address sex trafficking in the Kédougou region. (33)
National Strategy on Child Protection	Aims to strengthen child protection systems in Senegal. Organized around the pillars of prevention, care, and promotion of children's rights. (31) During the reporting year, the government, in coordination with the Child Protection Committee in the Dakar region, continued its program for the withdrawal and social reintegration of street children. (3)

Although Senegal has adopted national policies on trafficking in persons and child protection, research found no evidence of a comprehensive policy to address child labor and its worst forms.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Removal and Socioeconomic Reintegration Program for Children in Street Situations†	$47 million Government of Senegal-funded and operated program to oversee the removal and socioeconomic reintegration of street children, many of whom are victims of forced begging. (3) Provides assistance to daaras to curb forced begging. Aids child victims by returning them to their families, providing shelter in government-sponsored centers, or placing them in foster families. (3) During the reporting year, the government spent $603,000 to assist over 10,934 children in daaras that met basic standards. (3) However, sometimes rehabilitated street children who are returned to their families end up again being subject to forced begging in daaras . (3,17,39)
Programs to Counter Sex Trafficking in Kédougou, Senegal, (2022–2024) *	Implemented by the African Programming and Research Initiative to End Slavery (APRIES) in partnership with Free the Slaves/La Lumière and the UNODC. Funded by the U.S. Department of State. (33,40) Aims to address sex trafficking of girls and women in the gold-producing Kédougou region by conducting prevalence research, and enhancing capacity for prevention, prosecution, and protection. (40) The project held a launch event in April 2022 that brought together representatives from CNLTP, UNODC, regional government officials, and other NGOs and civil society organizations. (41)
Centers and Shelters†	Includes the Ginddi Center, which serves abused and vulnerable children, including runaway talibés , street children, and child trafficking survivors. (6,8,13,35) Provides food, education, vocational training, family mediation, medical care, and psychological care in its shelter. (13,35) Supports a 24-hour toll-free hotline staffed by French, Wolof, and Pular speakers, which allows for anonymous reporting of cases of child trafficking and/or labor abuse. (3,8,13) Additionally, MOJ-run transit houses in Dakar, Pikine, and Saint-Louis provide monitoring, education, rehabilitation, and reintegration services for survivors of child trafficking. (6,8,31) During the reporting period, the government continued to operate these shelters. (3,8,33) Space constraints at the Ginddi Center limited the number of children that could receive care. In addition, limited shelter services outside of Dakar meant that trafficking survivors, including children, often received care from NGOs rather than the government. (8)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of Senegal.

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

Although the Government of Senegal has implemented programs to address child trafficking and forced begging, research found no evidence that the government has carried out programs to assist children involved in domestic work, agriculture, or mining. (17)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Senegal (Table I I).

Table I I. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2022
	Establish criminal penalties for the use of children in illicit activities.	2021 – 2022
	Clarify forced begging provisions in the Penal Code and the Law Concerning the Fight Against Trafficking in Persons to explicitly prohibit forced begging, including alms-seeking, under any circumstances.	2017 – 2022
	Ensure that the hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children are comprehensive and include sectors in which child labor is known to occur and there are risks of sexual abuse, including street work and domestic work.	2016 – 2022
	Raise the minimum age for work from 15 to 16 to align with the compulsory education age.	2018 – 2022
Enforcement	Publish all relevant information on labor inspectorate funding, training conducted, and the number of inspections conducted at worksites.	2013 – 2022
	Establish a mechanism to receive child labor complaints, and track cases of child labor for referral to law enforcement or social services providers.	2014 – 2022
	Provide adequate labor inspectorate funding, employ at least 119 labor inspectors to provide adequate coverage of the labor force of approximately 4.8 million people, provide for publication the number of labor inspectors employed, and ensure that cases of child labor are formally reported.	2010 – 2022
	Ensure that labor inspections and enforcement are carried out in the informal sector, including in private homes and farms.	2014 – 2022
	Publish criminal law enforcement information on the worst forms of child labor, including the number of investigations, violations, and prosecutions, or if penalties were imposed.	2020 – 2022
	Ensure that courts have sufficient resources and coordination to be able to successfully prosecute cases.	2019 – 2022
	Ensure that criminal cases involving child victims are referred to the Ministry of the Interior and Public Security's Children's Unit.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that training for criminal investigators adequately addresses issues related to the worst forms of child labor in Senegal.	2019 – 2022
Coordination	Establish coordinating mechanisms to prevent and eliminate child labor.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure the Ministry of Labor's participation in the National Task Force Against Trafficking in Persons.	2022
Government Policies	Adopt a national policy to address child labor.	2016 – 2022
Social Programs	Ensure that all children have access to education by eliminating school-related fees, increasing access to transportation, building additional schools, improving school infrastructure and sanitation, ensuring access for students with disabilities, providing all children with access to birth registration, and protecting children in schools from sexual harassment and abuse.	2011 – 2022
	Institute programs to address child labor in domestic work, agriculture, and mining.	2010 – 2022
	Ensure that shelter services are adequate to provide protective care to survivors of child trafficking and the worst forms of child labor.	2022
	Conduct education and awareness-raising activities among families of rescued street children to ensure children are not returned to forced begging.	2021 – 2022

In 2022, Serbia made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Center for the Protection of Trafficking Victims conducted trainings for educators, healthcare workers, and other social protection authorities on identifying potential victims of human trafficking. The government also approved the 2022 Plan to Protect Street Children in Situations of Violence, Neglect, and Exploitation, which defines hazardous street labor for children and sets guidelines for coordination between the Centers for Social Work, the Labor Inspectorate, the Basic and Higher Public Prosecutor's Offices, and educational and health institutions. However, children in Serbia are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and forced begging. Children also perform dangerous tasks in street work. Serbia's laws do not treat forced child beggars as victims of child labor, and the country's social welfare centers are overburdened with cases, which limits efforts to provide services to survivors of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Serbia. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	18.8 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	97.6
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	20.6
Primary Completion Rate (%)		98.1

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2021, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2023. (1)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from the Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 6 (MICS 6), 2019. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Children from Serbia, particularly girls, those from Roma communities, and children living in rural areas, are victims of domestic human trafficking and the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation. (5,14-16) Undocumented migrants are at a significantly higher risk of human trafficking for the purposes of labor or sexual exploitation. (16)

Constitutional and legal protections prohibit discrimination in the education system against individuals with disabilities. (9,17,18) However, some individuals with disabilities, especially Roma children, face difficulties in accessing education due to a lack of appropriate infrastructure and social prejudices. (19-22) Some Roma, Ashkali, and Balkan Egyptian children in Serbia also experience challenges in obtaining birth registration, which may make school enrollment difficult and increase their vulnerability to child labor. (5,9,19-21) In addition, placement in non-mainstream schools sometimes discourage Roma children, especially girls, from attending school. (9,13,19,24-27) Roma children are also more likely to begin school at a later age and drop out of school more frequently than their non-Roma peers. (5,23)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Serbia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Serbia's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including insufficient measures to prohibit the use of children in illicit activities.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Articles 24, 25, and 274 of the Labor Law; Article 66 of the Constitution (17,28)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 25 and 274 of the Labor Law; Article 66 of the Constitution (17,28)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 25, 84, 87, and 88 of the Labor Law; Regulation on Hazardous Labor of Children (28,29)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 112, 388, and 390 of the Criminal Code; Article 26 of the Constitution (17,30)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 112 and 388 of the Criminal Code; Article 26 of the Constitution (17,30)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 112 and 183–185 of the Criminal Code (30)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No		Articles 246, 247, and 388 of the Criminal Code (30)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 4 of the Law on Military, Labor, and Material Obligation; Article 39 of the Law on the Army (31,32)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*		Article 4 of the Law on Military, Labor, and Material Obligation (32)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 24 of the Law on the Ratification of the Optional Protocol Involvement of Children in Armed Conflict; Article 388 of the Criminal Code (30,33)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15‡	Article 71 of the Constitution; Articles 94 and 98 of the Law on the Foundations of the Education System (17,34)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 71 of the Constitution; Article 91 of the Law on the Foundations of the Education System (17,34)

* No conscription (32)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (17,33)

Serbia's law does not treat child beggars as victims, but rather as offenders, and does not criminally prohibit the use of a child in illicit activities except when it results from human trafficking. (31,35) Serbia also lacks sufficient prohibitions for the commercial sexual exploitation of children, as the use of children in prostitution is not explicitly prohibited. (30)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor, Employment, Veteran, and Social Affairs (MOLEVSA)	Through the Labor Inspectorate, inspects businesses, including unregistered businesses. Per mandate established by the Special Protocol of Labor Inspection for Protecting Children Against Child Labor, receives and investigates child labor complaints and informs Centers for Social Work of child labor violations. (9) Has internal sub-units that focus on the protection of children with disabilities and children working on the street. (3) Through the Center for the Protection of Trafficking Victims (CPTV), identifies victims of child trafficking and those at risk, conducts needs assessments, contributes to human trafficking research projects, and refers victims to social services. (13) The CPTV is divided into two parts: the Agency for Coordination of Protection of Trafficking Victims and the Urgent Reception Center. (14,12,19) In addition, the CPTV works with state institutions, international organizations, and NGOs on human trafficking prevention and protection efforts and activities. (19)
Ministry of the Interior (MOI)	Oversees the General Police Directorate and enforces laws prohibiting commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking through the Criminal Police Department. (36) Informs the Centers for Social Work of any child labor violations found. (7,11)
Republic Public Prosecutor's Office	Leads investigations on human trafficking cases and exchanges information through a network of local prosecutors and NGOs. (7)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Serbia took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor, Employment, Veterans, and Social Affairs (MOLEVSA) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient labor inspector training.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$4,242,720 (9)	$3,900,000 (7)
Number of Labor Inspectors	206 (9)	207 (7)

Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	No (9)	No (7)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksite	63,670 (9)	65,043 (7)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	18 (9)	13 (7)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	16 (9)	13 (7)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	Unknown	Unknown
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (9)	Yes (7)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (9)	Yes (7)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (28)	Yes (28)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (9)	Yes (7)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (9)	Yes (7)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (9)	Yes (7)

The Labor Inspectorate has designated experts on child labor at each of its branches to provide training to other inspectors. (13) Labor inspectors are responsible for inspecting registered and unregistered businesses, including businesses in the agricultural sector. (7) The Labor Inspectorate uses a work plan for inspections that is drafted at the beginning of each year and targets high-risk sectors in which child labor is known to occur, such as agriculture and construction. (7,37) In addition, the Special Protocol of Labor Inspection for Protecting Children Against Child Labor requires labor inspectors to use a checklist to identify child labor during inspections and mandates that police and labor inspectors inform Social Welfare Centers in cases of child labor. The Inspectorate also maintains a hotline number to allow observers to report illegal work activities and other labor irregularities that could impact health and safety at worksites. (7,38)

During the reporting period, labor inspectors participated in trainings on recognizing labor exploitation and human trafficking, and also received additional information on how to coordinate with other relevant institutions in efforts to protect victims of human trafficking. (7,39) However, new labor inspectors receive on-the-job training only by working alongside seasoned inspectors. According to the ILO, the lack of formal training, including training on child labor, may hamper their ability to perform adequate inspections. (7) In 2022, the government allocated approximately $300,000 less to the Labor Inspectorate's budget than in 2021. Additionally, the Labor Inspectorate continued to face workload difficulties due to a lack of personnel. (7)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Serbia took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient financial resource allocation.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	No (9)	Yes (7)
Number of Investigations	21 (40)	26 (41)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	7 (40)	12 (7)
Number of Convictions	1 (40)	23 (41)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (40)	Yes (41)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (9)	Yes (7)

Criminal law enforcement authorities continue to adhere to the 2017 Special Protocol of Labor Inspection for Protecting Children Against Child Labor, which authorizes police and labor inspectors to inform the SWCs regarding any cases of child labor discovered during inspections. The SWCs, the primary providers of social services to human trafficking victims, also assist authorities with child trafficking cases. (7,13) The Center for the Protection of Trafficking Victims (CPTV) indicated that 25 children who were victims of trafficking were identified by authorities during the reporting period, including 4 children involved in forced begging and 2 children who were compelled to commit criminal acts. The CPTV also indicated that authorities showed improvements in the identification of minor victims of trafficking, and that in 2022 approximately 40 percent of all human trafficking cases in Serbia involved children. (7)

Training on identifying human trafficking is provided as a part of the general police curriculum given to law enforcement officials who process immigration cases. (42) Continuous training on identifying human trafficking is also provided to one public prosecutor in each of the 25 Higher Public Prosecutor's Offices. However, sources indicated that some agencies responsible for investigation of human trafficking cases lack funding. (3) While government sources indicate that misdemeanor charges against children are rare, charges were brought against 15 children for begging in 2022. (7)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including the lack of a mechanism to coordinate efforts to address all worst forms of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Council for Combating Trafficking in Human Beings (Anti-Trafficking Council)	Sets government policies on human trafficking and drafts annual standard operating procedures for CPTV. Chaired by MOI, with the National Coordinator for Combating Trafficking in Persons acting as the Secretary of the Council. (11) The Council remained active during the reporting period, though the National Coordinator position remained vacant, which affected this coordinating body's ability to collaborate with relevant institutions. In addition, reports indicate that the National Coordinator for Combating Trafficking in Persons continued to lack adequate financial and human resources to carry out their duties. (7,19)

While the government continues to support the Refugee Protection Working Group and the Council for Children's Rights, there is no unified mechanism to coordinate efforts to address all worst forms of child labor. However, in May 2022, the government signed the Plan to Protect Street Children in Situations of Violence, Neglect, and Exploitation, which delineates the roles of government agencies and non-governmental entities to protect vulnerable children, including the Centers for Social Work, the Public Prosecutors' Offices, and the Labor Inspectorate, as well as civil society, health, and educational institutions. (7) Additionally, the government collaborated with the European Union and the Council of Europe on a joint project entitled "Prevention and Fight Against Human Trafficking in Serbia" to strengthen the collaboration between the Labor Inspectorate, law enforcement authorities, and social services institutions, including the National Coordination Office for the Fight Against Human Trafficking, the Center for the Protection of Trafficking Victims, and the Public Prosecutor's Office. (7,39)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant Roma policies.

Serbia

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
Roadmap for Eliminating Abuse of Child Labor in Serbia (2018–2022)	Established a roadmap for eliminating the worst forms of child labor. Focused on support for children working on the streets and vulnerable families, as well as the creation of a system within Social Welfare Centers (SWCs) to monitor and record risks of child labor. (43) During the reporting period, the ILO conducted an assessment of the 2018–2022 roadmap to inform the development of the government's subsequent 2023–2026 policy. (7)
Protocol on Rules and Procedures for the Institutions and Organizations Working with Children Involved in Life and Work on the Streets of Belgrade	Aims to enhance institutional cooperation among MOI, the Criminal Police Directorate, the Communal Police, city SWCs, the Belgrade City Secretariat for Education, the Belgrade City Secretariat for Health, and civil society organizations. (44) Defines street children, worst forms of child labor, child work, and child trafficking. (13,44) Stipulates lead institutions, rules, and procedures for interacting with street children. The policy was active during the reporting period. (7)

Although the National Strategy for Roma Inclusion (2016–2025) seeks to improve access to education for the Roma population in Serbia, including by providing access to preschool, child labor elimination and prevention strategies are not specifically included in the policy. (45,46)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10).

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Access to Education Programs†	World Bank, Ministry of Finance, and Ministry of Education, Science, and Technological Development project that aims to improve access to early childhood education for socially disadvantaged children, including children with disabilities and children from ethnic minority groups. (47) The program was active during the reporting period. (7)
Belgrade Children's Shelter‡	Social welfare institution funded by the City of Belgrade; opened in 2019. (3) Caters to vulnerable children between the ages of 7 and 18. Provides accommodation services and daytime shelter services to meet the needs of young people and street children, who are subsequently referred to SWCs and judicial authorities. (3) The shelter was operational during the reporting period. (7)
Strengthening the Identification and Protection of Victims of Trafficking†	IOM, CPTV, and MOI project that contributes to the implementation of the National Anti-Trafficking Strategy by improving mechanisms for the prevention and identification of victims of human trafficking. (23) MOI, MOLEVSA, and the Public Prosecution Office maintain a Memorandum on Cooperation in the Field of Suppression of Human Trafficking and the Rights Protection of Human Trafficking Victims. The Memorandum defines mutual rights in the identification of human trafficking, assistance and protection of victims, and statistical reporting. (5,14,48) During the reporting period, the CPTV provided trainings on identification and referral of victims of human trafficking for social welfare workers, healthcare workers, and educators. (7,11)

† Program is funded by the Government of Serbia.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (5,14,49)

SWCs provide social services, track the number of street children, and receive reports of labor violations from MOLEVSA and the Ministry of the Interior (MOI) to assist in tracking which sectors have the highest number of working children. According to MOLEVSA, the SWCs are significantly overburdened due to insufficient staffing and high caseloads. (7,11)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Serbia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the use of children in illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs, and eliminate the requirement that illicit activities must directly stem from human trafficking.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that the use of children for prostitution is criminally prohibited and that the Criminal Code's provisions on pimping, procuring, and mediation in prostitution include all children under age 18.	2021 – 2022
Enforcement	Provide comprehensive training to labor inspectors so they are able to carry out their inspection mandates.	2015 – 2022
	Ensure that criminal investigators and agencies addressing human trafficking have the necessary funding to conduct thorough investigations.	2010 – 2022
	Publish data pertaining to labor law enforcement efforts, including the number of child labor penalties imposed that were collected.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that the Labor Inspectorate is adequately funded to facilitate both regular operations as well as the hiring of new labor inspectors.	2022
Coordination	Ensure that the Office of the National Coordinator for Combating Trafficking in Persons is adequately funded and staffed.	2022
	Establish a mechanism to coordinate efforts to address all worst forms of child labor.	2022
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the National Strategy for Roma Inclusion.	2017 – 2022
Social Programs	Ensure that staff members at Social Welfare Centers have sufficient resources, such as personnel and funding, to address the specific needs of child trafficking victims.	2015 – 2022
	Address policy and social barriers to education via targeted programming for disadvantaged populations, including improving access to birth registration documentation; increasing access to education for children with disabilities; and increasing educational access and retention rates for minority populations, particularly migrant children, Roma children, and girls.	2013 – 2022
	Conduct research to determine the activities carried out by children engaged in child labor, including those in farming, construction, forestry, fishing, manufacturing and wholesale and retail trade.	2020 – 2022

In 2022, Sierra Leone made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government passed the Anti-Human Trafficking and Migrant Smuggling Act, which increased prison terms for sex trafficking and established a trust fund for survivors of human trafficking to pay for shelter, medical services, and legal aid. The government also launched a hotline to report trafficking crimes and established a National Migration Policy to promote the rights of migrants and increase public awareness of human trafficking. However, children in Sierra Leone are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and forced labor in mining. Children also engage in dangerous tasks in quarrying stone and fishing. Sierra Leone's light work provisions do not specify the activities and conditions in which light work may be undertaken or limit the number of hours of light work, which does not meet international standards. In addition, Sierra Leone lacks a national policy and social program to address all relevant worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Sierra Leone. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	35.1 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	78.2
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	32.2
Primary Completion Rate (%)		98.0

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2021, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2023. (1)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from the Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 6 (MICS 6), 2017. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Cultivation of cassava, palm fruit, cocoa, coffee, peanuts, and rice, and processing garri flour (3,4)
	Fishing,† including artisanal fishing (3-8)
Industry	Mining† for diamonds, gold, and sand (5-9)
	Quarrying† and crushing stone, including granite, and shoveling gravel (4-9)
	Construction, including housing construction, and serving as laborers for contractors (3-8)
	Manufacturing,† activities unknown (5,6,8)
	Production of charcoal (4-7)
Services	Scavenging scrap metals and recyclable materials from dumpsites (4)
	Domestic work (5-7,10)
	Street work, including begging, trading, and selling goods (5-7,10)
	Portering, including carrying heavy loads† (8,9)
	Working as apprentices, including in auto repair shops and on transportation vehicles, including mini buses and motorbike taxis (3)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced begging (7,8,11)
	Domestic work, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (7,8,11)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (7,8,11,12)
	Forced labor in street hawking, mining, agriculture, scavenging for scrap metal, motorbike taxi driving, quarrying granite, rock breaking, and mining for alluvial diamonds (6,9,12-14)
	Cultivation of marijuana (6,7)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Sierra Leone is a source, transit, and destination country for child trafficking for labor and commercial sexual exploitation. (4,15-18) Sierra Leone also has a form of internal child trafficking called men pikin, meaning foster care in Krio, in which family members send children to relatives in urban areas with promises of better educational opportunities. However, some children are instead subjected to forced labor, including in street hawking, domestic work, mining, agriculture, scavenging for scrap metal, and motorbike taxi driving. (6-8,10,11,13,14,19) In addition, some children sent to Koranic schools are trafficked for labor exploitation. (8,10,18)

Despite government initiatives to make education free through secondary school, substantial barriers remain, including a lack of schools and teachers, the costs of uniforms and supplies, limited transportation to schools, and sexual and gender-based violence by teachers and other students. (5-8,20-22) In particular, one report indicated that teachers demanded sex from students in exchange for higher grades. (4,6) Research also found that unqualified teachers were removed from schools in several rural communities without being replaced, resulting in some schools closing. All of these factors contributed to a high dropout rate, especially among girls. (4,6)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Sierra Leone has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Sierra Leone’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the lack of specific provisions on light work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Section 125 of the Child Right Act; Section 52 of Chapter 212, Employers and Employed Act (23,24)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Section 128 of the Child Right Act (23)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Section 128 of the Child Right Act; Sections 47–56 of Chapter 212, Employers and Employed Act; Sections 164 and 170 of the Mines and Minerals Act (23-25)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Sections 1 and 12–14 of the 2022 Anti-Human Trafficking and Migrant Smuggling Act; Section 19 of the Constitution of Sierra Leone (26,27)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Section 1, 12–14, and 17–19 of the 2022 Anti-Human Trafficking and Migrant Smuggling Act (27)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Sections 1, 12–14, and 17–19 of the 2022 Anti-Human Trafficking and Migrant Smuggling Act; Sections 26–34 of the 2012 Sexual Offenses Act (27,28)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Sections 7 and 13 of the National Drugs Control Act (29)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Section 28 of the Child Right Act (23)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Sections 1 and 12 of the 2022 Anti-Human Trafficking and Migrant Smuggling Act (27)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Section 3 of the Education Act; Section 125 of the Child Right Act (23,30)
Free Public Education	Yes		Section 3 of the Education Act; Section 9 of the Constitution of Sierra Leone; Section 11(c) of the Child Right Act (23,26,30)

* Country has no conscription (31)

In April 2022, the Sierra Leone Parliament passed the Anti-Human Trafficking and Migrant Smuggling Act, which raised the prison term for trafficking from a maximum of 10 years to a minimum of 25 and established a Trafficking Victims Fund to provide shelter, medical services, and legal aid to trafficking survivors. (27,32) The Act also established an independent Trafficking in Persons Secretariat within the Ministry of Social Welfare. (14,27) However, even though the Child Right Act sets the minimum age for light work at age 13, it does not limit the number of hours per week for light work, determine the activities in which light work may be permitted, or specify the conditions in which light work may be undertaken, which is not in compliance with international standards. (23) In addition, although the Child Right Act identifies hazardous work prohibited for children, it does not cover scavenging for recyclable materials at dumpsites, an activity for which there is evidence that children in Sierra Leone are exposed to hazardous medical waste. (5,10,13,23,33)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MLSS)	Enforces labor laws in the formal sector via its District Labor Officers. Through its Child Labor Unit, formulates, implements, and monitors compliance with child labor regulations. (7)
Ministry of Mines and Mineral Resources	Enforces regulations against the use of child labor in mining. Authorized to suspend licenses of mining operators found using child labor. (7)
Ministry of Internal Affairs' Police and Transnational Organized Crime Unit	Leads the investigation and prosecution of sexual abuse, domestic violence, and child abuse through Police Family Support Units, which are mandated to minimize and eradicate the incidence of sexual abuse, domestic violence, and child abuse. Through its Transnational Organized Crime Unit, enforces human trafficking laws and provides statistical data and general information on cases of human trafficking. (5,7) Refers cases for prosecution to the Ministry of Justice's Director of Public Prosecution. (7)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Sierra Leone took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MLSS) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient financial and human resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown (7)	$30,000 (4)
Number of Labor Inspectors	29 (7)	29 (4)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	Yes (24)	Yes (24)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	N/A (7)	Yes (4)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksite	Unknown (7)	Unknown (4)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	Unknown (7)	Unknown (4)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	N/A (7)	Unknown (4)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	N/A (7)	Unknown (4)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (7)	Yes (4)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (7)	Yes (4)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (24,34)	Yes (25,34)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (7)	Yes (4)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (7)	Yes (4)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (7)	Yes (4)

Reporting suggests that the Ministry of Labor conducted more labor inspections in 2022 than in previous years and identified at least one child labor violation in the gold mining industry during the reporting period. However, the government did not publish its labor enforcement data, and available records were inconsistent. (4) Research indicates that Sierra Leone does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (4,35,36) There is a significant lack of resources for labor inspections because the MLSS does not have the necessary funding, and has only one vehicle for inspections. (5-7) In addition, very few inspections are conducted in the informal sector, where child labor is known to occur. (7,8) Although the Ministry of Mines and Mineral Resources can conduct inspections on mining concessions and revoke licenses from employers who are found to be using child labor, research found that a limited number of inspectors, a lack of funding, and the practice of notifying employers in advance may have hindered enforcement efforts. (15,37,38)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Sierra Leone took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient allocation of financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Unknown (7)	Unknown (4)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (7)	Unknown (4)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (7)	Unknown (4)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (7)	Unknown (4)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (7)	Unknown (4)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (7)	Yes (4)

In February 2022, the government launched a hotline to report trafficking crimes. During this first year of operation, the hotline did not receive reports leading to victim identification or criminal investigation. (14,39) Sierra Leone's Family Support Units reported 24 child trafficking cases during the reporting period. From April to December of 2022, a civil society organization also reported identifying 31 child trafficking survivors, who were then provided with trauma-informed care. (14) The government, in cooperation with other organizations on the National Task Force on Human Trafficking, trained 16 paramount chiefs in the Kenema district on trafficking identification during the reporting period as part of the launch of its Prevention and Response to Child Trafficking in Persons project. (14) In addition, 55 district-level social workers in Kambia, Kono, Kailahun, and Kenema districts were given training on trauma-informed care in the context of human trafficking. However, research found that criminal law enforcement in Sierra Leone, particularly efforts to address human trafficking, is hampered by limited funding, lack of training of law enforcement personnel and the judiciary, and poor data sharing between the Director of Public Prosecution and the Family Support Units. (4,5,18)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Technical Steering Committee on Child Labor	Coordinates efforts to address child labor. Led by MLSS and the Ministry of Gender and Children's Affairs (MGCA) and includes representatives from 10 other government agencies, international organizations, and NGOs. (4) As part of the National Technical Steering Committee on Child Labor, the National Commission for Children advises the government on ways to improve child welfare. In 2022, the steering committee facilitated the operations of the Child Welfare Committees alongside MGCA and NGOs, mainly at the district level. (4)

The Ministry of Gender and Children's Affairs was also active during the reporting period, conducting consultations alongside the First Lady to raise awareness on child labor and other issues affecting women and children across the country. (4,8) The Child Right Act requires the establishment of a Child Welfare Committee in every village and chiefdom (the third level of administrative subdivision, below districts and provinces); however, research indicates that these committees do not function in every chiefdom and may lack effectiveness. (4,8,23)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including covering all worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Action Plan Against Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children (2021–2023)	Promotes cooperation between NGOs, international organizations, and government agencies to address human trafficking. (41) Establishes strategic objectives to ensure the thorough investigation of trafficking cases. (42) Following the adoption of the Anti-Human Trafficking and Migrant Smuggling Act 2022, the Trafficking in Persons Secretariat worked to establish implementation and awareness plans for the new law as well as capacity-building events for law enforcement personnel. (14)
National Policy on Radical Inclusion in Schools (2021–2026)	Ensures that schools throughout Sierra Leone are accessible to all children, especially those typically marginalized or excluded, including children with disabilities, children from low-income families, children in rural and underserved areas, and girls who are currently pregnant or already parents and in school. (7,43) In March 2022, the government approved an implementation plan for the policy through 2026. (43)
National Migration Policy†	Aims to protect the right of migrants, with specific reference to trafficking survivors, asylum seekers, and children. Also seeks to increase public awareness of human trafficking and build the capacity of law enforcement personnel to detect and prevent trafficking, especially child trafficking. (44) Established by the government with support from the EU, the Africa Regional Migration Program implemented by IOM, and the United States Bureau of Population, Refugees, and Migration. (44,45)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (5)

Sierra Leone

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Although the Government of Sierra Leone has a National Action Plan Against Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, research found no evidence of a policy on other worst forms of child labor, including child labor in mining, quarrying, and the commercial sexual exploitation of children. (14)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate efforts to address child labor in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Child Trafficking Shelters†	Refer children to privately run shelters that house child survivors of forced labor and human trafficking. During the reporting period, World Hope International operated a shelter for trafficking survivors, which provides mental health services, medical services, tracing, and reintegration assistance. (14,18)
Free Quality School Education†	A Ministry of Basic and Senior Secondary Education program that covers the costs of school tuition and fees and provides meals, textbooks, and some teaching materials in remote communities. (5,6,46) In 2022, the program remained active, complemented by additional educational inclusion efforts initiated under the National Strategy for Out-of-School Children and the National Policy on Radical Inclusion in Schools. (47-49)
U.S. Government-Funded Projects	USDOS Program to End Modern Slavery funded a study to research the prevalence, methods, and impacts of child trafficking and child labor in Kono, Kenema, Kailahun, and Kambia districts of Sierra Leone. (3) The research, published during the reporting period by the Center on Human Trafficking Research and Outreach at the University of Georgia in conjunction with the African Programming and Research Initiative to End Slavery, established a baseline prevalence, and identified gaps in policies and services aimed at preventing and addressing child trafficking in the country. This evidence base helped highlight the issues to policy stakeholders in support of legislative advances in the area of human trafficking. (8,32)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of Sierra Leone.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (8)

Sierra Leone has too few and underfunded shelters and safe houses for children who have been withdrawn from working on the streets or in forced labor. (4,13) Although the Government of Sierra Leone has implemented programs to assist child trafficking survivors, research found no evidence that it has carried out programs specifically designed to assist children working on the streets, in agriculture, and in domestic work. (5)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Sierra Leone (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the Child Right Act's light work provisions specify the activities and conditions in which light work may be undertaken and limit the number of hours of light work.	2015 – 2022
	Ensure that hazardous work occupations prohibited for children are comprehensive, including by prohibiting scavenging at dumpsites.	2020 – 2022
Enforcement	Increase the number of labor inspectors from 29 to at least 70 to ensure adequate coverage of the labor force of approximately 2.8 million people.	2011 – 2022
	Provide labor and criminal law enforcement officials with sufficient funding and additional vehicles to adequately enforce labor laws throughout the country, including in the informal sector.	2012 – 2022
	Ensure that the Ministry of Mines has adequate funding and resources to carry out enforcement efforts.	2015 – 2022
	Publish information on labor law enforcement efforts, including the number and type of inspections conducted, the number of violations found, and penalties imposed and collected.	2011 – 2022

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Ensure that unannounced inspections are conducted and cease the practice of informing employers ahead of time.	2020 – 2022
	Provide additional training to criminal law enforcement personnel and the judiciary to ensure that violations are adequately investigated and prosecuted.	2014 – 2022
	Publish information on criminal law enforcement efforts, including training for criminal investigators, the number of investigations undertaken, prosecutions initiated, convictions obtained, and penalties imposed for the worst forms of child labor.	2015 – 2022
	Ensure that the Director of Public Prosecution and the Family Support Units share data to adequately enforce criminal violations including child trafficking.	2022
Coordination	Ensure that village-level and chiefdom-level Child Welfare Committees are established and operational in all areas.	2014 – 2022
Government Policies	Adopt policies to address child labor in relevant sectors, such as mining, quarrying, and commercial sexual exploitation.	2019 – 2022
Social Programs	Remove barriers to education by providing transportation to school, increasing the number of schools and qualified teachers, reducing school-related costs, and eliminating abuse, including sexual and gender-based violence by teachers and other students.	2013 – 2022
	Increase the availability of and funding for shelters and safe houses for survivors of forced labor and children removed from street work.	2009 – 2022
	Institute programs to address child labor in agriculture, domestic work, and street vending.	2019 – 2022

In 2022, the Solomon Islands made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government of the Solomon Islands ratified the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography and the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the Involvement of Children in Armed Conflict. A national survey on the state of inclusive education was also conducted and a new national education action plan was launched.

However, children in the Solomon Islands are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Research shows that children are also involved in the harvesting of palm oil fruits. The minimum age for work of 12 years does not meet the international standard of 14 years, and the Solomon Islands has not established a minimum age for hazardous work or delineated the types of work considered hazardous for children. Furthermore, there is no law that makes education compulsory, which increases children's vulnerability to child labor. The government also did not publish labor and criminal law enforcement data for the reporting year.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in the Solomon Islands. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		85.7

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2019, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2023. (1)
Data were unavailable from International Labor Organization's analysis, 2023. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Working on plantations, including harvesting palm oil fruits (3,4)
	Harvesting of seafood, including deep-sea diving (3,4)
Industry	Alluvial mining† (3,4)
	Furniture construction (3,4)
	Construction on roads and buildings (3,4)
Services	Domestic work, including working as cooks (3,4)
	Working in nightclubs, casinos, and motels (5)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (5-7)
	Forced harvesting of seafood (5)
	Use in illicit activities, including in the cultivation and trafficking of drugs (5)
	Forced domestic work, including working as cooks (5)
	Forced pickpocketing (5)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Solomon Islands

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In the Solomon Islands, the commercial sexual exploitation of both boys and girls is prevalent near logging camps; near or aboard fishing vessels; and at hotels, casinos, and entertainment establishments. (5,6) Children also are forced to assist in manufacturing and transporting drugs. (5) Children in the country are vulnerable to forced labor in the agriculture sector, including on palm oil plantations, and in the harvesting of seafood. (3,5)

In 2022, the Government of the Solomon Islands, in partnership with UNICEF, conducted a national survey on the state of inclusive education. (8,9) This survey found that only a small number of schools nationwide have classrooms that are accessible and safe for people with disabilities, and only about half of schools have sanitation facilities that are accessible and safe for all. (9) Furthermore, although there is a Fee-Free Basic Education Policy, which provides free education up to grade nine, research revealed that the policy was not implemented and the Minister of Education and Human Resource Development asked parents to pay school fees. (10) In addition, teacher absenteeism and transportation limitations also make it challenging for some children to access education. (11,12) There are no nationally representative data available on the prevalence and nature of child labor in the Solomon Islands. Research found no evidence that the government funded or participated in social programs that include the goal of preventing or eliminating child labor.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

The Solomon Islands has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

In 2022, the Government of the Solomon Island ratified the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography. (13) It also ratified The Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the Involvement of Children in Armed Conflict (OPAC) in early 2023. (13,14)

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in the Solomon Islands' legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the lack of a minimum age for hazardous work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	12	Article 46 of the Labor Act (15)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No		Articles 47–49 of the Labor Act. (15)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No		Articles 47–49 of the Labor Act (15)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 6 of the Constitution; Articles 251 and 256 of the Penal Code; Articles 70–79 of the Immigration Act (16,17)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Articles 70–79 of the Immigration Act; Article 145 of the Penal Code (17,18)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 136, 141, 143, and 144 of the Penal Code (17)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	N/A†
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A†
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	No
Free Public Education	No

† Country has no standing military (19)

The Solomon Islands' minimum age for work, 12, is not in compliance with international standards. (15) Additionally, although the Labor Act prohibits all children under age 18 from working at night and regulates work in mines and on ships, it does not clearly establish a minimum age for hazardous work or delineate the types of work considered hazardous for all children. (6,15) The legal framework also does not prohibit dangerous work in scavenging or in agricultural activities for which there is evidence of children being exposed to injuries, extreme temperatures, and chemicals. (15,4) The Penal Code includes heightened penalties if an offense is committed against a child, but has insufficient prohibitions against child trafficking because the transfer of children is not criminalized. (17,20) Furthermore, the law also does not criminally prohibit the use of children in illicit activities. (11) Finally, education is not compulsory, which increases children's vulnerability to child labor exploitation, and there are no laws that provide free basic education. (10,21)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws. Additionally, research found no evidence that law enforcement agencies in the Solomon Islands took actions to address child labor.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Commerce, Industry, Labor and Immigration (MCILI)	Enforces child labor laws. (11,12) Through its Immigration Division, leads efforts to address human trafficking, including the trafficking of children. (4,22)
Royal Solomon Islands Police	Enforce criminal laws against the worst forms of child labor. (12) Jointly investigate human trafficking cases along with the Solomon Islands Immigration Division. (23)

Labor Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether labor law enforcement agencies in the Solomon Islands took actions to address child labor (Table 6).

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Unknown (4)	Unknown (24)

The Government of the Solomon Islands did not respond to requests for information related to its labor law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report. (24) Insufficient resources likely hamper the labor inspectorate's capacity to enforce child labor laws. (4,21) While the number of labor inspectors is unknown, research indicates that the Solomon Islands does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (11,25)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether criminal law enforcement agencies in the Solomon Islands took actions to address child labor (Table 7).

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Unknown (4)	Unknown (24)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (4)	Unknown (24)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (4)	Unknown (24)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (4)	Unknown (24)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (4)	Unknown (24)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Unknown (4)	Unknown (24)

The Government of the Solomon Islands did not respond to requests for information related to its criminal law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report. (24)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including lack of efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Advisory and Action Committee on Children (NAACC)	Coordinates the government and NGOs to address child trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children. (27) Comprises representatives from several ministries, including the Ministry of Women, Youth, Children and Family Affairs; MCILL; and the Ministry of Home Affairs. Several NGOs participate, including Save the Children, UNICEF, and WHO. (27) Research was unable to determine whether NAACC was active during the reporting period.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including coverage of all worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Education Action Plan (2022–2026)†	Outlines key priorities and strategies to achieve the nation's educational goals. (28)
National Action Plan Against Human Trafficking and People Smuggling (2020–2025)	Establishes a coordinated effort to eliminate human trafficking and people smuggling on the Solomon Islands. Led by the Anti-Human Trafficking Advisory Committee. (26,29) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Action Plan during the reporting period.
United Nations Pacific Strategy (2018–2022)	Multinational strategic framework, comprising 14 South Pacific nations, created to address, develop, and implement strategic economic development priorities in the South Pacific, including eliminating the worst forms of child labor. (30) Research was unable to determine what actions were taken to implement the United Nations Pacific Strategy during the reporting period.

† Policy was launched during the reporting period.

Although the Solomon Islands has adopted the National Action Plan Against Human Trafficking and People Smuggling, research found no evidence of a policy on other worst forms of child labor.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that the government funded or participated in social programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in the Solomon Islands (Table 10).

Table 10. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2014 – 2022
	Raise the minimum age for employment to comply with international standards.	2009 – 2022
	Establish age 18 as the minimum age for hazardous work.	2009 – 2022
	Determine the types of hazardous work prohibited for children, including the types of work for which there is evidence of hazards, such as in scavenging and agriculture.	2009 – 2022
	Establish by law a compulsory age of education that aligns with the international standard for the minimum age for employment.	2009 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the transfer of children for the purpose of child trafficking.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits using, procuring, and offering a child for illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs.	2011 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2022
Enforcement	Establish by law free basic public education.	2018 – 2022
	Publish information on child labor law enforcement efforts undertaken, including labor inspectorate funding, the number and type of labor inspections conducted, violations found, information about the training system for labor inspectors, and penalties imposed and collected.	2009 – 2022
	Publish information on criminal law enforcement efforts undertaken, including the number of child labor investigations initiated, the number of prosecutions initiated, the number of convictions secured, and the sentences imposed.	2009 – 2022
	Publish data about reciprocal referral mechanisms between labor and criminal authorities and social services.	2021 – 2022
	Employ at least 9 labor inspectors to ensure adequate coverage of the labor force of approximately 369,000 people.	2020 – 2022
	Publish information about child labor-related training for labor inspectors and criminal investigators.	2021 – 2022
Ensure that the labor inspectorate has sufficient resources to enforce child labor laws.	2022

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Coordination	Ensure that the National Advisory Action Committee on Children is able to successfully coordinate government and NGO efforts to address child trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children and publish information regarding the Committee's efforts.	2020 – 2022
Government Policies	Adopt a policy that incorporates eliminating child labor and the worst forms of child labor as an objective.	2016 – 2022
	Publish activities undertaken to implement the United Nations Pacific Strategy and the National Action Plan Against Human Trafficking and People Smuggling.	2018 – 2022
Social Programs	Establish and participate in programs to prevent, address, and eliminate child labor.	2018 – 2022
	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2013 – 2022
	Eliminate barriers to basic education, including by eliminating school-related fees and teacher absenteeism, improving access to school transportation, and by ensuring that all schools are equipped with proper sanitation facilities and are accessible for students with disabilities.	2014 – 2022

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2022, Somalia is receiving an assessment of minimal advancement. The Somali police force participated in trainings conducted by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime with the goal of increasing anti-trafficking efforts. Somaliland, which has self-declared independence from Somalia but is not recognized by any country, also criminalized human trafficking for the purposes of commercial sexual exploitation. However, despite new initiatives to address child labor, Somalia is receiving an assessment of minimal advancement because it continued to implement practices that delay advancement to eliminate child labor. During the reporting period, there is evidence that federal and state security forces continued to recruit and use children in armed conflict, in violation of national law. In other cases, government security forces detained children for suspected association with armed groups, in some cases subjecting them to lengthy interrogations and coerced confessions. In addition, the government did not conduct worksite inspections in 2022. Children in Somalia are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in armed conflict. Children also perform dangerous tasks in street work. Somali laws do not criminally prohibit child labor trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, or the recruitment of children by non-state armed groups. Furthermore, the government did not provide complete information on its criminal law enforcement efforts to address the worst forms of child labor for inclusion in this report.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Somalia. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report. (1)

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Related Entity	Percent

Sector/Industry	Activity
Services	Street work, including shining shoes, washing cars, driving minibuses, vending, and transporting and selling khat (a legal, amphetamine-like stimulant) (1,7,8,10) Voluntarily recruited children used in hostilities by state armed groups (4,11)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Recruitment of children by state and non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict and supporting roles, including as cooks, porters, and informants, or to operate checkpoints (7,11) Forced labor in domestic work, agriculture, herding livestock, breaking rocks, selling or transporting khat , begging, and construction work (7,8,11) Use in illicit activities, including trafficking drugs, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,7,11) Commercial sexual exploitation as a result of human trafficking (7,8,11)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

The Federal Government of Somalia (FGS) maintains limited territorial control outside populated areas. Al-Shabaab, a non-state armed group, occupies rural areas in south-central Somalia. (11) In 2022, as in previous years, Somalia recorded one of the world's highest numbers of child abductions by non-state actors. (12) State and non-state armed groups recruited at least 1,094 children during the reporting period. (12) Al-Shabaab, which forcibly recruited children as young as age 8 into its ranks, committed a majority of these violations in the first half of the reporting period, recruiting 902 children. (12) Al-Shabaab fighters infiltrate madrassas and mosques, using deception or coercion tactics to forcibly recruit victims, including children, into sexual slavery and combat and support roles. (11) Al-Shabaab also continued the practice of forcing communities to turn over male children to serve as child soldiers, imposing a financial penalty on families who refused to cooperate. (5,11-13) Moreover, Somalia's numerous clan militias reportedly recruited children for use in armed conflict. (4,11,12) Children from minority clan households are uniquely vulnerable to forced recruitment by military groups, including at school. (14) Research indicates that conflicting interpretations regarding the definition of children and the age of adulthood likely contribute to problems of child recruitment by armed forces and delays in legal and policy interventions to address the problem. (15)

The reporting period saw continued allegations of grave violations against children linked to federal and state government security forces, including recruitment and use, killing and maiming, and sexual violence. (12) Perpetrators included federal armed forces and security services, and regional forces and police in Galmudug, Jubaland, and Puntland. (12,16) In 2022, the UN verified the recruitment and use of children by the Somali Federal Defense and Police Forces (36 children recruited), National Intelligence and Security Agency (1 child recruited), Jubaland police and security forces (6 children recruited), Galmudug police and armed forces (9 children recruited), Puntland police and armed forces (44 children recruited), and clan militia (65 children recruited). (12) Child recruitment is in violation of Somalia's General Order No. 1, which prohibits military personnel from recruiting and employing child soldiers. (17) In 2022, the IDP population grew due to both severe drought conditions and ongoing conflict. (18) IDPs, including children, remain acutely vulnerable to sex trafficking and forced labor. Non-state armed groups have been reported to recruit children in IDP communities. (18)

Somalia lacks a countrywide birth registration system, further complicating efforts to identify victims of child labor. Access to education further deteriorated during the year amidst recurrent climate shocks, including widespread famine, and protracted violence. (19,20) State and non-state forces occupied and damaged schools, further limiting access to educational facilities. (12) The limited number of public schools outside of Mogadishu and high fees charged by private schools also undercut enrollment rates. (7,14) Girls faced additional obstacles, including lower prioritization of girls' education and insufficient female teachers, which negatively affected girls' attendance and learning. (7,21) Pastoralist communities, which account for approximately 25 percent of Somalia's population, faced additional impediments to education, as their nomadic existence makes static schools impractical. Children and youth among these groups are considered at high risk of exploitation or recruitment into armed groups such as al-Shabaab. (5,14) For many IDP children, nearby schools do not exist; even where donors build temporary learning spaces, IDP children typically experienced disrupted education due to constant movement and unpredictable evictions from their camp homes. (9)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Somalia has ratified some key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Somalia's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including prohibiting the recruitment and use of children by non-state armed groups.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 93 of the Labor Code; Article 38(1) of the Private Sector Employees Law (22,23)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 90 of the Labor Code; Article 38(2) of the Private Sector Employees Law; Article 29 of the Provisional Constitution (22-24)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No		Articles 90 and 94 of the Labor Code; Articles 10 and 38(4) of the Private Sector Employees Law (22,23)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 455 and 464 of the Penal Code (25)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 403, 404, 407, and 408 of the Penal Code (25)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	General Order No. 1 (17)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		General Order No. 1 (17)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No		Article 29 of the Provisional Constitution (24)
Compulsory Education Age	No	14‡	Articles 13 and 15 of the General Education Law (26)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 14 of the General Education Law (26)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (26)

Although the Provisional Constitution of 2012 does not provide a minimum age for employment, the 1972 Labor Code establishes age 15 as the minimum age for work. (22) Moreover, although the Labor Code establishes age 12 as the minimum age for light work and describes the conditions under which it may be undertaken, it neither determines the activities in which light work may be permitted nor prescribes the number of hours per week for light work. (22) In addition, the gap between the end of compulsory education and the minimum age for work leaves children aged 14 vulnerable to child labor because they are not required to attend school but may not legally work. (26,27) Furthermore, while the 1972 Labor Code enables the publication of a hazardous works list, the government has not determined by regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited for children. (5,22)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Officials in the Somaliland region, which has self-declared independence from the FGS, have criminalized human trafficking for the purposes of commercial sexual exploitation; its president signed the new trafficking in persons law in June 2022. (9,28,29) However, the FGS lacks legislation prohibiting human trafficking, including of children, or the use of children in illicit activities. Laws prohibiting the commercial sexual exploitation of children also are not sufficient because the use, procuring, and offering of a child for prostitution, pornography, and pornographic performances are not criminally prohibited. (22) Furthermore, it appears that under Article 405 of the Criminal Code, children involved in prostitution are not protected from criminal charges. The Penal Code requires extensive updating, an effort that the international community has attempted to support without success. (22) Many fines in the Criminal Code equal less than $1, which does not serve as an effective deterrent. (9,25)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Somali Police Force (SPF)	Investigates and enforces laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (7) The Counter-Trafficking and Organized Crime Unit has six officers. Recognizes victims of human trafficking based on behavioral indicators and suspicious documents through the SPF's Airport Police Task Force. (30) Operates units dedicated to investigating cases of human trafficking for prosecution through the SPF Criminal Investigation Division. (31,32) In July 2022, Somali police forces received trainings from the UNODC related to countering trafficking in persons. (31)
Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs (MOLSA)	Investigates and enforces laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (7) MOLSA's mandate allows for inspections based on requests sent by other authorities such as the police, and inspectors are authorized to issue fines indirectly upon approval of a senior advisor in the ministry. (7) MOLSA's regional office in Banadir employs 35 labor inspectors. (7,31) MOLSA also maintains an Office for the Senior Advisor on Child Labor under its Department of Legal and Labor Relations. The senior advisor, who oversees a staff of six, is charged with drafting and implementing a national action plan to address the worst forms of child labor in Somalia. (8,33,34) MOLSA also coordinates informally with other government ministries on child labor-related issues, including SPF, the National Intelligence and Security Agency, and the Immigration and Naturalization Directorate. (7,31)
Ministry of Defense	Operates separately from civilian law enforcement bodies and leads efforts to eliminate the use of child recruitment and abduction by al-Shabaab. (5) Through the Child Protection Unit, screens Somali National Army units for child soldiers. (7) Raises awareness of child soldier issues and works with international partners and donors to implement standard operating procedures on protecting children associated with armed conflict. (7) Works in concert with SPF, which is responsible for investigating and enforcing laws against the worst forms of child labor. (9)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Somalia took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, the absence of worksite inspections conducted at the national level in Somalia may have impeded the enforcement of child labor laws.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Research indicates that the Government of Somalia does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (7,36,37) The labor inspectorate does not have any dedicated funding and research was not able to confirm if labor inspections were conducted in 2022. (7)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Somalia took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (38)	Unknown (7)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (38)	Unknown (7)

Somalia is a federal republic comprising five semi-autonomous Federal Member States (FMS), the self-declared breakaway region of Somaliland, and the FGS, which is based in Mogadishu. (40) The FMS command separate police forces and some FMS have separate military forces, which are not under the FGS chain of command. (41,42) Puntland enforcement agencies include the Puntland Ministry of Justice, which prosecutes human trafficking cases and security forces that investigate and enforce human trafficking laws within Puntland. Somaliland police, meanwhile, investigate human trafficking crimes within the Somaliland region. (7) Moreover, the Somaliland Attorney General's Office prosecutes human trafficking cases in the Somaliland region. (7) Federal and regional governments did not provide information on their criminal law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report. However, research indicates that Galmudug, Jubaland, and Puntland forces recruited children during the reporting period. (31) In addition, although a general command order barring the recruitment and use of children by the Somali National Army remained in effect during the reporting period, government security forces also recruited and used children in 2022, highlighting gaps in enforcement and uneven command and control of some units. (43) There is no evidence that the FGS or member states prosecuted offenders during the reporting period. (44,45) Moreover, the Juvenile Justice Law of Puntland defines a child as anyone age 14 and under; consequently, the government detained and issued prison sentences, including life imprisonment, to children between the ages of 15 and 18 for their association with armed groups. (13) In addition, the Child Protection Unit does not refer cases relating to child soldiers to the civilian justice system; however, it would theoretically prosecute violations in the military justice system. (5) Detained children have sometimes been interrogated without legal representation and coerced into signing or recording confessions. (13,24,44)

The government, working with UNICEF and other NGOs, has established a limited mechanism for case management, family tracing and reunification, and the provision of social services in response to trafficking in persons and other related worst forms of child labor. (30,39) Despite this effort, Somalia lacks a standardized system to effectively respond to child labor cases. (38)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The FGS has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of a coordination mechanism to address all worst forms of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Inter-ministerial Committee on Children and Armed Conflict (ICCAC)	Implements the 2012 Action Plan to Eliminate Recruitment and Use of Child Soldiers, the Action Plan to End the Killing and Maiming of Children in Contravention of International Law, the 2019 roadmap to end and prevent grave violations against children. (46,47) Co-chaired by the Child Protection Unit and UNICEF, includes other Ministry of Defense officials, representatives of the Ministry of Women and other relevant ministries, and UN officials. (46,47) In 2022, the UN Country Task Forces on Monitoring and Reporting (CTFMR) met with ICCAC to establish a joint process to monitor the implementation of the 2019 roadmap. Participants included federal counterparts, the Director Generals and Child Protection Focal Points from the Federal Ministry of Women and Human Rights Development and the Ministries of Defense, Justice, and Internal Security. (46,47) The federal government agreed to lead accountability mechanisms for grave violations identified by the CTFMR. (46,47)

Although Somalia has a coordinating mechanism to address child soldier issues, it does not have coordinating mechanisms to address other forms of child labor, including forced labor in domestic work, agriculture, and herding livestock.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including the lack of scope of existing policies to address all worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Employment Policy	Provides the Somali National Tripartite Consultative Committee with a roadmap for improving labor conditions, including stipulations related to child labor. Designed with ILO support under a Joint UN Project on Youth Employment in Somalia that was adopted in February 2019. (5,48) In 2022, the Federal Government of Somalia (FGS) and federal member states in collaboration with the ILO continued preliminary work to conduct an assessment of child labor in Somalia, which will form the basis of a forthcoming National Action Plan to Address the Worst Forms of Child Labor. (8,32) The plan calls for the deployment of a national child labor prevalence survey and numerous stakeholder meetings, including with line ministries from Somalia's federal member states. (8)
UN Child Soldier Action Plans	Establish a strategy for identifying and removing children from the Somali National Army through education and monitoring of military camps. (9) In 2012, FGS committed to two UN action plans to end grave violations against children, including the Action Plan to Eliminate Recruitment and Use of Child Soldiers and the Action Plan to End the Killing and Maiming of Children in Contravention of International Law. In October 2019, the government committed to a UN Roadmap to expedite the implementation of the two action plans. (49) The adoption of the 2019 Roadmap to Prevent the Recruitment and Use of Children in Armed Conflict was designed to address grave violations, including recruitment and use. (50) Federal governments, including Southwest and Galmudug, made efforts to implement both the 2012 action plan and the 2019 roadmap in 2022. Somalia's Ministry of Defense, for example, collaborated with other security forces, including the Somali Federal Darwish Police and SPF, on child protection-related issues. (44,45)
Somalia Social Protection Policy	Develops and strengthens components of a national social protection system, including safety net programs. Provisions include a guaranteed income floor for vulnerable households and families with children under age five. (51,52) The tiered policy is designed to protect the poorest strata of society from sinking into destitution, prevent the moderately poor from sliding into extreme poverty, and promote the livelihoods of at-risk populations. (5) The policy focuses, in part, on mitigating the vulnerability of IDPs and other populations to gender-based violence and human trafficking. (4,30) A Shock Responsive Safety Net for Human Capital Project was created to implement the Somalia Social Protection Policy. (53) The project provides cash transfers to targeted poor and vulnerable households. As of October 2022, across 880 villages 200,000 households benefited from the project in 21 districts. (53,54)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Although the government has some policies that address child soldiers, research found no evidence of any policies to address child labor in agriculture, industry, street work, commercial sexual exploitation, or domestic work.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
ACT to Protect Children Affected by Armed Conflict†	FGS awareness-raising initiative launched under the auspices of a global UN advocacy campaign highlighting children in armed conflict. (55) Child Protection Units disseminate radio and print media content regarding the prevention of child recruitment and conscription in armed conflict. Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the program during the reporting period. (7,31)
Donor-Funded Programs	UNICEF partnerships with the FGS Ministry of Defense to address issues related to the recruitment and use of child soldiers in Somalia. (39) Includes the Defectors Reintegration Program that rehabilitates and reintegrates former combatants, emphasizing the specific needs of former child soldiers, including demobilized female combatants and their dependents. (39) Six different centers provide accommodations, medical care, psychological counseling, education, and vocational training to former combatants. (39) In 2022, UNICEF also partnered with the Ministry of Education to ensure that 107,811 children (including 50,095 girls) remained enrolled in 355 primary schools at risk of closure in drought-affected regions. (56)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is partially funded by the FGS. (57)

Although the FGS implemented programs to address child soldiers and child trafficking, research found that existing programs were insufficient to address the scope of other child labor problems, including in street work and forced labor in agriculture.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Somalia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict.	2013 – 2022
	Ratify the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution, and Child Pornography.	2013 – 2022
	Ratify the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2013 – 2022
	Clarify whether the pre-1991 Labor Code and Penal Code are still in effect under the Federal Government of Somalia.	2009 – 2022
	Ensure that the law's light work provisions specify the activities in which light work may be undertaken and limit the number of hours for light work.	2009 – 2022
	Determine by national law or regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited for children, after consultation with employers' and workers' organizations.	2009 – 2022
	Raise the compulsory education age from 14 to 15 years to be commensurate with the minimum age for work.	2009 – 2022
	Criminally prohibit using, procuring, and offering a child for prostitution, pornography, and pornographic performances.	2015 – 2022
	Ensure that penalties for the commercial sexual exploitation of children are sufficiently stringent to deter violations.	2013 – 2022
	Ensure that the law protects children involved in commercial sexual exploitation from criminal charges.	2011 – 2022
Criminally prohibit child trafficking for the purposes of labor and sexual exploitation in the Federal and Member States.	2009 – 2022

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Criminally prohibit the use of children in illicit activities.	2009 – 2022
	Criminally prohibit the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2022
Enforcement	Ensure that the labor inspectorate has dedicated funding.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that labor inspections are conducted at worksites, including unannounced inspections and in targeted sectors in which child labor most frequently occurs.	2021 – 2022
	Institutionalize training for labor inspectors, including by training new labor inspectors at the beginning of their employment.	2021 – 2022
	Increase the number of labor inspectors from 35 to 79 to ensure adequate coverage of the labor force.	2020 – 2022
	Establish a referral mechanism between the labor inspectorate and social welfare services for children subjected to child labor.	2014 – 2022
	Publish information on criminal law enforcement efforts.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that criminal law enforcement officials receive sufficient training and resources to investigate, prosecute, and convict violators of the worst forms of child labor.	2012 – 2022
	Cease the recruitment and use of child soldiers by the Somali Police Force, the National Intelligence and Security Agency, and the Somali National Army, as well as Galmudug, Jubaland, and Puntland forces and all allied militia. Investigate, prosecute, and punish, as appropriate, all commanders who recruit and use children.	2015 – 2022
	Ensure that children associated with armed groups are referred to social services providers while ceasing the practices of detaining them with adults, subjecting them to lengthy interrogations without legal representation, eliciting coerced confessions, and imposing long prison terms.	2015 – 2022
Coordination	Establish a robust coordination mechanism that addresses all forms of child labor, including in forced labor in domestic work, agriculture, and herding livestock.	2009 – 2022
Government Policies	Adopt policies to address child labor in agriculture, industry, street work, domestic work, and commercial sexual exploitation.	2018 – 2022
Social Programs	Adopt a countrywide birth registration system to facilitate the identification of child labor victims.	2019 – 2022
	Conduct a national child labor prevalence survey, including data on the number of children working and attending school.	2022
	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers to education and make education accessible and safe for all children by removing all armed groups from educational facilities, constructing schools outside Mogadishu, removing enrollment fees, and ensuring that girls, IDP children, and nomadic and rural children have access.	2013 – 2022
	Develop programs to address all forms of child labor, including in street work and forced labor in agriculture. Expand the scope of existing programs to address the use of children in armed conflict, including awareness raising on worst forms of child labor and international standards related to the definition of a child in the context of work and participation in armed conflict.	2009 – 2022
	Publish activities undertaken by the ACT to Protect Children Affected by Armed Conflict program.	2022

In 2022, South Africa made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. South Africa hosted the 5th Global Conference on the Elimination of Child Labor, where delegates adopted the Durban Call to Action on Elimination of Child Labor. In addition, in August, the Department of Employment and Labor led a joint multi-departmental inspection effort that resulted in criminal child labor charges. The government also increased the benefit of the Child Support Grant by 4.3 percent and the Foster Care Grant by 1.9 percent, both of which provide direct cash transfers to reduce child vulnerability. However, children in South Africa are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, in forced begging, and use in illicit activities. Social programs are not sufficient to address the scope of child labor, and free basic education is not guaranteed by law.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in South Africa.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	15.0 (1,559,791)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	97.4
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	17.7
Primary Completion Rate (%)		91.9

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2020, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2023. (1)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization’s analysis of statistics from Survey of Activities of Young People (SAYP), 2019. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including the production of corn and fruit (3-5)
Industry	Factory work, including processing cotton to make blankets (6,7)
Services	Food service (3,8)
	Domestic work (3,4)
	Street work, including vending (3,4)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (4,5,9-11)
	Use in illicit activities, including in gang-related activity (12-14)
	Use in the production of pornography (10,15,16)
	Forced labor in domestic work, agriculture, street vending, cell phone repair shops, and begging (4,8,11,17,18)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

South Africa is a destination for child trafficking from both Southern Africa and Africa as a whole. (9,11) Young children within South Africa, mostly girls between the ages of 10 and 14 from socioeconomically disadvantaged and rural areas, are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation in major cities including Cape Town and Johannesburg. Traffickers often recruit domestic and foreign victims with promises of jobs and economic opportunity in urban areas. (9) Research suggests that during the COVID-19 pandemic, traffickers turned to online methods, including social media, to recruit children. (8) Government officials have indicated that child trafficking, primarily for commercial sexual exploitation, rose significantly during the pandemic. (19) South Africa is also considered a major destination for child sex tourism, though the impact of the pandemic likely reduced demand. (8,9) Children, especially boys and children with disabilities, are also subjected to forced begging. (3,4,18)

South African children are also subjected to the worst forms of child labor through recruitment and use in criminal activities. Gangs use child recruits, known as springbokkies, to watch for police, transport guns, deliver illicit drugs, and at times, commit acts of violence, including murder. (12-14) This phenomenon is particularly prevalent around Cape Town in the Western Cape. Children under the age of 10 do not have criminal responsibility under South Africa law, so gangs recruit children to reduce the risk of criminal prosecution for their activities. (14) In recent years, there has been a significant rise of murders committed by children, some as young as age 8, affiliated with gangs. (14)

Free basic education is not guaranteed by law. (4,20) While there are designated "no fee" schools and fee exemptions and subsidies for low-income students, research indicates that at some schools, parents must pay for school uniforms and other supplies. (3,4) Other barriers to education include poor school infrastructure, inadequate sanitation and toilets, lack of transportation, overcrowded classrooms, and lack of accommodations for students with disabilities. (21,22)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

South Africa has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in South Africa's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including a failure to guarantee by law free basic education.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 43 of the Basic Conditions of Employment Act (BCEA) (23)

Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 52 of the Defense Act (29)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*		Article 52 of the Defense Act (29)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Chapters 1-2, Articles 1-5 of the South African Schools Act (20)
Free Public Education	No		Chapter 2, Article 5 and Chapter 4, Article 39 of the South African Schools Act (20)

* Country has no conscription (29)

The South African Constitution guarantees a right to education, but free basic education is not guaranteed by law. Article 39 of the South African Schools Act allows certain schools to be designated as "no fee" schools, but all other public schools may charge fees to ensure a sufficient operating budget if a majority of parents at that school vote to do so at the beginning of the year. (20,25,30)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
South African Department of Employment and Labor (SADEL)	Enforces child labor laws by conducting inspections of worksites and operates labor centers throughout the country where complaints may be lodged. (17,31) Refers survivors of labor exploitation to social workers and reports violations to the South African Police Service (SAPS) for further investigation and to the South African Department of Justice and Constitutional Development (DOJ) for prosecution. (17,32,33)
South African Police Service (SAPS)	Enforces the legislative mandate under the Children's Act to investigate cases involving the worst forms of child labor. (17,34,35) Through its Human Trafficking Desk, monitors and evaluates police efforts to investigate human trafficking crimes, trains investigators, and refers human trafficking cases to provincial SAPS units. (36)
South African Department of Justice and Constitutional Development (DOJ)	Responsible for enforcing criminal laws against the worst forms of child labor. (17) Through its Children's Courts, which are housed within every Magistrate's court, adjudicates non-criminal child protection cases involving child abuse, abandonment, and neglect. (37) Through the National Prosecuting Authority (NPA), prosecutes criminal cases, including cases of human trafficking and other worst forms of child labor. (17,38)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in South Africa took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the South African Department of Employment and Labor (SADEL) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including inadequate allocation of financial resources.

In August 2022, SADEL conducted a joint multi-departmental inspections blitz in Pretoria, leading to the discovery of a child working in a shop. (5,39) As the law in South Africa treats child labor as a criminal offense, labor inspectors may refer child labor cases for criminal prosecution. (17,24) This case was referred to criminal law enforcement. (5,39)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in South Africa took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including inadequate training for criminal investigators to identify and investigate child trafficking.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (17)	Yes (5)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (17)	Unknown (5)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (17)	Unknown (5)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (17)	Unknown (5)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (10)	Unknown (5)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (17)	Yes (5)

South Africa's National Trafficking Hotline received 2,408 trafficking reports in 2022, 20 percent of which concerned cases of child trafficking. (5) During the reporting period, the government prosecuted, convicted, and sentenced a woman to 15 years' imprisonment for child trafficking. The accused told the parents of two children from Zimbabwe that the children would be cared for and sent to school, and instead she forced them to beg at intersections. (40) The government also held several trainings on trafficking in persons for criminal law enforcement, including workshops for a total of 460 front line police officers in Gauteng, KwaZulu-Natal, and the Western Cape between September and November, and training for a total of 100 prosecutors from the National Prosecuting Authority (NPA). (40)

Research indicates that the South African Police Service (SAPS) lacked sufficient resources to investigate all suspected cases of child trafficking and forced child labor. In recent years, there has been a steady decline in the number of SAPS officers. (10,11,41) Despite assistance from the NGO community with the operation of call centers as part of their complaint mechanism, SAPS reportedly experienced difficulty properly following up on reported cases and identifying victims of human trafficking during law enforcement activities. (3,8,11) In addition, victim identification and referral procedures were not uniformly implemented. Research indicates that in some provinces, the Department of Social Development only coordinated victim services upon receiving confirmation from SAPS that the individual had been subjected to human trafficking, and as a result, when SAPS did not pursue investigation of a case, trafficking survivors faced obstacles to services provision. (10,11)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including inadequate participation of all relevant agencies in the National Intersectoral Committee on Trafficking in Persons.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Implementation Committee on the Child Labor Program of Action	Supports the implementation of the Child Labor Program of Action. Led by SADEL, and includes representatives from government agencies, organized labor, commercial agriculture, and the ILO. (5,42) In 2022, the committee reconvened for the first time since the start of the COVID-19 pandemic. (5)

The National Intersectoral Committee on Trafficking in Persons coordinates the government's anti-human trafficking efforts, including efforts to eliminate child trafficking. (43) Research indicates that several member agencies, including SAPS, the Department of Home Affairs, and SADEL, send representatives to meetings of the National Intersectoral Committee on Trafficking in Persons or the Provincial Task Teams but engagement on key issues remains limited. (10)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Child Labor Program of Action for South Africa, Phase IV (2017–2024)	Serves as the primary policy instrument to prevent and eliminate child labor in South Africa. Provides a reciprocal referral mechanism through which SAPS informs SADEL of suspected child labor cases. (42) Identifies lead agencies in the program, including the Departments of Labor, Basic Education, Justice and Constitutional Development, Social Development, and Water and Sanitation; SAPS; NPA; and Statistics South Africa. The National Child Labor Program did not include a timeframe to meet identifiable benchmarks or to assess the progress and adequacy of implementation efforts. (42) During the reporting period, the South African government extended the policy from 2021 to 2024. (42)
Prevention and Combating of Trafficking in Persons National Policy Framework	Created to support the implementation of the 2013 Prevention and Combating of Trafficking in Persons Act. Sets a framework for interdepartmental coordination on trafficking issues. (43) Outlines the development of procedures and training programs for police and labor inspectors on human trafficking for labor exploitation, including child labor. Enhances social assistance programs to address the needs of child survivors of human trafficking, including psychological and social support, food and shelter, school and community reintegration, and placement and protection in child and youth care centers. (43) During the reporting period, the government convened two workshops to revise the National Policy Framework for planned update and adoption in 2023. (44)

In 2022, South Africa hosted the 5th Global Conference on the Elimination of Child Labor. Delegates at the Conference adopted the Durban Call to Action, which included commitments to promote decent work, end child labor in agriculture, adopt data-driven and survivor-informed policy and programmatic responses, ensure educational access, expand universal social protections, and increase financing and international cooperation for the elimination of child labor. (45)

Research shows that the government has not included child labor elimination and prevention strategies in the South African Education Action Plan or the National Development Plan. (46,47)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Thuthuzela Care Centers†	Government-run crisis centers mandated to provide services to survivors of gender-based violence, including survivors of child trafficking. The centers continued providing services in 2022. (11,40)
Direct Cash Transfer Programs†	Includes the Child Support Grant, which provides monthly unconditional direct cash transfers to help low-income parents and guardians meet the basic needs of their children, and the Foster Care Grant, which provides monthly payments of approximately $65 (R1050) to caretakers of foster children. (17,48) In 2022, the government continued both programs, increasing the Foster Care Grant benefit by 1.9 percent and the Child Support Grant by 4.3 percent. (5)
National School Nutrition Program†	Provides one or two meals—consisting of a protein, starch, and fruit or vegetable—every school day to about 9.5 million school children. As of 2020, 77 percent of public-school students received meals from this school feeding scheme. (49) The program was active in 2022. (5)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of South Africa.

Although South Africa has programs that target child trafficking and poverty alleviation, it does not have social programs with a mandate to address other worst forms of child labor, including forced begging and the use of children in illicit activities. (3,11)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in South Africa (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2022
	Establish by law free basic public education.	2018 – 2022
Enforcement	Publish criminal law enforcement data on investigations, prosecutions, convictions, and penalties imposed concerning the worst forms of child labor.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that criminal law enforcement officials are trained to properly identify cases of the worst forms of child labor and child trafficking.	2017 – 2022
	Ensure that the South African Police Service has sufficient resources to investigate all suspected cases of child trafficking and forced child labor.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that victim identification and referral mechanisms function effectively to provide services to survivors of child trafficking.	2021 – 2022
Coordination	Ensure that the National Intersectoral Committee on Trafficking in Persons includes meaningful participation from relevant agencies.	2017 – 2022
Government Policies	Include a timeframe and benchmarks in child labor policies to properly monitor and assess the progress of efforts to eliminate child labor.	2017 – 2022
	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the South African Education Action Plan and the National Development Plan.	2013 – 2022
Social Programs	Remove barriers to education by eliminating indirect costs, improving school infrastructure and sanitation, and ensuring accessibility for students with disabilities.	2009 – 2022
	Institute programs to address the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging and the use of children in illicit activities.	2010 – 2022

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

In 2022, South Sudan is receiving an assessment of no advancement. Despite initiatives to address child labor, South Sudan is assessed as having made no advancement because it demonstrated complicity in the use of forced child labor. The country's military continued to recruit children, sometimes forcibly, to fight opposition groups, and for use in supporting roles. Otherwise, the government made efforts by extending until 2024 the Comprehensive Action Plan to Prevent All Grave Violations Against Children in South Sudan. In addition, for the first time since the 2020 COVID-19 pandemic, the Ministry of Labor conducted labor inspections. However, children in South Sudan are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including forced labor in cattle herding. Children also perform dangerous tasks in construction. In 2022, the government did not hold perpetrators of child labor accountable and has yet to ratify the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons. In addition, police continued to arrest and imprison children engaged in commercial sexual exploitation, rather than treating them as victims.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in South Sudan.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	10 to 14	45.6 (463,624)
Attending School (%)	6 to 14	31.5
Combining Work and School (%)	10 to 14	10.9
Primary Completion Rate (%)		21.5

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, activities unknown (3,4)
	Cattle herding† (3,5)
	Gathering firewood and fetching water (3,4)
Industry	Construction,† including building and transporting materials (5,6)
	Rock breaking† (3,5)
	Making bricks (3,7)
	Gold mining,† including carrying soil and panning (3,4,8)
Services	Domestic work (3-5)
	Street work, including vending; polishing shoes; delivery cart pulling; preparing tea; selling black market gasoline; hawking fruits, sunglasses, and sandals; and ticket taking for group transport companies (3-5)
	Working in restaurants, tea houses, and auto-repair and convenience stores (3,9)
	Collecting scrap metal and empty bottles (6)
	Working in slaughterhouses, including transporting livestock and meat (6)

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor†	Forced labor in brickmaking, cattle herding, gold mining, domestic work, and market vending (3-5)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (4,5,10)
	Forced recruitment of children by state and non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict (3-5,10-13)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

In 2022, armed groups continued to use children for combat in armed conflict. Despite the 2018 Revitalized Agreement on the Resolution of the Conflict in the Republic of South Sudan (R-ARCSS), ethnic tensions and land disputes continue to drive violent conflict between state and non-state armed groups in the country, exposing children to the worst forms of child labor. (3,14) During the reporting period, state armed groups, including the South Sudan People's Defense Force (SSPDF); South Sudan National Police Services; and South Sudan Wildlife Services, and non-state armed groups including the Sudan People's Liberation Movement/Army in Opposition (SPLA-IO); South Sudan Opposition Alliance; and forces loyal to General Moses Lokujo recruited and used children as combatants, bodyguards, and porters during armed conflict. (14) Children recruited by armed groups lack access to basic services such as water and education, and they are particularly vulnerable to mistreatment, abuse, and further exploitation. (3) Armed groups have previously subjected children to rape and sexual abuse as in-kind payment to fighters. (9) Additionally, state and non-state armed groups recruit children from villages in which conflicts occur. There were also reports of armed groups recruiting children from the government-managed IDP camp in Bentiu during the reporting period. (14)

Of the 10,000 children engaged in tending cattle throughout the country, many are used in armed cattle raids by other tribes. An even greater number of children fight as part of local community defense forces. (4) Children abducted by armed pastoralists may be forced to join heavily militarized cattle rustling networks. Older boys are also forced to work as soldiers, herders, or cattle rustlers. (4,9) While younger children tend to smaller livestock, teenagers serve as auxiliaries for armed pastoralists or self-defense groups. Among certain tribes, cattle raiding marks a rite of passage to adulthood. (15) In addition, non-state groups often use children released from armed groups for cattle raiding, or intercommunal violence once the children arrive back in their villages. (4) Furthermore, economic pressures, including sustained flooding resulting in loss of land, cattle, and intercommunal conflict led to a continued increase in child marriages and child labor during the reporting period. Families with limited financial resources exchanged their young daughters for a bride price, or as restitution following intercommunal conflict. (3,4)

During the reporting period, the South Sudan Education Cluster published the "Education Needs Assessment in South Sudan 2021" in coordination with Save the Children and UNICEF. The report detailed inadequacies within the country's education system, including the chronic underfunding of the sector. (3,16) Although a majority of pre-primary and primary schools have reopened after prolonged pandemic-related closures, the government does not enforce school attendance, and the majority of children leave school before age 13, rendering children vulnerable to child labor and exploitation. (3,17-19) Public school teachers are paid sporadically, leading to low morale, frequent absenteeism, and high teacher attrition. (3,4,18,20,21) In addition, armed groups, including government forces, continue to occupy schools in contested areas, and ongoing military operations in conflict-affected areas have forced teachers to flee. (9,14,20) Although the Constitution and the Child Act provide for free primary education, some schools illegally require families to contribute prohibitive school fees for teachers' and other officials' salaries as well as related costs such as utilities—a practice that the South Sudanese government is taking measures to address. (17,22,23) This practice disproportionately impacts girls, because families with multiple children, who cannot afford to pay additional fees to cover all children, prioritize educating sons. Underage marriage also prevents girls from attending school. (3,4,22)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

South Sudan has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in South Sudan's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including a gap between the minimum age for work and the compulsory education age.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Section 12 of the Labor Act; Article 25(3) of the Child Act (24,25)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Sections 12 and 13 of the Labor Act; Articles 22(3), 24(1), and 25(1) of the Child Act (24,25)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 25(2) of the Child Act (24)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 10(1) and 13(2)(a) of the Labor Act; Articles 277–279 of the Penal Code; Article 13 of the Constitution (25-27)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 13(2) of the Labor Act; Articles 22(3)(b), 119 and 120 of the Child Act; Articles 276 and 278–282 of the Penal Code (24-26)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 13(2)(b) of the Labor Act; Articles 22(3)(c), 22(3)(d), 22(4), and 25(2)(m) of the Child Act; Article 276 of the Penal Code (24-26)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 13(2)(c) of the Labor Act; Article 24(1) of the Child Act; Article 383(3)(d) of the Penal Code (24-26)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 31(1) of the Child Act; Section 22 of the Sudan People's Liberation Army Act (24,28)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 31(1) of the Child Act; Sections 20 and 22(2) of the Sudan People's Liberation Army Act (24,28)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Articles 31(1), 31(2), and 32 of the Child Act (24)
Compulsory Education Age	No	13	Article 9.1(b) of the General Education Act; Article 14(1) of the Child Act (24,29)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 6(a) of the General Education Act; Article 13(4)(b) of the Labor Act; Article 14(1) of the Child Act; Article 29.2 of the Constitution (24,25,27,29)

In accordance with the Labor Act, the Ministry of Labor, Public Service and Human Resource Development (MOL) is responsible for issuing regulations to implement key elements related to child labor, including the number of hours and conditions for light work in which children are able to engage, as well as the exceptions under which children ages 16 and 17 may engage in hazardous work. However, MOL has not issued these regulations, which leaves children vulnerable to exploitative work. (21,25) In addition, as children are only required to attend school until age 13, children between the ages of 13 and 14 are particularly vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor because they are not required to be in school, but are also not legally permitted to work. (11,24,25,29)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws, including the absence of coordination between agencies, lack of defined mandates, and an overall lack of prioritization of child labor issues.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor, Public Service and Human Resource Development (MOL)	Enforces child labor laws, identifies child labor violations, and conducts workplace inspections. (3,24,25) Refers violations of child labor laws to the South Sudan National Police Service, which then investigates the violation and determines whether to charge the violator in criminal court. During the reporting period, MOL resumed labor inspections. (3)
Ministry of Justice	Oversees all courts and prosecutes violations, including those related to child labor. (4) Partners with the UNICEF-funded initiative Justice for Children, which refers victims of child labor to special courts in which judges are trained on how to adjudicate cases involving minors. This initiative was active during the reporting period; however, research was unable to find information on the number of children diverted from criminal prosecutions in 2022. (3) South Sudan's justice system faces enormous challenges, such as low capacity, insufficient funding, interference by the government and SSPDF, insufficient training for law enforcement personnel, and a scarcity of judges, prosecutors, and defense attorneys. (30-32) Previous reports indicate that prosecutors and law enforcement officials are not familiar with the legal statutes regarding the worst forms of child labor, which resulted in the imprisonment of children engaged in commercial sexual exploitation. (21,30)
South Sudan People's Defense Force (SSPDF) Directorate for Child Protection	Responsible for preventing the recruitment of children into the army, monitoring barracks, identifying child soldiers and assisting with their release, investigating allegations of child soldiering, and providing training on children's rights to child protection officers and members of SSPDF. Headed by a Brigadier General, serves as a liaison between SSPDF and the international community. (20) Research was unable to identify activities undertaken by the SSPDF Directorate for Child Protection to address child labor during the reporting period.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, the exceptionally low number of worksite inspections conducted at the national level in South Sudan may impede the enforcement of child labor laws (Table 6).

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown (4)	Unknown (3)
Number of Labor Inspectors	12 (4)	14 (3)

During the reporting period, the Ministry of Finance and Planning did not provide any regular funding to MOL for labor inspections. MOL is authorized to retain 20 percent of the fees it collects for work permits, and 20 percent of the fines it collects for labor law violations; MOL divides this revenue between the five directorates within the ministry to pay for basic necessities such as utilities and some salaries. (3) No labor law violations were discovered during the reporting period, leaving the ministry without sufficient funding. (3,4) All inspections during the reporting period took place in the capital as there was no budget for inspectors to travel elsewhere in South Sudan. Most inspections were conducted in the hospitality sector, specifically hotels, where children are not known to work. (3) MOL lacks sufficient resources, including vehicles, to investigate child labor complaints, particularly in the informal sector. (3,21,33) Research also indicates that South Sudan does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (3,34,35) In addition, there is a high level of absenteeism among ministry staff, and salaries for civil servants in nearly every ministry were not paid for several months, further hindering the labor inspectorate's ability to enforce child labor laws. (20,21)

In 2022, labor inspectors were trained on the application of existing child labor and hazardous child labor laws. (3) While labor inspectors in South Sudan are not authorized to assess penalties, they can issue compliance notices requiring the violating business to remedy the violation; however, regulations do not specify monetary penalties for infractions. Labor inspectors can also refer cases to the police and any violations to the Labor Act, including child labor violations, can carry criminal penalties, including imprisonment of up to 5 years. (3,4,25)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in South Sudan took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including a lack of financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	No (4)	No (3)
Number of Investigations	0 (4)	0 (3)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	0 (4)	0 (3)
Number of Convictions	0 (4)	0 (3)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	No (4)	No (3)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	No (3)	No (3)

Although the August 2013 Punitive Order commits the SSPDF to hold its military officers accountable for the recruitment or use of children, and the government continued to release child soldiers during the reporting period, the government has neither investigated nor prosecuted officers who allegedly committed such crimes, despite ongoing evidence of officer involvement in and knowledge of child recruitment. (3,5,30,36,37) Research indicates that the budget allocated to agencies responsible for criminal law enforcement is insufficient, resulting in investigators lacking sufficient transportation and logistic necessities to carry out investigations related to the worst forms of child labor. (3)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including the lack of a coordination mechanism to address all worst forms of child labor.

South Sudan

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
South Sudan Disarmament, Demobilization, and Reintegration Commission (NDDRC)	Oversees and coordinates the disarmament, demobilization, and reintegration of former child soldiers, and is supported by the UN Mission in South Sudan, UNICEF, and the UN Country Task Force on Monitoring and Reporting. Includes members of the pro-Machar Sudan People's Liberation Army – In Opposition (SPLA-IO), and the South Sudan Opposition Alliance (SSOA), along with parties belonging to the Revitalized Agreement on the Resolution of the Conflict in the Republic of South Sudan (R-ARCSS). (20) Maintains a network of local contacts (NGOs and community members) throughout the country who work to locate the families of rescued child soldiers, provide them with vocational training, and assist with their reintegration into civilian life. The NDDRC is currently governed by the Action Plan of the Government of the Republic of South Sudan Regarding Children Associated with Armed Conflict in South Sudan, which was signed on February 7, 2020, by all parties of the R-ARCSS. (9) Despite not receiving funding during the reporting period, the NDDRC was able to function, and was a driving force behind the May 2022 meeting with stakeholders to extend the Comprehensive Action Plan. (3,4)

The Ceasefire and Transitional Security Arrangements Monitoring and Verification Mechanism (CTSAMVM) monitors compliance with the Revitalized Agreement on the Resolution of the Conflict in the Republic of South Sudan and supports the NDDRC's mandate of reintegrating former child soldiers into civilian life. During the reporting period, the CTSAMVM investigated and reported on cases of suspected child soldiers, and incidents of gender-based violence against women and children by armed militia groups, including militia groups receiving material support from political elites. (3,38,39) In June of 2022, President Salva Kiir issued a decree on the formation of the National Human Rights Council, which will be chaired by the Minister of Justice, and will include the ministers of International Cooperation, Foreign Affairs, Defense, Interior, Gender, Child and Social Welfare, as well as the Child Protection Directorate. (14) In addition, South Sudan has a Technical Task Force on Anti-Human Trafficking and Smuggling of Persons to oversee the process of ratifying the Palermo Protocol and policy development for anti-trafficking and smuggling of migrants. Members include the Ministry of Justice (co-chair); Ministry of the Interior (co-chair); the National Security Service – Internal Security Bureau; MOL; and the Ministry of Gender, Child, and Social Welfare (MGCSW). (40) The Task Force met during the reporting period, even though it did not receive funding from the government. (3,4)

Although South Sudan has a coordinating mechanism to address child soldier issues, it does not have coordinating mechanisms to address other worst forms of child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of policies covering all worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
Revitalized Agreement on the Resolution of the Conflict in the Republic of South Sudan (2018) (R-ARCSS)	Replaces all components of the 2015 Agreement on the Resolution of the Conflict in the Republic of South Sudan, including the extension of the Action Plan to Combat the Use of Child Soldiers, and reaffirms commitments made under the 2017 Agreement on the Cessation of Hostilities. (41-43) Establishes the structure of a Revitalized Transitional Government of National Unity and outlines actions to be taken by signatories, including prohibiting the recruitment and use of child soldiers by armed forces or militias, and stipulates that all civilian areas, including schools, shall be immediately demilitarized. (41) Research was unable to determine whether activities relevant to children were undertaken to implement R-ARCSS during the reporting period.
General Education Strategic Plan (2017–2022)	Aimed to improve access to, and quality of, education through grants and cash transfers to girls in upper primary and secondary schools, as well as payment of teachers' salaries. (44) The public education system in South Sudan is highly dependent on donor funding, but during the reporting year, the government announced that education spending will increase to 17 percent of the budget in fiscal year 2022/23, up from the 6.1 percent allocated in fiscal year 2021/22. (3,21)
Comprehensive Action Plan to Prevent Grave Violations Against Children in South Sudan	Aims to prevent and mitigate grave violations against children, including the recruitment of child soldiers and attacks on schools. Applies to all state and non-state groups and came into force under the February 2020 transitional government. (9,45) Parties who have signed on to this commitment include SSPDF and Riek Machar's SPLA-IO, both of which were reported for child recruitment and use in armed conflict, as well as SSOA. (45) This document contains a list of concrete steps meant to "halt and prevent the violations against children in situations of armed conflict." (9,45) In 2022, the R-ARCSS signatories agreed to extend the plan through April 2024. (3)

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

During the reporting period, MGCSW drafted their 5-year strategic plan for 2022–2027. The plan has eight strategic areas, including child protection and promotion of the rights of children. (46) However, although South Sudan has policies addressing education, and the recruitment and use of children in armed conflict, research found no evidence of policies to address child labor in the agriculture and livestock sectors, nor could research identify policies addressing other worst forms of child labor, such as the commercial sexual exploitation of children. (47)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including a lack of social programs to address child labor in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Dallaire Initiative (2018–2022)	Romeo Dallaire Child Soldiers Initiative-funded project ($2.2 million) aimed to train 1,200 South Sudanese soldiers, police, and prison personnel on addressing the use of children in armed conflict through behavior change. (19) In 2022, the Institute concluded its program to train and educate security sector personnel on child protection issues. (3)
UNICEF and Donor-Funded Programs	During the reporting period, UNICEF and its partners reached 38,163 children in at-risk communities with key messages on Explosive Ordnance Risk Education. (13) 52,796 children were reached with psychosocial support services in child-friendly spaces, schools, and communities. In addition, UNICEF and partners scaled up to provide emergency education services to 119,401 children impacted by the humanitarian crises. (13) This included the construction of 81 temporary learning spaces and 1 secondary school in Greater Pibor Administrative Area, Unity, Jonglei, Warrap, Northern Bahr El Ghazal, and Eastern Equatoria State. Additionally, UNICEF, through EU funding, made two rounds of incentive payments to 8,114 teachers in hard-to-reach areas across the country. (13)
Alternative Education System	Aims to improve literacy and provide out-of-school populations an alternative to formal education. (44) Includes the Accelerated Learning Program, which implements the Ministry of General Education and Instruction program primarily targeting children ages 13 to 17 who have reenrolled in lower primary classes. Also includes Community Girls' Schools, located in closer proximity to rural communities, and the Pastoralist Education Program, which targets children and adults in pastoral areas. (44) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken through the system during the reporting period. (32)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

Although South Sudan has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, including in commercial sexual exploitation, the agricultural sector, and other sectors in which child labor is known to occur. In addition, the reintegration and rehabilitation services provided to child soldiers is insufficient to meet existing needs. (17,21,48,49)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in South Sudan (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2013 – 2022
	Ensure that the Ministry of Labor drafts and issues regulations to implement key elements related to child labor, including the number of hours and conditions for light work, and the exceptions under which children ages 16 and 17 may engage in hazardous work.	2020 – 2022
	Raise the compulsory education age of 13 to the minimum age for work of 14 to comply with international standards.	2013 – 2022
Enforcement	Report activities undertaken by all agencies responsible for child labor law enforcement on an annual basis, including those undertaken by the Ministry of Justice and the South Sudan People's Defense Force Directorate for Child Protection.	2022
	Ensure that victims of commercial sexual exploitation and other worst forms of child labor are correctly identified as victims and are referred to appropriate social services, rather than being treated as criminals.	2012 – 2022

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Publish data related to labor law enforcement, including the amount of funding provided for the labor inspectorate.	2012 – 2022
	Ensure that the Ministry of Finance and Planning provides the Ministry of Labor with regular and sufficient funding for labor inspections that covers all operational costs needed to conduct routine labor inspections, including inspections targeting all sectors in which child labor is known to occur, such as in the informal sector and outside of the capital city.	2012 – 2022
	Increase the number of labor inspectors from 14 to 109 to ensure adequate coverage of the labor force of approximately 4.3 million people.	2016 – 2022
	Establish a mechanism to assess penalties for child labor violations and ensure that labor regulations provide monetary penalties for child labor infractions that are high enough to serve as a deterrent.	2019 – 2022
	Establish a mechanism to receive child labor complaints and ensure that routine inspections are conducted by the labor inspectorate.	2022
	Ensure that the criminal justice system has adequate funding to recruit sufficient personnel—including judges, prosecutors, and defense attorneys—and is able to conduct investigations into child labor violations and implementing regulations for child labor-related laws. Ensure independence of the justice system by eliminating interference by government officials and armed groups, including the national armed forces.	2022
	Establish a formal referral mechanism between criminal authorities and social services for victims of the worst forms of child labor, including forced child labor and commercial sexual exploitation.	2014 – 2022
	Ensure that training related to the worst forms of child labor is provided to criminal investigators and prosecutors and that prison sentences for child labor crimes are imposed and carried out.	2015 – 2022
	Investigate, prosecute, and impose penalties on perpetrators, including government officials, who recruit or use children in armed conflict.	2013 – 2022
	End the forced and voluntary recruitment or use of children by state and non-state armed groups, including the South Sudan People's Defense Force and the Sudan People's Liberation Movement Army – In Opposition, in compliance with the Child's Act.	2012 – 2022
Coordination	Ensure that the Technical Task Force on Anti-Human Trafficking and Smuggling of Persons is active, sufficiently funded, and able to carry out its intended mandates, including ratifying the Palermo Protocol and developing policies to address trafficking of migrant workers.	2020 – 2022
	Ensure that the National Disarmament, Demobilization, and Reintegration Commission is active and able to assist rescued child soldiers by locating their families, providing them with vocational training, and assisting with their reintegration into civilian life.	2021 – 2022
	Establish a coordinating mechanism to address all worst forms of child labor, including the commercial sexual exploitation of children, and ensure that its mandates are clearly defined.	2013 – 2022
Government Policies	Ensure that signatories of the Revitalized Agreement on the Resolution of the Conflict in the Republic of South Sudan and of the Comprehensive Action Plan to Prevent Grave Violations Against Children in South Sudan do not continue to recruit or re-recruit children, and that actions are taken to demilitarize civilian areas, including schools.	2021 – 2022
	Adopt policies to address child labor in all sectors in which it is known to occur, particularly in the agriculture and livestock sectors, as well as all relevant worst forms of child labor such as commercial sexual exploitation.	2022
Social Programs	Conduct a national child labor survey, including research to determine the activities carried out by children in all sectors in which children are known to work, to inform policies and social programs.	2013 – 2022
	Ensure that children complete their primary education by adequately funding the sector, enforcing school attendance, reliably paying teachers' salaries, addressing the lack of school infrastructure, and by withdrawing government forces from occupied schools.	2014 – 2022
	Ensure that activities are undertaken to implement the Alternative Education System—including its Accelerated Learning Program, Community Girls' Schools, and the Pastoralist Education Program—all of which aim to improve literacy and provide out-of-school populations an alternative approach to formal education.	2021 – 2022
	Increase the scope of social programs to reach more children at risk of child labor, including those involved in commercial sexual exploitation, agricultural work, and work with livestock, as well as those from low-income families, those living in rural areas, and girls.	2012 – 2022
	Continue to cooperate with child protection agencies, pursuant to Article 2.1.10 of the Revitalized Agreement on the Resolution of the Conflict in South Sudan, to disarm and immediately release children in armed groups and transfer them to appropriate social services providers. Ensure that the rehabilitation services provided to child soldiers are sufficient.	2014 – 2022

In 2022, Sri Lanka made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government amended the Children and Young Persons Ordinance to raise the age of majority from 16 to 18 to align this law with international standards. The government worked with the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund to implement a $34 million campaign to support children's school attendance, nutrition, and safety in response to the economic crisis. The Sri Lankan Police also made criminal law enforcement data related to the worst forms of child labor publicly available for the first time. However, children in Sri Lanka are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and forced domestic work. Research indicates that some children in rural areas face barriers to accessing education, including difficulties in traveling to school, an inadequate number of teachers, and challenges with registration. Furthermore, the labor inspectorate lacked sufficient staffing and funding to carry out an adequate number of inspections, including in factories in the northern and eastern provinces.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Sri Lanka.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	0.8 (28,515)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	98.0
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	0.9
Primary Completion Rate (%)		98.2

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including raising livestock (3-7)
	Fishing, including deep-sea fishing,† processing fish, and selling fish (3,4,6-10)
Industry	Manufacturing, including textiles and garments, and food processing (3,4,6,7,11)
	Mining† and construction† (3,4,6-9,11)
Services	Domestic work (3,4,6,7,9,12)
	Vending, in stores and on the streets, and begging (3,4,6-9)
	Working in hotels, restaurants, and offices (6)
	Providing security for people and property (8)
	Transportation (4)
	Painting and washing of buildings (8)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor†	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (5,9,12-15)
	Forced domestic work (5,12)
	Use in illicit activities, including drug trafficking (5,12,16,17)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

During the reporting period, a severe economic crisis and an associated food emergency led to increased reports of children engaging in child labor and decreased school attendance. (8,18-21) According to the Sri Lankan Department of Labor, children living in coastal and agricultural areas, mining areas, and firewood-producing areas were vulnerable to child labor. (9,22) Cases of debt distress for housing and accommodation expenses were documented among workers, many of whom also faced ethnic discrimination, at private, smallholding tea estates, which increased the risk of child labor in the tea sector. (4,9,23) Smallholder farmers faced increased labor and production costs and labor shortages during harvest times, and often relied on children under the age of 12 to help during the harvest period. (24)

There are reports of children subjected to child trafficking internally, including from tea estates, to perform domestic work in Colombo. In addition, child domestic workers are subjected to sexual, physical, and psychological abuse, non-payment of wages, and restrictions of movement. (5,9) Children, predominantly boys, are also forced into commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, in tourist areas as part of the sex tourism industry. (4,8,9,13,15,25) Mobile apps with GPS are increasingly being used to indicate availability of minors for commercial sexual exploitation. (4,26) There are also reports of sexual exploitation of children at state-run orphanages. (12)

Although the government provides free, compulsory education, some children face barriers to accessing education due to a lack of transportation and an inadequate number of teachers. There are a lack of high schools in some rural areas, and children are particularly vulnerable to leaving school early. (8,9) Additionally, there have been reports that children who are unable to provide birth certificates, such as children born abroad to Sri Lankan mothers and non-Sri Lankan fathers, are denied access to education. (8) The 2016 Child Activity Survey’s definition of child labor does not align with international standards because children ages 5 to 11 working less than 15 hours per week and children ages 12 to 14 working less than 25 hours per week in agriculture are not counted as child laborers. These issues may have led to an underestimation of the population of children in child labor in the Child Activity Survey. (6) In 2022, government officials began discussion of the questionnaire for the next Child Activity Survey. (8)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Sri Lanka has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government's laws and regulations are in line with relevant international standards (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Sections 7, 9, 13, and 34 of the Employment of Women, Young Persons, and Children Act; Section 6 of the Employment of Women, Young Persons and Children Amendment Act; Section 2 of the Shop and Office Employees (Regulation of Employment and Remuneration) (Amendment) Act; Sections 2–7 of the Factories (Amendment) Act; Sections 2–4 of the Minimum Wages (Indian Labor) (Amendment) Act (27-31)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Section 20A of the Employment of Women, Young Persons, and Children Act (27)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Hazardous Occupations Regulations No. 01; Section 20A of the Employment of Women, Young Persons, and Children Act (27,32)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Sections 358A, 360C, 360A(2), and 360A(4) of the Penal Code (33)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Sections 360C, 360A(2), and 360A(4) of the Penal Code (33)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Sections 286A, 360B, 360A(2), and 360A(4) of the Penal Code (33)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Sections 288, 288A, 288B, and 360C of the Penal Code (33)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Sections 20A and 31 of the Employment of Women, Young Persons, and Children Act (27)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		358(1)(d) of the Penal Code; Sections 20A and 31 of the Employment of Women, Young Persons, and Children Act (27,33)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Section 43 of the Education Ordinance; Compulsory Attendance of Children at Schools Regulation No. 1 of 2015 (34,35)
Free Public Education	Yes		Section 47 of the Education Ordinance (34)

* Country has no conscription (36)

During the reporting period, the government amended the Children and Young Persons Ordinance to define individuals under 18 years old as children in line with international standards. (37) This change enables children under age 18, previously age 16, to be treated as minors in the criminal justice system and be eligible for government services designated for children. (38-41)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Department of Labor, in the Ministry of Labor and Foreign Employment (MOLFE)	Enforces labor laws related to the employment of children and young persons, including overseeing the labor inspectorate and the Women and Children's Affairs Division. Receives public complaints of child labor lodged in national and district-level offices. (3,8,9,42) Receives complaints from other state organizations, including from the National Child Protection Authority. Conducts special investigations of child labor and hazardous labor, and takes legal action as necessary. (3,9) In 2022, investigated 145 complaints of child labor and hazardous child labor, resulting in 11 confirmed violations. Children were referred for assistance to relevant care organizations, including the Department of Probations and Child Care Services and the respective Divisional Secretariats. (8) During the reporting period, MOLFE incorporated actions from the National Child Protection Authority's action plan into its own operations and began establishing a Forced Labor Task Force, with one meeting held in 2022. Also strengthened the national coordination mechanism for child labor through Alliance 8.7. (8,43) Moreover, conducted a public awareness campaign about the elimination of child labor, including producing a theme song and documentary that was broadcast over the national state channel in both Sinhala and Tamil and shared via social media. Additionally, implemented a SMS messaging campaign on minimum age and hazardous employment and partnered with human resources and management faculties of government and government-approved universities to educate undergraduate students on laws, including child labor laws. (8,43)
Sri Lankan Police	The Children and Women's Bureau of the Sri Lankan Police enforces laws on child labor, child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation of children, and the use of children in illicit activities. (5) Also supervises the National Child Protection Authority Special Police Investigation Unit, which has approximately 40 police officers who investigate complaints and enforce criminal laws involving children, including complaints of child labor and the worst forms of child labor. (5,8,9,38,44) Has approximately 300 child protection officers based in the districts who are tasked with preventing child exploitation and protecting survivors. (9) The Criminal Investigations Department of the Sri Lanka Police investigates cases and reports outcomes to magistrates. (8) The Criminal Investigations Department also prepares indictments and forwards cases to the relevant High Court. The Attorney General's Office is responsible for prosecution in the High Court. (8) In 2022, the National Child Protection Authority conducted 13 information sessions with hotel owners and personnel to improve awareness of commercial sexual exploitation of children during travel. (38) Also sent some staff to participate in a 2-day training on forensic interviewing and worked with Save the Children to conduct research and develop training materials on child trafficking. (8,38)
National Anti-Human Trafficking Taskforce	Coordinates interagency efforts to address all human trafficking issues, including commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor. Falls under the Ministry of Defense's National Intelligence Division and is chaired by the Chief of National Intelligence. Includes representatives from a range of government agencies, including the Ministry of Social Services, Ministry of Women and Child Affairs, Department of Labor, National Child Protection Authority, Department of Probation and Child Care, Police Criminal Division, and Bureau for the Prevention of Abuse to Women and Children. (38,44)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Sri Lanka took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Foreign Employment that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient financial resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$1,933,333 (4)	$1,414,103 (8)
Number of Labor Inspectors	570 (4)	587 (8)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	Yes (28)	Yes (28)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	Yes (4)	Yes (8)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksite	71,246 (43,45)	70,089 (8)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	7 (8)	11 (8)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	1 (4)	2 (8)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	3 (4)	2 (8)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (4)	Yes (8)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (4)	Yes (8)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (28)	Yes (28)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (4)	Yes (8)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (4)	Yes (8)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (8)	Yes (8,43)

Following amendments in 2021 to increase the minimum age of employment to age 16, in 2022, Department of Labor officers were issued implementing guidance on the minimum age for work. (8) Moreover, 68 labor inspectors from all regional offices participated in a training on the amendments and 28 labor inspectors attended a 2-day workshop on labor laws and court procedures, including those related to child labor. In addition, 90 Department of Labor officers, 45 police officers, and 45 probation officers attended 4 training programs on child labor, hazardous child labor, and child trafficking. (8)

The labor inspectorate is not authorized to assess penalties. Penalties for child labor law violations are available under the Employment of Women, Young Persons, and Children Act, instead of under the authority of the labor inspectorate. (8,27) Penalties include a maximum fine of up to $50 and up to 12 months' imprisonment. The magistrate's court levies any fines, imprisonment, or compensation for the child victim. (4) The fine is collected by the registrar's office of the court, and compensation is given to the guardian of the child or deposited in a bank account under the child's name. (8) While in practice there is coordination and an informal referral mechanism between the National Child Protection Authority and the Department of Labor, there is not a formal coordination system. Moreover, there are gaps and delays in referrals between the police and the Department of Labor. (8,43) During the reporting period, the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund (UNICEF) began conducting a mapping of the referral mechanism and an assessment of the complaint mechanism. (8) Additionally, although the hazardous occupations list includes domestic work, labor inspectors only have the authority to inspect private residences for violations against child domestic workers if a complaint was received. (4,12) Routine inspections, especially of factories in the northern and eastern provinces, were limited by insufficient staffing, insufficient budget, and a fuel shortage. (4,8,9,12,46)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Sri Lanka took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including a lack of resources to carry out investigations.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (4)	Yes (8)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (4)	19 (8)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (4)	3 (8)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (4)	0 (8)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (4)	Yes (8)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (4)	Yes (8)

In 2022, the Children and Women's Bureau of the Sri Lankan Police conducted an exercise to identify children engaged in begging in four locations. Children were removed from their locations and referred to the appropriate social services. (8) During the reporting period, Sri Lankan Police investigated three cases related to forced child labor, seven cases related to child commercial sexual exploitation, and nine cases related to the use of children in illicit activities. The Sri Lankan Police made these disaggregated criminal data available for the first time. (8)

The government arrested 41 people in a high-profile child sex trafficking case in 2021, including 1 Deputy Chairman of a local divisional council, 2 police officers, and a Navy officer; however, the investigation is still paused. (4,43,47,48) There are isolated reports that a lack of awareness and misunderstanding of human trafficking led some local authorities to arrest or detain child sex trafficking survivors for alleged unlawful acts committed as a direct result of trafficking without proper screening; however, the government did not penalize child human trafficking survivors for unlawful acts that traffickers compelled them to commit when survivors were properly identified. (12,25,46) Moreover, research found that investigators did not have adequate facilities to conduct investigations and record evidence, such as computers and transportation, or human resources to carry out investigations. (3,4,8,9,49)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Steering Committee on Child Labor Elimination	Coordinates efforts to prevent and eliminate child labor, including the implementation of the National Policy on the Elimination of Child Labor in Sri Lanka. Chaired by the Secretary of MOLFE and includes representatives from key government agencies, employers' and workers' organizations, ILO, UNICEF, and NGOs. (8,9) In 2022, convened one time and discussed consolidating agencies' individual action plans and increasing implementation of the Child Labor-Free Zone model. (8,43)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Policy on the Elimination of Child Labor in Sri Lanka	Aims to mainstream child labor issues into national development policies, improve enforcement, and support collaboration with key stakeholders. (50) During the reporting period, the Women and Children's Affairs Division of the Department of Labor implemented awareness raising and training activities as outlined in this policy. (8,43)
National Child Protection Policy	Established by the National Child Protection Authority as a measure to address issues faced by children, including reducing sexual exploitation of children during travel in Sri Lanka. (3,9,43) During the reporting period, conducted an education awareness campaign and began consulting stakeholders on commercial sexual exploitation of children in the tourism sector. (51)
ILO Decent Work Country Program (2018–2022)	Detailed the priorities and outcomes required to make progress towards the goal of decent work for all. Identified key areas of work for the eradication of child labor by 2022, including operationalizing the Child Labor-Free Zone model in additional districts, expanding the inspection system to cover child labor in the informal sector, raising the minimum age for employment to age 16, revising regulations on hazardous child labor, improving the complaints and referral mechanisms, and regularly collecting data on child labor. (52) During 2022, the existing Decent Work Country Program was extended. (8)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (8,53,54)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate funding to address child labor in all regions.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Child Labor-Free Zone Model†	Local government initiatives that seek to eliminate child labor through the identification of children engaged in child labor, a rehabilitation program, assistance to families of children at risk of engaging in child labor, and an awareness-raising campaign. Operated by district secretariats with assistance from the Department of Labor and with technical and financial support from ILO. (9) During the reporting period, existing programming was continued in four districts; however, expansion was paused. (8)
Humanitarian Action for Children*	$34 million UNICEF-led campaign to support children's school attendance, nutrition, and safety in response to the economic crisis. In 2022, provided educational materials to over 285,000 children, provided cash transfers for 3,000 families, and enabled access to the 1929 Helpline for 2,000 people. (21)
'1929' Childline Sri Lanka‡	National Child Protection Authority-funded and operated 24-hour toll-free emergency telephone service for vulnerable and abused children. Connects children in need of help to direct assistance and rehabilitation services. (3,55) Reported to be active during 2022. (55)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Sri Lanka.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (4,8,9,21,56)

The Provincial Department of Probation and Child Care Services operates 379 childcare institutions that provide services such as access to basic needs, pediatric and psychiatric care, and educational services for children involved in child exploitation cases, including cases related to the worst forms of child labor. (38,43) In 2022, the Department of Labor entered into an MOU with the Malinan Gold Marie Nidahase Ran Daruwo Fund to financially support families of children previously engaging in child labor and families identified as vulnerable to child labor by providing educational scholarships to the child and support to families to start a business. (8)

However, due to the economic crisis and the government's reduction in budgets, some state school meal programs ended. (8)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Sri Lanka (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Provide investigators with additional funding and adequate resources—including transportation, fuel, computers, facilities to record evidence, and human resources—to adequately investigate forced labor, child trafficking, and the commercial sexual exploitation of children.	2011 – 2022
	Provide adequate staffing in the northern and eastern provinces for the labor inspectorate to carry out inspections.	2019 – 2022
	Ensure that labor inspectors have the authority to inspect private residences for violations against child workers if they have reasonable suspicion of child labor violations occurring, regardless of whether an official complaint is received.	2021 – 2022
	Address the delays and gaps in referrals between the Department of Labor, National Child Protection Authority, and Sri Lankan Police.	2022
Social Programs	Ensure that the definition of child labor used in national child labor surveys to calculate child labor statistics aligns with international standards so that the estimated population of children in child labor in the Child Activity Survey is correct.	2017 – 2022
	Improve access to education by addressing difficulties with transportation to schools, teacher shortages, an inadequate number of high schools in rural areas, and barriers related to enrollment documents.	2012 – 2022
	Reinstate school meal programs in order to support school attendance.	2022
	Institute programs to address vulnerabilities to child labor, particularly for ethnic minorities, in tea estates and in coastal, agricultural, mining, and firewood-producing areas.	2019 – 2022
	Ensure the continued implementation and expansion of key social programs to address child labor in line with the Decent Work Country Program, including the Child Labor-Free Zone Model.	2022

In 2022, Suriname made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The National Commission on Combating Child Labor translated television and radio programs into six languages and held awareness-raising sessions on child labor. The government also increased the number of convictions it secured for child labor crimes and signed bilateral and regional enforcement arrangements with French Guiana, Brazil, and Guyana that included language on joint efforts to combat cross-border criminal activities, including human trafficking. In addition, the government launched a program to provide inclusive access to all levels of education, with a specific focus on children in the interior and improving the quality of lower secondary education. However, children in Suriname are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in gold mining. The compulsory education age does not reach the minimum age for employment, leaving some children vulnerable to labor exploitation. In addition, while Suriname's laws criminalize sexual acts with a minor under 16, they do not criminally prohibit the use of a child under 16 for commercial sex. The government did not report the number of child labor inspections it conducted.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Suriname. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	7.2 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	95.3
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	7.3
Primary Completion Rate (%)		80.4

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2021, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2023. (1)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 6 (MICS 6), 2018. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (4,6,8)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, including in informal mining camps in Suriname's remote interior. (7,9,10) In the capital of Paramaribo, children engage primarily in street vending. In addition, children work in small-scale gold mines in the southeast region of the country, in which they risk exposure to mercury and cyanide. (7) Children have also been reported to be working in small-scale construction and wood processing companies outside Paramaribo. (7,11) Migrant populations, especially those with irregular status residing in the country, are particularly vulnerable to both sex and labor trafficking due to challenges associated with their precarious legal status. (12,13) Children also resort to selling goods along busy roadways and take on informal jobs in other sectors, leaving them vulnerable and exposed to dangerous equipment, chemicals, and unregulated working conditions. (3)

Although Suriname’s net attendance percentage for primary school is high, it drops significantly for secondary school. Research indicates that there are disparities in education completion rates based on geographic and socioeconomic status, and that secondary school completion rates in the interior are as low as 15 percent. (14) Limited economic opportunities and inequality require children to work rather than continue their education (3,15,14) Children in the interior faced more barriers to education as many schools in the region opened significantly later than schools in the coastal area after nation-wide COVID-19 pandemic restrictions were lifted. These schools also did not develop adequate plans to ensure that students caught up on materials and classes missed due to the pandemic. (3) Furthermore, flooding in the interior led to additional school closures, and the high cost of transportation was an obstacle for attendance. (3,16)

Although children who are not citizens of Suriname can access free public education if they provide a birth certificate and vaccination records, there is limited reporting of instances in which children were denied access to education due to incomplete paperwork or their citizenship and residency status. These cases were reported among the Guyanese population in Suriname’s western border district, Nickerie, and the Brazilian population in Paramaribo. (3,8,17,18) Research suggests that families residing illegally in the country have also kept their children out of school to avoid being reported to authorities. (3)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Suriname has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Suriname's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including an age for compulsory education that is less than the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Articles 1 (j–l), 3, and 11 of the Children and Young Persons Labor Act (19)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 1 (k and l) and 11 of the Children and Youth Persons Labor Act; Article 1 of the Decree on Hazardous Labor for Youth (19,20)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 2 and 3 of the Decree on Hazardous Labor for Youth; Article 11 of the Children and Youth Persons Labor Act (19,20)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 334, 338, and 339 of the Penal Code; Article 15 of the Constitution; Article 1 of Law on Labor for Children and Young Persons (19,21,22)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 307 and 334 of the Penal Code (22)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 291, 293, 297, 298, 303a, and 306 of the Penal Code (22)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 9 of the Conscription Act (23)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	No	12	Article 39 of the Constitution; Article 20 of the Law on Basic Education (21,24)
Free Public Education	Yes		Articles 38 and 39 of the Constitution (21)

* Country has no conscription (25)

Suriname's laws do not sufficiently prohibit commercial sexual exploitation of children because while it is criminal to have a sexual relationship with a child under the age of 16, the use of a child under age 16 for commercial sex is not criminally prohibited. In addition, while the Penal Code establishes penalties for the production and trafficking of drugs, it does not specifically prohibit the use, procuring, and offering of a child in the production and trafficking of drugs. (22) Moreover, Article 20 of the Law on Basic Education requires children to attend school only until they are 12 years old. (24) This makes children ages 12 to 16 particularly vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor because they are not legally required to attend school nor are they legally permitted to work.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Suriname

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor, Employment Opportunity and Youth Affairs (MOL)	Enforces laws related to child labor. (3,4) Reports suspected forced labor cases, including the worst forms of child labor, within 45 minutes of identification to the Trafficking in Persons (TIP) Unit of the Suriname Police Force. (4) Contains the Labor Inspectorate, which is required to report alleged cases of child labor and forced labor to the police. (3)
Suriname Police Force	Enforces criminal laws related to child labor. (3) Includes the Youth Affairs Police, who cover law enforcement involving children under age 18 and are jointly responsible for child labor-related crimes. Also includes the TIP Unit, which investigates reports and allegations of human trafficking and forced sexual exploitation nationwide, including cases involving children. (7,11,26) The TIP Unit scaled up its collaboration with the Immigration Unit of the Military Police to support the identification of suspected cases arriving at the Johan Adolf Pengel International Airport. During the reporting period, the TIP Unit scheduled two trips to the interior, where it conducted inspections of night clubs in mining areas, provided awareness sessions on human trafficking and smuggling, and established collaborations with local and tribal leadership. (27) The TIP Unit along with representatives of the Prosecutors' Office regularly inspect clubs and brothels. (27)
Prosecutor's Office	Investigates and prosecutes human trafficking cases, and enforces criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (3,4) The TIP Desk of the Prosecutors' Office works closely with the TIP Unit of the Police during the investigation of cases. (27)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Suriname took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor (MOL) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient financial resources.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown (8)	Unknown (3)

During the reporting period, the MOL increased its collaboration with the District Commissioner's Office of Brokopondo and trained staff at that office to conduct labor inspections on its behalf. The Ministry has been collaborating with different community organizations and is seeking their support in identifying potential instances of child labor. (3) In December, the Brazil School for Labor Inspection gave a 2-day training on data generation, labor inspection, local coordination between stakeholders as it relates to child labor, and the execution of the national policy to combat child labor. Participants in the training included labor inspectors, members of the National Commission to Combat Child Labor, representatives from the Ministry of Social Affairs, representatives from labor unions, representatives from a gold mining company, and staff from the District Commissioner's Office of Brokopondo. (3)

No data on the number of labor inspections were provided for the reporting period, but the MOL confirmed that the number of inspections decreased significantly compared to 2021 as the COVID-19 Cluster Team, which was led by the labor inspectorate, was disbanded. (3) The labor inspectorate lacked both sufficient inspectors and equipment to conduct necessary labor inspections. (3,4,15) Most inspections were unannounced, in the formal sector, and centered around the coastal area. Labor inspectors check for child labor in targeted sectors and must be accompanied by police with a special warrant to inspect private homes or farms. No children were removed from child labor as a result of inspections during the reporting period. (3)

In June, a review of the reciprocal referral mechanism was conducted and identified several obstacles, including that the mechanism is not sufficient to provide long-term solutions to child labor issues that are reported. (3,8) The Ministries of Social Affairs and Labor, with support of UNICEF and other stakeholders, began drafting new policies to strengthen referral mechanisms. (3)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Suriname took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including the insufficient allocation of financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	No (8)	No (3)
Number of Investigations	2 (8)	0 (3)

Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	No (8)	Yes (3)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (8)	Yes (3)

In July, the police launched a website that provides information on human trafficking and smuggling, updates on activities of the Trafficking in Persons (TIP) Unit, and the opportunity to report suspected cases. (3,27) Suriname also signed bilateral and regional enforcement arrangements with French Guiana, Brazil, and Guyana that included language on joint efforts to combat cross-border criminal activities, including human trafficking. (27,30) Additionally, Suriname participated in a 5-day INTERPOL operation for trafficking in persons in the Lawa area, along the border with French Guiana, and at checkpoints leading to the interior. However, in July, Suriname removed the visa requirements for entry from all countries, which makes immigration officials' pre-arrival screening, including for indicators of human trafficking, difficult. (13,27) During the reporting period, members of the TIP Unit and other police officials received a refresher training course with support from the Prosecutors' Office. However, initial training on issues related to the worst forms of child labor was not provided to new criminal investigators. (3)

In 2022, three police officials accused of direct involvement in the trafficking of two female children in 2021 were prosecuted under laws other than the anti-trafficking in persons law. Two were found guilty and received prison sentences of 12 months, while one was acquitted. (3,27) There were no new investigations concerning the worst forms of child labor. (3) The number of investigators is insufficient to respond to human trafficking cases, and the Prosecutor's Office reported that investigations are initiated primarily as a result of complaints filed and are limited by a lack of resources. (31)

The TIP Unit reported that the police made funding available from their budget to support the establishment of emergency shelter accommodations but noted the funding was not sufficient. (3) Both the TIP Unit of the Police as well as the TIP Desk at the Prosecutors' Office reported a need for more resources to do their jobs efficiently and effectively, especially in the interior of the country. (27) The TIP Unit has 11 members who cover all human trafficking and human smuggling cases for the entire country, which is insufficient staffing to adequately conduct its functions. (3,27) Initial investigations on trafficking are usually conducted by regular police who receive human trafficking training as part of the basic curricula. Research found that the government did not effectively identify trafficking in persons victims among children, migrants in the interior, and in brothels operating within private homes. (9)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Commission on Combating Child Labor (NCCUK)	Serves as the lead body drafting child labor policies. (10) Coordinates and monitors efforts to address child labor, including the execution of the National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor. Also coordinates with the Integrated Child Protection Network to maximize awareness-raising efforts. (11) Mandate is valid through December 2023. (3,8) MOL approved the appointment of a special child labor rapporteur per the recommendation of NCCUK in 2021. (3) During the reporting period, NCCUK translated television and radio awareness programs into six languages and released these through different stations across the country. Funding for this project came from UNICEF. (3) Translated flyers into 3 languages and printed 1,000 flyers to be distributed to community organizations, schools, NGOs, and businesses. Worked with different stakeholders, including the Ministry of Social Affairs, on the evaluation and reorganization of and amendments to the integrated referral system. (3)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor (2019–2024)	Aims to address child labor by removing children from child labor, and by addressing issues that lead children to become involved in child labor, including poverty and lack of educational opportunities. Also addresses the social and educational reintegration of these children. (11) Annual plan identifies 21 activities that the National Commission on Combating Child Labor intends to work on through the end of 2022. (8) Multiple activities included under this plan are currently in progress. (3)

‡ The government has other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (3)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the adequacy of existing social programs to fully address the scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Decent Work Country Program	ILO program that supports capacity building of the Labor Inspectorate and constituents, as well as of the National Commission on Combating Child Labor for implementation, monitoring, and evaluation of the National Action Plan. (32) In September, the government ILO agreed to the implementation of a third phase of the Decent Work Country Program, which will aim to focus more on creating job opportunities, especially in developing sectors of the economy such as the oil and gas. (3)
My Line ( Mi Lijn )†	Government-run, 24-hour hotline that provides confidential advice to children in need, including victims of the worst forms of child labor, victims of domestic violence, and persons in need of mental support. The initiative continued to operate during the reporting period. (3,8)
Consolidating Access to Quality and Inclusive Education in Suriname*	Government program, supported by the Inter-American Development Bank that began an initiative with the goal of providing inclusive access to all levels of education in Suriname, with a specific focus on children in the interior and improving the quality of lower secondary education. Began in November 2022. (3)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Suriname.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (7)

In 2022, the government launched a social program to expand access to education in underserved areas and continued to support initiatives to eradicate child labor, but existing social programs are inadequate to fully address the problem in all sectors, including in agriculture and mining. (3)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Suriname (Table I I).

Table I I. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Increase the compulsory education age from 12 to at least age 16, the minimum age for work.	2009 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the military recruitment of children under age 18 into non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the commercial sexual exploitation of children, including the use of a child under age 16 for prostitution.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the use, procuring, and offering of a child for illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs.	2015 – 2022
Enforcement	Publish information on Labor Inspectorate funding.	2012 – 2022
	Publish data on worksite inspections.	2022
	Ensure that the labor inspectorate and the Trafficking in Persons Unit of the Suriname Police Force are sufficiently funded and adequately staffed to cover labor inspections in both the formal and informal sectors of the labor force, including in risk-prone sectors, such as in fisheries, mining, and agricultural areas in which child labor is likely to occur, particularly in the interior of the country.	2014 – 2022
	Provide mandatory training on the worst forms of child labor to new criminal investigators.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that there are sufficient resources, including for travel to the interior of the country, and inspectors to proactively investigate human trafficking cases.	2022
	Ensure that the child labor referral system can adequately provide long-term solutions, including housing, to child labor cases that are reported to it.	2021 – 2022
Social Programs	Develop social programs to prevent and eradicate child labor in agriculture and mining.	2015 – 2022
	Strengthen social services to assist child victims of human trafficking, including commercial sexual exploitation.	2014 – 2022
	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers to education, particularly for children in the interior, by eliminating school-related fees, reducing transportation costs, increasing access to schools in remote locations, improving teacher availability, removing requirements for documentation, and covering material missed during school closures.	2020 – 2022
	Ensure that all children, including children of foreign-born parents, have access to free public education regardless of citizenship and residency status, and that school registration is not used to report families without proper residential status.	2021 – 2022

In 2022, the United Republic of Tanzania made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Mainland government made available, for the first time in several years, complete information on its labor law enforcement efforts, identifying 74 child labor violations through 4,800 worksite inspections. The government also created a new task force to enhance efforts to prevent and respond to human trafficking crimes, including those involving children, and allocated financial resources to support its National Strategy on the Elimination of Child Labor. However, children in Tanzania are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced labor in mining, quarrying, and domestic work. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. Other gaps remain in the legal framework and enforcement of laws related to child labor, including lack of penalties for use of children in illicit activities, lack of minimum age protections for children engaged in domestic work, and an insufficient number of labor inspectors to monitor Tanzania's labor force.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

During the reporting period the government published and validated updated information on the prevalence of child labor. Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Mainland Tanzania.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	20.4 (3,345,516)

	Street work, including vending,† selling charcoal, shining shoes, and scavenging† and collecting† garbage (5,13,15,16)
	Work in bars† (5,17)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor†	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (5,16,18,19)
	Forced begging (5,19,20)
	Use in illicit activities, including selling drugs (21)
	Forced labor in domestic work, mining, fishing, hunting, commercial trading, quarrying, shining shoes, pushing carts, working in factories and bars, and agriculture, including cattle herding (5,19,22)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children in Tanzania engage in a number of hazardous work activities, including mining, quarrying, and working on tobacco plantations. (3,23) Children from underserved communities—including children from rural areas or in situations of poverty, orphans, and children with disabilities—are subjected to forced labor in domestic work, gold and gemstone mining, agriculture, and begging, as well as commercial sexual exploitation in urban areas such as Arusha, Dar es Salaam, Dodoma, Mbeya, and Mwanza. (19) Parents, particularly from poor and rural households, entrust their children to the care of wealthy relatives and community leaders who sometimes force or coerce the children to perform domestic work. (19,22) Exploitation of girls in commercial sexual exploitation or forced labor in domestic work frequently occurs in tourist hubs along the Kenyan border and in Zanzibar. (10,24,25) Although child trafficking primarily occurs internally within Tanzania, traffickers also exploit migrant children, particularly from Burundi, in domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation. (10,15,19,26)

Schools, particularly in rural areas, lack adequate teachers, classrooms and desks, food, and sanitation facilities, and families are often required to financially contribute to offset these deficits and pay for the costs of uniforms and learning materials. (5,9,10,27) In addition, schools often lack resources for children with disabilities or learning disorders, resulting in many of these students leaving school and becoming vulnerable to child labor. (9,10) In 2021, the government reversed its longstanding practice of expelling girls who became pregnant from school. The government continued to support implementation of this policy change during the reporting period, including identifying and readmitting 3,333 children who had left school for various reasons, including teenage mothers. (5,28) However, girls can still be removed from school during the duration of their pregnancy, which reduces the likelihood that they will return to education. (29)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Tanzania has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

Mainland Tanzania and Zanzibar’s non-union matters are governed by distinct territorial jurisdictional laws, leaving each territory to determine its own child labor laws. (17,30) The Mainland government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Tanzania’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including a lack of minimum age protections for children in domestic work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Related Entity	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Mainland	No	14	Articles 5 and 102 of the Employment and Labor Relations Act; Article 77 of the Law of the Child Act (31,32)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Mainland	Yes	18	Articles 5 and 102 of the Employment and Labor Relations Act; Article 82 of the Law of the Child Act (31,32)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Mainland	Yes		Article 5 and First Schedule of Regulations of the Employment and Labor Relations Act; Article 82 of the Law of the Child Act (31-33)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Mainland	Yes		Article 6 of the Employment and Labor Relations Act; Article 80 of the Law of the Child Act; Article 25 of the Constitution; Article 4 of the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Act (30-34)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Mainland	Yes		Article 4 of the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Act (34)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Mainland	Yes		Article 138.2.f of the Sexual Offenses Special Provisions Act; Article 4 of the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Act (34,35)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Mainland	No
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment		Yes	18	Article 29 of the National Defense Act (36)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military		N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups		No
Compulsory Education Age	Mainland	No	13	Article 35 of the National Education Act (37)
Free Public Education	Mainland	No

* Country has no conscription (36)

Zanzibar's legal framework is in line with international standards related to hazardous work, prohibitions against forced labor, human trafficking of children, commercial sexual exploitation of children, use of children in illicit activities, and free basic education. (38-41) Although the Mainland government has a list of hazardous work activities for children, it does not specify weeding and processing activities that are dangerous tasks in the production of tobacco, cloves, coffee, sisal, and tea. (3-7,31-34) The Mainland government also does not stipulate penalties for using children for illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs. In addition, minimum age for work laws in Mainland Tanzania and Zanzibar do not meet international standards because they do not extend to all working children, including children engaged in domestic work. (31,38,39) Furthermore, as the compulsory education age in both the Mainland and Zanzibar is below the minimum age for work, are vulnerable to child labor because they are not required to attend school but are not legally permitted to work. (37,41) The Mainland also lacks a legal standard mandating free basic education for children, though it supports free basic education through a policy, and the national Education Act authorizes local education authorities to assess school fees at the discretion, which may contravene future legal standards to provide free basic education (42)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Related Entity	Role & Activities
Minister of State in the Prime Minister's Office for Policy, Labor, Employment, Youth, and the Disabled (PLEYD)	Mainland	Assigns area labor officers in each region to respond to reports of child labor violations, issues non-compliance orders, and reports incidents to police and the Ministry of Health, Community Development, Gender, Elderly, and Children. Through its Labor Administration and Inspection Section, provides legal guidance upon request, disseminates information to employers and employees on their rights and obligations, and helps area offices conduct labor inspections. (5) Coordinates with the Ministry of Community Development, Gender, Elderly, and Children, which employs officers to monitor child labor at the district and village levels and reports back to the PLEYD. (5,28) During the reporting period, the government conducted an estimated 4,800 labor inspections, targeting the agricultural, fishing, and industrial sectors. (5)
Zanzibar Labor Commission	Zanzibar	Ensures compliance with child protection and child labor laws, including inspections, through its Child Protection Unit. Employs 25 labor inspectors who investigate child labor cases reported by the police and refers cases to social welfare officers. (5,43) The Zanzibar labor inspectorate lacks sufficient personnel, office facilities, transportation and fuel, and other resources to adequately enforce child labor laws. (5) In 2022, the government substantially increased funding for its labor inspectorate from $10,353 in 2021 to $521,739 and provided training for its labor inspectors. There were no child labor violations identified in these inspections. (5)
Ministry of Home Affairs and Tanzanian Police Force	Mainland	Chairs the Anti-Trafficking Secretariat, which coordinates the government's anti-trafficking efforts. (20) The Tanzanian Police Force, through its Gender and Children's desks, investigates cases of child labor and other forms of child endangerment reported to police stations; in some cases, refers cases to labor officers or seeks assistance from social welfare officers and the Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions to take legal action. (17,44,45) During the reporting period, the Ministry of Home Affairs, with the UNODC, launched an updated National Anti-Trafficking in Persons Plan of Action for 2021–2024. (46,47) The new action plan includes integration of human trafficking awareness within school curriculum and integrates human trafficking issues into the Gender and Children's desks of the Tanzanian Police Force. (46) The government also launched the Anti-Human Trafficking and Child Protection Task Force for Mainland Tanzania, housed within the Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions, which includes 27 stakeholders from the Anti-Trafficking Secretariat, and various law enforcement, social welfare, and justice sectors to strengthen Tanzania's ability to respond to the international dimensions of human trafficking and other crimes against children. (48) The Zanzibar government also established a Serious Organized Crime Unit, which will conduct specialized investigations related to organized crime, including human trafficking and crimes against children. (49)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Tanzania* took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the labor ministries that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient human resources.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Mainland	Yes (10)	Yes (5)

* Federal reporting data for 2022. Zanzibar reported separate data. (5)

The Mainland government has a complaint mechanism for individuals to report potential cases of child labor, but research indicates that this mechanism is not consistently used because of insufficient tools and resources, as well as budgetary constraints. (51) Research indicates that Tanzania does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties and insufficient budgetary resources hinder their ability to identify and respond to labor violations. (5,28,52,53)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Tanzania took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including a lack of published information on criminal law enforcement efforts.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	Related Entity	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Mainland	Unknown (21)	Yes (5)
Number of Investigations	Mainland	Unknown (21)	Unknown (5)

Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Mainland	Unknown (21)	Unknown (5)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Mainland	Yes (10)	Yes (5)

The government did not maintain a centralized law enforcement data collection system for human trafficking crimes, hindering its ability to disaggregate national human trafficking statistics and likely resulting in underreported anti-trafficking statistics. Therefore, it was not possible to disaggregate nationwide statistics by type of exploitation, industry, and offenses related to categorical worst forms of child labor. (48)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including inefficacy to accomplish mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Related Entity	Role & Activities
National Education Task Force on Child Labor	Mainland and Zanzibar	Reviews existing laws, regulations, and strategies related to children's issues, including the National Strategy on the Elimination of Child Labor. Evaluates curriculum and programs, identifies gaps, and suggests strategies to resolve barriers to accessing education. (54) Although the government reported that the Task Force was active in 2022, it did not provide information on activities undertaken. (5)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including existence of an education policy that may adversely impact child labor.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Related Entity	Description & Activities
National Strategy on Elimination of Child Labor (2018–2022)	Mainland and Zanzibar	Coordinated prevention and responses to the worst forms of child labor at the national level. (55) In 2022, the government allocated $43,476 to the National Strategy on Elimination of Child Labor for review and development of an updated policy to be launched in 2023. (5) In addition, it conducted engagement workshops with child labor stakeholders, formed anti-human trafficking working groups in the Kagera, Geita, Kigoma, Tabora, and Katavi regions—areas with high prevalence of human trafficking and child labor—and engaged in special targeted labor inspection activities in the Tabora and Kigoma regions. (5)

Tanzania does not have a law requiring free public education, but it does have an education policy that allows children to attend primary school and lower secondary school without paying tuition fees. (56) The Mainland government, however, regulates access to secondary education through the Primary School Leaving Examination, which determines those students selected for admission into secondary schools. (42,57) Students who fail the exam generally cannot retake it and must leave public education at the age of 14, thereby increasing their vulnerability to the worst forms of child labor. (58,59)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate efforts to address child labor in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Related Entity	Description & Activities
Tanzania Social Action Fund Conditional Cash Transfer Program†		Government-funded conditional cash transfer program to provide financial assistance to vulnerable populations, including children. (20) Also manages Zanzibar's Productive Social Safety Nets fund, which provides conditional cash transfers to 33,523 households experiencing extreme poverty and other vulnerabilities to child labor. (60) During the reporting period, the government had 1.4 million households registered under the conditional cash transfer program, and undertook initiatives to register households with children living with disabilities for receipt of a monthly supplementary disability grant, in addition to the regular monthly stipend. (61) An evaluation of Tanzania's Conditional Cash Transfer Program found that it had achieved little reduction of child labor, because the work of children only shifted from outside to inside the household. Furthermore, the program had not achieved reductions in excessive working hours and engagement in hazardous activities among children. (62)
Rural Enterprise Support to Eliminate Child Labor		Project implemented by the Eliminating Child Labor in Tobacco Growing Foundation as a follow-up to the Promoting Sustainable Practices to Eradicate Child Labor in Tobacco program that ended in 2020. Aims to support farmers and reduce child labor in Chunya, Kaliua, Sikonge, and Urambo districts. (10,21) In 2022, the program facilitated 17 community and district child labor committees on data collection and reporting and supported the development of 17 community child labor action plans. In addition, the project allocated $34,783 to 11 groups for economic empowerment and supported the enrollment of 3,008 children to schools, protecting them from child labor. (5)
Eradicating the Worst Forms of Labor in the Eight Mining Wards of the Geita District		French Development Agency-funded program, implemented by Plan International, aiming to eliminate child labor and other forms of violence against children, especially girls, in the small-scale mining and fishing sectors. The project covers 15 wards and 63 villages in 3 Geita districts: Geita, Nyang'hwale, and Chato. (21) In 2022, the program supported the establishment of 81 child protection committees in 15 wards and 63 villages. The committees aim to raise awareness on child protection, child labor prevention, and response. (21) During the reporting period, the program supported a new reporting and referral mechanism to report cases of child abuse and exploitation, leading to interventions in 445 cases. In addition, the program provided children withdrawn from child labor with school materials. (5)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of Tanzania.

The scope of government-funded social programs is inadequate in that it does not cover other forms of agriculture beyond tobacco, nor does it address domestic work, fishing, or informal sectors in which children engage in child labor.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Tanzania (Table II).

Table II. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Related Entity	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Mainland	Expand the list of hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children to ensure that the list includes weeding and processing in the production of tobacco, cloves, coffee, sisal, and tea.	2016 – 2022
	Mainland	Criminalize the use of children in illicit activities, particularly in the production and trafficking of drugs.	2012 – 2022
	Mainland and Zanzibar	Criminalize the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2022
	Mainland and Zanzibar	Ensure that minimum age protections apply to all children, including those engaged in domestic work.	2013 – 2022
	Mainland and Zanzibar	Raise the compulsory education age from 13 to 14 to align with the minimum age for work.	2017 – 2022
	Mainland	Establish by law free basic public education and remove legal authority of local education authorities to assess discretionary education fees.	2016 – 2022
Enforcement	Mainland and Zanzibar	Ensure that the child labor complaint mechanism has sufficient resources to carry out operations.	2021 – 2022
	Mainland	Increase financial resources and the number of labor inspectors from 87 to 643 to ensure adequate coverage of the labor force of approximately 25.7 million people and to strengthen identification and responses to labor violations.	2013 – 2022
	Zanzibar	Increase material resources provided to the labor inspectorate, including office facilities, transportation, and fuel.	2013 – 2022
	Mainland and Zanzibar	Develop a mechanism for the centralized collection and publication of data related to the worst forms of child labor, including number of investigations, and imposed penalties for violations related to the worst forms of child labor.	2021 – 2022
Coordination	Mainland and Zanzibar	Ensure that the National Education Task Force on Child Labor is able to carry out its intended mandates.	2018 – 2022
Government Policies	Mainland	Eliminate provisions in the Primary School Leaving Examination that are barriers to education, including by allowing children who initially fail the exam to retake it for consideration in secondary school admission.	2016 – 2022
Social Programs	Mainland	Broaden mechanisms to facilitate the re-enrollment of girls who leave school during pregnancy.	2021 – 2022
	Mainland and Zanzibar	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education accessible to all children in Tanzania, including those living in rural areas, by ensuring adequate resources for children with disabilities and learning disorders; increasing resources for teachers, classrooms and desks, food, and sanitation facilities; and defraying informal costs imposed on families, including school uniforms, books, and other learning materials.	2010 – 2022
	Mainland and Zanzibar	Harmonize child labor prevention and elimination measures into the Social Action Fund Conditional Cash Transfer Program to increase its effectiveness in preventing and eliminating child labor.	2022
	Mainland and Zanzibar	Develop programs that include the agricultural, domestic work, fishing, and informal sectors to address children engaged in child labor.	2017 – 2022

In 2022, Thailand made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. During the reporting period, the government amended the Anti-Money Laundering Act to allow for assets seized from human trafficking offenders to be used as financial remedies for survivors of trafficking, including children who were sexually exploited. In addition, it established the Child Sexual Exploitation Crime Center to help facilitate investigations of offenses related to child pornography materials. The government also established the Migrant Education Coordination Center to coordinate with Migrant Learning Centers on education, protection, and health of migrant children. Moreover, the Ministry of Tourism and Sports initiated the Child Friendly Tourism project by signing a Memorandum of Understanding with 21 government agencies, private sector organizations, and non-governmental organizations to develop measures to reduce commercial sexual exploitation of children in the tourism sector. Finally, the government drafted and approved the fifth National Policy and Plan to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2023–2027) in coordination with relevant public and private organizations across government and civil society. However, children in Thailand are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Although the government made meaningful efforts in all relevant areas during the reporting period, it does not meet the international standard for the minimum age for work because the law does not grant protections to children working outside of formal employment relationships. Moreover, there is a lack of available research and data on the prevalence of child labor in high-risk sectors, such as agriculture, garment manufacturing, domestic work, and construction.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Thailand.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	13.0 (1,302,267)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	96.3
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	14.4
Primary Completion Rate (%)		94.8

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 3 (MICS 3), 2005–2006. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Processing shrimp and seafood† (3-6)
	Fishing, including work performed in fisheries and on sea vessels† (3,7-9)
	Planting and harvesting sugarcane (4)
	Producing rubber (6,10)
Industry	Manufacturing, including garment production (3,9)
	Working in poultry factories and working on pig farms (11,12)
	Construction, including transporting cement and bricks (3,4,6,11,13,14)

Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, including use in the production of pornography, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,6,8,9,15,17,31-33)
	Forced labor in vending, begging, and domestic work (3,9,11,15,32)
	Forced labor in the production of garments, agriculture, and in shrimp and seafood processing (3,6)
	Forced labor in fishing, including fisheries (3,7,9,34,35)
	Use in the production and trafficking of drugs, including narcotics, amphetamines, kratom, and marijuana (3,6,9,10)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

A widespread migrant labor shortage, coupled with increased migration between Burma and Thailand due to the 2021 Burma military coup, resulted in increased numbers of underage migrant children engaging in child labor. There have also been increased instances of recruitment agencies falsifying ages on official documents. (16,36,37) Children working in agriculture face health risks from lifting heavy loads, risk injury from operating dangerous machinery and using sharp equipment, and are exposed to pesticides, sun and heat, and work long hours from very early in the morning until nighttime. (9,11) In addition, Thai and migrant children who accompany their parents working in the construction sector are exposed to child labor at and around construction sites, including performing construction work or working as caretakers for younger children or as housekeepers, and are not always enrolled in school. (3,9,13,14,38)

Children also participate in Muay Thai competitions, an area of work in which there is evidence of serious head injuries. Children receive remuneration in the form of prize money or wages, and research found that betting and illegal gambling on the outcome of children’s matches occurs often during Muay Thai competitions. (3,19,21,27-29,16) In addition, an increased number of children are reported to be exploited in forced labor and forced criminality in online scamming operations in Chinese-owned Special Economic Zones in neighboring countries. (16) Thai children and children from Burma, Laos, and Cambodia, are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation in Thai massage parlors, bars, karaoke lounges, hotels, and private residences. Children are also increasingly being coerced into producing pornography and performing sexual acts through online social media platforms and private chat rooms. (3,8,9,15-17,32) Perpetrators engaging in commercial sexual exploitation of children attempt to avoid law enforcement by arranging appointments in private residences, randomly changing venues, and paying children directly. The Thai government reported that some former child sex trafficking victims have become recruiters and traffickers themselves. (9) Several teachers and child welfare workers were found to be exploiting children in commercial sexual exploitation. (39,40) Moreover, some children in the south of Thailand were recruited into non-state armed groups. (16,41)

Thai law provides for 12 years of free education for all children in Thailand. (6,16,42) However, language barriers prevent some children, particularly migrants and ethnic minorities, from accessing basic education as public school instruction and school applications are only available in Thai. (3,16,43,44) Although children without identity documents or a registered address cannot legally be denied enrollment in public schools, research found that there is a lack of clarity among school officials regarding the type of documentation that non-Thai students need to possess to enroll in school, which may be a barrier to education access. (16,45) Some migrant and refugee communities formed unofficial educational learning centers, including Migrant Learning Centers (MLCs), to provide children with native-language education, and in some cases provide an educational alternative to migrant children who either had difficulty enrolling in school or could not access Thai schools due to lack of proximity. However, there were reports of immigration police visiting MLCs to verify the legal status of migrant teachers and workers. (16,46) This practice intimidated some migrant children and their families and resulted in reduced attendance of children at MLCs, as some parents may not have legal permits to work in Thailand. (16)

Children identifying as LGBTQI+ and those experiencing poverty, drug addiction, family problems, and teen pregnancy, may have additional barriers to education access due to increased harassment and bullying, which may increase their risk of dropping out of school and engaging in child labor. (11,47,48)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Thailand has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Thailand's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including not meeting the international standard for the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	15	Sections 5, 44, and 148/1 of the Labor Protection Act (49)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Sections 22, 47, 49, 50, 144, and 148/2 of the Labor Protection Act; Sections 26 and 78 of the Child Protection Act; Sections 20 and 45 of the Home Workers Protection Act (49-51)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Chapter 4, Sections 49 and 50 of the Labor Protection Act; Clause 4 of the Ministerial Regulation concerning Labor Protection in Sea Fishery Work; Clause 2 of the Ministerial Regulation Identifying Tasks that may be Hazardous to the Health and Safety of Pregnant Women or Children Under the Age of Fifteen Years (52-54)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Sections 312 and 312 bis of the Penal Code; Section 4 of the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Act; Sections 6 and 8 of the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Act (No. 3); Sections 4, 5, 7, and 8 of the Royal Decree Amendments of the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Act (55-58)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Sections 282, 283, and 285 of the Penal Code; Sections 4 and 6 of the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Act (No. 3) (55,56)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Sections 8 and 9 of the Prevention and Suppression of Prostitution Act; Section 4 of the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Act; Sections 6 of the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Act (No. 3); Sections 4 and 8 of the Royal Decree Amendments of the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Act; Sections 282, 283, 285, and 286 of the Penal Code; Section 26 of the Child Protection Act; Amendment to the Penal Code Act No. 25 (50,55-59)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Section 16 of the Military Service Act (63)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Section 17 of the National Education Act (42)
Free Public Education	Yes		Section 10 of the National Education Act; Section 54 of the Thai Constitution (42,64)

During the reporting period, the Anti-Money Laundering Act was amended to allow for assets seized from human trafficking offenders to be used as financial remedies for trafficking victims, including children who were sexually exploited. (65,66) Moreover, a ministerial regulation was issued to allow for prosecution of child pornography crimes under The Special Case Investigation Act, enabling child pornography cases to be investigated more quickly. (16,67,68)

However, the minimum age for work in Thailand does not comply with international standards because the law does not grant protections to children working outside of employment relationships. In addition, because the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, and the law does not require 15-year-olds to complete compulsory schooling before seeking work, some children may leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (42,52,69) Moreover, although Thailand has identified fishing on sea vessels as a form of hazardous labor—and research indicates that there is inadequate oversight of fishing vessels—the government implemented an amendment in 2022 to the Ministerial Regulation on Protection of Fishery Work 2014 to allow owners of fishing boats to employ a relative as young as age 16 as an intern. (9,16,70,71)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established relevant institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Department of Labor Protection and Welfare (DLPW) of the Ministry of Labor (MOL)	Enforces child labor laws through workplace inspections. (10) Operates Hotline 1506 and staffs DLPW offices in each province in Thailand to answer questions about working conditions and receive child labor complaints from the public. (3,43,71) During the reporting period, DLPW's Call Center received 201 complaints related to violations of child labor laws, and labor inspectors filed 28 cases against 48 offenders for child labor law violations. Moreover, DLPW developed standard operating procedures for labor inspectors across government agencies on identifying indicators of forced labor and trafficking in persons and using referral mechanisms. (16) In addition, DLPW carried out labor inspections for labor violations, including child labor, of 12,810 fishing vessels with the Department of Fisheries, Marine Department, and Department of Employment at Port-In-Port-Out centers. (16) During the reporting period, the DLPW also implemented trainings with NGOs for migrant workers in garment and textile manufacturing, construction, and agriculture on labor rights and child labor laws. (16) Moreover, the government conducted 17 trainings and projects in 2022 to build and strengthen capacity of labor inspectors, government officials, and NGOs on labor inspection, protection, and prevention. (16,72)

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Royal Thai Police (RTP)	Operates the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Division (ATPD), the Thailand Internet Crimes Against Children Task Force (TICAC), and the Child Women Protection, Anti-Human Trafficking, and Fishery Industry Center (CWP). (16,36,73) ATPD enforces laws related to forced labor, human trafficking, child pornography, and commercial sexual exploitation of children, and operates Hotline 1191 to receive complaints on human trafficking and violence against children. (71) TICAC, which includes representatives from the Department of Special Investigation (DSI), social workers, and NGOs, investigates and enforces laws against child trafficking and online commercial sexual exploitation of children, including the distribution and production of child pornography. (3,6,8,9,32,38,74) CWP is responsible for protecting children, young people, women, and laborers from human rights violations at both the national and international levels. (36,73) During the reporting period, the RTP established two child-friendly interviewing rooms, including for interviewing children involved in forced labor or commercial sexual exploitation, and conducted three study trips to the U.S. focused on cybercrime laws related to child-exploitation, child advocacy centers as support mechanisms for investigations, and cyber forensics for collection of electronic evidence. (36,37) TICAC investigated 578 potential offenses and initiated a total of 482 cases, which included 41 child trafficking cases, 164 child sexual exploitation cases, and 265 child pornography possession cases. (16) TICAC also conducted a training workshop on digital forensic investigations and evidence collection for 220 TICAC and police officers. (36) Moreover, TICAC and the Prime Minister's Delivery Unit launched a new website that serves as an official complaint channel for victims of sexual exploitation. (16) In addition, CWP produced four animated videos on preventing child exploitation, designed with inputs from human trafficking survivors, and shared them on social media and in schools. (36) RTP also received reports of 91 cases in which children were used, provided, or offered for prostitution and identified pornographic performances and materials involving 87 child victims. (16) Moreover, in 2022, 1,942 police investigators and administrators were trained on policies, laws, and techniques to conduct criminal investigations and prosecutions related to the worst forms of child labor and human trafficking crimes. (15,16,36)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Thailand took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including a lack of inspections in informal sectors and in sectors primarily employing migrant populations.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$1,006,683 (9)	$976,150 (72)
Number of Labor Inspectors	1,889 (6)	1,720 (72)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	Yes (52)	Yes (52)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	Yes (6)	Yes (72)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksite	22,890 (6)	17,822 (72)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	31 (6)	28 (72)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	13 (6)	7 (72)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	Unknown (6)	7 (72)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (6)	Yes (72)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (6)	Yes (72)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (52)	Yes (52)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (6)	Yes (72)

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (6)	Yes (72)

In addition to the Department of Labor Protection and Welfare's (DLPW) 1,720 labor inspectors, the government employs 973 inspectors through the Royal Thai Police (RTP), Department of Fisheries, Ministry of the Interior and other agencies. (72) However, research finds that inspections conducted on fishing vessels, a sector with well-documented instances of labor abuses in Thailand, are inadequate to identify child and adult victims, with reports that some interpreters accompanying inspectors were instructed to not translate grievances of migrant workers relayed during inspections on fishing vessels, potentially compromising the effectiveness of inspections, including of child labor. (9,16,70,71) In addition, there are anecdotal reports of child labor inspections in informal sectors being insufficient due to labor inspectors' inability to access remote work places and safety concerns for inspectors. (9,11) Research also finds that some labor inspectors intentionally overlook instances of child labor among migrant children due to fear of reprisal from business owners and local politicians and authorities. (16)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Thailand took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including lack of training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (6)	Yes (72)
Number of Investigations	39 (6)	99 (75)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	30 (6)	77 (75)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (6)	96 (75)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (6)	Yes (75)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (6)	Yes (72)

During the reporting period, the Office of the Attorney General created a new curriculum and training for prosecutors and multidisciplinary teams on protecting children's rights in child sexual exploitation and abuse cases, prosecuting cases related to production and distribution of online child sexual exploitation materials, and on forensic interviewing, including for cases related to child trafficking. The Department of Special Investigation (DSI) also established the Child Sexual Exploitation Crime Center to help facilitate the effectiveness of investigations of special cases of offenses related to child pornography materials and established the Complicit Officials in Human Trafficking Monitoring and Investigation Center. (16,36) Moreover, the government displayed a video in Thai airports and on Thai airline flights discouraging commercial sexual exploitation of children during travel and coordinated with foreign governments to deny entry to known sex offenders. (15) In 2022, the government identified 29 boys and 125 girls as survivors of commercial sexual exploitation or forced labor. (36) The Thai Department of Juvenile Observation and Protection also reported 4,885 cases of children involved in the production and trade of narcotics. Child victims involved in criminal activities were taken to Department of Juvenile Observation and Protection facilities, where they received rehabilitation services and other social services during the judicial process. (9,16)

Though the Ministry of Social Development and Human Security (MSDHS) began implementation of the National Referral Mechanism in 2022, implementation among officials and multidisciplinary teams was uneven in practice, particularly at the local levels. (16,36) Moreover, there were reports that human trafficking may be underreported due to inconsistencies in the identification process and enforcement training gaps, including understanding the gravity of human trafficking crimes and victim identification training amongst police, prosecutors, and judges. (8,15,76,77) This includes a lack of understanding of the use of male children in commercial sexual exploitation among some provincial government and court officials due to the notion that boys should be able to defend themselves against perpetrators. (12,32)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Committee to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Coordinates the implementation of child labor policies, facilitates cooperation among relevant ministries, and reports annually to the Thai Cabinet on child labor issues. Chaired by MOL, with representation from other government agencies, employer and worker associations, and civil society groups. (6,9) Responsible for monitoring the National Policy and Plan to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor. (6) Held one committee meeting and two subcommittee meetings during the reporting period to review a framework and guidelines to prevent and address child labor in the shrimp, fish, sugarcane, and garment industries. (16,72)

The Thailand Anti-Trafficking in Persons Task Force, comprising police officers, social workers, and NGO representatives, also coordinates investigations and enforces laws against human trafficking, forced labor, and commercial sexual exploitation of children. (3,43) In addition, the Committee on National and Provincial Committees on Child Protection held four meetings, developed plans to survey vulnerable children, and approved a national action plan on Alternative Care for Children (2022–2026) during the reporting period. Further, in coordination with NGOs, the government established the Committee on Anti-Human Trafficking and Children's Rights in Mae Sot to support monitoring of child labor and child trafficking. (16)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of implementation of certain policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Policy and Plan to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor Phase III (2021–2022)	Sought to eliminate the worst forms of child labor in Thailand in accordance with international labor standards. Focused on (1) preventing the worst forms of child labor, (2) rescuing, protecting, and rehabilitating children from the worst forms of child labor, (3) integrating systems and mechanisms for the elimination of the worst forms of child labor, and (4) communicating with the public. (6) During the reporting period, the fourth action plan was developed in coordination with relevant public and private organizations from government and civil society and was approved for 2023–2027. (16) Moreover, visits to 17 businesses in the sugarcane, garment, shrimp and seafood processing sectors were conducted to collect information on labor and manufacturing processes as part of the “Prevention and Correction of Child and Forced Labor” Memorandum of Understanding. (72)
Cyber Tipline Remote Access Policy	Seeks to eliminate online sexual exploitation of children in Thailand by partnering with the U.S. National Center for Missing and Exploited Children. Supports TICAC by permitting the RTP to request warrants to search residences and electronic equipment for child pornography and initiate criminal prosecutions. (6) In 2022, TICAC investigated 9,669 tips from the Cyber Tipline. A total of 433 offenders were arrested and 431 survivors were removed from exploitation. (16)
National Strategic Plan (2018–2037)	Seeks to improve education access, particularly for vulnerable and poor children in remote areas, by increasing transportation to school, reforming the school subsidy program for poor families, and providing scholarships for children who stay in school. (3,6,16,80) Research could not determine what activities were undertaken during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (72)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the problem in all sectors.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Centers to Promote Child Advocacy and for Victims of Trafficking and Migrants†	Migrant Learning Centers (MLCs) are NGO- and government-operated centers that provide basic education, life skills training, and vocational training to children in migrant communities along Thailand's borders. (3,6,9,43) While access to education for migrant children has increased, some MLCs lack accreditation. (3,38) Moreover, MLCs are not accessible to all migrant children located in Thailand due to limited geographic coverage of MLCs. The government reported 65 registered MLCs supporting 10,808 students were in operation in 2022. (16,72) In addition, the Migrant Educational Coordination Center was created to improve access to education for migrant children, support increased coordination of MLCs, and develop the capacity of teachers in MLCs. (16,81) Moreover, Child Advocacy Centers are RTP-operated child-friendly spaces to conduct social, legal (including forensic interviews), and repatriation services to children who are survivors or vulnerable to human trafficking, including children trafficked for commercial sexual exploitation. (6,16,34,82,83) In 2022, the four Child Advocacy Centers assisted 76 child victims during the investigation process of 43 cases and provided counselling services to children 1,495 times. Finally, Operation Centers for Protection of Rights relating to Human Trafficking Cases were opened in two border provinces that are known to be hotspots for human trafficking. (16)
Programs to Address the Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children*†	The Ministry of Tourism and Sports initiated the Child Friendly Tourism project by signing a Memorandum of Understanding with 21 government agencies, private sector organizations, and NGOs to develop measures to prevent and reduce commercial sexual exploitation of children in the tourism industry. (16,36) Moreover, the Thailand Safe Internet Coalition, a partnership led by MSDHS, UNICEF, and Thai telecommunications companies and internet service providers, was formed to strengthen reporting of online abuse, enhance coordination, improve service provision for survivors, and increase awareness of children, young people, and parents to online risks. (16,84)
Ministry of Social Development and Human Security (MSDHS) Programs‡	Implements anti-trafficking activities, including those involving forced child labor, child trafficking, and commercial sexual exploitation, through the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Division (ATPD). Organizes trainings and enforces child protection and human trafficking laws through collaboration with the RTP, DSI, DLPW, and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. (3,6,9,15,32,50,82) Oversees Hotline 1300, which receives human trafficking and child labor complaints. Operates 77 temporary shelters, with one located in every province, and 9 long-term shelters for human trafficking survivors, including a shelter dedicated solely to boys. (9,16,32) Monitors 76 Provincial Operation Centers for the Prevention and Suppression of Human Trafficking. Provides assistance and welfare protection to survivors of human trafficking. (6) Acts as the Secretariat for both the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Committee and the Coordinating and Monitoring of Anti-Trafficking in Persons Committee. (9,32) During the reporting period, MSDHS began implementation of a new National Referral Mechanism (NRM) that provided officials with a framework for identifying and referring potential survivors of human trafficking to appropriate support mechanisms. Training workshops were held with law enforcement entities, labor inspection officers, multidisciplinary teams and other government agencies to support the NRM's adoption. (16) In addition, MSDHS, RTP, the Court of Justice, and NGOs held a series of meetings with human trafficking survivors to create and publish guidelines on identifying victims of online sexual exploitation. (16) In 2022, 115 child survivors of the worst forms of child labor stayed in MSDHS's temporary shelters. (16,78) However, research found that temporary shelters for trafficking survivors managed by MSDHS employed inconsistent policies and provision of care to victims, including a lack of psychologists and staff trained on trauma-informed care. (15)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Thailand.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (9,71,72,85)

The lack of available research and data on the prevalence of child labor in high-risk sectors, such as agriculture, garment manufacturing, domestic work, and construction, makes it difficult for the Government of Thailand to design appropriate programs to address these issues. (3,38)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Thailand (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the minimum age for work applies to children working outside of employment relationships.	2017 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2022
	Raise the minimum age for work from 15 to 16 to align with the compulsory education age.	2018 – 2022
	Ensure that the hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children are comprehensive and include sectors in which child labor is known to occur, including paid participation in Muay Thai , in which there is evidence that children are exposed to physical dangers.	2018 – 2022
	Ensure that fishing vessels employing children under age 18 to work as apprentices are fully complying with the protections required in the Ministerial Regulation on Protection of Fishery Work.	2022
Enforcement	Ensure provincial government and court officials are provided adequate training on human trafficking issues—specifically in addressing cases of male children in commercial sexual exploitation—to afford boys the same protections and victim assistance as girls.	2018 – 2022
	Ensure law enforcement officials report and investigate all suspected human trafficking incidences.	2019 – 2022
	Ensure that children are not engaging in child labor due to shortages in labor, especially migrant children in the fishing and manufacturing industries.	2022
	Ensure labor inspectors are provided training and resources necessary to conduct inspections at remote informal sector workplaces, including in agriculture and domestic work.	2019 – 2022
	Provide interpretation services that enable labor inspectors to meaningfully interview foreign workers and ensure independence of the labor inspectorate from outside interests.	2022
	Ensure proper training and full implementation of the National Referral Mechanism for officials and multidisciplinary teams, including at the local levels.	2022
Government Policies	Publish activities undertaken to implement key policies related to child labor, including the National Strategic Plan (2018–2037).	2021 – 2022
Social Programs	Improve access to education, especially for ethnic minority and migrant children, including by clarifying to school officials the necessary documents non-Thai students need to submit for enrollment, raising awareness of migrant children's right to education, addressing language barriers for non-Thai speaking students, including on public school applications, and ensuring Migrant Learning Centers are accredited.	2012 – 2022
	Conduct child labor prevalence surveys to ensure that there are sufficient social programs to address exploitation of children in the agriculture, garment manufacturing, domestic work, and construction sectors.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure that there are sufficient social programs to assist children from vulnerable groups, such as migrant children and LGBTQI+ children, who are at high risk of child labor.	2016 – 2022

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2022, Timor-Leste made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. During the reporting period, the government increased funding for the labor inspectorate; established a child protection network; finalized, and trained law enforcement officials and service providers on, comprehensive, government-wide standard operating procedures for victim identification of human trafficking and referral, including for child victims of trafficking; and completed a quantitative labor survey. However, despite these new initiatives to address child labor, Timor-Leste is assessed as having made only minimal advancement because it continued to implement a practice that delays advancement to eliminate child labor. Research indicates that some school principals forced pregnant girls to leave school, making them more vulnerable to involvement in child labor, including its worst forms. Children in Timor-Leste are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including forced labor in street vending and commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in street work. Although Timor-Leste law provides for criminal penalties for the worst forms of child labor, labor inspection agencies are not empowered to inspect or enforce labor standards in the informal agriculture and commercial sectors.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Timor-Leste.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	12.3 (40,337)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	83.7
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	12.4
Primary Completion Rate (%)		101.3

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including cultivating and processing coffee† and growing vegetables and other crops (3-8)
	Fishing,† including work on boats and repairing nets (3,9-12)
Industry	Construction,† including brickmaking (3)
	Operating weaving and knitting machines (5)
	Mining,† including in artisanal sand and stone quarrying (6)
Services	Domestic work† (3,6-8)
	Street work, including vending, begging, and scavenging (3,6,8)
	Shop keeping, selling goods in markets, and restaurant services (5,8,12)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (7,12-14)
	Forced domestic and agricultural work (7-11,13,14)
	Forced labor in street vending (12,14)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In Timor-Leste, traffickers exploit some children, from rural areas to the capital city, Dili, in domestic work, commercial sexual exploitation, or forced labor; traffickers also exploit children from Timor-Leste abroad. (7,11,14,15) Some rural families send children to live with relatives in Dili for school and work; however, there are reports that some of those children are forced to work, including as street vendors, to earn their keep. (6,12,14) Although data are limited, it is reported that children are sometimes directed to work on family farms against their wishes, to supplement family incomes or to pay off family debts. (7,11,12,14)

Research indicates that some school principals forced pregnant girls to leave school. (16) Some pregnant students who attempted to transfer schools faced difficulty obtaining transfer documentation, which is at the discretion of school principals. This practice may make pregnant girls more vulnerable to involvement in child labor, including its worst forms. (11,12,17,18) In addition, the lack of sanitation facilities at schools can result in girls dropping out of school upon reaching puberty, and children with disabilities are often unable to attend school due to accessibility and infrastructure challenges. Children must also pay additional school fees to attend school, such as for school uniforms and supplies, which can hinder access to education, particularly for children from poor and rural areas. (6,18,19)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Timor-Leste has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Timor-Leste's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for hazardous work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 68 of the Labor Code (20)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No	17	Article 67 of the Labor Code (20)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		List of Hazardous and Prohibited Activities to Children Under the Age of 18 (21)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 155, 162, 163, and 166 of the Penal Code; Articles 8 and 67 of the Labor Code (20,22)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 81 of the Immigration and Asylum Act; Articles 162–164 and 166 of the Penal Code; Article 67 of the Labor Code; Article 18 of the Law on Preventing and Combating Human Trafficking (20,22-24)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Fourth Amendment to Articles 163 and 164 of the Penal Code; Articles 155 and 174–176 of the Penal Code; Article 67 of the Labor Code (20,22,25)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No		Article 155 of the Penal Code; Article 67 of the Labor Code (20,22)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 17 of the Law on Military Service (26)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 14 of the Law on Military Service (26)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 125 of the Penal Code (22)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 11 of the Education System Framework Law (27)
Free Public Education	Yes		Section 59 of the Constitution of the Democratic Republic of Timor-Leste; Article 11 of the Education System Framework Law (27,28)

Research indicates that various sections of the Penal Code only criminalize the use, procuring, and offering of a child for prostitution, production of pornography, and pornographic performances when the child victim is younger than age 17. Although Timor-Leste has adopted the List of Hazardous and Prohibited Activities to Children Under the Age of 18, it is uncertain how this law will interact with the Labor Code, which sets the minimum age for hazardous work at age 17 and does not meet international standards. (18-21,29-31) The Labor Code also does not specify which activities qualify as light work. (20) Finally, the minimum age for work of 15 is lower than the compulsory education age of 16, which may encourage children to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (27,28)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Administration of the Labor Inspectorate General	Falls under the Coordinating Ministry of Economic Affairs (MCAE) and conducts labor inspections. Provides civil oversight of laws related to child labor, investigates incidents of forced labor, and refers potential criminal violations of labor laws to the Timor-Leste National Police (PNTL). (32)
Timor-Leste National Police (PNTL)	Enforce criminal laws against forced labor, commercial sexual exploitation, child abuse, and human trafficking. Include the Vulnerable Persons Unit (VPU), the immigration police, and the border police. (10,12)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Timor-Leste took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Administration of the Labor Inspectorate General (IGT) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including an insufficient number of labor inspectors.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$478,000 (4)	$490,869 (6)
Number of Labor Inspectors	26 (4)	26 (6)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	Yes (20)	Yes (6)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	No (4)	Yes (6)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksite	1,612 (4)	1,700 (6)

Timor-Leste

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor (Cont.)

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	0 (4)	1 (6)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	N/A (4)	0 (6)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	0 (4)	0 (6)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (4)	Yes (6)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (4)	Yes (6)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (33)	Yes (33)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (4)	Yes (6)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (4)	Yes (6)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (4)	Yes (6)

The IGT reported that the number of labor inspectors is insufficient to conduct the required labor inspections. (6,18) Research found that there are insufficient child labor enforcement protections for children working on family farms or in domestic work because IGT inspectors are only empowered to inspect and issue penalties to formal workplaces. (12,20) The IGT also had limited capacity to conduct inspections in Timor-Leste's rural areas, where child labor in the agricultural sector is prevalent. This limitation was due to a lack of available transportation, including funds to pay for fuel for government vehicles. (6,18)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Timor-Leste took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including lack of funding for investigations.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	No (4)	No (6)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (4)	Unknown (6)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	1 (34)	0 (6)
Number of Convictions	2 (34)	0 (6)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (34)	Yes (34)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (4)	Yes (6)

The Vulnerable Persons Unit of the Timor-Leste National Police (PNTL), which is charged with the enforcement of criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor, did not receive any funding to carry out investigations. (6) The curriculum for new and existing members of the judiciary includes trainings on human trafficking that criminal prosecutors can use to develop new human trafficking investigations and prosecutions. In addition, the government has finalized and trained law enforcement officials and service providers on comprehensive, government-wide standard operating procedures for victim identification and referral, including for child victims of human trafficking. (14,35) However, the lack of expertise and understanding of human trafficking crimes remain an impediment to the government's efforts to effectively address human trafficking. (7) Due to the limited number of judges and prosecutors in Timor-Leste, cases can remain pending without a court date for long periods of time. (15) The government did not provide information on the number of investigations for inclusion in this report. (6)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Commission Against Child Labor (CNTI)	Develops child labor policies, raises awareness, and contributes to efforts to ratify and implement international conventions related to child protection. Develops the National Plan to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor in Timor-Leste. (17,30) Disseminates formal information on the normative and technical framework applicable to child labor. Elaborates, approves, and periodically reviews the hazardous work list of jobs prohibited for children under age 18. (17,30) Chaired by the Secretariat of State for Professional Training and Employment Police. Other members include PNTL; Timorese Labor Union Confederation; youth empowerment NGO Forum Tau Matan; Ministry of Tourism, Commerce, and Industry; Ministry of Social Solidarity and Inclusion (MSSI); Ministry of Education, Youth, and Sports; Ministry of Justice; and MCAE. (6) During the reporting period, CNTI held four meetings and conducted activities, including a Child Labor Qualitative Survey; a Training of Trainers on prevention and combating child labor for six labor inspectors; socialization on prevention and combating child labor in six municipalities; and an audience with President Jose Ramos Horta and the Coordinating Minister of Economic Affairs to discuss the National Action Plan to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor and the updated hazardous work list for children, both still pending approval by the Council of Ministers. (16)

During the reporting period, the government established the Child Protection Network, which meets quarterly to facilitate information sharing and coordination on child protection issues between relevant government and non-governmental entities. The Child Protection Network exists at the national, municipal, and district levels. (6)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Action Plan to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor in Timor-Leste	Aims to strengthen implementation of ILO C. 182 by establishing the Child Labor Commission Working Group, developing a hazardous work list, and creating a national action plan against child labor. Launched in 2009 in partnership with ILO and the Government of Brazil. (4,12) Despite being finalized in 2016, the Council of Ministers has yet to approve the National Action Plan to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor in Timor-Leste. (6,30,36)
Timor-Leste Strategic Development Plan (2011–2030)	Provides short-term and long-term plans for the nation's development, including the eradication of the worst forms of child labor, poverty alleviation, and implementation of social transfer programs. Specifies commitments to improve the educational system from 2011 to 2030. (37) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Timor-Leste Strategic Development Plan (2011–2030) during the reporting period.

There is no policy on providing education for girls during their pregnancy or to encourage girls to return to school after giving birth. (16,17,38)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate efforts to address child labor in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Bolsa da Mãe* †	MSSI poverty reduction program that provides cash benefits to poor households with children, headed by women—including single mothers, widows, and orphans—on the condition that children attend and successfully complete each level of schooling. (39) Funded by the Government of Timor-Leste and the Government of Australia, through the Australia-Timor-Leste Partnership for Human Development. During the reporting period, MSSI expanded the program to include pregnant women and their children up to age 6, and launched Bolsa da Mãe Jersaun Foun (also known as Bolsa da Mãe - Nova Geração ), by which pregnant women receive $15 per month, and caregivers receive $20 per month, with an additional $10 if the child has a disability. (40) The Government of Timor-Leste allocated $7 million for the first phase of Bolsa da Mãe Jersaun Foun , for implementation in three municipalities, while still maintaining the Bolsa da Mãe program with $6.2 million in funding. (41)

Program	Description & Activities
Casa Vida †	Joint program between MSSI and the Australian Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade's "Nabilan Program and Shelter" initiative. Provides shelter, health assistance, and psychological counseling to minor victims, including victims of child labor and its worst forms. (42) Provides specialized assistance for girls up to age 18 who have escaped situations of sexual violence. (17) Receives referrals from civil society organizations as well as the PNTLVPU. (43) Since its founding in 2006, Casa Vida has provided shelter and assistance for more than 300 children who were survivors of abuse, including child labor and its worst forms. (44) Casa Vida was active during the reporting period and received the Sérgio Vieira de Mello Human Rights Award from the President of Timor-Leste for contributing to the promotion, protection, and dissemination of human rights in Timor-Leste. (16,45)

* Program was launched during the reporting year.

† Program is funded by the Government of Timor-Leste.

Although the government has implemented programs to address child labor, research found no evidence that it has developed programs to assist children working in agriculture and on family farms, or children involved in the worst forms of child labor. The Commission to Combat Trafficking in Persons' work plan includes raising awareness of human trafficking among the populations most at risk, including students, minors, and large families. (34)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Timor-Leste (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law protects 17-year-old children from engagement in all the worst forms of child labor, such as illicit activities and commercial sexual exploitation.	2013 – 2022
	Raise the minimum age for hazardous work from 17 to 18.	2020 – 2022
	Ensure that the law's light work provisions specify the activities in which light work may be undertaken.	2016 – 2022
	Raise the minimum age for work of 15 to 16 to align with the compulsory education age.	2018 – 2022
Enforcement	Ensure that the Administration of the Labor Inspectorate General is staffed with the appropriate number of labor inspectors to conduct the targeted number of labor inspections.	2018 – 2022
	Ensure that the Administration of the Labor Inspectorate General conducts inspections in the informal sector, including on family farms and in private homes where domestic work takes place.	2017 – 2022
	Ensure that labor law enforcement agencies receive sufficient funding to carry out inspections, especially in rural areas of Timor-Leste, including funding for fuel for government vehicles.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure that criminal law enforcement officials receive sufficient training on laws related to the worst forms of child labor and human trafficking.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure that the Vulnerable Persons Unit receives funding to carry out investigations.	2020 – 2022
	Ensure that criminal and civil cases are tried in a timely manner and that cases of human trafficking are properly classified.	2019 – 2022
	Publish criminal law enforcement data related to the number of investigations related to the worst forms of child labor.	2020 – 2022
Government Policies	Adopt the National Action Plan to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor in Timor-Leste.	2016 – 2022
	Publish activities undertaken on an annual basis to implement the Timor-Leste Strategic Development Plan (2011–2030).	2017 – 2022
	Establish a policy for girls to be able to receive an education while pregnant and to encourage them to return to school after giving birth.	2020 – 2022
Social Programs	Cease the practice of forcing pregnant students to leave school, ensure that they can obtain transfer documentation to continue their education during pregnancy if needed, and provide these students with assistance so they can return to school after giving birth.	2022
	Improve access to education by providing safe and healthy sanitation facilities, especially for girls, making schools accessible for children with disabilities, and eliminating school-related fees.	2018 – 2022
	Institute programs to address child labor and the worst forms of child labor, including in agriculture.	2017 – 2022

In 2022, Togo made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government launched the Savanes Emergency Plan, which by strengthening education access and social welfare in the areas of the north affected by violent extremism, also addresses poverty, conflict, and lack of educational access as root causes of child labor. Meanwhile, the Safety Nets and Basic Services Project provided meals to school children in vulnerable communities and expanded unconditional cash transfers to 83,681 program participants. Furthermore, Togo eliminated fees for birth certificates, which may improve access to education and other social services. However, children in Togo are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in domestic work. The government has not devoted sufficient resources to allow the labor inspectorate to conduct inspections in all sectors and fully enforce the law. In addition, hazardous work regulations are insufficient because they allow children as young as 15 to perform some types of hazardous tasks, including carrying heavy loads. Finally, the government does not publish data related to its criminal enforcement efforts with regard to laws on the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Togo. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	44.4 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	89.0
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	50.4
Primary Completion Rate (%)		94.0

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2022, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2023. (1)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 6 (MICS 6), 2017. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/ Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Working in agriculture, including spraying pesticides† and handling fertilizers† (3) Herding animals (3,4)
Industry	Working in gravel quarries and sand mines, including excavating and carrying heavy loads† (3-5) Construction (6) Production of charcoal (3)
Services	Domestic work† (3,7) Begging and working as vendors and porters in the markets, sometimes carrying heavy loads† (2,3,5,6) Work as motorcycle repairmen (6,8,9) Garbage scavenging (6,8) Working at restaurants, sometimes at night (3,10)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced begging (5,8,11) Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,11,12) Forced labor in agriculture, including in the production of coffee, cocoa, and cotton; in mining; in mechanic shops; in domestic work; in quarries; and in markets (7,11-13) Use in illicit activities, including the transportation and sale of drugs, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (11)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Togo is a source, transit, and destination country for child trafficking. Children from Benin and Ghana are trafficked to Togo for forced labor, including commercial sexual exploitation, while Togolese children are often trafficked to neighboring West African countries, where they are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor in agriculture and domestic work. (11,12,14) Children are also trafficked within Togo, primarily for domestic work, work in agriculture and markets, and commercial sexual exploitation. (15,16) The rural areas in central and northern Togo are major source regions for child trafficking. Traffickers illicitly and deceptively recruit children by promising impoverished parents lucrative employment for their children. (11,12,17) In addition, in a practice known as confiage, parents sometimes send their children to live with a friend or relative in a larger town or city. These children are often not sent to school and are subjected to labor exploitation and sexual abuse. (3,7,13,18) Research suggests that the economic impact of the COVID-19 pandemic in Togo may have led to an increase in children subjected to labor and sexual exploitation in recent years. (3)

While free public primary education is guaranteed under Togolese law, due to funding shortages, some primary schools charge supplemental fees to pay volunteer teachers not employed directly by the government. (19) Free education is not yet guaranteed at the secondary level. As a result, there is a significant decline in school enrollment between primary and secondary school, leaving children vulnerable to child labor. (20,21) In 2022, for the second year in a row, the government announced that school fees would not be collected for public secondary schools for the 2022–2023 academic year. (10,22,23) Even when school fees are not charged, associated costs—including uniforms, books, and school supplies—make education prohibitively expensive for many families. (15,19,24) Research found that insufficient numbers of schools; poor school infrastructure, including inadequate sanitation and lack of access to toilets and water; physical and sexual violence; and long travel distances to school pose additional barriers for some children, especially in rural areas. (3,19,20,25) In northern Togo, in the Savanes region, the government issued a state of security emergency in June 2022 due to terrorist threats. Additionally, seasonal floods ruined crops, resulting in internal displacement and increased child vulnerability. (11) The government closed several schools due to the security crisis. Moreover, both refugees and internally-displaced people face difficulty registering children for school due to lack of identity documents. (3) In early 2022, however, the government eliminated fees for birth registration. This initiative addresses a barrier to education, and thus may ultimately reduce children's vulnerability to labor exploitation. (3,26)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Togo has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Togo's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the lack of guaranteed free basic education.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Articles 192, 193, and 354 of the Labor Code; Article 262 of the Children's Code; Article 881.1a of the Penal Code (27-29)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 2, 192, 193, and 354 of the Labor Code; Arrêté 1556 Determining Dangerous Work Forbidden for Children (28,30)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 2, 263, and 264 of the Children's Code; Article 319.9 of the Penal Code; Articles 192 and 193 of the Labor Code; Articles 1–11 and annex of Arrêté 1556 Determining Dangerous Work Forbidden for Children (27-30)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 7, 19, and 192 of the Labor Code; Articles 2, 264, and 411 of the Children's Code; Articles 150.3 and 151 of the Penal Code (27-29)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 192 and 356 of the Labor Code; Articles 2–6 and 10-11 of Law No. 2005-009 Suppressing Child Trafficking in Togo; Articles 2, 264, and 411–414 of the Children's Code; Articles 150.3, 151, 317–323, and 882 of the Penal Code (27-29,31)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 192 of the Labor Code; Articles 264, 276.f, and 387–390 of the Children's Code; Article 224 of the Penal Code (27-29)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 192 and 356 of the Labor Code; Articles 2, 264, 276.i, and 405 of the Children's Code; Articles 317.7, 318, 319, and 329 of the Penal Code (27-29)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 426 of the Children's Code; Article 6, 7, and 42 of Law No. 2007-010 Regarding the General Statute of the Togolese Armed Forces (27,32)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes*		Articles 2 and 426 of the Children's Code; Articles 146.14, 147.11, and 342 of the Penal Code (27,29)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Articles 2 and 426 of the Children's Code; Articles 146.14, 147.11, and 342 of the Penal Code (27,29)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Article 35 of the Constitution; Article 255 of the Children's Code (27,33)
Free Public Education	No		Article 35 of the Constitution; Law No. 97-16 For the Creation of a Support Fund for Education; Décret 2008-129/PR for the Abolition of School Fees in Pre-Primary and Primary Schools (33-35)

* Country has no conscription (32)

While Togo's Arrêté 1556 prohibits several types of hazardous work for children under age 18, it still permits children as young as age 15 to perform some hazardous tasks, such as transporting heavy loads. This permission violates Article 3(3) of Convention 138, which permits children as young as age 16 (but not age 15) to perform hazardous tasks as long as their health, safety, and morals are fully protected, and they receive adequate training. (30,34,35) In addition, the law provides for free schooling only through primary school, while basic education is a total of 9 years and includes 3 years of lower secondary school. The failure to provide for complete free basic education may increase the risk of children's involvement in the worst forms of child labor. (33-36)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Civil Service, Labor, and Social Dialogue	Conducts labor inspections and enforces labor laws, including child labor laws. (10) Runs a Committee for Social Reintegration of Children, which coordinates efforts on child trafficking. (3) Through its National Cell for the Elimination of Child Labor, coordinates the day-to-day operations of the National Steering Committee to Combat Child Labor, withdraws children from child labor situations, raises awareness, and collects data. (3,37)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Justice and Government Relations	Enforces criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor and prosecutes violators. (3,10)
Ministry of Security's General Directorate of Judicial Police	Investigates crimes involving child victims, including child trafficking. Operates as part of the National Police in all five regions of Togo. (10,15,38)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Togo took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Civil Service, Labor, and Social Dialogue that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient financial resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$39,061 (10)	$62,683 (3)
Number of Labor Inspectors	123 (10)	125 (3)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	Yes (28)	Yes (28)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	No (10)	Yes (3)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksite	Unknown (10)	906 (3)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	Unknown (10)	21 (3)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	Unknown (10)	Unknown (3)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	Unknown (10)	Unknown (3)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (10)	Yes (3)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Unknown (10)	Unknown (3)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (28)	Yes (28)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (10)	Yes (3)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (10)	Yes (3)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (10)	Yes (3)

The Ministry of Civil Service, Labor, and Social Dialogue lacks sufficient resources for fuel and transportation, which may hinder its ability to conduct inspections. (3) Routine inspections were conducted in the formal sector; however, the majority of child labor occurs in the informal sector, in which inspectors are legally allowed to inspect but rarely do. (6,39) Although they are legally permitted to do so, inspectors did not inspect private farms or homes, in which children work in agriculture and domestic work. (3,28,40) While a mechanism exists to refer survivors of child labor to social services, during the reporting year, social assistance was not provided in the 21 cases of child labor found by labor inspectors. (3)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Togo took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including deficient structures for investigation and prosecution planning.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (10)	Yes (11)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (10)	Unknown (3)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (10)	Unknown (3)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (10)	Unknown (3)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (10)	Unknown (3)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (10)	Yes (3)

In June 2022, 80 law enforcement and judicial actors attended trainings on trafficking in persons. (11) In December 2022, criminal law enforcement arrested a seamstress in Sokode, Central Region, for subjecting five apprentices, all girls, to commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor as waitresses in her bar at night. (3)

While there is a referral mechanism between criminal law enforcement and social services, shortcomings exist in the coordination between police, social workers, and the justice system during the prosecution process. (12,16) Research suggests that the absence of trafficking focal points for trafficking issues within the Gendarmerie and Ministry of Interior was a barrier to effective coordination of law enforcement. (12) Assize Courts in Lomé and Kara handle all human trafficking cases, but research indicates that the courts are overburdened and slow, which deters victims from participating. (11,12,16) In addition, investigators lacked resources to adequately enforce the law. (3,10) Research indicates that trafficking survivors are often reluctant to testify or assist with prosecution because their family members were complicit in the trafficking case. (16) Cases involving child trafficking may be settled outside of court due to difficulties gathering evidence. Also, Ministry of Justice officials may be reluctant to impose fines or prison sentences in cases in which parents are involved due to a fear of perpetuating the poverty that originally led the parents to violate child trafficking laws. (5,15,40)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including insufficient allocation of financial resources.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Steering Committee to Combat Child Labor	Serves as the coordinating government body for child labor issues. Includes representatives from 17 ministries and NGOs. (3) Was active during the reporting period reviewing and promoting the 2020–2024 National Action Plan for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor. (3)

The National Committee for the Reception and Social Reintegration of Child Victims of Trafficking gathers data on child trafficking and coordinates protection for survivors. The committee is housed under the Ministry of Labor and includes representatives from the Ministries of Justice, Health, Security, and Foreign Affairs. (16) Research suggests that despite receiving funds from the ILO, UNICEF, and Expertise France, the committee faced operational challenges due to lack of financial resources. (16) In 2022, the committee held training workshops on trafficking in persons for local elected officials in the Savanes, Kara, and Plateau regions. (11) In addition, the National Commission Against Trafficking in Persons, created in 2021, has a mandate to coordinate government-wide efforts to address child trafficking. (12) In 2022, the government appointed 13 officials to serve as members of the Commission, including the Ministry of Social Action's Director-General of Child Protection as the chair. (11)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of incorporation of child labor prevention and elimination strategies into the National Education Plan.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Action Plan for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2020–2024)	Taking a multisectoral approach, aims to take into account the formal and informal economies in the effort to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. (4,15,35) During the reporting period, the government carried out awareness-raising activities for the plan in all five regions of the country. (3)
Savanes Emergency Plan, 2022–2025 ( Programme d'Urgence pour les Savanes )†	Aims to strengthen community resilience in communities affected by violent extremism and terrorist attacks in the northern region. Activities include strengthening access to quality education and social welfare. (3) During the reporting period, the government established and began implementing this policy. (3)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Policy	Description & Activities
Trilateral Agreement to Combat Child Trafficking	Trilateral agreement between the Governments of Togo, Benin, and Burkina Faso to address child trafficking. Lays out specific responsibilities for origin, transit, and destination countries and aims for enhanced border controls and regional coordination (6,16,41) In December 2022, Togo cooperated with the Governments of Burkina Faso and Benin, as well as that of Côte d'Ivoire, on a joint operation that resulted in the arrest of 15 suspected traffickers and the release and reintegration of 90 child trafficking survivors. (42)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

While the Education Sector Plan (2020–2030) does not directly address eliminating child labor, it includes efforts to stimulate demand for education, including targeting localities where school access and retention are weak, especially for girls. It also proposes the gradual expansion of free lower secondary education for all students, and free upper secondary education for girls. (19,35)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Reference Center for Guidance and Care of Children in Difficult Situations	Ministry of Social Action, Promotion of Women, and Literacy (MASPFA)-run shelter in Lomé that receives child trafficking and child labor survivors referred through Allô 1011, a MASPFA-run hotline that receives reports of child abuse, including child trafficking. Provides shelter as well as legal, medical, psychological, and social services. (16) During the reporting year, the shelter received and provided services to survivors of child trafficking and child labor. (12)
Program of Cooperation UNICEF/Togo, 2019–2023	Aims to enhance child survival, education and development, child protection, and social inclusion in Togo. Includes efforts to reduce child vulnerability to exploitation, including by enhancing access to education, especially for girls. (43) During the reporting year, UNICEF coordinated with the government to identify and refer 186,190 children with undeclared births for registration. (26)
World Bank-Funded Programs	Aim to address child labor by improving social safety nets for vulnerable families and by increasing access to education. The Safety Nets and Basic Services Project, a $29 million project implemented by MASPFA and the Ministry of Grassroots Development, aims to provide social safety nets to poor communities. (10,44) During the reporting period, the program expanded unconditional cash transfers to 83,681 program participants and provided meals to schoolchildren in vulnerable communities. (44) The Improving Quality and Equity of Basic Education Project (2020–2026) aims to enhance teaching and learning quality, to improve equitable access to basic education in select regions, particularly among girls, and to strengthen sector management. (21) During the reporting period, the program provided training for educators, carried out activities supporting the reproduction and distribution of textbooks, and completed preparatory activities for school construction in the Savanes and Kara regions. (45)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (16)

Social programs focus on alleviating poverty and promoting education rather than targeting specific sectors of child labor, such as domestic work, commercial sexual exploitation, and agriculture. The government relies heavily on NGOs and international organizations for the implementation of social programs. (3,10)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Togo (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum age for all types of hazardous work from age 15 to age 16, and ensure that children under age 18 who are engaged in hazardous work receive adequate training in the type of work being done and that the health, safety, and morals of the child are protected in accordance with international standards.	2020 – 2022
	Establish by law free basic education, including lower secondary education.	2021 – 2022
Enforcement	Ensure that labor inspectors have adequate resources, including fuel and transportation, to carry out inspections and monitoring of labor laws.	2009 – 2022
	Conduct labor inspections in the informal sector as well as private homes and farms, in which children work in agriculture and domestic work.	2021 – 2022
	Publish information on labor law enforcement efforts, including the targeting of routine inspections and numbers of child labor violations for which penalties were imposed and collected.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that labor inspectors refer all cases of child labor found in labor inspections to social services.	2022
	Publish data on criminal law enforcement efforts, including the number of investigations conducted, criminal violations found, prosecutions initiated, convictions obtained, and penalties imposed for the worst forms of child labor.	2010 – 2022
	Ensure that criminal investigators have adequate resources to enforce laws against child labor.	2017 – 2022
	Investigate, prosecute, and impose penalties for convictions related to the worst forms of child labor.	2014 – 2022
	Ensure that court system processes for addressing child trafficking are timely so as not to deter victims from reporting.	2020 – 2022
	Ensure effective coordination between the criminal justice system and social services to allow survivors to receive adequate support during judicial proceedings.	2021 – 2022
Coordination	Ensure that the National Committee for the Reception and Social Reintegration of Child Victims of Trafficking receives adequate funding.	2021 – 2022
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the Education Sector Plan.	2013 – 2022
Social Programs	Increase access to education by eliminating school-related fees; ensuring that schools are free from sexual and physical violence; increasing the number of schools; enhancing access to birth registration, including for displaced children; and improving school infrastructure and transportation, especially in rural areas.	2010 – 2022
	Ensure that social programs specifically target child labor in commercial sexual exploitation, domestic work, and agriculture in addition to alleviating poverty and promoting education.	2019 – 2022

Although research found no evidence that child labor exists in Tokelau, in 2022, the government made minimal advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. The government partnered with the United Nations Children's Fund to launch the Pacific Region Inclusive Education Review to ensure that all children, including those with disabilities, have access to quality education. However, the government has not established adequate legal protections to prevent the worst forms of child labor. The law does not criminally prohibit the use, procuring, or offering of a child for prostitution; the production of pornography, or pornographic performances, or the use of children for illicit activities, including for the production and trafficking of drugs. In addition, Tokelau has not established a minimum age for work and lacks a law that prohibits hazardous occupations and activities for children.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides one key indicator on children's education in Tokelau.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Primary Completion Rate (%)		147.6

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2021, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2023. (1)

Although education in Tokelau is free, some children struggle to access reliable transportation to attend school. (2,3)

In 2022, the Government of Tokelau, in partnership with UNICEF, conducted a national survey on the state of inclusive education. (4) The survey found that all schools have classrooms that are accessible and safe for all, and that most schools have sanitation and menstrual hygiene facilities that are accessible and safe for all. (5)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Tokelau is a territory of New Zealand; however, New Zealand statutory law does not apply to Tokelau unless it is expressly extended to Tokelau. (6) International treaties are applied only with the consent of the Government of Tokelau. As a result, New Zealand's ratification of conventions does not apply automatically to Tokelau. (3,6) None of the key international child labor conventions ratified by New Zealand have been made applicable to Tokelau. (3)

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 2). However, gaps exist in Tokelau's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 2. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No
Prohibition of Forced Labor	No
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	17	Article 33 of the Government of New Zealand's Defense Act (7)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*†
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 63(1) of the Tokelau Crimes, Procedures, and Evidence Rules Act (8)
Free Public Education	Yes		Part 1, Section 3 of the Government of New Zealand's Education Act (9)

* Country has no conscription (7,10)

† Country has no standing military (7)

Tokelau has not established legislation on the minimum age for work, nor has the government determined the minimum age for hazardous work or the types of work that are hazardous for children. The government also does not prohibit slavery or slavery-like practices such as forced labor. (11) Tokelau's trafficking provision does not clearly criminalize domestic trafficking or the trafficking of children in the absence of force, fraud, or coercion. In addition, the government does not criminalize the use, procuring, or offering of children for prostitution, pornography, or pornographic performances. (11) Tokelau has also not criminalized the use of children in illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs. (8) Although there are no armed forces in Tokelau, the law does not criminally prohibit non-state armed groups from recruiting children under age 18. (11)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for enforcement actions to address child labor, including its worst forms. However, the Government of Tokelau has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
National Assembly (General Fono)	Hears cases related to child welfare concerns, including child labor, if local village leaders are unable to resolve the case at the local level. (3)
New Zealand Ombudsman	Addresses and, if necessary, investigates citizens' complaints against a government office, including complaints related to child labor, child health, safety, and education. (3)
Tokelau Police	Enforces the islands' laws. (3)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for a mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor. However, the Government of Tokelau has established a policy related to child labor (Table 4).

Table 4. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
United Nations Pacific Strategy (2018–2022)	The United Nations Pacific Strategy was a multi-national strategic framework program comprising South Pacific nations. The strategy aimed to address, develop, and implement strategic economic development priorities in the South Pacific, including eliminating child labor and the worst forms of child labor. (12) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the strategy during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for programs to address child labor.

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, the following actions would advance the continued prevention of child labor in Tokelau (Table 5).

Table 5. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Establish a minimum age for work of at least age 16 that equals the compulsory age of education.	2016 – 2022
	Ratify ILO Convention 182, the convention concerning the prohibition and immediate action for the elimination of the worst forms of child labor.	2022
	Ratify the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child.	2022
	Ratify the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict.	2022
	Ratify the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Phonography.	2022
	Ratify the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2022
	Establish age 18 as the minimum age for hazardous work and identify hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure that laws criminally prohibit forced labor, including debt bondage and slavery.	2013 – 2022
	Ensure that laws prohibit the trafficking of children domestically and internationally for commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor, and do not require the use of force to be established for the crime of trafficking.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure that laws criminally prohibit the use, procuring, and offering a child for prostitution, the production of pornography, and pornographic performances.	2017 – 2022
Government Policies	Ensure that laws criminally prohibit the use of children for illicit activities, including for the production and trafficking of drugs.	2017 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the forced or compulsory recruitment of children under age 18 into non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2022
Social Programs	Ensure that activities are undertaken to implement the United Nations Pacific Strategy and that data on these activities are published during the reporting period.	2019 – 2022
	Establish a reliable transportation program to ensure that children are able to attend school.	2018 – 2022

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2022, Tonga made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government launched its Future-Ready Children program to expand remote learning opportunities for students and support the drafting of a child protection policy. However, despite new initiatives to address child labor, Tonga is assessed as having made only minimal advancement because it continued to implement a practice that delays advancement to eliminate child labor. Research indicates that Tonga lacks a functioning labor inspectorate for the enforcement of labor laws and regulations. Labor inspections are a key tool for identifying child labor violations, and their absence makes children more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. Children in Tonga are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in farming and fishing. There are no laws specifying a minimum age for work, defining hazardous forms of work for children under age 18, or prohibiting the use of children for the production and trafficking of drugs, leaving children unprotected from labor exploitation. In addition, the government has not established a mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Tonga.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	46.8 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	94.6
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	47.8
Primary Completion Rate (%)		97.5

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 6 (MICS 6), 2019. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Subsistence farming and fishing (3)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced domestic work (4,5)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (5,6)
	Use in illicit activities, including the trafficking of drugs (7,8)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Research indicates that Tonga is a source and destination country for the commercial sexual exploitation of children. (4,9) Reporting also indicates that the methamphetamine epidemic has resulted in drug dealers recruiting school-age children to assist with drug deliveries, while also getting them addicted to the drug. (10-12) In addition, children as young as age 13 have reportedly been arrested for possession of drugs for the purposes of distribution. (13)

The Hunga-Tonga-Hunga-Ha'apai underwater volcano erupted 40 miles from Tonga's capital on January 15, 2022, which affected at least 28,000 children and damaged homes, businesses, and schools. (14-16) In addition, many school buildings remain inaccessible to students with physical disabilities, resulting in lower attendance rates for children with disabilities compared to children without disabilities at all educational levels. (13,14)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Tonga has ratified some key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Tonga's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the lack of minimum age for work and hazardous work protections.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No
Prohibition of Forced Labor	No		Sections 2, 69, and 70 of the Counter Terrorism and Transnational Organized Crime Act (17)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Sections 2 and 69 of the Counter Terrorism and Transnational Organized Crime Act (17)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Sections 115A and 126 of the Criminal Offenses Act (18,19)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	16	Section 25 of the Defense Services Act (20)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes*		Section 25 of the Defense Services Act (20)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	18	Section 98 of the Education Act 2013 (21)
Free Public Education	No		Sections 95 and 98 of the Education Act 2013 (21)

* Country has no conscription (20)

The Parliament has not established a minimum age for work or hazardous work, nor has it determined the types of hazardous work prohibited for children. (22,23) In addition, although Article 70 of the Counter Terrorism and Transnational Organized Crime Act prohibits some aspects of forced labor, it does not comprehensively or explicitly criminalize forced labor or slavery. (17) The Criminal Offenses Act prohibits the procurement of women and girls under age 21 for commercial sexual exploitation, but it does not criminalize the procurement of boys for the same. In addition, the Act does not sufficiently prohibit commercial sexual exploitation, because the use of children under age 14 in the production of pornography is not criminally prohibited. (19) There are no criminal prohibitions that specifically prohibit using children in illicit activities, particularly in the production and trafficking of drugs, nor the recruitment of children by non-state armed groups. (20) The Counter Terrorism and Transnational Organized Crime Act is not sufficient to prohibit child trafficking because trafficking children within the borders of the Kingdom is not a criminal offense. (17) Tonga has not established free public education because current legislation allows for fees to be charged to attend school, and those students who do not pay the fees may be refused admission to school, which greatly increases the risk of child labor. (21)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

Tonga lacks a functioning labor inspectorate for the enforcement of labor laws and regulations (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Trade and Economic Development (MTED)	Employs business license inspectors who are instructed to look for occurrences of child labor during their field inspections. If the Ministry receives a complaint, the chief officer inspector visits the site in question, carries out an investigation, and requests police involvement if children are found to be engaged in labor. (14) Child labor inspections are complaint-driven, with police called in for suspected cases of child labor. As the Ministry did not receive or record any formal complaints related to child labor during the reporting period, no labor inspections were carried out during 2022. (4, 14) Inadequate resources, including a lack of funding to hire and train business license inspectors, also hampered the government's capacity to enforce child labor laws in Tonga. (14) In addition, the government has yet to establish an adequate referral mechanism among enforcement personnel and social services providers. (13)
Tonga Police, Transnational Crime Unit, and Domestic Violence Unit	Enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. Respond to forced child labor and human trafficking violations and allegations of commercial sexual exploitation. (13)
Ministry of Internal Affairs, Immigration Department	Collaborates with Tonga Police and MTED on the enforcement of criminal cases related to the worst forms of child labor in which foreign nationals are involved. (13)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Tonga took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including the lack of a referral mechanism.

Table 6. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Unknown (13)	No (14)
Number of Investigations	0 (13)	0 (14)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	0 (13)	0 (14)
Number of Convictions	0 (13)	0 (14)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (13)	Unknown (14)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (13)	No (14)

The police department coordinates with NGOs to refer women and children needing support to social services, including safe houses and counseling, though no formal referral mechanism exists. (4, 14)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that the government has an established mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 7). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

Table 7. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
United Nations Pacific Strategy (2018–2022)	Addressed, developed, and implemented strategic economic development priorities in the South Pacific, including eliminating child labor and its worst forms. A multinational strategic framework program that consisted of 14 South Pacific nations. (24) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this program in Tonga during the reporting period.
Migration and Sustainable Development Policy	Protects vulnerable children at risk of human trafficking, provides support to survivors, and prosecutes perpetrators of human trafficking. Supports the advancement and protection of youth, especially unaccompanied minors and youth with disabilities who are victims of forced migration. (25) Promotes youth employment, supports youth vocational training, and expands youth programming. (25) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.

Although the Government of Tonga has adopted a 15-year policy improvement framework for Tonga's education system in partnership with the Government of New Zealand and has instituted the Tonga Strategic Development Plan Nine that indirectly addresses the root causes of child labor, strategies to prevent and eliminate child labor have not been integrated into those plans. (13)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government participated in programs that may contribute to eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy to address the problem in all relevant sectors.

Table 8. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
UNICEF Pacific Multi-Country Child Protection Program (2018–2022)	Prioritized children's rights, including the elimination of child labor and its worst forms. This was a multi-country program in 14 Pacific Island countries aligned with the UN Pacific Strategy (2018–2022). (26,27) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this program in Tonga during the reporting period.
Fakafuo 'o e tangata ma'ae kaha'u (Future-Ready Children) (2022-2025)*	Partnership between the Ministry of Justice, Ministry of Education and Training, and Save the Children that will expand remote learning opportunities for students and support the drafting of a child protection policy. (28,29)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (13,30)

Although the UNICEF Pacific Multi-Country Child Protection Program addresses the elimination of the worst forms of child labor, research found no evidence that it has carried out programs specifically designed to assist children in commercial sexual exploitation, agriculture, and fishing. (26) In human trafficking cases involving children, the police refer survivors to NGOs for safe housing and counseling. The government helps to fund these services. (4)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Tonga (Table 9).

Table 9. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict.	2017 – 2022
	Ratify the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution, and Child Pornography.	2017 – 2022
	Ratify the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2017 – 2022
	Establish a minimum age for work of at least 15 years, and preferably up to the compulsory education age of 18.	2009 – 2022

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Establish age 18 as the minimum age for hazardous work.	2009 – 2022
	Determine by national law or regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited for children, after consultation with employers' and workers' organizations.	2009 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits forced labor, including debt bondage and slavery.	2015 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits all forms of trafficking of children, including within the borders of the Kingdom.	2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits all forms of commercial sexual exploitation for both girls and boys under age 18.	2009 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the use of children in illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs.	2014 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2022
	Establish by law free basic public education.	2016 – 2022
Enforcement	Establish a functioning labor inspectorate for the enforcement of labor laws and regulations.	2019 – 2022
	Hire and train labor inspectors to conduct workplace inspections, including routine inspections outside of responses to complaints of child labor.	2016 – 2022
	Establish a formal referral mechanism between enforcement personnel and social services providers to protect and rehabilitate children involved in child labor, including its worst forms.	2014 – 2022
	Ensure that enforcement personnel receive training and resources necessary to enforce laws prohibiting child labor, including laws related to the worst forms of child labor, and conduct refresher courses.	2013 – 2022
Coordination	Establish a coordinating mechanism to address the worst forms of child labor.	2009 – 2022
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into relevant policies.	2017 – 2022
	Ensure activities are undertaken to implement the Migration and Sustainable Development Policy and publish results from activities implemented on an annual basis.	2022
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor, including its worst forms, to inform policies and programs.	2017 – 2022
	Enhance efforts to make education accessible for all children, including by updating school buildings for students with disabilities.	2018 – 2022
	Implement programs to address all worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, agriculture, and fishing.	2010 – 2022

In 2022, Tunisia made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. In March 2022, the government adopted a guide for labor inspectors when they encounter child labor. It also launched a digital platform to improve coordination among agencies who respond to child abuse, including child labor, and opened two new schools to help students who had dropped out of school reintegrate back into education or job skills training. However, children in Tunisia are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced labor in domestic work and begging. Children also perform dangerous tasks in street work. The budget for staffing and logistics, such as for fuel and transportation, is inadequate to carry out inspections, especially in remote areas of the country. In addition, the government was unable to provide complete data on its law enforcement efforts due to delays in the digitization of court records.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Tunisia.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Child protection delegations have received more than 500 reports of children involved in begging or other economic exploitation. (12) The majority of human trafficking cases investigated by Tunisian authorities over the last year were related to child begging and there were 152 such cases reported by the Ministry of the Interior (MOI). (13) Young girls from Tunisia's northwest and other interior regions are particularly vulnerable to human trafficking. (7,14) Refugees and migrants who lack legal documentation, including child migrants from sub-Saharan African countries and those fleeing unrest in neighboring countries, are vulnerable to labor exploitation because refugees and migrants do not have the status to legally work in Tunisia. (10,15) Native Tunisians are also leaving the country due to economic unrest and are vulnerable to exploitation while immigrating. (15-17) In November 2022, Tunisia's first national survey on international migration was released; the survey may be helpful in determining the needs of child migrants and improving anti-trafficking efforts. (18)

Approximately 30,000 more students dropped out of school in 2022 as compared to 2021, and representatives in all six of Tunisia's regions have noted an increase in students dropping out of secondary school. (16,19) More than half a million young Tunisians are neither employed nor pursuing education or training. (20) In addition, many of those who drop out of school choose to migrate out of the country to find other opportunities, sometimes unaccompanied, increasing their risk of exploitation and trafficking. (16,21) Furthermore, there is inadequate transportation to schools in rural areas, an insufficient number of teachers, and many schools did not open on time at the beginning of the 2022 school year due to low COVID-19 vaccination rates. (4,22)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Tunisia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The government's laws and regulations are in line with relevant international standards (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 53 of the Labor Code (23)

Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 2 of the National Service Law (29)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 2(5) of the Law on the Prevention and the Fight Against the Trafficking of Persons; Articles 3 and 18 of the Child Protection Code (26,27)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Section 1 of the Law on Education (30)
Free Public Education	Yes		Articles 38 and 46 of the Constitution; Law on Education (30,31)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Social Affairs (MSA)	Conducts labor inspections and assesses fines and penalties for infractions. (5,23) Employs social workers and medical inspectors to assist in addressing issues of child labor. (5,9) Collaborates with the Ministry of Education and the Ministry of Health (MOH) to identify and provide support to children vulnerable to child labor. (5) Monitors the implementation of labor legislation and initiates prosecutions through the General Directorate of Labor Inspection. (5,32) Implements social and orientation programs for minors related to child labor through the General Administration for Social Development. (5,32)
Ministry of Family, Women, Children and the Elderly (MFWCE)	Gathers evidence and conducts investigations on child welfare cases; conducts needs assessments and implements intervention plans. (5,33) Provides services to child survivors of commercial sexual exploitation. (33,34) Trains child protection delegates to address child labor in the field through coordination with local governments and civil society. (34) Acts as judicial police in cases of imminent danger to children through its Delegates for the Protection of Children. (5,27) In December 2022, launched a digital platform to improve coordination among service responders who address abuse against children, including child labor. (5)
Ministry of the Interior (MOI)	Investigates reports of the worst forms of child labor, including complaints that fall outside of the labor inspectorate's mandate and those pertaining to the informal sector. (5) Through its Child Protection Service in the National Police, addresses the commercial sexual exploitation of children and coordinates with MSA and MFWCE regarding violations. (5,34) Through its Judicial Police, coordinates with MSA to refer cases of at-risk youth to social services. (5)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Tunisia took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including financial penalties too low to serve as an adequate deterrent.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$6,139,671 (35)	$4,700,000 (5)

A lack of government cars and fuel have impacted the labor inspectorate's ability to effectively carry out inspections. (5) Government officials have also noted that the budget for the inspectorate is insufficient because it does not adequately provide for facilities, fuel, and transportation. (5) Although there are labor inspectors who monitor the informal sector in Ariana, Jendouba, Medenine, Sfax, Sousse, Tunis, and Tozeur, officials note that the labor inspectorate lacks resources to adequately monitor the informal economy in other parts the country. (34) Civil fines range from approximately $7 to $21 per infraction (20 to 60 Tunisian dinars) and are doubled for repeat offenders, though the total amount levied cannot exceed $1,667 (5,000 Tunisian dinars). As a result, civil fines remain insufficient to deter potential violators. (34)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Tunisia took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including the lack of publication of criminal law enforcement data.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Unknown (4)	Yes (5)
Number of Investigations	147 (35)	Unknown (5)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	3 (35)	Unknown (5)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (4)	Unknown (5)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (4)	Unknown (5)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (4)	Yes (5)

The Ministry of Justice does not maintain comprehensive data on its efforts to address child labor, as most records are not digitized. (33,34) However, it does maintain statistics on human trafficking cases, which indicate that 59 percent of the suspected human traffickers who were prosecuted during the reporting period were charged with crimes related to the exploitation of children. (13) Research found that judges are sometimes reluctant to impose strong penalties for human trafficking charges due in part to a low level of awareness on the part of police and judicial authorities of the proper application of the anti-human trafficking law and how to handle human trafficking cases. Authorities also sometimes conflate human trafficking with migrant smuggling. (10,34) Although MOI reports that children under the age of 18 are not routinely detained for involvement in illicit activities, there have been isolated incidents of law enforcement punishing children for their involvement in the worst forms of child labor. (34) During the reporting period, the government prosecuted 10 children—5 boys and 5 girls—on charges of human trafficking, which raises concerns that children, who may be survivors of exploitation themselves, are being prosecuted for their involvement in trafficking activities. (13)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Leadership Committee to Combat Child Labor	Coordinates efforts to address child labor as part of the Child Labor National Action Plan (PAN-TN). Led by MSA and includes membership of 11 other ministries and 3 unions, with support from ILO. (4,36) In March 2022, adopted a guide for labor inspectors with information about Tunisian labor laws and assistance for children found to be engaged in child labor. (20,22) The committee also held a workshop with personnel from four governorates (Arian, Ben Arous, Manouba, and Tunis) to increase their collaboration on issues related to child labor. (20)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
Child Labor National Action Plan (PAN-TN)	Raises awareness, builds the capacity of stakeholders, encourages action from NGOs and the public, and promotes the implementation of existing laws and policies. (37,38) In 2022, focused on building a strategic plan for Child Labor Units within MSA. (20)
National Strategy for the Combat of Trafficking in Persons (2018–2023)	Aims to establish a global evidence-based approach to address trafficking in persons by coordinating national and international actors. (7,39) In 2022, the Ministry of Employment and Vocational Training participated in this plan and assisted juvenile delinquents, who have been reprimanded or are in prison, to return to school. (5)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Support Efforts to Combat Human Trafficking (2014–2022)	USDOS-funded project implemented by IOM to carry out anti-human trafficking activities in collaboration with the Ministry of Justice, MOI, MSA, and MFWCE. Included three objectives: (1) building the capacity of relevant institutions and agencies to identify and assist survivors of human trafficking based on their individual needs; (2) strengthening cross-sector cooperation and the sharing of information through the implementation of a national referral mechanism; and (3) conducting an awareness-raising campaign to keep children in school and discourage irregular migration that could lead to human trafficking. (5,34)
Centers to Provide Aid to Victims of Child Labor†	Serve up to 6,000 children engaged in child labor or vulnerable to child labor through the maintenance of 79 youth centers. (5,40) Many of these centers are located in Tunis and provide education and health care to children who would otherwise be on the street. The centers were active during the reporting period. (12)
Shelters and Services for Victims of Human Trafficking†	Serve survivors of human trafficking, predominantly children, through shelters operated by the Government of Tunisia. Provide lodging, food, clothing, legal aid through a network of pro bono lawyers, and free medical care in collaboration with MOH. (5) In 2022, provided shelter services to 139 child survivors of human trafficking. (13) During the reporting period, the MOH coordinated with the Council of Europe to provide psychological care to commercially sexually exploited children. (18) More than half of the survivors of human trafficking receiving services from MOH in 2022 were children. (13) While authorities report that shelters are accessible to those with disabilities, there is a lack of staff who can communicate in sign language. (13,33)

† Program is funded by the Government of Tunisia.

The Second Chance program is funded by the Tunisian government and works in cooperation with UNICEF to reintegrate school dropouts into education or job training. The program launched two new schools in 2022. (5,20) Although Tunisia has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, including in agriculture, fishing, commerce, manufacturing, domestic work, and construction. In addition, while the National Authority to Combat Trafficking in Persons works to ensure the safety of child survivors of labor exploitation and trafficking in persons, options for survivors' long-term support and possible relocation remain extremely limited. (10,14) Nonprofits have noted that there is a need for more coordination between themselves, law enforcement, and healthcare providers to better provide care to trafficking survivors and bring their traffickers to justice. (13)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Tunisia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Provide adequate staff and other resources, including fuel and transportation, to enable the labor inspectorate to conduct a greater number of inspections, particularly in remote areas and in the informal economy.	2015 – 2022
	Collect and publish information related to the penalties collected as it relates to the civil enforcement of child labor violations.	2013 – 2022
	Collect and publish information on criminal law enforcement of child labor laws, including on the number of criminal child labor investigations that were conducted, prosecutions initiated, convictions secured, and penalties imposed for child labor crimes.	2019 – 2022
	Increase penalties for those who employ children in violation of child labor law protections to deter potential violations and reduce recidivism.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure that law enforcement and the judiciary are fully informed as to the existence and application of anti-human trafficking penalties and impose these penalties when appropriate.	2020 – 2022
	Ensure that exploited children are not prosecuted for their involvement in trafficking activities.	2022
Social Programs	Research and publish detailed information on the involvement of children in child labor, as well as those at risk of being involved, and publish this information to inform policies and programs.	2022
	Address barriers to education, especially for children in rural areas, such as unreliable transportation to schools.	2015 – 2022
	Expand existing programs to fully address the scope of the child labor problem, including in agriculture, fishing, commerce, manufacturing, domestic work, and construction.	2015 – 2022
	Ensure that services for survivors of human trafficking are accessible to those with disabilities and that interpretation services for all relevant languages, including sign language, are available to assist survivors in receiving services.	2022
	Establish long-term support and relocation options for survivors of child labor, including child trafficking.	2020 – 2022

In 2022, Tuvalu made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The National Advisory Committee on the Convention on the Rights of the Child worked on developing a child protection policy for schools. However, although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Tuvalu engage in child labor in fishing and domestic work. The government has not specified, by national law or regulation, the types of hazardous work prohibited for children, leaving children vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. In addition, Tuvalu lacks information on labor law and criminal law enforcement efforts.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Tuvalu.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	8.5 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	79.4
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	8.9
Primary Completion Rate (%)		88.3

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2021, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2023. (1)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 6 (MICS 6), 2019–2020. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Fishing, activities unknown (3)
Services	Domestic work, activities unknown (4,5)

The Tuvalu Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 6 (MICS 6) 2019–2020, which provides the most recent and comprehensive data on child labor in Tuvalu, found that 4 percent of children ages 5 to 17 were working under conditions of child labor. The survey also reported that 16 percent of children were engaging in hazardous activities that included carrying heavy loads, working with dangerous tools, and operating heavy machinery, among others. (4) However, the MICS 6 did not specify the sectors in which children in Tuvalu were engaged in child labor. (4)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Tuvalu has ratified some key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Tuvalu's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the identification of hazardous occupations or activities prohibited for children.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 42 of the Labor and Employment Relations Act (6)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 44 of the Labor and Employment Relations Act (6)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 3 and 68 of the Counter Terrorism and Transnational Organized Crime Act; Articles 46–49 of the Labor and Employment Relations Act; Article 249 of the Penal Code; Article 18 of the Constitution of Tuvalu (6-9)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 3 and 68 of the Counter Terrorism and Transnational Organized Crime Act; Article 136 of the Penal Code (7,9)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 46 of the Labor and Employment Relations Act; Articles 136 and 140–143 of the Penal Code (6,7)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 46 of the Labor and Employment Relations Act; Articles 141–142 of the Penal Code (6,7)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	N/A†
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A†
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Section 46 of the Labor and Employment Relations Act (6)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Article 3(1)(b) of the Compulsory Education Order (10)
Free Public Education	No		Article 33 of the Education Act (11)

† Country has no standing military (12)

The Government of Tuvalu has not specified, by national law or regulation, the types of hazardous work prohibited for children; previous provisions applied only to males under age 18 in the industrial, mining, and fishing sectors. (6,13) Research found that while primary school is free in practice for students up to age 13, the Education Act stipulates that fees can legally be charged for education. In addition, free primary school up to age 13 does not match the compulsory education age of 15, which leaves children ages 14 and 15 without free education. (5,10,11,14)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Department of Labor and the Ministry of Public Works, Infrastructure, Environment, Labor, Meteorology and Disaster	Enforces labor laws, including those related to child labor. (15)
Tuvalu Police Force	Investigates and enforces criminal violations regarding child labor, child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and the use of children in illicit activities. (5)

Labor Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether labor law enforcement agencies in Tuvalu took actions to address child labor (Table 6).

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown (15)	Unknown (5)
Number of Labor Inspectors	4 (15)	Unknown (5)

Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Unknown (15)	Unknown (5)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (15)	Yes (5)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (15)	Yes (5)

In 2022, the ILO conducted consultations on international labor conventions with the government and civil society. (5) While labor inspectors cannot assess civil penalties, they may refer matters to the Office of Attorney General for criminal prosecution and the assessment of penalties upon conviction. (6) There is no formal referral mechanism, but the government's National Advisory Committee on Children's Rights (NACCRC) is an interagency collective coordinating child protection issues. Members of the committee can be contacted should a case of child labor be found. (5) Research could not ascertain whether routine labor inspections have been conducted, but there have been no inspections of risk-prone sectors. (5)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether criminal law enforcement agencies in Tuvalu took actions to address child labor (Table 7).

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Unknown (15)	Unknown (5)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (15)	Unknown (5)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (15)	Unknown (5)
Number of Convictions	0 (15)	0 (5)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (15)	Unknown (5)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (15)	Yes (5)

The government did not provide information on its criminal law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report. (5)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Advisory Committee on the Convention on the Rights of the Child (NACCRC)	Interagency collective that coordinates child protection issues and implements the Convention on the Rights of the Child to prevent and eliminate child labor. Led by the Ministry of Education, Youth and Sports (MEYS) and includes representatives from the Tuvalu Police and Ministries of Labor and Social Welfare. (5, 15) Maintains a Child Protection Desk to support and coordinate the implementation of child protection efforts. (15) During the reporting year, the committee worked on developing a child protection policy for schools. (5)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established relevant policies related to child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
United Nations Pacific Strategy (2018–2022)	Addressed, developed, and implemented strategic economic development priorities in the South Pacific, including eliminating child labor and its worst forms. A multinational strategic framework program that consisted of 14 South Pacific nations. (16) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this program in Tuvalu during the reporting period.
Child Protection Work Plan (2017)	Involves public relations activities, such as awareness raising and advocacy. (17) During the reporting period, the government continued to implement its child protection program although progress was restricted as technical assistance and support was only provided virtually. (5)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (10)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
UNICEF Pacific Multi-Country Child Protection Program (2018–2022)	Prioritized children's rights including the elimination of the worst forms of child labor. This was a multi-country program in 14 Pacific Island countries aligned with the UN Pacific Strategy 2018–2022. (18) Research was unable to determine whether activities took place in Tuvalu in 2022.
Tuvalu Learning Project (2020–2025)	Prepares children entering first grade and increases the literacy of children in elementary school. Subcomponents include a study on student absenteeism, a gender analysis to understand why boys are dropping out of school more than girls, and trainings on child protection, gender-based violence, and disability inclusion. (19) Implemented by MEYS and funded by the World Bank. (19) This project remained active during the reporting period. (5)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

Research found no evidence of programs that specifically address child labor in domestic work or the fishing sector.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Tuvalu (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict.	2013 – 2022
	Ratify the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution, and Child Pornography.	2013 – 2022
	Ratify the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2013 – 2022
	Determine by national law or regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited for all children in consultation with employers' and workers' organizations.	2017 – 2022
	Establish by law free public education for all children up to at least age 15 to align with the compulsory education age.	2019 – 2022
Enforcement	Publish labor law enforcement information, including labor inspectorate funding, number of labor inspections conducted at worksite, number of child labor violations found, number of child labor violations for which penalties were imposed, number of child labor penalties imposed that were collected, whether routine inspections were conducted, and whether unannounced inspections were conducted.	2016 – 2022
	Establish a mechanism to assess civil penalties.	2022
	Institutionalize training for labor inspectors, including training for new labor inspectors at the beginning of their employment.	2020 – 2022
	Strengthen the labor inspectorate by initiating targeted inspections based on analysis of data related to risk-prone sectors and patterns of serious incidents.	2020 – 2022
	Publish information on criminal law enforcement efforts, including if training was provided for criminal investigators, the number of investigations, the number of prosecutions initiated, and number of penalties imposed for violations related to the worst forms of child labor.	2017 – 2022
	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2022
	Conduct research to determine activities carried out by children working in the agriculture and services sector to inform policies and programs.	2010 – 2022
Social Programs	Ensure that all social programs that address child labor remain active and publish information on activities taken on an annual basis.	2022
	Institute programs to address child labor in domestic work and the fishing sector.	2009 – 2022

In 2022, Uganda made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The City of Kampala published an ordinance to prohibit the employment of children in hazardous work, including activities such as working in rock quarries and restaurants, collecting and selling scraps, and domestic work. The government also secured seven convictions for crimes related to child trafficking for labor purposes, approved a child labor inspection checklist, and released the results of a 2021 baseline survey on child labor in the rice and sugarcane growing areas in eastern Uganda. In addition, a National Child Focused Research Agenda (2022–2026) was launched, which enables evidence-based programming and includes research questions on child labor. However, children in Uganda are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in gold mining. Although the government made meaningful efforts in all relevant areas during the reporting period, Uganda's minimum age for hazardous work does not meet the international standard as the Employment of Children Regulations permit a commissioner to allow children ages 12 and older enrolled in an educational training or apprenticeship program to engage in hazardous work. Moreover, the law only guarantees free education through the primary level, even though international standards require free basic education through lower secondary school. In addition, the lack of a centralized supervisory authority, along with inadequate funding, training, and resources, hampered the capacity of law enforcement agencies to conduct child labor inspections and investigations.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table I provides key indicators on children's work and education in Uganda.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

In December 2022, military operations established that children had been recruited into ISIS-DRC from parts of Busoga in eastern Uganda, Kasese in western Uganda, and Wakiso and Luweero in central Uganda. The Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions is currently working on these cases. (5) After strong government encouragement following the COVID-19 pandemic, the Uganda Bureau of Statistics published its 2021 National Labor Force Survey during the reporting period. Survey results indicated that 39.5 percent of children ages 5–17 were engaged in some form of child labor in the country, a percentage that was more than double the percentage reported in the 2019/2020 National Household Survey published in 2021, and that the Karamoja region had the highest rate of child labor at 56 percent. (16,17)

Ugandan children are lured by human traffickers from rural to urban areas and subsequently exploited in forced labor and sex trafficking. Ugandan children are also victims of forced labor and sex trafficking in neighboring countries, such as Kenya and Somalia, and in the Middle East and South Asia. (5,15,18,19) Furthermore, human traffickers exploit children from neighboring countries, including Kenya, Rwanda, and Tanzania, in forced agricultural labor, domestic servitude, and commercial sexual exploitation in Uganda. (15,19) Children from rural areas, especially the Karamoja region, are vulnerable to human trafficking, in which they are forced into begging, street vending, domestic work, or commercial sexual exploitation. (10,15,18) NGO and media reports have indicated that children from Karamoja are also sold in open-air markets or through intermediaries and forced into domestic work, begging, cattle herding, and commercial sexual exploitation. (11,15,20) The Ugandan People's Defense Force noted that cattle rustlers in the Karamoja region recruit children, especially boys, for violent cattle raids. An unspecified number of these children have been killed during military operations against the cattle rustlers, and according to the Committee on Gender, Labor, and Social Development, cattle raids also increase children's vulnerability to human trafficking. (5) In other parts of the country, girls worked in gold mines in Karamoja in northern Uganda, and boys grazed cattle in Rwenzori in western Uganda. Meanwhile, children in the Bidibidi refugee settlement in northwestern Uganda were engaged in hazardous labor, including working on farms and as domestic workers, which may include working long hours and physical, verbal, and sexual abuse. (13,21)

While Ugandan law provides for free compulsory education, the cost of school supplies, uniforms, and other materials often impedes some children from attending school. Research found that these fees are paid directly to the schools, and if students are not able to pay the amount in full, they might be prevented from attending or completing their term. (5,22,23) Additional barriers to education for children include lack of teachers, poor school infrastructure, and lack of transportation, particularly in remote rural areas where children may have to walk very long distances to the nearest school. (11,12,24) Although free compulsory education laws apply equally to refugee children, research found that these children often are not enrolled in or not attending school. Girls, especially those in refugee camps, are at particular risk of being out of school and vulnerable to exploitation due to pressure to undertake domestic duties, gender-based violence, and harassment. (25,26) In addition, refugee children, particularly girls, may also face harassment due to their refugee status, and they may also experience language barriers. For a number of refugee settlements, such as Nakivale, schools are often located far from where refugees live and are inadequately equipped to meet the needs of the large student population. (5,27)

In late May 2023, Uganda enacted the Anti-Homosexuality Act, which allows for the prosecution and imprisonment of persons, including children, found to be committing or attempting to commit same-sex acts. (28) The law also requires mandatory reporting of those suspected of committing or intending to commit these acts. Research indicates that LGBTQI+ children are sometimes expelled or suspended from school, and this new law may increase discrimination against children and further interfere with their access to education. (29,30)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Uganda has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Uganda's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the lack of free basic education guaranteed by law.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Section 7 of the Children (Amendment) Act (31)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No	18	Section 7 of the Children (Amendment) Act; Section 32 of the Employment Act; Regulations 5 and 8 of the Employment (Employment of Children) Regulations (31-33)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Regulation 6 and the First Schedule of the Employment (Employment of Children) Regulations; Section 7 of the Children (Amendment) Act (31,33)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Sections 2 and 5 of the Employment Act; Sections 3–5 of the Prevention of Trafficking in Persons Act (32,34)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Section 8 of the Children (Amendment) Act; Sections 2–6 of the Prevention of Trafficking in Persons Act (31,34)

Free Public Education	No		Section 10(3)(a) of the Education Act (22)

* Country has no conscription (38)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (22)

During the reporting period, the Kampala Capital City Child Protection Ordinance was published. The ordinance prohibits the employment of children in hazardous work, including activities such as working in rock quarries and restaurants, collecting and selling scraps, and domestic work. (39) The ordinance has a maximum 6-month prison penalty for violators. (39) In addition, Wakiso District drafted a child protection ordinance that is currently awaiting publication in the Uganda Gazette, which is the final stage before its implementation can begin. (5)

Uganda's existing legal framework governing child labor does not meet international standards on a number of points. While Uganda has a list of hazardous occupations prohibited to children under the age of 18, Section 8 of the Employment of Children Regulations permits a commissioner to allow children ages 12 and older enrolled in an educational training or apprenticeship program to engage in hazardous work, in violation of international standards. (33) Children in Uganda are required to attend school only up to age 13, making children ages 13 to 15 vulnerable to child labor because they are not required to attend school while also not being legally permitted to work. Finally, although Uganda has adopted policies to extend universal education through the secondary level, by law free education is limited to the primary level. (22,40)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Gender, Labor, and Social Development (MGLSD)	Formulates, implements, and enforces labor inspection policies and laws related to working conditions through its Department of Labor, Industrial Relations and Productivity. (41,42) Includes the Industrial Court, which judges labor dispute cases that are referred by labor officers and district labor officers. Operates the Uganda Child Helpline known as Sauti. (5,7,19)
Ministry of Internal Affairs	Enforces criminal laws on the worst forms of child labor. The Uganda Police Force's (UPF) Child and Family Protection Unit investigates forced labor cases, the Special Investigations Division and the Anti-Human Trafficking Desk investigate cases related to human trafficking and the use of children in illicit activities, and the Sexual Offenses Desk investigates commercial sexual exploitation. (19)
Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions	Prosecutes criminal cases related to the worst forms of child labor that are referred by UPF. (43)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Uganda took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Gender, Labor, and Social Development (MGLSD) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the ability to assess penalties.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$320,000 (10)	$81,450 (5)
Number of Labor Inspectors	173 (10)	195 (5)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	No (44)	No (44)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	Yes (10)	Yes (5)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksite	542 (10)	283 (5)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	Unknown	56 (5)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	Unknown	0 (5)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	Unknown	0 (5)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (10)	Unknown
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (10)	Unknown
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (44)	Yes (44)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (10)	Yes (5)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (10)	Yes (5)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (10)	Yes (5)

In 2022, the number of overall labor officers increased by 18; however, reports indicate that several districts still lack labor officers in general, and in districts with officers, the lack of funding often prevents them from carrying out their duties. Furthermore, although reports indicate that labor officer training is insufficient and that officers generally lack the expertise to follow through on child labor cases, during the reporting period, over 120 labor officers were trained to use a child labor inspection manual and on strategies to eliminate child labor. (5,10,11) From January to November 2022, the Uganda Child Helpline reported a total of 162 children engaged in child labor, including 107 found to be working as domestic workers. The helpline also reported an additional 144 child trafficking cases, including 55 children engaged in forced domestic work. (5)

Labor unions have noted that the number of inspections conducted is insufficient and that inspections are only carried out when complaints are received. (5,45) Labor inspectors in Uganda have the authority to inspect private farms and residences, but the MGLSD has noted that inspectors rarely exercise this authority despite the prevalence of child domestic work in the country. (11) Research indicates that Uganda does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (45-47) Given the lack of resources for inspections, local NGOs often train labor inspectors and even assist them in conducting child labor inspections. (5)

Uganda is signatory to ILO Convention 81 that requires labor inspection to be placed under the supervision and control of a central authority. (48,42) Research found, however, that coordination among the various agencies responsible for child labor law enforcement remains a challenge because labor officers are under district government authority, rather than under authority of the MGLSD. (49) For example, although under the Employment Act labor officers are required to submit monthly reports, in practice, the MGLSD does not receive labor reports from districts. (41) Research also found that child labor cases rarely reach the Industrial Court because of poor monitoring and the court's limited access to communities outside urban centers, where child labor is most likely to occur. (11) Overall, the government's enforcement of labor laws and penalization of violations was inadequate, particularly in the informal sector in which most children work. (50)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Uganda took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including official complicity in the commercial sexual exploitation of children.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (10)	Yes (5)
Number of Investigations	1,286 (5,51)	532 (52)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	571 (51)	115 (5)
Number of Convictions	48 (51)	7 (5)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (10)	Yes (10)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (10)	Yes (5)

In 2022, the Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions reported that seven individuals were convicted of child trafficking for labor purposes. Three of these individuals received a 1-year prison term, another received a 2-year prison term, two others received a 7-year term, and another was fined approximately $540. (5) In addition, the MGLSD reported withdrawing, rehabilitating, and reintegrating 493 children from the streets of Kampala back into their communities, in collaboration with the Kampala Capital City Authorities. (5) Observers reported that police officers and immigration officials, particularly at airports and border crossings, have been known to accept bribes to facilitate human trafficking, including child trafficking, or to warn human traffickers of impending operations or investigations. During the reporting period, the government investigated seven government officials—including police officers, military officers, and public officials—involved in potential human trafficking crimes; all seven cases remained ongoing at the end of the reporting year. (53) Law enforcement agencies and civil society organizations have claimed that immigration officials have been known to facilitate human trafficking, including the trafficking of children, while research has also found limited cases of police allegedly complicit in the commercial sexual exploitation of child refugees. (15,52) Reports have also indicated that high-level government officials may have owned or been associated with labor recruitment companies and networks of traffickers that engage in child trafficking. However, during the reporting period, the Uganda Police Force (UPF) Anti-Trafficking Department reported a reduction in the number of these cases due to an increase in prosecution-led investigations, which has also increased collaboration between police and prosecutors. (15,52,54) The involvement of government officials in human trafficking networks can significantly impede criminal investigations into cases of the worst forms of child labor. (15) Uganda's State House Anti-Corruption Unit, which works on human trafficking issues on an ad hoc basis, has initiated investigations related to official complicity in human trafficking but has not made any of these reports public. (55,56)

According to the government, police officers identify and refer street children to probation officers and civil society organizations to place children in homes and shelters and do not keep them in detention facilities; however, some children may have been housed in juvenile rehabilitation centers because shelters are frequently full. Police intermittently rounded up street children, housed them in children's homes and shelters for several days while social workers completed family tracing, and then returned them to their families. (5,50,56-58) Research found that some street children, including potential human trafficking victims and child laborers, have faced conflict with local authorities; however, in December 2022, the Constitutional Court declared the offenses of "rogues and vagabonds" in Uganda's Penal Code unconstitutional, and the UPF announced that it would no longer arrest individuals using these charges. (5,21,56,59) Reports have also indicated that investigators rarely follow up on reports of children involved in domestic work. When child domestic workers complain to their employers about not being paid, the employers may report the children to the police for theft, and police subsequently treat them as criminals rather than as victims who have not been paid for their work. (11)

Moreover, training of criminal investigators is insufficient, in part due to regular staff turnover and transfers. Some criminal law enforcement officials are not aware of key human trafficking laws, and some officers misclassify cases, conduct insufficient investigations, or encourage victims to accept payment from their traffickers to settle cases. (60,55)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Steering Committee on the Elimination of Child Labor	Coordinates child labor issues and implements the National Action Plan for the Elimination of Child Labor, including by setting policy priorities, securing resources for child labor programs, and coordinating with key stakeholders. Led by MGLSD, includes members from several ministries, including the Office of the Prime Minister, Ministry of Finance, Ministry of Local Government, and UPF. (11,61) In 2022, held three meetings, approved a child labor inspection checklist, released the results of a 2021 baseline survey by Platform for Labor Action on child labor in rice- and sugarcane-growing areas in eastern Uganda, and participated in the May 2022 Global Conference on the Elimination of Child Labor in South Africa. (5)

During the reporting period, the National Child Well-Being Steering Committee established child well-being steering committees in 108 districts and in 1 city and established child well-being committees in 36 sub-counties. (5)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including inconsistent implementation of national policies throughout the country.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Action Plan for the Elimination of Child Labor (2020/2021–2024/2025) †	Launched in 2021 and developed in alignment with the country's National Development Plan, aims to focus government efforts on prevention, protection, rehabilitation, and reduction of the risk of child labor, with the goal of eliminating all forms of child labor by 2025. (62,63) In 2022, the government launched the ILO Social Finance Model to support implementation of the National Action Plan. (5)
National Child Policy	Seeks to coordinate the protection of child rights, focusing on abuse, neglect, exploitation, and violence. Includes prioritization of the elimination of child labor and was launched with an implementation strategy through 2025. (64,65) Seeks to outline the responsibilities of all stakeholders in implementing child-related policies and focuses on four basic children's rights: survival, development, protection, and participation. (64,65) During the reporting period, launched the National Child Focused Research Agenda (2022–2026), which supports and enables relevant research to support evidence-based programming. The research agenda was validated by the Interministerial Committee on the Implementation of the National Child Policy and includes research questions on child labor. (5)
National Action Plan for Prevention of Trafficking in Persons in Uganda (2019–2024)	Focuses on developing sustainable systems and structures to prevent human trafficking; improving capacity for the identification, protection of and support for victims; improving investigations and prosecutions; and establishing cooperative relationships with international stakeholders. Includes the National Referral Guidelines for Management of Victims of Trafficking, which seek to improve coordination among stakeholders responsible for providing services to victims and those responsible for prosecuting criminals. (66,67) The government continued to hold public awareness campaigns focusing on human trafficking in 2022, along with a variety of other activities to implement the National Action Plan for the Prevention of Trafficking in Persons in Uganda. (5)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (68)

Despite the efforts to develop and implement a national action plan against child labor, because of the decentralized nature of inspections in Uganda, some districts have developed their own labor action plans that do not always reflect MGLSD priorities. (42)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Accelerating Action for the Elimination of Child Labor in Supply Chains 2018–2022 (ACCEL Africa)	Launched in 2018, and formally implemented by ILO and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Netherlands in Uganda in 2020 in partnership with the Government of Uganda and the Federation of Ugandan Employers. The Uganda portion of the $29 million, multi-country project targeted child labor in coffee and tea supply chains in the Mbale, Kabarole, Buikwe, Hoima, and Bushenyi districts. (13) In 2022, ILO supported implementation of key components of the National Action Plan for the Elimination of Child Labor (NAP II), including the ongoing review of the National Child Labor Policy of 2006, supporting labor inspections in 56 workplaces, including in tea and coffee plantations and factories, reviewing guidelines for labor inspectors on child labor, training trainers for 25 labor officers, and conducting joint field monitoring of children in the ACCEL Africa Project target districts. (5)
Uganda Child Helpline ( Sauti )†	Funded primarily by UNICEF with in-kind contributions from MGLSD, comprises District Action Centers and a physical call center located in Wakiso that screens all calls for reported cases of child abuse. Caseworkers at District Action Centers follow up directly on cases of child abuse, including child labor and exploitation, assigned to them by the National Call Center and liaise with local authorities to address reported incidents. (69) From January to November 2022, the helpline reported a total of 162 child labor cases, 107 of which were engaged in domestic work. In addition, it further reported 144 child trafficking cases, including 55 engaged in forced labor related to domestic work. (5)
Back Home Campaign for Karamoja Children‡	Government program that rescues Karamoja street children working in Kampala and places them in rehabilitation centers in Wakiso and Moroto districts before reuniting them with their families. (12,70) Remains inactive since it was stalled due to the COVID-19 pandemic. (5)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of Uganda.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (71,72)

Although Uganda has implemented programs that address child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, particularly in mining and commercial sexual exploitation. For example, the government lacks its own facilities to house child victims of labor exploitation or human trafficking and must instead rely on local community services organizations. (5,13) Furthermore, the MGLSD has noted that programs are concentrated in specific districts and thus do not cover child labor issues throughout the country. (5)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Uganda (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Accede the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2013 – 2022
	Ensure that only minors ages 16 and older who have received adequate, specific instruction or vocational training are permitted to perform hazardous work, and that their health, safety, and morals are fully protected.	2017 – 2022
	Increase the compulsory education age from 13 to 16 to match the minimum age for work.	2021 – 2022
	Establish by law free basic public education.	2009 – 2022
Enforcement	Enhance the effectiveness of the inspectorate to enforce labor laws, including by establishing a mechanism to assess child labor violation penalties.	2017 – 2022
	Provide the labor inspectorate with sufficient funding and resources at the district level to ensure that inspectors are present in all districts and are able to carry out their duties.	2013 – 2022
	Ensure that an adequate number of labor inspections are conducted and strengthen the labor inspectorate by initiating routine and targeted inspections based on the analysis of data related to risk-prone sectors and patterns of serious incidents.	2021 – 2022

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Ensure that the inspectorate is using its existing authorities to inspect private farms and homes and to conduct sufficient routine and unannounced inspections, including in the informal sector.	2017 – 2022
	Significantly increase the number of labor inspectors from 195 to 275 to ensure adequate coverage of the labor force.	2009 – 2022
	Improve coordination between national- and district-level child labor enforcement bodies to ensure that relevant data are shared and that child labor inspections are prioritized across the country.	2019 – 2022
	Ensure that child labor cases reach the Industrial Court and that penalties are assessed by addressing monitoring issues and improving the court's reach outside urban centers.	2019 – 2022
	Continue to increase efforts to ensure that public officials who facilitate or participate in human trafficking or the worst forms of child labor are held accountable, including officials who have ties with labor recruitment companies, and publish relevant reports.	2019 – 2022
	Strengthen mechanisms for following up on child labor claims and referring street children, including potential human trafficking victims, to social services providers, and prevent these children from being detained and abused by police.	2015 – 2022
	Increase the capacity of criminal law enforcement agencies to respond to the worst forms of child labor by dedicating more personnel to worst forms of child labor cases and improving training for criminal law enforcement staff.	2020 – 2022
Government Policies	Ensure that district labor action plans reflect the Ministry of Gender, Labor, and Social Development's priorities.	2018 – 2022
Social Programs	Enhance efforts to eliminate barriers and make education accessible for all children by defraying informal costs borne by families, including supplies, uniforms, and materials; addressing physical and sexual violence; and ensuring sufficient teachers, infrastructure, and transportation in rural areas.	2012 – 2022
	Enhance efforts to ensure that refugee children have equal access to educational opportunities by addressing gender-based violence and exploitation, harassment, and refugee discrimination; accommodating the language needs of refugee students; and ensuring that there are well-equipped schools accessible to refugee settlements. Further ensure children have equal access to school regardless of gender identity or sexual orientation.	2012 – 2022
	Ensure the availability of shelters for victims of child labor, including child trafficking victims.	2017 – 2022
	Expand existing social programs to address the scope of the child labor problem, particularly in mining and commercial sexual exploitation, in all areas of the country.	2009 – 2022
	Ensure that activities are undertaken to implement key social programs to address child labor during the reporting period and make information about implementation measures publicly available.	2021 – 2022

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2022, Ukraine made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. Despite the ongoing aggression and territorial incursions made by Russia against Ukraine, the Ukrainian government passed several pieces of legislation to address child welfare, including child labor. Ukraine established a coordination body to support the temporary domestic and international evacuation of Ukrainian children living in various government institutions in areas affected by Russia's full-scale invasion. In addition, the government shared counter-trafficking information with refugees and displaced persons at border crossings and on social media to prevent child trafficking. However, despite new initiatives to address child labor, Ukraine is assessed as having made only minimal advancement because it continued to uphold Law No. 877-V of 2007, which restricts inspectors' ability to conduct unannounced labor inspections and delays advancement to eliminate child labor. Children in Ukraine face increased social, economic, and political challenges, which can make them more vulnerable to exploitation because of the full-scale Russian invasion of Ukraine launched on February 24, 2022. The increased vulnerability is most pronounced in the country's Russia-occupied areas and areas of active conflict. Children in Ukraine are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in the production of pornography. Children, especially in Russia-occupied areas, also perform dangerous tasks in mining. Furthermore, Russia continues to forcibly separate Ukrainian children from their parents and, in some cases, illegally transfer them out of Ukraine to camps in Russia. It is impossible to monitor these camps or ensure that the children in them are not exploited now or in the future if they are not returned to their families in Ukraine. The government has not published labor and criminal law enforcement information regarding its efforts to address child labor. In addition, Ukrainian laws do not meet international standards for the prohibition of commercialized sexual exploitation because they do not criminalize the users of prostitution involving children.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table I provides key indicators on children's work and education in Ukraine.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, activities unknown (3-7)
	Raising livestock, activities unknown (8)
Industry	Construction, activities unknown (3,4,9-11)
	Mining, † including loading, transporting, and sorting coal, and extracting amber (3,5,7,9,10,12)
Services	Street work, including distributing advertising leaflets, street trade, washing cars, and begging (3,4,6,9,13)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor ‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,4,11,14)
	Use in the production of pornography (3,5,9-11,15)
	Recruitment of children by non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict (9,10,14)
	Forced begging (3,9-11,14,16)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Commercial sexual exploitation remained a serious problem in Ukraine, and a significant amount of online child pornography continued to originate in the country. (17) Prior to Russia's full-scale invasion of Ukraine in February 2022, children from Ukraine were trafficked both internationally and domestically for commercial sexual exploitation and forced begging. (9,11,13,16) Some state-run orphanages have also used children for illegal labor in business, seasonal agricultural work, construction, and sexual exploitation. (3,8,11) There was limited information about the types of work that children performed and the sectors in which they worked in Russia-occupied territory in the Donbas region and Russia-occupied Crimea; however, available data suggested that some children in these areas, in particular boys between the ages of 11 and 16, engaged in illegal coal mining in the Donbas region. (3,9) Russian occupying authorities and proxy groups backed by Russia continued to recruit children, train them in weapons use, and organize them into reserve militia battalions at militant-run camps and at school programs located in territory occupied or controlled by Russia. (3,9,10,18,19) In addition, Russian armed forces used 90 Ukrainian children as human shields in active conflict in Sumy, Kyiv, Chernihiv, and Zaporizhzhya regions. (20,21) Reports indicate that, in some cases, parents were coerced into giving consent for their children to attend so-called "summer camps" in Russia or Russia-occupied Crimea, in which the children were forcibly engaged in systematic ideological re-education and military training, and in some cases not permitted to return to their homes. (17,19,22)

Since the start of Russia's war on Ukraine, out of Ukraine's 7.5 million children, 4.8 million have been forced to flee, with 2 million having fled abroad and 2.8 million displaced internally. (23) Refugee and internally displaced children (particularly those who are unaccompanied) are especially vulnerable to exploitation in the worst forms of child labor. (24,25) In particular, children with disabilities, stateless children, children from Roma or other minority groups, children forcibly transferred to Russia, and homeless, orphaned, and poor children, especially those living in state-run institutions, run a bigger risk of falling victim to human trafficking and sexual and labor exploitation. (19,26,27) Education was disrupted for more than 5.7 million Ukrainian children as schools shut down as a result of Russia's full-scale invasion of Ukraine. (19,20,23,27) National online education platforms were available to school-age children; however, access to these services was a challenge due to the lack of electricity and Internet as a result of Russia's deliberate targeting of civilian energy, electricity, and telecommunications infrastructure. (19,27,28) In addition, children had limited access to schooling due to security issues, non-functioning of in-person schooling, and damage to school infrastructure due to Russia's attacks on civilian infrastructure. (19,20,28,29) In Russia-occupied Crimea, education standards introduced by the Russian Federation have limited the rights of ethnic Ukrainians and Crimean Tatars to receive education in their native language. (17,19,30)

Birth registration of children born in Russia-occupied areas remains difficult, which can prevent them from receiving Ukrainian identity documents. (17,19,31,32) This, in turn, puts them at risk of statelessness. (31) Undocumented children, including those born since the start of Russia's war against Ukraine and who have not received their birth certificates, are especially vulnerable to being forcefully transferred to Russia and given

Russian citizenship, and Russia's occupying authorities have forced Ukrainians in occupied territories to obtain Russian passports. (19,20) A law adopted in 2018 provides for any civil registry office to issue a Ukrainian birth registration on the basis of a birth certificate issued in Donetsk and Luhansk; however, fewer than half of the children born in these areas are estimated to have obtained a birth certificate issued by the Government of Ukraine. (32) Additionally, up to a third of children from some Roma communities also lack birth registration, impeding their access to education. (17,24)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Ukraine has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Ukraine's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including a failure to prohibit the commercial sexual exploitation of children.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 150 of the Criminal Code; Article 188 of the Labor Code; Article 21 of the Law on the Protection of Childhood (33-35)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No	18	Article 150 of the Criminal Code; Article 190 of the Labor Code; Article 21 of the Law on the Protection of Childhood (33-35)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 150-1 of the Criminal Code; Order of the Ministry of Health No. 46 on the approval of the list of heavy work and work with dangerous and harmful working conditions, in which the employment of minors is prohibited; Article 190 of the Labor Code (33,34,36)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 149, 172, and 173 of the Criminal Code; Article 43 of the Constitution of Ukraine; Article 1 of the Law on Employment (33,37,38)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 149 of the Criminal Code; Article 32 of the Law on the Protection of Childhood (33,35)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 149 and 301–303 of the Criminal Code; Articles 10 and 21 of the Law on the Protection of Childhood; Articles 1, 6, and 7 of the Law on the Protection of Public Morality (33,35,39)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 304 and 307 of the Criminal Code; Articles 10 and 21 of the Law on the Protection of Childhood (33,35)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	17	Articles 15 and 20 of the Law on Military Duty and Military Service (40)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 15 of the Law on Military Duty and Military Service; Decree No. 447 on Measures to Enhance the Defense Capacity of the State (40,41)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 30 of the Law on the Protection of Childhood (35)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	17‡	Articles 3, 12, and 20 of the Law on General Secondary Education; Article 53 of the Constitution (37,42)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 53 of the Constitution of Ukraine; Article 2 of the Law on General Secondary Education (37,42)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (42)

Because the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (33,35,42) Furthermore, the Ministry of Health Order No. 46 does not prohibit children between the ages of 14 and 16 from engaging in hazardous work as part of a vocational training program, which is not in compliance with international standards. Although the law specifies that children in these training programs may be onsite for no more than 4 hours and must remain in strict compliance with applicable safety norms and rules and regulations on labor protection, this is not in compliance with international standards. (36,43) Ukraine does not sufficiently prohibit the commercial sexual exploitation of children because no law criminalizes the users (clients) of prostitution involving children. (33)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, the absence of unannounced inspections conducted at the national level in Ukraine may impede the enforcement of child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
State Labor Service (SLS) within the Ministry of Economic Development, Trade and Agriculture	Enforces labor laws, including laws on child labor, by conducting inspections. (3,9,10) Regional offices of SLS share information about child labor cases with regional offices of the National Police of Ukraine, regional employment centers, the Department of Child Affairs, trade union leaders, regional social services organizations, and centers dedicated to social protection. (3,9) All new labor inspectors receive ILO-approved training upon hiring. (9) In 2022, the State Labor Inspectorate, supported by ILO, started an information awareness campaign at the Ukrainian railways addressed to refugees leaving Ukraine on the risks of human trafficking and labor exploitation, including child labor exploitation. (44)
Ministry of Internal Affairs	Enforces criminal laws against the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking, through the National Police and its Migration Police Department (MIPOL). (3,9,16) MIPOL identifies potential victims of human trafficking and conducts initial investigation before it transfers the cases to the National Police investigators. In April 2022, the National Police instructed the oblast and city leadership to discuss child trafficking prevention with the management of the new residential facilities for the evacuated children within Ukraine, and to ensure that all volunteers working with these children are vetted, as part of the government's efforts to combat child trafficking. (45) During the reporting period, the National Police created an information exchange platform on Ukrainian human trafficking cases with their European counterparts, and they also established an international Ukrainian Task Force to protect Ukrainians in Europe, including children, from human trafficking. In addition, MIPOL representatives attended several international training events on human trafficking prevention, to include prevention of the trafficking of Ukrainian refugee children. (45)
Office of the Prosecutor General	Investigates and prosecutes cases related to the worst forms of child labor. Oversees a department and regional offices for the Protection of Interests of Children and Combating Violence that focuses on the worst forms of child labor. (3) Ensures compliance with laws and regulations aimed at protecting minors by other government bodies investigating crimes against children. (3,9,46) The regional offices are responsible for conducting pre-trial investigations and investigations of criminal offenses, filing appeals of court decisions relating to children's issues, providing legal representation to children, and supporting the execution of court decisions in the sphere of child protection. (9,47) Established, with the assistance of UNICEF, specialized centers for child survivors and witnesses in Mykolayiv and Vinnytsya oblasts, with additional centers planned for Chernivtsi, Odesa, and Ternopil oblasts, as well as Kyiv. (16)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Labor Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether labor law enforcement agencies in Ukraine took actions to address child labor.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Government Order No. 303 (On the termination of measures of state supervision (control) under martial law) prohibited all labor inspections, and Law No. 2136-IX (On organization of labor relations under martial law) only allowed limited unannounced labor inspections on three specific grounds: (1) observance of wartime labor regulations, (2) informal employment, and (3) legality of employment contracts termination. (51,52) Moreover, the limited unannounced inspections are regulated by Law No. 877 of 2007 (Fundamental Principles of State Supervision and Monitoring of Economic Activity), which continues to restrict inspectors' ability to undertake inspections without giving employers prior notice, in addition to effectively limiting the frequency of allowed inspections. (48,53)

Although local inspectors are certified by the State Labor Service (SLS), their training may be inadequate and inconsistent with the training given to inspectors employed directly by the SLS. (13,54) In addition, the SLS is not authorized to compel payment of delinquent fines without a court proceeding, which can delay the collection of penalties. (3,10) Russia-occupied areas, including Crimea and parts of Kherson, Luhansk, Donetsk, Zaporizhzhya, Kharkiv, and Mykolayiv oblasts, are not under the control of Ukrainian authorities, who are prevented from carrying out inspections and law enforcement in these territories. (19,45)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

During the reporting period, research did not find updates on the criminal cases against 73 children for participation in Russia-led military formations in the so-called "Donetsk People's Republic" and "Luhansk People's Republic," as well as against 1 child in the Russia-led forces in Crimea. In 2021, the National Police transferred 47 of these cases to courts for prosecution. (3,9,55) The National Police acknowledged instances of involvement of minors in illegal amber or coal extraction in Ukraine, but they provided no information on efforts taken to address this issue. (9)

In 2022, law enforcement authorities opened criminal proceedings on the involvement of 53 children in military activities. The status of these cases is unknown. (45) The Office of the Prosecutor General reported that from January to November 2022, there were: 53 violations of Article 149 of the Criminal Code (Trafficking in persons/ children), out of which 32 cases were sent to court; 2 violations of Article 150 (exploitation of children) and 3 crimes under Article 150-1 (engaging minors in begging), which resulted in 3 cases sent to court; 79 crimes for violation of Article 304 (engaging minors in criminal activity) which resulted in 69 cases sent to court; and 1,120 crimes for violation of Article 301-1 of the Criminal Code (Importing, producing, sale, or distribution of child pornography), with 937 cases sent to court. (19) In addition, the Migration Police Department (MIPOL) identified one boy and two girls as victims of child trafficking, and one boy and one girl as victims of forced labor, while the Ministry of Social Policy (MSP) identified two boys as victims of forced labor. (45) During the reporting period, Ukrainian authorities were engaged to bring back children who were unlawfully transferred or deported to Russia by Russia's forces. As of late December 2022, 125 children had been returned. (56,57) In addition, National Police investigators worked with authorities in Latvia and Lithuania in separate cases of child trafficking related to children from evacuated Ukrainian orphanages. (47)

In 2022, the government increased its human trafficking prevention efforts at national and local levels, to include sharing child counter-trafficking information at the border crossing points. The Ministry of Justice's local centers for secondary legal aid provided a legal education event on "Protection of Child Victims of Sexual Exploitation." (45) In addition, the ministry published 50 educational media articles on the prevention of human trafficking, including "On the Safety of Women and Girls Abroad." The government continued to operate a hotline and a website for potential victims of human trafficking, and during the reporting period has added a new number to accommodate calls from abroad. (45) The MSP, with a local NGO partner, developed an anti-trafficking awareness-raising campaign aimed at girls and young women, including girls between the ages of 12 and 18. In May 2022, government representatives participated in an OSCE roundtable entitled, "Strengthening Protection of Children from Violence, including Child Trafficking, during the Humanitarian Crisis in Ukraine." (45)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efforts to address all forms of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Inter-Ministerial Counter-Trafficking Coordination Council	Led by the Ministry of Social Policy (MSP), which serves as the National Coordinator for Counter-Trafficking Policy and includes more than 20 government entities and representatives from regional governments, NGOs, and international organizations. (11) During the reporting period, the body held online meetings, drafted Ukraine's State Strategy on Preventing Human Trafficking until 2025, and, with IOM's support, held a strategic planning session in June 2022, to adapt the Strategy to the war-time reality in the country. The Counter-trafficking Strategy is to be submitted to the Cabinet of Ministers for approval. (45)

In January 2022, the Government of Ukraine established the State Service of Ukraine for Children's Affairs to form and implement state policy for the adoption and protection of children's rights. (19,58) In August 2022, the government adopted and sent for the President’s approval a draft law to amend Ukrainian legislation at both the state and local levels, to improve the regulation of the activities of the State Service of Ukraine for Children’s Affairs, to strengthen the role of the local executive committees in the field of protection of children’s rights, and to strengthen the participation of the prosecutor’s office in ensuring the rights and interests of the child. (19,59)

In March 2022, the government established the Coordination Headquarters for the Protection of the Rights of the Child in Conditions of Martial Law to coordinate the temporary domestic and international evacuation of Ukrainian children living in various government institutions in areas affected by Russia’s war on Ukraine. (17,60,61) This body, together with the MSP, issued recommendations to foreign host countries on the protection of unaccompanied Ukrainian refugee children’s rights and interests while abroad. (45) In addition, the Ministry of Reintegration of Occupied Territories created an information portal called “Children of War,” through which Ukrainian citizens can report forced transfer of a child from Ukraine, forced change of citizenship, and other crimes committed against children by Russia’s army, including forced labor. (19,62) In 2022, the Office of the Ombudsman for Human Rights established a procedure for obtaining the status of human trafficking victims for Ukrainians, including children, who reside in the temporarily occupied territories and who were subjected to forced labor or forced to participate in military activities by Russia’s proxies or Russia’s forces. (63) Despite these efforts and although Ukraine has established the Inter-Ministerial Counter-Trafficking Coordination Council to coordinate efforts to address child trafficking, it does not have coordinating mechanisms to address other forms of child labor, including in mining and agriculture.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including coverage of all worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
Resolution on the Social Protection of Children and Urgent Measures to Protect the Rights of the Child	Directs the government to develop additional programs and social services to protect children against abuse, including the worst forms of child labor. Includes a provision on measures that specifically address the participation of children in armed conflict. (10,64) Research was unable to determine whether actions were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.
Ukraine’s National Strategy on Human Rights (2021–2023)	Focuses on 27 areas related to human rights, including children’s rights. (65) Research was unable to determine whether actions were taken to implement this strategy during the reporting period.

During the reported period, numerous oblast- and community-level programs included measures to address human trafficking, including in Chernihiv, Ternopil, Odesa, and Vinnytsya oblasts. (45) In addition, the government and the ILO, through the Decent Work Country Program in Ukraine (2020–2024), carried out humanitarian aid and job preservation activities. (66,67) However, although the Government of Ukraine has adopted the Resolution on the Social Protection of Children, research found no evidence of a policy on other worst forms of child labor, including hazardous child labor in mining. (3,9,10)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Ukraine

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Directorate for the Development of Social Services and Protection of Children's Rights†	Established under MSP in March 2020 to address the needs of vulnerable children. (68) Research was unable to determine whether the Directorate was active during the reporting period.
Centers and Shelters for Socio-Psychological Rehabilitation of Children†	Serve children in need, including child survivors of trafficking, through 72 centers, including 4 children's shelters. (45) Children are provided with individual assistance programs that involve social, psychological, pedagogical, medical, legal, and other types of assistance. (11,24) Government officials report that there is a lack of resources and specialized personnel to assist child survivors of sexual exploitation through these centers. (24) Centers and shelters were active during the reporting period. (45)
Centers for Social Services for Family, Youth, and Children†	In coordination with municipal authorities, provide social services for vulnerable children and families, including survivors of human trafficking. (69) As of July 2022, there were 84 social support institutions for families, children, and youth, and 17 centers for social support for children and families. Centers were active during the reporting period. (45)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of Ukraine.

In 2022, many social service providers shifted efforts from direct victim assistance to IDP, to include human trafficking prevention efforts. During the reporting period, the government also increased the one-time payment to human trafficking survivors from 200 USD (7,443 UAH) to 218 USD (8,052 UAH). (45) However, although the Government of Ukraine has implemented programs to assist child survivors of human trafficking, research found no evidence that it has carried out programs specifically designed to assist children in other forms of child labor, including hazardous work in mining.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Ukraine (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum age for work from 16 to 17 to align with the compulsory education age.	2018 – 2022
	Prohibit all children under age 16 from working in hazardous occupations during vocational training.	2011 – 2022
	Criminally prohibit and penalize the use of a child for prostitution, and the use, procuring, or offering of children in pornographic performances.	2019 – 2022
Enforcement	Strengthen the labor inspection system by removing restrictions on labor inspectors' authority to conduct unannounced onsite inspections, both proactively and in response to complaints.	2019 – 2022
	Ensure that labor inspectors employed by regional governments receive adequate training that is consistent with that provided to labor inspectors employed by the State Labor Service.	2019 – 2022
	Authorize the State Labor Service to enforce the collection of delinquent penalties to ensure that all penalties imposed are collected.	2019 – 2022
	Publish labor and criminal law enforcement information.	2021 – 2022
	Hold perpetrators of the worst forms of child labor, including child soldiering, accountable. Ensure that former child soldiers are not penalized for crimes they were forced to commit.	2021 – 2022
Coordination	Establish coordinating mechanisms to address all worst forms of child labor in all sectors, including in mining and agriculture.	2019 – 2022
Government Policies	Implement all policies addressing child labor, including the Resolution on the Social Protection of Children and Urgent Measures to Protect the Rights of the Child, and the Ukraine's National Strategy on Human Rights.	2019 – 2022
	Adopt a policy that addresses all relevant worst forms of child labor, including hazardous child labor in mining.	2018 – 2022
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor, including the activities carried out by children working in mining, farming, raising animals, and construction, to inform policies and programs.	2019 – 2022
	Institute a rehabilitation and reintegration program for children engaged in armed conflict.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that all Ukrainian children, including those with special needs and those living in conflict zones, have access to education, whether virtual or in person, that meets their educational needs.	2020 – 2022

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table I I. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor (Cont.)

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Social Programs	Establish a procedure to implement the law empowering any civil registry office to issue a Ukrainian birth registration on the basis of a birth certificate issued in the areas of Donetsk and Luhansk.	2019 – 2022
	Develop programs to ensure that Roma children are registered at birth and are able to access education.	2010 – 2022
	Ensure that activities are undertaken to implement the mandates of the Directorate for the Development of Social Services and Protection of Children's Rights, and make information about implementation activities publicly available.	2022
	Allocate resources and trained personnel to assist with child survivors of commercial sexual exploitation in all state-run facilities that serve children in need.	2020 – 2022
	Ensure that there are sufficient resources for the Centers for Social Services for Family, Youth, and Children to assist child survivors of human trafficking.	2013 – 2022
	Institute programs to address all forms of child labor, including hazardous work in mining.	2020 – 2022

REFERENCES ON FILE

In 2022, Uzbekistan made significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. In October 2022, the Uzbek president signed a new labor code that places additional restrictions on work that can be performed by children. The government also issued a decree to reduce informal work and worked with the International Labor Organization to conduct a comprehensive survey of working conditions in the construction sector. In addition, it continued to run public awareness campaigns against child labor which targeted high risk sectors. The National Commission on Combating Trafficking in Persons and Forced Labor also adopted action plans to implement U.S. government recommendations on child labor and trafficking in persons. However, children in Uzbekistan are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in agriculture and public works. While the government has made strong progress in addressing labor issues in the cotton harvest, there continue to be impediments to the operation of non-governmental organizations in addressing broader labor concerns. Human rights and civil society organizations, including those working on forced and child labor issues, are frequently denied official registration for bureaucratic reasons, sometimes for failing to meet registration requirements that had not been publicly specified.

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

Although Uzbekistan has not carried out a national child labor survey to determine the prevalence of child labor in sectors other than cotton production, research indicates that children engage in child labor in agriculture. (8,12) Reports also indicate a high level of informal employment in Uzbekistan, which is difficult to monitor for violations of child labor laws. (3) Traffickers exploit Uzbek children in sex trafficking transnationally in the Middle East, Eurasia, and Asia. (7,15) Children are also vulnerable to internal human trafficking for the purpose of commercial sexual exploitation. (3,14,16)

Civil society observers note that rural poverty is a major contributing factor to child labor in Uzbekistan, and that poverty has slightly increased in recent years. Additionally, some schools in rural areas lack adequate facilities, including running water. (3,8,17) In 2021, Uzbekistan received a modest influx of refugees from Afghanistan. While all children in Uzbekistan are entitled to free compulsory education regardless of ethnicity or immigration status, most Afghan children do not attend school because they do not speak either Russian or Uzbek. (3) In addition, although there is free public education in Uzbekistan, schools may charge informal fees, which can make education inaccessible to children from low-income families. (8,11,12,18)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Uzbekistan has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Uzbekistan's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including clarifying light work permissible for children who have not yet completed schooling.

‡ Age calculated based on available information (18)

In October 2022, the President signed a new Labor Code into law, which entered into effect on April 30, 2023. Article 412 of the amended labor code places further restrictions on work that may be performed by children under age 18, prohibiting them from performing underground work as well as work in nightclubs and in the production, transportation, and sale of alcoholic beverages, tobacco products, narcotic and psychotropic substances, and toxic substances. (3,20) The updated labor code also codifies prohibitions against forced labor and aims to improve employment prospects for vulnerable populations, including survivors of human trafficking. (30)

The law does not determine the activities or conditions in which children who have not yet completed their compulsory schooling may engage in light work, although the Labor Code establishes caps on the maximum number of work hours permitted for children ages 15 to 17. (18,19)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Employment and Poverty Reduction (MEPR)	Formerly the Ministry of Employment and Labor Relations, this ministry was renamed following a government reorganization in December 2022. (3) The MEPR retains oversight of labor issues, and conducts labor inspections through the State Labor Inspectorate (SLI), including inspections for compliance with child labor laws. (11) Leads the National Sub-Commission on Combating Forced Labor. (31,32) In addition to labor inspectors employed by the MEPR, local governments employ an additional 200 “assistant inspectors” who can participate in labor inspections but are not allowed to impose administrative fines. (14) Receives complaints, including on an anonymous basis, through a telephone hotline with a short, easy-to-remember number; a web portal; and a Telegram messenger bot. (3,33-37) In 2022, labor inspectors received 19,512 complaints of labor violations through all channels. (3)
Ministry of Internal Affairs (MOIA)	Investigates crimes related to child trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children, which may then be prosecuted by the Prosecutor General’s Office. (3,11) Leads the National Sub-Commission on Combating Trafficking in Persons. (31,32) Maintains a database of human trafficking crimes, including child trafficking crimes, which aggregates relevant information received from other government bodies, citizens’ organizations, non-profit organizations, and civil society groups. (14)
Prosecutor General's Office	Prosecutes criminal violations involving the worst forms of child labor, including forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation. (11) Also provides oversight of some MOIA efforts to address the worst forms of child labor. (14)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Uzbekistan took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Employment and Poverty Reduction (MEPR) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the reluctance of inspectors to conduct unannounced inspections other than on the basis of a complaint.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$150,000 (8)	$150,000 (3)

Number of Child Labor Violations Found	6 (8)	0 (3)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	4 (8)	0 (3)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	4 (8)	0 (3)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (8)	Yes (3)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (8)	Yes (3)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (38)	Yes (38)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (8)	Yes (3)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (8)	Yes (3)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (8)	Yes (3)

In December 2022, the President announced a government reorganization, effective January 1, 2023, in which the Ministry of Employment and Labor Relations was renamed the Ministry of Employment and Poverty Reduction and absorbed other responsibilities related to social welfare, which were previously under other ministries. The State Labor Inspectorate (SLI) conducted 6,912 inspections regarding working conditions in 2022 and 416,685 workplace inspections in total, but it is unclear how many of these were conducted onsite or targeted to high-risk sectors. (3,8) The government also worked with the ILO to undertake a comprehensive survey of working conditions in the construction sector, including the prevalence of forced and child labor. Although other sources indicate that children work in construction, the findings of this survey, published in November 2022, did not identify a systemic issue of child labor in the sector. (3,39) In May and June 2022, the government also facilitated a training course on interpersonal communication skills for 56 SLI inspectors with the goal of improving their interviewing skills and ability to detect labor violations. (3)

Research indicates that high turnover among labor inspectors is an ongoing problem in Uzbekistan. (3) The Federation of Trade Unions of Uzbekistan (FTUU) employs an additional 33 inspectors who may conduct unannounced inspections, but they are not authorized to impose penalties. Labor inspectors are empowered to conduct self-initiated unannounced inspections in public-sector enterprises. (3) However, permission is required from the Business Ombudsman to conduct inspections at private-sector businesses, which poses an additional administrative burden and may prevent inspectors from addressing labor law violations in a timely manner. Reports indicate that in practice, inspectors may be reticent to enter private businesses or homes on an unannounced basis and typically only do so in response to complaints. (8,11,14,30,35,40,41) During the reporting period, a draft decree was presented to the President that is intended to address several of these gaps, including labor inspectorate funding and staffing, as well as to remove the requirement to obtain permission from the Business Ombudsman. However, this decree has not been signed. (3)

There have been no reports of a resurgence in child labor in the cotton harvest following the lifting of the Cotton Pledge and the removal of cotton from Uzbekistan from the U.S. Department of Labor's List of Goods Produced with Child Labor or Forced Labor in 2022. (3,42,43) The government distributed written materials to cotton pickers, employers, and mahallas about the prohibition on child labor. (3) Civil society activists report that nearly all farmers they spoke to were aware of prohibitions on child labor in the cotton harvest. (42) In addition, the Agency for Youth Affairs monitors school attendance to ensure that students do not miss class during the cotton harvest and participates in monitoring efforts organized by the FTUU to monitor violations of labor laws during the annual cotton harvest. (8,10,44,45)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Uzbekistan took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Internal Affairs (MOIA) that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including in investigation planning.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Yes (8)	Yes (3)
Number of Investigations	9 (8)	Unknown (3)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	9 (8)	Unknown (3)
Number of Convictions	9 (8)	Unknown (3)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (8)	Yes (3)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (8)	Yes (3)

Law enforcement information which clearly distinguishes data on criminal child labor cases from other criminal cases that involved children was not available for inclusion in this report. (3) However, in 2022, law enforcement investigated and filed five criminal cases related to the sexual exploitation of nine children. Two of these cases resulted in convictions during the reporting period, while the other three remained pending, and the children involved were referred to rehabilitation centers. (3) Authorities also investigated 368 criminal cases and obtained convictions in 339 cases of involving minors in antisocial behavior, which may include activities such as theft, robbery, hooliganism, or assault. (3) The government also reported investigating three individuals for trafficking of two children and initiating prosecutions against four individuals for previously identified cases of child trafficking, although it is unclear whether these children were trafficked for adoption purposes or labor. (30)

In September 2022, the government facilitated a 2-day training on forced labor for SLI inspectors and civil society members. The MEPR and the ILO also conducted an online training on forced labor which included representatives of farms and cotton and textile clusters. (3) During the reporting period, the MOIA academy graduated 124 cadets specializing in investigations who received 3 years of training, including on child and forced labor. In addition, the government cooperated with NGOs and international organizations including the IOM and the OSCE to conduct 17 trainings for new investigators throughout the year. (3)

Criminal liability for repeat forced labor offenses was introduced in early 2020 under Criminal Code Article 148(2). However, criminal enforcement agencies may face difficulties prosecuting criminal labor violations due to a lack of clarity over whether the perpetrator is a first-time offender, which would garner administrative penalties, or a repeat offender who may be prosecuted under criminal charges. (46)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including repeatedly denying the applications of human rights NGOs to officially register with the government.

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Commission on Combating Trafficking in Persons and Forced Labor (National Commission)	Coordinates state and local entities' efforts to address sex trafficking and forced labor; analyzes and monitors efficacy of government programs to address sex trafficking and forced labor; organizes international cooperation on efforts to address sex trafficking and forced labor; and provides legal and policy recommendations for improvement of government efforts in these areas. (3,30-32) Chaired by the National Rapporteur on Combating Trafficking in Persons and Forced Labor. (3,31) Comprises two sub-commissions to address sex trafficking and forced labor, respectively. MOIA heads the Sub-Commission on Combating Trafficking in Persons and the Minister of Labor heads the Sub-Commission on Combating Forced Labor. (8,12,31,32) In 2022, the Commission met three times and adopted action plans to implement recommendations from U.S. government reporting on child labor and trafficking in persons. The Commission was also responsible for approving a joint work plan with the ILO for 2022–2023, aimed at transitioning large sections of Uzbekistan's economy from informal to formal employment as a means of creating a better environment to monitor for child and forced labor violations. (3,30)

International organizations have reported that the Sub-Commission's lack of a designated secretariat hampered communication with external stakeholders, including NGOs and anti-trafficking activists, which delayed activities to counter human trafficking. (35) In addition, many human rights NGOs, including those working on forced and child labor issues, were repeatedly denied official registration, sometimes for failing to meet requirements that had not been publicly specified. These denials appear to be politically motivated and have the effect of curtailing civil society efforts to address human rights issues. (3,17,33,47,48)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) Between the ILO and the Republic of Uzbekistan (2021–2025)	Establishes terms of agreement between the ILO and the government on cooperation to implement the Decent Work Country Program in Uzbekistan. (8,49) As part of this MOU, the ILO and the government approved a work plan during the reporting period to help transition large swaths of the country's workforce away from informal employment. (3)
Action Plans on Implementing International Recommendations to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Establish work plans to address international recommendations to advance the elimination of the worst forms of child labor in Uzbekistan. Aim to improve labor and criminal law enforcement, coordination, policies, and social programs related to the worst forms of child labor. (50) In 2022, the government created an action plan specifically to implement the recommendations in this report, but did not provide a copy of the action plan nor specify what actions it intended to implement. (30)

In addition to the joint work plan the government signed with the ILO, the President issued a decree to decrease informal employment as a means to reduce child labor and forced labor. (3)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Efforts to Prevent Child and Forced Labor in the Cotton Harvest†	Includes initiatives to raise awareness about the prohibition of child and forced labor in the cotton harvest. In 2022, the government distributed 800 banners and 200,000 flyers on prohibitions against the use of child labor in the cotton harvest, and provided 10,000 posters on forced and child labor prohibitions to mahallas and employers. (30)
National Rehabilitation Center†	MEPR-operated shelter that provides human trafficking survivors with emergency medical and social services and assists in social rehabilitation. (9,12) Children are placed in specialized institutions, separate from adult survivors. (30) This center continued to provide services to survivors of the worst forms of child labor in 2022. (3)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of Uzbekistan.

Although there are programs to address child labor in the cotton sector, research did not find evidence of programs designed to address child labor in other sectors, such as public works, street work, and agriculture other than cotton.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Uzbekistan (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the labor law's light work provisions specify the activities and conditions in which children who have not yet completed their compulsory schooling may work.	2020 – 2022
Enforcement	Provide more detailed information on labor inspections, including the number of unannounced inspections, how many inspections are conducted onsite versus through desk inspections of documents submitted by businesses, and whether inspectors are targeting high-risk sectors.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that labor inspectors conduct self-initiated unannounced inspections in all sectors, including at private enterprises, even if no complaint has been filed.	2018 – 2022
	Sign draft documentation which will address gaps with the funding and staffing of the labor inspectorate, as well as remove the requirement for the Business Ombudsman to approve inspections of private sector enterprises.	2022
	Thoroughly investigate all potential criminal cases involving the worst forms of child labor and, when sufficient evidence exists, refer violations for prosecution.	2020 – 2022
	Remove barriers to investigating and prosecuting officials who may be complicit in child labor violations, including simplifying regulations which may penalize violations differently depending on whether the violator is a repeat offender.	2021 – 2022
Coordination	Designate standard mechanisms for communication between external stakeholders and national coordinating bodies to facilitate coordination of efforts to address forced labor and human trafficking.	2020 – 2022
	Remove obstacles to the registration of NGOs monitoring child labor, forced labor, and other labor rights issues, including making all registration requirements public.	2017 – 2022
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2013 – 2022
	Ensure educational access for children who do not speak Uzbek or Russian.	2021 – 2022
	Ensure that schools do not charge informal fees to students or their families.	2019 – 2022
	Implement targeted programs to address the worst forms of child labor in public works, street works, and agriculture sectors other than cotton harvesting.	2009 – 2022

In 2022, Vanuatu made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. During the reporting period, the government partnered with the United Nations Children's Fund to launch several child protection programs. This included establishing a free 24/7 child helpline to connect callers with trained child protection offices to report concerns. Additionally, the National Child Protection Referral Pathway guidance document was released, which outlined the roles for different stakeholders and service providers to support children, including psychosocial support. Lastly, the government streamlined the issuance of national identification cards for children. Although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Vanuatu are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and forced domestic work. Children also perform dangerous tasks in forestry and logging. Vanuatu's minimum age for hazardous work, 15, is below the international standard of age 18. Vanuatu also lacks a referral mechanism between criminal authorities and social services providers.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Vanuatu. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Services	Street vending, including selling newspapers (3,5)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced domestic work (4) Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (4,6,7)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Vanuatu lacks data to determine the nature and prevalence of child labor in the country, including in forestry and logging. (5,8,9) However, children are often seen selling newspapers on the street, but the government does not consider this to be an activity that should be regulated. (3) Furthermore, children living in remote areas face difficulties accessing education, increasing the risk of children's involvement in child labor. (10) In 2022, the Government of Vanuatu, in partnership with UNICEF, conducted a national survey on the state of inclusive education. (11) The survey found that there is no budget allocated to support inclusive education, and that almost all schools lack sanitation and menstrual hygiene management facilities that are accessible and safe for all. (11,12) Vanuatu's Education School Fee Grant Program has been implemented by the government with the goal of reducing the financial burden parents face when sending their children to school. (13) This has led to an increase in enrollment, but has also created the need for improved infrastructure and teacher training. (3) Although this effort has been made, approximately 50 percent of children still drop out of the education system due to inadequate programs and facilities and limited capacity of schools to accommodate all children. (3)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Vanuatu has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Vanuatu's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including a failure to criminalize the use of children in illicit activities.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Section 38 and 39 of the Employment Act (14)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No	15	Section 40 of the Employment Act (14)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No		Section 40 of the Employment Act (14)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Sections 7 and 78(2) of the Employment Act; Section 102 of the Penal Code; Sections 2, 34, and 35 of the Counter Terrorism and Transnational Organized Crime Act (14-16)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Section 35 of the Counter Terrorism and Transnational Organized Crime Act (15)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Sections 101B–D of the Penal Code; Section 2 and 35 of the Counter Terrorism and Transnational Organized Crime Act (15,16)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No		Section 35 of the Penal Code (16)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	N/A†
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A†
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	No
Free Public Education	No

† Country has no standing military (17)

Vanuatu's existing legal framework governing child labor does not meet international standards on a number of fronts. Vanuatu's hazardous work prohibitions do not comply with international standards that require all children under age 18 to be protected from work that could jeopardize their health and safety. Furthermore, Vanuatu has yet to determine by law the types of hazardous work prohibited for children. (14, 18, 19) In addition, the Employment Act permits children under the age of 12 to perform light work in agricultural undertakings owned and managed by their own families, without requiring that the undertaking not have other employees and be for local consumption only; the Employment Act also permits children ages 12 and 13 to work in light agricultural work and domestic work, but it does not specify the activities or hours per week that are allowed. (14) In addition, the Penal Code does not include heightened penalties for inducing children to engage in illicit activities, including in drug production and drug trafficking. (16)

Vanuatu also lacks a compulsory education policy, increasing the risk of children's involvement in child labor. (7, 18) However, although Vanuatu does not have free public education, the School Grant Program provides all schools with a grant of up $75 (VT9,000) per student. Additionally, Secondary School Tuition Fee Subsidies of $355 (VT42,000) are paid to the school to support students in grades 7 through 10. (13)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Department of Labor	Enforces provisions set forth in the Employment Act, including child labor laws. (8,20)
Vanuatu Police Force	Enforces all criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor and collaborates with the Vanuatu Tourism Office to address commercial sexual exploitation of children. Prosecutes child labor cases. (3,7)
National Intelligence Unit	Operates under the Vanuatu Police Force. Is the designated lead and enforces Vanuatu's trafficking in persons laws, including possible commercial sexual exploitation of children as a result of human trafficking. (4)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, research did not find information on whether labor law enforcement agencies in Vanuatu took actions to address child labor (Table 6).

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

The Government of Vanuatu did not respond to requests for information on its labor law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report. However, research indicates that the Child Desk, under the Ministry of Justice and Community Services, does not have adequate financial and human resources to develop and integrate child protection policies into national planning initiatives. (8,9) Although the number of labor inspectors is unknown, research indicates that Vanuatu does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (3,21)

Vanuatu does not have a formal mechanism for reporting and responding to children who need protection. (3) Most cases of child labor in the country are dealt with by Kastom (an informal method individuals use to settle disputes), and although anyone can report a crime, research found that police are more likely to investigate if the victims themselves report their allegations. After a case is reported by the victim, the police are mandated to investigate the allegations and bring evidence to the public prosecutor for trial. (3,22) Although Kastom is a common mechanism used to address child protection issues, research has found no established interagency protocols and procedures between Kastom and governmental offices—including the Vanuatu Police Force—to sufficiently coordinate and ensure that child protection services are provided. (5,8,20)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, research did not find information on whether criminal law enforcement agencies in Vanuatu took actions to address child labor (Table 7).

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Unknown (8)	Unknown (3)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (8)	Unknown (3)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (8)	Unknown (3)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (8)	Unknown (3)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (8)	Unknown (3)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Unknown (8)	Unknown (3)

The Government of Vanuatu did not respond to requests for information on its criminal law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report. However, research found that the Vanuatu Police Force enforced criminal laws against child labor and human trafficking, while the Vanuatu Tourism Office, Police Force, and Department of Labor dealt with matters of commercial sexual exploitation. (3) The Police Force, Tourism Office, and Department of Labor fall under different government ministries, and interagency coordination on human trafficking investigations between law enforcement agencies was primarily ad hoc. (3,23) Although the police have established standard operating procedures to attend to child victims, there is no formal referral mechanism between the police and social services. (3,5,20) Reporting shows that inspectors in Vanuatu do not receive anti-human trafficking trainings, and due to a lack of dedicated funds and training on the country's anti-trafficking policy, trafficking investigations are constrained. (4,22)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efforts to address all forms of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Child Protection Working Group	Serves as the primary forum for exchanging information on child protection and the commercial sexual exploitation of children. Chaired by the Director General of the Ministry of Justice and Community Services, and comprises representatives from the government, UN agencies, civil society organizations, and NGOs. (20,24-26) According to its Terms of Reference, it has a role in capacity building, systems strengthening, emergency preparedness and response, and coordination of services across all child protection sectors. (8,9) Additionally, although the government has established the National Child Protection Working Group, there have been no indications of any initiatives or activities to implement policies to prevent and eliminate child labor. (3)

In 2022, the National Child Protection Referral Pathway guidance document was released, which outlines the roles of different stakeholders and service providers for support provided to children, such as psychosocial support, access to healthcare, and access to safety and justice. (27)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of implementation of the National Children Protection Policy.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Child Protection Policy (2016–2026)	Aims to protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking. Provides children with equitable access to services supporting reintegration and recovery when needed. (3,7,25) However, the lack of a dedicated budget as well as staffing and funding issues in the offices responsible for implementation are major challenges to the effectiveness of the policy. (3,5) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.
United Nations Pacific Strategy (2018–2022)	Aimed to address, develop, and implement strategic economic development priorities in the South Pacific through a multinational framework comprising 14 South Pacific Nations. Included in their priorities were the elimination of child labor, and the worst forms of child labor. (28) Research was also unable to determine what actions were taken to implement the United Nations Pacific Strategy during the reporting period.

There is no register of civil society organizations tasked with protecting children, and social services providers are not required to be registered with the state. Furthermore, there are no standards or requirements that child protection agents or social services providers must follow when addressing children's issues. (5,8,25)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate efforts to address child labor in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Education School Fee Grant†	Funded by the Government of Vanuatu's Ministry of Education; provides funding directly to schools. The funds support students of all grade levels, including students in Years 1 through 6, to offset education costs. (13) The grant program was active in 2022 with funds being disbursed to schools in three installments throughout the year. These grant amounts ranged from $69 to $76 per student, depending on their grade level. (13) Research was unable to determine whether the Vanuatu Education School Fee Grant program included child labor elimination policies or efforts.
Education and Training Sector Strategic Plan (2021–2030)	A strategic plan to strengthen the education sector in Vanuatu, including the education budget and monitoring of expenses. (29) Provides access to education to all children in Vanuatu. Implements quality infrastructure based on needs. (29) Reduces the number of out-of-school children and identifies children studying at the incorrect grade level. (29) The strategic plan was active during 2022. (30)

† Program is funded by the Government of Vanuatu.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (27)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In July, 2022, Vanuatu's Ministry of Justice and Community Services, the Ministry of Internal Affairs, and UNICEF partnered to launch an array of new child protection initiatives, one of which was the creation and issuance of children's national identification cards. (27) Vanuatu's Deputy Prime Minister and the Minister for Internal Affairs have stated the objective of the initiative is to provide legal recognition of children's identity which will help protect them from abuse, neglect, and exploitation. (27) Children can now apply for the new national identification cards in the national capital, Port Vila, or at registration offices in all provinces. (31) During the reporting period, the government also established the free Child (Pikinini) Helpline, allowing anyone to report concerns for the safety or wellbeing of a child by calling 163. The helpline is available 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, and is staffed by trained child protection officers. (27) However, during the reporting period, the government of Vanuatu did not implement any social programs that directly addressed preventing or eliminating child labor.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Vanuatu (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2014 – 2022
	Raise the minimum age for hazardous work from 15 to 18, to comply with international standards.	2016 – 2022
	Determine by national law or regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited for children after consultation with employers' and workers' organizations.	2009 – 2022
	Ensure that the law protects children ages 12 and 13 employed in light agricultural work by specifying the activities and hours per week that are allowed.	2009 – 2022
	Ensure that the law includes heightened penalties for the use of children in illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2022
	Establish by law an age up to which education is compulsory that extends to the minimum age for work.	2016 – 2022
	Establish by law provision of free basic public education.	2016 – 2022
Enforcement	Publish information on labor law enforcement efforts undertaken, including the number of labor inspectors, labor inspectorate funding, the number and type of labor inspections conducted, violations found, and penalties imposed and collected.	2012 – 2022
	Employ at least 3 labor inspectors to ensure adequate coverage of the labor force of approximately 108,000 people.	2021 – 2022
	Train labor inspectors and criminal investigators on anti-human trafficking and enforcement of child labor laws and make the results of these efforts public.	2014 – 2022
	Publish information on the number of criminal law enforcement efforts undertaken, including the number of investigations conducted, violations found, prosecutions initiated, convictions made, and penalties imposed.	2012 – 2022
	Strengthen coordination and sufficiently fund referral mechanisms between the Department of Labor, the Vanuatu Police Force, the Vanuatu Tourism office, and social welfare services to protect and rehabilitate children involved in child labor, including its worst forms.	2014 – 2022
	Ensure that the Child Desk has adequate financial and human resources to develop and integrate national planning initiatives for child protection policies.	2019 – 2022
	Ensure that all complaints of child labor are investigated, regardless of who lodges the complaint.	2019 – 2022
	Establish interagency protocols and a referral and coordination mechanism between Kastom and government child protection services.	2018 – 2022
	Establish formal interagency coordination on human trafficking investigations between law enforcement agencies, including the Police Force, Tourism Office, and Department of Labor.	2022
	Coordination	Ensure that the National Child Protection Working Group takes meaningful action to implement policies to prevent and eliminate child labor.

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Government Policies	Ensure that activities are undertaken to implement key policies related to child labor and publish results from activities implement during the reporting period.	2022
	Ensure that all policies are allocated funding and implemented as intended to address all relevant worst forms of child labor, including the commercial sexual exploitation of children.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure that social services providers and civil society organizations are registered and follow a standard set of procedures in providing care to vulnerable children.	2019 – 2022
	Publish information regarding actions undertaken to implement the National Child Protection Policy.	2022
	Publish information regarding actions undertaken to implement the United Nations Pacific Strategy.	2022
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs, including in forestry logging, and street vending, such as selling newspapers.	2014 – 2022
	Increase access to education for all children, including by funding inclusive education, increasing access for remote students, improving facilities to accommodate all children, improving infrastructure, particularly in sanitation, and expanding teacher training.	2012 – 2022
	Ensure that the Education School Fee Grant is sufficiently funded and contains child labor elimination policies or efforts.	2018 – 2022
	Implement and support social programs that directly address preventing and eliminating child labor.	2022

For the 2022 reporting period, no assessment has been made regarding Wallis and Futuna's efforts to advance the elimination of the worst forms of child labor because there is no evidence of a worst forms of child labor problem and the French collectivity has an adequate legal and enforcement framework on child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor exists in Wallis and Futuna. (1) Wallis and Futuna has a population of approximately 15,929 inhabitants. (11)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Wallis and Futuna is a French overseas collectivity, and, as such, cannot ratify international conventions. However, France's ratification of such conventions applies to Wallis and Futuna. (2,3) France has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 1).

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

Given its status as an overseas collectivity of France, French law is applicable in Wallis and Futuna. (2,3) The Government of France has established laws and regulations related to child labor, which are in line with relevant international standards (Table 2).

Table 2. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 118 of the Labor Code of Wallis and Futuna (4)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 115 of the Labor Code of Wallis and Futuna (4)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles L.4153-8, L.4153-9, and D.4153-15 of the Labor Code; Decree No. 2013-915, Relative to Work That is Prohibited and Regulated for Young People Less Than 18 Years (5,6)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 212-1, 224-1 A, B, and C, 225-4-1, 225-14-1, 225-14-2, and 711-1 of the Penal Code; Article 2 of the Labor Code of Wallis and Futuna (4,7)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 225-4-1 to 225-4-9 and 711-1 of the Penal Code (7)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for enforcement actions to address child labor, including its worst forms. However, Wallis and Futuna has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Service of Labor and Social Laws Inspectorate	Enforces the French labor code within Wallis and Futuna, falling under the joint authority of the Ministry of Labor and the Ministry of Overseas Territories. (1,12) There is one labor inspector in Wallis and Futuna, and they are trained on child labor laws. (1)
The French Gendarmerie Nationale	Enforces legislation banning child labor. (1,12)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for a mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for programs to address child labor.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, there are no actions needed to advance the continued prevention of child labor in Wallis and Futuna.

West Bank and the Gaza Strip

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

In 2022, the Palestinian Authority made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor in the areas of the West Bank under its control. In 2022, the labor inspectorate detected 360 more violations of child labor laws than in 2021 and courts achieved 9 convictions for child labor crimes. However, children in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation. Children also perform dangerous tasks in construction and fishing. The Palestinian Authority's legal framework does not establish child trafficking or forced labor as a criminal offense in accordance with international standards. Labor investigators also reported that they cannot inspect worksites at night, when they suspect child labor occurs, because of insufficient funding for overtime. In addition, social programs to prevent or eliminate child labor are insufficient.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2020, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2022. (1)
Data were unavailable from International Labor Organization's analysis, 2022. (2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Cultivating fruits and vegetables,† including dates, olives, onions, sweet peppers, and tomatoes (3-7)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children may be vulnerable to child labor in the agricultural sector, partly because the Palestinian Authority (PA) does not have jurisdiction or the resources to enforce laws in Area C's agricultural fields and Israeli settlements in the West Bank, which are administered by Israel. (7, 11) Some Palestinian girls from the West Bank are vulnerable to being exploited for sex and labor the West Bank and in Israel after family members force them into marriages with older men; these girls experience physical and sexual abuse, threats of violence, and restricted movement. (10)

West Bank and the Gaza Strip

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Overcrowded classrooms, violence in schools, damaged schools, and disruption due to weather contribute to some children dropping out. (3,6) In the West Bank, long distances to schools, school closures, Israeli demolition and confiscation of schools, and attacks by settlers and harassment and detention by Israeli security forces at checkpoints prevent some children from attending school. (12,13)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

The PA has Non-Member Observer status at the UN. In April 2014, PA officials presented to UN officials letters of accession to 15 UN treaties, including the UN CRC and its Optional Protocol on the Involvement of Children in Armed Conflict. In December 2017, PA officials acceded to the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons and the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution, and Child Pornography (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓

The penal code applicable to the West Bank is Jordanian Law No. 16 of 1960 (Jordanian Penal Code for the West Bank). The penal code applicable to Gaza is Penal Code No. 74 of 1936, which was enacted during the British Mandate (Penal Code for Gaza). (14) The PA has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the failure to criminalize child trafficking.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	15	Article 3 and 93 of the Labor Law for the West Bank and the Gaza Strip (15)

Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 306 and 310 of the Jordanian Penal Code for the West Bank; Articles 167 and 172(5) of the Penal Code for the Gaza Strip (18,19)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 27 and 44 of the Palestinian Child Law for the West Bank and the Gaza Strip; Article 389 of the Jordanian Penal Code for the West Bank; Article 193 of the Penal Code for the Gaza Strip (16,18,19)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes†	18	Article 46 of the Palestinian Child Law for the West Bank and the Gaza Strip (16)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No		Article 46 of the Palestinian Child Law for the West Bank and the Gaza Strip (16)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Articles 3 and 18 of the Palestinian Education Act for the West Bank and the Gaza Strip; Article 37 of the Palestinian Child Law for the West Bank and the Gaza Strip (16,20)
Free Public Education	Yes		Articles 3 and 15 of the Palestinian Education Act for the West Bank and the Gaza Strip (20)

* No conscription in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip (21)

† No standing military in the West Bank (13)

As the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. The Labor Law's minimum age provision does not apply to minors who work for their first-degree relatives, which is not in line with international standards that limit the exception for family-based work to small-scale holdings producing for local consumption and not regularly employing hired workers. (15) The law also does not establish child trafficking or forced labor as a criminal offense in accordance with international standards. (15,17) In addition, laws criminalizing commercial sexual exploitation of children are insufficient because they do not criminalize the use, procuring, and offering of all male and female children for prostitution, the production of pornography, or pornographic performances. (16,18,19) Further, there are no criminal penalties for recruiting children into non-state armed groups. (16)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The PA has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor (MOL), General Administration of Labor Inspection and Protection	Enforces labor laws, including those related to child labor. (5)
Police Bureau for the Protection of the Family and Adolescents	Investigates violations of laws, including the commercial sexual exploitation and economic exploitation of children. Coordinates with the Ministry of Social Development (MOSD) to monitor cases of child labor and economic exploitation. (5)
Office of the Public Prosecutor for Children	Investigates and prosecutes cases of child exploitation, including child labor. (5)

In the West Bank, under the terms of the Oslo-era agreements between the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) and the Israeli Government, the PA has civil law jurisdiction in the areas of the West Bank designated Area A and Area B, which represent approximately 39 percent of the West Bank's land area and contain approximately 94 percent of the Palestinian population. The Israeli Government has full administrative and security control over the city of Jerusalem and Area C; the latter represents 61 percent of the West Bank's land area and approximately 6 percent of the Palestinian population and the vast majority of the West Bank's agricultural areas. (22,23) Although PA laws in the Gaza Strip, along with Egyptian, British Mandatory, and Ottoman statutes, and shari'a law, Hamas continues to exercise de facto control over security and other matters. (22-24)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in the West Bank took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor (MOL) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the insufficient allocation of resources.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown (13)	Unknown (9)
Number of Labor Inspectors	79 (13)	80 (9)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	Yes (13)	Yes (9)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	No (13)	Yes (9)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksite	11,226 (13)	14,041 (9)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	51 (13)	411 (9)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	19 (13)	Unknown (9)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	Unknown (13)	Unknown (9)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (13)	Yes (9)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (13)	Yes (9)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (13)	Yes (9)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (13)	Yes (9)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (13)	Yes (9)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (13)	Yes (9)

Labor investigators have reported that they cannot inspect worksites at night, when they suspect child labor occurs, because of insufficient funding for overtime. (9) Moreover, inspectors are unable to inspect family-owned business, which make up a majority of business in the West Bank. While the PA has a mechanism to assess civil penalties for child labor violations through courts, the majority of cases are resolved when an employer terminates the employment of the child before the court takes up the case. (9)

The PA did not provide information on labor inspectorate funding, the number of penalties imposed, or the number of penalties collected.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in the West Bank took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient allocation of financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Unknown (13)	Yes (9)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (13)	211 (9)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (13)	9 (9)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (13)	9 (9)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (13)	Yes (9)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (5)	Yes (13)

Insufficient resources, including investigators' lack of access to vehicles, hamper the PA's capacity to enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (13)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The PA has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of a coordinating mechanism that covers all aspects of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
Ministry of Social Development Child Protection Network	Monitors cases of child labor, ensuring that the MOL's services are provided to withdraw children from child labor. Includes eight technical committees throughout the West Bank that provide psychological and social support to children and caregivers. (5) Coordinates with the Ministry of Education on cases of school dropouts and child labor. Works with the MOSD's 13 Youth Social Rehabilitation Centers to provide children who have dropped out of school with social, education, vocational, and cultural training. (5) Comprising MOSD, MOL, Ministry of Education, Ministry of Interior, and other Palestinian Authority (PA) and non-governmental organizations. (25) Active in 2022. (9)

Although the MOSD Child Protection Network exists, research found no evidence that the committee functions as a coordinating mechanism to address all aspects of child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that the government has established policies to address child labor.

The PA's National Policy Agenda (2017–2022) aimed to alleviate poverty through social programs for vulnerable groups and job creation programs for women and youth, improve primary and secondary school curricula, ensure equal access to education for marginalized areas, and ensure that technical and vocational training is aligned with labor market needs. (26) However, child labor elimination and prevention strategies do not appear to have been integrated into this policy as distinct issues. Further, research found no evidence of any other policies to address child labor in construction, street work, and agriculture.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the PA funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 9). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 9. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
MOL's Vocational Centers†	PA program in the West Bank, consisting of 13 employment offices and 9 vocational centers operated by MOL, for children over the age of 15 to enroll in vocational training courses. MOL also provides financial assistance to families, ensuring that children return to school and no longer engage in child labor. (5)
UN Education Programs	UN Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East programs that provide educational support for children and youth in refugee camps, and microfinance and other forms of support to families in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. (27) Active in 2022. (28)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Palestinian Authority.

Although there are programs in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, including in construction, street work, and agriculture.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip (Table 10).

West Bank and the Gaza Strip

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 10. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Raise the minimum age for work from age 15 to age 16 to align with the compulsory education age.	2018 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits child trafficking, including both domestic and international human trafficking, in accordance with international standards.	2015 – 2022
	Ensure that the minimum age for work applies to all children, or excepts only those working in family and small-scale holdings producing for local consumption and not regularly employing hired workers.	2020 – 2022
	Ensure that laws prohibiting forced labor criminalize slavery and practices similar to slavery, including debt bondage and forced or compulsory labor.	2017 – 2022
	Ensure that the use, procurement, and offering of children for all forms of commercial sexual exploitation are criminally prohibited.	2017 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 into non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2022
Enforcement	Ensure that child labor laws are enforced in the Gaza Strip.	2010 – 2022
	Publish information on labor law enforcement efforts, including labor inspectorate funding and the number of violations for which penalties were imposed and collected.	2010 – 2022
	Provide further resources and staff, including budget for overtime hours and vehicles, to the Ministry of Labor to conduct labor inspections and criminal investigations in all sectors, including family-owned businesses and at night.	2010 – 2022
	Ensure that penalties against those who use child labor in contravention of Palestinian Authority laws are levied even if the employer terminates the employment of a child.	2022
Coordination	Establish coordinating mechanisms to prevent and eliminate child labor.	2022
Government Policies	Adopt policies to address child labor in construction, street work, and agriculture.	2017 – 2022
Social Programs	Expand programs to improve access to education; for example, ensure that children are not subjected to violence, schools are weatherproof, and delays at checkpoints do not prevent children from attending school.	2011 – 2022
	Expand programs to further address child labor, specifically in construction, street work, and agriculture.	2010 – 2022
	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2020 – 2022

In 2022, Morocco made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Kingdom of Morocco claims the territory of Western Sahara and administers the area that it controls with the same constitution, laws, and structures as in internationally recognized Morocco, including laws that deal with child labor. During the reporting period, the Moroccan government drafted a national strategy against human trafficking and developed a guide to help government ministries identify trafficking victims. However, children in Western Sahara are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation. Additionally, the Labor Code's minimum age for work provisions do not meet international standards as children 15 years of age and under are not protected when working in traditional artisan and handicraft sectors. Furthermore, the scope of government social programs is insufficient as they do not fully address children exploited through domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Western Sahara are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation. (1,2) Children, particularly in rural areas, are vulnerable to child labor due to educational barriers similar to those faced in other locations in Morocco, such as insufficient facilities, lack of reliable and safe transportation, and unqualified teachers. (2,3) Data on key indicators on children's work and education are not available from the sources used in this report.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Western Sahara is subject to the same laws as internationally recognized Morocco. (4) Morocco has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor, which the government extends to the areas in Western Sahara that it controls (Table 1).

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government of Morocco has established laws and regulations related to child labor that extend to Western Sahara (Table 2). However, gaps exist in Morocco's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including a minimum age for work that does not meet international standards.

Table 2. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	15	Articles 4, 143, and 151 of the Labor Code; Article 6 of Law No. 19-12 (5,6)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 147 and 181 of the Labor Code; Article 6 of Law No. 19-12 (5,6)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Hazardous Child Labor List, Decree No. 2-10-183; Articles 179 and 181 of the Labor Code (5,7)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 448.1, 448.4, and 448.5 of the Law on Trafficking in Human Beings; Article 10 and 12 of the Labor Code; Article 467-2 of the Penal Code (5,8,9)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 497, 498, 499, and 503-2 of the Penal Code; Articles 448.1 and 448.4 of the Law on Trafficking in Human Beings (8,9)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 497, 498, 499, and 503-2 of the Penal Code; Articles 448.1 and 448.4 of the Law on Trafficking in Human Beings (8,9)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Law number 1-73-282; Article 467-2 of the Penal Code; Articles 448.1 and 448.4 of the Law on Trafficking in Human Beings (8-10)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	No
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 4 of Law No. 44-18 (11)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Articles 448.1 and 448.4 of the Law on Trafficking in Human Beings (9)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Article 1 of Law No. 04-00 (12)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 1 of Law No. 04-00 (12)

The 2016 Law on Setting Up Employment Conditions of Domestic Workers prohibits employing children under the age of 18 in domestic work; this provision will take effect in October 2023. However, the Labor Code does not apply to children who work in the traditional artisan or handicraft sectors for family businesses with five or fewer employees. (3,5)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The Government of Morocco has established relevant institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including Western Sahara (Table 3).

Table 3. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Economic Inclusion, Small Business, Employment and Skills (MEIPEEC)	Enforces child labor laws with its 54 inspection offices throughout the country. (2,3) Partners with civil society organizations working to remove children from child labor and provides them with an education or vocational training. (2,13) MEIPEEC's priorities in the 2022 National Labor Inspection Plan include upholding workers' representation rights and focusing inspections on temporary work agencies, security, gardening, construction, and cleaning companies. (2)
Ministry of the Interior	Enforces prohibitions on trafficking in persons, prostitution, and other exploitative crimes involving minors, as established in the Penal Code, through the General Directorate of National Security. (2)
General Prosecutor	Prosecutes criminal offenses against children, and processes cases involving children in the court system. Serves independently as a judiciary body separate from the Ministry of Justice. (2)

Information concerning labor enforcement for Western Sahara is not tracked separately from the entirety of Morocco, so the following information refers to Morocco as a whole. Between January 2022 and February 2023, 522 children were removed from hazardous working conditions, with 332 of these children being younger than 15 years of age. (2) The National Observatory for Children's Rights also established an online portal and reporting mechanisms on its website to provide more ways to report child abuse, including child labor. This complements the hotline already in use for formal child labor complaints. (14) Additionally in 2022, the government increased the number of labor inspectors by over 23 percent, from 404 to 500 in total. (2,3) Of the 500 labor inspectors in Morocco, 101 are contractors rather than public servants. (2) Due to the instability of contract employment, the authority and training of these labor inspectors may be called into question.

Despite this increase in inspectors, research indicates Morocco does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (15-17) Penalties for employing children in hazardous work are also insufficient to deter child labor, as labor inspectors generally recommend to employers to remove children from work before imposing any penalties and may not impose penalties if the employer ends the employment of children. (4,18,19)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efforts to address all forms of child labor.

Table 4. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Commission for the Coordination of Measures to Combat and Prevent Trafficking in Persons	Coordinates the government's efforts to address trafficking in persons. Led by the Ministry of Justice, with 22 members representing various ministries and civil society organizations. (2,14,20) In 2022, the Commission completed a guide for human trafficking indicators to help government ministries identify trafficking victims and organized a workshop on establishing strong national referral mechanisms for trafficking victims. (21) In March 2023, the Commission also enacted a new trafficking strategic plan. (22)

Although Morocco has a committee to coordinate efforts to address trafficking in persons, as well as the Technical Committee Under the Special Ministerial Commission for Children for the Protection and Improvement of Childhood to address child protection in general, it does not have active coordinating mechanism to address all forms of child labor. (2)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 5).

Table 5. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
Ministry of Solidarity, Social Inclusion, and Family (MSISF) Integrated Public Policy on the Protection of Children in Morocco	Promotes an interdisciplinary approach to respond to the exploitation of children and other relevant issues. (23) Implemented by MEIPEEC. (2,14)
National Strategy to Address Trafficking in Persons†	Aims to raise awareness of human trafficking and improve the identification and referral of victims to services. Enacted in March 2023 with assistance from international partners. (21,22)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

In late 2022, the Ministry of Economic Inclusion, Small Business, Employment and Skills made arrangements with the ILO and NGOs to draft a strategic action plan to address the worst forms of child labor. (2,14)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate efforts to address child labor in all sectors.

Table 6. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Social Cohesion Support Fund†	Programs that aim to improve access to education. Include the MSISF-funded Tayssir Conditional Cash Transfer Program that provides direct cash transfers to qualifying families whose children meet school attendance criteria. (24) These cash transfers continued in 2022. (14)

† Program is funded by the Government of Morocco.

‡ The Government of Morocco had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (2,25)

Although the government has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, including for children engaged in forced domestic work, especially in rural areas where undercounting the extent to which children are engaged in labor is likely, and in commercial sexual exploitation. (26)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Western Sahara (Table 7).

Table 7. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that all children age 15 and under are protected by law, including children who work in artisan and handicraft sectors for family businesses.	2009 – 2022
	Ensure that the law establishes 16 as the minimum age for voluntary recruitment by the state military with safeguards for voluntariness.	2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the use of a child for prostitution.	2022
Coordination	Establish a coordinating mechanism to prevent and eliminate all forms of child labor.	2022
Social Programs	Remove barriers to education, such as insufficient facilities and a lack of reliable and safe transportation, particularly in rural areas.	2015 – 2022
	Expand existing programs to address the full scope of the child labor problem, including in rural areas and in forced domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation.	2017 – 2022
	Collect and publish information on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs, including in farming and forestry.	2013 – 2022

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2022, Yemen made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. In 2022, the Ministry of Social Affairs and Labor conducted four inspections based on complaints. However, despite this initiative, Yemen is assessed as having made only minimal advancement because it continued to implement practices that delay advancement to eliminate child labor. There is evidence of recruitment and use of children in hostilities by state armed forces in contravention of Yemeni law. Furthermore, the government failed to make efforts to address discrimination in schools against children from the Muhamasheen (“marginalized”) community, leading to their increased vulnerability to child labor. Children in Yemen are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and use in armed conflict, including by Houthi insurgent forces and other armed groups. Children also perform dangerous tasks in fishing. Research found no evidence of a government policy on worst forms of child labor outside of child soldiering. Moreover, the Republic of Yemen government continued to have limited operational control over its ministries and was unable to enforce regulations to address child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table I provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Yemen.

Table I. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	13.6 (834,866)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	68.0
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	10.3
Primary Completion Rate (%)		72.3

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization’s analysis of statistics from National Child Labour Survey (NCLS), 2010. (2)

Figure I. Working Children by Sector, Ages 7-14

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming,† including harvesting dates (3-5)
	Fishing,† activities unknown (5-7)
Industry	Construction† and brick production (3,4,6,7)
	Working in carpentry† and welding† workshops (4,6,7)
Services	Street work, including selling items, and begging (3-6,8-11)
	Working in auto repair and mechanic shops† and car washes, and collecting fares in taxis (3)
	Selling goods in stores, transporting goods, working in bakeries (3,11)
	Voluntarily recruited children used in hostilities by state armed groups (12-17)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor†	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (4,6,7,18,19)
	Use in illicit activities, including in trafficking of drugs (4,5,7,20,21)
	Forced labor, including domestic work, begging, and working in small shops (19,20)
	Recruitment of children by non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict (4-7,10,16,17,22-27)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Armed conflict in Yemen continued in 2022, and security and access restrictions constrained international observers’ ability to fully monitor grave violations, including the recruitment and use of children in armed conflict. Armed groups, especially the Houthis, but also pro-government militias, recruited and used child soldiers in armed combat in 2022. (5,10,23,26,28) According to the UN, the Houthis recruited and used 105 children while Yemeni Armed Forces recruited and used 4 children. (28) In areas under Houthi control, children are indoctrinated in schools and recruited into armed forces; these practices have been documented in 34 schools in 6 governorates. (25) Boys recruited by the Houthis are often used in combat roles and girls are used as recruiters, guards, spies, and in other non-combat roles. (25) Children are also used by the Houthis to transport drugs to the frontlines and neighboring countries. (5)

Children in Yemen continue to face significant barriers to education. (5) According to UNICEF, over 2 million boys and girls are not attending school due to poverty, conflict, and lack of educational opportunities. Direct effects of the war, including destruction of schools, have prevented children from attending classes. (29) In addition, around 170,000 teachers in Houthi-controlled areas have not received salaries since 2016. (10) Many families also continue to be unable to afford transportation costs to schools, and Yemen's multiple crises have pushed families further into poverty, making it increasingly difficult to access education. (5,30) Among the Muhamasheen ("marginalized") minority group, generally of African origin, illiteracy rates are high, and child labor in the form of begging is prevalent. This community also suffers from general poverty and severe societal discrimination. (31,32) Many Muhamasheen children do not have birth certificates, which are required for enrollment in schools. They face harassment, bullying, and violence at school, and are dismissed from school or asked to clean the bathrooms; this treatment leads some to drop out of school. (32,33) Muhamasheen boys are vulnerable to sexual violence by armed actors, particularly while they engage in child labor, even if they are not directly involved in armed conflict. (33) Research did not discover any government efforts to address discrimination.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Yemen has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Yemen's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including deficiencies in laws prohibiting child trafficking.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Articles 5 and 27 of Ministerial Order No. 11 of 2013; Articles 48 and 49 of the Labor Code (34,35)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 7 of Ministerial Order No. 11 of 2013; Articles 49 and 154 of the Labor Code (34,35)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 7, 8, and 15 of Ministerial Order No. 11 of 2013 (34)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	No		Articles 6 and 26 of Ministerial Order No. 11 of 2013; Article 248 of the Penal Code (34,36)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Articles 6 and 26 of Ministerial Order No. 11 of 2013 (34)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 147 and 163 of the Child Rights Law; Article 279 of the Penal Code; Articles 6 and 25 of Ministerial Order No. 11 of 2013 (34,36,37)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Section 24 of Ministerial Order No. 11 of 2013; Articles 148 and 162 of the Child Rights Law (34,37)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 149 of the Child Rights Law (37)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No		Article 6(b) of Ministerial Order No. 11 of 2013 (34)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15‡	Article 18 of the General Education Law (38)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 87 of the Child Rights Law (37)

* Country has no conscription (39)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (34)

Although Article 248 of the Penal Code criminalizes buying, selling, and dealing in human beings, the legal framework does not appear to prohibit or provide punishments for forced labor. (36) The law related to child trafficking is insufficient because it only provides criminal penalties for someone who has bought, sold, or dispensed of a child. (34) The legal framework does not adequately prohibit using, procuring, or offering a child in pornography and pornographic performances, or using a child in prostitution. (34,37) The minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, which may encourage children to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (34,38)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, research found limited evidence that law enforcement agencies in Yemen took actions to address child labor.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Social Affairs and Labor's (MOSAL) Child Labor Unit	Enforces child labor laws, conducts inspections, informs the Ministry of the Interior of any violations, and refers children found during inspections to appropriate social services. (4)
Ministry of the Interior	Enforces child labor laws. Police departments within this ministry handle human trafficking investigations. (4)
Ministry of Justice	Enforces child labor laws; prosecutes and adjudicates child labor cases. (4)

Yemen

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Labor Law Enforcement

Research found limited information that labor law enforcement agencies in Yemen took actions to address child labor.

The Government of the Republic of Yemen continued to have limited operational control over its ministries and was largely unable to enforce regulations to combat child labor. (4,5) It is the policy of the Ministry of Social Affairs and Labor (MOSAL) to conduct inspections after child labor complaints; however, the public is not accustomed to interacting with its hotline, which is the only complaint mechanism. (4) In 2022, MOSAL reported that it conducted four inspections based on complaints; however, the results of these inspections are unknown. (5) MOSAL also lacks the authority to enforce child labor laws in temporary employment, farming, or domestic work. (7,35) Additionally, research indicates that Yemen does not have an adequate number of labor inspectors to carry out their mandated duties. (5,40)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether criminal law enforcement agencies in Yemen took actions to address child labor.

The government is unable to investigate, prosecute, or convict government officials allegedly complicit in human trafficking offenses, including the recruitment and use of child soldiers by the Republic of Yemen Government's Armed Forces. (6) Further, the government lacked the capacity to adequately investigate and prosecute labor violations as a criminal matter. (4)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 6. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Steering Committee to Combat Child Labor	Coordinates child labor issues in Yemen. Comprises representatives from MOSAL, other state agencies, the ILO, and local NGOs. (4) The National Steering Committee to Combat Child Labor was not active during the reporting period. (5)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 7). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of policies that cover all worst forms of child labor that exist in the country.

Table 7. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
Action Plan to End and Prevent the Recruitment of Children by the Yemeni Armed Forces	Ensures that national laws comply with international standards, prohibits the recruitment and use of children in armed forces, investigates allegations of violations, and facilitates UN access to monitor compliance. (16) Signed with the UN in 2014. Active in 2022. (43)

Although the Republic of Yemen has adopted the Action Plan to End and Prevent the Recruitment of Children by the Yemeni Armed Forces, research found no evidence of a policy on other worst forms of child labor, such as commercial sexual exploitation of children. (24) The government drafted a National Plan to Reduce Child Labor in a previous reporting period; however, the plan remains pending approval. The government has emphasized that it could not implement the plan without donor support. (24)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that the government funded or participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating child labor.

Although the Republic of Yemen participates in programs that address access to education, research found no evidence of any programs with the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (44)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Yemen (Table 8).

Table 8. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.	2013 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits forced labor.	2015 – 2022
	Ensure that trafficking of children, including recruitment, harboring, transportation, transfer, and receipt, for purposes of forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation, is criminalized and punishments are prescribed.	2015 – 2022
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 into non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure that the law adequately prohibits and provides punishments for using, procuring, or offering a child in pornography and pornographic performances, and using a child in prostitution.	2020 – 2022
Enforcement	Raise the minimum age for work from 14 to 15 to align with the compulsory education age.	2018 – 2022
	Enforce laws prohibiting children under age 18 from joining the Yemeni Armed Forces. Ensure that any children under age 18 already in the Yemeni Armed Forces and pro-government militias do not engage in combat.	2018 – 2022
	Ensure that the labor inspectorate has the capacity to enforce labor laws, including sufficient funding, labor inspectors, office facilities, transportation, and fuel.	2015 – 2022
	Employ at least 195 labor inspectors to ensure adequate coverage of the labor force of approximately 7.8 million people.	2020 – 2022
	Ensure that authorities enforce minimum age protections in all sectors in which the worst forms of child labor are prevalent, including in temporary employment, farming, and domestic work.	2009 – 2022
	Ensure that criminal law enforcement agencies enforce child labor laws and publish information on enforcement activities.	2015 – 2022
	Ensure that the National Steering Committee to Combat Child Labor is active and able to carry out its intended mandates.	2017 – 2022
Government Policies	Adopt a policy that addresses all worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation and child trafficking.	2009 – 2022
Social Programs	Implement programs to address the worst forms of child labor and expand programs to improve children's equal access to education, particularly for Muhamasheen children.	2013 – 2022
	Institute a rehabilitation and reintegration program for children engaged in armed conflict and children involved in other worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and fishing.	2011 – 2022

In 2022, Zambia made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government updated its Trafficking in Persons Act, removing the requirement that force, fraud, and other forms of coercion be demonstrated to establish a child trafficking crime, and launched the National Human Trafficking and Smuggling of Migrants and the National Migrant Policy, which include strategies to protect Zambian and migrant children from human trafficking and labor exploitation. In addition, the government recruited 30,000 new teachers, deploying them to rural areas where vulnerabilities to child labor are the highest. However, children in Zambia are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and forced labor in agriculture. The Education Act does not specify a compulsory education age. In addition, labor inspectors do not routinely inspect non-registered businesses in which child labor is known to occur.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government published updated child labor data indicating over 400,000 children were engaged in child labor, with most child labor occurring in the agricultural sector. (1)

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	7.8 (400,423)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	74.6

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Work in the production of cotton,† tobacco,† and other cash crops (4-6)
	Raising and herding† cattle (4,6)
	Fishing† (6-8)
	Production of charcoal† (9)
	Forestry, including loading of timber (10,11)
Industry	Mining of tin, copper, chrome, gold, ore, and gems, including manganese (6-8,12,13)
	Work in quarries, including carrying heavy loads† and crushing stones† (6,7)
Services	Domestic work (6,7)

	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (6,17)
	Forced begging (16)
	Use in illicit activities, including in the selling of drugs (6)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Child labor in Zambia is most prevalent in the agricultural sector and sometimes involves forced labor. (10,16,18) Traffickers exploit children from rural areas in Zambia and Malawi to cities for domestic work and to rural areas for agriculture. (16) Sources reported the exploitation of children for cattle herding, which sometimes involves parents repaying debts by sending children, particularly young boys, to work as cattle herders for the people to whom they are indebted. (10) Orphans, street children, children with disabilities, and children from poor households are particularly vulnerable to child trafficking. (8,16,19) In addition, traffickers exploit children from neighboring countries for forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation. (20)

A NGO report found that children engage in various forms of work at artisanal mining sites, including digging, transporting and crushing rock, and providing various forms of domestic services in mining areas, such as cooking, childcare, and selling of foodstuffs. Children working in mining areas reported various health problems, including bodily injuries, illnesses, sight and vision problems, and exposure to drugs, alcohol, and tobacco. (13) Illegal mining syndicates, called jerabo gangs, employ children in the Copperbelt province for mining activities, including forcing children to load trucks with stolen copper ore. (17,21) Commercial sexual exploitation of children also occurs, particularly along Zambia's borders and transit corridors. (15,17)

Long distances to schools, particularly in rural areas, an insufficient number of teachers and classrooms, lack of sanitation facilities within schools, and costs of learning materials are barriers to education. (10,22,23) The high prevalence of early marriage of girls increases the vulnerability of children to child labor; children without birth certificates are not able to enroll in school, and once girls marry, they sometimes leave school before reaching the minimum working age and engage in work outside the household. (10,19) During the reporting period, the government continued implementation of its free universal education policy, recruiting 30,000 new teachers for deployment in rural areas of Zambia where educational resources have been most lacking and where there are increased vulnerabilities to child labor because of rural poverty and close proximity to farms. (6,24)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Zambia has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Zambia's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including an undefined age range for compulsory education.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 24 of the Constitution; Sections 16 and 81 of the Employment Code Act; Section 13 of the Children's Code Act of 2022 (25-27)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	19	Section 83 of the Employment Code Act; Section 13 of the Children's Code Act of 2022 (26,27)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Prohibition of Employment of Young Persons and Children (Hazardous Labor) Order; Section 137(2)(n) of the Employment Code Act (26,28,29)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 14 and 24 of the Constitution; Sections 143, 261, and 263 of the Penal Code; Section 3 of the Anti-Human Trafficking Act; Section 8 of the Employment Code Act (25,26,30,31)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 17 of Amendment to the Constitution; Section 143 of the Penal Code; Sections 2 and 3 (1-4) of the Anti-Human Trafficking Act, as amended by the Anti-Human Trafficking (Amendment) Act of 2022; Sections 80 and 83 of the Employment Code Act; Section 17 of the Children's Code Act (25-27,30-32)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Sections 143 and 144 of the Penal Code; Sections 80 and 83 of the Employment Code Act; Section 19 of the Children's Code Act of 2022 (26,27,31)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Sections 80 and 83 of the Employment Code Act; Section 20 of the Children's Code Act of 2022 (26,27)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Section 14 of the Defense Act (33)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Section 3 of the Anti-Human Trafficking Act; Sections 80 and 83 of the Employment Code Act; Section 14 of the Children's Code Act of 2022 (26,27,30)
Compulsory Education Age	No		Sections 16 and 17 of the Education Act (34)
Free Public Education	Yes		Section 15 of the Education Act (34)

* Country has no conscription (35)

The government amended the law on trafficking in persons, eliminating previous requirements for demonstration of threats, force, intimidation, or other forms of coercion to constitute a child trafficking offense. (32) In addition, the government enacted the Children's Code Act of 2022, affirming and harmonizing legal protections of children from child labor, including its worst forms, while outlining mandates and responsibilities of government agencies to protect children. (6,27)

The law establishes a light work framework for employment of children ages 13 to 15 but has not identified permitted light work activities. (26,36) The Education Act requires that the government provide free education up to the ninth grade and stipulates that education is compulsory for children of "school-going age." The Act, however, does not set a specific age for which education is compulsory or define "school-going age," which may allow children to leave school before they are legally able to work and thereby increase their vulnerability to the worst forms of child labor. (34,37)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MLSS)	Implements, enforces, and regulates child labor laws. Advises other government agencies on child labor issues and coordinates government efforts to prevent child labor through its Child Labor Unit. The Child Labor Unit, which falls under the labor inspectorate, carries out inspections related to child labor. (10,38) The MLSS generally conducts planned labor inspections only in registered private institutions; inspections of unregistered institutions, including at artisanal mining sites, farms, and private homes in which child labor is most common, primarily occur in response to complaints. (39-41) The MLSS continues conducting community sensitization campaigns and coordinating with local police to build public understanding of the labor inspectorate's role and enforcement mandates to facilitate more inspections of private and unregistered institutions. (41,42)
Ministry of Home Affairs	Enforces criminal laws against human trafficking, child commercial exploitation, use of children as soldiers, and use of children in illegal activities through its Immigration Department and Drug Enforcement Commission. (10) The 2022 Anti-Human Trafficking (Amendment) Act created a new Anti-Human Trafficking Department, responsible for enforcement of trafficking in persons laws, and housed within the Ministry of Home Affairs. (6,32)
Zambia Police Service	Collaborates with the Ministry of Justice to investigate and prosecute child labor cases. (10) Handles the enforcement of laws against human trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and the use of children in illicit activities through its Child Protection and Victim Support units. (10,43) Works with immigration officials and local officials to respond to child trafficking, enforce child labor laws, and remove vulnerable children from the streets, placing them into families, foster homes, or in safe homes. (10)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Zambia took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MLSS) that may hinder adequate enforcement of child labor laws, including insufficient financial resources.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$26,000 (10)	$130,000 (6)
Number of Labor Inspectors	240 (10)	179 (42)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	Yes (26)	Yes (26)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	No (10)	Yes (6)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksite	1,800 (10)	2,324 (42)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	0 (44)	Unknown (6)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	0 (44)	Unknown (6)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	0 (44)	Unknown (6)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Yes (10)	Yes (6)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Yes (10)	Yes (6)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (26)	Yes (26)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (10)	Yes (6)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (10)	Yes (6)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (10)	Yes (6)

Although the MLSS reported that the budget for the labor inspectorate in 2022 was five times the amount reported in 2021, the MLSS also stated that inadequate resources, including an insufficient budget, limited office space, inadequate training, and a lack of transportation and fuel have prevented it from adequately conducting inspections countrywide. (10,39,45,46)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Zambia took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Unknown (10)	No (6)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (10)	1 (47)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	3 (48)	1 (47)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (10)	Unknown (47)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (10)	Unknown (6,47)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (10)	Yes (6)

In 2022, law enforcement officials investigated and initiated one prosecution related to the human trafficking of 13 girls for sexual exploitation; research, however, was unable to determine whether the government secured a conviction and imposed penalties for this particular case. Because law enforcement authorities did not provide age-specific information of human trafficking victims, the government may have undertaken criminal law enforcement efforts related to the worst forms of child labor that are not reflected in this report. (47) Law enforcement agencies do not have sufficient financial and human resources to address human trafficking, and standard operating procedures to screen and identify victims are not fully executed as a result. (17,42)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Steering Committee on Child Labor	Advises and oversees child labor matters, including implementation of hazardous work regulations. Chaired by the MLSS and comprises government representatives, employers, trade unions, and civil society members. Local-level coordination of child labor matters is maintained through District Child Labor Committees, consisting of local representatives of Zambia Police Service; the MLSS; the Ministry of Community Development, Mother, and Child Health; and civil society stakeholders. (14) During the reporting period, the National Steering Committee on Child Labor participated in television and radio sensitization campaigns and an event commemorating World Day Against Child Labor. (6) District-Level Child Labor Committees, however, were largely inactive during the reporting period, likely limiting the efficacy of the National Steering Committee and leading to gaps in coordination on child labor issues at the local level. (6)

Communication lapses among government agencies regarding mandates and responsibilities may hinder coordination and the ability of agencies to implement their mandates related to the worst forms of child labor. (14)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a policy related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

Zambia

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Child Labor Policy	Outlines objectives for prevention and elimination of child labor and designates responsible agencies to address child labor issues. (49) Implemented through the government's National Action Plan (NAP) for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2020–2025), which outlines child labor activities through 2025. (7) Government conducted sensitization activities in support of the NAP, including World Day Against Child Labor. (6)

‡ The government has other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (14,50-52)

On December 2, 2022, the government launched the National Human Trafficking and Smuggling of Migrants and the National Migrant Policy, which include strategies to protect Zambian and migrant children from human trafficking and labor exploitation. (47,53) The government has a National Employment and Labor Market Policy which outlines objectives for promoting decent work in Zambia, but the policy does not incorporate strategies for prevention and elimination of child labor. (54) Also, the government has not included child labor elimination and prevention strategies in the Education Policy. (55)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Social Cash Transfer Program†	Government program to provide funds to families for food security, poverty reduction, child welfare, and increasing school enrollment. In 2022, the government significantly increased the number of individuals receiving benefits under the Social Cash Transfer Program, from 700,000 in 2021, to between 974,000 and 1,027,000 individuals in 2022, as well as increased the size of household allocations from previous reporting periods. (56,57) However, research found problems with tracking of payments and cash flows within the Social Cash Transfer System that resulted in irregular payment disbursements, including delayed and reduced payments, for vulnerable families receiving funds. (11,29) Moreover, an evaluation of the Social Cash Transfer Program suggests that the transfers may actually have led to a net increase in child labor, particularly in farm work and cattle herding, because many families used funds from the program to expand their agricultural and livestock holdings, which resulted in an increase of children's work activities within the home. Children were also more likely to work excessively long hours, and there was no reduction in children's work outside of the home. (58)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of Zambia.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (14,59)

Although Zambia has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem in all relevant sectors, particularly regarding child labor in agriculture, domestic work, mining, and commercial sexual exploitation.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Zambia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Accede to the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography and the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict.	2018 – 2022
	Determine the list of light work activities permitted for children ages 13 to 15.	2018 – 2022
	Establish through statutory instrument the age of 15 as the "school-going age" for compulsory education, to align with the minimum age for work.	2012 – 2022

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Increase planned inspections in unregistered businesses, including artisanal mining sites, farms, and private homes, to ensure monitoring of all sectors in which children are working.	2010 – 2022
	Publish information on labor law enforcement efforts, including the number of child labor violations found, the number of child labor violations for which penalties were imposed, and the number of child labor penalties imposed that were collected.	2021 – 2022
	Increase fiscal and material resources, including vehicles and fuel, office space, and training, for the labor inspectorate to enforce labor laws throughout the country.	2010 – 2022
	Publish information on criminal law enforcement efforts, including training of new investigators, the number of convictions, and whether penalties were imposed.	2014 – 2022
	Develop and implement consistent procedures to screen and identify human trafficking victims while increasing fiscal and human resources for criminal law enforcement agencies working to address human trafficking of children.	2018 – 2022
Coordination	Ensure all coordinating bodies, including District-Level Child Labor Committees, are active and able to coordinate child labor prevention activities at the local level.	2021 – 2022
	Improve lines of communication and clarify responsibilities among agencies to improve effectiveness and referrals to social services.	2011 – 2022
Government Policies	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into the Education Policy and the National Employment and Labor Market Policy.	2013 – 2022
Social Programs	Address barriers to education by increasing schools in rural areas, increasing number of teachers and classrooms, defraying auxiliary education costs, and providing targeted support for girls who enter into early marriage to continue education.	2012 – 2022
	Harmonize child labor prevention and elimination measures and improve financial tracking in the Social Cash Transfer Program.	2020 – 2022
	Expand existing programs to address the full scope of the child labor problem in all relevant sectors, including agriculture, mining, domestic work, and commercial sexual exploitation.	2011 – 2022

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2022, Zimbabwe made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government created a new Child Labor Unit within the Ministry of Public Service, Labor and Social Welfare to steer the Ministry's child labor activities, and worked with NGOs to carry out research, coordination, and compliance investigations targeting the tea, tobacco, and other sectors where there is high prevalence of child labor. In addition, the government substantially expanded the Harmonized Social Cash Transfer Program and the Basic Education Assistance Module, which provide livelihood and educational assistance to families that have high vulnerability to child labor. However, Zimbabwe is assessed as having made only minimal advancement because it continued a practice that delays advancement to eliminate child labor. State-aligned actors engaged in a pattern of threats and intimidation of worker organizations and trade unions, which are key stakeholders in the identification and prevention of child labor. Children in Zimbabwe are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and forced labor in mines and on farms. Children also engage in child labor in agriculture, including in the harvesting of sugarcane and tobacco. Law enforcement agencies lack resources to enforce child labor laws.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Zimbabwe.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	14.8 (617,582)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	94.0
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	16.0
Primary Completion Rate (%)		84.8

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including in the production of tea, tobacco, cotton, and sugarcane (3-9)
	Fishing, including casting nets, hauling fish loads, and sorting fish (4,10,11)
	Work in forestry, such as dragging logs from felling sites and loading logs for transport (4,10)
	Cattle herding (3,10)
Industry	Mining and panning of gold, using dangerous chemicals such as cyanide and mercury, and extracting material from underground passages and quarries† (4,9,12-15)
	Molding bricks (13,16,17)
Services	Street work, including vending and begging (9,18-20)
	Domestic work, including childcare, house cleaning, and gardening (4,9,21)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor †	Use in illicit activities, including selling of drugs (9,22)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (9,22-24)
	Forced labor in agriculture, including herding cattle, mining, and domestic work (22)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Deteriorating economic conditions and the ongoing effects of climate change (including droughts, flash floods, and crop failures) strain rural households and likely contribute to vulnerabilities to child labor and commercial sexual exploitation. (9,25-27) Commercial sexual exploitation, often involving girls from poor and distressed rural households, occurs in urban centers, along major transit corridors, and in mining areas. (9,13,22,24,27) Human traffickers frequently lure orphans or children from rural households for work in cities with promises of educational opportunity or adoption. Such children are then subjected to domestic service or are forced to work in mining. (22) However, the reopening of schools, following COVID-19 closures, likely resulted in a reduction of children working in prostitution, street begging, domestic services, informal trading, agriculture, and artisanal mining. (9)

Children ages 8 to 17 work on tobacco farms, performing activities such as planting, weeding, harvesting, packing, and grading tobacco, tasks that often expose them to toxic chemicals and the effects of nicotine from handling tobacco leaves. (9,15,28) Children also work on sugar plantations in the southeastern part of the country, where they use dangerous tools and endure high temperatures. (3,29) Moreover, children work at artisanal and small-scale gold-mining sites, where they face risks including collapsed mines and exposure to mercury, and in commercial sexual exploitation around mining areas. In some cases, armed criminal groups have lured children to mining sites with the promise of self-employment and then forced them to mine gold under the threat of physical harm or death. (30)

In 2022 and during the run up to the 2023 presidential and parliamentary elections, the government and state-aligned Zimbabwe African National Union-Patriotic Front (ZANU-PF) political party engaged in a variety of tactics intended to obstruct, hinder, and in some cases violate the rights of workers and worker-aligned organizations advocating for better working conditions, including the identification and prevention of child labor. (31-33) At least one trade union alleged ZANU-PF activists obstructed a delegation of workers and civil society organizations seeking to access a commercial farm to investigate child labor claims. (31,32) Although the government has contested this allegation, research finds a pattern of state and ZANU-PF officials infiltrating trade union activities and interfering with or harassing attending workers. (33) As civil society organizations and labor unions have been integral to reporting and advocacy on identification and prevention of child labor, including in the mining and agricultural sector, these actions significantly inhibit Zimbabwe's progress in eliminating child labor.

The Education Amendment Act stipulates children's right to education regardless of race, nationality, or place of birth. (34,35) However, refugees and undocumented children who come to Zimbabwe from neighboring countries, and children who otherwise lack birth certificates, face barriers to education because, beginning in grade seven, children must present identity documents to sit for national exams. (8,36-38) As a result of these barriers, children may drop out of school, increasing their vulnerability to child labor. (10) To address gaps in birth registration the government has been operating a mobile birth registration program to assist citizens in receiving identity documents, including birth certificates. (39,40) In addition, poor school infrastructure, including lack of water and hygiene facilities, an insufficient number of teachers, and long travel distances to reach schools may contribute to higher dropout rates and vulnerability to child labor, particularly in rural areas. (9)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Zimbabwe has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Zimbabwe's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including a lack of criminal prohibitions against slavery.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Section 11 of the Labor Act; Section 10A of the Children's Act (41,42)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Section 11.4 of the Labor Act; Section 10A(4) of the Children's Act (41,42)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Section 3.1 of the Labor Relations (Employment of Children and Young Persons) Regulations; Section 2 of the Children's Act (41,43)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	No		Sections 54 and 55 of the Constitution; Sections 2 and 4A of the Labor Act; Sections 2 and 3 of the Trafficking in Persons Act (42,44,45)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Section 3 of the Trafficking in Persons Act (45)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Sections 61, 83, 86, and 87 of the Criminal Law Act; Section 8(2) a of the Children's Act; Sections 2 and 3 of the Trafficking in Persons Act (41,45,46)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Section 156 of the Criminal Law Act; Section 10 of the Children's Act (41,46)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	16	Sections 5, 9, and 10 of the National Service Act (47)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Section 9 of the National Service Act (47)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16‡	Sections 2 and 5 of the Education Act (34,35)
Free Public Education	No		Sections 5, 6, and 13 of the Education Act (34,35)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (48)

Laws prohibiting forced labor are not sufficient as they do not criminalize slavery. (45) In addition, although the Education Act establishes the right of children to state-funded education up to age 16, the law maintains the ability of the Minister of Education to institute instructional fees. (34,35)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority and operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role & Activities
Ministry of Public Service, Labor and Social Welfare (MPSLSW)	Enforces labor and anti-human trafficking laws and investigates labor-related complaints, including those involving child labor. (49) In addition to its 120 designated labor inspectors, MPSLSW coordinates with 40 Occupational Health and Safety inspectors, 200 National Employment Council representatives, and 60 inspectors from the Ministry of Mines to identify and remove children from child labor. (9) Also conducts industry- and sectoral-based labor inspections through appointed agents of national employment councils, comprising representation from both employers' associations and trade unions. (50,51) During the reporting period, MPSLSW created a new Child Labor Unit to support the Ministry's research, awareness raising, and engagement with stakeholders to monitor its activities earmarked for child labor elimination. The Child Labor Unit holds quarterly working groups to discuss sectors vulnerable to child labor, including tobacco, sugar, tea, and artisanal and small-scale mining. (52)
Zimbabwe Republic Police	Enforce laws related to the worst forms of child labor in conjunction with MPSLSW, the judiciary, and the Ministry of Justice, Legal and Parliamentary Affairs. (9,49)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2022, labor law enforcement agencies in Zimbabwe took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Public Service, Labor and Social Welfare (MPSLSW) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the lack of authority to assess penalties.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown (8)	$210,000 (52)
Number of Labor Inspectors	Unknown (10)	120 (9)
Mechanism to Assess Civil Penalties	No (42)	No (42)
Training for Labor Inspectors Provided	Unknown (8)	Yes (52)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted at Worksite	Unknown (8)	8,028 (9)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	Unknown (8)	Unknown (9)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	Unknown (8)	Unknown (9)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	Unknown (8)	Unknown (9)
Routine Inspections Conducted	Unknown (8)	Yes (52)
Routine Inspections Targeted	Unknown (8)	Yes (52)
Unannounced Inspections Permitted	Yes (42)	Yes (52)
Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (8)	Yes (52)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (8)	Yes (52)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (8)	Yes (52)

Research indicates that a limited number of inspectors and a lack of resources, such as available vehicles and office facilities, likely hinder the labor inspectorate's ability to conduct child labor investigations and adequately monitor rural farms at which child labor occurs. (9,10,50,53,54) Although the Labor Act outlines labor inspectors' authority to arbitrate labor disputes, it does not stipulate their authority to assess penalties for labor inspections. (42) Furthermore, labor inspectors also oversee arbitration and conciliation, a responsibility that compromises their ability to conduct onsite investigations to address child labor. (55)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2022, criminal law enforcement agencies in Zimbabwe took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MPSLSW that may hinder adequate criminal and labor law enforcement, including a lack of information on law enforcement efforts.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2021	2022
Training for Criminal Investigators Provided	Unknown (8)	Yes (56)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (8)	10 (9)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (8)	Unknown (9)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (8)	Unknown (9)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (8)	Unknown (9)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (8)	Yes (9)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a key mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of activity of coordinating bodies.

Table 8. Key Mechanism to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Activities
National Steering Committee to Address the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Leads government coordination to address the worst forms of child labor. (9) Chaired by MPSLSW and includes the Ministries of Health and Child Care; Primary and Secondary Education; and Youth Development, Indigenization, and Economic Empowerment. Also includes international organizations and civil society groups, such as workers' and employers' organizations. (10) Research was unable to determine whether the National Steering Committee to Address the Worst Forms of Child Labor was active during the reporting period. (9)

During the reporting period, the government, the Tobacco Industry and Marketing Board, and Eradicating Child Labor in Tobacco Foundation created a working group to address child labor concerns in the tobacco sector and jointly carried out a survey on child labor to strengthen and prioritize coordination efforts. (9) In addition, the government participated in the Rainforest Alliance's tea certification program, which establishes standards to prevent child labor, including hazardous work, in the tea sector. (9)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description & Activities
National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor	Promotes understanding of child labor issues and coordination related to child labor cases. Consists of three focus areas: education assistance, poverty assistance through a cash transfer scheme, and health assistance. (10) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor during the reporting period.
Trafficking in Persons National Plan of Action	Aims to implement the Palermo Protocol through the development of strategies to address human trafficking, with an emphasis on prevention, protection, prosecution, and partnership. During the reporting period, the government drafted a Trafficking in Persons Amendment Bill; however, it had to restart the process because of a procedural error. (56) Also during the reporting period, the government approved an updated the National Plan of Action to Combat Trafficking in Persons (2023–2028), outlining key agencies, coordination and referral mechanisms, and policy instruments that assist in the prevention and response to human trafficking, with special consideration for the rights and needs of children. (9)

‡ The government had other policies that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (57)

In 2022, the government directed each of its 46 National Employment Councils, which set sectoral-specific policies related to employment and labor relations, to establish policies to prevent child labor in their sector, including developing a list of hazardous work within each sector in which children are working. To date, 23 out of 46 National Employment Councils have created hazardous work lists. (9,52)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2022, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description & Activities
Harmonized Social Cash Transfer†	Government-funded unconditional cash transfer program, with support from UNICEF, to assist labor-constrained and food-insecure households to avert coping strategies, such as child labor. (10) As of April 2022, the Harmonized Social Cash Transfer Program covered 78,000 households across 20 districts, an increase from 55,000 households in 2021. (9) In addition, the government coordinated with UNICEF to provide emergency cash transfers to families facing extreme poverty and other vulnerabilities to child labor. (58)
Basic Education Assistance Module (BEAM)†	Government program, with support by the UK Foreign Commonwealth and Development Office, that provides basic financial assistance to families for education costs, such as tuition and examination fees. Aims to keep children in school and to enroll children who lack access to school because of economic hardship. (49) Program budget of approximately $20 million (5.6 billion Zimbabwean dollars) reached 1.5 million children during the reporting period, a significant increase from 859,000 children receiving assistance in 2021. (9,59) The budgetary allocation for 2022 was likely an increase from previous years, though was offset by rapid inflation that occurred during the reporting period. (9,60) Research has found that benefits under the BEAM programs do not consistently reach targeted families in need of educational assistance, limiting the capacity of the program to fully address child labor that results from poverty and auxiliary educational expenses. (8-10)

For information about USDOL's projects to address child labor around the world, visit <https://www.dol.gov/agencies/ilab/ilab-project-page-search>

† Program is funded by the Government of Zimbabwe.

The government continued to coordinate with UNICEF around various child protection initiatives that relate to root causes of child labor in Zimbabwe, including building capacity to respond to the needs of migrant and unaccompanied children, birth registration and collection of vital statistics, and development of an early warning systems to identify children at risk of dropping out of school. Although Zimbabwe has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, especially child labor in agriculture, mining, and commercial sexual exploitation. (61-63)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Zimbabwe (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2022
	Ensure that laws prohibiting forced labor criminalize slavery.	2021 – 2022
	Establish, by law, free basic education by removing ability of Education Minister to impose discretionary school fees.	2009 – 2022
Enforcement	Establish a mechanism to assess civil penalties for child labor violations.	2017 – 2022
	Increase financial resources and the number of labor inspectors from 120 to 355 to address labor violations and enforce minimum age protections in all sectors, including agriculture.	2017 – 2022
	Publish information on the government's labor, including identified child labor violations penalties assessed, and fines collected.	2021 – 2022
	Publish information on the government's criminal law enforcement efforts, including the number of prosecutions initiated, the number of convictions, and whether the government-imposed penalties.	2015 – 2022
Coordination	Ensure the National Steering Committee to Address the Worst Forms of Child Labor is able to coordinate on awareness raising activities and responses to identified child labor cases.	2016 – 2022
Government Policies	Ensure that activities are undertaken to implement the National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor and publish results from activities implemented during the reporting period.	2010 – 2022

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor (Cont.)

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Social Programs	Cease activities related to interference and harassment of labor unions and worker-aligned organizations advocating for conditions of work and social protection, including elimination of child labor.	2021 – 2022
	Improve access to secondary school by ensuring that all children are registered at birth and enabling children without access to identity documents, such as orphan children, migrants, and refugees, to take secondary school examinations.	2014 – 2022
	Enhance efforts to make education accessible to all children, including children living in rural areas, by improving access to water and hygiene facilities within schools, reducing travel distances to schools, and increasing the number of teachers.	2016 – 2022
	Improve systems for the distribution of social support benefits from the Basic Education Assistance Module program to ensure that allocations reach vulnerable households that are most in need of the benefits.	2020 – 2022
	Expand existing social programs to address child labor, especially child labor in agriculture, commercial sexual exploitation, and mining.	2010 – 2022

WHAT CAN YOU DO TO HELP ADDRESS CHILD LABOR AND FORCED LABOR?

ASK QUESTIONS

- Could some of the goods I buy be made by child labor or forced labor?
- Do workers have a voice to speak out against labor abuses?
- What are companies doing to end child labor and forced labor in global supply chains?
- What are governments doing to combat child labor and forced labor?

TAKE ACTION

- Empower yourself with knowledge by downloading USDOL's Sweat & Toil app and accessing Comply Chain and Better Trade Tool.
- Make your voice heard by spreading the word among friends, family, and with the companies where you spend your money.
- Show your support for organizations that are working to end these abuses.

DEMAND CHANGE

ADVOCATE FOR A WORLD IN WHICH:

- Workers everywhere can raise their voices against child labor, forced labor, and other abuses.
- Companies make serious commitments to ensure that global supply chains are free of products made by child labor and forced labor, especially those on USDOL's List of Goods Produced by Child Labor or Forced Labor.
- Your investments have a positive social impact by promoting responsible labor practices.
- Governments work vigorously to adopt the country-specific suggested actions in USDOL's Findings on the Worst Forms of Child Labor.
