

Laws Governing Exploitative Child Labor Report--Chile

I. Introduction

This report on the laws of Chile governing exploitative child labor has been prepared pursuant to section 2102(c)(9) of the Trade Act of 2002 (“Trade Act”) (Pub. L. No. 107-210). Section 2102(c)(9) provides that the President shall:

with respect to any trade agreement which the President seeks to implement under trade authorities procedures, submit to the Congress a report describing the extent to which the country or countries that are parties to the agreement have in effect laws governing exploitative child labor.

The President, by Executive Order 13277 (67 Fed. Reg. 70305), assigned his responsibilities under Section 2102(c)(9) of the Trade Act to the Secretary of Labor, and provided that they be carried out in consultation with the Secretary of State and the United States Trade Representative. The Secretary of Labor subsequently provided that such responsibilities would be carried out by the Secretary of State, the United States Trade Representative and the Secretary of Labor. (67 Fed. Reg. 77812)

This report relies primarily on information from the U.S. Department of State in Washington, D.C., the U.S. Embassy in Chile, and the Government of Chile. It also relies upon a wide variety of reports and materials originating from Chile, international organizations and nongovernmental organizations (NGOs). Finally, the report also makes use of information submitted in response to a Department of Labor request for public comment published in the Federal Register.<sup>1</sup>

II. Child Labor and Worst Forms of Child Labor

As defined by the International Labor Organization (ILO) Convention 138, Minimum Age for Admission to Employment, the term “child labor” is any economic activity performed by a person under the age of 15. Developing countries whose economy and educational facilities are insufficiently developed may initially specify a minimum legal working age of 14 when ratifying the convention, and may reduce from 13 to 12 years the minimum age for light work. There is no explicit definition of “light work” in Convention 138, other than it not be likely to harm the health or development of young persons, and that it not prejudice their attendance at school, their participation in vocational orientation or training programs approved by the competent authority, or their capacity to benefit from the instruction received.

Not all work performed by children is detrimental or exploitative. Child labor does not usually refer to “light work” after school or legitimate apprenticeship opportunities for young people.

<sup>1</sup> Request for Information Concerning Labor Rights in Chile and its Laws Governing the Worst Forms of Child Labor, 68 Fed. Reg. 8928 (Feb. 26, 2003). The Department received one comment, from the Government of Chile, in response to this notice.

Nor does it refer to young people helping out in the family business or on the family farm. Rather, the “child labor” of concern is generally employment that prevents effective school attendance, and which is often performed under conditions hazardous to the physical and mental health of the child.

While there is no universal definition for exploitative child labor, the ILO has defined the “worst forms” of child labor in ILO Convention 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor. Under this Convention, which applies to children under the age of 18, the worst forms are defined as follows:

- (A) all forms of slavery or practices similar to slavery, such as the sale or trafficking of children, debt bondage and serfdom, or forced or compulsory labor, including forced or compulsory recruitment of children for use in armed conflict;
- (B) the use, procuring or offering of a child for prostitution, for the production of pornography or for pornographic purposes;
- (C) the use, procuring, or offering of a child for illicit activities in particular for the production and trafficking of drugs; and
- (D) work which, by its nature or the circumstances in which it is carried out, is likely to harm the health, safety or morals of children.

According to Convention 182, the types of work referred to under subsection (D) should be determined by national laws and/or competent authorities.<sup>2</sup>

III. Incidence and Nature of Child Labor

Estimates of the incidence of child labor in Chile range from 1 percent to 4 percent, depending upon the definition and methodology used to produce the estimate.<sup>3</sup> Although not widespread,

<sup>3</sup> World Bank, World Development Indicators 2002 [CD-ROM], Washington, D.C., 2002. The figure for 10 to 14 year olds was gathered by the ILO and published by the World Bank. This estimate on the number of working children is based on the definition of the “economically active population,” which restricts the labor force activity of children to “paid” or “unpaid” employment, military personnel and the unemployed. The definition does not include children in informal work settings, non-economic activities, “hidden” forms of work, or work that is defined by ILO Convention 182 as the worst forms of child labor. In 1996, a survey conducted by the Chilean Ministry of Planning and Cooperation estimated that 1.9 percent of children ages 6 to 14 years (approximately 47,000 children) in Chile were working during the three months preceding the survey. The same survey found that approximately 78,000 children between the ages of 15 and 17 were working, which is 9.7 percent of children in that age group. See Ministry of Planning and Cooperation, Situación del Trabajo Infantil en Chile, 1996: Resultados de la Encuesta de Caracterización Socioeconómica Nacional, survey, Santiago, September 1997, 3, 9. According to a more recent version of this same household survey, 4 percent (64,954) of children between the ages of 12 and 17 were working in 2000. See Ricardo Solari Saavedra, “La Erradicación del Trabajo Infantil en Chile: Caracterización, Acciones del

there are credible reports of children working in agriculture, street work,<sup>4</sup> lumber processing, charcoal production, meat processing, shellfish processing, fishing, ranching, shepherding, bagging groceries in supermarkets, and domestic service.<sup>5</sup> Children working in the informal economy carry out most of the above activities.<sup>6</sup>

Education through the 12th grade is free and compulsory.<sup>7</sup> In 1998, the gross primary enrollment rate was 105.8 percent<sup>8</sup> and the net primary enrollment rate<sup>9</sup> was 87.9 percent.<sup>10</sup> In 2000, according to a government household survey, 1 percent of Chilean children between 7 and 13 did not attend school.<sup>11</sup> The country's rural population completes less schooling than the country's urban population.<sup>12</sup> The likelihood that children will engage in work instead of attend school increases as family income decreases.<sup>13</sup> The Chilean government is taking steps, as described in Section V of this report, to address child labor.

<sup>8</sup> The gross primary enrollment ratio is the enrollment of primary students of all ages expressed as a percentage of the primary school-age population. The gross primary enrollment ratio describes the capacity of a school system in relation to the size of the official school-age population. For example, a ratio of 100 percent indicates that the number of children actually enrolled, including those outside the official age range, is equivalent to the size of the official primary school-age population. It does not mean that all children of official primary school age are actually enrolled. A ratio greater than 100 percent may indicate that children outside the official age range are enrolled in primary school.

The Chilean Labor Code sets the minimum age for employment at 15 years, although children under the age of 15 may work in theatrical productions with the proper legal authorization.<sup>14</sup> Fifteen-year-olds are allowed to do light work if they have completed compulsory education, and if the work will not affect their health, development or attendance in education and training programs. Children ages 16 to 18 can work with the permission of their parents.<sup>15</sup> Children under the age of 18 are prohibited from working at night between the hours of 10 p.m. and 7 a.m. (outside a family business), underground, in nightclubs or similar establishments in which alcohol is consumed, or in activities that endanger their health, safety or morality.<sup>16</sup>

The Chilean Constitution and the Labor Code prohibit forced labor,<sup>17</sup> and the prostitution of children, corruption of minors and involvement of children in pornography are prohibited under the Penal Code.<sup>18</sup> The trafficking of children for prostitution is prohibited under the Penal Code.<sup>19</sup> However, child prostitution is an issue; the Government of Chile and other sources have estimated that the number of child prostitutes under the age of 18 in 1999 ranged from 3,500 to 10,000.<sup>20</sup>

The Government of Chile ratified ILO Convention 138, Minimum Age for Admission to Employment, on February 1, 1999 and ILO Convention 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor, on July 17, 2000.<sup>21</sup>

labor related to pornography, the sale of drugs,<sup>22</sup> and other related criminal activities.<sup>23</sup> Child labor inspections by the Ministry of Labor's Inspection Agency are infrequent, and are usually initiated only after a specific complaint.<sup>24</sup> In 2002, the Ministry of Labor found less than 1 percent of employers to be out of compliance with child labor laws.<sup>25</sup> In the informal economy, however, child labor is reportedly more prevalent.<sup>26</sup> The UN Committee on the Rights of the Child has reported that cases of commercial sexual exploitation of children often are not investigated and prosecuted and victim assistance services are lacking.<sup>27</sup>

V. Government Policies and Programs to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor

The Government of Chile is taking steps to address the worst forms of child labor. The government has been a member of ILO-IPEC since 1996<sup>28</sup> and has established a National Advisory Committee to Eradicate Child Labor.<sup>29</sup> In 2001, the committee developed a National Plan of Action,<sup>30</sup> which aims to ensure that the rights of children are fully protected by the year 2010.<sup>31</sup> The plan has five focus areas: nation-wide awareness-raising; data collection;<sup>32</sup> promotion of legislative reform in compliance with ILO conventions; development of age-specific targeted intervention programs; and ongoing monitoring and evaluation.<sup>33</sup> With support from ILO-IPEC, the committee has designed programs for working children in different regions of Chile, such as Río Cachapoal, El Olivar, Temuco and the suburbs of Santiago.<sup>34</sup> In 2002, ILO-IPEC began working with the government on a project to support the prevention and eradication of commercial sexual exploitation of children, and also on a project to establish a national register on the worst forms of child labor.<sup>35</sup> To date, a number of activities have been characterized as worst forms of child labor in the national register, including: child prostitution; child pornography; trafficking of children for the purpose of commercial sexual exploitation; drug use and production; underground work; and work with toxic substances. The Ministry of Labor, the Chilean Police and the National Service for Minors are collecting information to track the incidence of these activities.<sup>36</sup>

With the support of ILO-IPEC, the Chilean government is collaborating with the Mercosur countries to gather more adequate statistics on child labor under ILO-IPEC's Statistical Information and Monitoring Program on Child Labor (SIMPOC), to create and exchange best practices on child labor inspection systems, to promote legislation in line with ILO Conventions 138 and 182 throughout the region, to strengthen civil society partners, to incorporate child labor themes into national and regional policies, and to remove children from and prevent children from entering child labor.<sup>37</sup> Also with assistance from ILO-IPEC, Chile is participating in the development of a coordinated information system on child labor throughout South America.<sup>38</sup> In addition to collaborative efforts with ILO-IPEC, the Chilean government is establishing a system to ensure that assessments of child labor law compliance become a regular part of all labor inspections.<sup>39</sup>

The Chilean Ministry of Education has initiated reforms to improve the quality, equity and efficiency of the country's educational system.<sup>40</sup> The government operates a family income support program (Subsidio Unico Familiar) through which families living below the poverty line receive direct money transfers if they can demonstrate, among other requirements, that family members between 6 and 18 years of age are registered in school. The government also provides support for scholarship and school meal programs.<sup>41</sup> There has been a significant increase in the number of schools covered by the Program of 900 Schools (P-900), initially launched in 1990, which provides funding for teaching assistants for a number of basic education classrooms.<sup>42</sup> The government's Rural Basic Education Program provides additional funding and targeted programs for rural students and teachers.<sup>43</sup> In 1996, the government implemented the Full School Day Reform, which extended the school day, provided a new curriculum framework, implemented incentives for teacher professionalism and initiated a network to model and disseminate innovative teaching, learning and managerial practices at the secondary level.<sup>44</sup>
