To Whom It May Concern:

I strongly oppose the government using my tax dollars to violate my conscience and pay for drugs that will be given out in support of murdering innocent babies--especially Black babies.

Our government exists to protect our rights, especially our religious rights--not to impose godless views upon its citizens. There need to be exceptions for conscience on the part of individuals, employees, and businesses.

You are making war on people of faith, and I object very strongly. No human being should be forced by their government to subsidize services they morally or conscientiously object to. By doing so, your department has become complicit in the government's assaults on the rights of the people. We object, and we will resist. Please reconsider your course of action.

Sincerely,
Robert Broadus
