MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2013, Kenya made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government approved the National Plan of Action Against Sexual Exploitation of Children in Kenya and a new Decent Work Country Program, which includes targets for the elimination of child labor. The Government also continued to implement its National Safety Net Program for Results, which provides cash transfers to over 156,000 vulnerable households, and participates in several programs to combat the worst forms of child labor. However, children in Kenya continue to engage in child labor in agriculture and fishing. Moreover, gaps in legislation persist, including the lack of protection for children performing noncontractual work. Kenya also has not yet adopted its draft list of hazardous work prohibited to children or committed sufficient resources to enforcement efforts.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Kenya are engaged in child labor in agriculture and fishing.(1-6) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Kenya.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

	Recruitment of children by ethnically-based militias and al-Shabaab extremist group* (6)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Children in Kenya scavenge dumpsites and streets for scrap material, including metal and glass.(5, 16) These children earn about $1–2 per day, while often risking injury and exposing themselves to infectious diseases such as tetanus by sorting through waste. Evidence suggests such children are also exposed to mercury.(5, 6) The commercial sexual exploitation of children is also a problem in Kenya, especially in Nairobi, Kisumu, Eldoret, Nyeri, and the coastal areas.(5, 6, 16, 26, 28) The majority of children engaged in commercial sexual exploitation are girls, but boys are also involved.(5, 6) Although there were no reports that the Government recruited child soldiers, there were reports that ethnically-based militias and the al-Shabaab extremist group recruited children.(6)

While education in Kenya is free, access to education is limited for a number of reasons.(29) Teacher shortages in Kenya hinder children’s access to education and contribute to overcrowding in schools.(30) School administrators also limit access to education by denying pregnant girls admittance to schools.(30) Difficulties in accessing education are made worse by the prevalence of sexual abuse in schools.(6, 31) In addition, even though the law makes birth registration compulsory, many children in rural areas are not registered at birth. Unable to prove citizenship, nonregistered children have difficulty accessing services such as education.(6, 32)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Kenya has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 56 of the Employment Act; Article 4 of the Children Act (33, 34)

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation

Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 3 of the Counter Trafficking in Persons Act; Article 13 of the Sexual Offences Act; Article 13.1 of the Children Act; Articles 174 and 262 of the Penal Code (34, 36-38)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 8-9, 11-12, and 14-17 of the Sexual Offences Act; Articles 2 and 53.1 of the Employment Act; Article 15 of the Children Act (33, 34, 38)

Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	18	Article 10.2 of the Children Act (34)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	14	The Basic Education Act (39-41)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 7.2 of the Children Act; Articles 28-29 and 32 of the Basic Education Act; Article 53(b) of the Constitution (34, 35, 40)

*No conscription or no standing military.

Child labor as defined by articles 52(a) and 52(c) of the Employment Act and article 10.5 of the Children Act only applies to contractual employment. As a result, children performing noncontractual work do not benefit from these protections.(33, 34) Article 58.1 of the Employment Act allows children ages 13 to 16 years to engage in industrial undertakings when participating in apprenticeships or indentured learnerships. Industrial undertakings are defined by Article 2 of the Employment Act to include work in mines, quarries, factories, construction, demolition, and transportation.(33) These types of work are on Kenya's draft hazardous work list for children.(42) However, the list has not been adopted yet.(5, 43)

In 2013, Kenya enacted the Basic Education Act, which stipulates penalties for parents who fail to send their children to school. The Act also makes it a criminal offense to employ a child of compulsory school age in any labor activity that prevents the child from attending school.(40) However, in Kenya, children are required to attend school only until the age of 14. This standard makes children ages 14-15 particularly vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor as they are not required to be in school but are not legally permitted to work.(39, 41) In addition, although the law provides for free education and the Basic Education Act prohibits schools from charging tuition fees, the cost of unofficial school fees, books, and uniforms keeps some children from attending school.(44-47)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor, Social Security and Services (MLSSS)	Enforce labor laws, including those related to child labor, through county labor officers in Kenya's 47 counties.(5, 48, 49) In the case of the MLSSS' Child Labor Division, implement activities to eliminate child labor and address child protection issues at the community level.(5)
MLSSS' Department of Children's Services	Coordinate services provided to children, ensure that child protection activities are being implemented countrywide, and maintain records on children and the services provided to them.(5)
National Police Service	Enforce laws related to the worst forms of child labor.(5)
Anti-Trafficking Police Unit	Enforce laws related to the commercial sexual exploitation of children, child trafficking, and the use of children in illicit activities.(5)

Organization/Agency	Role
Tourism Police Unit	Enforce laws related to the commercial sexual exploitation of children among hotels and tour operators.(50)

Law enforcement agencies in Kenya took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, the Ministry of Labor, Social Security, and Services (MLSSS) employed 95 labor inspectors and 500 child protection officers.(5) Labor inspectors do not have the ability to issue fines or penalties when they encounter a workplace violation.(51) However, the MLSSS withdrew over 8,300 children from the worst forms of child labor as a result of their labor inspection efforts.(5) Research found no information on the number of labor inspections, child labor law violations found, how many citations were issued, or whether appropriate penalties were applied.(5, 52) During the year, labor officers attended a 4-day training course on the enforcement of child labor laws.(5)

The Government allocated approximately $116,000 to MLSSS' Child Labor Division during the reporting period.(5) However, the MLSSS' budget is inadequate to address Kenya's labor enforcement needs.(52)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2013, police officers arrested seven Tanzanian nationals suspected of forcing disabled children and adults to beg in Mombasa.(53) Four individuals were also arrested for trafficking children under the Counter Trafficking in Persons Act.(27) In addition, the MLSSS identified 47 cases of child trafficking in Migori, Busia, Mombasa, and Kwale counties. Child victims were referred to social services and counseling, and some were reintegrated with their families.(27) Approximately 120 members of the National Police Service received training on trafficking in persons during the year.(27) Other criminal law enforcement personnel also received training on trafficking in persons from the IOM, U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement, and the International Law Enforcement Academy in Botswana.(27) Research did not find comprehensive statistics on the enforcement of criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor.(5)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to reduce child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Council for Children's Services (NCCS)	Coordinate on a quarterly basis government efforts on child-related issues, including child labor.(5) Operate the National Children Database, which collects comprehensive data on children, including child labor.(5) Led by a presidential appointee and composed of 18 non-governmental organizations, private sector representatives, faith based organizations, and representatives from various ministries.(54)
National Steering Committee on Child Labor (NSC)	Oversee efforts to eliminate child labor.(5) Composed of government departments, private employers, workers organizations, and civil society organizations. Secretariat duties performed by the MLSSS' Child Labor Division.(5)
National Labor Board	Coordinate and ensure the implementation of the Employment Act, which prohibits the worst forms of child labor. Chaired by the Permanent Secretary of the MLSSS.(5)
Counter Trafficking in Persons Advisory Committee	Coordinate the implementation of policies related to human trafficking and provide prevention and protection measures to victims. Mandated by the Counter Trafficking in Persons Act.(37)
Local, Advisory, and District Child Labor Committees	Coordinate activities to eliminate child labor at the local level.(5)

Although the NCCS is supposed to meet quarterly, it only met twice during the reporting period.(5) The Counter Trafficking in Persons Advisory Committee did not meet in 2013. However, the MLSSS asked other ministries to assign a representative to the Committee.(27)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Kenya has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan for the Elimination of Child Labor (2004–2015)	Aims to eliminate the worst forms of child labor by 2015 by targeting vulnerable populations and addressing the root causes of child labor, such as poverty and lack of access to education. Prioritizes law enforcement, awareness raising, and universal basic education.(1)
National Plan of Action Against Sexual Exploitation of Children in Kenya (2013–2017)†	Aims to prevent, protect, and reintegrate child victims of commercial sexual exploitation. Places emphasis on identifying children engaged in commercial sexual exploitation, raising awareness of community leaders, parents, and tourism employees on commercial sexual exploitation, and implementing programs to assist victims.(55)
Decent Work Country Program (2013–2016)†	Seeks to eliminate the worst forms of child labor by establishing a referral system for victims and implementing child labor legislation and policies.(56)
UN Development Assistance Framework (2009–2013)	Promotes improved access to education for vulnerable children and seeks the protection of children from abuse, violence, and exploitation.(57)
Vision 2030: Second Medium Term Plan (2012–2017)	Identifies child labor as a major challenge facing Kenya and aims to finalize and implement the National Policy on Child Labor.(58)
County Integrated Development Plan (CIDP) (2013–2017)†	Serves as a guide for a county's development planning processes. Required by all 47 counties in Kenya.(59) In the case of Kiambu county, for example, addresses child labor in coffee and tea estates.(60)
The National Children Policy (2008)	Seeks to protect children from exploitative labor, trafficking, and commercial sexual exploitation through the enforcement of relevant laws.(61)
Kenya National Social Protection Policy (2011)*	Aims to reduce the vulnerability of Kenyans to social, economic, and environmental shocks. Seeks to provide children with access to education and health services.(62)
Framework for The National Child Protection System for Kenya (2011)	Describes the laws and policies that protect children from violence and exploitation and the roles and responsibilities of the Government to protect children from exploitative work.(63)
Policy for Alternative Provision of Basic Education and Training (2009)*	Provides guidelines for the development and implementation of alternative basic education and training for vulnerable groups.(64)

* The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Policy was launched during the reporting period.

In 2013, the Government approved the National Plan of Action Against Sexual Exploitation of Children in Kenya. However, the plan did not include a corresponding budget.(55) The Government also drafted, but did not adopt, the National Policy on Child Labor, which seeks to eliminate child labor by 2015.(5) Research could not determine how the National Policy on Child Labor would complement the National Action Plan for the Elimination of Child Labor.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Kenya funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Child Helpline 116	Government implemented emergency toll-free nationwide hotline to report child abuse, including child labor, and refer callers to organizations for social protection services.(5, 55, 65) In 2013, the Child Helpline received 25 calls regarding child trafficking and 276 calls regarding child labor.(27)
Child Protection Centers	Government implemented child protection centers that provide counseling and reintegration services for children in Malindi, Mombasa, Garrisa, and Eldoret. In 2013, four additional centers were built in Siaya, Kakamega, Nairobi, and Nakuruat.(26, 27)
Child Labor Free Zones	Government implemented child labor free zones, with support from the ILO and Cooperazione e Sviluppo (CESVI), an Italian NGO, which target fish farms and commercial fishing operations. In 2013, there were 70 child labor free zones in 50 villages and 20 beaches.(5)
Child Labor Free Supply Chain Certifications	Government program, with support from CESVI, that develops child labor free supply chain certifications. Kenya's largest vegetable processor was awarded a certificate in February 2014.(5, 66)

Program	Description
Timebound Program–Phase II	$4.6 million USDOL-funded, 4-year project implemented by ILO-IPEC, which ended in 2013, that withdrew and prevented over 8,400 children from exploitative labor through the provision of direct educational services. Provided over 1,500 families with access to income generating activities and savings and credit groups.(67)
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues Project	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016 established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010.(68) Aims to improve the evidence base on child labor through data collection and research. It also aims to strengthen legal protections and social service delivery for child domestic workers in Kenya.(68)
Tackling Child Labor through Education project	Jointly launched by the European Commission and the ILO to combat child labor through education in 12 African and Caribbean countries and the Pacific group of states.(69) Aims to withdraw and prevent children from engaging in child labor, improve child labor related legislation, build the Government's capacity to implement child labor policies, and enhance the knowledge base on child labor in Kenya.(70)
National Safety Net Program for Results*‡	Government implemented 5-year cash transfer and social safety net program, with support from the World Bank, that assists families of working children, orphans, and vulnerable children to meet their basic needs and pay for school related costs. Currently, the program benefits over 156,000 households across Kenya.(5, 71) The Government of Kenya has provided approximately $411 million to the program.(5)
Trafficking in Persons Survey†‡	Government survey to determine the prevalence of human trafficking in Kenya. The survey began in February 2014.(27)
School Meals Program*	Government program that provides school meals to vulnerable children. Since its inception, has provided over 1.5 million children with school meals, which has resulted in improved school attendance.(72)
Wings to Fly Program*	Government program, in partnership with the Equity Group Foundation, that provides secondary school scholarships to children from needy backgrounds. Provided education support to 2,000 children in January 2014.(73)
Kitui County Child Rescue Center†‡	Government program that aims to withdraw and rehabilitate child laborers through the provision of counseling and life skills. In 2013, the Government funded the center at approximately $34,500.(74)
Refugee Assistance Programs*	In 2013, the Government, with support from UNICEF, provided educational and nutritional services to 240,000 children.(75)
Regional Counter-Trafficking Project	Government project, with support from the IOM, that aims to combat human trafficking through prevention, protection, and support for victims.(76)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Kenya.

Although Kenya has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, especially the commercial sexual exploitation of children.

Kiribati

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2013, Kiribati made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government passed the Children, Young People, and Family Welfare Act. The law includes provisions to enhance protections and access to services for children in need of care, including victims of sexual exploitation or exploitative labor. During the reporting period, the Director of Public Prosecutions led a human trafficking training for law enforcement officials. In addition, the Government collaborated with ILO-IPEC to conduct a child labor survey. It also continued initiatives to raise awareness about child protection issues, including commercial sexual exploitation. However, children in Kiribati continue to be found in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation. Kiribati still faces legislative, enforcement, and program gaps. The Government has not adopted a list of hazardous activities prohibited for children, and existing laws fail to fully protect children under 18 from all forms of commercial sexual exploitation. In addition, the Government did not make sufficient efforts to identify or provide services to children in commercial sexual exploitation.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Kiribati are engaged in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation.(1-9) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Kiribati. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		115.2

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2008, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2014.(10)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children’s Work Project’s analysis, 2014.(11)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Services	Street vending* (3, 4, 7, 8)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1-9)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

In Kiribati, children, including girls as young as 14, are engaged in commercial sexual exploitation both aboard foreign fishing vessels in Kiribati’s waters and in establishments on land, including hotels and bars. Evidence suggests that crewmembers of foreign fishing vessels account for much of the demand for children in the commercial sex sector.(1-3, 5, 6, 8, 9) Girls typically received financial support, food, alcohol, or goods in exchange for sexual services.(5, 8)

The Government worked with ILO-IPEC to conduct a child labor survey, the results of which had not yet been released during the reporting period.(3, 9, 12)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Kiribati has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Free Public Education	Yes		Education Ordinance (19)

*No conscription or no standing military.

In 2013, Kiribati enacted the Children, Young People, and Family Welfare Act.(4, 20) The law includes provisions to enhance protection for and access to services for children in need of care, including those under age 18 who have been harmed or are at risk of harm by means of prostitution, pornography, or hazardous labor. The law also calls for enhanced coordination of care for these populations.(20) The Government has also drafted the Juvenile Bill, which addresses various forms of child exploitation, including child commercial exploitation and child labor. However, the bill was not passed during the reporting period.(3, 21)

The Government has not developed a list of hazardous work activities prohibited for children but is commencing the process of drafting one.(3, 9, 22)

Article 136 of the Penal Code prohibits the procurement of any girl under age 18 for prostitution. Articles 141 and 142 prohibit the use of children under 15 for immoral and unlawful activities, including prostitution, and Article 166 outlaws obscene publications.(15) A 2010 amendment to the foreign fishing license regulations holds ship captains accountable for unauthorized persons discovered on their vessels. The regulation has been used to protect women and girls from commercial sexual exploitation aboard foreign vessels.(23) Despite these provisions, the law does not fully protect children from commercial sexual exploitation. Article 136 of the Penal Code does not protect boys from being procured for prostitution. Articles 141 and 142 do not prohibit the use of children ages 15 to 17 for commercial sexual exploitation, and the law lacks explicit prohibitions on child pornography and sex tourism.(3, 8, 9, 15) Article 142 of the Penal Code fails to protect children ages 15 to 17 from use in illegal activities.(15) The Government has developed a draft Employment and Industrial Relations Act, which, if passed, is expected to address these gaps.(9)

Kiribati

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Human Resources Development (MOL)	Enforce labor laws, including those related to child labor.(1, 3, 4, 9) Does not have dedicated labor inspectors. Seven labor officers, six of whom are based in capital city of Tarawa, tasked with conducting inspections in addition to other duties.(4)
Kiribati Police Force (KPF)	Enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. Includes a specialized Domestic Violence and Sexual Offenses Unit, which is involved in cases of human trafficking and sexual exploitation of children.(3, 4) Often partners with Ministry of Women, Youth, and Social Affairs (MWYSA) in cases requiring protective services for minors.(4)
Kiribati Director of Public Prosecutions (DPP)	Responsible for criminal prosecutions, including those related to the worst forms of child labor.(24)

Law enforcement agencies in Kiribati took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms, during the reporting period.

Labor Law Enforcement

The Ministry of Labor (MOL) has suggested that the number of officers is insufficient to conduct inspections outside of Tarawa but budget constraints prevent additional hiring.(1, 3, 4) During the reporting period, MOL conducted labor inspections in August, and the Ministry reports that no child labor violations were discovered.(4) Information on the number of inspections conducted is not available. The Government does not have a mechanism to record child labor violations discovered or reported, penalties and fines imposed for child labor violations, or the number of children assisted as a result of inspections.(3, 4, 25)

Criminal Law Enforcement

During the reporting period, the Kiribati Director of Public Prosecutions (DPP) participated in training on trafficking in persons in Fiji. The training was organized by the U.S. Embassy in Suva and U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement. Subsequently, the DPP conducted training in Tarawa for Kiribati's law enforcement officials.(4)

In 2013, the Government continued to monitor Kiribati's shoreline and enforce the foreign fishing license regulations that hold ship captains accountable for unauthorized persons discovered on their vessels, including girls engaged in commercial sexual exploitation.(5, 9)

Despite its enforcement efforts, the Government does not keep information on the number of investigations, violations, and prosecutions related to the worst forms of child labor.(4)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that the Government has an active mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms. The Kiribati National Advisory Committee on Children (KNACC) was a multiagency body, tasked with implementing the CRC, including with regard to the worst forms of child labor.(2, 3, 26) However, the KNACC is no longer active.(4) The newly formed Ministry of Women, Children, and Social Affairs (MWCSA) has drafted terms of reference for a reconstituted KNAAC, including an extensive role for MWCSA. Once approved internally, the terms of reference will be sent to cabinet for approval later this year.(24)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Kiribati has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Children, Young People, and Families Welfare System Policy	Focuses on strengthening the welfare system, in part by implementing services to prevent the abuse, violence, neglect, and exploitation of children and young people, including in the forms of sexual abuse and hazardous labor.(25, 27)
Signatory to Beijing Declaration on South-South Cooperation for Child Rights in the Asia Pacific Region	Commits signatories to advancing efforts to protect children's rights, including with regard to child labor, child trafficking, and child pornography.(28)
Child Protection Program*	Aims to reduce all forms of child exploitation in the Pacific Islands through enhanced legal protections and access to justice, well-informed and coordinated social protection services, and safe and healthy home and community environments.(26, 29)

* The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Kiribati participated in and funded programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Hotline‡	MWYSA-supported 24-hour hotline for children to report violations, request information, or obtain access to services.(4)
Awareness Raising Programs	MWYSA weekly radio program and workshops with community and educational leaders to address child protection issues, including commercial sexual exploitation of children.(5, 21) Government-UNICEF collaborative programs to increase children's awareness about human rights issues in Kiribati.(3, 4, 25)
Educational Improvement Program*	Government program to provide greater protection and educational opportunities to children through policy and legislative review, workforce development, improvement of school curriculum, and infrastructure development in the education sector.(1, 30)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Kiribati.

Although Kiribati has programs that target commercial sexual exploitation of children, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the scope of the problem. Specifically, the Government does not have programs to identify and offer targeted services to victims.(5)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Kiribati (Table 8).

In 2013, Kosovo made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government adopted an updated list of hazardous activities prohibited to children and a revised Criminal Code that imposes harsher penalties for the trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children. It also published its first review of the implementation of the 2010–2016 National Strategy and Action Plan for the Prevention and Elimination of Child Labor in Kosovo (SAP) and mandated that all national and local government agencies take steps to address the worst forms of child labor. However, children in Kosovo continue to engage in child labor in street work and in the worst forms of child labor in forced begging and commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children from minority communities continue to face barriers to accessing education; the inspectorate faces gaps in terms of resources, capacity, and the collection of data on enforcement efforts; and programs to directly or indirectly combat the worst forms of child labor are underfunded.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Kosovo continue to engage in child labor in street work and in the worst forms of child labor in forced begging and commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1-6) Data on key indicators on children's work and education are not available from the sources used in this report.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

There are more girls than boys among identified trafficking victims in Kosovo. Girls are most often trafficked into commercial sexual exploitation.(6) Children of minority ethnic groups such as Roma and Egyptian are more often involved in street work and begging than are children of other groups.(12). The high incidence of poverty and lack of access to education among the marginalized Ashkali, Egyptian, and Roma communities make the children in these communities vulnerable to child labor.(1, 13)

Many obstacles prevent children from the Ashkali, Egyptian, and Roma communities from accessing education. The lack of birth registration impedes the ability of these children to attend school.(13) Some families from these communities report that their inadequate means prevent them from purchasing school materials and clothing, thus creating an obstacle to the successful education of their children.(13) In addition, classes at the primary, secondary, and university levels of education in Kosovo are offered in Albanian, Bosnian, Serbian, and Turkish, but instruction in the Romani language is limited. In 2013, the Ministry of Education, Science, and Technology published the first Romani language alphabet to be used in language classes in primary schools in Prizren municipality.(14) However, continued gaps in education in the Romani language and the small number of teachers who are from minority communities contribute to the low enrollment rates and higher dropout rates within these communities.(15, 16)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Kosovo is not a UN member country; therefore, the Government is not eligible to ratify any ILO or other UN conventions. Article 22 of Kosovo’s Constitution, however, incorporates the UN CRC by reference.(17)

During 2013, the Government updated the country's 2010 list of hazardous work prohibited to children. The list prohibits children from carrying heavy loads; working with a number of toxic chemical and biological substances; and performing certain activities within the agriculture, construction, and mining sectors, on the streets, and in dumpsites.(2)

The newly revised Criminal Code took effect in 2013; it contains increased penalties for human trafficking and expanded the definition of trafficking crimes.(4) Article 171 of the Criminal Code prohibits all forms of trafficking in persons, including for the purposes of prostitution and other forms of sexual exploitation, forced labor, and conditions of slavery.(21) The new Criminal Code specifically identifies harsher penalties if the crime perpetrated involves trafficking of children, the creation of pornographic materials, or the facilitation of prostitution, or if the perpetrator engages in recruiting, transporting, organizing, or providing space for such activities involving children. Holding people in slavery, slavery-like conditions, and forced labor are also now criminal offenses punishable by 3–15 years in prison when the victim is a child.(21) During the year, the Government adopted Law No. 04/L-218, which also addresses trafficking. This Law establishes the basis for legal actions to prevent and prosecute trafficking and spells out protections for victims, including special protections for child victims.(22) These protections include the right to stay at a shelter in separate facilities from adults for up to 6 months, and to receive education during that time.(22)

The law lacks prohibitions against using children in illicit activities.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare (MLSW) Labor Inspectorate	Conduct inspections to enforce labor laws, including child labor laws, with a focus on protecting children who are legally employed. Its mandate does not include underage child labor.(2, 23)
MLSW Department of Social Welfare (DSW)	Investigate for underage child labor.(23)
Kosovo Police's Directorate of Trafficking in Human Being Investigation (DTHBI)	Enforce criminal laws against the worst forms of child labor, including trafficking and forced labor.(2)
Ministry of Justice	Enforce criminal laws against forced child labor.(2)
Ministry of Education, Science, and Technology (MEST)	Ensure that students have an appropriate balance of school and work hours through the work of education inspectors.(25)

Law enforcement agencies in Kosovo took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, the Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare Labor (MLSW) Inspectorate employed 51 inspectors, the same amount as in 2012. During the year, the Labor Committee of Kosovo’s legislative assembly submitted a request to the Government to increase funding to the Inspectorate.(2) The Inspectorate’s budget for 2013 was $772,000, but the budget for 2014 was decreased to $717,000. The Labor Committee, other government officials, and independent analysts have noted that the Inspectorate has insufficient resources.(2, 26) MLSW did not offer training to inspectors on child labor during the reporting period. During 2013, the Labor Inspectorate conducted 8,378 inspections, which included inspecting for child labor.(2) Through these inspections, 20 children were found in hazardous activities in the agriculture sector, 43 were found in begging/street work activities, 8 were found in waste scavenging, and 1 child was found in other activities.(23) The Inspectorate issued four citations for violations regarding the working conditions of children ages 15 through 17; the Inspectorate determined these violations had been addressed upon reinspection. As a result of its attention to underage child labor, MLSW’s Department of Social Welfare (DSW) reported that 46 children were removed from hazardous work situations during the year.(2) Information on whether these children had been referred to services is unavailable, as such detailed reporting is not maintained.(2, 23)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2013, the Kosovo Police’s Directorate of Trafficking in Human Being Investigation (DTHBI) Victim’s Assistance Unit had 55 investigators, compared with 53 in 2012. These investigators received training on forced labor and trafficking during the year.(2, 23, 27) The Kosovo Police report the number of investigators to be adequate, and DHTBI reports that it coordinates with other agencies and refers children to services. However, in their annual report, DHTBI stated that the Assistance Unit lacks sufficient funding for official vehicles, civilian clothing for investigators, and advanced technology for undercover investigations.(2) During 2013, DHTBI found 24 child victims of trafficking, 21 of whom were trafficked for the purpose of commercial sexual exploitation and 2 for forced begging; one child had been trafficked for other, unspecified reasons.(2, 23) There are standard operating procedures for referring victims to services in Kosovo.(10) However, information on whether these specific children had been referred to services and whether these cases had been prosecuted is not available.(2)

The Kosovo Police task force, working with the Swiss NGO Terre des Hommes, identified 48 children involved in begging activities during 2013.(2) Further investigation demonstrated that they were not victims of child trafficking or forced labor. Instead, the Kosovo Police prosecuted some parents for child mistreatment and abandonment.(2)

Sometimes the Kosovo justice system has incorrectly applied the legal framework regulating the crime of trafficking, which hinders effective prosecutions. The OSCE noted that trafficking incidents are often classified as less severe offenses, which has resulted in lighter penalties for perpetrators.(28)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Kosovo Committee for Prevention and Elimination of Child Labor (KCPEPCL)	Oversee and provide policy guidance for activities to prevent and eliminate child labor. Members consist of representatives from government agencies, the police, trade unions, the Kosovo Chamber of Commerce, and a child protection NGO.(2)
Counter-Trafficking Inter-Ministerial Working Group	Coordinate policy implementation, monitoring, and reporting on the implementation of actions to combat trafficking, including child trafficking. Efforts are led by a National Anti-Trafficking Coordinator through the Ministry of Interior Affairs (MOIA). (4, 10)

In 2013, the Kosovo Committee for Prevention and Elimination of Child Labor's (KCPEPCL) Technical Working Group on Hazardous Child Labor was responsible for the adoption of the country's updated hazardous list, AI 05/2013.(2) This instruction placed responsibility for addressing child labor with all national and local government agencies. The agencies with the most significant implementing roles include the MLSW; the Ministry of Justice; the Ministry of Education, Science, and Technology; the Ministry of Local Government and Administration; the Ministry of Agriculture, Forestry and Rural Development; the Ministry of Culture, Youth and Sport; and the Ministry of Health.(2) In December, the KCPEPCL adopted recommendations for action under AI 05/2013 for each of these institutions.(29)

The Government continued to establish the country's Child Labor Monitoring System (CLMS), which consists of Local Action Committees at the municipal level. Committee members proactively monitor schools and work sites for cases of child labor, refer such children to services, and plan and make recommendations for addressing the problem of child labor.(30) During the reporting period, the members of the CLMS focused on leveraging existing services for children; documenting child labor trends; incorporating lessons learned and joint planning; and evaluating the efficiency of the CLMS.(2) Despite these positive aspects, government officials, as well as representatives of international and NGOs, reported that the Government lacks a sustainable and comprehensive mechanism to collect nationwide data on child labor, analyze lessons learned, and take follow-up actions. Although local and regional MLSW Offices share data on children, all other agencies report data only within their organizational hierarchy.(2, 23)

During 2013, the Ministry of Interior Affairs began funding the work of the Counter-Trafficking Inter-Ministerial Working Group without international assistance. The Group met regularly and led an awareness campaign.(10) However, funding from the Working Group was not available for prevention purposes or other activities besides awareness raising.(4, 23)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Kosovo has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Strategy and Action Plan (SAP) for the Prevention and Elimination of Child Labor in Kosovo, 2010–2016	Aims to eliminate the worst forms of child labor in Kosovo by 2016 with a focus on prevention, as well as withdrawal of children from the worst forms of child labor, the protection of young workers, and the integration of gender concerns into anti-child labor efforts.(31) The first phase, which ended in 2013, focused on laying the groundwork to combat child labor through efforts such as improving knowledge on child labor and response of relevant institutions to the problem.(2, 31) In 2013, a working group of the KCPEPCL produced the country's first report on the progress made in implementing the SAP.(2) The report described activities implemented through 2012, which included the development of legal reform proposals, training inspectors and investigators, and awareness raising. A pilot program to combat hazardous child labor in agriculture also continued under the SAP.(16)
Strategy and National Action Plan on the Rights of Children, 2009–2013*	Aimed to ensure children's rights were protected according to international conventions such as the UN CRC. Goals included eliminating exploitative child labor.(32)
National Strategy and Action Plan against Trafficking in Human Beings, 2011–2014	Calls for the elimination of trafficking and organized crime in Kosovo through four main strategies: (1) prevention of trafficking, (2) protection of victims and witnesses, (3) prosecution of trafficking crimes, and (4) special protection for children.(6) According to the most recent reports from early 2013, the National Anti-Trafficking Coordinator led regular meetings to review the Plan and revise standard operating procedures. The procedures were aligned with the goal of the new Criminal Code and Criminal Procedure Code to focus on achievable objectives and activities; they included requirements for the police and social workers to communicate with victims' advocates after they have identified potential trafficking victims.(4)
Strategy for the Integration of Roma, Ashkali and Egyptian Communities, 2009–2015	Promotes the protection of the Ashkali, Egyptian, and Roma communities, and calls for their full integration into Kosovar society. Includes actions in various areas including education, and establishes a fund specifically dedicated to improving these communities' access to educational opportunities.(33)

*The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

The report on SAP implementation identified many priority areas in the action plan for which planned activities were behind schedule. These areas included conducting a child labor survey and creating a better functioning CLMS.(16)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Kosovo funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 8). In addition, the Government funds programs that may indirectly benefit children at risk of child labor or who are involved in child labor, including its worst forms.

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
With Me initiative	ILO-IPEC-supported project in which the Ministry of Agriculture, Forestry and Rural Development and local authorities participate that is providing a set of basic services to withdraw and prevent children from child labor in agriculture in certain villages in the municipality of Rahovec.(16)
Hope and Homes for Children‡	MLSW provides partial funding for this shelter, which serves only child trafficking victims, and other shelters that provide care to child and adult victims of forced labor or trafficking.(2, 10, 16)
Support for policy level and up-scaling activities for Combating Child Labor in Kosovo	$87,000 Government of Germany-funded, 1-year project that supported the refinement of child labor policies and the expansion of activities to combat child labor. Provided technical assistance for AI 05/2013 and the SAP implementation report issued in 2013.(29)
Social assistance benefits*‡	MLSW program that provides monthly social assistance benefits to needy families. Benefits are increased per child conditioned on the child's school attendance.(2) In 2013, benefits were given to 29,500 families whose members include an estimated 65,000 children.(2)
Free school meals and text books *‡	MEST program that provides free school meals for children up to age 15, and free textbooks through fifth grade.(2)
Social Inclusion and Improvement of Living Conditions for Roma, Ashkali and Egyptians and Other Vulnerable Groups in Kosovo†‡	Government and foreign donor -funded project implemented by Terre des Hommes and by a local NGO.(34) Focuses on four basic areas: (1) empowerment and advocacy; (2) basic, secondary, and tertiary education; (3) sanitation and housing; and (3) vocational education, employment, and income to improve the lives of minority communities in Kosovo. Based on the Government's Strategy for the Integration of Ashkali, Egyptian and Roma communities (2009–2015).(34)
MOIA Birth registration effort*	MOIA Civil Registration Agency effort that waives fees for many registration services for Kosovo Ashkali, Egyptian, and Roma communities.(10)
Innovations Lab Kosovo*	Municipal authority and UNICEF project to assist families in completing the birth registration process.(35)
EU-funded program to promote education for minorities in Kosovo*	EU-funded and MEST-implemented program to address the lack of access to educational opportunities among the poorest communities by building schools, improving teacher education, training teachers, and working to provide a standardized curriculum for all.(36) In 2013, as a result of this collaboration, MEST introduced Romani language classes in Prizren municipality.(23)
Minority Support Project *	USAID-funded project implemented with the Government; one of its goals is to connect Kosovo minorities with government social assistance. Part of USAID's Strategic Plan in Kosovo.(37-39) USAID also supports implementation of another project focused on Kosovo's education sector and a third project in Northern Kosovo to promote integration by targeting areas of economic integration, community development, and capacity building.(23)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Kosovo.

Despite the programs mentioned above, the report on the SAP noted that programs to combat child labor on the streets were not carried out as planned.(16) Despite the high poverty levels of Ashkali, Egyptian, and Roma communities, these groups benefit the least from MLSW social assistance programs because of low rates of birth registration, which is required for program participation.(33) Since children from these communities sometimes do not benefit from cash transfers and educational support, they are more vulnerable to being involved in child labor. The 2013 budget for MLSW's social assistance programs was $37.4 million, $832,000 less than needed.(2)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Kyrgyz Republic made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government passed a temporary decree on Social Support for Children and Families in Difficult Living Conditions in accordance with the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child. It also adopted a National Program against Human Trafficking for 2013–2016 and an Action Plan for its implementation. The Parliament approved the Sustainable Development Plan for 2013–2017, which addresses child labor through undertaking a child labor survey, strengthening enforcement mechanisms for monitoring child labor, and replicating best practices in improving access of working children to education. However, children in the Kyrgyz Republic continue to engage in child labor in cotton cultivation and in the worst forms of child labor in tobacco cultivation. Interagency coordination on child labor continued to be poor and no data were available on the number of child labor or child trafficking investigations or prosecutions during the reporting period.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in the Kyrgyz Republic are engaged in child labor in cotton cultivation and in the worst forms of child labor in tobacco cultivation.(1-3) Evidence suggests that a limited number of schools required children to harvest tobacco on school grounds.(4, 5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in the Kyrgyz Republic.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	4.5 (48,305)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	84.0
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	4.8
Primary Completion Rate (%)		97.7

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2014.(6)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 3, 2006.(7)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Cultivating cotton, tobacco,† and rice* (1-4, 8-11)
	Coal mining*† (4, 12)
Industry	Brick making* (4, 12)
	Construction, activities unknown* (13)
Services	Transporting, loading, and unloading goods in markets (4, 14)
	Cotton cultivation and other forced labor as a result of human trafficking (5, 10, 15, 16)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of human trafficking* (5, 8-10, 15)
	Sale and distribution of illegal drugs as a result of human trafficking (5, 17)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Kyrgyz Republic has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation

Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 294 of the Labor Code (18)

Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 10 of the Labor Code; Article 15 of the Code on Children (5, 18)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		2005 Prevention and Combating Trafficking in Persons Law(5)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Criminal Code (19)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 22 of the Law on the Universal Military Duty (20, 21)

Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Kyrgyz Republic Law on Education (6)
Free Public Education	Yes		Kyrgyz Republic Law on Education (22)

Section 294 of the Labor Code prohibits harmful and dangerous work, work underground, and work which might harm the health and moral development of children. Decree No. 239 of the Labor Code lays out a detailed list of hazardous work prohibited for children under the age of 18, including the use of pesticides and manufacture of tobacco.(4, 18, 23) Decree No. 548 enumerates specific weight limits permissible for children of legal working age in occupations that require them to carry loads.(9, 23) The Government indicates that a revised list of hazardous occupations prohibited for children in the Kyrgyz Republic is still in review and has yet to be adopted.(4, 8) The draft list was submitted to the Ministry of Social Development and is waiting for action for the second year in a row.(4, 24)

The Criminal Code prohibits adults from involving minors in criminal activity, forced prostitution, slavery and armed conflicts, but does not have a specific article that prohibits adults from using children for drug trafficking or other illicit activities.(4, 19, 25) There is no legal precedent that would indicate that the courts interpret criminal activity to include adults forcing children into drug trafficking.(25)

Although education is free and compulsory for nine years, roughly equivalent to age 16, some children have to pay burdensome, illegal school administrative fees because of government resource constraints.(10, 26, 27) There is also evidence that children with disabilities are denied entry to schools.(10) Refugees, migrants, and noncitizens also have limited access to education because of the country's system of residence registration.(10, 28) These conditions make children more likely to drop out of school and thus more vulnerable to child labor.

In 2013, the Government passed a temporary decree on “Social Support for Children and Families in Difficult Living Conditions.” The decree was developed in accordance with the UN CRC and addresses child labor with a focus on reducing the root causes of child labor.(4, 10) The Ministry of Social Development issued the decree and subsequently submitted legislation to Parliament that would give the program the force of law. The law is awaiting official approval and the President’s signature.(4, 24, 25)

The law states that children cannot be removed from school to work during agricultural harvest periods. However, an exception to the law allows school principals to request permission from the Ministry of Education to allow children to leave school to work on their family farms for a specific period, provided the school agrees to organize makeup classes.(29, 30)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
State Inspectorate on Ecological and Technical Safety	Monitor worksites and refer child laborers to social services.(31) Lead enforcement and cooperate with the Inspectorate for Minors’ Affairs in the Ministry of Internal Affairs, the Prosecutor General’s Office, and regional State District Administration authorities in enforcing child labor laws.(4, 13, 30).
Ministry of Internal Affairs’ Inspectorate for Minors’ Affairs	Enforce criminal laws on child labor, trafficking, and exploitation.(4) Conduct joint raids with the State Inspectorate on Ecological and Technical Safety and with other services, or on own, to find neglected or abused children. Refer children to social institutions for care.(30)
Prosecutor General’s Office	Enforce and apply laws on labor legislation including labor inspections and child labor violations in coordination with the State Labor Inspectorate.(13, 29, 32)
Regional State District Administration	Enforce child labor laws at the district level.(13, 29)

Research found no evidence that law enforcement agencies took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms. There is also a significant lack of coordination between agencies responsible for child labor law enforcement.(4)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, the State Inspectorate on Ecological and Technical Safety employed 23 inspectors charged with investigating all labor issues, including those dealing with child labor violations.(4) The number of inspectors, however, was inadequate to ensure appropriate enforcement of laws against child labor and the Inspectorate did not report any child labor violations in 2013.(4) Although inspectors’ salaries were paid and they were provided with office facilities, the budget was not sufficient to cover transportation and fuel expenses, thus limiting inspections.(4) During the reporting period inspectors did not receive training on child labor.(4)

During the first six month of 2013, the Ministry of Internal Affairs reported no registered cases of child labor.(10) Since many children are self-employed, work with their families, or work in the informal sector, it is difficult for the Government to determine whether work complied with the labor code.(10, 11)

Criminal Law Enforcement

The number of inspectors employed by the Prosecutor General’s Office during the reporting period is not publically available, nor is any information on the number of child labor or child trafficking cases investigated or prosecuted in 2013.(4)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established some mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Ministry of Social Development	Serve as the key government agency for child issues, charged with protecting children and families in difficult conditions, especially child laborers.(4) Child labor issues covered under the Department of Child Protection within the Ministry. Monitor for children engaged in the worst forms of child labor but does not actively enforce the laws.(4)
Ministry of Foreign Affairs	Facilitate efforts against trafficking in persons.(2, 4) Coordinate with international and donor organizations and report on trafficking persons in line with UN conventions.(31)
National Coordination Council on Child Labor (NCCCL)	Focus on developing policies to eliminate child labor, coordinating efforts of key stakeholders and providing recommendations to harmonize national legislation on child labor with international standards.(4) Consist of representatives from government agencies, trade unions and employers' organizations as well as NGOs and international organizations.(4) Child laborers covered under a specific category, called "Children and Families in Difficult Conditions."(2, 33) Not operational in 2013.(4)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of the Kyrgyz Republic has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description

Roadmap for Implementation of the Social Protection Development Strategy for 2012–2014*	As part of the roadmap and in consultation with ILO-IPEC, the Ministry of Social Development is developing the following activities to address child labor issues: formulation of the Guidelines for the Child Labor Monitoring System (CLMS), adoption of a list of hazardous types of work prohibited for children under 18, preparation for replication of the CLMS to other regions of the country, and reinforcement of the National Information and Resource Center on the Worst Forms of Child Labor.(4, 24) Despite piloting the CLMS in 2012, the program did not continue in 2013.(4)

* The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Policy was launched during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of the Kyrgyz Republic funded and participated in programs that include components which aim to eliminate or prevent child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Combating Child Labor through Education in Kyrgyzstan: Capacity building and educational opportunities for school drop-outs	$191,903 One UN Fund-funded, 2-year project that assists children in migrant settlements around Bishkek to return to school.(24, 36, 37) Includes workshops on child labor, monitoring on the worst forms of child labor, awareness raising activities for parents, and educational opportunities for children.(24, 37)
Combating Child Labor in Central Asia – Commitment becomes Action (PROACT CAR Phase III)	$1.4 million Government of Germany-funded, 5-year child labor project that works to mainstream child labor issues into national policies and legislation, build the capacity of stakeholders, and provide direct services to children withdrawn from the worst forms of child labor.(24)

Program	Description
Implementing Practices to Address Child Labor in Tobacco in Kyrgyzstan (IMPACT)†	$709,943 Eliminating Child Labor in Tobacco Growing (ECLT) Foundation-funded, 2-year project that works to eliminate child labor in tobacco growing communities in the Southern Kyrgyz Republic.(38, 39) Objectives include preventing 3,000 children from entering child labor and improving access to education, water, and sanitation.(39)

Includes weekly or bi-weekly family consultations with social workers who observe the children, where parents of child laborers are provided with information on the hazards of early employment.(40)
Social Support for Children and Families in Difficult Living Conditions†‡	Social workers monitor places where children may be working, with a primary focus on bazaars. This was created in 2013 in conjunction with a temporary decree focused on reducing the root causes of child labor. The decree indicates that social workers will assist with returning children to school and ensuring sure that they are no longer working.(4, 25)
World Day Against Child Labor: "No to child labor in domestic work"†	Ministry of Social Development and ILO-IPEC media campaign for the World Day Against Child Labor in 2013.(31) Worked to increase general awareness of child labor in domestic work in Kyrgyzstan through mass media campaigns.(41)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of the Kyrgyz Republic.

In 2013, Lebanon made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government adopted the National Action Plan on the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor and carried out a National Child Labor Survey. The Government also initiated an education program for Syrian refugee children and continued to provide funding for the country's poverty alleviation program, which included paying school registration fees on behalf of 19,000 children from households living in extreme poverty. However, children in Lebanon continue to engage in child labor in agriculture and in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation. Labor law enforcement is weakened due to a lack of resources. In addition, enforcement agencies do not maintain enforcement data. Furthermore, gaps in Lebanese law prevent officials from entering private homes, making children who work in these settings unprotected and vulnerable to child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Lebanon engage in child labor in agriculture and in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation.(1-7) Refugee children and Lebanese children work in agriculture, mainly in the districts of Akkar, Hermel, and Baalbek.(6, 8-11) They often work without pay alongside their families and often do not attend school during harvesting and planting seasons.(10, 11) Working in the streets is especially common for foreign-born children, including Palestinian, Iraqi, Egyptian, Kurdish, Dom (an ethnic minority), and increasingly, Syrian children.(1, 3, 5, 12-16)

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Lebanon. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

There is evidence that children working on the streets may increasingly become victims of trafficking. Sometimes, they are forced into commercial sexual exploitation and illicit work by criminal gangs and acquaintances.(1-4, 13) A 2011 study found that boys working on the street are at a high risk of sexual exploitation by peers and by men.(13)

Lebanon is a source country for children, especially girls, trafficked for commercial sexual exploitation, domestic service, and criminal activity.(7, 11, 13, 27) Lebanon is also a destination country for children trafficked for commercial sexual exploitation.(13) Syrian girls, particularly, are trafficked to Lebanon for the purpose of commercial sexual exploitation under the guise of fake or temporary marriage.(7)

The Syrian conflict has caused a large influx of refugees to Lebanon. The United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) reported that as of mid-2013, nearly half of the 800,000 Syrians who have sought refuge in Lebanon are children.(16, 23, 30) These children have limited access to education and other services. Their families face extreme poverty, forcing many of these children to work and making them vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor.(5-7, 9, 31, 32) Agencies estimate that the number of school-age Syrian refugee children in Lebanon is likely to exceed the number of Lebanese children enrolled in the public school system soon. Reports indicate that Lebanese schools would have to double their capacity to absorb the demand.(6, 33-35)

An increasing problem noted during the reporting period was the recruitment and exploitation of children in political protests and militant activities in North Lebanon and some areas of Beirut.(5) Child labor is common in Palestinian refugee camps, where some children work as armed guards.(5, 26, 36)

Violence and the protracted nature of these camps have caused the Government to block the establishment of formal refugee camps for Syrian refugees. As a result, Syrian refugee children have limited access to education and other services, customarily provided in refugee camps, making these children more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor.(6, 36)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Lebanon has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

*No conscription or no standing military.

Lebanon's Higher Council for Childhood (HCC), funded by the Government and the UN, continued implementing a project to identify gaps in the child protection legal framework.(3)

The Lebanese Constitution guarantees the right to compulsory, free education for children. Law No. 686 of 1998, however, limits free education to Lebanese citizens under 12.(43, 45) Lebanese law only confers citizenship to children whose fathers are Lebanese nationals.(1, 44) Formal school drop-out rates in Lebanon are high because of education-related expenses such as transportation, books, and uniforms.(3, 46, 47) The denial of free education to many children and these education-related expenses may prevent families from sending children to school, increasing their vulnerability to child labor. In addition, children ages 12-14 are particularly vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, as they are not required to be in school, but are not legally permitted to work.(3)

Lebanese law is not consistent in its treatment of children working as beggars. In the Penal Code, child begging is criminalized.(12) Conversely, Law 422 stipulates that child begging endangers children and that child beggars are entitled to protective measures.(3, 12) However, because of an insufficient number of juvenile protection facilities (especially for non-Lebanese children), child beggars often end up detained in adult jails while authorities determine how to address their specific situations.(12, 13, 25)

Lebanon

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Inspections of child labor at informal work sites are only authorized if a complaint is filed and the accused fails to respond to a summons from the Child Labor Unit (CLU).(3, 48) No mechanism exists to investigate complaints of child domestic labor, since social workers—the only officials allowed to enter a private home—may only assess the overall welfare of the family and not the workplace conditions.(48)

According to limited sources, penalties for violating child labor and other related laws are not sufficient to reduce the problem.(5)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Lebanon has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MOL)	Enforce child labor laws through workplace inspections.(19)
Ministry of Justice's Internal Security Forces (ISF)	Enforce laws regarding the worst forms of child labor through the Morals Protection Bureau.(3, 5, 21)
Ministry of Social Affairs (MOSA)	Refer children identified by the Child Labor Unit (CLU) to protective institutions such as shelters.(11)
Ministry of Justice's Union for Protection of Juveniles in Lebanon (UPEL)	Refer ill-treated children, children in conflict with the law, and child victims of human trafficking and other forms of worst forms of child labor to services. (3, 11) Coordinate juvenile justice procedures and advise juvenile court judges on referring child labor victims to appropriate social services. Has six offices throughout Lebanon.(11, 21, 27)

Law enforcement agencies in Lebanon took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

As of December 2013, the Ministry of Labor (MOL) employed 109 labor inspectors, 25 of whom were designated to focus on child labor inspections. Limited evidence suggests however, that many labor inspectors lack training in child labor issues and do not enforce child labor law in their inspections.(5, 9, 49) Additionally, the MOL does not have the resources for office equipment or the transportation necessary for inspectors to enforce child labor laws.(5, 49)

Officials state that estimated 4,000–5,000 children are removed from labor per year and are referred to NGOs and municipalities for services. However, the MOL does not maintain statistics on the number of inspections completed and reports indicate that continued political gridlock slows the administrative procedures necessary to enforce child labor laws.(5, 24)

Criminal Law Enforcement

The Internal Security Forces (ISF) employed nine investigators to enforce criminal laws against child trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation who carried out four investigations involving the worst forms of child labor.(5)

During the reporting period the Union for Protection of Juveniles in Lebanon provided training to some of the 26 ISF Morals Protection Bureau enforcement officials on how to handle child trafficking cases.(5) Various government agencies, including the ISF and the Ministries of Justice, Interior, and Social Affairs, participated in a 3-year training program with international and grassroots organizations, to enhance Lebanon's anti-trafficking effort.(28) In March of the reporting period, the group presented a Standard Operating Procedure (SOP) Guide. The SOP presents measures to identify, protect, legally assist and return trafficking victims to their home countries; the document is awaiting Cabinet approval.(28) The Ministry of Justice (MOJ) prosecuted six cases of trafficking of children.(27) However, the number of investigations does not seem sufficient to address the scope of the problem effectively.(5)

The government allocated minimal resources to protecting victims and did not have victim protection policies in place.(7) A source indicates that victims of trafficking are not referred to protection services; instead they are detained for unlawful acts committed as a direct result of being trafficked, such as immigration violations or prostitution.(7)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Lebanon has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
MOL's National Committee to Combat Child Labor	Implement MOL's national strategy to combat child labor and draft child labor-related amendments to the Labor Law.(3, 50) Comprises representatives from relevant ministries including Ministries of Social Affairs, Public Health, Agriculture and Justice; the ISF; worker and employer groups; and civil society organizations.(5, 11, 21, 51, 52)
MOL's Child Labor Unit (CLU)	Raise awareness, coordinate communication between agencies, establish standard practices, and recommend changes to law.(52)
The Inter-Ministerial Task Force on Trafficking	Coordinate efforts against human trafficking, including child trafficking.(41)

The National Committee to Combat Child Labor was active and met a number of times during 2013.(5)

The UN coordinates efforts to address needs of children affected by the Syrian refugee crisis in Lebanon and maintains interagency standards for child protection. Its agents identify crucial concerns, especially factors that make children vulnerable to child labor, and makes recommendations on the use of resources, including referral services.(6, 53)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Lebanon has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan on the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2013–2016)†	Establishes strategies for addressing the worst forms of child labor. Includes a National Awareness Strategy to be carried out by the ILO. Full funding for the $23 million implementation budget has not been secured.(5, 54)
National Social Development Strategy	Establishes a plan for a comprehensive social, health, and educational program.(3, 55) Includes the protection of working children and the implementation of HCC's strategy to address the needs of street children.(56)
Ministry of Economy's (MOEs) Education Sector Development Plan*	Aims to improve retention and educational achievement in areas with high drop-out rates. Funded by the EU.(3)
MOSA's Higher Council for Childhood (HCC)	Implements children's rights policies, including combating child labor.(1, 27)

*The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Policy was launched during the reporting period.

In March, various government agencies, including the ISF and the Ministries of Justice, Interior, and Social Affairs, presented a draft of an Anti-Trafficking National Action Plan, a multilevel response model that outlines how the plan should be, who would enforce it, and by whom each recommendation would be implemented. It also calls for a national database to facilitate counter-trafficking activities.(28) The Plan awaits Cabinet approval.(28)

The Government also has a draft National Action Plan for Human Rights. The Plan provides recommendations on child labor coordination between relevant authorities. It also proposes legislative and executive procedures on 21 human rights topics, including children's rights.(57, 58) This Plan awaits approval by Parliament.(57)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Lebanon funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
No Lost Generation†	UN and Government joint effort that addresses needs of Syrian refugee children to increase education access, provide a protective environment, and provide life-skill building opportunities.(5, 59)
National poverty alleviation program‡*	Funded by Government, the Italian Foreign Ministry, the World Bank, and the Canadian Embassy, MOSA program that pays school registration fees for 19,000 children from households living in extreme poverty.(3, 5)
Education Program for Syrian Refugee Children†	MOE, UNHCR, and UNICEF supported War Child Holland initiative that provides education to qualified refugee children in 13 public schools in Beirut and Mount Lebanon. Supports second shift courses and informal educational activities designed to give students the necessary skills to enroll in public schools.(60)
National Child Labor Survey†	USDOL-funded and implemented by MOL and the Central Administration of Statistics during the second half of 2013 in collaboration with ILO-IPEC. Aims to make information on the scope and incidence of child labor in Lebanon more accessible to policymakers and the public.(5)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

NGOs and UN agencies are the main providers of children’s social protection services, including for child victims of trafficking.(13, 61) Because of the lack of funding, government entities such as the ISF and UPEL depend on NGOs and UN agency providers to make service referrals for children.(13, 61) In addition, the scarcity of shelters for child trafficking victims results in some children being placed in juvenile detention centers.(13) The lack of shelters and resources to effectively handle child labor and trafficking cases puts children at a heightened risk of further exploitation. NGOs and officials reported that the lack of services make them less likely to pursue prosecution of cases.(13, 27)

UNHCR is working on prevention, mobilization, and awareness to reduce the vulnerability of guardians of children who are vulnerable to child labor.(5) The UN’s current goal is to provide educational opportunities to at least 100,000 Syrian refugees in 2014.(5) Lebanon lacks the programs to address child labor in agriculture, domestic service, and commercial sexual exploitation specifically, sometimes as a result of human trafficking.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, Lesotho made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government fully funded the Lesotho Child Grant Program and the OVC Scholarship Program, allocating $3.6 million and $2.9 million, respectively, in their 2013 and 2014 budgets. The Government also revived the District Child Protection Teams to decentralize efforts to address the worst forms of child labor in the informal sector and rural areas. However, children in Lesotho continue to engage in the worst forms of child labor in cattle herding and in child labor in domestic service. Lesotho law does not prohibit the use of children in illicit activities, and a gap between the compulsory education age and the minimum age for employment leaves children unprotected. A lack of government resources for enforcement and social programs also remains a major challenge to combat child labor in Lesotho.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Lesotho are engaged in the worst forms of child labor in cattle herding and in child labor in domestic service.(1) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Lesotho.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	28.1 (124,632)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	80.7
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	25.3
Primary Completion Rate (%)		72.5

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2014.(2)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 2, 2000.(3)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Herding animals, including cattle (1, 4, 5)
	Farming, including planting and harvesting (6-8)
Services	Domestic work* (1, 9)
	Street work, including vending* (10)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of human trafficking (5, 11, 12)
	Use of children in illicit activities,* such as burglary and theft (10)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Lesotho has an HIV/AIDS rate of 23 per cent, the third-highest rate in the world.(7, 12) The prevalence of HIV/AIDS contributes to the approximately 364,000, or 34 percent of children in Lesotho who were orphaned as of 2011.(13) Children, mostly HIV/AIDS orphans driven by poverty, migrate to urban areas to engage in commercial sexual exploitation for survival.(7, 11, 14)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Lesotho has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 124(1) of the Labor Code (15); Article 228(1) of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act (CPWA) (16)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 125(1) of the Labor Code (15); Article 230(1) of the CPWA (16)
List of Hazardous Occupations Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 230(3) and 231 of the CPWA (16)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 9(e) of the Constitution (17)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 5 of the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Act (18)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 77 of CPWA (16); Articles 10–14 of the Sexual Offenses Act (19)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	N/A*
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	13	Education Act of 2010(8, 20)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 3 of the Education Act (8, 20); Section 22(k) of CPWA(16)

*No conscription or no standing military.(21, 22)

Lesotho laws are not completely consistent with international standards regarding child labor. The labor code does not provide protection for children working in the informal sector, leaving children working in non-contractual labor such as herding and agriculture unprotected.(5) Lesotho's CPWA does not extend protections against hazardous labor to children employed in domestic service, street vending, or agriculture.(16, 23) Lesotho also does not have a law that prohibits children from engaging in illicit activities.(24) In addition, although there are maximum penalties for violations of the CPWA, the Act does not set minimum penalties for employing underage children in night work, industrial undertakings, or hazardous work for first-time offenders.(16)

The Government of Lesotho does not have a law prohibiting the recruitment of children under age 18 for military service. However, the Lesotho Defense Force does have a policy prohibiting the recruitment of children under age 18.(25, 26)

Education is compulsory in Lesotho until the age of 13, but the minimum age for work is set at 15. This standard makes children at age 14 particularly vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, as they are not required to be in school but are not legally permitted to work.(2, 7, 15)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Employment and Labor (MOEL)	Enforce laws relating to child labor and hazardous child labor. Assess child labor law compliance as part of general labor inspections.(1)
National Police, Child and Gender Protection Unit (CGPU)	Investigate child labor violations and enforce child labor laws, including those related to hazardous and forced child labor, commercial sexual exploitation of children, and child trafficking.(1)
The Public Prosecutor's Office	Prosecute child labor law offenders.(1)
Children's Court	Enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor.(1)

Labor law enforcement agencies in Lesotho took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms. However, research found no evidence that criminal law enforcement agencies took such actions.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, inspectors carried out 1,000 labor inspections, a decrease from 1,200 inspections in 2012.(1) The MOEL did not report child labor violations or issue citations during the reporting period. Funding for inspections was inadequate, and inspectors lacked adequate office facilities, transportation, fuel, and other necessities.(1, 5)

With support from the ILO, the MOEL held three workshops to train labor inspectors on how to identify child labor in the workplace during the reporting period.(1) However, the MOEL indicated that the training was not sufficient because it did not provide inspectors with skills on how to conduct inspections in the informal sector.(1)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2013, the National Police, Child and Gender Protection Unit (CGPU) employed 133 police officers. However, it did not identify or investigate cases involving the worst forms of child labor.(1) The CGPU police officers did not receive training on the worst forms of child labor.(1) The CGPU does not have guaranteed funding; rather, it receives funding from the general operation budget of the national police.(1) While the Government of Lesotho does not have a referral system for children identified during inspections, the CGPU reported that child victims are referred to appropriate NGO-supported social services(1, 5). The Government also provides free medical services at government-run hospitals and clinics to victims of child labor.(1) Statistics were not available on the number of prosecutions relating to the worst forms of child labor. The Children's Court did not hear any child labor cases and there were no child labor-related convictions during the reporting period.(1)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Task Team (NTT)	Implement the National Action Plan on the Elimination of Child Labor (APEC). Led by the MOEL's Child Labor Unit and the NTT (formerly the Program Advisory Committee on Child Labor). Comprises representatives from government ministries, trade unions, NGOs, and international organizations.(1, 14)
Multi-Sectoral Committee on Combating Trafficking in Persons (MSC)	Serve as lead body on trafficking in persons and approve legislation and policies to prevent human trafficking. Chaired by the Commissioner of Refugees and the MSC. Comprises government ministries, local government, and representatives from NGOs, international organizations, and faith-based organizations.(27)
District Child Protections Teams (DCPT)	Coordinate child protection matters, including child labor, at the district level. Led by the Ministry of Social Development. Comprises representatives from the government, business, NGOs, and community support groups.(1)

Lesotho

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2013, the National Task Team (NTT) held a workshop on the implementation of the National Action Plan for the Elimination of Child Labor (APEC). However, the NTT did not fully serve its function as a coordinating agency to eliminate child labor in Lesotho.(1, 9). The MSC has met three times since November 2013.(28) During the reporting period, the Government revived the District Child Protection Teams (DCPT), decentralizing its efforts to address the worst forms of child labor in order to reach the informal sector and rural areas more effectively.(1)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Lesotho has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Education Sector Strategy Plan (2005–2015)*	Aims to improve access, equity, and quality of education, as well as to reduce school fees and provide school meals to vulnerable children.(29)
National Policy on OVC	Safeguards the rights of OVC to an education; promotes access apprenticeships and vocational and life skills of orphans and vulnerable children; and implements child labor prevention programs.(28)
Lesotho United Nations Development Assistance Plan (2013–2017)†	Includes strategies to reduce poverty and attain Millennium Development Goals in Lesotho.(30) The Framework promotes education for children, supports youth employment and builds the Government's capacity to provide social welfare services to vulnerable children.(30)
ILO–Decent Work Country Program (2012–2017)	Includes a child labor component to establish a child labor unit within the labor inspectorate in order to address child labor in the informal sector and to conduct a national child labor survey. Other objectives include employment creation, social protection coverage for citizens, and social dialogue among the tripartite partners.(7)

* The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Policy was launched during the reporting period.

The Government has drafted a APEC.(8) Although APEC has not yet been adopted, in 2013, the Government assigned APEC activities to agencies responsible for its implementation; developed a timeline for implementation; and came up with activities to be carried out.(1) Under APEC the Government, with assistance from the ILO, developed guidelines on herding and a definition of child labor in the herding sector.(1) The guidelines prohibit night work for herders under age 13 and require that herd boys be monitored, clothed, fed, and remunerated.(31) The guidelines also provide protection for children working in agriculture in ploughing, harvesting, and the application of pesticides. However, the guideline's protections for herding and ploughing only apply to children under age 15, and children ages 13-15 are permitted to plough and herd animals under adult supervision.(31) In addition, the guidelines permit children ages 13 and older to apply pesticides.(31) In January 2014, the Government presented the draft National Anti-Trafficking Plan to the MSC for review. The plan is pending review and adoption.(27) Lesotho's UN Development Assistance Plan was also launched during the reporting period.(30)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Lesotho funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Awareness-Raising Campaign on Human Trafficking*	Department of Gender and Youth program, run with support from an NGO. Conducted public awareness raising on human trafficking and gender based violence in rural communities.(5, 27) Translated the anti-trafficking law into local languages and distributed them at border posts.(5)
Awareness Raising for Herd Boys	Ministry of Gender and Youth program that conducted workshops for herd boys. Workshops provided information on trafficking issues, health, HIV/AIDS, and sexual reproductive health.(5)
Lesotho Child Grant Program*‡	Government-provided direct-cash transfers to OVCs to improve their living standards, increase their school enrollment, and improve their nutrition and health. Amount provided to each household increased based on the number of OVCs.(14) Government provided full funding for the program, allocating $3.6 million in the 2013/14 budget.(1)

Program	Description
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues Project	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016 established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010. Aims to improve the evidence base on child labor through data collection and research in Lesotho.(32)
OVC Scholarship Program*‡	Government program that pays for the tuition, uniforms, supplies, and boarding fees for OVC. Provided full funding for the program in 2013-2014 budget, benefitting 20,000 children in 2013.(1)
Trafficking in Persons Training	State Department funded project implemented by World Vision. Provides training on trafficking in persons to government officials, law enforcement, journalists, community leaders, and the public. Awareness raising was also conducted via television and radio.(27) Ended in September 2013.(27)

*The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Lesotho.

Although the Government of Lesotho provided full funding for the Child Grant and OVC programs, research found no evidence that it carried out programs during the reporting period to assist children engaged in domestic service, commercial sexual exploitation, livestock herding, and street work.(1)

In 2013, Liberia made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government published data from its national Child Labor Survey conducted in 2010. Additionally, the Government launched the National Steering Committee on Child Labor and began implementing a new National Action Plan on trafficking in persons, which addresses child labor. However, children in Liberia continue to engage in child labor in agriculture and mining. The Government has yet to pass into law the Decent Work Bill, which includes a list of hazardous occupations prohibited for children, and child labor law enforcement efforts are still inadequate.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Liberia are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture and mining.(1-4) On some rubber plantations, children are employed to tap rubber trees, clear brush, and carry buckets.(1, 3, 5) Children are engaged in mining natural resources, including alluvial diamonds.(1-4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Liberia.

	Domestic work, street vending, farming, and begging, as a result of human trafficking (4, 17-20)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Liberia

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Although security concerns remain along Liberia's border with Côte d'Ivoire, the UN High Commissioner for Refugees reports the situation is stable, and Ivorian refugees continue to return to Cote d'Ivoire.(21) However, evidence exists that some Ivorian refugee girls engage in commercial sexual exploitation.(17) Additionally, children are trafficked to Liberia from Sierra Leone, as well as from Liberia to Côte d'Ivoire, Guinea, and Nigeria for domestic work, street vending, commercial sexual exploitation, farming, and begging.(20)

The school infrastructure in Liberia remains lacking and faces continued budgetary and resource constraints.(20, 22, 23) The limited number of schools in some areas impedes access to education and increases the risk of children engaging in the worst forms of child labor.(20, 22, 23) Sources indicate that sexual abuse by male teachers in schools may be a barrier to girls' education.(24, 25) Moreover, the UN has noted that victims of sexual violence in schools often have extended absences or drop out.(26) Liberian parents are required by law to register their infants within 14 days of birth. However, sources indicate that fewer than 5 percent of births are registered for birth certificates, which may affect access to education.(1, 27)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Liberia has ratified some key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Free Public Education	Yes		Article 3 of the Children's Law (29)

*No conscription or no standing military.

The Government has not ratified the CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child

Pornography.(36) The Labor Law sets the minimum age for work at 16 for the agriculture sector. The minimum age for work in the industrial sector is 18.(28) However, children younger than age 16 are allowed to work, provided they are not working during school hours and the employer can demonstrate that they are attending school regularly and have a basic education.(28) The Labor Law does not protect children in domestic service. Additionally, there are no penalties for violations of child labor laws, which inhibits prosecution.(12, 28) However, at times, perpetrators can be prosecuted under the Penal Code's child endangerment provision.(37) The Decent Work Bill is still pending legislative approval.(9, 38) The bill would provide additional protections for children, including a hazardous work list.(4) However, the bill's list of hazardous work is not comprehensive, and does not include all activities that are prohibited under international standards.(34) Also, although education is free, in practice, many children still pay school fees to attend school, which may prevent some children from attending school.(1, 8, 13, 38)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Justice's Women and Children Protection Section (WCPS)	Enforce laws relating to violations involving the worst forms of child labor, including trafficking.(37, 39)
Liberian National Police's Anti-Trafficking Unit	Enforce trafficking laws.(27)
Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization (BIN)	Enforce trafficking laws in external cases.(9)
Ministry of Labor (MOL)	Enforce labor laws, including child labor laws.(9)
Liberian Transnational Crime Unit	Coordinate responses to international organized crime, including monitoring and prosecuting criminal violations involving the worst forms of child labor as they relate to trafficking and the use of children in illicit activities.(40)

Criminal law enforcement agencies in Liberia took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms. However, research found no evidence that labor law enforcement agencies took such actions.

Labor Law Enforcement

The National Commission on Child Labor (NACOMAL) and several ministries, including MOL, generally perform preliminary investigations on child labor cases. However, MOL's budget is not adequate, and there are only 15 labor inspectors in Liberia, which is less than one per district.(8) In addition, research found no information on the number of labor inspections conducted, child labor violations found, or citations and penalties issued by the Government in 2013. Child labor cases requiring further investigation or possible prosecution are referred as child endangerment cases to Ministry of Justice's WCPS.(4, 9)

Criminal Law Enforcement

WCPS has approximately 266 investigators.(9) In 2013, there were no child labor prosecutions, convictions, or penalties. A source indicates that, during the reporting period, WCPS processed cases of child endangerment, including some child labor cases.(9) However, research found that agencies responsible for enforcement efforts lack adequate resources. Moreover, the ILO and other stakeholders have noted that severe budgetary constraints, a lack of resources (such as computer equipment), and staff training impede the efforts of NACOMAL and WCPS to combat the worst forms of child labor.(4, 9, 20, 41)

In 2013, the Government rescued 34 children from trafficking. The Government also investigated two suspected traffickers and, at the time of writing, the cases were pending trial.(27) During the reporting period, law enforcement agents received anti-trafficking training, and the Government incorporated anti-trafficking training into its orientation curriculum for all new police officers.(27)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Commission on Child Labor (NACOMAL)	Monitor child labor issues and direct child labor policies. Headed by the MOL, is composed of representatives from 16 other organizations, including NGOs and international and civil society organizations.(4, 42) Objectives include reforming national child labor laws and designing a national child labor database.(13, 42)
National Steering Committee on Child Labor (NSC)	Advocate eliminating child labor, especially its worst forms. Chaired by the MOL, is composed of NACOMAL, government ministries, private sector representatives, and NGOs.(38) Objectives include Liberia's ratification of ILO C. 138.(38)
Child Protection Network	Coordinate child protection efforts through monthly meetings to discuss child protection issues, including child labor and trafficking. Chaired by the Ministry of Gender and Development, is composed of the MOL, the Ministry of Health and Social Welfare, WCPS, the National Police, civil society organizations, and several NGOs.(4) Also responsible for coordinating referrals for provision of services to child victims, with support from international and national organizations.(9, 13) In addition, manage seven community child welfare committees in different counties that monitor children's issues at the community level and make referrals to other organizations.(13)
Anti-Human-Trafficking Task Force (TTF)	Coordinate anti-trafficking activities. Chaired by the MOL and includes the Commissioner of BIN, the National Police, and representatives from the Ministries of Justice, Foreign Affairs, and Internal Affairs.(9)

During the reporting period, the Government launched the new NSC and held its first meeting in August 2013.(9, 38) In May 2013, the MOL, in partnership with ILO-IPEC, organized a 4-day child labor conference that included more than 60 representatives from government ministries, civil society organizations, and international partners. Participants developed recommendations for future Government efforts against child labor, including ratifying ILO C. 138 and conducting another child labor survey.(8) In 2013, TTF held regular bi-monthly meetings.(27)

*The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Policy was launched during the reporting period.

In 2013, the Government released data from a national Child Labor Survey that was conducted by the Liberia Institute of Statistics and Geo-Information Services in 2010. The report, which was supported by the ILO, provides information on the scope of the child labor situation in Liberia.(9, 10, 53) Additionally, the Government, in partnership with the ILO, released a report on youth employment, including children ages 15–17, titled “Labor Market Transitions of Young Women and Men in Liberia.”(9) The Liberian National Youth Policy has been renamed the Liberia Youth Act and was passed by the House in September 2013; as of the writing of this report, it awaited passage by the Senate.(51, 52)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Liberia participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
National Child Labor Survey†	Joint Government-ILO survey that provides information on the scope of the child labor situation in Liberia. The survey was conducted by the Liberia Institute of Statistics and Geo-Information Services in 2010, and the results were published in 2013.(9, 10, 53)

Liberia Agriculture Investment Program*	$175 million multi-donor program that aims to enhance household livelihoods in the agriculture sector by building linkages with markets and improving rural infrastructure, which may have a positive effect on reducing child labor.(54)
Actions to Reduce Child Labor	$6 million, USDOL-funded, 4-year project implemented by Winrock International to combat child labor in the rubber sector.(55) Aims to withdraw and prevent 10,100 children from engaging in the worst forms of child labor by providing education, as well as livelihoods support to 3,700 vulnerable families. Implemented in collaboration with local rubber companies.(55)

Labor constrained households include households in which the majority of household members are unable to work for reasons such as disability.(60) Targets 5,000 households, and each beneficiary household receives between $10 and $25 per month.(60)
Educating and Protecting Vulnerable Children in Family Settings Project*	USAID-funded, 4-year project aims to enhance protection systems for vulnerable children, including improving access to primary education and health services.(61)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

Although Liberia has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem.

In 2013, Macedonia made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government of Macedonia adopted a 3-year Action Plan for Children on the Streets and released an assessment of the country's anti-trafficking efforts. Additionally, the Ministry of Labor and Social Policy opened a fourth day center that provides services, including education, to children working in the streets. However, children continue to engage in child labor in begging and the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation. The number of day centers and Centers for Social Work (CSWs) remains insufficient to provide shelter and other services to all vulnerable children in need of assistance. Some children, particularly those from minority ethnic groups, continue to lack access to education due to factors such as the associated costs of schooling and lack of identity documents.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Macedonia are engaged in child labor in begging and the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation.(1) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Macedonia.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	9.9 (30,052)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	84.7
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	11.5
Primary Completion Rate (%)		94.0

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2009, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2014.(2)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 3, 2005.(3)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, activities unknown* (4)
	Begging (1, 5, 6)
Services	Selling small items in open markets, bars and restaurants, and in the streets (1, 5)
	Cleaning vehicle windshields* (1)
	Domestic service as a result of trafficking* (4)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of trafficking (1, 7, 8)
	Forced begging* (1, 9)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Some children in Macedonia engage in begging at the behest of their parents or other family members, while other children are forced into begging.(1, 9) The majority of children involved in work on the streets, including begging, are of the Roma ethnicity.(8, 10) Girls, particularly Roma girls, are trafficked for fraudulent marriages, which may result in them being sexually exploited or forced into domestic service.(4, 6) Girls in Eastern and Central Macedonia have been identified as being at particularly high risk for trafficking.(6)

Macedonia

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

The Government reported to the UN Committee on the Rights of the Child in 2009 that school attendance was lowest among the Roma population.(11, 12) Statistics published by UNICEF in 2013 state that 14 percent of Roma children do not attend primary school, and 62 percent of Roma adolescents do not attend secondary school.(10) This is due, in part, to their lacking identity cards, which are needed to access education and other social services.(8) Not attending school increases children’s vulnerability to involvement in the worst forms of child labor. The 2008–2009 UNICEF-sponsored study found some families struggled with the cost of school supplies.(4, 11)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Macedonia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

*No conscription or no standing military.

Research found that children working in the informal sector do not have the same protections under child labor laws and regulations as children working in the formal sector. Moreover, the ILO Committee of Experts has noted that minimum age for employment provisions in the Labor Relations Act do not apply to work in the informal economy, in which most child labor occurs in the country.(23)

By law, school instruction in Macedonia is offered in Macedonian, Albanian, Romani, Turkish, and Serbian, and the number of minority group children receiving instruction in their native tongue has increased.(8, 10) Macedonia’s Criminal Code prohibits the use of children in organized begging. However, research found no legal prohibition on the use of children in illicit activities.(16, 24)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Policy's (MLSP's) State Labor Inspectorate	Enforce labor laws, including child labor laws.(9) According to Government reporting to the ILO, inspectors conduct a minimum of 60 inspection visits per month. Must carry out at least one inspection visit per year at enterprises in most sectors, including industry, agriculture, and construction.(25) Are authorized to issue on-the-spot citations for labor law violations. Transmit cases of suspected criminal law violations to the Public Prosecutor.(25-27).
MLSP's Office of Social Inclusion	Work with the police to seek out street children in need of assistance and track cases of forced child labor.(6)
Ombudsman's Office	Investigate violations of children's rights and accept complaints of such violations.(9)
Office of the National Referral Mechanism	Accept reports of potential victims of trafficking, including children. Alert agencies to investigate the allegations and provide social services for victims.(9, 15) Children found to be victims of child trafficking are removed from the situation, placed in shelters for trafficked children, and given immediate medical and psychological care.(9)
Ministry of Interior (MOI)	Enforce criminal laws. The role of a special police unit of the MOI is to investigate organized crime, corruption, and trafficking.(9) Address child labor in begging and forced begging in the country. MLSP Office of Social Inclusion and MOI "Mobile Teams" made up of one plain clothes police officer and one social worker, seek out street children in order to discourage such activity and encourage school attendance.(6, 9)
Public Prosecutor's Office	Prosecute possible criminal law violations, including those involving worst forms of child labor.(27) The Office has an Organized Crime and Corruption Unit with five prosecutors dedicated to cases of child abuse and worst forms of child labor. The Skopje Basic Prosecutor's Office has eight prosecutors dedicated to child abuse cases.(9)

Law enforcement agencies in Macedonia took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

As of 2013, there were 110 labor inspectors responsible for all labor violations, including child labor.(9) Data from the Ministry of Labor and Social Policy (MLSP) inspections are not regularly shared among offices, as there is no central computerized database.(25) During 2013, the Inspectorate did not remove any children from child labor situations during its inspections.(9) The Ombudsman's Office reported that there were no official complaints of child labor in 2012, the most recent year such information is available.(28)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2013, the special police unit of the Ministry of Interior (MOI) had five officers dedicated to investigating crimes involving child trafficking and other criminal worst forms of child labor. The Ministry also had 80 officers dedicated to enforcing laws against child abuse and exploitation throughout the country's 38 police districts.(9) Additionally, five mixed mobile teams of MLSP social workers and police searched the streets for children begging and children who might be victims of trafficking.(6) Social workers and police completed anti-trafficking courses as well as training on how to identify victims of labor exploitation.(6, 7)

As a result of the mobile teams' patrols, 50 children were removed from the streets, and 11 possible cases of trafficking were identified and passed along for investigation.(6) During 2013, MLSP removed 20 children from eight families, revoking parental rights due to abuse and negligence. These children were placed with foster families or in institutions for homeless children.(9)

The Government reported nine cases of confirmed child trafficking in 2013, involving a total of nine victims. One child was a foreign citizen and the rest were from Macedonia.(6, 9) The children were trafficked for labor and sexual exploitation (one child), sexual exploitation (four children), and fraudulent marriage (four children).(6) Five of the children were trafficked internally and the rest were trafficked abroad. The cases were referred to the

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Special Prosecutor's Office for Organized Crime and Corruption and trials are ongoing.(9) During 2013, there were convictions against six defendants for child trafficking related to cases that began in 2010 and 2011.(9) All the defendants received prison sentences.(6) The Prosecutor's Office, however, suffers from underfunding.(9) Trafficking cases can require complex and lengthy investigations and evidence gathering. Consequently, sometimes trafficking cases linger in the court system for years without conclusion.(9) Research did not find information on criminal law enforcement actions involving cases of commercial sexual exploitation that were not the result of trafficking. Moreover, the UN Committee on the Rights of the Child has noted that data on crimes involving other types of worst forms of child labor besides trafficking are unavailable.(29)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Commission for the Protection of the Rights of Children	Coordinate efforts to protect children's rights and provide them services in line with the UN Committee on the Rights of the Child.(5, 9) Protect against child labor.(9) Develop and oversee implementation of the National Plan of Action on the Rights of the Child.(4)
National Coordination Body for Implementation of the Action Plan for Prevention and Countering Sexual Abuse of Children and Pedophilia	Implement the National Action Plan. Led by MLSP and made up of representatives from relevant ministries and NGOs.(4, 15) A hotline it established for reporting sexual abuse of children and children on the street remains active.(9, 15, 30)
National Coordination Body for Protection of Children From Abuse and Neglect	Oversee implementation of the National Action Plan for Prevention and Countering Abuse and Neglect of Children.(30)
National Commission for Trafficking in Persons and Illegal Migration	Coordinate the work of all institutions involved in combating trafficking in persons.(28) Chaired by the National Anti-Trafficking Coordinator.(31) Consists of a Subgroup on Trafficking of Children.(6)

In 2013, the Government established Local Anti-Trafficking Commissions in two municipalities: Bitola and Tetovo. (32)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Macedonia has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Action Plan for Children on the Streets 2013–2015	Aims to combat the harmful effects of street work by providing such children services including education.(33) Adopted in 2013, the plan is intended to provide a systemic and holistic response to the issue of children on the streets, with an emphasis on social services, health care, and inclusion in the educational system.(15, 33)
National Action Plan (NAP) against Trafficking in Persons and Illegal Migration, 2013–2016	Focuses on preventing trafficking by reducing the vulnerability of at-risk populations and reducing the demand for sexual services as well as on increasing efforts to combat trafficking for forced labor.(7, 9, 34) In 2013, the National Rapporteur on Trafficking and Smuggling published its fourth annual report, providing a comprehensive assessment of trafficking in persons activities during 2012.(34)
National Strategy for the Fight Against Poverty and Social Exclusion, 2010–2020*	Addresses children's rights, including social protection, social inclusion, health, education, and employment. Implemented by the MLSP.(9)
National Action Plan for Prevention and Countering Abuse and Neglect of Children 2013–2015*	Outlines an Operational Plan for the implementation of the Action Plan for Prevention and Countering Abuse and Neglect of Children 2013.(15)
National Plan of Action on the Rights of the Child (2012–2015)	Aims to promote equity, inclusion, and efficiency in the provision of services for children such as health care and education.(35) Includes direct assistance to withdraw children from child labor, rehabilitate victims, and provide better access to primary education.(28)

* The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

The implementation of the National Plan of Action on the Rights of the Child has been slow, with no funds specifically earmarked for implementation, monitoring, and/or evaluation.(5, 24)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Macedonia funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Conditional Cash Transfer Program‡	Government program that provides cash assistance to certain Roma students who stay in school and discourages their involvement in street work and begging.(9)
Day centers‡	Ministry of Labor and Social Policy program that operates four day centers and funds two others operated by NGOs that provide services, including education, to children working in the streets.(8, 33) One of the government centers is open only in the summer months, as street children have not been found in the area (Ohrid) in the winter.(9) Government also supports a small transit center for street children in the capitol, Skopje.(8) The fourth center in Prilep was established during 2013.(33) Also during the year, day centers provided services to more than 100 children.(9)
Center for Victims of Human Trafficking and Transit Center for Foreign Victims of Trafficking ‡	Government program that fully funds the Center for Victims of Human Trafficking, a shelter for domestic trafficking victims. MOI funds the provision of basic services to victims, while MLSP supports reintegration of victims with their families. NGOs collaborate in the operation of the shelter.(15, 34) Government provides partial support to the Transit Center for Foreign Victims of Trafficking, which is operated by NGOs.(34)
Centers for Social Work (CSW) ‡	Government program of approximately 30 CSWs that provide services to vulnerable groups, including street children and child victims of trafficking.(7, 15) Services include counseling, education, and assistance with obtaining registration documents.(15) CSW staff members have been trained on trafficking issues.(34)
Social Worker/NGO Mobile Teams‡	Government social workers from CSWs and representatives of NGOs work in the field of three major municipalities to detect trafficking victims and at-risk individuals, including street children. Teams then work to find solutions to address the needs of these vulnerable persons, including providing support to trafficking victims and their families, and implementing programs for reintegration.(15) Government also funds education seminars for parents on the dangers of allowing children to work and beg on the streets.(9)
Cut the Thread of Labor Exploitation and Trafficking in Children	Government program through which the National Commission for Trafficking and NGOs conducted a series of awareness-raising activities on trafficking as well as a fundraising campaign to assist street children.(6)
Inclusion of Roma Children in Preschool Education‡*	MLSP project implemented in cooperation with the Roma Education Fund and 19 government units, under the Decade of Roma Inclusion and Roma Strategy in the Republic of Macedonia. Aims to support the integration of Roma children by increasing the number of Roma children in preschool.(36)
Children at-risk; Breaking the Cycle of Social Exclusion of Children in Macedonia	MLSP and UNICEF implemented project for improved social protection for street children. Developed standard operating procedures for addressing the needs of street children, and supports the Government's goal of greater inclusion of the Roma population.(37)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Macedonia.

The number of day centers and CSWs is insufficient to reach all vulnerable children in need of assistance.(8, 10) There is also a gap in the capacity of staff to provide adequate services in rural areas and to children of ethnic minorities.(10, 29) Reimbursement to NGOs that provide services at trafficking shelters also suffers from delays.(6)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms in Macedonia (Table 9).

Madagascar

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2013, Madagascar made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The former de facto Government developed a hazardous work list for children, conducted forced child labor and child trafficking-related investigations, and prosecuted seven perpetrators of child sex trafficking. National and regional committees on child labor continued their work, and the Government funded a center to provide services to children withdrawn from child labor. However, children in Madagascar continue to engage in child labor in agriculture and in the worst forms of child labor in mining. Moreover, implementation of policies was limited, labor inspections on child labor violations were lacking, and the number of social programs was inadequate to address the scope of the problem.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Madagascar are engaged in child labor in agriculture and in the worst forms of child labor in mining. (1, 2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Madagascar.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Girls are trafficked from Madagascar to the Middle East for forced domestic service and commercial sexual exploitation.(35, 36) Informal employment agencies recruit children into domestic service who are subsequently subjected to forced labor within Madagascar.(32) Trafficking for the purposes of commercial sexual exploitation occurs in coastal cities, such as Toamasina , Nosy Be, Toliary, Antsiranana, and Mahajunga, as well as in the capital, Antananarivo.(36) Most child sex trafficking occurs with the involvement of family members, but friends, transport operators, tour guides, and hotel workers also facilitate the trafficking of children.(32, 36, 37) During the reporting period, limited evidence suggests child sex tourism increased, particularly in the coastal cities and in the capital.(27, 32) Parents may force their children into various forms of commercial sexual exploitation to earn money to support their families, in some cases, directly negotiating prices with clients.(32, 36, 37) Some children are fraudulently recruited for work in the capital as waitresses, maids, and masseuses before being coerced into commercial sexual exploitation. In some cases, the traditional practice of tse nan’ampela (girl markets), in which girls are sent to markets to attract a husband and arrange marriages, has led girls into commercial sexual exploitation.(19)

Children in the mining sector suffer from respiratory problems and diseases such as diarrhea and malaria.(19) Children are also at risk of injury from collapsing mines.(19) A growing number of children are involved in gold mining in the regions of Ilakaka, Anlamanga, Vakinankaratra, and Anosy.(11, 12, 17, 19, 20) Children dig mining holes, up to 15 meters deep and carry plastic sacks filled with air in order to be able to breathe. Boys as young as 10 go down the holes to collect earth that is sifted at nearby rivers.(19)

Children are particularly vulnerable to abuse and exploitation, less likely to attend school, and vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor due to the 2009–2014 economic and political crisis, ignited by a military-backed coup.(1, 21, 26) During the reporting period, credible presidential and legislative elections were held, resulting in an elected president and National Assembly taking office in January 2014.

In addition, children in Madagascar face significant barriers to education, including a lack of school infrastructure (especially in rural areas), vocational and technical training opportunities, and issuance of birth certificates needed for children to officially enroll in school.(19, 36) While the right to free education is enshrined in the constitution, with decreased donor funding due to the political crisis, the Malagasy government was unable to fully subsidize students’ school fees, food, and school supplies.(33, 38) Families unable to pay these additional costs kept their children at home or sent them to work.(19, 30)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Madagascar has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

In 2013, the Government developed a hazardous child labor list; however, it requires cabinet approval and may be subject to change. (45, 46)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Civil Services and Labor's Division for the Prevention, Abolition, and Monitoring of Child Labor (PACTE)	Enforce child labor laws and coordinate, communicate, train, engage in research and development, administer, finance, and evaluate all activities in the context of the elimination of child labor. (1, 13, 47, 48)
Ministry of Justice	Enforce all laws pertaining to violence against children, including trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children. (1)
National Police Force's Morals and Minors Brigade	Investigate criminal cases involving minors, including issues of trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children. (1)
Department-level courts	Prosecute child labor convictions. (1)

Law enforcement agencies in Madagascar took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, the Ministry of Labor had approximately 90 inspectors in the field and 30 in training.(4, 13) Although labor inspectors are generalists, they receive training on child labor and can conduct child labor inspections. Ministry of Civil Services and Labor's Division for the Prevention, Abolition, and Monitoring of Child Labor (PACTE) staff includes four labor inspectors and one researcher.(4, 46) However, PACTE does not have program funding, following budget cuts to the Ministry of Civil Services and Labor, whose total annual funding allocation in 2013 was 0.42 percent of the national budget.(1) No child labor inspections took place during the reporting period.(1)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2013, child victims of various forms of abuse were referred to the Ministry of Population's 450 child protection networks, which provided protection and social services for children.(1) There were 68 trafficking-related investigations reported in 2013, a majority of these cases resulted in prosecutions, though the exact number was not available.(36) Reports indicate that a majority of these cases involved minors forced into domestic service. The National Police's Morals and Minors Brigade (PMPM) has a headquarters and 15 regional units across Madagascar.(36) Law enforcement officials estimated there were 68 trafficking and forced labor investigations in 2013.

The Brigade lacks sufficient resources, basic tools, and training for staff.(1, 36) Law enforcement officials reported that overall funding, human resources, transportation, and other necessities prevented proper enforcement of criminal laws related to the sexual exploitation of children.(1)

During the reporting period, the court in Nosy Be reported seven child sex trafficking convictions prosecuted under Madagascar's anti-trafficking legislation.(1, 36) The penalties imposed in these convictions ranged from 12 months to five years of imprisonment.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Committee on the Fight Against Child Labor	Coordinate programs, advise on child labor legislation and regulations, and monitor and pursue the implementation of the National Action Plan to Fight Child Labor. Led by the Ministry of Civil Services and Labor, with representatives from the Ministries of Education, Health, and Justice.(1, 17, 21, 47)
Regional Child Labor Observatories	Coordinate, monitor, and evaluate all activities relating to the elimination of child labor at the regional level, identify activities to promote child labor elimination, and compile and analyze data gathered to report it to the PACTE.(17, 47)
Regional Child Labor Committees	Coordinate child welfare policies and legislation.(1, 25)
National Child Protection Committee	Guide national child protection policy and programs, and coordinate child protection activities. Chaired by the Minister of Population and Social Affairs and made up of a steering committee and a technical commission of specialists.(1)
National Statistics Institute	Collect and process data to monitor implementation of the UN CRC.(15, 49)
Inter-Ministerial Anti-Trafficking Committee	Coordinate anti-trafficking efforts in Madagascar.(1, 32)

The effectiveness of the mechanisms to coordinate government efforts on child labor were hampered by budget constraints. The National Child Protection Committee, which was established in 2012, made no clear achievements during the reporting period.(1) The National Committee on the Fight Against Child Labor met throughout the year and committee members traveled to the Ihosy, Vakinankaratra, and Betsiboka regions to assess child labor.(1) Regional committees were active to various extents; for example, the regional child labor committee in the Sava region

Madagascar

was appointed, received training, and developed its own action plan, primarily to address child labor in the vanilla sector.(1) Due to lack of funds, however, this committee faced severe limits on its ability to follow its action plan during the reporting period.(1)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Madagascar has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor (NAP) (2004–2019)	Aims to improve legal frameworks, increase awareness-raising campaigns, mobilize funds to extend action against child labor, and update databases on child labor.(19, 21, 48, 50)
Education for All Program (2013–2015)†	Sets out a comprehensive map to improve the quality of, and access to, basic education and includes child labor concerns.(19, 45) In 2013, the Government of Madagascar launched the new Education for All Program and the Provisional Education Plan.(43)
Provisional Education Plan (2013–2015)†	Integrates child labor issues into education policies.(45)
Decent Work Country Program (2008–2013)	Includes strategies to combat child labor, including through the promotion of social dialogue, principles, and fundamental rights of work and social protection.(51, 52)
United Nations Development Assistance Framework (2012–2014)	Includes strategies, such as training judiciary and police on child labor laws, to protect children from trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, hazardous labor, and child domestic work; and to promote school inclusion.(53, 54)

† Policy was launched during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Madagascar participated in and funded programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Tackling Child Labor through Education (TACKLE) project	Jointly launched by the European Commission and the ILO to combat child labor through education in 12 African and Caribbean countries and the Pacific group of states (ACP).(3, 55) Aims to strengthen institutional capacity to formulate and implement child labor strategies, including boosting family incomes through the provision of inputs to increase agricultural productivity in Madagascar. In 2013, the project included direct action programs targeting children in Vakinankaratra, Analanjorofo, Fénériver Est, and Marovoay.(45, 56)
Manjary Soa Center‡	Government program that provides support and services to child laborers in Antananarivo, reintegrates children under 16 in the public education system, and provides tradecraft training to older children.(48, 57) In 2013, the Government provided $35,797 to the Center for medical expenses, school kits, meals, and salaries for the Center's two instructors, doctor, and supervisor. The Center also removed 30 children from exploitative child labor.(1, 7, 21, 58)
Agir contre le travail domestique des enfants en Afrique et dans les pays de l'Union pour la Méditerranée	$1.3 million, Government of France-funded, 3-year project that aims to combat child domestic labor in specific regions.(7, 59) In 2013, the project removed or prevented an estimated 230 children from engaging in domestic work in Antsirabe and provided them with professional training and assistance in finding decent work.(1)
UNICEF Education Support	$30 million UNICEF-funded program to support the Government's interim plan on education.(46) The investment targets supporting data collection and development of an action plan in schools, building classrooms, distributing school kits and payments to teachers, training teachers (on how to reduce risk of child labor), and emergency response.
National Database	UNICEF-funded, national database managed by the Ministry of Population gathers data from nine regional, child protection networks.(36) In 2013, 2,837 cases of child exploitation were documented, including an estimated 182 cases that involved child trafficking.
Green Line	UNICEF-funded, Minor's Brigade-managed toll-free number received reports of child exploitation cases. The line received 741 reported calls; however, specific data on child- trafficking incidents was unavailable.(36)
Awareness Raising in Sakahara*‡	Program that raises awareness about the hazards faced by children working in mines using radio announcements and talks with the fokontany (local chief).(19)

Program	Description
Public Investment Program for Social Action (PIP)‡	Government program that supports school attendance and training for street children and aims to remove 40 children a year from the worst forms of child labor.(21, 57)
Inclusive education support*‡	Government programs to provide back-to-school grants, awareness raising activities, in-kind support to schools, and access to income-generating activities that target children traditionally excluded from schools.(53)
Center for Socioeconomic promotion in Ambositra, Rakingaskara*‡	Vocational training in carpentry for young boys.(19)
Training sessions and awareness-raising on the rights of children	Ministry of Justice and UNICEF conducted trainings that included a specific module on human trafficking, as well as interviewing and listening techniques for police and gendarmes. In Antsirabe and Ambositrahe, the Government conducted awareness-raising workshops and trainings on child labor.(19)
Vocational Training and Agricultural Productivity Improvement Program (FORMAPROD)	$33 million and $2 million IFAD-funded loan and grant program that provides vulnerable groups, including uneducated young people and young women who are heads of households, with professional and vocational training to improve productivity and market agricultural products to increase household incomes. Estimated government contribution is $7.9 million.(60, 61)
World Food Program School Feeding	World Food Program-implemented school feeding support.(62)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Madagascar.

Pending democratic elections, much of the donor funding for social programs in Madagascar remained suspended during the reporting period.(1)

In 2013, the Government allocated 0.1 percent of the state budget to the Ministry of Population's Child and Family Protection Division, which is responsible for providing social services to children and families.,(1) Although Madagascar has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem.

The Government does not have programs that address the traditional practice of tsenan'ampela, which in some cases has led girls into commercial sexual exploitation. Existing child labor databases are not fully funded.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Madagascar (Table 9).

Table 9. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

Malawi

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2013, Malawi made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government updated its Education Act, making education compulsory, and launched its National Youth Policy. The Government held its first meeting of the Child Labor National Steering Committee and supported social programs to address child labor, particularly in the tobacco sector. However, children in Malawi continue to engage in child labor in agriculture and fishing. The Government has not finalized or fully implemented key legislation or policies protecting children from the worst forms of child labor, including the Child Labor Policy and the Child Protection Policy.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Malawi are engaged in child labor in agriculture and fishing. (1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Malawi. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources of this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	20.6 (885,333)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	81.3
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	22.2
Primary Completion Rate (%)		74.2

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2014.(4)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Integrated Household Survey 3, 2010–2011.(5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

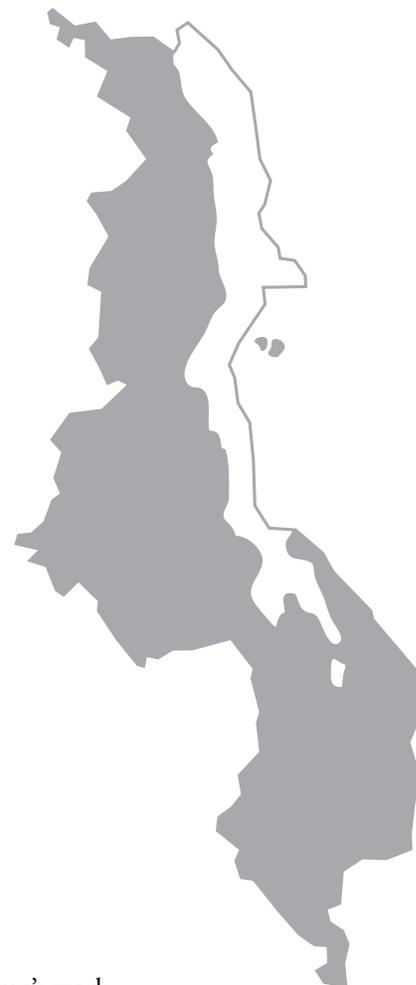

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, activities unknown (2, 6, 7)
	Planting and harvesting tea, cotton,* and sugar* (1, 8, 9)
	Clearing the land, building tobacco drying sheds, planting and harvesting tobacco†, cutting and bundling, weeding and plucking raw tobacco* (10-14)
	Catching, processing†, and selling fish* (2, 3, 9)
	Herding livestock* (9, 15, 16)
Industry	Quarrying and mining (2)
	Construction, activities unknown† (2, 7)
	Domestic work in third-party homes (7, 8)
Services	Ganyu (a form of casual labor) (16, 17)
	Begging† (16, 18)
	Vending and wholesale retailing (2, 7, 8, 16, 19)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (7, 8)
	Herding goat and cattle*, farming (predominantly tobacco), domestic work, and work in restaurants, brothels, and bars as a result of human trafficking (1, 18, 20-23)
	Forced begging and use in commission of crimes (17, 18, 22, 24)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Children are engaged in hazardous work in the production of tobacco.(7, 18) Children who handle tobacco risk illness from nicotine absorption, including green tobacco sickness.(12, 25, 26) Children are also exposed to pesticides and chemicals.(10, 26) Children may work alongside family members who are tenants on farms.(16) In this tenancy system, farm owners loan agricultural inputs to tenants and deduct the debt from future profits. Those who cannot meet production quotas and are unable to repay these debts may face debt bondage.(27)

Most labor trafficking of children in Malawi is internal.(18) Children, typically boys, are trafficked from southern Malawi to tobacco farms in Malawi's northern and central regions. Children are trafficked from Malawi to Tanzania for child labor in fishing. Children who are trafficked may be charged for their transport, food, clothing, and housing, and may be forced to work in debt bondage without resources to return home or provide for themselves.(18, 21)

Limited evidence suggests that girls from rural areas have been promised clothing and lodging from brothel owners, for which they are later charged high fees and are coerced to engage in commercial sexual exploitation to pay off their debts.(18)

Although primary education is free, barriers to education include families' socioeconomic pressures and inability to pay required school-related expenses such as books and uniforms.(1, 7, 28, 29) Despite some Government support for book subsidies for poor families and training and teaching resources for schools, resources overall are limited and students drop out for many reasons, including poor school conditions and the lack of school materials, uniforms, qualified teachers, and relevant school curricula.(1, 8, 16, 19, 30)

Children with family members with HIV/AIDS may assume the responsibility of the head of their households, sometimes becoming the primary caretaker to a sick parent and having to work to support their families.(31) These children, especially those who are orphaned, are at increased risk of entering into the worst forms of child labor.(32-35)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Malawi has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor including its worst forms (Table 4).

* No conscription or no standing military.

Malawian law has three different sources that speak to the minimum age for hazardous work. While Section 23 of the Constitution states that children under age 16 are entitled to protection from hazardous work, Section 22 of the Employment Act sets the minimum age for hazardous labor at 18.(36, 37, 42, 43) Additionally, the Child Care, Protection, and Justice Act defines children as persons 16 and under, and therefore its restriction on hazardous work does not protect children ages 16–18. Consequently, there is some confusion regarding the enforcement of the minimum age for hazardous work.(25, 42)

Section 21 of the Employment Act sets the minimum age for employment at 14 in agricultural, industrial, or non-industrial work.(36) However, it does not apply to work in homes, leaving child domestic workers vulnerable to exploitation.(36, 42) Section 79 of the Child Care, Protection, and Justice Act includes protections for children through age 16 from trafficking.(25, 44) Children age 17 are not protected. Article 142 of the Penal Code punishes permitting the sexual exploitation of girls, even though the sale of a child into prostitution is not prohibited. While the Penal Code prohibits pornography and criminalizes the procurement of prostitution, it only applies to girls, and it does not prohibit the sale of a child into prostitution.(39) The Penal Code includes provisions for indecent assault against boys; however, boys may still be vulnerable to sexual exploitation.(39)

While there is a legal framework for labor inspection of commercial farms, it does not cover inspections in private homes, including for domestic work, or privately owned farms.(42, 45)

The Tenancy Bill, first drafted in 1997, would regulate labor tenancy and include legal protections for children working in agriculture through the tenancy system.(7, 19, 43, 46) However, due to the exploitative nature of the tenancy system, including its impact on child labor, in 2013, the Ministry of Labor (MOL) supported outlawing the tenancy system, and is no longer pursuing passage of the Tenancy Bill.(45)

In October 2013, the Government passed the Education Bill, making education compulsory until age 14.(4, 45, 47, 48)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MOL) – Child Labor Unit (CLU)	Monitor and implement child labor law compliance through child labor monitoring visits.(49)
MOL – General Inspectorate	Perform inspections and investigate all labor complaints, including those related to child labor.(7)
Ministry of Home Affairs	Enforce trafficking laws and identify trafficking and child labor victims.(50)
District Labor Offices	Enforce child labor laws at the district level.(7)

Law enforcement agencies in Malawi took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, MOL was allocated roughly $2.5 million for labor-related work; however, it is not clear how much was allocated for child labor activities.(7) The Child Labor Unit (CLU) had three full-time employees based in MOL in Lilongwe during the reporting period.(45) The Ministry advocated for CLU to be upgraded into a department, which would enable it to have staff members focused on children in each of the country's districts.(45)

Each of Malawi's administrative districts employed a District Labor Officer (DLO), who was responsible for all labor issues including child labor.(7, 45) In January 2014, MOL employed 29 DLOs and 120 labor inspectors, 60 of whom are dedicated to monitoring child labor.(7) District labor offices are directly funded from the Treasury.(7) According to MOL officials, DLOs were limited in their ability to carry out monitoring and reporting due to budget and resource constraints, including a lack of fuel for vehicles.(7, 45, 51)

Six hundred labor inspections were carried out in 2013.(7, 29) The Government did not conduct proactive labor inspections. Most labor inspections were conducted in response to reported labor law violations.(7) In the agricultural sector, inspectors focused on large, commercial farms due to limited resources.(7)

The CLU in MOL reported that there were six child labor violations in Kasungu District (a tobacco-growing region) in 2013, but could not give exact figures for the whole country.(18) All of the cases in Kasungu were settled out of court, and the offenders paid all wages due, including repatriation costs.

The Government operates a referral process to transfer trafficking victims detained by law enforcement authorities, though services remain limited.(18) Government officials reported providing assistance to several child trafficking victims at a social rehabilitation center in Lilongwe for orphans, vulnerable children, trafficking victims, and gender-based violence victims.

Criminal Law Enforcement

Child labor cases during the reporting period were resolved through out-of-court settlements and payment of fines.(18) While reports on several trafficking cases were consolidated, the police did not systematically report child labor cases.(52) According to the Malawi Police Service's law enforcement data for seven districts, 15 trafficking offenders were convicted in 2013; however, it is not clear that all of these cases involved child trafficking victims. Reported penalties for convicted traffickers included fines and prison sentences of up to 30 months.(29) The Mchinji and Phalombe district police also provided information on trafficking cases in their districts, separately.(18) During 2013, Mchinji police reported arresting suspects in 10 trafficking cases, and obtaining eight trafficking convictions.(29) Phalombe police reported five investigations involving 12 suspects; each investigation involved boys and young men being sent to Mozambique for forced labor on farms. In Phalombe, eight traffickers were convicted, with sentences ranging from 12 to 18 months' imprisonment with hard labor, with two others convicted but given suspended sentences. The Kasungu District Social Welfare Office identified 59 child labor victims and returned them to their homes in 2013.(18)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Child Labor Network	Draft policies, identify resources, and harmonize programs and activities for the elimination of the worst forms of child labor.(46, 49, 53)
National Steering Committee on Child Labor	Provide policy guidance to support the elimination of child labor and implementation of the National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor (NAP). Chaired by the Ministry of Agriculture, members include representatives from government ministries, trade unions, employers, development partners, and civil society organizations.(18, 31)
Child Protection Technical Working Group	Oversee child protection issues. Includes representatives from the Government, international organizations, development partners, and NGOs and is chaired by the Ministry of Gender, Children, and Social Welfare.(7, 18)
District Child Protection Committees	Coordinate all child protection activities at the district level and improve local coordination on child protection issues. May be combined with a district orphan and vulnerable child committee and a district committee on child rights.(18)

The Child Labor Network met twice at the national level during the reporting period.(7, 45) In January 2013, the National Steering Committee on Child Labor held its first meeting in Malawi.(7, 49)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Malawi has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

* The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Policy was launched during the reporting period.

The National Child Labor Policy, which focuses on the issue of child labor and provides Government, civil society, and other partners with a framework to implement child labor programs and activities, awaits Cabinet approval and is not yet in effect.(18, 27) The Government has not finalized or fully implemented the Child Protection Policy, which outlines the Government's child protection strategy.(61)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Malawi funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description

*The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

Although Malawi has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, Maldives made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government ratified all key ILO Conventions on child labor and forced labor, which included ILO C. 138, ILO C. 182, ILO Convention 29, and ILO Convention 105, and enacted legislation prohibiting human trafficking. It also adopted an anti-trafficking plan for 2013–2014, and started an anti-trafficking awareness-raising campaign aimed at students and businesses. Additionally, it contributed funding to a World Bank–financed project to improve access to, and quality of, primary and secondary education. However, children in Maldives continue to engage in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation as a result of trafficking. The Government has not established a list of prohibited hazardous work activities for children. The compulsory education age of 13 also leaves children ages 13–16 vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Maldives are engaged in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation as a result of trafficking.(1-5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Maldives. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	3.9 (2,364)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	79.5
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	4.0
Primary Completion Rate (%)		Unavailable

Source for primary completion rate: UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2014.(6)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children’s Work Project’s analysis of statistics from Demographic and Health Survey, 2009.(7)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Fishing,* activities unknown (5, 8)
	Activities unknown* (5)
Services	Domestic service* (5)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of trafficking (1, 2, 4)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Some girls from Bangladesh and Maldives are trafficked for commercial sexual exploitation to Malé, the capital, but evidence on the problem is limited.(1, 3, 9, 10) The UN Committee on the Rights of the Child has expressed serious concern about the commercial sexual exploitation of children in Maldives and has warned that a lack of research on this exploitation has contributed to widespread denial of the problem.(2) The Maldives Human Rights Commission has been assessing the scope of the trafficking in persons problem in the country, but its findings have not yet been published.(11, 12)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Maldives has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Maldives

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

In January 2013, the Government ratified ILO C. 138 on the Minimum Age and ILO C. 182 on the Worst Forms of Child Labor, as well as ILO Convention 29 on Forced Labor and ILO Convention 105 on the Abolition of Forced Labor.⁽¹³⁾ The Government has taken steps toward ratification of the Palermo Protocol, but has not yet ratified it.⁽³⁾

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Compulsory Education Age	Yes	13	Legislation title unknown (19)
Free Public Education	Yes		Constitution (16)

* No conscription or no standing military.

In December 2013, the President signed into law new legislation prohibiting human trafficking. The law covers both domestic and international trafficking, and appears to cover trafficking for labor and sexual exploitation of children.^(3, 17)

The minimum age for employment does not apply to children working in family businesses.⁽¹⁰⁾ Further, research has not found evidence of a hazardous work list of work activities prohibited to children.⁽⁴⁾ The Child Sex Abuse (Special Provisions) Act criminalizes the use of children for prostitution and pornography, but under Article 14 of the Act, these offenses are not criminalized if the perpetrator and victim are married under Islamic Law. The Drug Act prohibits use of a child in drug trafficking.^(10, 18) However, research found no evidence of a prohibition against the use of children in illicit activities in general. The compulsory education age leaves children ages 13–16 vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, as they are not required to be in school, but are not permitted to work either.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Human Resources, Youth, and Sports' (MHRYS) Labor Relations Authority (LRA)	Enforce the child labor provisions of the Employment Act. Can assess minor fines and make recommendations to the Minister of Human Resources to assess additional fines or take other actions to penalize businesses.(10, 12)
Department of Immigration and Emigration (DIE)	Maintain a "blacklist" of employers who violate any provision of the Employment Act; employers on the blacklist cannot hire new workers until violations are corrected.(10)
Maldives Police Service (MPS)	Identify victims of trafficking in coordination with DIE. Has a Family and Child Protection Unit (FCPU) that investigates cases of commercial sexual exploitation and refers them to the Prosecutor General's Office for prosecution.(10)
Ministry of Gender, Family and Human Rights' (MGFHR) Family and Child Protection Services (FCPS)	Receive referrals of children who have been exploited, including in child prostitution, and provide care for such victims.(10, 18)
MGFHR's Anti-Trafficking Unit	Coordinate anti-trafficking enforcement efforts and referrals of victims to services. Maintain a 24-hour hotline. Established during the reporting period.(1)
Prosecutor General's Office	Prosecute crimes, including those involving the worst forms of child labor.(10)

Law enforcement agencies in Maldives took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, the Labor Relations Authority (LRA) was staffed with 10 labor inspectors and 6 investigation officers to inspect for any violations of the Employment Act.(10) No training specific to child labor was provided to inspectors during the year. No child labor violations were found by LRA during 2013. The number of inspections carried out during the year is not available.(10)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2013, an anti-trafficking unit was established within the Ministry of Gender, Family and Human Rights (MGFHR). However, it lacks a sufficient number of translators to process calls to its hotline.(1) The Family and Child Protection Unit (FCPU) had 25 officers to process child abuse cases in Malé, as well as officers in stations throughout the country's many islands. The Prosecutor General's Office employed 45 prosecutors for all areas of its work, across the country.(10) Investigators do not have sufficient funding and resources such as office facilities and transportation. (10) Research was unable to determine how many children involved in the worst forms of child labor had been referred to MGFHR for services, nor was it able to find updates on the three cases of child prostitution that were handled by the Maldives Police Service (MPS) in 2012.(10, 18)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Although the Government has established a committee to coordinate actions regarding human trafficking, research found no evidence of coordinating mechanisms to combat child labor, including all its worst forms.(1)

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Anti-Human-Trafficking Steering Committee	Charged with counter-trafficking coordination and implementation of the country's anti-trafficking action plan.(1, 10) Reconstituted in December 2013 pursuant to the new law on trafficking and is now led by LRA within MHRYS. Other members include MPS, the Supreme Court, the People's Majlis (Parliament), the Attorney General's Office, the Prosecutor General's Office, the Human Rights Commission, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, the Ministry of Home Affairs, the Department of Immigration and Emigration, the Customs Service, the Ministry of Islamic Affairs, and the NGO, Advocating the Rights of Children.(3, 17)

Maldives

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

The newly reconstituted anti-trafficking committee met a number of times in early 2014. However, NGOs have raised concerns that the change of leadership from MGFHR to the Ministry of Youth and Sports (MHRYS) may hamper the work of the committee.(3) Specific concerns include a lack of awareness of the issue among MHRYS.(3)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Maldives has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Anti-Trafficking Plan, 2013–2014†	Formally adopted in February 2013.(12) Contains seven goals the Government of Maldives has set to combat trafficking, which are to enact legislation prohibiting the crime, strengthen interagency coordination, raise awareness, build capacity, improve border control, expand international cooperation and ratify relevant international instruments on trafficking, as well as monitor implementation of the plan.(1, 3, 20)
UNDP Country Program for the Maldives, 2011–2015*	Aims to support ILO in developing a Decent Work framework to address youth unemployment, among other issues. Started in 2011 and runs through 2015.(21) Also aims to promote equitable access to justice and rule of law by increasing the capacity of the Prosecutor General's Office and the employment tribunals, and by training these institutions on human rights issues.(21)
Maldives Strategic Action Plan*	Establishes policies to strengthen child and family protection service delivery at the central and provincial levels. Establishes and strengthens alternative care systems for children.(22) Recognized by the World Bank and other development partners as the country's Poverty Reduction Strategy Paper.(10, 22)

* The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Policy was launched during the reporting period.

Although the Anti-Trafficking Plan was launched during the reporting period, there were no funds to implement it. Funds were not available to LRA because of the change in leadership on the issue of trafficking from MGFHR to MHRYS.(12) LRA is working to formulate an updated Anti-Trafficking Action Plan and budget.(3, 12)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Maldives funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Blue Ribbon Campaign Against Human Trafficking†	Government campaign that aims to raise awareness of human trafficking in Maldives among students and the business community. Began in 2013, and implemented by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.(23)
MGFHR's FCPS*	MGFHR-operated centers on many of the country's islands provide services such as temporary shelter, vocational training, and rehabilitation and counseling for children in need, which could include children rescued from abusive work situations.(2, 11, 18) FCPS established four new "safe homes" in early 2014 to provide short-term protections for women and children.(10)
Trafficking in Persons Victims Shelter	Government-operated shelter in Villingili island dedicated to trafficking victims. During 2013, provided services to women trafficking victims, but no children were served.(3)
Child Help Line	Government-maintained hotline used to report cases of child abuse and general issues that children face. No complaints involving child labor issues were forwarded from the hotline to LRA or MHRYS during 2013.(12, 24)
UNICEF Country Program*	UNICEF program that works with the government to monitor schools to ensure authorities and communities maintain safe and sanitary learning environments for children.(25) Also works to build capacity of FCPS staff to protect children from violence and abuse. Advocates for increased protections for children who are victims and witnesses of crimes.(25)
Enhancing Education Development Project*†‡	Jointly financed by World Bank and Government of Maldives. Approximately $10 million World Bank and $1 million Government of Maldives 5-year project that aims to strengthen access to and quality of primary and secondary education in Maldives.(26)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

Social workers employed by MGFHR are in need of additional training.(10) Further, research found no evidence of any programs that specifically address the worst forms of child labor in the commercial sexual exploitation of girls.

In 2013, Mali made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. In early 2013, children were recruited and used for military purposes by non-state groups and independently acting pro-government militias. Some recruited combatants were also detained and charged with crimes for their association with the armed conflict. During the reporting period, the Government signed an inter-ministerial circular to provide legal protection to children involved in armed conflict; signed and implemented a protocol agreement to provide social protection to children associated with armed conflict; disbanded some pro-government militias that were using child soldiers; and funded the National Unit to Fight against Child Labor. Children in Mali continue to engage in the worst forms of child labor as child soldiers and in agriculture and gold mining. Laws relating to the worst forms of child labor do not provide adequate coverage and gaps in enforcement have left children unprotected.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Mali are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture and gold mining. (1-8) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Mali.

	Commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of forced labor or human trafficking (5, 6, 8, 11, 28-32)
	Child soldiers, sometimes as forced labor (2-4, 33-46)
	Debt bondage in salt mines (8, 11, 14)
	Forced begging and forced labor in the agricultural sector as a result of recruitment by Koranic teachers (1, 5, 11, 12, 27, 47, 48)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Children, especially of the Bellah community (also known as black Tuaregs, who were former slaves), are subject to hereditary slavery in northern Mali.(11, 22, 24) In addition, children, particularly those of the Songhai ethnicity, work in debt bondage in the northern salt mines of Taoudenni.(8, 49) Boys, placed in the care of Koranic teachers for the purpose of education, are forced by their teachers to beg on the street or to work in fields; they must then surrender the money they have earned to their teachers.(1, 5, 8, 27) Other Koranic teachers force the boys to work their land for free.(12, 27, 47)

In January 2012, attacks against the Malian army were carried out by the National Movement for the Liberation of Azawad (MNLA), Al-Qaeda in the Islamic Maghreb (AQIM), Ansar al-Dine, and the Movement for Unity and Jihad in West Africa (MUJAO). From April 2012 to early 2013, these groups claimed control of northern Mali.(22, 39) In January 2013, with the assistance of a French-led international military intervention, the Government took back key areas of northern Mali. In June 2013, the Government signed a preliminary peace accord with the armed groups of Northern Mali, who had taken over the northern region of Kidal after the French had ousted the extremists.(50-53) The Government of Mali remained in a State of Emergency through July 2013.(8) Despite some progress, intermittent fighting and violence continued throughout 2013.(51, 54-57)

From early 2012 to early 2013, armed rebel and extremist Islamic militia groups including the MNLA, Ansar al-Dine, the MUJAO, and AQIM recruited and used child soldiers in northern Mali.(2-4, 7, 33, 35-41, 58) More than 1,000 Malian children, including Malian children in neighboring refugee camps, were forcibly recruited or sold, or were willingly paid by extremist groups to fight.(2, 4, 33, 36, 39, 58, 59) Reports indicate that some families were forced to sell their children, or willingly received as much as $2,000 per recruited child, while other children received up to $30 per day to fight.(4, 33, 36, 39, 59, 60) Limited evidence indicates that some children held in traditional slavery were sold by their masters to Islamic extremists to fight. Limited evidence indicates that Koranic teachers recruited their students to serve as soldiers for extremist groups.(2, 58) Children as young as age 9 carried assault rifles, staffed checkpoints, gathered intelligence, guarded prisoners, conducted foot patrols, and participated in looting and extortion.(2-4, 58, 61) Limited evidence indicates that children were used as mine sweeps, servants, and human shields. Some girls were used by armed groups for sexual exploitation.(3, 58, 62) Limited evidence indicates that a disproportional number of child recruits were of Arab, Songhai, Peul, and Tuareg ethnicities.(34, 58) Although the prevalence of child soldiers was reduced during the reporting period, children continued to participate in armed conflict throughout the year.(63)

Children were also recruited by, trained by, and fought in combat with pro-government counterinsurgent militias, including the Liberation Front of the North, Gando Koy, and Gando Izo.(4, 39, 41, 58) In some instances, these pro-government militias, without the consent of the Government, trained on Government land. Soldiers within the army, acting independently, provided training to these militias.(4, 8, 39, 41, 58, 64-66)

In northern Mali, access to education, which can be a critical component in preventing the economic exploitation of children, has been significantly hindered by violence, displacement, and school closures.(38, 40, 56, 58) During the occupation, schools were vandalized, destroyed and pillaged; computers and books were burned; and teachers and students were displaced.(56, 67-69) In addition, Koranic schools, taken over by extremists were used to recruit child soldiers. Other schools were used as military storage and training bases.(34, 35, 39, 56, 58, 61) Although the Government made progress returning 80 percent of children to school in 2013, educational infrastructure was damaged during the conflict; many teachers and students remain displaced; some teachers in insecure areas feel it is unsafe to return to school; and schools in some areas have not provided teacher payment, housing, or travel allowances.(56, 67, 69-71) A UN Mission conducted in October 2013 noted that schools in the northern region were barely functioning.(67)

Access to education nationwide is hindered by a chronic shortage of teachers, school materials, and infrastructure, and transportation.(8, 38, 48, 72) In addition, evidence suggests that incidences of physical, psychological, and sexual abuse, including corporal punishment and the rape of students by teachers, prevent some children from remaining in school.(73, 74) Due to societal discrimination at the local level, some Arab, Peul, and Bellah children are denied access to school based on their ethnicity.(22, 75)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Mali has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Mali

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Against the backdrop of instability and violence, areas of northern Mali remained under rebel control through early 2013. These areas were therefore ungovernable by the Government of Mali.(50, 51, 53, 84, 85) During that time, the Government of Mali was unable to enforce laws in these northern rebel-controlled zones.(50, 51, 53, 84, 85)

Malian law is not completely consistent with international standards regarding child labor. For example, Article 189.35 of the Labor Code allows children under the minimum age to work with the approval of the Minister of Labor.(76, 86) In addition, children working in the informal sector, including in non-contractual agricultural and domestic work, do not benefit from the same protections under the Labor Code as children working in the formal sector.(87)

Although Mali has a list of hazardous activities prohibited to children under age 18, a decree from 1996 that is still in force permits children ages 16 to 17 to perform certain hazardous activities. The decree conflicts with the protections provided in the hazardous list.(77, 86) This gap could expose these children to increased risks.

The Child Protection Code provides protection for children under age 18, while the Penal Code establishes criminal penalties for several of the worst forms of child labor.(78, 80) For example, Articles 50 and 58 of the Child Protection Code identify begging as a form of economic exploitation of children, while Article 183 of the Penal Code provides for punishment for engaging a child in begging. However, the Penal Code does not provide penalties for some of the prohibitions enumerated in the Child Protection Code.(78, 80) For example, although Article 17 of the Child Protection Code prohibits children under age 18 from participating in armed conflicts or joining the armed forces, Articles 31.23 and 31.31 of the Penal Code only provide penalties for those recruiting and enlisting children under age 15.(78, 80) Moreover, although Article 18 of the Child Protection Code prohibits the use of children in organized crime, no law prohibits the use of a child for illicit activities.(80, 88, 89)

Article 228 of the Penal Code prohibits the debauchment of children. However, the prohibition of the debauchment of children only applies to children under age 13.(78) Article 225 of the Penal Code forbids third-party involvement in prostitution (pimping) and the sexual slavery of children. However, the law that prohibits these acts is only applicable to girls.(78) Furthermore, since provisions of the Penal Code only apply to cases of pimping, those soliciting or purchasing sex from minors are not punishable under this law. Article 57 of the Child Protection Code explicitly broadens the definition of sexual exploitation, including prostitution, to both girls and boys.(78, 80) However, there are no penalties prescribed by this Code.(78)

Although the Penal Code bans slavery, no penalties are outlined for the offense.(78) Forced labor is prohibited under the Labor Code. However, the punishment for forced labor is only a fine and/or imprisonment for 15 days to 6 months.(76) Although the exploitation of children, including slavery and commercial sexual exploitation is prohibited by the trafficking in persons law, it is unclear if they are prohibited as standalone offenses, outside of the context of trafficking.(79)

By law, education is free and compulsory in Mali.(8, 80) However, parents are expected to pay school fees for registration, uniforms, books, and materials. These expenses may deter families from sending their children to school.(22, 49, 75)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Youth, Labor, Employment, and Professional Training/ National Directorate of Labor	Receive and investigate complaints and perform unannounced labor inspections in the formal labor sector.(5, 62, 90)
The Ministry of Justice	Initiate and coordinate the implementation of child labor laws, together with the Ministries of Internal Security, Defense, Territorial Administration, and the Promotion of Children.(62, 91)

Organization/Agency	Role
The Morals Brigade of the National Police	Enforce laws relating to trafficking and the commercial sexual exploitation of children. Housed under the Ministry of Internal Security.(5, 62)
Judicial Police	Enforce laws relating to the use of children in illicit activities. Housed under the Ministry of Internal Security.(5, 62)
The Ministry for the Promotion of Women, Children, and the Family	Provide support to victims of trafficking.(92)

Criminal law enforcement agencies in Mali took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms. However, research found no evidence that labor law enforcement agencies took such actions.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, the National Directorate of Labor employed 54 labor inspectors.(5) Given the prevalence of child labor in the country, the number of labor inspectors is inadequate.(5) In addition to inspection duties, inspectors provide dispute settlement and conciliation. These additional responsibilities detract from labor inspectors' abilities to complete workplace inspections.(93) The additional responsibilities also make it difficult for the small number of labor inspectors to effectively enforce child labor laws.(76, 86, 90) None of the labor inspectors specialize in child labor. However, one person in each region is designated as the point of contact for the National Unit to Fight Against Child Labor.(5) Due to the continued violence in northern Mali, labor inspectors do not operate in the northern region.(5, 90) The budget for the National Directorate of Labor is unknown. However, research shows that, despite decentralization efforts, funds are rarely allocated to regional offices.(5) The number of inspections carried out, violations cited, fines assessed, or fines collected during the reporting period is unknown.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2013, the Morals Brigade employed seven investigators and two commissioners.(5) Morals Brigade officers did not receive training on the worst forms of child labor in 2013. However, some police officers and magistrates were trained on children's rights.(5) The Morals Brigade does not have national coverage.(94) Although the Morals Brigade was created to handle criminal affairs involving children, the main police force has no explicit obligation to turn children's cases over to the morals Brigade. As a result, many children's issues are handled by members of the general police force who may not have received special training on children's affairs.(94) In 2013, the Morals Brigade received 120 liters of fuel every three months and a budget of $1,200. Provisions were insufficient. For example, the 120 liters of fuel typically covered two weeks of transportation.(5)

In 2013, the Morals Brigade reported 23 cases of child forced labor in mining and 5 cases of child sexual exploitation. Three arrests were made for the facilitation of prostitution.(5) Law enforcement officials also arrested 5 individuals who forced 22 Malian girls ages 10–15 into prostitution.(63) The Morals Brigade repatriated 27 foreign children who were victims of forced labor perpetrated by five Koranic teachers, and 29 Nigerian girls who were trafficked to Mali for sexual exploitation.(5) Other victims of the worst forms of child labor were referred to NGOs for repatriation.(5) According to prosecutors in Mali, almost all of the individuals arrested for the crimes listed above are awaiting trial. Some individuals facing trafficking charges were released for a lack of evidence.(5, 63) The Government of Mali undertook few criminal investigations, the quality of which were limited, due to a lack of resources and continued political instability.(63) As a result, prosecutions were limited.(63) In addition, the trafficking in person's law, adopted in 2012, has yet to be distributed to judges to ensure their knowledge of the law.(63) Reports indicate that, because of the political instability hindering law and judicial enforcement in northern Mali, the prevalence of hereditary slavery has worsened since the conflict began.(95)

Mali maintains an informal system through which the police transfer and record the transfer of children to NGOs. However, Mali does not have a formal method for transferring vulnerable children who are detained by the police and the Morals Brigade to NGOs.(11, 48, 92) The Ministry of Women, Children and the Family participates in a network of NGOs, and UN bodies that coordinate to provide care specifically to trafficking victims. Organizations within the network provide transportation, food, housing, counseling, training, repatriation, and reintegration services.(63) In 2013, the network provided services to 79 child and adult victims of trafficking.(63)

Mali

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
The National Unit to Fight Against Child Labor (Cellule Nationale de Lutte Contre le Travail des Enfants (CNLTE))	Coordinate Mali's efforts to eliminate child labor.(96, 97) Reduce the worst forms of child labor by collecting statistics, coordinating programs, and acting as a liaison with partners.(98) Comprises seven members.(96, 98)
The National Coordinating Committee for the Fight Against Trafficking in Persons and Associated Practices	Coordinate Government efforts to combat trafficking. Has 43 members, comprising various Government agencies, civil society groups, and NGOs.(5, 47, 49)
Inter-Ministerial Committee to Prevent Grave Violations Against Children.	Conduct awareness-raising campaigns to prevent the recruitment and use of children in armed conflict. Conduct joint missions with international partners to determine the presence of children in self-defense militias.(58)

There is no evidence that the Inter-Ministerial Committee to Prevent Grave Violations Against Children conducted meetings, took action to implement awareness-raising campaigns or conducted joint missions to determine the presence of child labor in self-defense militias during the reporting period.(91) In 2013, the National Unit to Fight Against Child Labor (Cellule Nationale de Lutte Contre le Travail des Enfants (CNLTE)) received a budget of $150,000. This is the first year the unit has ever received funding dedicated specifically to its activities.(5, 91) Although the CNLTE is named the official coordinating body for child labor policy, the multiplicity of government structures sharing some of this responsibility leads to an inefficient and cumbersome system. Currently, the Ministry of Justice; the Ministry for Women; Children and the Family; the Ministry of Internal Security; and the Ministry of Labor share this responsibility.(5, 90)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Mali has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Plan to Combat Child Labor (2011–2020) (NAP)	Aims to eradicate the worst forms of child labor by 2015, and all exploitative child labor by 2020.(14, 99, 100) Calls for improving the judicial framework; increasing awareness on child labor; withdrawing children from the worst forms of child labor; providing these children with appropriate remediation services; and improving the livelihoods of families.(14) Falls under the direction of the National Unit to Fight Against Child Labor and is to be implemented in conjunction with 14 other ministries, including the Ministries of Education; Agriculture; Mining; Justice; and Women, Children, and the Family.(14)
PRSP (2012–2017)*	Provides a framework for Mali's growth and poverty reduction agenda over the next five years.(101) Aims to improve access to and the quality of education; increase food security; increase employment opportunities for youth; and increase protection for and programs to assist women, children, and vulnerable groups. Contains specific plans to develop an emergency plan for children involved in armed conflict.(101)

*The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

Coordinating agencies under the National Plan to Combat Child Labor (NAP) held regular meetings. However, there is no evidence that implementation of the plan has begun.(5, 91)

In February 2013, an Inter-Ministerial Circular (Circular) was signed on the prevention, protection, and reintegration of children in armed conflict.(58) The Circular references Article 28 of the Penal Code, which states that penalties prescribed by the Penal Code are not applicable to crimes committed out of self-defense or under a force that could not be resisted. The Circular states that Article 28 of the Penal Code is applicable to children involved in armed conflict.(78, 102) However, the Circular does not define the age range of children it covers.(103) Given the discrepancy between the Penal Code and the Child Code regarding the definition of children involved in armed conflict, the lack of a defined age range in this Circular may leave children ages 16-17 unprotected. The Circular calls on families, local authorities, and child protection agencies to work together to ensure children withdrawn from armed forces are reintegrated or placed in another location of their choosing.(102)

On July 1, 2013, the Government of Mali and the UN signed a protocol agreement to protect children associated with armed conflict (Protocol).(5) The Protocol established a procedure to transfer these children to a UNICEF interim care center.(5, 61) In accordance with the Protocol, 19 children detained by the MNLA were released.(5) Following the signing of the Protocol, 25 child soldiers were placed in the UNICEF-supported center for care.(5, 63, 91, 104) However, four of the children in the shelter are facing charges for rebellion, criminal association, threatening state security, and conspiring against the state.(104) In addition, as of December 2013, nine children remained in detention. Some children were held in detention with adults.(61, 105, 106) During the reporting period, the Government disbanded Gando Izo and Gando Koy and placed the children trained by these groups into rehabilitation centers.(8) The fate of the remaining child soldiers is unknown.(56, 106) Evidence does not reveal any efforts made by the Government of Mali to prosecute offenders of or enforce laws relating to the use of child soldiers.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Due to the 2012-2013 violence, child labor-related programs were withdrawn from Mali. Some child labor-related programming was reinstated towards the end of 2013.(107) The Government of Mali participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Back to School Campaign†*	$4 million, UNICEF-implemented project to return children and teachers to school following the 2012-2013 violence. Supports 200,000 students and 4,000 teachers with school kits and teacher training as they return to school.(107, 108)
Out of School Youth Program†	$30 million, USAID-funded, 5-year project implemented by the Education Development Center. Provides education and technical and work readiness training to approximately 10,000 out-of-school youth (ages 14–25). Aims to improve youth employment prospects. Implemented in partnership with the private sector and the Ministries of Youth, Education, and Employment. (107, 109)
Action Plan for the prevention, the retrieval from, and the social and professional reinsertion of thousands of children at risk or victims of the worst forms of labor in small artisanal mining in the Sikasso region	$120,000, 2-year, ILO-implemented project to partially implement one of six components of Mali's NAP. Targeted child labor in artisanal gold mining in the Sikasso region.(91)
Support Program to expand the observation and monitoring of the work and trafficking system of children in the Sikasso region of Mali	$120,000, 2 year, ILO-implemented project that provides support to the CNLTE to support a CLMS in the districts of Bougouni, Kolondieba, and Sikasso. These funds complement the $150,000 provided by the Government of Mali for this purpose.(91)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

Although Mali participates in some programs to reduce the worst forms of child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the scope of the problem. In addition, Mali does not fund or participate in programs to address child labor in agriculture, domestic service, fishing, forced begging, commercial sexual exploitation, domestic slavery, or debt bondage.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Mali (Table 9).

Mauritania

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2013, Mauritania made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government created the National Agency for the Fight against the Vestiges of Slavery, Integration, and the Fight against Poverty, which aims to tackle poverty, promote the integration of refugees, and rehabilitate former slaves. The Government also adopted the UN anti-slavery “roadmap” and approved Law No. 2013-011, which designates the crimes of slavery and torture as “crimes against humanity,” and removes the statute of limitations. However, children in Mauritania continue to engage in child labor in agriculture and herding, and in the worst forms of child labor in indentured and hereditary servitude. Mauritania’s legal framework lacks a list of hazardous occupations prohibited for children, does not prohibit the use of children in illicit activities, and does not provide protection for children working without a contract. Additionally, the Government continued to detain anti-slavery protestors.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Mauritania are engaged in child labor in agriculture and herding and in the worst forms of child labor in indentured and hereditary servitude. (1-4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Mauritania. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	18.2 (172,936)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	48.6
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	10.8
Primary Completion Rate (%)		68.7

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2014.(5)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children’s Work Project’s analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 3, 2007.(6)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of beans,* rice,* millet,* sorghum,* and vegetables* (7-12)
	Herding and caring for cattle, goats, sheep,and camels (2, 4, 12-14)
	Fishing,* activities unknown (4, 8-12, 15-18)
Industry	Crushing gravel* for construction sites (18)
	Domestic servicet (4, 8, 9, 13, 18-23)
Services	Work as car mechanics and painters (8, 10, 11, 15, 17)
	Garbage scavenging (8, 10, 11, 15)
	Street work, including as market vendors, shoe shiners, and in the transportation sector (4, 8, 10, 15, 16, 18, 24)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced begging,† as a result of criminal gang recruitment and by Koranic teachers (10-12, 18, 25-27)
	Commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of human trafficking (8, 9, 15)
	Selling drugs (8, 10, 12, 16, 28)
	Indentured and hereditary servitude (14, 28-32)
	Domestic service sometimes as a result of human trafficking (4, 8, 31)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Children in Mauritania continue to be exploited in hereditary servitude, as slaves, and endure slave-like practices in remote areas of the country.(14, 28-32) Some children are born into slavery, while others are forced to work the land and turn over what they produce to their master in order to remain on the land.(12, 33, 34) Some child slaves herd animals, such as cattle and goats, and perform domestic labor.(2, 12, 14, 31, 33) Those who attempt to escape are killed.(14, 28) Some former slaves (commonly descendants of slaves) continue to endure slave-like practices, including working for their former masters in exchange for food, money, and lodging.(12)

In Mauritania, it is a traditional practice to send children to Koranic teachers to receive an education. However, some Koranic teachers, or marabouts, force their students, or talibés, to beg for more than 12 hours a day without adequate food or shelter.(11, 12, 19, 26, 31)

Research suggests that a lack of school infrastructure and limited availability of teachers impede access to education, which may increase the vulnerability of children to the worst forms of child labor.(34-36) Many children in Mauritania are also not registered at birth. Unable to prove citizenship, unregistered children may have difficulty accessing services such as education.(31, 37, 38) Additionally, Mauritania hosted approximately 74,000 Malian refugees in 2013. Refugee children may have difficulty accessing education, which could put them at increased risk of engaging in the worst forms of child labor.(39, 40) Further, the Ministry of Social Affairs, Childhood, and the Family (MASEF), in collaboration with the UN Children’s Fund, continued work on its study, “Child Trafficking and the Worst Forms of Labor in Mauritania,” but it has yet to publish the results.(18)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Mauritania has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4).

Free Public Education	Yes		Law 2001-054 (48)

* No conscription or no standing military.

Mauritanian law is not completely consistent with international standards regarding child labor. The Government lacks a hazardous occupations list that specifies activities considered hazardous for children.(7, 50) However, Law No. 1797 prohibits the employment of children in domestic service, and the Penal Protection Code for Children prohibits employing and provoking children to beg.(46, 47, 51) Children working in non-contractual work do not have the same protections under child labor laws and regulations as children working in contractual employment.(7, 41, 52) The law does not prohibit the use of children in illicit activities, such as selling drugs.(28, 36, 42)

In 2013, the Government approved Law No. 2013-011, which designates the crimes of slavery and torture as “crimes against humanity” (thereby amending Article 13 of the Constitution) and removes the statute of limitations. This is an improvement from the 2007 law’s 10-year statute of limitations.(31, 45, 46) Although the Government partnered with local NGOs, UNICEF, and Terre des Hommes to draft a law against the worst forms of child labor, it has not enacted this legislation.(18)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor’s Labor and Inspection Office	Receive and investigate labor complaints.(18)
Ministry of Social Affairs, Childhood, and the Family’s (MASEF) Office of Childhood	Develop and implement programs to protect vulnerable children and monitor alleged violations of child labor laws, including those related to the worst forms of child labor.(18)
Ministry of Justice’s Direction of the Judiciary for Protection of Children	Coordinate child protection issues and oversee tribunals that sentence child offenders and the work of the Special Brigade for Minors.(46)
National Commission for Human Rights	Advocate for the eradication of slavery and receive complaints and conduct investigations on human rights violations, including the worst forms of child labor.(11)
Ministry of the Interior’s Special Brigade for Minors	Investigate crimes against children, including trafficking, and monitor religious schools, or mahadras , to ensure that children are not forced to beg on behalf of their teachers. Operates in Nouakchott.(26, 46)
National Police Force	Investigate crimes against children.(46)

Criminal law enforcement agencies in Mauritania took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms. However, research found no evidence that labor law enforcement agencies took such actions.

Labor Law Enforcement

During the reporting period, the Ministry of Labor's Labor and Inspection Office employed 80 labor inspectors.(18) However, the labor inspectorate lacks staff members and resources to carry out its mandate.(36, 53) In 2013, there was no budget for labor inspections.(18) However, the Government budgeted $33,300 to MASEF's Office of Childhood, and $33,300 to the Ministry of Labor's Labor and Inspection Office to support activities to end child labor.(18) During the year, labor inspectors did not receive training on child labor issues.(18) Further, the Government did not make labor inspection data accessible to the public, including the number of inspections performed, violations found, citations issued, and the severity of penalties applied.(18) MASEF's Office of Childhood refers victims of child labor to Centers for the Protection and Social Integration of Children in Difficult Situations (CPISEs).(46)

According to Law No. 2001-054, the Government has established compulsory primary education. However, in practice, the compulsory education provision is not enforced effectively, as many children do not attend school.(2, 12, 48, 49)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In collaboration with NGOs, the Special Brigade for Minors identified 4,372 girls working as domestic servants from September 2011 to November 2013.(18) Although the Brigade refers children to social and other services, including CPISEs, it is unclear whether the previously mentioned domestic servants received such assistance.(18) During the year, a source indicates that the police and officers in the Special Brigade for Minors tortured children to make them confess to crimes.(54)

During the reporting period, the Government investigated two cases of slavery involving children. However, in both cases, the police released the accused from custody, and there were no follow-up prosecutions.(32, 55) In 2013, the Government announced the creation of a court designed specifically to address slavery cases. No additional information is available about this court.(27) Research did not uncover the number of investigators responsible for enforcing criminal laws on the worst forms of child labor or whether they were provided with training. Research also did not uncover information about the number of prosecutions, convictions, or whether appropriate penalties were applied related to the criminal enforcement of labor laws.

In 2013, the Government announced the creation of the National Agency for the Fight against the Vestiges of Slavery, Integration, and the Fight against Poverty, known as "Tadamoun." This agency reports directly to the President and aims to tackle poverty, promote the integration of refugees, and rehabilitate former slaves by providing them with shelter, food, and job training.(31, 32, 46, 56-58) Tadamoun can also file complaints on behalf of citizens who accuse their employers of practicing slavery, and bring cases of alleged slavery to the authorities for investigation.(59) During the reporting period, Tadamoun's budget was $14.9 million. Research could not find out whether Tadamoun carried out any activities in 2013 aimed specifically at combating child labor.(46, 60)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Child Trafficking, Smuggling, and Labor Group	Coordinate child labor and child trafficking efforts. Composed of MASEF's Office of Childhood; the Ministry of Justice's Office of Child Judiciary Protection; the Ministry of Interior; the National Commission on Human Rights, Humanitarian Action, and Civil Society; NGOs; and international organizations.(2, 18)

Mauritania

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

The Child Trafficking, Smuggling, and Labor Group met once during the reporting period.(18) It also held a workshop in January 2013 to present the draft law against the worst forms of child labor to government agencies.(2)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Mauritania has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Plan to Combat the Vestiges of Slavery (2008)	Aims to prevent slavery through improvements in education, health, and by providing victims with income-generating activities. Implemented by Tadamoun and includes a budget of over $3 million.(32, 46, 61) Research did not find evidence that Tadamoun implemented the National Plan to Combat the Vestiges of Slavery in 2013.(46)
UN Anti-Slavery Roadmap (2014)†	Calls for an awareness raising campaign on slavery, the revision of slavery laws and policies, implementation of programs that provide former slaves with access to education and livelihood opportunities, and assistance to former slaves who wish to return to their home countries.(33, 62, 63) Based on recommendations made by the UN's Special Rapporteur on contemporary forms of slavery after an official mission to Mauritania.(33, 62, 63)
Decent Work Country Program (2012–2015)	Acknowledges that child labor is a problem in Mauritania and calls for research and training for labor inspectors, judges, and other stakeholders on child labor issues.(64)
Strategic Framework to Fight Poverty (2011–2015)	Aims to eliminate the worst forms of child labor, provide quality education to vulnerable children, and protect the rights of children.(65)
National Strategy for the Protection of Children in Mauritania and Action Plan (2009–2013)*	Aims to increase access to social services for vulnerable children and establish a system to coordinate, monitor, and evaluate service provision for children.(66–68)
PRSP II (2011–2015)	Seeks to eliminate child labor and includes plans to increase access to quality education for all children.(69, 70)
UN Assistance Development Framework (2012–2016)*	Provides educational assistance to vulnerable and exploited children.(71)

* The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Policy was launched during the reporting period.

Although the Government of Mauritania has adopted the National Plan to Combat the Vestiges of Slavery, research found no evidence of a policy on other worst forms of child labor.(61) The Government of Mauritania lacks reliable data to be able to provide services to all victims of slavery or those at risk.(61)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Mauritania funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Program to Eradicate the Effects of Slavery‡	Government program that provided an NGO with $15,000 to support five former slaves in 2013.(31)
Centers for the Protection and Social Integration of Children in Difficult Situations (CPISE)‡	Government program that provides food, shelter, education, and training to vulnerable children, many of whom are talibés. In 2013, the Government opened a new CPISE in Rosso and operates four other CPISEs in Kiffa, Nouadhibou, and the El Mina and Dar-Naim regions of Nouakchott.(1, 2, 18, 34) The Government allocated $116,667, which served 130 children during the reporting period.(18)
Child Protection Training Center‡	Government program that provides training on child protection to local organizations, including child labor, in the town of Selibaby.(2)
UNODC Impact Program*	EU-funded Government program that aims to assist West and North African States in implementing the Migrant Smuggling Protocol by strengthening criminal justice systems through improved legislative frameworks, stronger government capacity, improved data collection and analysis techniques, and awareness raising.(72, 73)
Poverty Reduction Project*	Approximately $38.4 million UN International Fund for Agricultural Development–funded project in Aftout South and Karakoro.(74) Targets 21,000 households and aims to assist rural communities through the provision of loans and grants to improve livelihoods, economic opportunities, and food security.(75)

Program	Description
Refugee Assistance Programs†	MASEF's Office of Childhood programs that raises awareness among NGOs operating in the M'Bera refugee camp on ways to address child exploitation.(35)
Youth Employment Programs*	Ministry of Labor program, with support from ILO, that trained 41 job counsellors on how to assist youth in finding decent work.(76)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

Although Mauritania has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to address the extent of the problem fully.(2) The Government's continued detention of anti-slavery protestors in 2013 and the lack of recent data on slavery hampers its ability to address this issue comprehensively and develop programs for future initiatives.(28, 77-79) Further, as recently as July 2013, some government officials, including the Director General of Tadamoun, did not acknowledge that slavery continues despite its prohibition.(58) The UN reports that more needs to be done to address the problem of slavery in Mauritania, and the UN Special Rapporteur on contemporary forms of slavery suggested that the Government increase funding for social programs for former slaves and carry out a campaign to raise awareness of the national laws on slavery.(80, 81)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Mauritius

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2013, Mauritius made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government continued its efforts to combat commercial sexual exploitation of children by providing services via its Child Development Unit and operating drop-in centers. In addition, the Government increased efforts to improve the social safety net for vulnerable families through its Social Aid and Income Support Programs, and boosted funding to increase children's access to quality education through programs such as the Education Priority Zones (Zones d'Education Prioritaire) (ZEP). However, children in Mauritius continue to engage in the worst forms of child labor, primarily in commercial sexual exploitation, although the extent of the problem is unknown. The Government does not currently ensure that victims of commercial sexual exploitation have access to comprehensive, quality services.

Agalega Islands, Cargados Carajos Shoals, and Rodrigues are not shown.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Mauritius are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, primarily in commercial sexual exploitation (CSEC), although the extent of the problem is unknown.(1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Mauritius. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		99.3

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2014.(4)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis, 2014.(5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Some children are lured into CSEC by their peers or through false offers of other employment. Some adult prostitutes force their sons and daughters into CSEC.(1, 2)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Mauritius has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

* No conscription or no standing military.

The Government continues to work on a comprehensive children's bill designed to harmonize current laws related to children and make sure they are in line with the Convention on the Rights of the Child.(1, 13)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Inspection and Enforcement Division of the Ministry of Labor, Industrial Relations, and Employment (MOLIRE)	Enforce all labor laws, including those related to child labor.(14)
Office of the Ombudsperson for Children	Investigate any suspected or reported case of child labor or violation of a child's rights.(15)
Police Brigade for the Protection of Minors (Minors' Brigade)	Patrol areas such as arcades, bus terminals, and other areas in which youth are vulnerable to involvement in commercial sexual exploitation.(3, 14) Maintain a database of all trafficking incidents of children and refer all cases of CSEC to the Child Development Unit (CDU).(2)

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Gender Equality, Child Development and Family Welfare (MOGE) CDU	Enforce legislation related to children as well as implement policies and programs related to child development.(1) Receive tips on all forms of child abuse, including commercial sexual exploitation and child trafficking, through two telephone hotlines.(14) Provide follow-up assistance to victims.(16) Provide child welfare officers to accompany victims as they receive immediate medical care and work in conjunction with the police if an official statement is needed.(2) Develop a central database and standard operating procedures for sharing information and taking action to address child labor.(13)

Law enforcement agencies in Mauritius took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, the Ministry of Labor, Industrial Relations, and Employment’s (MOLIRE) 45 labor inspectors conducted 1,722 labor inspections. During these inspections, three cases of child labor were detected.(1) The three children were found packaging flour into plastic bags, and the cases have been referred and remain pending in the courts.(1)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2013, four women and two men were arrested for child trafficking related to a possible child prostitution ring involving four girls in CSEC.(17) In 2013, 70 Government officials from a collection of agencies including the Police and Ministry of Gender Equality, Child Development and Family Welfare (MOGE) received training on preventing CSEC. In addition, more than 200 new police recruits received anti-trafficking in persons (TIP) training as part of basic training.(17) However, the Child Development Unit (CDU) suffers from a lack of resources and personnel, with only nine officers to serve Mauritius and one for Rodrigues Island, a Mauritius dependency, leading to insufficient detection of cases and service provision.(3) Reports from 2013 indicate that the Government has decreased anti-trafficking law enforcement efforts.(2)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Child Protection Committee (NCPC)	Coordinate the roles and responsibilities of the relevant ministries and ensure collaboration on effective intervention in cases involving children, including the worst forms of child labor. Also known as the Working Together Committee.(11, 13, 18)
National Children’s Council (NCC)	Serve as the executive of child protection programs and focus on child protection issues in the country as an independent, para-governmental entity under the auspices of the MOGE.(3)
NCPC subcommittee on CSEC	Facilitate interagency coordination on CSEC.(18)

In 2013, significant overlap continues to exist between the committees involved in child protection issues, and the roles of the National Child Protection Committee (NCPC) and the National Children’s Council (NCC) are unclear in coordinating efforts to combat the worst forms of child labor. A formal and permanent anti-trafficking in persons (TIP) coordinating body does not exist, and a lack of understanding of TIP by government officials has prevented the Government from effectively addressing the issue.(2, 19) Research was unable to determine if the NCPC subcommittee on CSEC is active or what activities it performs.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Mauritius has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Protocol of Assistance to Victims of Sexual Abuse*	Lays out procedures for police and other officials to follow when handling sexual abuse cases, including commercial sexual exploitation.(14, 20)
Child Safety Online Action Plan*	Prevents sexual exploitation of children on the Internet by strengthening the legal framework and raising awareness among parents and children.(14, 16)
National Policy Paper on the Family*	Supports child welfare through holistic support for families, including job training for parents.(21)
Education and Human Resources Strategy Plan*	Improves equity of access to primary, secondary, and technical/vocational education, among other goals.(22)
UNDP Country Program for Mauritius†	Improves the education of vulnerable children through reducing inequality in opportunities.(23)

* The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Policy was launched during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Mauritius funded programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Income Support Program*‡	Government program provides money for 8,000 vulnerable families living below the Poverty Intervention Line. Has a 2014 budget of $33 million.(1)

Workshops on CSEC‡	Government holds workshops on CSEC with vulnerable groups.(3, 25)
Drop-in Centers‡	Government program provides counseling and referrals to victims of sexual abuse, including CSEC and trafficking of children.(26, 27)
Shelters and Institutional Care‡	Government program provides shelter and institutional care to victims who are referred to government or NGO shelters.(3, 26, 27)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Mauritius.

The Government's institutional care facilities for victims of CSEC and other abuses are overcrowded, service providers are overtaxed and lack appropriate training, and institutions do not have appropriate standards of care, leading to inadequate service provision.(3) In addition, child victims of prostitution are sometimes placed by court order in residential centers for youth on probation. Child victims of prostitution placed in such facilities may not receive appropriate treatment.(3)

In 2013, Moldova made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor.

The Government adopted the Law on the Special Protection of Children at Risk and Children Separated From Their Parents, and Decision No. 889, which provides better social support for families with children at risk. Additionally, the Government extended implementation of the National Action Plan on the Prevention and Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor for 2011–2015 from the initial six districts to nine districts in which local public administrations developed local plans and created special teams to combat child labor on a regional level. However, children in Moldova continue to engage in child labor in agriculture and the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation as a result of human trafficking. Gaps remain in the areas of law enforcement and social programs funding. The number of inspectors in the Labor Inspection Office was not sufficient. While the Government provides some financial support to programs addressing both child labor and trafficking, all major child labor programs have been donor funded. These programs do not appear to be sustainable without outside financial assistance.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Moldova are engaged in child labor in agriculture and in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation as a result of human trafficking. (1-4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Moldova.

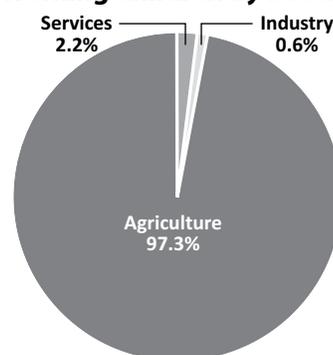

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	24.3 (4,371,604)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	92.1
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	29.0
Primary Completion Rate (%)		89.6

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Both boys and girls were trafficked for commercial sexual exploitation within the country, whereas girls were also trafficked for commercial sexual exploitation transnationally.(11)

In line with the Ministry of Education’s 2012 decision that requires local administrations, schools, and parents to prohibit students from working while at school during the harvest season, requests for contracts to allow children to work during the autumn high season, while few, were declined in 2013.(12)

There is a lack of research on the work activities carried out by children in agriculture, construction, and street work in Moldova.

Generally, many schools in rural areas are not adequately funded, and parents are sometimes charged for school supplies and textbooks, which they cannot always afford. Roma children encounter barriers to accessing education due to poverty and societal discrimination.(13, 14)

The latest national study on the situation of children in need and those whose parents work abroad reveals that 105,270 (approximately 15 percent) of children have one or both parents working abroad.(1, 3)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Moldova has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

During the reporting period, the Government adopted new laws that focus on child protection and the elimination of the worst forms of child labor. The Law on the Special Protection of Children at Risk and Children Separated From Their Parents, or Law No. 140, aims to create a framework for identifying, evaluating, assisting, monitoring, and registering children at risk and children separated from their parents, and to designate agencies to implement the frameworks.(3, 12, 23) The law recognizes several situations in which children are identified as at risk, including begging, practicing prostitution, and living on the street. In addition to this law, the Government adopted Decision No. 889, which provides better social support for families with children at risk.(3)

The Government also signed a new Collective Convention No. 14 on the elimination of the worst forms of child labor in cooperation with the National Confederation of Employers, and the Trade Union Confederation.(3) The new Convention outlines the stakeholders' obligations regarding eliminating the worst forms of child labor.(12, 24)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
The Labor Inspection Office (LIO) within the Ministry of Labor, Family, and Social Protection	Enforce all labor laws, including child labor laws. Investigate cases with possible labor law violations, including those that relate to children.(3)
Multidisciplinary teams	Act on a local level to identify children involved in the worst forms of child labor, provide better alternatives to child laborers, continue to monitor the living conditions of identified children, and use the collected information for policy development.(3, 16)
The National Council for the Protection of Child Rights within the National Commission for Consultation and Collective Bargaining	Inform and provide consultation to members of the National Commission for Consultation and Collective Bargaining's members about the worst forms of child labor and protecting child rights.(1)
The Parliamentary Ombudsman	Promote the UN CRC and defend the constitutional rights of children. Request cooperation from public authorities and public institutions on child protection issues.(3)

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Internal Affairs	Enforce criminal laws against child trafficking and sexual exploitation. Have officers dedicated to child protection and child labor.(3)
Prosecutor General's Office	Conduct and oversee criminal investigations of cases, including the worst forms of child labor exploitation; prosecute cases of worst forms of child labor in court and at the Supreme Court of Justice; and represent the rights of child victims in cases when their civil rights are violated.(12) Employ five prosecutors to deal with trafficking in persons cases as well as trafficking of children cases. Composed of 36 prosecutorial offices throughout the country, which have prosecutors specialized in handling of child trafficking cases.(3, 12)
Ministry of Justice	Enforce criminal laws against child trafficking and sexual exploitation.(3) Draft, consult, and propose all processes related to legislation for the Government's approval before they enter in force.(12)
The Center for Combating Trafficking in Persons (CCTIP)	Lead criminal investigations and arrest the perpetrators involved in trafficking of persons, including trafficking of children.(3)
Service for Information and Security	Enforce criminal laws against child trafficking and sexual exploitation through cooperation and exchanging information with CCTIP.(3)

Law enforcement agencies in Moldova took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, the Labor Inspection Office (LIO) conducted 6,209 inspections and uncovered 41 child labor violations.(3) Although LIO added 13 inspectors in 2013, the current total number of 109 staff members and the amount of funding allocated to conduct inspections are insufficient. Violations were mostly due to illegal employment of minors with no proper identification and registration, lack of mandatory safety standards at the work place, excessive working hours, and absence of proper health certificates.(3) LIO referred eight child labor violations to Moldovan courts.(3) All 23 children who were working illegally or who were removed from work were assisted by LIO inspectors.(3) The law permits child labor inspections for both legally registered workplaces and individual persons, thus covering informal worksites.(15) However, the inspectors have to announce their visit to the businesses, which lessens the effect of the inspections.(3)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2013, approximately 30 government officials received training on interviewing techniques for child victims. Despite the training, the techniques employed by law enforcement are criticized because child victims are required to give numerous declarations and statements, and are sometimes forced to confront their trafficker.(3) The Center for Combating Trafficking in Persons (CCTIP) employs 43 officers who conduct trafficking in persons investigations, including trafficking of children.(3) The Government opened 19 investigations on child trafficking in 2013, and of those cases, 20 children were found to be trafficking victims for labor or sexual exploitation. The Government finalized seven criminal investigations, and four perpetrators were sentenced to prison for child trafficking.(3) The Government assisted all 20 victims of human trafficking, and 12 child victims were assisted by the Center for Assistance and Protection of Victims of Human Trafficking under the Ministry of Labor, Family, and Social Protection.(3)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
The National Steering Committee on the Elimination of Child Labor (NSC)	Include representatives from the government's ministries, workers' organizations, NGOs, and academia to coordinate work on child labor issues at the national level.(1, 3)
Child Labor Monitoring Unit	Supervise national-level activities related to combating child labor and serve as a coordinating mechanism between NSC at the national level and multidisciplinary teams at the local level.(3, 16)

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
The Permanent Secretariat under the National Committee for Combating Trafficking in Persons	Monitor implementation of legal provisions on combating trafficking in persons (TIP), establish working groups for drafting new provisions on TIP, participate in anti-TIP campaigns, develop the national action plans, and seek support for projects.(25)
The National Committee for Combating Trafficking in Persons	Coordinate the Government's efforts to prevent and combat trafficking in persons.(3)

Despite the important coordinating role of the National Steering Committee on the Elimination of Child Labor (NSC), the committee did not meet in 2013 to discuss child labor issues. This may impact the overall efforts to combat child labor and its worst forms on a national level.(3)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Moldova has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
The National Action Plan on the Prevention and Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor for 2011–2015 (NAP)	Outlines 44 objectives to be implemented by 30 stakeholders to eliminate the worst forms of child labor by specific deadlines. Includes the institutionalization of a child labor monitoring system and develops public information campaigns on child labor issues.(3, 26) Extended from the initial six districts to nine districts in which local public administrations developed local plans and created special teams to combat child labor on a regional level. Provides training on child labor issues to 700 local mayors and approximately 1,770 social assistance workers.(3)
The National Plan on Community Support of Children in Need for 2007–2014*	Aims to provide social inclusion for children in need through various services and initiatives.(3, 16)
The National Youth Strategy 2009–2013*	Aims to facilitate youth employment, provides access to education, encourages youth participation in public life, builds the capacity of youth institutions, and develops health and social protection services.(27)
European Integration: Freedom, Democracy, Wellbeing 2011–2014*	Aims to have a direct impact on the worst forms of child labor by implementing activities such as ensuring all citizens have access to early education; creating an adequate number of kindergartens and schools for each community; promoting inclusive education to ensure that children with disabilities and from socially vulnerable families have access to education; and "strengthening the institutional and functional capacities of the local public administration authorities in their exercising of the functions of guardianship authority to ensure observance of children's rights."(16)

*The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

During this reporting period, the Government of Moldova made some progress in the area of policy implementation. In addition, the Government drafted a new National Strategy for Child and Family Protection for 2013-2020. The Strategy calls for a system of protection for families with children in high risk situations.(1, 3, 28) The Strategy has not been adopted yet.(12)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Moldova funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Free, Strong, and Safe—to a Better Child Protection System*‡	Government program that establishes multidisciplinary assistance for child victims and potential victims of abuse, neglect, and exploitation.(1) Extended its pilot version from the original 10 localities to 19 localities in 2013.(3)
Towards Unity in Action: United Nations-Republic of Moldova Partnership Framework‡	Government and the United Nations program to improve social inclusion of vulnerable children and their families. Addresses child migrants, child victims of sexual exploitation and abuse, children involved in labor and governance, and social change for child rights.(1, 3, 29)

Program	Description
USDOS-funded programs*	$1.42 million USDOS-funded programs that build capacity of local government officials and police to investigate and try trafficking cases, as well as strengthen victim identification and assistance.(30)
Ajutor Social Program*‡	Government and the World Bank cash benefit program that targets the poor.(31)
Additional Social Programs*‡	Government program that provides the equivalent of $29 each to qualifying children from vulnerable families to cover the cost of school supplies.(32, 33) Amount slightly varies across the regions depending on the local administrations budgets.(12)
Strengthening the Effectiveness of the Social Safety Net Project 2011–2016*	$37 million World Bank project to improve the country's social safety net through expanding and strengthening the Ajutor Social Program, among other things. Provides social assistance based on people's income to reach the poorest population.(12, 34)
Financial Assistance Pilot Program* ‡	Government and donor-funded financial assistance pilot program provides up to 6 months of financial assistance to poor families with children in six districts. Government provided $8,000 toward this program.(3)
Human Trafficking Awareness Campaigns	Police led effort to raise human trafficking awareness through information sharing and training activities in middle and high schools about crimes relating to children.(28)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Moldova.

While the Government of Moldova provides some financial support to programs addressing both child labor and trafficking, all major child labor programs have been donor funded. These programs do not appear to be sustainable without outside financial assistance.(1, 3)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Mongolia

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2013, Mongolia made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. In July, the Mongolia National Statistics Office officially released the Mongolia National Child Labor Survey Report. The Government established an Anti-Trafficking Sub-Council within the Ministry of Justice (MOJ), and Mongolia's National Human Rights Commission (NHRC) conducted trainings on trafficking and forced labor for lawyers, judges, and law enforcement officers. The Government also established a coordinating council and allocated a budget for the National Plan of Action for Ending the Worst Forms of Child Labor. However, children in Mongolia continue to engage in child labor in animal husbandry and herding. Enforcement mechanisms for reducing child labor are minimal, and gaps persist in the legal framework and operating procedures for prosecuting criminal offenders, specifically regarding commercial sexual exploitation.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Mongolia are engaged in child labor in animal husbandry and herding.(1-6) In July 2013, the Mongolia National Statistics Office officially released the Mongolia National Child Labor Survey Report.(4) The report indicates that 11 percent of working children were engaged in hazardous work with boys comprising 8 out of 10 children.(4) The majority of child labor in Mongolia takes place in the informal sector in which there is little oversight and enforcement of labor laws.(7) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Mongolia.

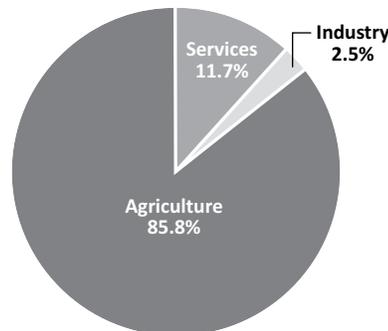

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	13.8 (60,246)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	87.6

Primary Completion Rate (%)		130.2

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

	Forced labor in construction, mining, and industrial sectors, animal husbandry,* and contortionist work* sometimes as a result of human trafficking (6, 11, 20, 21)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Due to a lack of resources in tracking child labor in Mongolia, it is difficult to assess whether there has been a change in the number of children engaged in the work force.(13) According to government authorities and NGOs, while the numbers may not have significantly increased, children are now involved in more diverse forms of hazardous labor than in previous years, in part due to Mongolia’s economic boom.(6) Although some sources reported a decline in child labor in the mining sector in prior years, monitoring of the artisanal sector has not been comprehensive in recent years and there is no data available on recent child labor rates in that sector.(2, 6)

Girls are trafficked internally and forced into prostitution, sometimes in saunas, bars, hotels, karaoke clubs, and massage parlors.(3, 11, 18, 20, 21) In addition, NGOs and law enforcement officials reported cases in which young girls were trafficked internationally for exploitation as contortionists under contracts signed by their families, and sometimes subjected to physical abuse.(6, 20, 21)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Mongolia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

The Law on Labor is currently under revision, but there is no information on how the amendment may extend greater protections to children or on the timeframe for submitting the amended law to Parliament.(22, 33) At this time, the Law on Labor appears to exclude work performed outside of a labor contract.(34) The Ministry of Labor’s (MOL) list of hazardous occupations prohibited for children does not clearly specify if it has the same limitations; however, according to the Ministry of Population Development and Social Welfare (MPDSW), the list applies to children working in both the formal and informal sectors.(24, 35)

The Ministry of Justice (MOJ) is revising the Criminal Code, which would provide an opportunity to prohibit the worst forms of child labor and to strengthen the protection of children and victims of human trafficking during legal proceedings. The revision has been submitted to Parliament, but there is no indication of when it will be passed.(36, 37) Mongolia is also in the process of revising the Law on Protection of Children’s Rights in order to expand opportunities for legal protection of children.(38)

Mongolian law does not provide clear definitions of forced labor, allowing for ambiguous interpretation by law enforcement and judicial officials. Because trafficking and sexual exploitation are covered by multiple laws, the Police and the Prosecutor’s Office each have discretion to select the article under which to try each case.(12, 19, 21, 22, 39)

The minimum age for working as a horse jockey does not meet the standards prescribed in international conventions, and current legislation does not fully protect children working in this sector.(16, 25) The Ministry of Culture, Sports and Tourism is developing a new law that will ban children under 16 from taking part in private events; however, no decision has been made on changing the minimum age for official races.(15) The state bans racing using child jockeys during the coldest period (October–February), and there are new regulations requiring adequate headwear.(6, 10)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
General Agency of Specialized Inspection (GASI)	Enforce labor laws including child labor. Conduct inspections only at registered businesses failing to protect the majority of children engaged in the worst forms of child labor in Mongolia’s informal sector.(6)
National Police Agency (NPA)	Maintain primary responsibility for investigating trafficking cases. Coordinate with the Criminal Police Department (CPD) and State Investigation Agency (SIA).(21)
State Investigation Agency (SIA)/Criminal Police Department (CPD)	Receive referral and open a formal criminal investigation of trafficking and sexual exploitation cases. Work with the Prosecutor’s Office to decide whether to take a case to court and any subsequent prosecution.(6, 35) Merged into one office in January 2014 but continues to operate separately at the time of reporting.(6)
Metropolitan Police Department (MPD)	Operate under the NPA and oversee the district police divisions of Ulaanbaatar’s nine districts.(40) Enforce labor laws and identify children in hazardous labor.(6)

Organization/Agency	Role
Border Protection Agency	Register Mongolian citizens who enter and exit the country. Track children who leave Mongolia and do not return and pregnant Mongolia women who return without their child.(21) Follow up with law enforcement as necessary.(21)

Law enforcement agencies in Mongolia took limited action to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

The reporting period was a year of consolidation for many government agencies that underwent significant changes following the 2012 elections.(6) In addition, ongoing major reforms of the Mongolian justice sector, including restructuring of judicial and law enforcement agencies, resulted in greater inward focus among these agencies as they worked to implement the changes. The consolidation of agencies resulted in very little action to enforce child labor laws during the reporting period.(6, 21)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, there were 49 General Agency of Specialized Inspection (GASI) inspectors across the country that focused on labor-related issues, including child labor. They were supplemented by over 100 junior inspectors, whose time spent on labor issues was limited.(6) Inspectors have the authority to order immediate compliance with labor legislation, but enforcement was limited due to the small number of labor inspectors and the rapidly growing number of businesses. During 2013, GASI did not conduct any inspections specifically focused on child labor.(6) GASI had limited data on workplace injuries of those under 18, as most underage labor occurred in the informal sectors of the economy, beyond GASI's jurisdiction. GASI did not report any work-related deaths of minors in 2013.(6)

GASI also reported that it found no child labor violations in 2013. Under the Law on Inspections, GASI must announce the sites it plans to inspect for the coming year, and GASI officials suggested that this contributed to the absence of violations.(6) GASI also reported that administrative fines were too light to deter companies from employing child labor.(6)

Despite improved compliance at national-level races, provincial horse races are generally not regulated. Safety standards for child jockeys are not effectively enforced, and children often are not provided with helmets, as required by law.(2, 6, 10) Races that took place during local and national holidays resulted in six fatalities of child jockeys. However, no criminal cases were opened. Sources reported that such incidents were generally handled privately, with horse owners either paying the families of injured or killed child jockeys, or in many cases, the child jockeys were the sons/daughters of the horse owners themselves.(6) During the reporting period, the National Authority for Children (NAC) started a national database that registers all jockeys who participate in officially sanctioned national and local races.(41)

During the reporting period, the Address Identification Center (AIC, under the Metropolitan Police Department), in cooperation with the Ulaanbaatar Metropolitan Agency of Child and Family Development, conducted four trainings on child protection, in which two police officers participated each time.(6) Throughout the year, the Child Labor Network and World Vision provided trainings to local and metropolitan police, social workers, and government organizations responsible for child welfare. The Metropolitan Agency for Child and Family Development reported that, during 2013, the heads of its child and family development centers received training that included a unit on child labor.(6)

The MPD reported conducting 43 campaigns throughout the year to identify street children lacking parents or guardians.(6) During one such campaign, the MPD identified six cases of children working in hazardous labor and referred the cases for prosecution, but the Prosecutor's Office dismissed all of the cases. The MPD and the Child Labor Network NGO report that there is no specific procedure for providing protection and services to children identified in child labor situations.(6)

Mongolia

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2013, there was no funding specifically allocated for investigations of forced labor or trafficking in persons, and a limited number of officers were appointed to deal with children's and trafficking issues.(6, 35) In 2013, the MPD reported only three officers at the main office that focused on the policy side of child protection, which was down from 27 in the previous year.(6)

During the reporting period, Mongolia's National Human Rights Commission (NHRC) conducted trainings on trafficking and forced labor for lawyers, judges, and law enforcement officers.(6) The CPD's Organized Crime Division conducted regular trainings throughout the year for provincial and district law enforcement officers responsible for trafficking cases. Trainings were funded through a combination of the Criminal Police Department's limited budget and local and international NGOs.(6) The MOJ also contributed funding for anti-trafficking trainings.

Cases involving the commercial sexual exploitation of minors classified by the National Police Agency (NPA) under the trafficking article were often changed to lesser articles by prosecutors or the State Investigation Agency (SIA) or else were dismissed entirely.(2, 6, 14, 20) The NAC reported that there is a general assumption that victims of sexual misconduct must be girls, resulting in a failure to recognize boys as potential victims of sexual exploitation.(6) If a boy is a victim of sexual exploitation, the offense is rarely prosecuted and, when prosecution does occur, charges are likely to be filed under an article of the Criminal Code that carries a lighter sentence and includes no aggravating penalty for committing the crime against a minor.(6) In addition, Government officials reported that MOJ investigators and prosecutors are ranked and promoted based on their conviction rate, encouraging them to process cases under lighter articles, which require less evidence and effort.(20)

During the reporting period, the NPA reported 11 children as victims of trafficking for both commercial sexual exploitation and labor exploitation.(29) NGOs reported that adults who engaged in the commercial sexual exploitation of minors frequently paid the families of victims in order to prevent investigations from proceeding. The NPA reported that two cases involving prosecutions of offenders charged with trafficking children for the purpose of prostitution were still under investigation.(35) At the time of reporting, the General Council of Courts reported that there had been no convictions for trafficking of children during the reporting period.(29)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Ministry of Labor (MOL)	Chair and implement the National Plan of Action to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor 2011–2016.(6)
National Authority for Children (NAC)	Protect the rights of children and implement the Child Protection Strategy. Implement the National Plan of Action for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor. Does not have the authority to conduct inspections.(6, 41)
Ministry of Justice (MOJ)	Coordinate anti-trafficking efforts. Mandated the creation of a council to coordinate government efforts to prevent trafficking.(20)
Anti-Trafficking Sub-Council	Coordinate work on combating and preventing human trafficking, monitoring implementation of the current law, and providing professional management. Function as a part of the Council on Crime Prevention under the MOJ.(6, 21, 42) Currently has 15 members representing 12 different organizations and two NGOs.(21)

In 2013, the Government of Mongolia established a coordinating council for the National Plan of Action for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor, and the MPDSW allocated $5,840 USD for its implementation.(6)

An Anti-Trafficking Sub-Council was also established within the MOJ, under the Council on Crime Prevention. The Sub-Council was briefly formed shortly after passage of the 2012 Law on Combating Trafficking in Persons, and then dissolved with the change of Government in the second half of 2012. A second iteration of the Sub-Council, reflecting the restructured Government, was formally established when the Minister of Justice issued an implementing order in January 2013.(6, 21, 35) The Sub-Council met four times during the reporting period, with the primary goal of building the capacity of police, prosecutors, and others tasked with investigating trafficking persons cases.(21) Funding for the Sub-Council came from the Government's Crime Prevention and Awareness Fund, which provided roughly $30,000 for the Sub-Council to use in 2014.(35)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Mongolia has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Program for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor 2011–16	Identifies specific actions to combat child labor through 2016 through a National Plan of Action for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor.(16) Defines the responsibilities of the Ministries of Population Development and Social Welfare, Labor, Justice, Education, and Agriculture; GASI; the NPA; the NAC; the Confederation of Mongolian Trade Unions; and local governors.(22) Plan not implemented during the reporting period due to continued Government restructuring and personnel changes following the June 2012 parliamentary elections.(6, 29) Relevant agencies in discussions to redraft the plan for implementation from 2014 to 2016.(6)
State Policy on Herders	Clarifies the conditions and criteria for engaging children in herding, to eliminate the worst forms of child labor in that sector.(17) Research did not find any evidence that child-focused projects were implemented throughout 2013.(35)
National Development Strategy*	Calls for improvements in education, health, social welfare, and labor policies through 2020. Objectives include the education and livelihoods of vulnerable children.(1, 43)
Child Protection Strategy*	Includes NGOs and local government offices that implement the strategy, including child welfare programs.(2) During the reporting period it was not clear whether the NAC continued to implement the Child Protection Strategy.(6)

* The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Mongolia funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Human Development Fund*‡	Ministry of Finance program that distributes national profit from mineral resources to funding for health insurance, pensions, and education tuition.(22, 44-47) School lunch program for low-income students to encourage attendance, particularly at the secondary level.(2)
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries, to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016 established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010. Aims to build the capacity of the national government and develop strategic policies to address the elimination of child labor in Mongolia.(48)
Government Sub-Program on Development of Small-Scale Mining until 2015	Minister for Agriculture and Industry, Minister for Energy, and local governor implemented program that aims to eliminate child labor in the mining sector, with provisions for providing children with informal or distance education. No research to confirm whether this program has been implemented.(1, 25)
Child Development and Protection Center*‡	NAC program that directly serves and provides services to children.(6, 29) Employs 16 staff and received approximately $216,000 USD of government funding in 2013.(6) Received 116 children in 2013 from the AIC for whom it provided shelter, social services, and education.(6)
Address Identification Center (AIC)*‡	NPA center that collected street children through weekly inspections.(29) Functioned as a temporary shelter and received children through referrals from other government agencies.(6) A January 2014 law dissolved the AIC and converted it into a shelter for victims of domestic violence.(40)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Mongolia.

The Government also participates in a wide range of development programs funded by agencies such as USAID, the World Bank, the EU, the Asian Development Bank, the IMF, UNICEF, and UNDP. The programs focus on issues such as rural education, universal basic education, vocational training, child rights, social protection policies, livestock-based livelihoods, water and sanitation, disaster preparedness, and HIV/AIDS.(13, 30, 32, 37, 39, 49) The question of whether these development programs have an impact on child labor does not appear to have been addressed.

Mongolia

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified in that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Mongolia (Table 9).

Montenegro

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2013, Montenegro made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government amended the Criminal Code to prohibit the use, procurement, or offering of children ages 14 to 18 for the production of pornography, and to also provide protection against forced marriage and the arrangement of sexual encounters with children. The Government also proposed a draft amendment to the Labor Law that would increase penalties for labor violations, including increased fines for labor violations involving children. However, children, especially Roma children, continue to engage in the worst forms of child labor in forced begging. The Government lacks a list of hazardous occupations prohibited for children, and there are no programs that systematically address the problem of children involved in forced begging and other work on the streets.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Montenegro are engaged in the worst forms of child labor in forced begging.(1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Montenegro.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	12.9 (12,867)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	87.7
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	14.4
Primary Completion Rate (%)		101.0

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2014.(4)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 3, 2005.(5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, activities unknown* (2)
Services	Collecting scrap metal,* selling small goods and food items,* washing car windows,* and begging* (2, 3)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation,* begging, and domestic service* as a result of human trafficking (6, 7)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Children are found selling small goods and food items during the summer season.(2, 3, 8) A source indicates organized begging involving children is a problem.(2) A large number of children who beg are Roma.(2, 3, 8) Montenegro continues to be a source, destination, and transit country for children trafficked for forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation. Children are trafficked internally and externally from and to other Balkan countries.(6) A large number of Roma and other minorities lack birth documentation, which may make accessing social services and child support difficult.(3, 9-11) The rate of unregistered children appears to be related to the costs of registration, unclear procedures, and insufficient awareness of the process.(11, 12)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Montenegro has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Free Public Education	Yes		Article 75 of the Constitution of Republic of Montenegro (15, 19)

* No conscription or no standing military.

During the reporting period, the Government made efforts to strengthen legal protections for children. New draft amendments to the Labor Law were proposed, which would increase penalties for labor violations, including increased fines for labor violations involving children.(2) In addition, under the draft law, labor inspectors would have the authority to fine employers from approximately $1,388 to $27,350 when a minor of age younger than 18 is involved in a labor violation.(2, 11) The Government also amended the Criminal Code to prohibit the use, procurement, and offering of a child for the production of pornography or pornographic performances to enhance protection for all age groups of children under 18.(2) It also amended the Criminal Code to provide protection against forced marriage and “making arrangements to meet children for a sexual relationship,” and adopted the Law on the Prevention of Illegal Businesses that aims to improve transparency and reduce labor violations, including child labor violations.(2, 11) The new Law on Social and Child Protection was adopted in May 2013 and includes a provision mandating special protection of victims of trafficking in persons. The Government drafted a new Foreigners Act that enables issuing of work/residence permits for foreign workers, which will serve as an identification card as well as “granting permanent residence status to children depending on the status of one or both of its parents.”(7)

Montenegro

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Despite these efforts, gaps in the legal framework still exist. While the Labor Law prohibits children under 18 from performing overtime and night work, there is an exception that allows employees between age 15 and 18 to work at night if the nature of the work requires a continuation of work that was interrupted by natural disasters or to prevent damage to raw and other materials.(20) The Government does not have a detailed, separate hazardous work list that prohibits children from working in dangerous activities, although these are generally mentioned in the law.(2, 11)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
The Inspectorate General	Enforce labor law, which also contains child labor regulations, and monitor working conditions in workplaces throughout the country.(1, 2, 21) Lead efforts, as an independent agency, in enforcing labor and other areas of inspection-related laws, including the protection of working children.(2, 11)
Supreme State Prosecutor	Investigate and enforce criminal laws on forced labor and trafficking for commercial sexual exploitation.(2, 7) Collect data on court rulings and crime convictions and submit them to the Office of the National Anti-Trafficking Coordinator (TIP Office).(7)
Montenegrin Courts for Trafficking	Process anti-trafficking crimes and make assistance available to the victims of trafficking. Publish all legal verdicts on an aggregated website.(7)
Ministry of Internal Affairs	Enforce criminal laws on forced labor, including forced begging. Implement processes and issue permits related to work and residence status for persons without permanent residency.(7)
Police Directorate	Enforce laws against sex trafficking and forced labor. Coordinate law enforcement actions on a national level.(7) Be responsible for proactive identification of the victims of trafficking. Collect data on the number of police investigations and submit it to the TIP Office.(7)
Ministry of Health	Assure physical competency needed for meeting a requirement for employment by issuing a medical certificate.(11) Provide protection to possible TIP victims, including children.(11)
Ministry of Justice	Enforce Criminal Codes together with Courts against crimes, including human trafficking, child begging, and child abuse.(11)
Ministry of Education	Provide training to children in certain professions in which children intend to work at an early age.(11)
The Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare	Protect children and families by providing social, child, and family protection in its social welfare centers. Identify potential victim of trafficking.(7) Protect overall children's rights. Forward cases to the police or the Ministry of Social Welfare if child labor violations are discovered.(2)
Ombudsman's Deputy for the Rights of the Child	Organize and maintain meetings with children through visits to schools, institutions, focus groups, or e-mails and social blogs for children of various ages, among other things.(2)

Law enforcement agencies in Montenegro took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, the Labor Inspectorate, which is a part of the Inspectorate General, employed 34 inspectors. According to officials of the Inspectorate, the number of inspectors is inadequate to conduct inspections across the entire country, and funding is insufficient to cover the scope of general inspection duties.(2) In 2013, labor inspectors received training on how to identify human trafficking for exploitation.(7)

The Labor Inspectorate carried out 12,000 inspections, including inspections in the informal sector.(2, 11) Although 8,000 violations were found, none involved child labor. There is no comprehensive database in which child labor violations can be entered; however, the Government does maintain a database on children involved in begging.(2)

Criminal Law Enforcement

The Ombudsman's Special Report on Child Begging, including its origins and causes in Montenegro, criticizes the Police and Social Centers, for insufficiently and inconsistently tracking information on children caught begging, and systemic lack of specialized services for the reintegration of children into the society.(2) In 2013, Police continued Operation Beggar and filed 40 misdemeanor charges against adults.(11) The law prescribes fines ranging from $650 to $1,970, or 60 days in prison for organizing, inciting, or forcing others to beg.(22) There were 158 children found begging, 129 of whom were from Montenegro, 9 from Serbia, 8 refugees, and 12 without citizenship. Of these, 46 children were referred to social institutions.(11) Generally, the police inform parents of children who are caught begging. Otherwise, children are referred to a temporary stay in a shelter and afterwards, to local social welfare centers.(22) The Ombudsman's research has established that a portion of these children often return to begging.(11)

In addition, the Office of the National Anti-Trafficking Coordinator participated in and organized trainings on combating trafficking, trafficking victim identification, and referrals. Participants included social and health workers, law enforcement officials, cadets, military, and representatives from local offices.(7)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Although the Government of Montenegro has established the National Office for Combating Human Trafficking and the Council on Children's Right, research found no evidence of coordinating mechanisms to combat child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Office of the National Anti-Trafficking Coordinator (TIP Office)	Coordinate efforts against trafficking in persons among relevant government institutions and international organizations and assure their cooperation. Present results of the trafficking efforts through participation in domestic and international events.(7) Harmonize domestic legislations with international standards. Oversee projects and initiatives for implementation of the main objectives from the National Strategy and Action Plans. Collect and maintain data on police investigations, court rulings, and verdicts that relate to human trafficking and victims of trafficking.(7) Fund SOS hotline for potential and existing TIP victims as well as the shelters for victims of human trafficking. Led by the TIP Office, which is also the National Coordinator for the Trafficking in Persons Task Force.(7)
Trafficking in Persons Task Force	Operate under the TIP Office, monitor and promote activities related to human trafficking; assess and approve semi-annual reports on the progress of objectives set up in the TIP action plans.(7) Include the representatives of the ministries, government agencies, international organizations, and two NGOs, including the TIP Office, Ministries of Interior, Justice, Foreign Affairs and European Integration, Minority and Human Rights, Health, Labor and Social Welfare, and Culture; Police Directorate; Supreme Court; Supreme State Prosecutors; and Inspectorate Authority.(7)

The Government of Montenegro also has the Council on Children's Right, which aims to promote children's rights in the areas of social services, child protection, health services, and education.(21) The Council did not meet during the reporting period.(2)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Montenegro has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Montenegro participated and funded programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description

Shelter for Human Trafficking Victims‡	Program funded by the Office of the National Anti-Trafficking Coordinator to cover operational costs of the shelter, including the salaries of shelter employees; the hotline for victims of trafficking; and some basic food, clothing, and medical assistance for victims. In 2013, financed with $41,000.(11)
Social Welfare Centers Funding*†	Government-supported social welfare centers that provide social, child, and family protection.(11, 25)
Group Children Center†	UNICEF- and the EU-supported program launched with pilot to develop a framework for the foster care system.(2)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Montenegro.

The Government of Montenegro continues to fund programs for the general protection of children; however, research found no evidence of programs to specifically and systematically address forced begging and other types of informal work on the streets. The Government has started programs that aim to reduce the problem of unregistered Roma children so that they can benefit from existing social programs.(11)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Morocco

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2013, Morocco made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government established an action plan to address gaps in its migration policy, and to draft and adopt trafficking laws, and expanded access to public education for migrant children. The Government also conducted research on children working as domestic servants in Casablanca. Further, the Government started its Integrated Public Policy on the Protection of Children, which is a key phase of its National Plan of Action for Children (PANE). However, children in Morocco continue to engage in child labor in agriculture and the worst forms of child labor in forced domestic service. The Government lacks a national coordinating mechanism to combat all worst forms of child labor and continues to delay approving legislation that would protect children employed in domestic service.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Morocco are engaged in child labor in agriculture and the worst forms of child labor in forced domestic service.⁽¹⁾ Child labor is primarily a rural phenomenon in Morocco, although it also occurs in urban areas. The Moroccan High Commission for Planning's recent annual labor surveys indicate a steady decline in the incidence of child labor over the past decade.^(1, 2) Evidence suggests that child labor exists among Morocco's migrant population.⁽¹⁾

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Morocco. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		98.9

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2014.⁽³⁾

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis, 2014.⁽⁴⁾

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, activities unknown (1, 5, 6)
	Fishing,† activities unknown (1, 5)
	Forestry, activities unknown* (1, 5)
Industry	Construction, activities unknown* (13-15)
	Weaving textiles*† (1, 7)
	Production of artisanal crafts (5, 8)

Sector/Industry	Activity

	Maintenance and repair of motor vehicles (1, 13)
	Street peddling (1, 14)
	Metallurgy* (1, 15)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor†	Commercial sexual exploitation as a result of human trafficking (1, 2, 7, 12)
	Domestic service as a result of human trafficking (1, 2, 7)
	Forced labor in the production of artisanal crafts and construction (7)
	Forced domestic service (7, 9, 11, 16, 17)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Limited evidence suggests that abandoned child domestic servants, often forced to live on the streets, become vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation.(18) Children, primarily boys, are engaged in commercial sexual exploitation in Tangier, Agadir, and Marrakech, which are popular tourist sites that attract customers from the Persian Gulf and Europe.(19) Children are trafficked from Morocco to countries in the Middle East and Europe for forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation.(2)

Despite strong enrollment rates in the early years of primary school, school dropout rates remain a problem. Recent research shows that causes of the high dropout rate include irrelevant school curricula and transportation barriers to attending school.(20) Violence and a lack of security in the school environment are also factors that cause children to drop out, increasing their vulnerability to child labor.(1, 20)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Morocco has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Children in the informal sector do not have the same legal protections as children working in the formal sector. The Labor Code does not apply to those who are self-employed, work in private residences (including domestic workers), or work in traditional artisan or handicraft sectors for businesses with less than five employees, which leaves children working in these sectors unprotected by the law.(7, 26, 27) A draft bill to clarify Article 4 of the Labor Code regarding child labor in traditional artisan or handicraft activities remains under review.(28, 29) The draft bill stipulates a minimum age of 15 years for such work and regulates apprenticeships in the sector to ensure these are educational opportunities and that youth are not used for menial tasks or other forms of child labor.(28, 30)

The Government continued to refine a draft bill that would increase protections for domestic workers. If passed, the law would prohibit the employment of children under 15 years of age as domestic servants and determine the working conditions, terms, and conditions of employment for those between the ages of 15 and 18.(27) The continued failure to pass this bill puts children in domestic service at risk for exploitive labor conditions.(1, 31)

The Labor Code allows children under the age of 15 to perform certain types of agricultural work and children 16–17 years to perform agricultural work at night, potentially exposing children involved in this exempted agricultural work to hazardous labor.(21) The Labor Code’s prescribed penalties for employing children under age 18 in hazardous work include fines or jail time between 6 days and 3 months. Moreover, the ILO Committee of Experts notes that the fines imposed on companies for employing children in hazardous work are inadequate to act as an effective deterrent.(27)

The Government participated in two workshops during the reporting period to draft additional trafficking provisions in the Penal Code that would add further protections for victims of human trafficking.(1)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Employment and Social Affairs’ (MOESA) Child Labor Task Force	Enforce child labor laws and oversee programs on child labor. Employ labor inspectors in 51 sectors nationwide; one inspector in each sector dedicated to child labor.(7, 30, 32, 33)
Ministry of the Interior	Enforce prohibitions on prostitution and other exploitive crimes involving minors as established in the Penal Code.(33)
Ministry of Justice and Liberties (MOJ)	Prosecute criminal offenses against children, such as commercial sexual exploitation and child trafficking.(32)
MOJ’s Child Labor Units	Process cases involving women and children once in the court system.(1)

Law enforcement agencies in Morocco took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms. However, research found no evidence that criminal law enforcement agencies took such actions.

Labor Law Enforcement

No information was available on the number of child labor cases that were investigated or prosecuted. Reports from 2013 indicate that enforcement of child labor laws remains weak.(1, 13, 30) MOESA employs 492 labor inspectors; but, this number is insufficient to effectively enforce child labor laws.(7) Official procedures to process child labor violations require the participation of several agencies per case, placing an additional coordination burden on labor inspectors. Labor inspectors would have greater capacity to carry out their work if procedures could be streamlined.(1)

In 2013, child labor focal-point inspectors received additional training on child labor.(7)

A limited number of sources show that child labor laws were violated in small private farms and private urban residences that employ domestic servants as young as 6 years old. However, current law prohibits labor enforcement officials from entering these spaces.(7)

Criminal Law Enforcement

No information was available on the number of commercial sexual exploitation of children or child trafficking cases that were investigated or prosecuted.(1)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Ministry of Solidarity, Women, Family and Social Development (MSWFSD)	Coordinate the implementation of the National Plan of Action for Children (PANE) (2006–2015). Establish continuity of child protection efforts, increase access to education, and eliminate child labor. (30, 33)
The National Observatory for Children's Rights	Register complaints related to child welfare and refer them to the labor inspectorate units and to the general law enforcement officials. Operate a toll-free telephone number available to child victims of violence, including commercial sexual exploitation. Operate specific units in hospitals for women and children who are victims of violence.(1) Operate 75 Child Reception Centers that provide services to child victims of violence, sexual abuse, or neglect.(30)
MOESA, Office for the Fight Against Child Labor	Provide some guidance and limited funding to NGOs working against child labor.(1)

Although the Government has a mechanism to coordinate its anti-trafficking efforts, it does not have a body to coordinate nationwide efforts to combat other forms of child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Morocco has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
MSWFSD's National Plan of Action for Children (PANE)*†	Establishes policies that promote children's health, protection, civic participation, and education. Supported by UNICEF.(30, 33) Promotes the Integrated Public Policy on the Protection of Children, an interdisciplinary approach to analyze the scope of services that prohibit, prevent, and respond to abuse, exploitation, and violence against children, and to define responsibilities by coordinating mechanisms to improve access, regional coverage, and impact of services.(1)
Migration Policy Reform†	Expands access to public education facilities for migrant children, decreasing their vulnerability to child labor.(1)
United Nations Development Assistance Framework (UNDAF)*	Addresses education, health, and socio-economic development in an effort to alleviate poverty. Focuses on equal access to education for vulnerable children.(34)

* The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Policy was launched during the reporting period.

Morocco

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

During the reporting period, progress on the legislative and institutional front was slowed due to the breakup of the governing coalition and related ministry restructuring.(1)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Morocco funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Survey on Girls in Domestic Service†‡	MSWFSD program that carried out a survey on the domestic work of girls in Casablanca during the reporting period. Released publication in early 2014.(1)
Regional Child at Risk Program‡	MSWFSD program that serves child victims of sexual exploitation, street children, and other child workers in the regions of Agadir, Oujda, and Tangier.(35)
National Vocational Programs‡	Ministry of National Education and Vocational Training (MONEVT) program that provides education and training to at-risk youth; specific programs address factors that contribute to reduction of child labor.(1)
Ending Child Labor in Handicrafts‡	Government program in Fes and Marrakesh to reduce child labor in the handicraft sector. Aims to remove children under age 15 from child labor, reintegrate them into school, and improve the working conditions for children between the ages of 15 and 18. The budget is $46,000.(6, 36)
“Tayssir,” Conditional Cash Transfer Program‡*	MONEVT program that provides direct cash transfers, between $7 and $16 a month, to qualifying families if the children meet school attendance criteria. Aims to increase school enrollment and reduce dropout rates, particularly in rural areas.(28, 30, 37, 38) Succeeded in reducing public school dropout rates among its beneficiaries by 68 percent and increasing school enrollment by 10 percent during the reporting period.(1, 39, 40)
Non-formal education programs‡*	MONEVT program that offers vocational training and alternative education programs to assist school dropouts to re-enroll in school. Has enrolled a number of working children, including child domestics. During the 2012–2013 school year, enrolled 63,488 children, of whom 30,282 were girls.(30, 41)
Child Protection Centers (CSC)‡	Childhood Division of the Ministry of Youth and Sport program that provides social and educational services to minors referred by the courts.(42, 43) Serves victims of abuse, child laborers, and street children, among others. Aims to strengthen children’s ties with their families and with society.(42, 43)
Child Protection Units(CPUs)‡	Government program that provides temporary shelter for street children, including former child domestic workers. Offers medical, legal, and psychological services and service referrals to targeted children. Managed through the PANE project, and based in Casablanca, Marrakesh, Tangier, Meknès, and Essaouira.(12, 30, 44)
Social Welfare Program*	Part of the UNDAF, addresses education, including equal access to education, especially for vulnerable children. Also addresses health and socio-economic development of children.(1)
Study on the Situation of Women and Children	A joint program by UNICEF and the Government that analyzes the vulnerabilities of women and children in Morocco. Data sets include child labor.(1)
National Initiative for Human Development Support Project Phase II (INDH2)*	$100 million World Bank-funded, government program that increases access to basic services, such as schools; provides enhanced income-earning opportunities, such as micro-credit for women; and supports improved participation at the local level, to assure sustainability.(44-46)
High Commission for Planning	A division of the Ministry of Planning and Development of the National Territory that conducts annual labor surveys, which include collecting data on the number of children under age 15 who work.(6, 47, 48)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Morocco.

Some NGOs that work with child laborers and at-risk children receive only a small portion of their funding from the Government. They stressed that government support is not sufficient to carry out their activities, and most needed to rely on private and international donations.(1)

The High Commission for Planning’s most recent national child labor survey, conducted in 2011, does not fully take into account child labor in the informal sector or in domestic work. Furthermore, the survey lacks a breakdown or further analysis of the number of children between the ages of 15 and 18 working in the worst forms of child labor.(1, 5)

In 2013, Mozambique made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Ministry of Labor completed a draft of the country's National Action Plan on Child Labor (2013–2019) presented jointly with the members of the Community of Lusophone Countries at the Global Conference on Child Labor in 2013. Police officers continue to receive training in child and trafficking in persons (TIP) protection and prevention and other social programs. However, children in Mozambique continue to engage in child labor in agriculture and domestic service. Mozambique's legal framework leaves gaps in preventing child labor and its worst forms. There is no list of hazardous activities prohibited to children, and education is only compulsory until age 13. Current programs focus on raising awareness about child labor, including street work, but do not address other sectors in which children, especially migrants, engage in dangerous work.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Mozambique continue to engage in child labor in agriculture and domestic service.(1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Mozambique.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Mozambique

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Mozambique lacks recent data on the industries and sectors in which child labor occurs.(28)

Child labor is often found in border towns among migrant children from neighboring countries. A 2013 UNICEF study found that children who migrated to the border town of Ressano Garcia work 10 to 12 hours a day for low or no pay, without access to education.(21) These children work as street vendors and as sellers of alcohol.(21)

Within Mozambique, commercial sexual exploitation is especially prevalent in rural areas, border towns, and in the regions of Beira, Maputo, Nacala, Nampula, and Tete.(2, 13, 16, 17, 22-26) During the reporting period, there was an increase of girls found in commercial sexual exploitation, especially in Beira, Chimoio, Maputo, Nacala, and Pemba. Commercial sexual exploitation of girls occurs in bars, clubs, restaurants, and at overnight stopping points in the southern transport corridor.(2)

Girls from Malawi, Swaziland, and Zimbabwe are trafficked to Mozambique for commercial sexual exploitation and forced domestic service.(2, 11, 16, 27, 29-34) Children are trafficked internally and to South Africa for commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor in agriculture, mines, and domestic service.(11, 23, 35-39)

Access to education in Mozambique is limited because of the lack of schools and teachers. Although primary education is free, the cost of school supplies is prohibitive for many families.(16, 18, 24, 40-43) The Government of Mozambique estimated in 2011 that nearly 200,000 school-age children were out of the school system.(44) Despite government efforts to provide birth registration to children, some children may not attend school because they do not have the birth records needed for enrollment.(25, 45, 46) In Mozambique, 7 percent of girls and 8 percent of boys attend secondary school.(2) Even though the National Organization of Professors establishes a code of conduct, verbal, physical, and sexual abuse is common in schools. Teachers often demand sex from students as a condition for advancement to the next grade.(13, 47) For many children, this type of abuse leads to withdrawal from school.(2, 13, 16, 40, 45, 47)

Additionally, there are an estimated 350,000 to 870,000 orphaned children, many of whom lost their parents to HIV/AIDS.(28, 44, 48, 49) The Government estimates that nearly 20,000 children are heads of households and are responsible for their younger siblings.(44, 50) As a result, they are likely to suffer poor school attendance and are at risk of entering the worst forms of child labor.(13, 16, 48)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Mozambique has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Labor Law (51)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Labor Law (51)

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Constitution; TIP Law; Child Protection Act (52-55)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		TIP Law; Penal Code; Law 6/2008 (3, 52-54)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 405 of the Penal Code; Article 64 of the Children's Code; TIP Law (2, 13, 56, 57)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Act 3/97; TIP Law (3, 28)
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	Yes	19	Law on Military Service (58)
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	18	Law on Military Service (58)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	13	Child Protection Act (12, 41, 59)
Free Public Education	Yes		Child Protection Act (12, 41, 59)

The Labor Code does not specifically identify hazardous activities from which children are prohibited.(12, 13, 16, 28, 60) While children age 18 and younger are prohibited from military conscription, the age limit may be lowered during times of war, therefore making children vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor.(3)

Children working in the informal sector do not have the same legal protections as children working in the formal sector.(61)

The Government does not have a general law against child labor; children will remain vulnerable until a law is enacted that imposes sufficient penalties on child labor violators. The Office of Planning and Studies in the Ministry of Labor (MOL) reported that it plans to outline a child labor law, which would create sufficient penalties to prosecute those who violate child labor laws.(3)

The Government is revising the Penal Code; provisions to protect children from all forms of trafficking are expected to be included in the revised Code.(14, 16, 28, 62)

The Child Protection Act provides for free and compulsory education through primary school.(56) However, primary school covers 7 years and begins at age 6, making education compulsory until age 13 and leaving children ages 13–14 vulnerable to child labor, including its worst forms, because 15 is the minimum age to work.(12)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MITRAB)	Enforce child labor laws in a society that, in practice, permits child labor as a means to reduce poverty, especially when a child's parent has died from HIV/AIDS.(63-67)
Ministry of Justice	Operate recovery centers called " Prisões Escola ," which provide study opportunities for children who have been in trouble with the law.(7)
The National Police Force	Enforce all criminal laws, including forced child labor, child trafficking, the commercial sexual exploitation of children, and the use of children for illicit activities. Includes special gender-sensitive police units.(63) Assigned a specialist in each of 215 police stations to help women and children who were victims of trafficking, sexual abuse, domestic violence, and sexual assault. Through February 2014, 490 specialists have received this training.(68)
Criminal Investigation Branch (PIC)	Investigate and refer cases to the Attorney General's Office (PGR). Has a seven-person unit devoted to anti-trafficking and violence against women and children.(70)
PGR	Receive cases from the PIC, which have been prepared for prosecution. During the reporting period, continued to organize TIP law seminars for the police.(3, 68)
Labor Inspectorate General	Enforce criminal laws on trafficking, along with the police and PIC.(3)

Mozambique

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

The extent to which law enforcement agencies in Mozambique took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms, is unclear.

Labor Law Enforcement

During the reporting period, the Ministry of Labor (MITRAB) had 130 labor inspectors. In 2013, MITRAB had a budget of $33,333 for child labor-related issues.(69) Inspectors are rarely able to carry out their work, as they are poorly trained; most are underpaid, making them susceptible to bribes. There are not enough inspectors to cover the entire population, especially when most of the population works in remote areas in agriculture.(3)

The MOL does not provide data on the number of inspections carried out for different labor law violations. Therefore, there is no information available on the number of inspections of child labor violations.(3) There is no mechanism in place for the public to report labor law violations.(3, 63)

Research found that children working in the informal sector do not have the same protections under child labor laws and regulations as children working in the formal sector. Moreover, the ILO Committee of Experts has encouraged the Government to expand its investigative efforts, including increasing the capacity of the labor inspectorate to monitor child labor in the informal sector.(70)

Criminal Law Enforcement

The Ministry of Justice did not release the number of cases initiated in 2013 or carried forward to 2014. During 2013, there were 26 cases of defendants brought to trial for TIP), with two acquitted and 24 convicted. All 24 convictions carried prison sentences, ranging from 10 months to 19 years.(71)

In January 2013, Mozambican authorities worked with South African authorities who found five Mozambican girls in forced prostitution in South Africa. The PGR has been following this case in South Africa.(68)

There is no information available on violations of the worst forms of child labor.(3) Evidence suggests that the Government lacks the procedures to identify victims of child trafficking and to provide significant assistance to child victims of commercial sexual exploitation.(16, 24, 72) The Ministries of Justice and Interior, including the police and the Labor Inspectorate General, have insufficient financial and human resources to enforce laws pertaining to children effectively.(3, 12, 45, 69, 73, 74) The Attorney General's Office states that police reports submitted for prosecution are of very low quality, and lack appropriate evidence for prosecution.(3)

During the reporting period, trainings on TIP prevention and protection and children's rights continued for police officers.(68, 74) Mozambique's Center for Judicial Training included a session on trafficking that was conducted for 50 judges.(3, 73, 74) Furthermore, 20 Mozambican judges were trained in Brazil and produced an electronic manual on TIP.(74) During the reporting period, the Attorney General's Office worked with provincial governments to create interministerial "reference groups" for TIP and vulnerable children; they consist of officials from the provincial administrative office, the Attorney General's Office, the police, border guards, social workers, and NGOs.(68)

Despite these efforts, the Government of Mozambique lacks sufficient resources to assist trafficking victims; for example, it lacks safe houses and any formal referral system for victims.(16, 27, 73-75)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established an institutional mechanism for the coordination of child welfare issues; however, there are no mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Council on the Rights of the Child (CNAC), an interagency commission led by the Ministry of Women and Social Action (MIMAS)	Coordinate efforts to promote the welfare of children. Composed of civil society representatives and the Ministries of Justice, Education, Health, and Youth and Sports.(7)
National Commission on Children's Rights	Interministerial body created in 2010; includes representatives from the Ministries of Education, Health, Interior, Women and Social Action, and Justice. Lacks resources to carry out child protection plans.(3)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Mozambique has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Plan of Action for Children II (2013–2019)*	Establishes 13 goals, which include an increase in birth registrations, access to education, decrease in child marriage, and an increase in participation of children in social protection programs. Establishes four priority areas: child survival, child development, child protection, and child participation.(69, 76)
Poverty Reduction Action Plan (2011–2014)*	Aims to increase production and productivity in farming and fishing. For children, focuses on basic education, special needs, nutrition, civil registration, judicial assistance, and other social protection programs.(7) Runs the Five-Year Government Program (2010–2014), which focuses on combating poverty and work culture as a way to reach economic growth and poverty reduction.(7)
The National Action Plan on Birth Registration*	Aims to clear away a backlog of birth registrations and to strengthen and decentralize the birth registration system.(40, 48)
The Strategic Plan for Education and Culture (2006–2010/2011)*	Aims to ensure primary education is free and compulsory through higher primary school (grades six and seven) and to improve post-primary education.(77) Proposes to increase access to education for female students, support the construction of new schools, and encourage the training and recruitment of teachers.(77)
Employment and Professional Training Strategy (2006–2015)	Aims to raise awareness and disseminate information about labor laws, including the laws pertaining to the worst forms of child labor.(42, 78)
Strategic Plan of Action on Combating Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children in the Southern African Development Community	Adopted in 2009. Research did not uncover any updates or additional information on this Plan of Action.(40, 78)
Southern African Regional Network against Trafficking and Abuse of Children	Provides advocacy and services for victims; composed of government and civil society representatives. Works to prevent child abuse, commercial sexual exploitation, child labor, and trafficking.(33)
National Strategy for Basic Social Insurance*	Organizes support for the most vulnerable and improves their capacities to manage and mitigate sudden and cyclical shocks.(71) Defines the guidelines and actions for social basic protection for 2010–2014, which is ensured by the Ministry of Women and Social Action and other institutions such as the Ministry of Health, Education, and Justice.(71) Includes the Direct Social Support Program (PASD), Programa de Apoio Social Directo , which aims to provide access and maintenance of children in school through food assistance, school supplies, and medical.(7)
Five-Year Government Program (2010–2014)‡*	Ensures access to basic education for the most vulnerable children.(7) Significant component of this program is the Direct Support to Schools (ADE) program, with a budget of USD $18 million for primary schools and $1.5 million for secondary schools in both 2013 and 2014.(71) Provides funds to school councils and parent associations to use in improving access and quality.(71)
Employment and Professional Training Strategy (2006–2015)	Reduces poverty and unemployment by working with employers, workers, and members of civil society. Conducts child labor research on different topics and sectors to help design and implement government interventions. Establishes support for participating institutions; implementing polices and legislation on child labor; and providing training in child labor subjects for institutions, stakeholders, and civil society.(7)

*The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

In 2013, the Ministry of Labor completed a first draft of the country's National Action Plan on Child Labor and the Ministry of Justice drafted the Action Plan for the Central Office for the Protection of Trafficking Victims.(3, 68)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Mozambique participated and funded programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
USDOL-funded project	USDOL-funded project to assist countries in developing a National Plan for Eradication of Child Labor. Promotes South-South cooperation between Lusophone-speaking countries to eliminate the worst forms of child labor.(79, 80)
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues Project	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016 established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010. Aims to improve research and the collection of data on child labor and forced labor.(81)
10-year UNESCO Literacy Initiative*	Government participates in a 10-year UNESCO Literacy Initiative.(28)
Police training course on combating domestic violence, HIV/AIDS, and TIP*	Government and UNICEF program, which is a two-week course covering prevention and protection of TIP victims, rights of children, domestic abuse, and child custody law. Participants receive handbooks and copies of laws. Course is now a permanent part of the police training curriculum.(3)
Cash transfer program for children head of households*	Government cash transfer program approved in 2010 and largely funded by USAID. Allows orphans and vulnerable children ages 12–18 to receive benefits. Cash transfers to child-headed households are funded through the National Basic Social Security Strategy (ENSSB).(71) While no data are available on how many children benefit from this program, the Government of Mozambique has been steadily increasing funding to social protection mechanisms since 2011.(3, 71)
Government education funding††*	Government received $1.2 million US ($33.7 million Meticaís) in funding for education in 2013, representing a 18 percent increase from 2012.(82)
Street programs for children	Programs organized by the Government and civil society organizations that provide shelters and schooling to prepare street children for reintegration into society. The Government is working with civil society to write regulations that would define minimum standards for assessing foster care providers and would more clearly define standards for the reintegration of street children into families.(16, 71)
UNICEF Training	UNICEF training program for government officials on the use of radio broadcasts to communicate with the public about issues of child abuse, including child labor.(63)
Hotline Speak Child-116‡*	Government-run telephone hotline, Speak Child-116, established in 2009 to report cases of child abuse and exploitation.(83) Between January and March 2012, the hotline received 366 cases reports of these cases, of which 51 were referred to the police, 45 to the Women and Children Victim Assistance Unit (GAMC), and 33 to the Family Council.(84) In 2013, with the support of UNICEF, a text message system was set up to receive complaints.(85) It is unknown how many of the complaints were related to child labor.
Commercial sexual exploitation and trafficking protection mechanisms‡	Government protection mechanisms for victims of child trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation. There is a system in place for reporting instances of the sexual exploitation of children.(16, 29, 63, 64, 74, 75) The Government also maintains approximately 184 help desks for trafficking victims. Victims are also referred to police stations to file complaints and receive assistance.(29, 52, 62, 69)
Victims of Violence Centers‡	Government program operated by the Women and Children Victim Assistance Unit that provides temporary shelter to child victims of trafficking.(69) In 2013, the Government opened two new centers, for a total of 24 centers.(71)
Permanent shelter for vulnerable children‡	Permanent shelter, with two psychologists on staff run by the Government and Save the Children Fund for vulnerable children, including trafficking victims.(68)

*The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Mozambique.

There are no data on how much funding is provided to eliminate and prevent child labor and on progress made under the programs.(3)

Although Mozambique has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs, especially in agriculture and domestic service, is insufficient to address the extent of the problem fully.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Namibia

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

In 2013, Namibia made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government eliminated the requirement that parents contribute to primary school development funds and slightly increased the number of labor inspectors employed. However, children in Namibia continue to engage in child labor in agriculture and in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation. Gaps remain in existing laws regarding child prostitution and the use of children for illicit activities; the draft Child Care and Protection Bill and hazardous list are still pending approval; and resources for enforcement are insufficient. In addition, the number of labor law inspections decreased during the year.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Namibia are engaged in child labor in agriculture, and in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation.(1-5) The most recent Child Activities Survey is from 2005.(2, 5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Namibia. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		85.4

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2014.(6)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Tending and herding livestock, including cattle, sheep,* and goats* (3, 5, 7, 8)
	De-bushing, plowing, planting, weeding, protecting crops against birds, and harvesting (3)
Services	Domestic service (4, 8, 9)
	Taking care of children (3, 10, 11)
	Working in informal bars called shebeens , activities unknown (5)
	Vending, including on the street (11, 12)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Street work, activities unknown (13)
	Commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of human trafficking (5, 8, 11, 13)
	Work in agriculture, cattle herding, and domestic service as a result of trafficking (8, 11, 13, 14)
	Forced labor in agriculture and domestic service (8)
	Used by adults to commit crimes, including drug trafficking, residential break-ins, and cattle theft (4, 8)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Child labor in Namibia takes place mainly in agriculture on communal farms in the northern part of the country. Livestock herding is conducted primarily by boys.(5) Girls perform the majority of domestic work.(4, 13) Girls, and to a lesser extent boys, are engaged in commercial sexual exploitation.(4, 13) Although evidence is limited, it is reported that girls from Angola, Zambia, and Zimbabwe are commercially sexually exploited within the country.(4, 14) Children orphaned as a result of HIV/AIDS and children from the marginalized San ethnic group are particularly vulnerable to all types of exploitation.(13, 15)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Namibia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 20, Constitution (17)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 20, Constitution (17)

* No conscription or no standing military.

There continue to be gaps in Namibia's legal framework. The previously drafted list of hazardous activities for children was not taken up for review and approval by the Minister of Labor and Social Welfare (MLSW) during the reporting period.(22) The Combating of Immoral Practices Act and the Children's Act of 1960 prohibit parents, guardians, or those possessing custody of a child from offering the child for prostitution but do not fully prohibit the use, procurement, or offering of all children under the age of 18 for prostitution or pornography.(9, 20) While the

Namibia

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Government, in collaboration with civil society, has drafted a Child Care and Protection Bill to specifically address child trafficking and other crimes including prostitution, pornography, and the use of children for illicit activities, the Bill has yet to be brought before Parliament.(4, 5, 9)

Article 20 of the Constitution mandates free compulsory education until the completion of primary education or attainment of age 16, whichever comes first.(17) Although free education is guaranteed by the Constitution, the Education Act of 2001 authorizes schools to establish school development funds to be paid by parents.(23) In 2013, the Ministry of Education (MOE) abolished the requirement that parents contribute to their child's school development fund. This requirement had previously been a barrier to some children's ability to attend school.(15, 24)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare (MLSW)	Enforce child labor laws and investigate allegations of child labor law violations, including forced labor. Responsible for cases involving trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children.(4, 5, 25) Work with the Ministry of Safety and Security (MSS); Ministry of Gender, Equality, and Child Welfare (MGECW); Namibia Central Intelligence Service; and the Ministry of Education (MOE) on child labor matters.(4, 5) Lead these ministries in joint inspection teams.(4, 5, 25)
Ministry of Safety and Security (MSS)	Enforce criminal laws and conduct site visits with labor inspectors in case a criminal case needs to be opened.(4, 5) Enforced by Namibian Police, particularly its 16 Women and Child Protection Units (WACPU) and Criminal Investigations Division.(4, 26)
Ministry of Gender, Equality, and Child Welfare (MGECW)	Lead all anti-trafficking efforts and coordinate closely with the Namibian Police's WACPU.(4, 5) Responsible for cases involving trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children.(4, 25) Remove children from child labor situations during inspections and bring to a regional WACPU to receive assistance from MGECW social workers or to an MGECW shelter, six of which exist throughout the country.(4)
Joint Child Labor Inspection Committee	Coordinate activities to enforce child labor laws. Led by MLSW and comprised of MLSW, MSS, and MGECW officials.(5) Refer children identified during labor inspections or investigations to MGECW social workers or to an MGECW-operated shelter for care.(5)

Labor law enforcement agencies in Namibia took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms. However, research found no evidence that criminal law enforcement agencies took such actions.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, the Labor Inspectorate employed approximately 73 labor inspectors, an increase of 33 inspectors from the previous reporting period. All inspectors received child labor training during the year.(5) In-country stakeholders report that the number of inspectors is not sufficient to cover the entire country, especially remote rural areas.(5) The MLSW conducted 1,981 labor inspections, approximately 1,000 fewer inspections than were conducted in the previous reporting period. Inspections were conducted in agriculture, retail sales, security, domestic employment, and fishing and construction.(5) No child labor violations were identified during the inspections.(5)

Inspections are carried out in all areas where work is performed.(27) However, inspectors sometimes have difficulty gaining access to large communal and family-owned commercial farms and to private households.(15, 25) NGOs report that the difficulty accessing private and small rural farms makes addressing child labor challenging.(5, 15)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research found no evidence that criminal law enforcement agencies in Namibia took actions to combat child labor in 2013. No information is available on the number of investigators responsible for enforcing criminal laws on the worst forms of child labor or the number of investigations conducted. There were no prosecutions or convictions for child labor violations.(5)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that the Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms.

Currently, worst forms of child labor issues are handled by the MLSW, in conjunction with the Ministry of Home Affairs and Immigration, Namibian Police, MGECW, and MOE. The ministries coordinate their efforts through the regional WACPU that house police, social workers, legal advisors, and health workers, and regional Child Care and Protection Forums led by local councils, with participation from civil society.(4)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Namibia has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

* The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Policy was launched during the reporting period.

In 2013, the Government did not establish any policies in relation to child labor.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Namibia funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 7. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016 established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010.(33) Aims to build the capacity of the national Government and develop strategic policies to address the elimination of child labor and strengthen legal protections and social service delivery for child domestic workers.(33)

Also provides subsidies and funding to NGOs that assist victims of trafficking.(37)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Namibia.

Although the Government of Namibia provides assistance to vulnerable children and services to some victims of child labor, research found no evidence of programs to assist children in agriculture, commercial sexual exploitation, and domestic service.

Nepal

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2013, Nepal made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. Despite the lack of a functioning Constituent Assembly for all of 2013, the Government took several actions to address child labor. The Government doubled the number of labor inspectors; set three new directives on how the rescue, rehabilitation, and reintegration of child laborers is conducted; and began reporting on the number and type of inspections it conducts and the resulting sanctions imposed on violators. Additionally, the Government began using the $4.73 million Central Labor Welfare Fund, which is partially used to rehabilitate former child laborers through support programs, including scholarships and vocational training. The Government participates in several programs to strengthen its national legislation and policies regarding child labor, improve its education system, and withdraw and prevent children from the worst forms of child labor. However, children in Nepal continue to engage in child labor in agriculture and the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation. Nepal lacks a compulsory education law and children ages 16 and 17 are excluded from the protections of the country's hazardous work list, leaving children vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. The number of investigations and convictions for child trafficking is also inadequate given the scope of trafficking in Nepal.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Nepal are engaged in child labor in agriculture and the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation.(1-6) More than three-quarters of child laborers work in agriculture.(1, 2, 6) More girls than boys are subjected to hazardous labor, including commercial sexual exploitation, and many children work under informal work arrangements.(2, 7-9) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Nepal.

	Forced labor in carpet weaving, domestic service, stone breaking, brick manufacturing, embroidery of textiles (zari), and begging (5, 16, 21, 36, 37)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Forced labor, including bonded labor, exists in Nepal. Some children, called Kamaiyas, are born into a family legacy of bonded labor, while other bonded child laborers come from large, landless families.(21, 37) Girls who are forced to work as household servants are sometimes sexually abused.(29, 38, 39)

Nepali children are trafficked to India to work in various sectors, including the embroidery, leather, and garment industries. Some also work in domestic service or are forced to beg.(5, 34, 40) Limited evidence suggests that some children are also trafficked to India to work in circuses—although reports indicate that in recent years the number of children working in circuses has declined significantly.(35) Nepal is also a source country for children trafficked to India and the Middle East for commercial sexual exploitation. Internal trafficking occurs for commercial sexual exploitation and indentured work in domestic service or as factory workers.(5, 16, 33)

Research indicates that not all children in Nepal have access to education, which increases the risk of children engaging in the worst forms of child labor. Some rural villages do not have secondary schools, requiring children to walk for hours to attend classes.(41) The costs of teacher fees, books, and uniforms are prohibitive for many families. Some children, often girls, are not sent to school.(7) In addition, children with disabilities face barriers to education, in some cases, including denial of school admission.(42) A lack of sanitation facilities in schools also deters some girls from attending.(43)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Nepal has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

* No conscription or no standing military.

During the reporting period, the Government finalized amendments to the Child Labor Prohibition and Regulation Act of 2000; however, it has not yet been submitted to the Constituent Assembly. If the amendments become law, they will raise the maximum age to be considered a child from 16 to 18 years to be in line with international standards regarding working in hazardous conditions and activities; increase the maximum fine for illegally employing a child, including in hazardous activities and conditions; and provide protections for informants and witnesses involved in criminal investigations of child labor.(1)

In June 2013, the Government outlawed kamlari bonded labor, a form of bonded labor specific to female child domestic servants.(50) However, evidence suggests that as of December 2013, the practice is still occurring in western districts of Nepal and Kathmandu.(51)

The Child Labor Prohibition and Regulation Act of 2000 establishes a list of occupations prohibited for children, such as working in the tourism industry, workshops, laboratories, slaughterhouses, cold storage facilities, public transportation, construction, manufacturing, and energy production.(44) However, the minimum age of 16 for hazardous work, as stated in Chapters 1.2.a and 2.3.2, is not consistent with international standards and fails to protect children ages 16 and 17 from work that could jeopardize their health and safety.(52) During the reporting period, the Government of Nepal began a Decent Work Country Program with the ILO, which intends to create a revised list of hazardous occupations prohibited to children.(53)

Children ages 16 and 17 are not covered under the Children's Act, as stated in Chapter 1.2.a, and therefore may face criminal penalties if found participating in activities, including commercial sexual exploitation and the sale of drugs. Because 16 and 17 year olds are not consider children under the legal framework, there is no prohibition against employing children ages 16 and 17 in the production of pornography.(45)

Education is not compulsory in Nepal; this may make children vulnerable to child labor.(1, 54)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Department of Labor (DOL)	Enforce child labor laws, with inspectors having jurisdiction in both the formal and informal sectors. Located within the Ministry of Labor and Employment (MoLE).(1)
Office of Attorney General	Prosecute trafficking-related cases from the district level to the Supreme Court. Located within the Ministry of Law.(1)
The Women's and Children's Service Directorate of the Nepal Police	Investigate crimes against women and children, including trafficking. Conduct work through the Nepal Police Women and Children Service Centers (WCSCs), commonly called the Women's Cell, located in all 75 districts. Nepal Police operate under the Ministry of Home Affairs.(1)
The Office of the Special Rapporteur on Trafficking	Monitor the enforcement of laws related to trafficking in persons, including the commercial sexual exploitation of children, at the national level. Part of the National Human Rights Commission.(1)
Central Child Welfare Board (CCWB)	Monitor the enforcement of laws related to child exploitation, including the commercial sexual exploitation of children, at the national level. Located within the Ministry of Women, Children and Social Welfare (MWCSW).(1)
District Child Welfare Boards (DCWB)	Enforce child labor laws at the local level. Manage interagency coordination and the levying of civil fines to address child labor issues. Governed by a CCWB located within the MWCSW.(1)
Chief District Offices (CDO) and Women Development Offices	Monitor the enforcement of laws related to the commercial sexual exploitation of children at the district level. Located within the Ministry of Home Affairs.(1)
National Network Against Child Labor (NNACL)	Serve as a referral mechanism for children who are found in child labor to access services.(55) Consists of district labor officers, district women and children officers, officers from the Nepal Police Women and Children Service Center, CDOs, NGOs, and thousands of youth clubs.(1)
National Coordination Committee on Human Trafficking	Implement laws and counter trafficking efforts, including working with NGOs to link children to proper services. Formed by the MWCSW and made up of senior officials from the MWCSW and other ministries, as well as representatives of NGOs and intergovernmental agencies and victims. Serve as the lead agency involved in policy to control human trafficking.(1)
Kathmandu Child Labor Committee	Address reports of bonded child labor in Kathmandu. Comprised of the CDO, three assistant CDOs, the Child Welfare Officer, and others as needed.(1)
Monitoring Action Committee	Investigate reports of commercial sexual exploitation, including the exploitation of children specifically in the adult entertainment sector.(3)
Ministry of Land Reform and Management	Enforce laws that prohibit bonded labor in agriculture.(36)

Law enforcement agencies in Nepal took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, DOL reported that it revamped its inspection program, adding 11 new inspector positions, bringing the total to 21. In contrast to previous years, all positions were filled in 2013.(1) In the absence of an official DOL inspector, Chief District Offices (CDO) and Nepal Police officers have the authority to act on child labor issues.(1) Additionally, DOL and NGOs provided funding, support and basic training for child rights offices in each of Nepal's 75 districts under their District Child Welfare Boards (DCWB). In fiscal year 2013–2014, DOL operated on a budget of approximately $246,000.(1, 55)

Labor inspectors received routine training on laws and enforcement relating to child labor.(1) CDOs and Nepal Police officers received training on laws and enforcement related to child labor in their introductory training programs. The CCWB provided child rights training to Child Rights and Child Welfare Officers in all 75 districts.(1)

In 2013, DOL reported that it conducted 800 inspections, a 33 percent increase from the previous year. The majority of inspections were in the informal sector, particularly in brick making and carpet weaving, which are known to employ child laborers.(1) As a result of inspections, DOL issued 35 violations for minor child labor infractions. The maximum fine was $100 and employers were made to forgive any loans the child may have been paying off, the maximum loan amount being $500.(1) Ten employers caught violating child labor laws absconded and are believed to be in India.(1) DOL rescued 179 children from situations involving the worst forms of child labor. DOL has also started checking in on rescued children periodically to ensure they do not re-engage in the worst forms of child labor.(1) While funding and support from the Government greatly increased in 2013, NGOs report that the number of inspections was still inadequate to meet the child labor problem in Nepal, and the number of citations was low compared to the size of the problem.(1)

In June 2013, the CCWB, DOL, Nepal Police and NGOs raided 10 embroidery factories in the Kathmandu Valley, rescuing 39 children, 30 of whom were under the age of 14.(4)

During the reporting period, the DOL formed the National Network Against Child Labor (NNACL) as a referral mechanism to ensure coordination between enforcement agencies and NGOs providing rehabilitation services to children removed from child labor.(55) Its coordination committee met once a month.(1)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2013, DOL issued three new directives concerning child laborers. The first addresses the rescue, reintegration, and the rehabilitation of child laborers; the second establishes operating procedures for rescues; and the third sets out operating procedures for child labor transit homes.(1) In addition, the Kathmandu CDO formed a committee to address reports of bonded child labor in Kathmandu. As of December 2013, the CDO's office had rescued four girls working as domestic laborers. Two of the girls were under 18 years of age, and two had been working in the third-party homes since they were 10 or 11 years old.(1) However, no charges were filed and the employers received a warning.(55)

There are 110 WCSCs and 387 investigators throughout Nepal's 75 districts. The Government has called for a total of 240 WCSCs and reports that they are in the process of opening the remaining 130 centers.(1) From July 2012 through July 2013, at least 144 human trafficking cases were registered with police, although it is unclear how many of the victims were children. During the same period, the Office of the Attorney General reported that 120 people were convicted for trafficking and 165 new cases involving 376 alleged perpetrators were filed and were awaiting trial, though the data do not indicate the ages of the victims.(1) Despite these increased efforts, officials and NGOs indicate that the number of investigations and convictions for child trafficking is inadequate relative to the scope of the problem.(1, 56) Officials acknowledge enforcement efforts are underfunded and that investigators have insufficient resources to investigate all trafficking cases.(1, 57)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
The National Steering Committee	Implement the National Master Plan on Child Labor (2004–2014) and coordinate child labor eradication efforts.(9) Headed by the MoLE and comprised of other government departments, NGOs, employers, trade unions, and donors.(58)
Child Labor Elimination Section	Coordinate, monitor, and report on child labor in Nepal. Operates under MoLE.(9)
Inter-Agency Coordination Group	Collaborate with the Government in assessing and mapping child protection in Nepal. Comprised of UNICEF, Plan Nepal, Save the Children International, Terres des homes, World Vision, and World Education International.(59)

The National Steering Committee has not met in the past two years.(56, 59) However, during the reporting period, the Committee was active in drafting a revised list of hazardous occupations prohibited for children, initiating processes for the amendment of the Child Labor Prohibition and Regulation Act, and developing policy on child labor elimination in support of the revised national Master Plan on Child Labor (2011–2020).(59)

According to both NGOs and DOL, official coordination mechanisms between agencies and NGOs to address child labor issues have been strengthened during the reporting period. NGOs report that official coordination is strongest at the local level, but still remains relatively weak at the central level.(1) Both the Government and NGOs report that increased government funding and local government activism had a significant positive impact on the reduction of child labor, particularly in Bhaktapur and Sindupalchok districts.(1, 59)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Nepal has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Master Plan on Child Labor 2004–2014	Aims to eliminate the worst forms of child labor by 2009 and all forms of child labor by 2014.(60) Identifies bonded child labor, rag-picking, portering, child domestic service, mining, carpet weaving, and child trafficking as the worst forms of child labor to be addressed. Overseen by DOL.(1, 61) Review in 2010 produced the Master Plan on Child Labor (2011–2020), which is awaiting parliamentary approval.(1, 9)
School Sector Reform Plan (2009–2015)	Targets children out of school and at risk of entering the worst forms of child labor.(1) Aims to expand access to education and to provide alternative schooling and non-formal education to vulnerable populations.(25) Overseen by the Ministry of Education.(1, 62)
National Planning Commission's Three-Year Interim Plan (2010–2013)	Aims to improve lives through broad-based, employment-oriented, economic growth that helps alleviate poverty and establish sustainable peace. Includes objectives to eradicate all forms of child labor.(63) During the reporting period, an updated plan was finalized and is awaiting parliamentary approval.(1) Revised Plan adopts the strategy and approaches of the revised National Master Plan, including establishing and strengthening institutional capacity of community-based organizations to prevent and respond to issues on child protection, and updating goals on the elimination of the worst forms of child labor by 2016 and all child labor by 2020.(59)
National Plan of Action to Combat Trafficking (2011–2016)	Promotes and protects the rights of trafficking victims and survivors and outlines policies for providing justice and punishing perpetrators.(64)

The Government reports that implementation of child labor-related policies has improved in the past year.(1) However, NGOs characterized it as still insufficient. Implementation was significantly impacted by the lack of resources allocated and the lack of a functioning parliament in 2013.(1)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Nepal funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Central Labor Welfare Fund‡	DOL fund partially used to rehabilitate former child laborers through various support programs, including scholarships and vocational training. Managed by the CCWB.(1) In 2013, the Government began using the fund which holds $4.73 million and was previously unused.(1)
Support for schools‡	DOL program to support five schools in the Kathmandu Valley for approximately 500 children ages 5 to 16 who are at risk of working in the worst forms of child labor. Provides scholarships to cover associated schooling costs for children outside the Kathmandu Valley to attend a local public school, and works with local NGOs to verify that children are attending class.(1)
Towards Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labour as Priority (ACHIEVE)†	$582,000 Government of Denmark-funded, 3-year program implemented by ILO-IPEC, aims to strengthen national-level capacity and to support the policy environment. Includes the development and testing of a training program and the preparation of a national child labor policy, a revised hazardous work list, and recommendations for upgrading national legislation related to child labor. Projected outcomes include: (1) creating child labor-free communities through replicable and scalable models; and (2) strengthening the policy environment and the capacity of institutions that can contribute toward child labor elimination.(65)
Project for the Prevention and Reduction of Child Labor in Restaurants in the Kathmandu Valley†	Japanese-funded project increases capacity-building of municipal and ward child protection committees, grants certificate awards for 'child labor-free' restaurants and tea shops, and continues an awareness raising campaign that includes workshops with the MWCSW, the Ministry of Federal Affairs and Local Development, and other stakeholders.(66)

Program	Description
New Path New Steps	$4.75 million USDOL-funded, 4-year project provided new learning and employment opportunities for exploited and at-risk children. Project ended in April 2013 and resulted in the withdrawal of 10,202 children and the prevention of 9,831 children from work in commercial sexual exploitation, domestic service, brick factories, mining, portering, and the embroidered textile sectors.(3, 67)
Decent Work Country Program, Nepal†	ILO, the MoLE, Federation of Nepalese Chambers of Commerce and Industry, and the Nepal Trade Union Congress signed a memorandum of understanding on February 21, 2014 to collaborate in the implementation of the Decent Work Country Program (DWCP).(53) Key objectives are to provide technical and financial assistance to implement the provisions of ratified conventions on child labor; strengthen MoLE's child labor monitoring and reporting systems for prevention and early detection; support the mapping of community service providers; and assist the Government to revise a hazardous child labor list. It will also conduct policy research and studies on the priority areas of child labor as specified in the National Master Plan.(53)
Child Helpline - 1098‡	MWCSW and Nepal Telecom funded helpline operated by CWIN. Responds to calls about missing children, child abuse, child labor exploitation, trafficking, and child sexual abuse.(68) Currently operates in Kathmandu, Biratnagar, Pokhara, Hetauda, and Nepalgunj, with plans to expand into other parts of the country.(69) Also operates in India, Bangladesh, and Bhutan to ensure access for children that have been trafficked in this region.(70)
School Sector Reform Program	World Bank-financed, 7-year, investment loan program to support the School Sector Reform Plan (2009–2016). Objective is to increase access to and improve quality of school education, particularly basic education (grades 1–8), especially for children from marginalized groups.(71)
Combating Trafficking in Persons (CTIP) Project	$6.79 million USAID-funded, 5-year project to reduce trafficking in persons and protect the rights of victims. Aims to strengthen protection services for TIP survivors, build capacity of the judiciary and law enforcement agencies to effectively enforce legal measures and increase prosecutions, and prevent trafficking by building awareness among groups that are vulnerable to sex and labor trafficking.(72)

All 75 districts have a DCWB and a women's development office, and both have small budgets for programs, some of which address child labor. DOL also provided over 100 small grants to local NGOs to conduct various programs on child labor, but they do not track the programs.(1) The Government conducted five awareness programs about child labor in the central region of Nepal and continued ongoing awareness and media outreach programs regarding the worst forms of child labor.(1)

The MoLE manages a Child Labor Elimination Fund; however, the fund is inactive because the Child Labor Elimination Commission has yet to be formulated.(56, 59)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Nepal (Table 9).

Table 9. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

	Amend laws so that they are in line with ILO C. 182 by
	■ Raising the minimum age for entry into hazardous work from 16 to 18.	2009 – 2013

	Provide additional resources for the Nepal Police so that they are able to pursue the perpetrators of child trafficking violations.	2011 – 2013

Government Policies	Finalize the draft National Master Plan on Child Labor 2011–2020.	2010 – 2013

In 2013, Nicaragua made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government expanded its Program Love to include children from birth to age 6 and, with support from the World Food Program, initiated a national school meal program that targeted 1 million children. The Government also closed La Chureca garbage dump in Managua and created jobs, housing, and a school for the more than 250 families that depended on it for their subsistence. With funding from UNICEF, immigration officials received training on how to identify victims of child trafficking, and social service officials received training on victim care. The Government also ratified the ILO Convention on Domestic Workers. Despite these efforts, children in Nicaragua continue to engage in child labor in agriculture and in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation. The Government's enforcement of labor laws is inadequate, and plans to combat child labor and protect children have not been fully implemented. In addition, Government programs are insufficient to reach the numbers of children engaged in the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Nicaragua are engaged in child labor in agriculture and in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation. (1-4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Nicaragua.

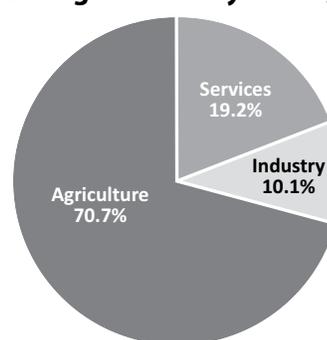

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

In Nicaragua, children are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation in Managua, Granada, the Atlantic Coast and San Juan del Sur.(2, 24) It has been reported that children in Nicaragua who lack identification documents, sometimes because of a lack of birth registration, are at an increased risk of trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation.(9) It is estimated that 20% of children born in Nicaragua lack birth certificates.(25)

Data on child labor were collected in 2010 for the National Survey on Child and Adolescent Labor to better understand the country’s current child labor situation.(26) However, research has not found this data published.(11) During the reporting period, the Government’s National Institute of Development Information reported that a new study found that approximately 320,000 children were engaged in child labor, with nearly 80 percent working without pay.(3) However, research could not determine whether this study has been made publicly available. Separately, the ILO completed a national survey that reported that 238,000 children between the ages of 5 and 17 were engaged in child labor, with approximately 80 percent of them engaged in hazardous activities and 36 percent below the age of 14.(3, 4)

While education is free and compulsory in Nicaragua, costs associated with school supplies and transportation make it difficult for some children, in particular those from poorer backgrounds and rural areas, to attend.(20, 27) Some sources indicate that secondary schools have not received adequate assistance and that secondary school attendance remains low, increasing the risk of older children’s engagement in exploitative work.(17, 24)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Nicaragua has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

In 2013, Nicaragua ratified ILO C. 189 Concerning Decent Work for Domestic Workers.(28) The Government also ratified the ILO's Maritime Labor Convention, which is scheduled to enter into force in December 2014.(29) This Convention calls for a safe workplace and fair terms of employment for seafarers, and includes prohibitions on forced labor and child labor.(30)

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Ministry of Labor (MITRAB)	Enforce labor laws that include provisions on child and hazardous labor. Set child labor policy priorities.(4, 36, 37)
MITRAB General Labor Inspectorate	Conduct labor inspections, including those on child labor through its Child Labor Inspections Unit. Conduct training on child labor issues and inspections, and coordinate with other agencies, both public and private.(7, 11, 36, 38, 39)
National Coalition against Trafficking in Persons (NCATIP)	Combat trafficking in persons, including children, and build capacities, prosecute violations, and protect and rehabilitate victims. Overseen by Ministry of Governance and consists of government ministries and agencies, civil society organizations, and international NGOs.(4, 25, 40) Coordinate Nicaragua's participation in the Central American Regional Coalition against Trafficking in Persons.(25)

Organization/Agency	Role
Nicaraguan National Police (NNP)	Investigate cases of child labor and human trafficking through the following agencies: the Police Intelligence Unit, which detects crimes; the Special Crimes Unit, which investigates crimes; and 54 Women's Commissions, which work in prevention and protection.(4, 11, 36) Maintain a hotline for receiving reports on the welfare of children, including those in danger of exploitation.(4, 11, 36)
Prosecutor General's Office	Prosecute cases of child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and the use of children in illicit activities. Contains two national-level and 35 department-level prosecutors that prosecute these and other crimes.(4, 11, 36)
Human Rights Attorney for Children	Assist in the enforcement of laws relating to child labor and hazardous child labor.(4, 11)
National Social Welfare System	Ensure that government institutions protect the rights of children and adolescents.(37)
Ministry of the Family, Adolescence, and Childhood (MIFAN)	Maintain a hotline that receives reports on human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation.(4, 7) Assist in providing officials with training on child labor violations.(25)

Law enforcement agencies in Nicaragua took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, The Ministry of Labor (MITRAB) employed 90 labor inspectors whose responsibilities included investigating child labor violations.(4) From January to October 2013, MITRAB reported conducting a total of 2,496 labor inspections in workplaces considered hazardous. Through these inspections, MITRAB reported that 1,854 children were working in violation of the law.(4) Information on how many of these children were removed from work, or on the level of governmental assistance received thereafter, is not publicly available. In addition, no information on fines associated with these violations was publicly available.(4) Due to the scope and severity of child labor in the country, the number of inspections conducted is not considered sufficient. Government officials and child labor experts have reported that child labor inspections throughout the country, and those in agricultural areas in particular, are limited due to resource and personnel constraints.(4, 11) Moreover, although labor inspectors have the authority to enter private homes to monitor the working conditions of child domestic workers, research found no information on this type of inspection.(41)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2013, the Government reported that the Prosecutor General's Office investigated 29 suspected cases of trafficking in persons, and prosecuted 26 of them. Of these, there were 12 convictions that involved 30 victims, 18 of which were under the age of 18.(25) Nine of these convictions included children who were trafficked for commercial sexual exploitation. A separate conviction involved a child victim of trafficking for labor exploitation.(25) With funding from UNICEF, the Ministry of the Family, Adolescence, and Childhood (MIFAN) trained 25 border officials on how to identify victims of trafficking, and another 340 officials from a range of other agencies on victim care. In addition, 855 officials from the Nicaraguan National Police (NNP) received training on how to identify victims of commercial sexual exploitation from the Nicaraguan Tourism Institute.(25) However, it has been reported that the NNP has insufficient resources, including a lack of personnel, equipment, vehicles, and funding, to carry out trafficking investigations.(25)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Commission for the Progressive Eradication of Child Labor and the Protection of the Adolescent Worker (CNEPTI)	Set priorities on child labor policy within the Ministry of Labor.(42) Consists of government agencies and NGOs that address child labor issues through awareness-raising strategies and direct action programs.(39, 42) Receives revenues from fines issued for child labor violations for raising awareness and protecting minors.(43)

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Commission Against Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children and Adolescents	Coordinate efforts to address the commercial sexual exploitation of children and adolescents. Part of CNEPTI.(44)
Ministry of the Family, Childhood and Adolescence (MIFAN)	Maintain a guide to attend to victims of commercial sexual exploitation and trafficking, and help coordinate between agencies responsible for their care.(24, 45)

In 2013, it was reported that the Government did not have formal procedures for identifying trafficking victims among high-risk populations, including children in commercial sexual exploitation. Of those identified, all were transferred to NGO shelters in Managua, since the government did not have adequate facilities.(2) International organizations and NGOs provide most of the assistance to trafficking victims.(11, 36, 46) MIFAN appears to be responsible only for the care of child trafficking victims under the age of 13, and the extent of its coordinating role is unclear.(24)

The National Commission for the Progressive Eradication of Child Labor and the Protection of the Adolescent Worker (CNEPTI) has been charged with implementing a ten-year plan on child labor (2007-2016).(4, 7) However, it has been reported that CNEPTI's leadership has convened only once, in conjunction with the 2010 launch of the Roadmap for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor.(47) It is unclear whether CNEPTI remains the primary entity responsible for coordinating overall efforts to address child labor. NGOs and child labor experts have questioned CNEPTI's efficacy, since it lacks sufficient resources to enforce its mandate.(4, 11, 48-51)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Nicaragua has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Roadmap for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Sets the goal of eliminating the worst forms of child labor by 2015. CNEPTI is charged with implementing a 10-year action plan toward this end.(11, 36, 49, 52, 53)
Strategic Plan for the Prevention and Elimination of Child Labor and the Protection of Young Workers (PEPETI) (2007-16)	Seeks to reintegrate child laborers and young workers into the school system and increase school enrollment.(24)
National Human Development Plan (2012-2016)	Incorporates policies to eradicate child labor into poverty reduction, social care, education, and livelihood strategies.(4, 11, 36, 54, 55)
Panama Declaration (2012)	Establishes commitments among Central American countries, Belize, and the Dominican Republic to country-based actions to eradicate the worst forms of child labor. MITRAB highlighted good practices and lessons learned from its child labor programs in coffee plantations and stone quarries.(56-61)
National Plan of Youth Employment (2012-2016)	Seeks to eliminate child labor and protect the rights of working adolescents. Established by the National Commission of Youth Employment.(62, 63)
Coffee Harvest Plan	Aims to develop a comprehensive approach to assist children whose parents work in the coffee harvest and to improve educational opportunities for children on coffee plantations; focuses on eliminating hazardous child labor in the coffee sector in the Department of Jinotega. Developed by the Government in collaboration with the private sector and civil society.(4, 11, 17, 63-66)
Plan of Integrated Attention	Prioritizes assistance for children and adolescents who work in stone quarries, mines, and in African palm cultivation. Involves coordination among several national ministries and local municipalities in order to: determine the extent of child labor; create an action plan to uphold the rights of working children and adolescents to education, recreation, and healthcare; and promote better livelihoods for their families.(37, 62, 63)
Policy on Special Protection for Children and Adolescents	Provides special protections for victims of commercial sexual exploitation and trafficking in persons.(45)

Policy	Description
Plan to Support the Prevention and Elimination of Human Trafficking and Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children and Adolescents	Addresses human trafficking and the commercial sexual exploitation of children and adolescents as a member of the Central American Parliament Commission on Women, Children, Youth, and Family.(45)
National Coalition against Trafficking in Persons (NCATIP) Strategic Plan	Addresses human trafficking through directives shared by public and private actors, both national and international for 2012-2014. Led by the Ministry of Governance.(55, 67)

While the Government's Roadmap for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor sets the goal of eliminating the worst forms of child labor by 2015, research has not found a comprehensive action plan for its full implementation.(50, 52, 55)

In June 2013, a National Forum was held to prioritize the eradication of child labor and the right to education. The forum, called "The Right to Education: the Route toward the Eradication of Child Labor", was organized jointly by the Government and civil society organizations.(4, 68) In October 2013, the Government reiterated its commitment to eradicate the worst forms of child labor. Under the banner "Toward Sustainable Human Development in the Fight to Eradicate Child Labor," the Government convened MIFAN, MITRAB, the Ministry of Education, the Council of Private Enterprise, and the labor sector to discuss actions to reduce child labor.(4, 69) In November, the Government participated in the XVIII Inter-American Conference of Ministers of Labor to foster continued dialogue and cooperation on labor issues throughout the Americas. The joint declaration of the Conference promotes social dialogue to address child labor and reaffirms country participants' commitment to work with civil society organizations to advance efforts toward the eradication of child labor.(70)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Nicaragua funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Program Love‡ (Programa Amor)	MIFAN program that targets 25,000 street children, primarily in Managua, who are involved in street vending and garbage scavenging, among other forms of child labor. Aims to provide education for children and vocational training for parents.(4, 11, 37, 71-75) Overseen by Nicaragua's First Lady in coordination with the Ministries of Government, Family, Health, Education, and Labor. In April 2013, program was extended to include "Program Love for the Smallest Ones," an initiative reported to receive an $850,000 grant from the Taiwanese Embassy in Nicaragua to build Centers for Child Development.(4, 76) In October 2013, reports indicated that booklets listing best practices on preventing child labor were distributed in one Managua neighborhood.(4)
First, I Learn (Primero, Aprendo)	Promotes the eradication of child labor through access to quality education, in support of Nicaragua's Roadmap to Eliminate Child Labor. Regional project originally funded by USDOL and subsequently supported by the European Union.(77, 78)
Educational Bridges (Puentes Educativos)‡	MITRAB and Ministry of Education public-private partnership that provides education to children of coffee workers to prevent child labor during coffee harvests. Expanded during 2011-2012 harvest to include additional 60 facilitators and improvements at 40 coffee farms.(50) In 2013, program has continued to expand to secure commitments from additional coffee farms to eliminate child labor in coffee production.(79, 80)
La Chureca Project	$50 million, Government of Spain-funded project to close the Chureca garbage dump in Managua and open a recycling plant in its place. Accomplishments included the creation of a school, houses, and employment for 258 families who had found their subsistence scavenging in the garbage dump.(81-83)
MIFAN School Meal Program*	MIFAN and World Food Program initiative to provide 1 million children and adolescents with meals at school to help bolster attendance.(84, 85)
MITRAB Entrepreneurial Development Program	MITRAB and ILO program to provide tools and technical equipment to young entrepreneurs of working age to help them develop skills and create their own professional enterprises. In 2013, partnership assisted 72 young entrepreneurs from the Jinotega and Masaya Departments.(86, 87)
Birth Registration Campaign*	Government initiative, in coordination with Save the Children and UNICEF, to promote birth registration campaigns.(25)

Program	Description
Elimination of Child Labor in Latin America (Phase 4)	$4.5 million Government of Spain-funded, 4-year project implemented by ILO-IPEC to combat child labor in 19 countries, including Nicaragua.(55)
Education and Monitoring Program for the Eradication of Child Labor	$1.3 million Government of Spain-funded, 2-year project implemented by ILO-IPEC that aims to strengthen public policies and government capacity to combat child labor in 19 countries in Latin America, including Nicaragua. Includes the objective of developing information systems on the worst forms of child labor.(55)

*The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Nicaragua.

During the reporting period, the Government did not initiate any new poverty reduction programs, and the scope of current social programs does not appear to be sufficient to assist children that are trafficked or engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation.(4) The Government's birth registration campaigns are not performed nation-wide, and many children lack the documentation needed to access basic services.(47, 88) There have also been reports that Program Love lacks overall effectiveness and requires greater transparency.(4, 7, 11)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Nicaragua (Table 9).

In 2013, Niger made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government rescued more than 400 children from street begging, secured five child-trafficking convictions, and increased the budget for each regional labor inspectorate from $6,000 to $12,000. The Government also participated in several programs to combat the worst forms of child labor and assist vulnerable households. However, children in Niger continue to engage in child labor in agriculture and in the worst forms of child labor in mining. Gaps in legislation also put children at risk, and child labor laws are not fully enforced.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Niger continue to engage in child labor in agriculture and in the worst forms of child labor in mining.⁽¹⁾ Data from the 2009 National Child Labor Survey indicate that more than 30 percent of children ages 5 to 17 are engaged in hazardous work. Data also revealed that child labor is more prevalent in rural areas and among girls.⁽²⁾ Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Niger.

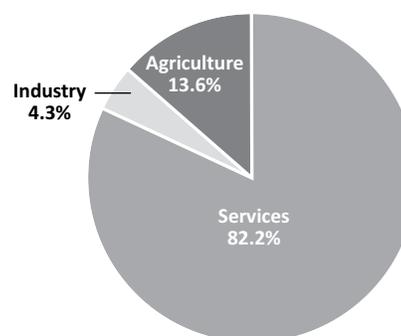

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	47.8 (1,561,570)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	51.7
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	26.3
Primary Completion Rate (%)		49.3

Niger

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Traditional forms of caste-based servitude, such as the use of women and girls as wahaya, still exist in parts of Niger, especially among the Tuareg, Djerma, and Arab ethnic minorities; in remote northern and western regions; and along the border with Nigeria.(8, 12) The wahaya practice allows a man to take a girl as a “fifth wife,” meaning as a slave (according to Islamic practices, men are allowed to have only four wives).(12, 14) Wahaya slaves, including children, are typically forced to work long hours as cattle herders, agricultural workers, or domestic servants, and are often sexually exploited.(12, 15) Children of wahaya wives are considered slaves as well and passed from one owner to another as gifts or as part of dowries. Both wives and children are often forced to perform domestic labor in their master’s household.(12, 14)

In Niger, it is also a traditional practice to send boys (called talibés) to Koranic teachers (marabouts) to receive education.(1, 16) However, some of these boys are forced by their teachers to beg on the streets and surrender the money they have earned, or perform manual labor.(1, 8)

In 2013, more than 4 million people were food insecure in Niger, and severe flooding affected the livelihoods of many communities.(17, 18) The ongoing conflict in Mali and insecurity in northeastern Nigeria has also resulted in thousands of refugees in Niger.(17) Refugee children may have difficulty accessing education, which could put them at increased risk of engaging in the worst forms of child labor.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Niger has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	18	Article 107 of the Labor Code (19)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	18	Article 2 of the Law on the Orientation of the Educational System in Niger (25)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 23 of the Constitution (23)

*No conscription or no standing military.

In Niger, the minimum age for hazardous work does not meet the international standard of 18.(1, 20) Penalties outlined in article 181 of the Penal Code for inciting a person to beg are low and may not deter violations.(22) Article 178 of the Penal Code also provides penalties for vagrancy, which is defined by article 177 as a person without a home or occupation. This law may compel children who live on the streets to engage in the worst forms of child labor.(22, 26)

In 2013, the Government revised the Labor Code; however, it has yet to be approved.(1) In addition, though primary education is free, the cost of school supplies keeps some children from attending school.(8)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Employment, Labor and Social Security (MELSS)	Enforce laws related to child labor by receiving complaints, investigating violations, and referring cases to courts.(1)
MELSS' Child Labor Division	Conduct studies on the scope and nature of child labor, raise awareness on child labor, and coordinate government efforts to eliminate child labor.(1)
National Human Rights Commission (CNDH)	Receive child labor complaints, investigate violations, and report violations to courts.(1)
Ministry of Population, Women's Promotion and Child Protection	Work with law enforcement officials to provide vulnerable children with services, including education and counseling, in 13 centers across the country.(1)
Ministry of Justice's Judicial Police Sections	Oversee cases involving juveniles at regional and district levels.(1)
District and Magistrate Courts	Address children's issues, including child labor, through 10 district courts and 36 magistrate courts.(1)
Regional and Vigilance Committees	Prevent child trafficking, dismantle trafficking rings, and raise awareness on the worst forms of child labor. In the case of vigilance committees, which work in 30 localities, report to the police suspected cases of illegal transport of minors.(1)

Law enforcement agencies in Niger took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, the Ministry of Employment, Labor and Social Security (MELSS) employed 100 labor inspectors throughout Niger to enforce labor laws, including those related to child labor.(1) Niger has a labor inspectorate in each of the country's eight regions. Inspectors conduct both routine and complaint-based inspections, occasionally referring children rescued from the worst forms of child labor to government social services.(1) During the reporting period, labor inspectors received training on child labor and the budget for each labor inspectorate was doubled from $6,000 to $12,000.(1) However, the Government reports it lacked the human and material resources needed to carry out inspections.(27) Research could not identify the number of inspections, complaints, citations issued, prosecutions, and penalties assessed related to child labor.(1)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2013, five individuals were convicted of child trafficking and NGOs, with the support of law enforcement, rescued 445 children exploited as street beggars by marabouts. There is no information as to whether the marabouts were prosecuted.(1) Ministry of Justice officials also received training on legislation related to slavery in January 2013.(28) Despite these efforts, both the MELSS and the Ministry of Justice indicated that the number of convictions related to the worst forms of child labor were inadequate given the magnitude of the problem.(1) Research could not find statistics on the criminal enforcement of laws related to the worst forms of child labor.(1)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6)

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee on Child Labor	Review proposals for action plans for the ILO-IPEC country program and ensure that they are consistent with national child labor policy and priorities.(1)
National Commission to Coordinate Efforts to Combat Trafficking in Persons (CNCLTP)	Coordinate efforts to combat human trafficking and develop policies and programs related to human trafficking.(1, 24, 26) Composed of five executive board members and 19 other members, including government ministries, CNDH, civil society organizations, women's rights groups, labor unions, judges, bar associations, and two foreign donor representatives, who act as observers.(1)
National Agency to Fight Against Trafficking in Persons (ANLTP)	Implement policies and programs developed by the CNCLTP; conduct awareness campaigns on human trafficking in conjunction with the CNCLTP; provide training and education to reduce the risk of human trafficking; and maintain a hotline to receive complaints of human trafficking.(1, 26)
National Committee to Combat the Phenomenon of Street Children	Coordinate activities to combat the phenomenon of street children. Located under the Ministry for the Promotion of Women and Child Protection.(10)
National Committee to Combat the Vestiges of Forced Labor and Discrimination	Establish a national action plan to combat the vestiges of forced labor and discrimination.(29)

In 2013, the President of the National Commission to Coordinate Efforts to Combat Trafficking in Persons (CNCLTP) was reassigned to a new position, which led to a temporary shutdown of CNCLTP and National Agency to Fight Against Trafficking in Persons (ANLTP) for months. This limited the CNCLTP and ANLTP's capacity to effectively coordinate activities related to the worst forms of child labor.(1, 30) Despite the shutdown, NGOs, the CNCLTP, and the police helped more than 800 vulnerable children.(1) The National Committee to Combat the Vestiges of Forced Labor and Discrimination did not meet during the reporting period due to a lack of resources.(28) The number of calls received by the ANLTP's hotline that involve child trafficking is unknown.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Niger has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan to Combat the Sexual Exploitation of Children	Seeks to combat the sexual exploitation of children.(1)
Decent Work Country Program (2012–2015)	Describes the child labor situation in Niger and includes targets for the elimination of child labor.(21, 31)
National Education Development Plan*	Supports education for vulnerable children and includes child labor issues.(1)
Social and Economic Development Plan (2012–2015)	Describes Niger's overall development agenda, aims to prevent the worst forms of child labor, and calls for the adoption of the Nation Action Plan to Combat Child Labor.(32)
UN Development Assistance Framework (UNDAF) (2009–2013)	Promotes improved access to education for vulnerable children and aims to build the capacity of the government to address child labor.(33) The new UNDAF program will operate from 2014 to 2018.(34)

*The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

The National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor (2010-2015) aims to eliminate the worst forms of child labor in Niger by 2015, and all forms of child labor by 2025. It also addresses child labor in a variety of sectors, including agriculture, mining, domestic labor, and begging.(10) However, the Plan has yet to be adopted.(1, 10) The Government also drafted, but did not adopt, a National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons.(10, 26)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Niger participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Eliminating the Worst Forms of Child Labor in West Africa and Strengthening Sub-Regional Cooperation through ECOWAS I and II	USDOL-funded regional projects that supported ECOWAS to strengthen its role in combating the worst forms of child labor in the West Africa sub-region by providing policy and capacity-building support for all ECOWAS states.(35, 36)
Project to Combat Child Labor in Domestic Service	Government of France-funded, 3-year regional project to combat child labor in domestic service.(37)
UN World Food Program*	UN program that supports cash-for-work schemes and other initiatives to address food insecurity. More than 600,000 beneficiaries have received assistance in Niger.(38)
Niger Safety Net Project*	World Bank cash transfer and cash-for-work project that aims to establish a safety net system for vulnerable households. Targets more than 1 million beneficiaries; 60,000 beneficiaries receive cash for work benefits.(39)
Second Chance Community Literacy Education and Vocational Training Program*	Government program, in collaboration with Volunteers for Education Integration, (a local NGO) that provides vulnerable children with literacy education and vocational training opportunities.(1)
Resilience in the Sahel-Enhanced*	USAID program that helps vulnerable communities in Niger and Burkina Faso mitigate vulnerabilities, shocks, and stresses by facilitating inclusive growth.(40) Aims to reach 1.9 million beneficiaries.(41)
Migration Forum*	Government forum, with support from the ILO-IPEC and a local NGO, that combats youth rural to urban migration, especially among girls.(1)
Regional Program for West Africa	UNODC program that covers 15 countries and addresses human trafficking by supporting the ECOWAS Political Declaration on the Prevention of Drug Abuse, Illicit Drug Trafficking, and Organized Crimes in West Africa.(42)

*The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

Although Niger has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the problem. Niger also lacks a specific program to assist children exploited by religious instructors.(16)

Nigeria

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2013, Nigeria made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government adopted its first National Policy on Child Labor and National Plan of Action for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor, and the Ministry of Labor and Productivity (MOLP) increased the number of inspectors employed and inspections conducted. In addition, the National Poverty Eradication Program (NAPEP) launched a conditional cash transfer program that will provide funds to households under the condition that their children remain in school. However, children in Nigeria continue to engage in forced labor in various sectors. Some children engage in armed conflict with non-government forces in the Northeast. Inconsistencies remain in laws regarding child labor and the minimum age for work is below international standards.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Nigeria are engaged in forced labor in various sectors. Some children are engaged in armed conflict with non-government forces in the Northeast.(1-4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Nigeria.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	31.1 (13,924,739)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	76.2
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	26.8
Primary Completion Rate (%)		76.0

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

	Begging, domestic service, street hawking, mining and quarrying gravel and granite, and work in agriculture, including in cocoa as a result of human trafficking (7, 29-31)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor†	Use of children in illicit activities for armed groups, such as acting as messengers, transporters, and informants (3, 12)
	Use of children in armed conflict, sometimes as a result of forced recruitment (3)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

In northern Nigeria, many families send children from rural to urban areas to live with and receive a Koranic education from Islamic teachers. These children, known as almajiri, may receive lessons, but teachers often force them to beg on the streets and surrender the money they collect.(3, 7, 26, 28, 32) Although evidence remains limited, information indicates that some almajiri in Nigeria may be deliberately scarred or injured to arouse sympathy and thus encourage donations.(28) Almajiri are also reported to participate in political and religious riots and interreligious violence; some participate in violent activities under the influence of their religious teachers.(3, 28) In December 2010, the Ministerial Committee on Madrasah Education estimated that Nigeria had about 9.5 million almajiri.(2, 12)

Nigeria is a source, transit, and destination country for child trafficking.(28, 29, 33) Children in Nigeria are trafficked internally to work in agriculture, begging, domestic service, mining, and street peddling.(29-31) Children from Nigeria are trafficked to Equatorial Guinea where they may be forced to work as domestic servants, market laborers, vendors, and launderers.(34) Nigerian children are also trafficked to Saudi Arabia and forced to work as beggars and street vendors.(35) Girls from Nigeria are trafficked to Europe for commercial sexual exploitation.(29)

Children from Benin, Ghana, and Togo are trafficked to Nigeria, where many are forced to work in granite mines.(29) Some children from the Central African Republic (CAR) are trafficked back and forth between CAR and Nigeria for forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation.(36) Boys from Niger are subjected to forced begging and forced labor in Nigeria.(37)

Pervasive poverty, coupled with mass unemployment and a poor education system, has created an atmosphere in which youth are susceptible to participation in conflict through armed groups, including ethnic-based militia organizations, criminal gangs, extremist groups, and partisan political organizations, such as party “youth wings.”(3, 38-41) While the full scope of the problem is unknown, children as young as age 8 are recruited, and sometimes forced, into such groups. Street children are most at risk for recruitment.(3) Children take part in a range of activities from acting as messengers, transporters, and informants, to inciting and participating in acts of violence.(3) Research did not find reports of children being used in the Government's armed forces.

The terrorist group Boko Haram recruited and used child soldiers during the reporting year. Boys as young as 11 were reportedly paid to fight, plant bombs, spy, and act as suicide bombers.(12) Girls have been abducted by Boko Haram for slave labor or sexual exploitation; some of these girls were abducted while working on farms in remote villages or hawking wares on the street.(4) Some children, presumed to be between ages 15 and 17, have reportedly been observed manning checkpoints for anti-Boko Haram citizen vigilante groups, but they do not appear to be doing so under a government mandate. Some vigilante groups inform government security forces about suspected Boko Haram activity and have admitted to using a number of children in their operations.(4) However, the military has reportedly told these groups not to allow children to join.(4, 12, 42)

In May 2013, attempting to fight against Boko Haram's escalating violent attacks in the north of the country, President Goodluck Jonathan declared a state of emergency in the states of Borno, Yobe, and Adamawa and deployed Nigeria's Armed Forces to the northeast.(43, 44) In November, the state of emergency was extended for 6 additional months.(4) Boko Haram burned or destroyed a number of schools in Borno and Yobe States and thousands of children in the northeast have stopped attending classes. Boko Haram has carried out daytime attacks on teachers and students.(12, 45, 46)

Nigeria

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2011, the Ministry of Labor and Productivity (MOLP) collected data from state governments on the prevalence of child labor, but the data have not been made publicly available.(2)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Nigeria has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Nigeria has ratified the African Union Convention for the Protection and Assistance of Internally Displaced Persons in Africa (Kampala Convention).(47) The Convention prohibits armed groups from recruiting children, or otherwise permitting them to participate in conflict, and engaging in sexual slavery and trafficking, especially of women and children.(48)

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

*No conscription or no standing military.

Nigeria's laws regarding child labor are inconsistent.(2) Article 59 of the Labor Act sets the minimum age of employment at 12, and it is in force in all 36 states of Nigeria. The Act also permits children of any age to do light work alongside a family member in agriculture, horticulture, or domestic service.(49, 57, 58)

The Federal 2003 Child Rights Act (CRA) codifies the rights of children in Nigeria and must be ratified by each State to become law in its territory.(2, 59) There were no new adoptions of the CRA during the reporting period. To date, 23 states and the Federal Capital Territory have ratified the CRA, with most of the 13 remaining states located in northern Nigeria.(2, 23)

The CRA states that the provisions related to children in the Labor Act apply to children under the CRA, but also that the CRA supersedes any other legislation related to children. The CRA restricts children under the age of 18 from any work aside from light work for family members; however, Article 59 of the Labor Act applies these restrictions only to children under the age of 12.(50, 58, 60) This language makes it unclear what minimum ages apply for certain types of work in the country.

While the Labor Act forbids the employment of youth under age 18 in work that is dangerous to their health, safety, or morals, it allows children to participate in certain types of work that may be dangerous by setting different age thresholds for various activities. In addition, the Labor Act does not apply to youth working in domestic service.(49) As a result, children are vulnerable to dangerous work in industrial undertakings, underground, with machines, and in domestic service. The Labor Act allows youth older than age 16 to work at night in gold mining and the manufacturing of iron, steel, paper, raw sugar, and glass.(49) This standard may leave children who work at night in gold mining and the above manufacturing activities vulnerable to hazardous work. In addition, neither the Labor Act nor the CRA lays out a comprehensive list of hazardous activities prohibited to children.(57, 61) During the year, the National Steering Committee validated the Report on the Identification of Hazardous Child Labor in Nigeria. The report is with the MOLP for official adoption and implementation.(2)

States may also enact additional provisions to bolster protection for working children within their territory. Some states within Nigeria have taken such action and closed gaps in the law.(62) The 2006 Abia State Child's Rights Law prohibits all children under age 18 from engaging in domestic service outside of the home or family environment.(63) The state governments of Anambra, Bayelsa, and Lagos have prohibited children from all street trading, while Delta State only prohibits children from street trading during the school day.(2) During the year, Kano State initiated a prohibition against almajiri children begging on the street.(2)

Some states that apply Shari'a (the moral code and religious law of Islam) treat children as offenders rather than victims. The Shari'a Penal Code of the Zamfara State defines an offender as anyone who "does any obscene or indecent act in a private or public place, or acts or conducts himself/herself in an indecent manner."(61) Treating child victims of commercial sexual exploitation as offenders contradicts internationally accepted standards for the treatment of such children.(61) There is no law to prohibit the recruitment of children by non-state armed groups.(3, 64)

The 2004 Compulsory, Free Universal Basic Education Act provides for free and compulsory education for children until the age of 15.(56) The Federal Constitution (1999) also provides for free and compulsory primary education "when practicable."(51) While some states do offer free education, free universal compulsory education does not yet fully exist in Nigeria.(9, 12) School fees are often charged and the cost of school materials can be prohibitive.(12, 64) In addition, there is little enforcement of student attendance.(64) As the laws providing for free and compulsory education are not systematically enforced, children are more likely to enter the worst forms of child labor.(2, 64) Under financial strain, many families will choose to send girls to work and boys to school.(12)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Productivity, Inspectorate Division	Enforce federal child labor laws. Labor inspectors are deployed across 36 regions and the Federal Capital Territory (including Abuja) and are responsible for investigating all labor law violations, including those related to child labor.(7, 9, 65)
National Agency for the Prohibition of Traffic in Persons and Other Related Matters (NAPTIP)	Enforce anti-trafficking legislation. Has the power to conduct investigations to determine whether any person has committed an offense under the anti-trafficking law.(66) NAPTIP reports that authorities turn over rescued children to state-level agencies.(9)
Nigeria Police Force (NPF)	Enforce all laws prohibiting forced child labor and commercial sexual exploitation. Support MOLP and collaborate with NAPTIP on trafficking enforcement.(2)
Nigerian Immigration Service(NIS)	Collaborate with NAPTIP to enforce laws against trafficking children.(2)

Law enforcement agencies in Nigeria took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, the MOLP employed a total of 882 factory inspectors and labor officers, an increase of 209 inspectors from 2012. Of the 209 newly hired inspectors, 80 percent will focus on factory inspections.(2) Despite this substantial increase, evidence indicates that the number of inspectors is inadequate. MOLP’s Labor Inspectorate held a conference to educate all MOLP labor officers on the National Policy on Child Labor which was adopted during the reporting year.(2) The MOLP provided three hours of training on child labor to new labor inspectors.(2)

The MOLP conducted 8,441 inspections from January to November 2013, an increase from the 7,840 labor inspections carried out in 2012. While 1,200 violations were documented, information on the number of child labor law violations or the number of citations issued is not available.(2) MOLP typically sends letters of caution to employers, encouraging them to resolve violations, and then conducts follow-up inspections.(2, 9, 64) It is unclear whether this system sufficiently encourages compliance with labor laws. The Labor Inspectorate director can also halt employer operations, but information is not available as to whether this occurred during the period.(2)

There are no labor inspectors available to conduct inspections on seafaring vessels.(67) Since children age 15 and older may work onboard these vessels, this leaves such children unprotected by the country’s enforcement framework.(49) Research did not uncover mechanisms to enforce existing protections for street children.

Agencies at the state level are responsible for enforcing the CRA.(2) States may also undertake other measures that aid in the enforcement of labor provisions. For example, Ondo State has established a child labor monitoring system in cocoa plantations.(68) In Edo State, labor officers work alongside the transportation industry to prevent children from working as bus conductors during the school day.(2)

The Nigeria Police Force (NPF) is not trained on state laws and may not have knowledge of such laws that protect children from a particular worst form of child labor within a specific state. This limits the capacity of the NPF to enforce the laws protecting children from the worst forms of child labor.(69) The enforcement efforts of the MOLP and the social services provided by the Ministry of Women’s Affairs and Social Development (MOWASD) are not well coordinated.(2)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2013, the National Agency for the Prohibition of Traffic in Persons and Other Related Matters (NAPTIP) investigated 137 cases of trafficking involving children, including 37 that involved child labor. Information on the number of prosecutions, convictions, and NAPTIP investigators is unavailable.(2, 29) At least 420 government officials, including officials from NAPTIP, NPF, and Nigerian Immigration Service (NIS), received anti-trafficking training during the year. During the reporting period, a government official was being investigated for allegedly violating child labor laws.(29) It is reported that some convicted traffickers were sentenced to between 6 months and 14 years of prison time; however, some of those convicted have the option to pay a fine instead of serving prison time.(1, 2)

Research did not uncover a referral mechanism between MOLP and the Ministry of Justice.(2)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor in Nigeria (NSC)	Coordinate efforts to combat child labor. Represented on the NSC are MOLP, Ministry of Women's Affairs and Social Development (MOWASD), and Ministries of Mining and Metal Production, Agriculture, Foreign Affairs, and Education—along with NAPTIP and National Bureau of Statistics.(2) Committee also includes ILO-IPEC, UNICEF, NGOs, and faith-based organizations that work on child labor issues.(2)
Ogun and Oyo State Steering Committees on Child Labor (SSC)	Facilitate each state's Action Plan for the elimination of child labor and enhance collaboration between all actors involved at the state level. State level Ministry of Labor and Productivity, Ministry for Women Affairs and Social Development, Ministry of Education, NAPTIP, Nigeria Police Force, Nigeria Immigration Service, and NGOs are represented on the SSCs.(70, 71) Both Committees meet regularly throughout the year.(71)
National Task Force on Trafficking in Persons	Coordinate trafficking efforts across government agencies and other organizations. Chaired by NAPTIP.(2)
State Level Child Labor Taskforce	Ensure that children attend school. Akwa Ibom, Delta, Lagos, Ogun, and Oyo states have each established a child labor taskforce within their state.(2, 42)

The National Steering Committee for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor in Nigeria (NSC) met twice during the reporting period and adopted the draft National Policy on Child Labor and the National Action Plan (NAP) for the Elimination of Child Labor in Nigeria (2013-2017). The NSC also adopted the Report on the Identification of Hazardous Child Labor in Nigeria, and it was sent to the MOLP for consideration.(2)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Nigeria has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Policy on Child Labor†	Aims to significantly reduce prevalence of child labor in Nigeria by 2015 and achieve total elimination by 2020.(72) Adopted by Nigeria's Federal Executive Council on September 11, 2013.(2)
National Action Plan (NAP) for the Elimination of Child Labor in Nigeria (2013-2017)†	Provides a roadmap for implementation of the National Policy on Child Labor in Nigeria.(73) Adopted by Nigeria's Federal Executive Council on September 11, 2013.(2)
Ogun and Oyo State Action Plans on Child Labor	Guides implementation of the National Policy on Child Labor in Ogun and Oyo States. Both state plans were adopted during the reporting period.(71, 74, 75)
National Policy on Protection and Assistance to Trafficked Persons in Nigeria	Outlines protection and rehabilitation services for trafficking victims.(76-78) NAPTIP developed Guidelines on National Referral Mechanism for Protection and Assistance to Trafficked Persons in Nigeria to coordinate and improve service provision for trafficking victims.(29)
Five-Year Strategic Plan on Trafficking in Persons (2012-2017)	Articulates a strategy for coordination of anti-trafficking efforts across agencies and organizations.(1)
ECOWAS Regional Action Plan for the Elimination of Child Labor	Aims to eliminate worst forms of child labor in ECOWAS member states by 2015.(79) In 2013, ECOWAS conducted its first peer review to evaluate efforts to combat child labor at the country level. With Côte d'Ivoire, Nigeria reviewed Ghana's efforts to combat child labor and provided preliminary findings and recommendations.(71, 80)
National Framework for the Development and Integration of Almajiri Education in the Universal Basic Education Scheme	Provides guidelines for state governments to regulate almajiri schools in order to more effectively address the challenges that the traditional Islamic education sector faces on itinerancy and begging.(2, 81-83) Outlines government plans to build about 400 schools for almajiri children by 2015.(2, 41) Government completed construction of 123 of the schools, an increase of 34 schools from the previous reporting period.(64)

†Policy was launched during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Nigeria funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
National Poverty Eradication Program (NAPEP)*†‡	NAPEP cash transfer (CCT) program launched during the year through its Care of the People (COPE) program. Will provide about $31 a month for households headed by a woman, an elderly person, or a person who is physically challenged to keep their children in school.(2) NAPEP will spend about $4.9 million on the program, reaching over 10,000 households during the pilot. Initially, the program will be implemented in three local government areas across 12 of Nigeria's 36 states.(2)
Akwa Ibom State*‡	State government provides free primary education.(2)
Anambra*‡	State government initiated programs to raise public awareness of its ban of children in street trading.(2)
Borno State*†	Governor has instituted programs that provide school fees, buses, and lunch to vulnerable children to help them attend school.(42)
Delta State*†	State government provides compulsory, free primary education.(84)
Kano State*‡	State government provides free primary education, free school meals, and some free transportation for children to attend school. State is introducing kindergarten classes.(2)
Katsina State†‡	State government introduced free primary and secondary education.(2)
Ogun State*	Labor officers implemented awareness raising programs for parents of children working in stone quarries.(2)
O'MEALS*‡	State government provides free lunch program for elementary students in Osun State.(2)
Rivers*‡	State government provided free primary education to all children.(2, 42)
Eliminating the Worst Forms of Child Labor in West Africa by Strengthening Sub-Regional Cooperation through ECOWAS (ECOWAS I)	$7.95 million, USDOL-funded, 5-year project implemented by the ILO with direct interventions to accelerate progress on the elimination of the worst forms of child labor in Côte d'Ivoire, Ghana, and Nigeria. Supports ECOWAS to strengthen its role in combating the worst forms of child labor in the West Africa sub-region by providing policy and capacity building support for all ECOWAS states.(85) In Nigeria, the project supported national and state level efforts to eliminate worst forms of child labor in the country.(85)
Eliminating the Worst Forms of Child Labor in West Africa by Strengthening Sub-Regional Cooperation through ECOWAS (ECOWAS II)	Linked to the ECOWAS I project, a $5 million, USDOL-funded, 4-year project, implemented by the ILO with direct interventions in Benin, Côte d'Ivoire, Ghana, and Nigeria. Supports ECOWAS to strengthen its role in combating the worst forms of child labor in the West Africa sub-region by providing policy and capacity building support for all ECOWAS states.(86) By the end of March 2014, the project had provided educational services to 779 children in Nigeria's Ogun and Oyo States and livelihoods services to 326 households.(87)
NAPTIP	NAPTIP operates eight shelters in Nigeria and assisted 612 child trafficking victims during the year. NAPTIP and the MOWASD coordinate social services for trafficked children and repatriation to their families.(2)

*The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Nigeria.

Although Nigeria has some programs in place to assist vulnerable and working children, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem. Research found no evidence of programs to assist children engaged in agriculture, commercial sexual exploitation, domestic service, forced labor, illicit activities, or armed conflict.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Oman

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

In 2013, Oman made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. During the reporting period, the Government continued to partially implement the National Plan for Combating Human Trafficking, provided training to its police force on identifying victims of human trafficking, and continued a number of social programs to raise awareness about human trafficking and promote decent jobs for youth. Although the problem does not appear to be widespread, there are limited reports that children in Oman continue to engage in child labor in agriculture. Key gaps persist in the country's legal framework on the worst forms of child labor, and the Government lacks comprehensive coordination mechanisms and policies on this issue.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Oman are engaged in child labor in agriculture, although there is no evidence to suggest that this problem is widespread.(1, 2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Oman. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		103.7

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2014.(3)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis, 2014.(4)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, activities unknown* (1, 2)
	Fishing, activities unknown* (1, 2)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

There is no evidence that the Government of Oman has conducted or participated in research to determine the extent to which children are engaged in the worst forms of child labor. Available government data are weak, especially on the prevalence of child labor and human trafficking, the impact of programs targeting working children, and the link between research findings and policymaking. The ILO Committee of Experts, UNESCO, and the Overseas Development Institute have all commented on this weak data, and the ILO has consistently requested that the Government assess its child labor and human trafficking situation in order to ensure that adequate protection mechanisms are in place for vulnerable children.(5-9)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Oman has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 75 of the Labor Law (10)

Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Royal Decree 126/2008 (9, 11)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Anti-Trafficking Law; Royal Decree 126/2008 (9, 12)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Penal Code; Basic Law (9, 13)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	N/A*
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Unclear
Compulsory Education Age	No
Free Public Education	Yes		Basic Law (1, 9, 14)

* No conscription or no standing military.

The Government has reportedly been developing a list of 43 hazardous occupations prohibited for children younger than 18; however, the Government has yet to enact the list into law.(9, 15, 16). Oman has no laws prohibiting the use of children for illicit activities.(9) The minimum age for voluntary military enlistment is unclear. Oman has reported minimum ages of both 15 and 18 to the UN.(9, 14, 17) There is no compulsory education age.(1, 9) The lack of compulsory education may make children under the age of 15 more susceptible to the worst forms of child labor, as they cannot legally work, but are not required to be in school.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Manpower (MOM)	Monitor and enforce child labor laws; conduct labor inspections; share information with the Royal Oman Police (ROP) on labor and criminal law violations when penalties are pursued.(9, 18, 19)
ROP	Monitor and enforce child labor laws; refer cases to the Public Prosecution (PP).(9, 14, 18)
PPs	Prosecute trafficking and sexual exploitation cases in court with assistance from the ROP.(9, 14, 20)

Oman

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Law enforcement agencies in Oman took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, MOM employed 200 labor inspectors. No child labor violations were found in the reporting period.(9) Research did not reveal information on number of inspections conducted or funding levels of MOM.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2013, the ROP and PP received training on identifying victims of human trafficking.(9, 19) Research found no evidence of formal mechanisms or procedures to proactively identify victims of other worst forms of child labor.(9, 21) The PP prosecuted five cases of trafficking for commercial sexual exploitation in 2013, but none of those cases involved children.(19) No information was found on the number of criminal investigators employed, total number of cases investigated, citations issued, or prosecutions made.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Although the Government has established the National Committee on Combating Human Trafficking, research found no evidence of coordinating mechanisms to combat other forms of child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Committee for Combating Human Trafficking	Oversee the National Plan for Combating Human Trafficking; includes the Ministry of Information, the Ministry of Education, ROP, PP, MOM, the Ministry of Health, the Ministry of Social Development, the Ministry of Justice, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, the Ministry of Legal Affairs, and the Oman Chamber of Commerce and Industry.(20)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Although the Government has established the National Plan for Combating Human Trafficking, research found no evidence of policies to specifically address other forms child labor, including its worst forms. However, the Government has funded another policy that may have an impact on child labor (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Plan for Combating Human Trafficking	Lays out the roles and responsibilities of governmental organizations involved in combating trafficking and describes procedures for applying the Anti-Trafficking Law.(20)
Education Model*	Aims to equip all children in Oman with the knowledge, tools, attitudes, and values that enable lifelong learning.(22)

*The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Oman funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Decent Work Country Program (2010–2013)*	ILO-implemented program that strives to strengthen the employability of Oman's young workforce through vocational education and training programs.(23)
Fund for Development of Youth (Sharakah)*‡	Government program that provides youth ages 15–24 with equity and loan support for existing and proposed small and medium enterprises, and provides guidance and technical assistance needed to start a new business.(24–26)
Microfinance Program*‡	Ministry of Social Development program that provides microfinance opportunities to unemployed youth to start their own businesses.(6)

Program	Description
Programs of the National Plan for Combating Human Trafficking*‡	Government programs under that National Plan for Combating Human Trafficking. Includes implementation of awareness-raising activities on human trafficking in schools and among the general population, provision of social services for trafficking victims, and coordination with international organizations on trafficking developments.(20)
Trafficking Victims' Shelter*‡	Government-run shelter that provides accommodations and social, psychological, legal, and medical services for up to 50 women and children who are victims of trafficking.(19, 21)

*The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Oman.

During the reporting period, the Government partially implemented programs of the National Plan for Combating Human Trafficking. Members of PP participated in UN and Arab League anti-trafficking conferences, and the Trafficking Victims Shelter served nine victims, although none were children.(19) This facility is underutilized.(21) In addition, the exclusion of migrant workers and their children from public social, health, education, and housing benefits available to citizens may increase their vulnerability to forced labor and the worst forms of child labor.(27)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, Pakistan made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. Provincial governments finalized national plans of action on child labor and bonded labor. In Punjab, District Vigilance Committees were re-established to combat bonded labor, including bonded labor of children. The Federal Investigation Agency also improved coordination among law enforcement groups to better track human traffickers and took action against officials complicit in human trafficking. The Government continues to implement an array of social programs and projects to combat child labor and bonded labor. However, children in Pakistan continue to engage in child labor in agriculture and the worst forms of child labor in bonded labor. While provincial governments drafted legislation to protect children from the worst forms of child labor in response to a Government-wide decentralization effort, only the Punjab Province passed such legislation. The federal law remains in effect in the remaining provinces. The federal and Punjab laws lack a minimum working age and the minimum age for hazardous work falls short of meeting international standards. Working children continue to lack sufficient legal protections. Enforcement efforts remain weak, and labor inspections have become infrequent.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Pakistan are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture and in the worst forms of child labor in bonded labor. The majority of child labor in Pakistan occurs in agriculture.(1) Data from the Government's 2012–2013 National Labor Force Survey indicate that the majority of child workers reside in rural areas.(2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Pakistan.

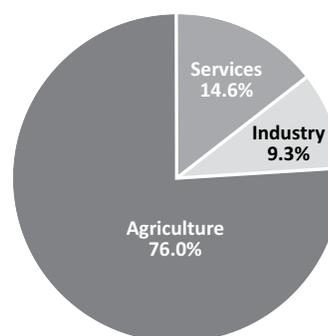

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	10-14 yrs.	13.0 (2,449,480)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	72.3
Combining Work and School (%)	10-14 yrs.	1.6

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Children, especially girls, are employed as domestic servants and may be subjected to extreme abuse. For example, in 2013, some child domestic servants were killed by their employers.(31, 34)

Some children are used by non-state militant groups in armed conflict. Non-state groups kidnap children or coerce parents into giving away their children to spy, fight, or die in suicide attacks.(28, 30, 31) These children are subjected to physical, sexual, and psychological abuse. Children as young as age 12 are recruited by pro-Taliban insurgents, trained as suicide bombers, and trafficked between Afghanistan and Pakistan.(28, 30)

Girls who are sold into forced marriages are sometimes trafficked internationally into commercial sexual exploitation. (28) Disabled children are sold or kidnapped and taken to countries such as Iran, in which they are forced to beg.(28, 32, 35)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Pakistan has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

*No conscription or no standing military.

Pakistan's laws are not completely consistent with international standards regarding child labor. The lack of a national minimum age for employment may increase the likelihood that very young children engage in activities that jeopardize their health and safety. The minimum age for hazardous work is also not consistent with international standards and may jeopardize the health and safety of young people ages 14 through 17.(13, 43) Additionally, domestic service, a sector in which many child laborers work, is not covered by the list of prohibited hazardous occupations or processes.(22, 33) The law also excludes workplaces with less than 10 persons employed. As a result, children in the informal sector do not benefit from the same protections as those working in larger establishments.(6, 44, 45)

The 18th Amendment to the Constitution, passed in 2010, devolved all child welfare and labor issues from the national level to the provincial government units. Until each province repeals or adopts a replacement law, federal laws on child protection and bonded labor are in force.(13, 31) Punjab is the only province to have passed a law on the employment of children and on bonded labor that mirrors existing national laws.(13, 28) Each of Pakistan's four provinces has draft legislation that prohibits work for children under age 14 and hazardous work for children under age 18.(31, 33) Each province's legislation has been pending since 2012; therefore, these provinces continue to use the previous national law as their standard.(31) Under the current laws, children remain vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor.

Pakistan

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Pakistan's laws do not specifically prohibit child pornography, the use of children in illicit activities, or internal trafficking. However, the Penal Code outlaws the circulation or production of any obscene books, drawings, representations, or other objects.(40, 46) The Government also uses the Penal Code and Sections 17 through 23 of the Emigration Ordinance, which address fraudulent immigration, to prosecute internal trafficking cases.(37, 38)

While education is free and compulsory through age 16, access to education is still limited. Over 6.5 million children are not in primary school.(47) In conflict zones, schools and infrastructure are often damaged.(32, 48) In some areas, schools are attacked and sometimes destroyed by militant groups opposed to secular education and the education of girls.(32)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Provincial Labor Inspectors	Inspect industrial areas and markets to identify child labor violations, enforce both national and provincial labor laws, and pursue legal action against employers.(11)
District Vigilance Committees	Implement the BLSA, assist in rehabilitating bonded laborers, and help laborers achieve the objectives of the law.(49)
Anti-trafficking Unit of the Federal Investigation Agency (FIA)	Enforce transnational trafficking-related laws.(50) Cooperate with other governments on trafficking cases, operate a hotline for victims, and publish information on anti-trafficking efforts on its website.(51)
Police	Investigate cases of bonded labor and enforce the BLSA.(52)

Law enforcement agencies in Pakistan took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

Research has not revealed the number of labor inspectors or inspections conducted throughout Pakistan.(13) The Government of Pakistan does not collect data on the number of violations, children assisted, or penalties imposed for those found to commit child labor violations.(13) Each province has a training center for labor inspectors, in which training on child labor is provided to labor inspectors.(53) Despite these training centers, provincial labor inspectors had little training and insufficient resources to adequately inspect workplaces.

Provincial labor inspectors lack authority to enforce child labor laws in agricultural settings.(54)

In Punjab, routine factory labor inspections have been replaced by a self-declaration system, whereby factory owners post declarations regarding workplace safety, health, and wage issues in their factories. Some of those factories are then chosen at random for inspection.(50) Because declarations are not mandatory and the review of declarations is the only method used to select companies for inspection, many factories go uninspected and there are no penalties for not complying with the self-declaration policy.(13, 50) In Punjab and Sindh, inspectors are instructed not to inspect a business for one year following its establishment. In addition, inspectors must seek permission from employers before labor inspections can be conducted.(27) Since devolution, labor inspections have become more infrequent. To address this issue, NGOs often perform labor inspections.(6)

During the reporting period, District Vigilance Committees were re-established in Punjab and 370 cases of bonded labor have been reported by the local police.(53) However, in other provinces, District Vigilance Committees may be nonfunctioning.(53, 55, 56)

Criminal Law Enforcement

The Government of Pakistan does not collect data on the number of criminal investigations, prosecutions, children assisted, or convictions of child traffickers and those using children in other exploitative forms of labor.(13, 50)

During the reporting period, the Federal Investigation Agency's (FIA) Interagency Task Force held several meetings to improve coordination among different law enforcement groups in order to improve the tracking of human traffickers.(57) Additionally, FIA took action against FIA officials who were complicit in human trafficking and smuggling. During the reporting period, FIA arrested and filed eight criminal cases against its own staff, and it demoted or dismissed senior officers involved in human trafficking.(57) In 2013, UNODC and the Government of Pakistan launched a pilot training course of a human trafficking training curriculum for all law enforcement agencies.(57)

Police lack the necessary personnel, training, and equipment to confront the armed guards who often oversee bonded laborers.(27) These circumstances hamper the effectiveness of Bonded Labor System Abolition Act (BLSA) enforcement, and since the law's passage in 1992, there have been no convictions under the act.(28) In 2013, police officers in Sindh Province were provided training on how to prevent and prosecute cases of bonded labor.(52)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Provincial Child Labor Units	Conduct research, build capacity, and coordinate child labor activities at the provincial level.(33, 50) Established by each provincial government.
National Commission of Human Rights Act	Coordinate Pakistan's compliance with international treaty obligations, including those related to child labor.(33, 58)
Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Child Protection and Welfare Commission	Coordinate efforts to enhance the safety, welfare, and wellbeing of children, including the prevention of exploitative child labor practices and running prevention programs in Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Province.(59)
Sindh Child Protection Authority	Coordinate efforts to ensure the rights of the children in need of special protection measures in Sindh Province, including child laborers.(60)

There are no national-level coordinating committees on child labor in Pakistan.(33) Additionally, there is a lack of sharing and coordination nationally amongst provinces.(33)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Pakistan has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Sindh and Punjab Provincial Plans of Action to Combat Bonded Labor†	Details how Sindh and Punjab Provinces will revise bonded labor legislation. Includes plans to strengthen the capacity of labor inspectors, generate awareness on bonded labor, improve reporting, and computerize labor inspection data.(53, 61)
Provincial Plans of Action to Combat Child Labor†	Details how each province will revise child labor legislation. Includes plans to strengthen the capacity of labor inspectors, generate awareness on child labor, improve reporting, and computerize labor inspection data.(53, 61)
National Action Plan for Children	Aims to prohibit, restrict, and regulate child labor with an eventual goal of its ultimate elimination.(62) Lays out 14 key strategies and actions, including harmonizing work between government agencies, NGOs, and donors; promoting research on child labor issues; developing non-formal education for child laborers; providing microcredit for families of child laborers; and conducting national surveys on child labor. Also addresses child trafficking and outlines key objectives for its elimination.(62)
National Education Policy	Focuses on increasing the literacy rate and providing livelihood skills to children, including those engaged in child labor. Aims to expand non-formal and vocational education programs to children, including child laborers.(63)

Policy	Description
Poverty Alleviation Strategy	Describes the strategy for alleviating poverty in Pakistan, which includes priority access to microfinance for families of working children.(13)
National Action Plan for Combating Human Trafficking	Describes the prevention, prosecution, and protection strategies for ending human trafficking, including child trafficking.(64)
Child Protection Policy (FATA)	Describes how the FATA will promote and create a protective environment for all children. Includes actions to be taken towards the prevention and elimination of child labor.(65)

†Policy was launched during the reporting period.

The National Action Plan for Children mandates child labor surveys; however, such surveys have not been conducted since 1996.(31, 33) The lack of recent data hampers the Government’s ability to assess the scope and prevalence of child labor and to develop policies or plans for future child labor initiatives.(31)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Pakistan participated in and funded programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Child Camel Jockey Rehabilitation Assistance†	Child Protection and Rehabilitation Bureau program that provides housing for trafficked children, including children returned from working as camel jockeys in the United Arab Emirates. Reintegrates child victims of trafficking into their families and home communities.(27)
National Centers for Rehabilitation of Child Laborers‡	Ministry of Social Welfare and Special Education program that aims to remove children ages 5 to 14 from hazardous labor and provide them with education, clothing, and a stipend. As of 2012, there were 151 centers.(13)
Combating Abusive Child Labor II Project†‡	EU-funded project implemented by the ILO to assist provincial governments with the drafting of new child labor legislation, create Provincial Child Labor Units that monitor the implementation of a provincial child labor program, expand the knowledgebase on child labor, and increase awareness to promote child labor-friendly policies. Concluded in 2013.(66)

Provides livelihood services to target families and improves working conditions.(67)
Project to Eliminate Bonded Labor in Brick Kilns#*	Punjab Provincial Government project that provides interest-free loans, national identity cards, and health services to assist bonded laborers.(50, 53)
Strengthening Law Enforcement Responses and Action Against Internal Trafficking and Bonded Labor	ILO-funded program that engages brick kiln owners in Sindh and Punjab to establish new practices to help eradicate bonded labor, including child bonded labor. Links brick kiln workers to social safety nets.(53)
Benazir Income Support Program‡	Government scheme that provides financial assistance to underprivileged families and offers incentives for parents to keep their children in school and out of work.(31) In 2013, provided $175 million to implement the Benazir Bhutto Income Support Program.(31)
Education Voucher Scheme#*	Punjab Educational Foundation provides stipends to private schools for students enrolled from low-income areas of Lahore.(13, 68)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Pakistan.

Program is funded by the Provincial Government of Punjab.

During the reporting period, district officials in Sahiwal, Punjab, Sukkur, and Sindh began running a pilot program to track child labor patterns by collecting information on how many children are absent from school.(31) While the Government of Pakistan has a number of initiatives to address the worst forms of child labor, their limited reach is insufficient to address the scope of the child labor problem. In addition, there is no evidence of programs specifically targeting child domestics, or to raise awareness of and provide assistance to children being used in armed conflict.(27)

The Education Voucher Scheme only reaches a small portion of students and the other three provinces of Pakistan lack the resources to ensure that all children receive a free and compulsory education as assured in the Constitution and to address the magnitude of the bonded labor situation.(13)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Pakistan (Table 9).

Table 9. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Laws	Ratify the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict and the Palermo Protocol.	2013
	Provinces should establish a minimum age for employment that, at minimum, is harmonized with the compulsory education age.	2009 – 2013
	Create comprehensive prohibitions against additional specific hazardous activities and clearly establish a minimum age for hazardous work at 18.	2009 – 2013
	Ensure that relevant child labor laws and regulations apply equally to children working in the formal and informal sectors regardless of the size of the establishment.	2011 – 2013
	Amend the law to clearly criminalize child pornography, internal child trafficking, and to prohibit the use of children in illicit activities.	2011 – 2013
Enforcement	Collect and publish enforcement data for child labor violations and criminal violation of child trafficking laws.	2010 – 2013
	Allow labor inspectors to conduct inspections at any time, without notice, including within the first year of an enterprise's establishment and within agricultural settings.	2011 – 2013
	Revise the self-declaration labor monitoring system in Punjab to require employers to post reports on workplace safety, health, and wages and thereby be subject to inspection.	2010 – 2013
	Ensure vigilance committees are established and active throughout Pakistan.	2013
	Provide adequate funding for training to enable inspectors and investigators to combat the worst forms of child labor.	2010 – 2013
Coordination	Ensure that the response to the worst forms of child labor can be coordinated at both the provincial and national levels.	2011 – 2013
Government Policies	Conduct sectoral surveys on areas with a high incidence of child labor to increase the knowledgebase in these areas and inform policy and program planning.	2009 – 2013
Social Programs	Increase the size and scope of Government programs to reach children working in the worst forms of child labor, including work in domestic service and bonded child laborers.	2009 – 2013
	Implement programs to raise awareness and provide assistance to children used by non-state militant groups to engage in armed conflict.	2011 – 2013
	Expand education programs to provide free and compulsory education as required in the Right to Free and Compulsory Education Act.	2011 – 2013
	Assess the impact that existing programs may have on child labor.	2013

Panama

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2013, Panama made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government of Panama increased the number of labor inspectors, extended the Roadmap towards the Elimination of Child Labor to cover the period 2013–2014, and released the results of a 2012 survey covering child labor. However, children continue to engage in child labor, including in agriculture. The law does not adequately define light work nor does it clearly sanction violations related to the hazardous work in which children are prohibited to engage. The law also allows minors under 16 to engage in hazardous work in training establishments.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Panama are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture. (1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Panama.

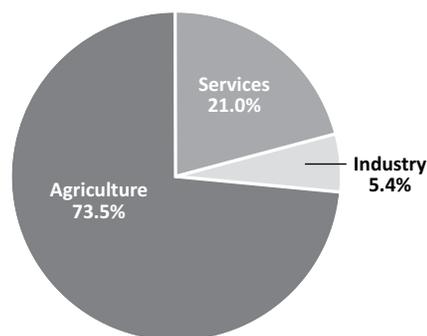

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	4.5 (30,016)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	94.3
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	4.5
Primary Completion Rate (%)		97.7

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2014.(4)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Encuesta de Trabajo Infantil, 2010.(5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of coffee,† tomatoes,† melons,† sugarcane,† beans,† rice,† bananas,† corn,† yucca,† and onions*† (6-19)
	Fishing,*† activities unknown (9, 20-22)
	Scavenging the ocean for metal and other items*† (9, 20, 23, 24)
Services	Domestic service in third-party homes*† (2, 10, 11, 17, 20, 22, 25-30)
	Construction, activities unknown*† (30, 31)
	Assisting bus drivers by collecting fares*† (9, 20, 31)
	Street work including selling goods on the street,† washing cars,† shoe shining,† and collecting recyclables*† (3, 9, 10, 17, 19, 20, 22, 30, 32-35)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced domestic service† (29)
	Commercial sexual exploitation as a result of trafficking† (2, 19, 29)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3 (d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

According to the results of Panama's 2012 Survey on Child Labor, boys are more likely to work than girls. Furthermore, the highest prevalence of child labor is in autonomous indigenous areas, followed by the provinces of Coclé and Darien. (1, 31, 36, 37)

Children of indigenous descent face greater barriers to accessing education services, including having to travel significant distances to reach school.(28, 35) Additionally, children from indigenous communities frequently migrate with their families to work in agriculture.(8, 9, 38, 39) Farm owners often pay wages according to the amount of crops harvested, leading families to bring their children to work alongside them to harvest more crops.(9)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Panama has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Constitution; Family Code; Labor Code (40-42)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Family Code; Penal Code; Labor Code (20, 41-43)
List of Hazardous Occupations Prohibited for Children	Yes		Labor Code; Penal Code; Executive Decree No. 19, of 2006 (24)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Penal Code; Constitution (9, 40, 43)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Constitution; Penal Code; Article 3 of Law 79 on Trafficking in Persons and Related Activities, Family Code (9, 40, 41, 43-45)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Penal Code; Law No. 79 on Trafficking in Persons and Related Activities (23, 43, 45)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Penal Code; Article 4 of Law 79 on Trafficking in Persons and Related Activities; Family Code (41, 43, 45)
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	N/A*
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	N/A*
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Law on Education (46)
Free Public Education	Yes		Law on Education (20)

*No conscription or no standing military.

The Constitution allows children under the minimum age to work under conditions established by the law.(40, 47) The Labor Code allows for light work in agriculture starting at age 12, as long as it does not impede school attendance.(9, 41, 42) It also states that minors ages 12 to 15 may perform light work in agriculture if the work is outside regular school hours; it also limits the work hours of minors under age 16 to 6 hours per day and 36 hours per week.(42) Similarly, the Agricultural Code permits children between ages 12 and 14 to perform agricultural labor, as long as the work does not interfere with their schooling.(48) None of these provisions defines the kind of light work that children may perform in agriculture.(9, 41, 42)

Panama

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Additionally, Article 118 of the Labor Code allows minors to perform hazardous work in training establishments when the work is approved by the competent government authority and carried out under its supervision, but the Labor Code does not establish a minimum age for this work.(42, 49) Although Executive Decree No. 19 of 2006 indicates that violations related to hazardous child labor will be sanctioned in accordance with existing laws, it is unclear whether penalties provided for in Article 202 and 203 of the Penal Code or Article 125 of the Labor Code are applicable.(24)

In 2013, the Government of Panama began to review and update the List of Hazardous Occupations Prohibited for Children.(2, 50)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MITRADEL)	Enforce child labor laws. Contains two directorates with direct authority over child labor matters: the Directorate Against Child Labor and for the Protection of Adolescent Workers (DIRETIPPAT) and the Labor Inspection Directorate.(2, 51) Inspections carried out jointly. Refers cases of children found in exploitative work in the informal sector to the Child and Adolescent Courts and the National Secretariat for Childhood, Adolescence, and Family (SENNIAF).(2, 6)
Labor Inspection Directorate	Carry out labor inspections in establishments and sites where it is suspected that children are working.(2)
Directorate Against Child Labor and for the Protection of Adolescent Workers (DIRETIPPAT)	Oversee child labor inspections, mainly in informal workplaces within the MITRADEL. Plan and execute public policies; carry out education programs on child labor for employers, parents, and children. Coordinate the implementation of the National Plan for the Eradication of Child Labor and the Protection of Young Workers.(2, 6, 52, 53)
Attorney General's Office	Investigate and prosecute crimes of sexual exploitation. Investigations begun by the Judicial Investigative Directorate; cases passed to the prosecutors.(54)
Public Ministry's Organized Crime Unit	Investigate trafficking cases and operate a unit dedicated to investigating trafficking in persons for sexual exploitation.(6, 55)
National Commission for the Prevention of Crimes of Sexual Exploitation (CONAPREDES)	Coordinate actions and study trends, prevalence, and policies related to sexual exploitation. Promote public policies for the prevention and eradication of sexual exploitation through specific actions, projects, and programs.(56) Members include the Attorney General as well as the ministries of Labor, Education, Social Development, and Health.(56) Refer cases of sexual exploitation to the Attorney General's Office.(20)
National Secretariat for Childhood, Adolescence, and Family (SENNIAF)	Support the ability of the Government and NGOs to eradicate child labor through a program thus creating a network of services that addresses the needs of this population better. Promotes education as a means to contribute to the eradication of poverty.(2)

Law enforcement agencies in Panama took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, the Ministry of Labor (MITRADEL) employed 239 labor inspectors, an increase from 138 in 2012. Seven labor inspectors are specifically assigned to child labor issues in Panama City.(2, 20) However, all labor inspectors are trained to look for evidence of child labor.(57, 58)

Complaints related to child labor may be filed through the “311” citizen complaint telephone hotline run by the MITRADEL. Callers can register complaints and allegations of child labor through the hotline, in person either at one of the MITRADEL offices or at social service centers run throughout the country.(6, 55) The complaints are assigned a case number and are processed by the appropriate government agency.(2) The Government reports that only two complaints were received during 2013: one regarding child labor in construction and the other regarding a child working in an informal business.(2, 59)

In 2013, the MITRADEL designated $811,093 for its Directorate Against Child Labor and for the Protection of Adolescent Workers (DIRETIPPAT) to conduct inspections and programs, among other activities. The Labor Inspectorate received $1.2 million, and the budget allocated for child labor inspection was $121,832, a decrease of $66,637 from 2012.(2, 60)

In 2013, The MITRADEL had sufficient resources, including vehicles and computers, to carry out its activities.(2, 61) During the reporting period, the MITRADEL carried out 5,664 labor inspections, an increase from 3,340 in 2012.(2) Additionally, the MITRADEL conducted 21 inspections to investigate child labor specifically in such activities as washing cars, working in and around taxi and bus stops, bagging groceries in supermarkets, and fishing. (2) DIRETIPPAT removed 1,546 working children from the street and from hazardous labor through preventative actions.(2, 54) The MITRADEL also investigated 42 complaints of child labor offenses, found 22 to be substantiated, and issued fines.(2)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2013, the Attorney General's Office conducted 28 investigations of child pornography cases and of 11 cases related to commercial sexual exploitation of children.(54)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
The Committee for the Eradication of Child Labor and the Protection of Adolescent Workers (CETIPPAT)	Coordinate various efforts to combat child labor. Led by the First Lady of Panama and comprise the MITRADEL; the ministries of Education, Health, and Agriculture; as well as representatives from civil society and organizations of workers and employers.(56)
CONAPREDES	Coordinate government efforts to combat the commercial sexual exploitation of children. Led by the Office of the Attorney General and includes members from the ministries of Labor, Education, Social Development, and Health.(62) Conducts investigations in the area of sexual exploitation.(23)
SENNIAF	Support the ability of the Government and NGOs to combat child labor through a program, thus creating a network of services that addresses the needs of this population better. Promotes education as a means to contribute to the eradication of poverty.(2)

In 2013, the Government of Panama passed Executive Decree 107, which adjusted the composition of the Committee for the Eradication of Child Labor and the Protection of Adolescent Workers by reducing the number of institutions from 27 to 23, with the goal of improving its effectiveness.(2, 50)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Panama has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Plan for the Eradication of Child Labor and the Protection of Young Workers (2007–2011)	Aims to combat child labor through various strategies, including raising awareness, strengthening national legislation, improving the quality of life of at-risk families, reintegrating child workers into the educational system, and developing systems to monitor working children.(56) This plan is currently administered by CETIPPAT.
Roadmap towards the Elimination of Child Labor	Aims to achieve the goals of the National Plan to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2015 and all child labor in Panama by 2020 by strengthening anti-poverty, health, and educational programs and policies.(20, 63, 64) Provides a work plan of responsible agencies and provides a framework for the incoming Government to continue the strategies of child labor eradication.(64, 65) In 2013, the Government extended the Roadmap towards the Elimination of Child Labor to cover 2013–2014.(2)

Policy	Description
National Action Plan for the Prevention and Elimination of Sexual Commercial Exploitation of Children and Adolescents 2008–2010	Aims to prevent and eliminate the sexual commercial exploitation of children and adolescents through various strategies, including the provision of services to victims, strengthening CONAPREDES, and raising awareness. With support from the Public Ministry, CONAPREDES also continued to execute the National Plan to Prevent and Eliminate the Sexual Exploitation of Children and Adolescents (2008–2010).(2, 20, 56, 66)

In 2013, the Government extended the Roadmap towards the Elimination of Child Labor to cover 2013–2014.(2) In addition, during 2013, the National Commission for the Prevention of Crimes of Sexual Exploitation (CONAPREDES) held conversations with various sectors to raise awareness about commercial sexual exploitation and to develop prevention actions for this crime. However, turnover in personnel has resulted in a lack of permanently trained staff at CONAPREDES.(23)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Panama funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Direct Action Program‡	MITRADEL program implemented through the Institute for Training and Utilization of Human Resource (INUHR) that provides scholarships for schooling to approximately 4,900 child workers.(7, 67–69) Offers training to beneficiaries to improve income-generating opportunities.(9, 70, 71) The Government of Panama offered 1,443 new scholarships to child laborers in 2013.(2)
Network of Opportunities*‡	Ministry of Social Development program that provides cash transfers to families conditioned on their participation in health and education services.(20, 70)

Building Effective Policies Against Child Labor in Ecuador and Panama	USDOL-funded, $3.5 million, 4-year project implemented by ILO-IPEC to strengthen policy and enforcement of child labor laws and occupational safety in Panama.(75, 76)
EducaFuturo	USDOL-funded, $6.5 million, 4-year project implemented by Partners of the Americas to combat the worst forms of child labor among the most vulnerable populations, including Afro-descendants and migrant and indigenous children, by providing them with educational and livelihood services in Panama. The project targets approximately 1,800 children, 500 youth, and 600 households.(75, 76)

Aims to strengthen legal protections and social service delivery for child domestic workers in Panama.(77)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Panama.

In 2013, the Government of Panama published the results of the 2012 Survey on Child Labor.(1, 2) The Government continues to implement social programs to combat poverty among the most vulnerable and to increase the access of children and families to basic and vocational education.(2)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Papua New Guinea

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

In 2013, Papua New Guinea made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government and six provincial governments committed to establish Provincial Child Labor Committees to combat child labor at the local level. In July 2013, Parliament passed the People Smuggling and Trafficking in Persons Act; however, the Act has not yet come into force.

Children in Papua New Guinea continue to engage in the worst forms of child labor, particularly in forced domestic service and commercial sexual exploitation. Papua New Guinea does not have a comprehensive list of hazardous occupations from which children are prohibited. Additionally, Papua New Guinea's child labor laws are not effectively enforced, and the lack of compulsory education may increase the risk of children's involvement in the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Papua New Guinea are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, particularly in forced domestic service and in commercial sexual exploitation.(1-6) Data on key indicators on children's work and education are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		Unavailable

Source for primary completion rate: UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2014.(7)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis, 2014.(8)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Working on tea,* coffee,* cocoa,* copra,* oil palm,* and rubber plantations* (1, 2, 9, 10) Domestic service (2, 3, 5, 6, 9, 11-13)
Services	Street work, vending, chopping firewood for sale, moving furniture, loading and unloading boxes from containers, carrying heavy bags of food, scavenging for scrap metal, begging (1-3, 5, 10, 14, 15)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, including working in bars and night clubs, brothels, and pornography, sometimes as a result of trafficking (2, 3, 5, 9, 10, 12, 13)
	Unspecified forced labor as a result of trafficking* (2, 3, 10) Forced domestic service (2, 3, 5, 6, 11-13)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)-(c) of ILO C. 182.

A number of children in urban areas, such as Mount Hagen, work as porters for market taxis and carry extremely heavy loads. Children living in informal settlements on the outskirts of Port Moresby, who have been orphaned by AIDS or abandoned by their families, are particularly vulnerable to this type of employment.(10, 16-18)

Some children working in domestic service are held in indentured servitude in order to pay off family debts.(2, 3, 5, 6, 10, 11, 14) These children work long hours, lack freedom of mobility, do not have access to medical treatment, and do not attend school.(14)

Limited evidence suggests that members of the Papua New Guinea police are responsible for committing acts of sexual violence against children, and for facilitating trafficking by accepting bribes and ignoring victims forced into commercial sexual exploitation or labor.(2-4, 10, 14, 19, 20) There are reports that the threat of sexual violence against young girls, and the shame and stigma that follows this violence, prevents many girls from attending school.(10, 21)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Papua New Guinea has ratified some key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

* No conscription or no standing military.

The minimum age for hazardous work in Papua New Guinea is inconsistent with ILO C. 182, which states that hazardous work by children under the age of 18 should be prohibited. There is no comprehensive list of hazardous work from which children are prohibited, but the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations (DLIR) has been developing one since late 2012 for inclusion in amendments to the Employment Act and the Occupational Safety and Health Act.(2, 4, 10, 12, 14, 15). In addition, DLIR drafted a set of regulations called the National Common Rule, which would cover child labor issues. However, the Government has yet to enact any of this legislation.(10) There is a lack of harmony among existing laws and policies on protections against hazardous child labor. For example, the Child Act prohibits and sets penalties for the engagement of a child (defined as a person under age 18) in “harmful child labor,” which includes hazardous work; however, the Employment Act does not prohibit injurious work by 16-, 17-, and 18-year-olds.(10) The Child Welfare Act prohibits street trading by children of any age between the hours of 8 p.m. and 6 a.m., or at any time on a Sunday.(26)

Papua New Guinea

Papua New Guinea does not have legislative provisions for offenses committed against children for the purpose of labor exploitation; laws that explicitly forbid the sale and trafficking of children; or legal instruments that prohibit the use, procuring, or offering of a child for the production and trafficking of drugs.(3, 11, 12, 14, 27, 28) In July 2013, Parliament passed the People Smuggling and Trafficking in Persons Act. Once enacted, the law will criminalize smuggling and trafficking in persons, provide assistance and protection for victims, and augment penalties for smugglers and traffickers such as increased imprisonment for offenses that involve children under the age of 18 years.(20, 29). The law will not come into force until it has been certified by the Speaker of Parliament and endorsed by the Governor General.(20)

Although free education through grade 10 has been Government policy since 2011, and was extended through grade 12 the following year, it is not guaranteed by law; in practice, many schools charged fees for books, uniforms, and other supplies.(10, 24, 30-32) Education is not compulsory, which makes children especially vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, as they are not required to be in school nor are they allowed to legally work until they are age 16.(4, 15)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Department of Labor and Industrialized Relations (DLIR)	Implement and enforce child labor laws. Approximately 30 labor inspectors cover child labor in addition to other labor law violations.(10)
Department of Religion, Youth, and Community Development (DRYC)	Enforce the Lukautim Pikinini (Child) Act of 2009.(10)
Royal Papua New Guinea Constabulary Sexual Offenses Squad	Enforce laws against commercial sexual exploitation of children and use of children in illicit activities.(10)

Law enforcement agencies in Papua New Guinea took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

The DLIR Child Labor Unit announced by the Government in 2012 had not yet been established. There were approximately 30 labor inspectors, but according to international observers, this was not enough to enforce child labor laws effectively.(10) No child labor inspections or complaints were pursued. Research did not uncover information on funding or training for any of the relevant agencies during the reporting period.(10) DLIR participated in an effort to raise awareness on child labor at the provincial level of government by explaining DLIR’s ongoing internal initiatives on labor law and enforcement reform. DLIR circulated its draft Child Labor Inspection Form and Child Labor Referral Form for piloting by provincial officials.(33)

Criminal Law Enforcement

There were no prosecutions or convictions of the worst forms of child labor.(10) Through support and funding from IOM, the Government conducted three regional trainings for law enforcement personnel on trafficking in persons.(20) In January 2014, the Government opened an investigation into a possible child trafficking case regarding two girls in a rural village who were unwillingly given in marriage as recompense to the family of a deceased teacher.(20)

Both the ILO Committee of Experts and senior staff at the Department of Religion, Youth, and Community Development have noted that enforcement is ineffective because of inadequate resources and cultural acceptance of child labor.(12, 14, 16, 20, 26) Inadequate technical capacity and coordination among enforcement agencies constitute additional obstacles to effective enforcement.(1, 4, 10, 26)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established a mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Human Trafficking Committee (NHTC)	Coordinate efforts to combat trafficking in persons. Members include the Office of the Prime Minister and NEC, Department for National Planning and Monitoring, Immigration and Citizenship Service Authority, Customs, Royal Papua New Guinea Constabulary, DLIR, Office of the Public Prosecutor, National Council of Women, Consultative Implementation and Monitoring Council, State Solicitor, Department of Provincial and Local Government Affairs, Department for Community Development, Salvation Army, City Mission/Haus Ruth, Anglicare, Save the Children, World Vision, IOM, UNHCR, UNHCHR, UNICEF, UN Women, and U.S. Embassy Port Moresby.(20)

During the reporting period, the NHTC coordinated logistics for an anti-trafficking seminar that brought together officials from seven government agencies.

Although the Government has established a human trafficking coordinating body, research found no evidence of a mechanism to combat child labor in all of its worst forms. In 2013, the DLIR Child Labor Desk that was to have been established in 2012 to liaise among the relevant agencies was not yet in place.(10) The DLIR chaired a Project Advisory Committee (PAC) on Child Labor for the regional TACKLE child labor project that ended in 2013. As of 2012, DLIR had endorsed the establishment of a new permanent, interagency committee on child labor, but research found no evidence that the Secretary of DLIR has signed the endorsement.(4, 10)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Papua New Guinea has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Universal Basic Education Plan 2010–2019*	Aims to ensure that all children complete nine years of basic, quality education from age 6; to reduce poverty through education; and to build Government capacity to manage education.(31) Key objectives include building infrastructure, including more classrooms and staff housing and increased access to safe drinking water and sanitation facilities at school; providing teacher training; providing over-age children access to basic education; and abolishing all school fees by 2015. Plan also includes a goal that the Government will fully fund basic education by 2015.(31, 34, 35)
Vision 2050*	Sets a long-term strategy for Papua New Guinea's socioeconomic development. Pillars of the plan include "Human Capital Development, Gender, Youth, and People Empowerment".(36) Prioritizes education access, knowledge and technology growth, community empowerment, access to credit, bringing more people into the formal economy, and equitable development in rural areas where poverty is highest.(36)
Medium Term Development Strategy 2011–2015*	Establishes a 5-year plan for development, in line with Vision 2050, and including budgets, targets and outputs. (37) Plan designates responsible authorities for implementation. Education and public utility infrastructure improvements given highest priority.(37)

*The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

There is no overall policy to combat child labor. The National Action Plan on Child Labor (NAP) has been in draft form since 2012. Reportedly, DLIR was finalizing the NAP to submit for Parliamentary approval in early 2014.(4, 10)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Papua New Guinea participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Papua New Guinea

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Decent Work Country Programme 2013–2015†	Implemented by the Government, the Trade Union Congress, and the Employers' Federation through technical assistance from the ILO and cooperation with the Australian Government. Seeks to establish a national employment strategy. Explicitly recognizes the relationship between education and child labor, and prioritizes youth employment services.(38) Concrete measures to be taken include finalizing child labor provisions in the draft Employment Bill and drafting a hazardous work list and the formalization of the Child Labor Unit in DLIR.(38) Key youth employment initiative is to provide business training to out-of-school youth, particularly those who are marginalized or disabled. During the reporting period, the Decent Work strategy paper was finalized.(38)
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues Project	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016. Established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010. Aims to strengthen legal protections and social service delivery for child domestic workers. In 2013, the project disseminated awareness-raising materials and a global report on child domestic workers on the occasion of World Day Against Child Labor.(39)
Tackling Child Labor through Education (TACKLE) project	Jointly launched by the European Commission and the ILO to combat child labor through education in 12 African and the Caribbean countries and the Pacific group of states (ACP).(40) Aims to improve government capacity to implement and enforce child labor laws and policy, and to work with social partners and civil society towards these goals.(41) Closed in Papua New Guinea in August 2013 after 6 years of activity. During the reporting period, the project visited six provinces in Papua New Guinea to raise awareness on child labor, provide technical assistance, get input for a national hazardous work list, and raise awareness on draft legislation on child labor.(33) DLIR and six provincial governments committed to establish Provincial Child Labor Committees to combat child labor at the local level.(33) Under TACKLE, the NGOs Mercy Works (in partnership with the Government) and the Young Women's Christian Association implemented direct action programs to empower children working in the markets and living in the informal settlements.(18)
Urban Youth Employment Project*	Partially Government-funded World Bank project to provide training, temporary jobs, and skill development through apprenticeships in a variety of fields and 2-year placements on public works projects. Project targets 13,500 disadvantaged youth in and around Port Moresby.(42) In 2013, 250 youths received pre-employment training and about 50 percent of those were placed in trainee positions; to-date, 1300 youths have received basic life skills training.(42)

*The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

Although the Government has implemented programs in domestic service and among communities vulnerable to street work, research found no evidence that it has carried out programs to assist children in commercial sexual exploitation or agricultural labor.

Paraguay

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2013, Paraguay made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. In May 2013, the Government of Paraguay became the second Latin American country to ratify ILO Convention 189 Concerning Decent Work for Domestic Workers. The Government conducted human trafficking trainings for law enforcement professionals throughout the country; prosecuted and convicted criminals who violated laws regarding the worst forms of child labor; and expanded health and education services of the Government-funded Embrace Program (Programa Abrazo) in areas of the country with high prevalence of child labor and the worst forms of child labor. However, children in Paraguay continue to engage in child labor in agriculture and in the worst forms of child labor in domestic service. Paraguay's system of child labor eradication lacks a formal coordinating mechanism between agencies and remains underfunded relative to the scope of the problem. In addition, the Government did not make information available on whether businesses were fined for child labor infractions.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Paraguay are engaged in child labor in agriculture and in the worst forms of child labor in domestic service.(1) A 2011 quantitative government survey found that 21 percent of all Paraguayan children are engaged in hazardous work, and that approximately 90 percent of all working children perform hazardous tasks, such as carrying heavy loads or using dangerous tools.(2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Paraguay.

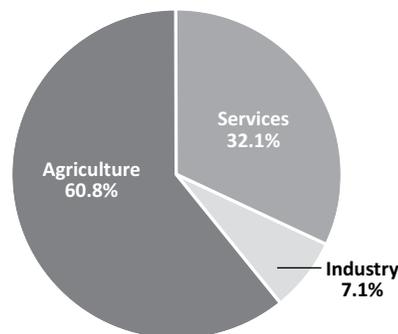

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

A 2011 quantitative study on child labor in Paraguay's sugarcane sector estimated that children comprise more than 25 percent of the sugarcane workforce, and about one out of four of those children suffered injuries twice a year, on average, while working.(6) Children work alongside their parents in debt bondage on cattle ranches in the remote region of the Chaco.(1, 8, 21) Children are engaged in gold mining in small family-run mining operations in Paso Yobái and Guairá.(1) The practice of criadazgo, a system whereby well-off families informally adopt young domestic workers from impoverished families, is pervasive in Paraguay.(1, 15) Child sex trafficking occurs in the border areas with Argentina and Brazil.(13, 16)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In November 2013, the Government adopted Law 5115/2013, which created a new Ministry of Labor, Work, and Social Security (MLWS).(1) The law establishes a cabinet-level agency directly responsible for all labor, work, and social security matters; instructs the new agency to create policies and programs that address forced labor, debt bondage, and child labor; and mandates the formation of a General Directorate for the Protection of Children and Adolescents to directly address child labor issues.(1)

The law permits children between ages 12 and 14 to engage in light work. However, the Government has not yet adopted regulations governing the nature and conditions of light work that is permitted for children.(31) Moreover, the ILO Committee of Experts has recommended that Paraguay strengthen its laws regarding light work for children.(31) Research has not identified the specific legal provisions that stipulate penalties for violations of the List of Work Endangering Children (Decree 4951) or which ministries enforce the law.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including in its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor, Work and Social Security (MLWS)	Enforce laws related to child labor and hazardous child labor, inspect workplaces for child labor, and fine companies found in violation of labor laws.(1) Refer cases involving criminal violation of child labor to the Public Ministry or the National Secretariat for Children and Adolescents (SNNA).(1)
National Police	Maintain a special unit of 33 police officers that handle complaints regarding trafficking in persons, including children, with offices in five cities.(1)
The Public Ministry (Prosecutor's Office)	Enforce criminal laws, including those related to the worst forms of child labor. Investigate and prosecute violators based on complaints, its own information or referrals from the MLWS and other agencies, such as the SNNA and the Public Defender's Office.(1) Maintain a Special Directorate to Fight the Trafficking of Persons and Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children that works with local prosecutors nationwide to prosecute trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation crimes.(1)
The National Secretariat for Children and Adolescents (SNNA)	Maintain a unit dedicated to fighting child trafficking.(1) Sponsor hotline to report cases of trafficking and the commercial sexual exploitation of children; provide social services to trafficking victims upon receiving referrals from law enforcement agencies.(17) In reporting period, responded to 4 cases of child labor which included 3 cases of forced labor and 1 case of worst forms of child labor.
The Public Defender's Office	Protect the due process of law. Endowed with legal, administrative and budgetary autonomy within the judicial system. Established a permanent Observatory Unit on Torture and an Observatory Unit on Penal Conditions and employs 200 attorneys.(18)

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Women's Affairs (MWA)	Handle female victims of trafficking, half of whom are estimated to be children. Houses office dedicated to combating trafficking of children. Handles most social services for trafficking victims. Five dedicated personnel.(1, 17)

Law enforcement agencies in Paraguay took actions to combat child labor, including in its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

On January 1, 2014 the Ministry of Justice and Labor (MJT) split into two ministries: the Ministry of Justice and Human Rights (MJH) and the Ministry of Labor, Work, and Social Security (MLWS).(1) This separation allows the MLWS to have an independent budget and fulfills an ILO recommendation.(1) In 2013, the former MJT employed 24 inspectors nationwide in eight state-level branch offices, a decrease from 43 inspectors in 2012.(1, 17) From January 2013 to December 2013, the MJT undertook three wide-ranging sector-specific inspections in the construction, transportation, and commerce sectors that did not uncover child labor infractions.(1) Although the total number of labor inspections that took place in 2013 is unavailable, the MJT reported conducting 361 inspections between August 2012 and June 2013.(1)

Given the extent of child labor in Paraguay, the number of labor inspectors is inadequate.(1) No information is available on the number of citations or penalties issued for child labor law violations. Some labor inspectors received training regarding child labor in previous years, but labor inspectors have not conducted specific inspections focusing on child labor.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2013, the Public Ministry began prosecuting domestic labor trafficking cases involving children, a new mandate for the Ministry that was established by the 2012 Comprehensive Law Against Human Trafficking. In 2013, the Public Ministry employed three specialized prosecutors in its Special Directorate to Fight the Trafficking of Persons and Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children, the same number of prosecutors as in 2012.(1) These prosecutors had a staff of 35 assistants, an increase from 23 assistants in 2012.(1, 17) The prosecutors in this unit carried out 12 training sessions across the country, training at least 400 prosecutors, police officers, and judges on the obligations and responsibilities of implementing the 2012 human trafficking law.(1) In addition, in 2013, the National Commission to Prevent and Eradicate the Exploitation of Children (CONAETI) conducted two training workshops for Public Ministry inspectors on the implementation of the 2012 human trafficking law.(1)

In 2013, the Public Ministry coordinated with The National Secretariat for Children and Adolescents (SNNA) and the National Police to assist and, in some cases, remove from the street 16 indigenous children who were working as street beggars. There were 21 prosecutions regarding the worst forms of child labor during the reporting period, all of which were child pornography cases. Most of these prosecutions were led by the Prosecutor's Office Anti-Trafficking Unit.(1) In 2013, the Prosecutor's Office Unit to Combat Cyber Crimes cooperated with the U.S. Federal Bureau of Investigation, INTERPOL, and the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children to also investigate and prosecute four child pornography cases.(1) Three convictions were obtained during the reporting period for distribution of child pornography. The maximum sentence administered was three years in prison.(1)

Paraguay's law enforcement agencies have inadequate resources, including staff, to sufficiently investigate and prosecute cases of the worst forms of child labor. As a result, the number of convictions of crimes related to the worst forms of child labor is inadequate.(1) There is also a lack of formal referral mechanisms between prosecutors in the Public Ministry and other agencies that receive complaints related to the worst forms of child labor, such as the SNNA.(1)

An additional constraint to labor law enforcement is the legal requirement that the Public Ministry and MLWS secure a search warrant from a judge if an employer does not permit them to enter a workplace, including the workplace of domestic servants, to inspect it. There is a lack of efficient and timely cooperation by judicial authorities in granting search warrants for workplace inspections.(1)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including in its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
The National Commission to Prevent and Eradicate the Exploitation of Children (CONAETI)	Lead government efforts against child labor and include representatives from the MLWS, the Ministry of Justice and Human Rights (MJH), the MWA, the SNNA, and other government agencies as well as labor union representatives, industry associations and NGOs.(1, 32)
National Council for Children and Adolescents (National Council)	Establish policies to protect children's rights and approve specific programs aimed at children and adolescents.(1, 32)
Inter-Institutional Working Group on Preventing and Combating Human Trafficking	Coordinate inter-agency efforts to combat child trafficking. Headed by the Ministry of Foreign Relations.(1, 13, 32)
Defense Councils for the Rights of Children and Adolescents (CODENI)	Coordinate government efforts to protect children's rights at the municipal level.(1)

The National Commission to Prevent and Eradicate the Exploitation of Children (CONAETI) was active during the reporting period, holding eight regular meetings. In 2013, the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Unit of the Prosecutor's Office joined CONAETI for the first time.(1) CONAETI continued to work closely with the Sugarcane Growers Association to implement several ILO/DOL-funded programs aimed at eradicating child labor in sugar plantations.(1) Government coordination, including between CONAETI, MLWS, and other agencies, such as the Prosecutor's Office, Public Defender's Office, and the Judicial branch, is done on an informal basis and remains inadequate.(1)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Paraguay has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Strategy for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of Working Adolescents (2010-2015)	Serves as the Government's main policy framework to address child labor. CONAETI-approved plan. Aims to combat the worst forms of child labor. Provides access to free and quality education to child laborers and livelihood alternatives for their families. Raises public awareness of child labor and improves enforcement of child labor laws.(1, 32) In 2013, Government support for the National Strategy, National Plan for Development, and National Plan for Human Rights continued.(1)
National Plan for Development (2010-2020)	Includes goals for reducing child labor as part of broader efforts to reduce social exclusion and poverty. Includes the "Program for the Protection and Social Promotion of Children and their Families," which specifically aims to reduce the worst forms of child labor.(33)
National Plan on Human Rights	Established in 2012, it includes components on Child Labor, Forced Labor and Indigenous Child Labor. The plan has no expiration date.(1)
Inter-institutional Agreement on Government Procurement	National Secretariat for Children and Adolescents inter-institutional agreement with the National Bureau for Public Contracts to ensure that any goods or services procured by the Government are not produced through child labor.(34)
MERCOSUR United Against Child Labor Campaign	Develops public awareness about the need to combat child labor in MERCOSUR. Addresses child labor in agriculture, domestic work, and sexual exploitation, with particular emphasis on communities along country borders.(35)
Second Presidential Declaration on the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor in MERCOSUR (2012)	Promotes greater articulation between governmental agencies, levels of government, and with civil society among MERCOSUR members.(36)

Policy	Description
MERCOSUR Southern Child Initiative	Aims to defend the rights of children and adolescents in the region by raising awareness and seeking coordination among member states regarding the commercial sexual exploitation of children, child trafficking and pornography, child labor, and migrant labor; by improving country legal frameworks to harmonize them with international conventions affecting children, and by exchanging best practices.(37)

In November, the Government participated in the XVIII Inter-American Conference of Ministers of Labor to foster continued dialogue and cooperation on labor issues throughout the Americas. The joint declaration of the Conference promotes social dialogue to address child labor and reaffirms country participants' commitment to work with civil society organizations to advance efforts toward the eradication of child labor.(38)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Paraguay funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Embrace Program (Programa Abrazo)‡	SNNA program that assists children engaged in exploitative work by providing them and their families with health and education services and cash transfers conditioned on children's school attendance and withdrawal from work.(32) In 2013, expanded into areas where labor and sexual trafficking of children are most prevalent. Opened a service center in the sugarcane growing region of Villeta, Central. NGO Fortalecer works closely with program in the implementation of ILO-IPEC programs. Program has also worked closely with the Sugarcane Growers' Association, MEC, and CONAETI to set up programs tailored to at-risk children who work during the sugarcane harvesting season.(1)
Well-Being (Tekoporã) Conditional Cash Transfer Program ‡	Government-administered program through the Secretariat for Social Action (SAS).(1) Provides conditional cash transfers to families in moderate to extreme poverty in the Concepción, San Pedro, Canindeyú, Caaguazú, and Caazapá departments. Since August 2013, the Tekoporã and Abrazo programs have begun working together more closely, exchanging information about beneficiaries, eliminating beneficiaries listed in multiple programs, and exchanging best practices and methodologies.(1) Tekoporã incorporates aspects of the Abrazo Program to ensure beneficiary families do not allow their children to engage in child labor. Tekoporã Program also includes the family monitoring methodology implemented by the Abrazo Program.(1)
Mutual Aid (Ñopytyvô) Conditional Cash Transfer Program ‡	Government program provides conditional cash transfers to impoverished indigenous families in the Chaco region.(39) Cash transfer is conditioned on families withdrawing children from child labor and meeting education and health requirements. Program assists approximately 700 families, including 1,320 children younger than age 14.(39)
Ministry of Education and Culture (MEC)/ILO Program	Ministry of Education program that carries out child labor awareness-raising activities among students and teachers to help school administrators identify child laborers and prevent children from engaging in the worst forms of child labor.(32)
Comprehensive Attention Program for Street Children and Adolescents*‡	National Secretariat for Children and Adolescents (SNNA) program that provides assistance and services to children living in the streets. Program's goal is to assist approximately 200 children.(32)
Combating the Worst Forms of Child Labor through Horizontal Cooperation in South America	$6.75 million USDOL-funded, 4-year, project implemented by ILO-IPEC to combat the worst forms of child labor through horizontal cooperation in South America that ended in September 2013. Promoted collaboration across Bolivia, Brazil, Ecuador, and Paraguay to combat the worst forms of child labor among the most socially excluded populations, including indigenous children and children of Afro descent.(9) Withdrew 3,047 children and prevented 5,478 from engaging in the worst forms of child labor.(9, 40)
Country Level Engagement and Assistance to reduce (CLEAR) project	USDOL-funded capacity building project implemented by the ILO in at least 10 countries, to build local and national capacity of the Government to address child labor. In Paraguay, the project aims to build local and national capacity of the Government to address child labor by improving legislation related to child labor issues, including by bringing local or national laws into compliance with international standards; improving monitoring and enforcement of laws and policies related to child labor; and enhancing the implementation of national and local policies and programs aimed at the reduction and prevention of child labor.(41)

Program	Description
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues Project	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries, to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016 established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010. In Paraguay, the project aims to build the capacity of the national Government and develop strategic policies to address the elimination of child labor and forced labor.(42)
Regional Action Group for the Americas (Grupo de Acción Regional para las Américas)	Conducts prevention and awareness-raising campaigns to combat the commercial sexual exploitation of children in Latin America. Members include Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Paraguay, Peru, Suriname, Uruguay, and Venezuela.(43, 44)
Southern Child Initiative (Niñ@sur)	Carries out public campaigns against commercial sexual exploitation, trafficking, and child labor; facilitates technical assistance to improve domestic legal frameworks to comply with international standards on those issues; and supports the exchange of best practices related to victim protection and assistance.(45, 46)
Global Program on the Eradication of Child Labor	$4.5 million Government of Spain-funded, 3-year project implemented by ILO-IPEC to combat child labor.(47)
Partnership Program to Eliminate Child Labor	$2.3 million Government of Brazil-funded, 4-year project implemented by ILO-IPEC to combat child labor.(47)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Paraguay.

Although Paraguay has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem. Additional programs are needed to reach the great numbers of working children, especially in agriculture and domestic service.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Peru

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

In 2013, Peru made a significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government took steps to consolidate and strengthen its inspection system by transferring inspection authority, in most cases, from regional governments to a new National Labor Inspection Superintendency (SUNAFIL). The Ministry of Labor and Employment Promotion (MTPE) approved a tenfold increase in the maximum fine for employers that employ children in the worst forms of child labor. In addition, in an effort to support regional actions to combat child labor, the Government provided specialized training to 23 Regional Commissions for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor. The MTPE, Ministry of Education, and the Ministry of Social Development signed an agreement to jointly implement two pilot programs to combat child labor, as called for in Peru's National Strategy for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor. However, children in Peru continue to engage in child labor, including in agriculture and street work, such as street vending and street begging. Labor inspectorates remain underfunded and the number of child labor inspections is insufficient, especially in regions with the highest rates of child labor. In addition, not all Regional Commissions for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor have drafted and funded action plans to combat child labor, as they are mandated to do by Ministerial Resolution 202-2005-TR.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Peru are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture and street work.(1) According to the Government's 2011 National Household Survey, 68 percent of child laborers under the legal working age work in rural areas, principally on farms.(1, 2) According to the same Survey, approximately 31 percent of child laborers in urban areas work in the service sector, including in hazardous occupations such as street sales.(2) Official statistics indicate that rates of child labor are significantly higher in the Highland and Jungle regions of Peru as compared to the Coastal regions.(2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Peru.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	6-14 yrs.	19.4 (1,014,688)
Attending School (%)	6-14 yrs.	79.4
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	14.4
Primary Completion Rate (%)		91.0

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

The terrorist group Shining Path uses children as soldiers.(6, 13, 16) The Shining Path, as well as other drug traffickers, use children to produce coca and transport drugs.(5, 13, 16) Evidence suggests that children work in informal mining, particularly in informal gold mines.(15) Girls are found in commercial sexual exploitation across the country, in particular in mining communities.(17, 18) Domestic work is principally carried out by girls, who often migrate from impoverished areas in the Highland and Jungle regions to the Coastal areas to work in third-party homes.(6) Child sex tourism is a problem in Cuzco, Iquitos, and Lima.(16, 19)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Peru has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Peru

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Child and Adolescent Code (20)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Child and Adolescent Code (21)
List of Hazardous Occupations Prohibited for Children	Yes		Supreme Decree No. 003-2010-MIMDES (22)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Constitution; Penal Code (23, 24)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Law against Trafficking in Persons and Illegal Migrant Smuggling (25)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Section 153 of the Penal Code (26)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Penal Code (27)
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Military Service Law (28, 29)
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	18	Military Service Law (28, 29)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	17	Constitution; General Education Law (24, 30)
Free Public Education	Yes		Constitution (24, 30)

There are apparently inconsistent interpretations as to the application of Section 153 of the Penal Code, outlawing trafficking in persons, to forced labor cases. Although the Ministry of Justice has prosecuted forced labor cases under the provision, the Ministry of Labor and Employment Promotion (MTPE) believes a specific forced labor provision in the Penal Code is necessary to most effectively address the problem and has proposed legislation to make the change, which the ILO Committee of Experts supports.(31)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Promotion of Employment (MTPE)	Enforce child labor laws, including prohibitions on the worst forms of child labor.(32, 33) Set national policies and guidelines for labor law enforcement, including for inspections.(34) In the past, was responsible for conducting inspections in Lima. As of 2013, is responsible for supporting and overseeing the National Labor Inspection Superintendency, a newly created government agency within the MTPE but functionally independent, charged with conducting labor inspections in Lima and other regions.(34)
National Labor Inspection Superintendency (SUNAFIL)	Carry out labor inspections in the Lima region, as well as inspections of employers outside of Lima with more than 10 registered workers, in coordination with regional labor inspectorates.(35) Maintain a Special Inspection Group Against Forced Labor and Child Labor, composed of 16 inspectors who conduct inspections targeting forced labor and child labor violations, and train other inspectors on these topics.(36) Address possible child labor violations during all inspections and refer cases of child labor to the Ministry of Women and Vulnerable Populations (MIMP) and the Public Ministry.(37, 38)
Regional Labor Inspectorates	Inspect employers in regions outside of Lima with 10 or fewer registered workers, in coordination with the SUNAFIL.(34, 35)
Public Ministry	Coordinate with the MTPE, SUNAFIL, and National Police to investigate and prosecute cases of criminal violation of child labor laws.(38)
Ministry of Women and Vulnerable Populations (MIMP)	Maintain a Children's Bureau that coordinates with the MTPE and SUNAFIL to document complaints of violations of child labor law.(33) Maintain a hotline for exploited children, including child laborers, and provide social services to children found working in the worst forms of child labor.(36, 38)

Organization/Agency	Role
National Police	Enforce criminal laws regarding child labor and child exploitation and maintain a Trafficking Investigation Unit to investigate cases of child trafficking for labor and sexual exploitation.(33, 38) Coordinate with the Public Ministry and MIMP to place rescued minors in the care of family members or state social services.(1)
Ministry of the Interior	Maintain a hotline functioning during office hours to receive reports of trafficking in persons. Provide victims and the general public with information on trafficking; communicate trafficking cases to relevant government offices; and coordinate services for victims.(1, 39)

Law enforcement agencies in Peru took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In an effort to improve the quality of labor law enforcement, in particular inspections, throughout Peru, in 2013 the Government passed a law creating the National Labor Inspection Superintendency (SUNAFIL). The law transferred the authority to inspect employers with more than 10 registered workers from MTPE and regional governments to the SUNAFIL.(32, 34, 35) However, during the reporting period, the SUNAFIL had not yet been fully established and the MTPE continued to carry out inspections in the Lima region and regional inspectorates carried out all inspections outside of Lima.(13)

In 2013, the Government employed 416 inspectors nationally, the same number it employed in 2012.(1, 36) Of these inspectors, approximately 225 were based in Lima, and the remaining 191 were based in regional inspectorates.(35) From January to September 2013, the MTPE reported that 612 inspections targeting child labor were carried out, although the number of these inspections that occurred in each region was not available.(40) These inspections were carried out in the agriculture, fishing, mining, construction, commerce, hotels and restaurants, and transportation sectors. The number of child labor violations found as a result of these inspections was not available, although the MTPE reported that child labor was found mainly in the mining, agriculture, fishing, and commerce sectors.(13) As a result of these inspections, the MTPE assisted 31 children in Lima who were working illegally.(13) Complete data on the number of children found working and provided with assistance in regions other than Lima was not available.

In 2013, the Government imposed fines on 25 employers for child labor violations, totaling approximately $30,129, although it is not known whether the employers fined were in Lima or in other regions, or whether additional fines were imposed by regional inspectorates.(13, 40) The Government reports that all the fines were collected.(36) In late 2013, the MTPE greatly increased the maximum fine that could be applied to employers who employ children in the worst forms of child labor from $26,400 to $264,000.(34)

In 2013, MTPE inspectors participated in several workshops related to child labor, including a training and information exchange with the Argentine Ministry of Labor on child labor and youth employment.(36) In addition, Peru's Office of the Ombudsman initiated a study on the MTPE's actions on child labor, with a focus on the inspection system. The study, scheduled for publication in 2014, is expected to produce recommendations to improve the MTPE's actions on child labor.(36)

In general, inspectors in Peru lack sufficient resources, such as transportation and fuel, to effectively carry out inspections, including on child labor.(13, 33) Many Regional Labor Inspectorates outside of Lima and Callao are particularly understaffed and underfunded.(32)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2013, the MPTE, the National Police, and the Public Ministry worked together to investigate and prosecute criminal cases of the worst forms of child labor. The Public Ministry investigated and prosecuted 201 cases involving trafficking in persons and coordinated legal and psychological assistance for 117 victims; however, these data do not distinguish between children and adults.(40) The Ministry of Interior reported receiving approximately 500 calls to the trafficking in persons hotline.(40) The Judicial Branch reported having convicted 41 people for trafficking in persons, although the number of these cases involving children is unknown. In addition, the National Police identified 25 child victims of trafficking in persons; however, information was not available on the number of children who were rescued or received services in 2013.(40)

Peru's Public Defender's Office has stated that perpetrators of crimes related to the trafficking of minors are often given sentences that are below the minimum required by law.(41)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Commission for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor (CPETI)	Propose public policies and coordinate, evaluate, and monitor government actions to combat child labor.(13) Maintain several subcommittees, including one on informal mining and one on child labor in indigenous villages.(13) Led by the MTPE and includes 17 government agencies, including the Ministry of Education, the Ministry of Justice, and the Ministry of Interior, as well as representatives from business associations, unions, and NGOs.(13)
Regional Commissions for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor	Carry out CPETI's mandate at the regional level.(42) Have been created in 23 of the 25 regions in Peru.(1, 36)
National Commission against Forced Labor	Coordinate government efforts to combat forced labor, including conducting research on forced labor, awareness raising efforts, developing legislation, and strengthening Peru's institutional capacity to address forced labor.(33) Led by the MTPE with participation of eight additional government ministries.(33)
Permanent Multi-Sectoral Commission on Illegal Mining	Coordinate the Government's efforts to address illegal mining, including by developing programs to eradicate child labor and child prostitution in mining areas.(43) Led by the Prime Minister's Office and includes the participation of regional governments and six national government agencies, including the Ministry of Energy and Mines and the Ministry of the Interior.(43)
Multi-Sector Committee Against Trafficking in Persons	Lead and coordinate government efforts to combat trafficking in persons. Chaired by the Ministry of the Interior and includes 12 government agencies, including the Ministry of Justice, the MIMP, and the MTPE.(33)

In 2013, the CPETI created four technical working groups. One group aims to modify the methodology of Peru's National Household Survey to improve and increase the collection of data on child labor and to monitor the Government's progress in implementing the National Strategy for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor.(36) Three other working groups began reviewing Peruvian child labor laws to identify areas needing improvement. One of these groups has begun drafting a proposed update to the List of Hazardous Occupations Prohibited to Children.(36)

Also in 2013, the CPETI held a training workshop in Lima for the leadership of all 23 Regional CPETIs. In addition, members of the CPETI provided onsite training to members of the Regional CPETIs in 21 regions.(36) Regional CPETI commissions are mandated to create action plans to combat child labor. However, not all regional commissions have action plans in place, as they are mandated to do by Ministerial Resolution 202-2005-TR, and some regions have not provided funding to carry out the action plans.(37, 44)

In general, government agencies that identify and assist child laborers, as well as law enforcement agencies that investigate child labor cases, do not consistently coordinate with one another or share information about planned interventions or raids.(40) In 2013, the failure of law enforcement officials in different parts of the country to coordinate with one another led to significant delays in investigating child trafficking and rescuing victims.(45)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Peru has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Strategy for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor for 2012–2021	Aims to eliminate hazardous child labor by improving the livelihoods of low-income families, improving education opportunities, raising awareness about child labor, improving work conditions for adolescents, and increasing child labor law enforcement.(2) Also seeks to improve the quality of child labor data in Peru.(2) Includes the objective of carrying out pilot programs to combat child labor in urban and rural areas. In 2013, an agreement was signed by the MTPE, the Ministry of Education, and the Ministry of Social Development to jointly implement two such programs.(36)
National Action Plan for Children and Adolescents for 2012–2021	Establishes a comprehensive set of government policies for children and adolescents, including the goal of eradicating hazardous child labor.(1, 33)
Sector Strategy on the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor	Developed jointly by the MTPE and the ILO; includes the objectives of increasing the availability of child labor data, raising public awareness, strengthening coordination between public and private entities on child labor issues, and improving investigations of child labor violations.(32, 38)
Second National Plan to Combat Forced Labor for 2013–2017†	Establishes the Government’s policies and priorities for combatting forced labor. Includes the goal of reducing children’s vulnerability to becoming engaged in forced labor.(15)

† Policy was launched during the reporting period.

Although the Government approved the Second National Plan to Combat Forced Labor for 2013–2017 during the reporting period, the Government has not allocated funding to implement many components of the plan.(13)

In November, the Government participated in the XVIII Inter-American Conference of Ministers of Labor to foster continued dialogue and cooperation on labor issues throughout the Americas. The joint declaration of the Conference promotes social dialogue to address child labor and reaffirms country participants’ commitment to work with civil society organizations to advance efforts toward the eradication of child labor.(46)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Peru funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Seed Project (Proyecto Semilla)	$13 million USDOL-funded, 4-year project implemented by the NGO Desarrollo y Autogestión to combat rural child labor. Supports the national and regional governments in developing child labor policies, carries out awareness raising campaigns, and aims to provide 6,500 children and 3,000 families with education and livelihood services to reduce the incidence of child labor.(8, 47) As of October 2013, has assisted 3,318 children and 2,264 families.(48)
Global Research on Child Labor Measurement and Policy Development (MAP)†	USDOL-funded research project implemented by the ILO in 10 countries, including Peru, to increase the knowledge base around child labor by collecting new data, analyzing existing data, and building capacity to conduct research in this area.(49)
Carabayllo Project‡	2-year pilot project implemented by the Government that provides scholarships, education assistance, psychological help, and other services to 1,000 families and 1,500 children with the aim of reducing urban child labor, especially in garbage dumps.(1, 2, 36)
Huánuco Project‡	2-year pilot project implemented by the Government that seeks to improve school retention and attendance rates among child laborers in rural areas. In conjunction with the Together Program, assists approximately 4,000 children and 3,200 families by providing them with cash transfers, education, and livelihood services.(1, 2, 36)
Together Program (Juntos)‡	Ministry of Social Development program to provide cash transfers to approximately 650,000 low-income households in 14 of the country’s 25 departments.(50, 51)
Peru Works (Trabaja Perú)‡	MTPE program that offers temporary work and technical training to low-income households. Requires beneficiaries to ensure their children attend school and do not engage in child labor.(33, 38)
Youth to Work (Jóvenes a la Obra)‡*	MTPE program to provide youth ages 16 to 24 with free job training, including on-the-job training in companies.(13)

Program	Description
Go Peru (Vamos Perú)‡ *	MTPE program to provide job training and assistance to entrepreneurs, and job placement services to the unemployed, including youth.(13)
Street Educators (Educadores de Calle)‡	MIMP program to provide counseling and training to children engaged in begging and street work in 20 cities throughout Peru.(52) Connects working children and their families to educational and social services with the goal of withdrawing them from exploitative work and improving family welfare.(37, 52)
Regional Action Group for the Americas (Grupo de Acción Regional para las Américas)	Conducts prevention and awareness-raising campaigns to combat the commercial sexual exploitation of children in Latin America. Members include Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Paraguay, Peru, Suriname, Uruguay, and Venezuela.(53, 54)
Education and Monitoring Program for the Eradication of Child Labor	$1.3 million Government of Spain-funded, 2-year project implemented by ILO-IPEC that aims to strengthen public policies and government capacity to combat child labor in 19 countries in the Americas, including Peru. Includes the objective of developing information systems on the worst forms of child labor.(55)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Peru.

Although Peru has programs that reach children who work in agriculture in rural areas, the scope of these programs is still insufficient to fully address the large numbers of children engaged in hazardous occupations in agriculture. Peru also lacks targeted programs to assist children who are subjected to forced labor, commercial sexual exploitation, and child soldiering, as well as children who work in mining, logging, and domestic work.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Peru (Table 9).

In 2013, the Philippines made a significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE) updated the country's hazardous list for children and conducted additional research on child labor in agriculture, the largest child labor sector, to inform policy and programs. The Government also implemented the Convergence Program Against Child Labor (2013–2016) to assist local governments in creating child-labor free communities. The President of the Philippines issued an executive order to prevent grave child rights violations by creating improved monitoring systems for children in armed conflict. The Government also passed the Expanded Anti-Trafficking in Persons Act to establish a permanent Interagency Council, create a database on trafficking cases, expand provisions to protect victims of trafficking, and establish stronger penalties for violations, including those against children. However, children in the Philippines continue to engage in child labor in agriculture and domestic service.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in the Philippines are engaged in child labor, primarily in agriculture and domestic service.(1-5) The 2011 National Survey on Children indicated that 3.21 million children are engaged in child labor, of which 2.99 million work in hazardous labor.(6) Most child labor occurs in the informal sector, with about 60 percent in agriculture.(7) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in the Philippines.

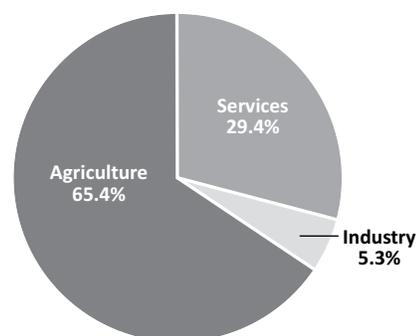

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	11.0 (2,180,565)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	87.6
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	11.3

	Trafficking of drugs (2, 12, 13)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Children, primarily girls, are trafficked from rural to urban areas for domestic service and commercial sexual exploitation.(15, 18, 20, 22) Emerging reports indicate that boys are increasingly trafficked for commercial sexual exploitation, particularly for child pornography.(22) The Philippine National Police (PNP) noted that child trafficking for labor is prevalent from Lanao del Sur Province in Mindanao.(12, 27)

Children commonly work as domestic servants or kasambahays.(1, 17-19) Many child domestics work long hours, and their isolation in homes creates the potential for sexual harassment and verbal and physical abuse.(11, 17, 18, 20, 28) Child domestic servants are often denied access to education.(3, 18, 19, 28) Domestic workers sometimes receive no pay, have some of their wages withheld, or work as forced laborers.(11, 17, 19, 22, 28)

Child soldiering is a problem, particularly among anti-government and terrorist organizations.(7, 15, 20, 22-24, 29) Sources indicate that children continue to be found in the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) working as guides, messengers, and porters.(2, 7, 22-24, 30-32) In early 2014, the Government of the Philippines signed a peace agreement with the MILF, completing negotiations that had been ongoing for more than a decade.(33) At the time of writing this report, it is unknown how quickly children will be released from the ranks of the MILF. Children have also been reported in the Moro National Liberation Front where abductions have been reported, including for the use of children as human shields, as well as in the Bangsamoro Islamic Freedom Fighters.(22, 23, 26, 34) While the National People’s Army (NPA) has indicated a willingness to stop the use of children, children continue to be found in the NPA’s ranks.(15, 22-24, 30, 31) The UN has reported that children are targeted for conscription as both combatants and non-combatants by the Abu Sayyaf Group.(7, 15, 21-24, 31) The UN has raised concerns about the use of children by security forces of the state.(7)

Typhoon Haiyan hit the Philippines in late 2013, leaving behind devastation that affected millions of people.(35) Prior to the typhoon, children already were involved heavily in agriculture, and the loss of family livelihoods and incomes increases the possibility that children will engage in hazardous work.(36) Adult migration for work and displacement from homes may make children more exposed to exploitation in hazardous work or human trafficking.(36)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Philippines has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Compulsory Education Age	Yes	18	Enhanced Basic Education Act of 2013 (46)
Free Public Education	Yes		Philippine Constitution (47)

Child labor laws include written protections for children in the formal sector; however, it is not clear whether these protections extend to children who are self-employed.(5)

Although the law mandates free education, many children do not attend school because the costs of books, uniforms, meals, and transportation are prohibitive for many families.(1, 2, 19, 48) In addition, distant school locations are often not accessible for rural students, especially at the secondary school level.(7, 48, 49)

Philippines

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

During the reporting period, the Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE) worked with stakeholders to update the country's hazardous work list for children, DOLE Department Order No. 4.(39, 50-52) In conjunction with the update, the Institute of Labor Studies and the Occupational Safety and Health Center conducted in-depth studies in hazardous work in agriculture, specific to child labor.(51, 53) The draft report is expected to be issued in 2014, and the results of this study will be used to inform future interventions to reduce child labor in agriculture in the Philippines.(51)

In February 2013, the Expanded Anti-Trafficking in Persons Act of 2012 was signed into law as Republic Act No. 10364.(38) This Act amends Republic Act No. 9208 of 2003 to establish a permanent Interagency Council Against Trafficking with a staffed secretariat to carry out the mandate; create a database on trafficking cases; expand provisions to protect victims of trafficking; and establish stronger penalties for violations, including those against children.(2, 12, 40, 54)

In August 2013, the President issued Executive Order No. 138, Adopting the Comprehensive Program Framework for Children in Armed Conflict, Strengthening the Council for the Welfare of Children (CWC) and for Other Purposes. This also formalized the establishment of a Monitoring, Reporting and Response System for Grave Child Rights Violations in Situations of Armed Conflict (MRRS-GCRVSAC). This system will monitor the program framework with the primary objective of preventing the occurrence of grave child rights violations.(12)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE), Bureau of Working Conditions (BWC)	Enforce child labor laws and regularly train inspectors and regional personnel. Inspect establishments and monitor compliance with labor laws in all sectors, including the informal sector, nontraditional and informal establishments, and agricultural and mining operations.(12)
Rescue the Child Laborers (Sagip Batang Manggagawa - SBM) Quick Action Teams	Lead the regional mechanism for rescuing children who work in abusive and dangerous situations under DOLE.(13) Partner with local representatives of various government agencies, local NGOs, labor unions, and the business community in a cooperative effort to detect, monitor, and respond to instances of child labor in the formal and informal sectors.(12)
Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD)	Rehabilitate and reintegrate children.(2, 13) Coordinate regional Special Action Units to conduct rescue operations for child laborers and cooperate with social workers to manage the ongoing cases of victims. (13) Maintain 16 Crisis Intervention Units and 26 residential facilities nationwide to address cases of child abuse and support its victims, including children exploited by hazardous labor.(12)
Philippine National Police (PNP)	Investigate and prosecute child labor cases.(22, 55) Lead the enforcement of child trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children (CSEC) laws as well as other tasks related to the protection of children by the PNP's Women and Children's Protection Center.(12) Maintain 1,909 women and children's desks throughout the country.(13, 22)
National Bureau of Investigation (NBI)	Investigate and prosecute child labor cases.(22, 55) Operate a national Trafficking in Persons Task Force (TIP Task Force) to do preliminary investigations and prosecute TIP cases, as well as a Task Force on the Protection of Children from Exploitation and Abuse.(22, 56)
Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency (PDEA)	Enforce the Comprehensive Dangerous Drugs Act, Republic Act No. 9165. Maintain a national hotline for reporting cases of children used in illicit activities.(2) Coordinate with DSWD to assist during rescue operations once information is verified through surveillance.(12)

Law enforcement agencies in the Philippines took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In January 2013, the President approved the hiring of 372 more Labor Law Compliance Officers (LLCO), to be added to the existing 237 officers employed by the Department of Labor and Employment's Bureau of Working Conditions (DOLE-BWC).(12, 52) As of March 31, 2014, a total of 337 new officers had been hired.(52) LLCOs were authorized to monitor and enforce the national Labor Code, including child labor laws; however, no officers were dedicated solely to investigations of child labor violations.(12) DOLE regularly includes a child labor component in its training for labor inspectors.(12)

DOLE's National Capital Region office reported nine child labor cases involving 27 minors as a result of rescue operations conducted in seven restaurants and karaoke (KTV) bars, one junkshop, and one laundry shop.(12) The establishments are now facing criminal proceedings.(12) Sagip Batang Manggagawa (SBM) teams conducted 11 rescue operations in eight regions that led to the rescue of 37 child laborers. These child laborers were then referred to the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD) for rehabilitation and reintegration.(12)

Criminal Law Enforcement

During the reporting period, the National Bureau of Investigation (NBI) received 126 suspected human trafficking cases, 40 involving the trafficking of minors. As a result of NBI's rescue operations, 46 minors were removed and assisted.(12) In total, the Government convicted 32 traffickers in 20 cases for violating the anti-trafficking law with 16 of the cases involving the trafficking of minors.(12) Overall, a lack of understanding of trafficking and the anti-trafficking legislation among many judges, prosecutors, social service workers, and law enforcement officials have impeded more successful prosecutions.(57) No prosecutions of police complicit with traffickers have been reported.(20) Many cases of trafficking of minors, particularly for child labor, continue to be undocumented for fear of retaliation from employers.(12, 27)

In 2013, the Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency (PDEA) identified 147 minors involved in illegal drugs as users, pushers, couriers, messengers, and cultivators.(12) PDEA was not able to confirm the total number of drug-related cases involving children, and no children were convicted.(12) No officers were trained on child labor and other related laws, including the use of children in illicit activities, during the year.(12)

In September 2013, the DSWD assisted 537 child victims of child labor, illegal recruitment, and trafficking, of whom 472 were victims of trafficking.(12, 27) In 2013, six cases on the recruitment and use of children in armed conflict were reported to the CWC through the MRRS-GCRVSAC.(12) Minor victims were referred to DSWD. No prosecutions were reported for the recruitment and use of children in armed conflict.(12)

Law enforcement agencies do not have the funding to combat trafficking or the use of children in illicit activities. Also, the limited number of law enforcement agents dedicated expressly to child trafficking and the commercial sexual exploitation of children (CSEC) continued to hinder the government's ability to investigate and prosecute complaints and violations.(12) The PNP noted that child protection at the grassroots level remains weak as many local councils for the protection of children lack the resources to address issues.(12)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Child Labor Committee (NCLC)	Coordinate national efforts to combat child labor under DOLE.(13) Promote information sharing at the national level; this coordinating mechanism has been replicated at the regional and provincial levels. (2) Comprise more than 15 agencies and NGOs.(13)
Inter-Agency Council Against Trafficking (IACAT)	Coordinate, monitor, and oversee ongoing implementation of efforts to combat trafficking in persons, including child trafficking. Co-chaired by the Department of Justice (DOJ) and DSWD, work with other government agencies and two NGOs representing women and children.(2, 12, 22, 56) Currently has 15 anti-trafficking task forces established in eight regions and three major airports.(12)
Interagency Council for the Welfare of Children (CWC)	Operate a monitoring and response system through its Subcommittee on Children Affected by Armed Conflict and Displacement for situations of children engaged in armed conflict, including recruitment and use of child soldiers.(22)
Inter-agency Committee on Children Involved in Armed Conflict (IAC CIAC)	Advocate for protecting children and preventing the involvement of children in armed conflict. Composed of 13 government agencies and chaired by CWC.(12) Work under the direct supervision of the CWC as the lead agency in implementing the CIAC Program Framework, to address the involvement of children in armed conflict.(12)

Philippines

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
24/7 Actionline against Human Trafficking	Under IACAT, receive and immediately respond to requests for assistance and referrals from trafficking victims, their families, and the public.(12) In 2013, received 57 calls assessed as actual cases involving illegal recruitment or trafficking, three of which involved minors.(12)

During the reporting period, the National Child Labor Committee (NCLC) and its subcommittees met several times to plan and develop the NCLC Strategic Plan, 2014–2016.(12) The NCLC also supported the national celebration of World Day Against Child Labor in Manila with DOLE and ILO-IPEC.(58) DOLE also conducted trainings for the NCLC sub-committee members on the use of the Child Labor Knowledge Sharing System (CLKSS), an information technology tool used by child labor program coordinators to serve as an anti-child labor data hub.(12)

In 2013, the Government doubled the Inter-Agency Council Against Trafficking’s (IACAT’s) operational budget to $2.35 million.(12) IACAT conducted trainings and seminars on the expanded anti-trafficking law for Department of Justice (DOJ) prosecutors, judges, and other law enforcers in Manila and in selected provinces.(12) The mechanism whereby public prosecutors work directly with the police in developing stronger cases against traffickers continued to be very effective during the year.(12) Government social workers continued to be assigned at international airports to improve victim identification and assistance.(12) Child victims were referred to appropriate services at the Government’s centers and facilities or facilities run by NGOs.(12)

During the year, the Interagency Council for the Welfare of Children (CWC), with its partner agencies, conducted orientation workshops on the Protocol on Monitoring, Reporting and Response System for Grave Child Rights Violations in Situations of Armed Conflict (MRRS-GCRVSAC) in seven regions nationwide. Front line workers, including social workers, teachers, police officers, and health workers, participated in the workshops.(12)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of the Philippines has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Medium-Term Philippine Development Plan (2011-2016)	Specifies government commitments to strengthen mechanisms for monitoring the implementation of child protection laws, to develop strategies to respond to child trafficking and pornography, and to implement an enhanced program for preventing children from being engaged in armed conflict.(2)
Philippine Labor and Employment Plan (PLEP) 2011–2016	Operates within the framework of the Medium Term Philippine Development Plan (MTPDP) and includes the goal of reducing exploitive child labor.(2, 12)
National Strategic Framework for Plan Development for Children, 2000–2025 (“Child 21”)*	Sets out broad goals for national government agencies, local governments, and NGOs to achieve improved quality of life for Filipino children by 2025.(13, 56, 59)
Philippine Program Against Child Labor (PPACL) Strategic Framework	Lays out a blueprint for reducing the incidence of child labor by 75 percent.(13, 60, 61) Identifies concrete objectives through the Implementation Plan (2011–2013), such as improving access for children and their families to appropriate services to help prevent incidences of child labor and to reintegrate former child laborers.(13, 62) Includes the Convergence Action Plan (H.E.L.P. M.E.)† (Health, education, livelihood and prevention, protection and prosecution, monitoring, and evaluation), which aims to reduce the worst forms of child labor by 2016 and to remove 893,000 children from hazardous child labor across 15,568 target barangays .(61, 63) Has been allocated $220 million for implementation over 4 years, from 2013 to 2016.(27, 63, 64) Includes the Batang Malaya Child Labor-Free Philippines Campaign, which institutionalizes the Survey on Children to be regularly conducted by the Government; mainstreams child labor prevention into local development plans; adds child labor elimination as a requirement in conditional cash transfer programs; strengthens the labor inspectorate to monitor child labor; improves enforcement of Republic Act No. 9231; and strengthens the NCLC through a legal mandate, budget, and dedicated secretariat.(65)
National Strategic Action Plan Against Trafficking in Persons (2012–2016)	Contains specific provisions on preventing trafficking of children, including raising awareness and creating local programs to prevent children from being lured by traffickers.(2, 12)

Policy	Description
National Development Agendas*	Includes reducing and eliminating child labor in the Millennium Development Goals (2000–2015), Education for All National Plan (2004–2015), Basic Education Reform Agenda, and UN Development Assistance Framework.(13, 66-68)

* The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Policy was launched during the reporting period.

VI. Social Programs to Address the Worst Forms of Child Labor

In 2013, the Government of the Philippines funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Conditional Cash Transfer Program (Pantawid Pamilyang Pilipino Program)†	DSWD and Local Government Unit social assistance and development program that provides conditional grants to impoverished families with children from newborn to age 17 to improve their access to health care, adequate nutrition, and education.(12, 13, 69, 70) In 2013, was expanded to specifically target households of child laborers.(58, 64) Also expanded child eligibility from age 14 to age 17 and added a condition prohibiting hazardous child labor as a program requirement.(58, 64) Provided education grants to 7.37 million children as of September and health grants to 2.13 million children aged 0–5.(12) Budget was increased from $9.94 million in 2012 to $10.41 million in 2013; however, funding remains insufficient to fully address the scope of the problem.(12)
Alternative Learning System (ALS) Program*†	Department of Education program that offers non-formal education to out-of-school children, including child laborers, as well as opportunities to attain a certificate of education equivalency.(71) Has limited resources, represents less than 1 percent of the Department of Education's budget, and has only one teacher for every 24 communities, so cannot reach many out-of-school youth.(48, 67)
Social Amelioration Program (SAP)*†	Department of Labor and Employment, National Tripartite Council, and Sugar Industry program that provides a cash bonus to sugar workers and funds social protection, livelihood, and education programs for sugar workers and their families through a tax imposed on refined sugar.(72, 73) The Integrated Services for Migratory Sugar Workers Program (I-SERVE SACADAS) program under the SAP seeks to improve the livelihoods of migrant sugar workers and their families as well as increase income.(13, 73) Includes services such as educational materials and scholarships.(55, 67) Also provides skills training and other capacity-building opportunities to beneficiaries through DOLE's Bureau of Workers and Special Concerns and DOLE regional offices.(12)
DOLE Child Labor Prevention and Elimination Program (CLPEP)†	DOLE program that implements local awareness-raising campaigns, institutes child labor monitoring mechanisms, and requires barangays to develop child labor elimination plans with short- and long-term objectives.(74) Includes the Campaign for Child-Labor Free Barangays , which seeks to make villages child labor-free through community orientations on child labor and trafficking laws, and government livelihood programs and guidelines.(12, 20, 27) Provides direct services to child laborers and targets children at greatest risk of involvement in child labor. In 2013, had 139 barangays enrolled in the campaign. Also includes the Livelihood for Parents of Child Laborers (KASAMA) program, which provides funds to parents of working children for projects such as raising livestock, producing souvenirs, food vending, and other service professions.(55, 67, 74) A third component, Project Angel Tree, redistributes shoes, school bags, toys, and other supplies donated by private sponsors to children at risk of, or engaged in, child labor.(13, 55, 67) Sources indicate that the program's budget is not sufficient compared to the size of the problem.(12)
Recovery and Reintegration Program for Trafficked Persons (RRPTP)†	DSWD and IACAT program that provides services to victims of trafficking and raises awareness in vulnerable communities. Includes services such as shelters, crisis intervention, awareness campaigns, and residential facilities.(13, 21, 22)
Special Social Services for Children in Armed Conflict†	DSWD program that provides special services to protect and rehabilitate children after direct or indirect involvement in armed conflict.(75) Includes services such as emergency evacuation and rescue; family reunification; provision of food, clothing, and shelter; and psychosocial rehabilitation.(55)
National Plan of Action for Children (NPAC)	Approved by the Council for the Welfare of Children, is designed to continue and implement Child 21.(56) Connected to the Philippine Development Plan 2011–2016 with three strategic components: policy and legislative agenda, programs and strategies, and governance.(56)

Program	Description
Towards a Child Labor-Free Philippines: Supporting the 'Philippine Program Against Child Labor' in Building on Past Gains and Addressing Challenges	$4.75 million USDOL-funded, 4-year project implemented by the ILO to withdraw children or prevent them from entering the worst forms of child labor. The project concluded in December 2013, and targeted children engaged in farming, mining, fishing, and domestic work. It withdrew and prevented nearly 10,000 children through providing educational and non-educational services in Quezon, Masbate, Northern Samar, and Bukidnon.(51, 61, 76) Developed the Child Labor Knowledge Sharing System (CLKSS) in collaboration with government agencies and participated in the development of the Convergence Action Plan (H.E.L.P. M.E).(51, 61)
Philippines ABK3 LEAP – Livelihoods, Education, Advocacy, and Protection to Reduce Child Labor in Sugarcane	$15 million USDOL-funded, 4-year project implemented by World Vision to reduce child labor in sugar-producing areas in 11 provinces of the Philippines.(77) Seeks to provide education services to 52,000 children engaged in, or at risk of engaging in, the worst forms of child labor, and to provide livelihood assistance to 25,000 households of targeted children. Engages the sugar industry in raising awareness of child labor among sugar workers and their families.(77)
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016 established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010. Aims to to build the capacity of the national government and develop strategic policies to address the elimination of child labor, improve the evidence base on child labor through data collection and research, and strengthen legal protections and social service delivery for child domestic workers in the Philippines.(78)
Country Level Engagement and Assistance to Reduce (CLEAR) Child Labor†	USDOL-funded capacity building project implemented by the ILO in at least 10 countries, to build local and national capacity of the Government to address child labor. Aims to improve legislation addressing child labor issues, including by bringing local or national laws into compliance with international standards, improve monitoring and enforcement of laws and policies related to child labor, develop, validate, adopt, and implement a National Action Plan on the elimination of child labor, and enhance the implementation of national and local policies and programs aimed at the reduction and prevention of child labor in the Philippines.(79)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of the Philippines.

During the reporting period, the DSWD conducted several rounds of surveys to evaluate how the conditional cash transfer program impacted its beneficiaries.(12) Initial evaluation findings indicated that, overall, the program is helping to keep poor children in school, by increasing enrollment among young children (3-11 years old) and increasing attendance among 6- to 17-year-olds.(12) A separate evaluation conducted by the Philippine Institute of Development Studies and released in February 2013 showed that the program has led to an increase in school attendance rate of children aged 6–14 by 3.5 percent.(12)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in the Philippines (Table 9).

Table 9. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

In 2013, the Russian Federation made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government ratified the UN CRC Optional Protocol and a UN treaty on protections against the sexual exploitation of children, and strengthened several of its own laws prohibiting child pornography and trafficking. However, children in Russia continue to engage in child labor, including work on the streets and commercial sexual exploitation. Criminal laws on child pornography still do not prohibit possession, and do not protect children ages 14–18. In addition, Russia continues to lack a mechanism to coordinate nationwide efforts to combat the worst forms of child labor, and it has no social programs aimed at this goal.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Russia are engaged in child labor in street work and the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation.(1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Russia. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	Unavailable

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2009, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2014.(4)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis, 2013.(5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Activities unknown* (3, 6, 7)
Industry	Construction, activities unknown* (8)
Services	Street work, such as collection of bottles or other waste,* washing cars,* and street sweeping* (9, 10)
	Working at marketplaces, activities unknown* (10-12)
	Working as dishwashers* (11)
	Begging* (12)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Used in production of pornography and commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2, 3, 7, 10)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Commercial sexual exploitation of children, especially in large cities, remains a concern. The primary victims of commercial sexual exploitation are street children, including those who are homeless and orphaned.(2, 7, 13, 14) Another vulnerable group is migrant children, who frequently end up working in the informal sector as dishwashers and helpers in the markets and in commercial sexual exploitation as a result of human trafficking. Children, both boys and girls, are trafficked internally from rural to urban centers, between regions, and transnationally.(8, 10-12)

Russia

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Research indicates that many children work in agriculture, construction, and at market places. However, specific activities related to children's work in agriculture, construction, and market places are unknown.

Migrant families face language and cultural barriers that may make it difficult to seek or receive social assistance, especially if they have illegal or irregular status.(2, 3, 11) Illegal migrants are not recognized as potential trafficking victims and are subject to deportation for violation of migration regulations.(12) A recent study from 2013 estimates between 40 and 60 thousand migrant children who did not attend school.(12) Regional authorities often deny school access to unregistered children, including Central Asian immigrant families, Roma, and asylum seekers.(3)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

On May 7, 2013, the Government ratified two International Conventions: the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography, and the Council of Europe Convention on the Protection of Children against Sexual Exploitation and Sexual Abuse.(11)

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

In 2013, the Government of Russia amended several provisions in the labor and criminal codes for children's protection from commercial sexual exploitation. The Government adopted Federal Law No. 58-FZ on Changes to Legislation Aimed at Prevention of the Sale of Children, Exploitation, and Child Pornography by defining the terms "sale of children," "exploitation of children," and "victim of sale or exploitation of children." It has been in effect since April 2014.(16) This law amends the Labor Code to ban employment of minors for work that involves the circulation of materials of a sexual nature.(11)

A new provision in Federal Law No. 285-FZ enforces higher fines for legal entities if they create the environment for trafficking and child exploitation, as well as for production and distribution of materials and items with pornographic images of minors.(11, 12) The provision has been in effect since December 2013.(16) The existing criminal laws against making and distributing materials with pornographic images of minors and using a minor for the purpose of making pornographic materials or objects are limited to children under age 14.(19) Research found no evidence of laws or regulations to criminalize the possession of child pornography.(6)

During the reporting period, a new Article, "Obtaining the Sexual Services of a Minor," was introduced to the Criminal Code through Federal Law No. 380-FZ. The Article criminalizes and punishes the act of an adult (defined as 18 and older) obtaining sexual services of a person between 16 and 18 years of age; previously, criminal prohibition of sexual conduct with a minor was limited in application to cases in which the victim is under 16.(11, 19) Federal Law No. 380-FZ has been effective since January 10, 2014.(11)

A new law, Federal Law No. 258-FZ, establishes a mechanism called Social Contract, which provides financial support to low-income Russian citizens to gain employment, training, or other assistance to overcome hardship. The program is accessible to victims of human trafficking.(12, 16) As many child trafficking victims are from other countries, they are ineligible for assistance under this program.

On December 28, 2013, the Government signed Federal Law No. 432-FZ "On Amending Certain Legislative Acts of the Russian Federation to Enhance the Rights of Victims in Criminal Proceedings." The Amendments aim to enhance the rights of crime victims and includes improved protection of minors and for damage compensations to victims of crime.(11)

On July 23, 2013, the President signed a new law, 204-FZ, prohibiting employment of migrants under 18. The objective of this law is to reduce the effect of labor migration on child labor in the informal sector, where labor violations may go unreported.(11, 12) The law went into effect upon publication several days later.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Protection	Enforce labor laws including the enforcement of child labor laws.(2, 6) Coordinate joint inspections with the Public Prosecutor's Office.(11)
Federal Labor and Employment Service (FLES)	Supervise the area of labor, employment, and social protection. Provide employment services and unemployment assistance and services related to migration, as well as social assistance for socially vulnerable citizens, and regulate collective labor disputes.(16) Work under the Ministry of Labor and Social Protection.(16)
The General Prosecutor's Office	Manage the investigation of Trafficking in Persons cases and prosecute associated crimes.(12) Coordinate joint inspections with the Federal Labor and Employment Service.(11) Oversee the enforcement of laws relating to child labor under the Labor Code.(16)
The Office of the Children's Rights Ombudsman	Investigate violations of children's rights, monitor offices dealing with minors, and evaluate legislation affecting children.(1)

Organization/Agency	Role
The Ministry of Internal Affairs (MVD)	Enforce criminal laws against forced child labor, trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and the use of children in illicit activities.(6) Conduct and provide training to the police about handling of trafficking cases.(12)
Investigative Committee	Investigate cases of slave labor, including that of minors. Act together with MVD.(16)

Law enforcement agencies in Russia took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

The most recent statistic on the number of inspectors from 2012 reveals that the Federal Labor and Employment Service (FLES) has approximately 3,233 inspector positions, including vacant positions. According to FLES, the number of labor inspectors was insufficient to effectively enforce labor laws.(11)

In the first quarter of 2013, FLES conducted 498 inspections, out of which 288 child labor violations were found.(10) In the first quarter of 2013, FLES issued 60 new notices against employers for violating child labor laws that mostly related to failure to conclude contracts, overtime work, and failure to assure that health and safety measurements are met.(10) Eight of such cases were sent to the Public Prosecutors' Office.(10) Research has not indicated the amount of penalties assessed in 2013.

While child labor violations are noted for the formal sector, research has not indicated that inspections were conducted in the informal sector, where child labor violations are most likely to occur. Moreover, the ILO Committee of Experts has encouraged the Government to build the capacity and expand the reach of the labor inspectorate to better monitor work performed by children in the informal sector.(10)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2013, the Government established guidelines for placing domain names, URLs, and network addresses containing materials with pornographic images of minors and marketing tools inviting minors to perform as actors in pornographic shows into a register of banned sites.(11) The information on websites with unlawful content is accepted from private persons, government agencies, and local government bodies. After a review, selected websites are entered into the register, which allows for their blocking.(16)

In 2013, the Government provided data on the number of convictions under Articles 242.1 and 242.2 of the Criminal Code related to using a child for pornography. Data revealed 146 persons convicted for crimes against minors under these Articles.(16, 24) The Government registered five offences under Article 127.1 for the first 4 months in 2013.(10) Specific data based on the type of crime and the number of minors victimized under each relevant Article of the Criminal Code was not provided.(25) Based on unofficial sources, in 2012, the most recent period for which data is available, trafficking prosecutions under Article 127.1 represented a total of 21 child victims.(25)

In the past, the Government provided regular training designed to guide government officials in handling trafficking cases. However, there was no referral mechanism to direct officials on how to proactively identify trafficking victims or to refer them to available services.(12, 25) Currently, trafficking cases are assessed by law enforcement on a case-by-case basis, which involves a long process before cases are adjudicated. In 2013, the Government hosted anti-trafficking events, including a conference of research institutions on the prevention of forced labor.(12)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that the Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms. In 2013, the Prosecutor's General Office proposed to play a lead role in coordinating interagency anti-trafficking efforts.(12)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Russia has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Children's Strategy 2012–2017*	Covers issues such as child protection, accessibility of quality education, equal opportunities for children in need of special care by the State, and a child rights protection system.(2)
Concept of Children's Information Security†	Aims to coordinate legislation within the scope of protecting children against harmful information.(11)
National Anti-Trafficking in Persons Action Plan	Aims to combat human trafficking.(12)

* The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Policy was launched during the reporting period.

The Government of Russia does not collect national statistics on child labor that would enable the development of relevant policy and programs to combat the problem.(6, 10, 11) The General Prosecutor's Office proposed a draft National Action Plan for Trafficking in Persons 2015–2018 to the Russian Security Council in December 2013; however it has not yet been adopted.(17)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence of programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. However, the Government has a program that may have an impact on the problem.

The Child Support Fund for Children in Difficult Life Circumstances helps to rehabilitate orphaned, disadvantaged, and homeless children through social programs and activities.(6) Children receive assistance through some of the Fund's programs, including mobile crisis centers, psychological centers, and social and physical rehabilitation services.(2) In 2012, the most recent period for which information is available, the Government's allocation to this program was approximately $21 million.(11) The Fund does not specifically address child labor.

Research did not find complete information about government support for programs related to trafficking in 2013, or the number of child trafficking victims assisted during the reporting period.(2, 6, 25, 26) On April 30, 2013, the IOM opened a two-bedroom shelter in an office building in St. Petersburg to support up to eight identified victims of trafficking.(12) Assistance to trafficking victims is made available on a case-by-case basis; research did not identify the budget for 2013.(12)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Russia (Table 7).

In 2013, Rwanda made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government of Rwanda approved its National Policy for the Elimination of Child Labor, its 5-year Action Plan to Combat Child Labor, and its Economic Development and Poverty Reduction Strategy, which includes child labor issues. The Government also participates in and implements several programs to combat the worst forms of child labor. However, children in Rwanda continue to engage in child labor in agriculture and in the worst forms of child labor in domestic service. In 2013, children were recruited, some of them forcibly, by the March 23 Movement (M23) for armed conflict in the Democratic Republic of the Congo. M23 was an armed group based in the Democratic Republic of Congo that the Government of Rwanda supported, but that was disbanded in November 2013. Rwanda has received an assessment of minimal advancement, because the Government's support for M23 undermined other advancements made during the year to eliminate the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Rwanda are engaged in child labor in agriculture and in the worst forms of child labor in domestic service. (1, 2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Rwanda.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	16.1 (482,180)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

In 2013, the March 23 Movement (M23), which was supported by the Government of Rwanda, recruited—sometimes forcibly—children in Rwanda for armed conflict in the Democratic Republic of the Congo. (11, 14, 15, 20, 28-32) The M23 armed group promised child recruits cash, education opportunities, and jobs with the Rwandan Defense Force before assembling them at transit points, where they were prevented from leaving. Children were then transported to the Democratic Republic of the Congo where they were brought by foot to military training camps. (31) Rwandan children associated with the M23 in the Democratic Republic of the Congo may have been forced to serve as combatants, porters, spies, body guards, domestic servants, and sex slaves. (8, 15, 31) In October, the M23 was defeated by the Congolese National Army and in November, the M23 disbanded. There have been no reports of child recruitment activities in Rwanda or Rwandan support to M23 since November 2013. (11, 33)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Rwanda has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

*No conscription or no standing military.

Rwandan law is not completely consistent with international standards regarding child labor. Children working in non-contractual employment do not have the same protections under child labor laws and regulations as children working in contractual employment.(34, 43) In addition, although education is free and compulsory, in practice, the costs of uniforms, school supplies, and unofficial school fees may preclude some families from sending their children to school.(11, 44, 45)

In 2012, the Kigali City Security Council's guidelines on child labor were approved. The guidelines prohibit the employment of children in Kigali City as domestic servants, street beggars, porters, bar attendants, hairdressers, and dancers in clubs. It also prohibits using children to make pornographic productions, to sell drugs, and to replace their parents in paid employment.(36) In addition, the guidelines require local authorities to raise awareness on child labor and calls for a census at the cell administrative level to estimate the prevalence of child domestic workers.(36)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Public Service and Labor (MIFOTRA)	Enforce labor laws, including laws on child labor.(8, 46-48)

Child Protection Unit	Investigate cases of child abuse, including the use of children in commercial sexual exploitation. Located within the Commission for Criminal Investigations of the RNP.(8, 51, 52)
Directorate for Anti-Gender Based Violence	Assist victims of the worst forms of child labor through anti-gender-based violence officers. Located within the RNP, at each of Rwanda's 75 police stations.(11)
Directorate General of Immigration and Emigration	Receive referrals for trafficking cases and employ an anti-trafficking specialist.(50) Verify that children transported across the border are traveling with the permission of their parents or guardians.(8, 53)

Law enforcement agencies in Rwanda took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, the Ministry of Public Service and Labor (MIFOTRA) employed 30 labor inspectors (one per district) who work with the Rwandan National Police (RNP), under supervision of the district authorities.(11, 46-48) At the national level, MIFOTRA employed two chief labor inspectors, who are supervised by the Directorate General in charge of labor.(11, 46) According to MIFOTRA, one labor inspector per district is not enough to conduct all of the necessary inspections.(54) Inspections may be conducted without prior notice, and labor inspectors may issue warnings, which must be corrected by the offender within 7 days. If the violation is not corrected within 7 days, the labor inspector may ask the authorities to temporarily close the institution under investigation.(46) During the year, the MIFOTRA provided labor inspectors with laptops and funds for Internet service. In addition, half of all labor inspectors received motorcycles and funds for fuel and maintenance.(11) Despite these improvements, the MIFOTRA reports that many labor inspectors still lack transportation to carry out inspections.(50, 54) MIFOTRA also requires an annual report on activities from its labor inspectors and audits the disbursement of labor inspection funds to ensure that it matches appropriations.(11)

The MIFOTRA reviews the performance of its labor inspectors every 6 months and provides them with training twice a year on identifying and investigating child labor violations.(11) During the year, labor inspectors held quarterly district trainings on child labor issues for employers and local authorities.(11, 54) The MIFOTRA's training budget for labor inspectors was $285,000 in 2013.(11) Law No. 13/2009 permits labor inspectors to enter workplaces only during normal business hours, even though ILO Convention 81, which Rwanda has ratified, notes that inspectors should be able to enter workplaces at all times. This practice may exclude protection for children who work irregular hours.(55) Labor inspection reports do not contain information related to the worst forms of child labor.(56) Data regarding child labor inspections, prosecutions, citations, and penalties are not publicly available.(11, 54)

Labor law enforcement agencies at the district level also took actions to combat child labor during the reporting period. For example, the Rubavu district budgeted 200,000 Rwandan francs ($294) from 2012 to 2013 to conduct child labor inspections, inspect occupational safety and health at workplaces, and raise awareness among employers of labor laws.(57) Personal performance contracts for district authorities also include targets for reducing child labor and increasing school enrollment.(11)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2013, the RNP referred some child domestic servants and children engaged in commercial sexual exploitation to the Isange Center within the Kacyiru Police Hospital for police assistance, legal aid, shelter, medical exams, and counseling. Meanwhile, the RNP opened smaller centers at hospitals in eight other districts.(11) Although the RNP operates a free hotline to report incidences of gender-based violence and child abuse, including child labor, it is unknown how many complaints were related to child labor.(8, 49, 50) Some Ministry of Gender and Family Promotion (MIGEPROF) and RNP employees do not always follow government-approved procedures for screening children and referring them to services, which may impact the quality and timeliness of services provided to them.(11, 53)

Trafficking cases are referred to the RNP and to the Directorate General of Immigration and Emigration.(50) The Directorate General of Immigration and Emigration retains an anti-trafficking specialist, and the RNP operates an anti-trafficking unit staffed with 15 full-time officers.(11, 58) However, RNP officials report that the unit lacks enough officers to address the problem.(8) In addition, evidence suggests that some RNP staff members are not sensitive to the needs of child trafficking victims, and that some children found engaged in commercial sexual exploitation and market vending were detained in transit centers for months.(11) Some officials also lack awareness and training about the laws on internal trafficking.(8, 58) During the reporting period, 17 individuals were investigated for trafficking related crimes, which resulted in 11 prosecutions. It is unknown whether these crimes involved the trafficking of children.(59) There were no convictions for trafficking in 2013.(59)

With support from Interpol, the RNP operates an office at the Kigali International Airport to combat trafficking in persons and plans to open 13 other offices at border crossings. During the reporting period, the RNP trained 112 police officers on transnational trafficking.(11, 59) Rwanda initiated 12 investigations of 19 individuals suspected to be involved in transnational trafficking in 2013, though it is unclear if any of the investigations involved children.(60) Within villages, citizens can report instances of child labor to the RNP or to a local volunteer officer in charge of social affairs. If the officer cannot resolve the problem, it may be referred to the village leader, who may contact the RNP.(50)

The Organic Law Instituting the Penal Code provides penalties for persons who recruit children for armed conflict or do not report such offenses committed against children to the authorities. However, research could not uncover whether investigations or arrests were made under these provisions.(38)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6)

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Advisory Committee on Child Labor	Coordinate government efforts related to the worst forms of child labor, review child labor laws, advocate for the inclusion of child labor policies in national development plans, oversee the implementation of child labor interventions, and conduct field visits to assess the prevalence of child labor and to raise awareness of child labor. Meets quarterly and includes representatives from MIFOTRA, the Ministry of Youth, the Ministry of Education (MINEDUC), MIGEPROF, the Ministry of Local Government (MINILO), the Ministry of Sports and Culture, RNP, the National Human Rights Commission, the Rwanda Demobilization and Reintegration Commission (RDRC), trade unions, the ILO, UNICEF, the Private Sector Federation, and Winrock International.(11, 54, 59)
National Commission for Children (NCC)	Monitor, promote, and advocate for children's rights; develop action plans to protect children from abuse and exploitation. Located under the MIGEPROF and supported by a board of directors and an advisory council of 14 institutions.(11, 61-63)
Inter-Ministerial Committee on Child Rights	Coordinate and assess the progress of the Integrated Child Rights Policy (ICRP) and Strategic Plan in Rwanda. Mandated to meet at least once a year. Includes members from MIGEPROF, the Ministry of Health, MINEDUC, MINILO, the Ministry of Justice, and the Ministry of Finance and Economic Planning.(8, 11, 41)
National Commission on Orphans and Vulnerable Children	Monitor and protect orphans and vulnerable children in Rwanda. Composed of the NCC, MIFOTRA, MIGEPROF, and UNICEF.(8, 53, 64)
Child Labor Committees	Monitor incidents of child labor nationwide, through 149 local committees.(11, 59) In the case of Gender-Based Violence Committees, operate at the district level. In the case of Child Protection Committees, identify and report cases of child rights violations at the district, sector, and cell levels.(65, 66)
Kigali City Council Task Force	Coordinate activities to combat child labor in the districts of Kicukiro, Gasabo, and Nyarugenge.(16, 66, 67)

In 2013, the National Commission for Children (NCC) employed 19 staff members and coordinated child protection activities on a daily basis. The NCC also continued to employ one child protection officer responsible for child labor issues.(11, 61, 63, 64) Between July 2012 and June 2013, the NCC received 246 complaints involving violations of children's rights, including child labor.(68) During the reporting period, the NCC sent psychologists and social workers to three of Rwanda's 30 districts to address child labor.(59) The NCC had a budget of $2.4 million for 2014, which included a $1.5 million earmark to districts to implement child protection programs.(59) However, the NCC lacks coordination structures at the district and sector levels to carry out its responsibilities.(69, 70)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Rwanda has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Policy for the Elimination of Child Labor and 5-year Action Plan to Combat Child Labor†	Aims to prevent at-risk children from entering exploitative child labor; withdraws children engaged in exploitative labor through the provision of education; rehabilitates former child laborers through counseling, life skills training, and medical care; raises community awareness on child labor; and establishes monitoring and evaluation mechanisms on child labor. Government committed over $4.2 million to implement activities listed in the Policy and Plan.(8, 71-74)
Integrated Child Rights Policy (ICRP) and Strategic Plan (2011– 2016)	Addresses all children’s issues, including child labor. Guided by the principles that abuse, exploitation, and violence against children are intolerable and that the Government and caretakers are accountable for the well-being of children.(41, 75) In the case of the ICRP, prohibits child labor, and in the case of the Strategic Plan, provides $9,000 to MIFOTRA to develop timebound programs to eliminate child labor.(41, 75)
National Policy against Gender-Based Violence (2011– 2016)	Acknowledges that orphans and vulnerable children, including child laborers, are at increased risk of gender-based violence and outlines measures to provide assistance to such groups. Implemented by the Gender-Based Violence Technical Working Committee under the MIGEPROF.(69, 76)
National Employment Policy (2007)	Includes a set of integrated strategies for employment promotion and generation. Provides for youth employment programs, which include child labor issues.(54, 77)
Vision 2020 (2000)*	Aims to transform agriculture into a productive, market-oriented, and high-value sector. Calls for the protection of children and provides educational opportunities to children who drop out of secondary school.(50, 78)
National Social Protection Strategy (2011)*	Defines social protection and outlines social development activities to assist poor households, such as providing vulnerable children with grants and free education.(79)
National Youth Policy (2005)*	Seeks to address concerns facing youth, including economic exploitation and education.(50, 80)
12YBE Policy*	Provides free education for 12 years and aims to improve access to education by hiring new teachers and building schools.(42)
Economic Development and Poverty Reduction Strategy (2013– 2018)†	Describes the social policies and programs necessary to promote growth and reduce poverty. Supports access to education and seeks to eliminate child labor.(81)
National TVET Policy (2008)*	Aims to establish a well-trained and adaptable workforce and provides educational alternatives to children who have dropped out of school.(82)
Girls’ Education Strategic Plan (2009– 2013)	Aims to improve access and quality of girls’ education to prevent girls from engaging in the worst forms of child labor.(83)

* The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Policy was launched during the reporting period.

It is unclear how the Integrated Child Rights Policy (ICRP) and Strategic Plan will complement the National Policy for the Elimination of Child Labor and the 5-year Action Plan to Combat Child Labor. In addition, the lack of clear budget allocations may impede the implementation of the ICRP.(69)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Rwanda funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Rwanda Demobilization and Reintegration Commission (RDRC) Child Rehabilitation Program and Center	RDRC-operated center in the Musanze District of the Northern Province for former child combatants returning from the Democratic Republic of the Congo that raises awareness of child soldier issues and provides a 3-month course to former child soldiers, which includes counseling, education, recreational activities, and vocational training.(11, 15, 41, 58) In 2013, the RDRC assisted 38 former child combatants and reunited them with their families. The third stage of the RDRC Program is planned to help 3,300 child ex-combatants demobilize and reintegrate.(83)
Rwanda Education Alternatives for Children	$4.5 million USDOL-funded, 4-year project implemented by Winrock International through March 2013 withdrew and prevented 8,575 children from exploitive child labor, primarily in the agricultural sector, by providing educational services, strengthening child labor and education policies, and ensuring the sustainability of these efforts.(10, 84) With support from MIFOTRA, created a Framework of Action to Combat Exploitative Child Labor in Rwanda, which includes strategies to combat child labor in Rwanda.(70, 84)

Program	Description
Rwanda Education Alternatives for Children in Tea-Growing Areas†	$5 million USDOL-funded, 4-year project implemented by Winrock International targets 4,090 children engaged in or at risk of entering exploitative child labor in Rwanda with a focus on the tea sector and 1,320 vulnerable households for sustainable livelihoods promotion. With support from MIFOTRA, aims to train labor inspectors on child labor issues and develop and eventually operate a mobile-phone child labor monitoring system.(85)
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016 established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010. Aims to build the capacity of the national government and develop strategic policies to address the elimination of child labor in Rwanda.(86)
Child Labor Awareness Raising‡	MIFOTRA program to raise public awareness of the worst forms of child labor through radio shows, television announcements, and skits. Awareness-raising campaigns are also implemented to combat commercial sexual exploitation.(11)
Counter-Trafficking Program in Rwanda†	Government program, with support from the IOM, to raise awareness of human trafficking, train law enforcement officials and immigration officers to identify cases of human trafficking, and establish victim assistance and referral mechanisms.(87)
Eastern Africa Police Chiefs Cooperation Organization	Government program to combat human trafficking by collaborating with 11 East African countries to foster regional cooperation and build the capacity of East African law enforcement authorities.(88, 89)
Vision 2020 Umurenge Program*‡	Government cash and in-kind transfer program for child-headed households and street children.(8, 79, 90, 91)
Gitagata Center*‡	Government-operated center for former street children in the Bugesera District that provided education support, vocational training, and psychosocial counseling to 135 street children and reunited 69 of them with their families in 2013.(11, 72)
One Cup of Milk per Child Program *	EU-funded school feeding provides milk to children in nursery and primary schools. In 2013, 100 schools benefited from the program and 98,000 children received support.(64, 92, 93)

*The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Rwanda.

Rwanda has implemented programs to combat child labor in agriculture, but continues to lack adequate safeguards against exploitative child labor in other areas such as domestic service.(11) Rwanda also did not take the necessary steps to protect children from recruitment by armed groups in the Democratic Republic of the Congo.(8, 20, 24-27)

In 2012, MIGEPROF announced that it would begin phasing out Rwanda's orphanages and integrating children with families across the country. By the end of 2013, MIGEPROF closed four orphanages.(8, 11, 75, 94, 95) It is too early to determine the impact that the closing of childcare institutions will have on child labor. The Government aims to place all children in families and transform existing orphanages into institutions to support children and families in 2014.(96)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, Saint Kitts and Nevis made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government continued to fund social programs that target those vulnerable to child labor. However, while the extent of the problem is unknown, children in Saint Kitts and Nevis are reported to engage in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation and drug trafficking. The law does not protect all children ages 16 to 18 from hazardous work, and the Government has not yet adopted a hazardous work list.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Though the extent of the problem is unknown, children in Saint Kitts and Nevis are reported to engage in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation and drug trafficking.(1-5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Saint Kitts and Nevis. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		92.6

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2014.(6)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children’s Work Project’s analysis, 2014.(7)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Services	Domestic service* (8)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation* (1, 2)
	Use of children in illegal drug and small arms trafficking* (3-5)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Some reports indicate that mothers or caregivers allow the sexual exploitation of children under their care by men who give them monetary or other benefits in return.(2)

There is no recent data on the number of children who are engaged in economic activities in the country. A National Census was conducted in 2011, and it is expected to contain such information.(9) Research was not able to determine whether the results from this Census have been published.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Saint Kitts and Nevis has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

*No conscription or no standing military.

The Employment of Women, Young Persons, and Children Act sets the minimum age for hazardous work at 16.(10) This leaves children between the ages of 16 to 18 vulnerable to hazardous work.(9, 16) A comprehensive list of hazardous occupations prohibited to children has not been established.(16-18)

Research found no evidence of laws that prohibit the use, procurement, or offering of a child for the production or trafficking of drugs.(17)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MOL)	Enforce child labor laws, in particular through its Department of Labor. Work closely with the Ministry of Social and Community Development, Culture, and Gender Affairs to help refer cases of child abuse.(19)
Royal St. Christopher and Nevis Police Force	Lead criminal investigations, in part through its Special Victims Unit, which was created in conjunction with Child Protective Services. Work closely with the Department of Gender Affairs and Child Welfare Services to assist child victims.(19)

Law enforcement agencies in Saint Kitts and Nevis took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, the Ministry of Labor (MOL) employed six labor officers who also served as labor inspectors. The labor officers are responsible for investigating all labor violations, including those related to children.(19, 20) During the reporting period, labor officers received training on inspections from the ILO. While the number of labor inspections conducted during the reporting period was deemed sufficient given the scope of the problem, the exact number of inspections is unknown.(19) The MOL did not report any child labor violations.(19)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2013, there were no criminal investigations related to child labor conducted by the Police Force, including its Special Victims Unit, as there were no reports of such cases made. While some investigators received training on domestic violence and sexual offences, there was no training on how to investigate the worst forms of child labor during the reporting period.(19)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Advisory Board for the Elimination of Hazardous Child Labor (NABEHCL)	Review, implement, and propose legislation to eradicate hazardous child labor. Chaired by the Labor Commissioner and comprised of the Chief Labor Inspector, the Chief Education Officer, the Crown Counsel, a Child Welfare and Probation Officer, a Gender Officer, a Police Inspector, an ILO Desk Officer, workers' and employers' representatives, and other civil society partners.(19, 20)

In 2013, the National Advisory Board for the Elimination of Hazardous Child Labor (NABEHCL) continued to review labor legislation and worked on drafting a new labor code that would reconcile existing laws and comply with international standards, including ratified ILO conventions. The statutes that deal with child labor, including its worst forms, are under consideration.(19) The new legislation is undergoing review by the ILO, and is slated to come before the National Assembly in 2014. The legislation calls for a Tripartite Plus Board to develop policies on all forms of child labor and to establish a hazardous work list.(19)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Saint Kitts and Nevis has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Education Development Policy (2009-2019)*	Seeks to improve access to education for all children and improve its quality. Implemented by the Ministry of Education as part of the Government's development goals.(21)

*The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

In 2013, the Government of Saint Kitts and Nevis continued to consult with the ILO on developing national policies to combat child labor, including its worst forms.(19) In November, the Government participated in the XVIII Inter-American Conference of Ministers of Labor to foster continued dialogue and cooperation on labor issues throughout the Americas. The joint declaration of the Conference promotes social dialogue to address child labor and reaffirms country participants' commitment to work with civil society organizations to advance efforts toward the eradication of child labor.(22)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Saint Kitts and Nevis funded programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Operation Future‡	Police Force program that prevents children from engaging in drug trafficking and gang violence. Involves at-risk youth in alternative activities, and introduces participants to imprisoned gang members to teach them about the negative effects of criminal and illicit activities.(3, 23)

Social and educational assistance programs*‡	Ministry of Education, Social, and Community Development program that coordinates with the Ministry of Child Welfare to keep children in school by providing school supplies, uniforms, textbooks, and school meals.(19, 26, 27)
Project Viola*‡	Government assistance program that helps teenage mothers pursue higher education.(20, 26)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Saint Kitts and Nevis.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Saint Lucia

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2013, Saint Lucia made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government ratified the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography. The Government also ratified the Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict and the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons. In addition, the Government continued to fund education initiatives, including after-school programs, transportation subsidies, and school meals. However, although evidence is limited, children in Saint Lucia are reported to engage in child labor in agriculture and in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation. Saint Lucia also continues to face legislative gaps. The law does not fully protect children from exploitation in pornography and illicit activities, and the Government has not adopted a list of hazardous activities prohibited for children. Further, Saint Lucia has not conducted research to assess the nature and scope of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Although evidence is limited, children in Saint Lucia are reported to engage in child labor in agriculture and in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation.(1-4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Saint Lucia. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Agriculture	Harvesting bananas* (1, 7, 8)
Services	Street vending* (1, 7)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Recent reports indicate that children are sometimes engaged in commercial sexual exploitation with the knowledge or encouragement of parents in situations of financial need.(3) Research has found no evidence of a comprehensive study of the nature and prevalence of child labor in Saint Lucia.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Saint Lucia has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

In 2014, the Government of Saint Lucia ratified the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict.(9) Also during the reporting period, the Government ratified the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography, as well as the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.(10, 11)

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

*No conscription or no standing military.

Article 23 of the Occupational Health and Safety Act prohibits the employment of persons under age 18 in industrial undertakings, which may include working with machinery and in extreme temperatures.(1, 14, 19) However, Article 23 states that young persons who have attained the age of 16 but not yet 18 may engage in these activities if they are supervised as part of an apprenticeship or vocational training program.(14) This provision may expose these children to hazardous work. In addition, research found no evidence that the Government has adopted a comprehensive list of hazardous activities prohibited for children that includes non-industrial sectors.(2, 20)

Research found no evidence that Saint Lucia has laws that prohibit the use of children in the production of pornography or that prohibit the use of children in illicit activities, such as drug trafficking.(20, 21)

Saint Lucia does not have a standing military, and the police force is responsible for the security of the country. The minimum age for recruitment to the police force is 18.(7, 22)

Article 16 of the Education Act guarantees free tuition for children attending public institutions. However, other unspecified charges may be applied if approved by the Education Minister.(18)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry for Education, Human Resource Development, and Labor (MEHRDL)	Enforce laws on child labor, in part through labor inspections conducted by its Department of Labor.(7, 20, 21)
Royal Saint Lucia Police Force	Enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. Contains a Vulnerable Persons Unit that investigates cases of child labor, abuse, and neglect, and works in collaboration with the Division of Human Services.(1, 2, 23) Utilizes a specific manual for the investigation of crimes related to children.(7)

Labor law enforcement agencies in Saint Lucia took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms. However, research found no evidence that criminal law enforcement agencies took such actions during the reporting period.(7)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, Saint Lucia’s seven labor inspectors conducted general labor inspections, during which they looked for indications of child labor. While there were no reported child labor violations, the number of inspections carried out is unknown.(7) Moreover, representatives from the Ministry for Education, Human Resource Development, and Labor (MEHRDL) noted that the current number of inspectors is insufficient to carry out their responsibilities and that no specific training on child labor was provided for them.(7)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Ministry of Health, Wellness, Human Services and Gender Relations	Coordinate the investigation of child labor cases in collaboration with the Royal Saint Lucia Police Force using established protocols.(7)
Trafficking in Persons Task Force	Coordinate the detection and referral of cases of trafficking in persons among law enforcement, social service, and immigration officials pursuant to the Counter-Trafficking Act.(7, 16) Currently developing a national plan of action to combat trafficking in persons with the participation of IOM.(7)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Saint Lucia has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
ILO Decent Work Country Program for Saint Lucia (2010-2015)	Promotes economic development, poverty reduction, and legislative strengthening in Saint Lucia that is consistent with international labor standards, including those on child labor.(24)

Research did not find evidence of policies that address all worst forms of child labor, including the commercial sexual exploitation of children.

In November 2013, the Government participated in the XVIII Inter-American Conference of Ministers of Labor to foster continued dialogue and cooperation on labor issues throughout the Americas. The joint declaration of the Conference promotes social dialogue to address child labor and reaffirms country participants’ commitment to work with civil society organizations to advance efforts toward the eradication of child labor.(25)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Saint Lucia funded programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Ministry of Education programming*‡	Fosters school attendance by providing a book bursary, school meal program, and a transit subsidy program at most secondary schools.(7)
Ministry of Social Transformation, Youth and Sports after school programming*‡	Improves academic performance and maintains school attendance among underprivileged children between the ages of 8 and 16 years by providing after-school activities, including assistance with homework and various recreational activities.(7, 23)

*The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Saint Lucia.

Despite these programs, the Government does not have specific initiatives that target and assist children involved in agriculture, street work, and commercial sexual exploitation.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government made limited enforcements efforts, which included incorporating information on trafficking in persons into the training for new police recruits and developing guides for officials to help identify victims of trafficking. The Government also continued to implement social programs that target children that may be vulnerable to child labor. However, although the country does not appear to have a widespread child labor problem, some children are engaged in domestic service and agriculture. Gaps remain in the legal framework. The minimum age for hazardous work falls below international standards, and although the use of children for the trafficking of drugs is prohibited, there is no law to prohibit the use of children in the production of drugs.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Saint Vincent and the Grenadines are engaged child labor in domestic service and agriculture.(1, 2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Saint Vincent and the Grenadines. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	Unavailable

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2014.(3)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children’s Work Project’s analysis, 2014.(4)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Cultivation of marijuana* (1, 5, 6)
Services	Domestic service* (2, 7)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation* (6, 8) Used in the trade of marijuana* (1, 5)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182

Limited evidence suggests that children are involved the cultivation of marijuana.(1) There have also been reports of adults exploiting children in Saint Vincent and the Grenadines through commercial sexual exploitation.(6, 8) However, the Government has acknowledged that due to the lack of data on the prevalence of child labor, especially the sexual exploitation of children, the full extent of the problem is unknown.(9)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Saint Vincent and the Grenadines has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor	Enforce child labor laws and refer victims to appropriate social services.(2)
Royal Police Force	Make criminal arrests, including those involving the worst forms of child labor and human trafficking; specifically address human trafficking through an anti-trafficking unit; refer victims to appropriate social services.(2)

Law enforcement agencies in Saint Vincent and the Grenadines took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, the Ministry of Labor employed four inspectors who conducted 50 inspections, an increase from 14 in 2012.(2) As there were no complaints of child labor violations, there were no inspections conducted specifically targeting child labor. The budget for the Ministry of Labor for 2013 is not publicly available, but a Ministry official indicated that the amount is adequate.(2) Labor inspectors did not receive training on child labor and its worst forms in 2013.(2)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2013, the Government incorporated information on trafficking in persons into the training for new police recruits and developed guides for officials to help identify victims of trafficking. The anti-trafficking in persons unit within the Royal Police Force conducted training seminars on child labor and forced labor for 8,000 students and 500 teachers, and also held similar seminars for members of Government and civil society.(2)

The number of police investigators responsible for enforcing criminal laws on the worst forms of child labor is not available. There were no investigations or prosecutions involving the worst forms of child labor in 2013, and thus no citations issued or children removed from child labor as a result of investigations.(2)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that the Government has established a mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms. However, the Government has another mechanism that may have an impact on child labor (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Task Force against Trafficking in Persons	Develop a national plan to address trafficking, coordinate the collection of data amongst government agencies, establish policies to enable government agencies to work with nongovernmental organizations to prevent trafficking and assist victims, and coordinate and provide training for all relevant government officials and authority figures; chaired by the Prime Minister (2, 12, 18)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence of any policies to address child labor, including its worst forms.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence of programs to specifically address child labor in domestic service, commercial sexual exploitation, or illicit activities. However, the Government has funded other programs that may have an impact on child labor (Table 7).

Table 7. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Community Capacity Building Program and Village Integrated Development Program*‡	Designed to reduce poverty in rural areas.(2)
Supplementary Feeding Program*‡	Provides free meals to preschool and primary school students from low-income families.(2, 19)

Crisis Center Shelter*‡	Maintains short-term shelter that may also be used to house trafficking victims, including children.(2, 8)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Saint Vincent and the Grenadines.

In 2013, Samoa made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government enacted the Labor and Employment Relations Act, which raised the minimum age for hazardous work to 18. It also replaced the criminal code with a new law that strengthened protections against the sexual exploitation of children, and criminalized forced labor. In addition, an international donor-supported Government program to provide free public education was extended through the secondary grades.

Children in Samoa are engaged in street vending; and although evidence is limited and the extent of the problem is unknown, children also engage in child labor in agriculture. However, the Government lacks a coordinating mechanism to combat child labor. There remains no definition of light work and no minimum age for this activity, which does not conform to international standards.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Samoa are engaged in child labor in street vending. Although data are limited and the extent of the problem is unknown, children also engage in child labor in agriculture. The Government did not collect information on exploitative child labor in 2013.(1) Research suggests that the last official study on child labor was conducted in 2005.(2) The lack of official data and other information does not allow for an accurate assessment of the full nature and extent of the worst forms of child labor in Samoa.

Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Samoa. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Agriculture	Planting, harvesting, gathering coconuts,* other unspecified fruit,* and unspecified nuts* (5-7)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or extent of the problem is unknown.

Traditional Samoan culture includes the practice of aiga, under which a village elder (matai) may compel others to perform work in service to the family or the community.(7) Limited evidence indicates that in some villages it is common to require children to work on village farms.(5, 7) Research did not identify the nature of this work, nor whether children perform it willingly. Children at the age of primary-schooling have been observed selling goods and food during school hours and into the night.(1, 9) Child street vendors work in Apia, Samoa’s capital, and a few other locations, including the international airport.(1, 8)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Samoa has ratified some key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

In 2013, the Government replaced two major pieces of legislation that govern employment and define crime and punishment in Samoa.(1) In each case, the new law strengthens protections against child labor, including its worst forms. The new Labor and Employment Relations Act (LERA) raises the minimum age for hazardous work from 15 to 18. Children under 18 are prohibited from working at any job or worksite that is or is likely to be physically or morally “injurious,” and are forbidden to operate dangerous machinery.(11, 15) The Government has not yet codified a list of activities defined as “injurious” and therefore prohibited to children, but sources indicate it was finalizing the draft during the reporting period.(1, 16) The LERA only applies to work in a place of employment, which may leave some working children—such as street vendors—vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor.(11) There remains no minimum age nor definition for light work, which the ILO has noted as inconsistent with international standards.(17)

The Crimes Ordinance (1961) was repealed and replaced with the Crimes Act.⁽¹⁾ The new law specifies that the forced labor or sexual exploitation of a person under 18 is punishable by a 14-year prison sentence.⁽¹³⁾ The previous law did not criminalize forced labor.^(16, 18) Trafficking in persons into or out of Samoa is now a criminal offense, and in the case of a conviction, a victim under 18 is to be considered as an aggravating factor when determining punishment.⁽¹³⁾ However, the law does not cover trafficking within Samoa.

Under the new Crimes Act, 7 years imprisonment may be imposed on a person who publishes, distributes, or exhibits indecent material featuring a child; this improves upon the Crimes Ordinance, which did not have a specific penalty for child pornography.^(13, 18) The Crimes Act also criminalizes the procurement of a girl for sexual intercourse, though it has no similar provision for boys. The maximum prison term for a person found guilty of profiting from the prostitution of another person was raised from 3 to 10 years.^(13, 18) Research found no evidence of laws against the use of children in illicit activities such as drug trafficking.

The Education Act stipulates that a child under age 15 cannot be involved in work of any kind at any time during which this work would interfere with the child's school attendance, participation in school activities, or educational development.⁽¹⁴⁾ While free public education through the secondary level is being implemented through an international donor-funded Government program, this right is not enshrined in law.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Commerce, Industry, and Labor (MCIL)	Investigate potential labor law violations in response to complaints, including those relevant to child labor. Refer cases to the Samoan Ministry of Police (SMP) and the Attorney General for enforcement. Assigned 11 inspectors to carry out inspections in 2013. ⁽¹⁾
Ministry of Women, Community, and Social Development	Assist MCIL investigations when called upon. ⁽¹⁾
Ministry of Education	Assist MCIL investigations when called upon. ⁽¹⁾
Samoan Ministry of Police (SMP)	Enforce criminal laws with respect to the worst forms of child labor. ⁽¹⁾
Office of the Attorney General	Prosecute criminal cases of the worst forms of child labor. ⁽¹⁾

Research found no evidence that law enforcement agencies in Samoa took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms, during the reporting period. No child labor complaints were registered with the MCIL, and no child labor cases or trafficking cases were investigated or prosecuted.⁽¹⁾ Research found no evidence of other relevant data, such as the number of criminal investigators charged with child labor law enforcement, training for law enforcement, or the funding level of the relevant agencies.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence of a mechanism to coordinate government efforts to address child labor, including all its worst forms. The Samoa Interpol and Transnational Crime Unit monitors transnational crimes, including human trafficking.⁽¹⁹⁾ Member agencies include the SMP, Samoa Immigration, Prime Minister's Office, Central Bank of Samoa, Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Trade, Customs Services, Attorney General's Office, and Ministry of Finance.^(1, 19)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 6. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Policy for Children of Samoa, 2010–2015	Aim to address the needs of disadvantaged children, to provide child protection, and to combat poverty. The Government has stated that the policy covers issues relevant to the protection of child street vendors.(17)
Strategy for the Development of Samoa, 2012–2016*	Seek to improve the quality of life for all Samoans through economic growth, social policies, improved infrastructure, and environmental protection. Access to education and training at all levels is targeted as a key outcome.(20) As part of the strategy, the Government has committed to developing a Medium Term Expenditure Framework to ensure that education access programs currently funded by international donors are sustained.(20)

*The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

Research could not determine the status of the Medium Term Expenditure Framework, nor identify any other policy efforts during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Samoa participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Samoa School Fee Grant Scheme (SSFGS)*	Government program that provides free education to all primary school children enrolled in government schools and mission (church-run) schools. Approximately 99 percent of Samoan primary school students are enrolled in schools covered by the SSFGS Program, while remainder enrolled in private schools.(1) Aims to make school enrollment and attendance affordable to parents who are otherwise unable to pay school fees.(21) During the reporting period, program was extended to offer free education at the secondary level for students in government schools, and reduced fees for secondary level students in mission schools.(1)
Education Sector Program II*	Creates a more equitable and effective education system by improving curriculum, learning materials, the national assessment system, teacher training, and educational facilities.(22, 23) Program II implemented with help from the Asian Development Bank, and the Governments of Australia and New Zealand. Will run through December 2014.(1, 22, 23)

*The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

Research has not uncovered evidence of any government programs specifically intended to address child labor in agriculture and street vending.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Samoa (Table 8).

São Tomé and Príncipe

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

In 2013, São Tomé and Príncipe made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. Government agencies developed a list of hazardous activities along with a plan of action to raise awareness on the worst forms of child labor; however the plan is still under review. Children in São Tomé and Príncipe are engaged in child labor in domestic service and street work. The Government continued to fund social programs for families with vulnerable children, but current government programs do not target all sectors in which child labor occurs.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in São Tomé and Príncipe engage in child labor in domestic service and in street work.(1-8) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in São Tomé and Príncipe.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	15.4 (6,218)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	68.8
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	13.7
Primary Completion Rate (%)		104.0

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2013, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2014.(9)
Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Multiple Cluster Survey 2, 2000.(10)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Activities unknown* (8)
	Fishing,* activities unknown (1, 8)
Industry	Carpentry, woodworking (1, 2, 8)
Services	Domestic service (1-8)
	Street work, including begging (1-3, 8)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation* (11)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

On the island of São Tomé, some children who work in domestic service are as part of a Mina Quia, the cultural practice of sending a child to work in another family's home. Limited evidence suggests that many children who work in a Mina Quia are victims of sexual abuse and domestic violence.(8) However, many children still attend school while in a Mina Quia.(8)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

São Tomé and Príncipe has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Law on Individual Labor Contracts; Law 6/92 (8, 12)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Law on Individual Labor Contracts, Law 6/92 (8, 12)

Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Constitution; Penal Code (3, 13-15)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Penal Code (15)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Penal Code (15)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Penal Code (15)
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	N/A*
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	17	Constitution (16, 17)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Basic Education System Law (6, 7)
Free Public Education	Yes		Constitution; Basic Education System Law (8, 13)

* No conscription or no standing military.

The Government does not have a hazardous list of occupations; however, during 2012–2013, a government team developed a list of hazardous activities along with a plan of action to raise awareness on the worst forms of child labor. The Government is reviewing this proposed list and continues to work towards final approval.(18)

The Penal Code does not protect children ages 14 to 18 from commercial sexual exploitation.(11, 16, 19) It does prohibit a person from engaging in a sexual act with a child younger than 14 as well as directing a child younger than 14 to engage in a sexual act.(14) The Penal Code also explicitly penalizes engaging in or facilitating sexual acts with a child under 14 for profit or gain.(14)

While the compulsory education age in São Tomé and Príncipe is 15 years old, limited evidence suggests that some schools do not provide education through grade six.(11) Children who stop attending school before reaching the minimum age for employment are especially vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, as they are not in school but may not legally work either.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

São Tomé and Príncipe

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Health and Social Affairs' Department of Labor Inspection (MSSA)	Enforce labor laws, including those regarding child labor; members are from other government agencies, including immigration officials, the police, tax administration officials, social workers, and members of the social security administration.(1, 5-7) Department of Labor Inspection receives complaints about regarding the worst forms of child labor.(5)
Ministry of Justice and Public Administration Affairs	Enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor.(6, 7)
Immigration, Police, Tax Administration, Social Work, Social Security, and others	Address child labor issues in ad hoc inspections teams from listed agencies.(18)

In 2013, research could not determine whether law enforcement agencies in São Tomé and Príncipe took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Limited evidence suggests that coordination between the Department of Labor Inspection and other agencies is a significant challenge in São Tomé and Príncipe; however, there is a referral system for children to the Department of Social Services within the Ministry of Health and Social Affairs (MSSA).(18)

Labor Law Enforcement

The Department of Labor Inspection forms ad hoc teams for labor exploitation cases. The teams include 15 labor inspectors who work throughout the country.(18, 20) During the reporting period, no inspections were carried out involving child labor, and no complaints of child labor were received.(18)

In 2013, the Ministry of Justice and Public Administration Reforms received a budget of $15.3 million; however, it is unknown how much of the budget was allocated for investigations.(18) The MSSA lacks basic equipment for conducting inspections and daily operations; it is housed in a single office, has outdated and malfunctioning computers, and does not have a vehicle.(5, 7)

Criminal Law Enforcement

No cases of child labor were found during the reporting period, therefore no penalties or citations were issued.(18)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6)

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Directorate of Social Protection and Solidarity	Carry out support programs for families to ensure children attend school and administer the Deprived Mothers program (Mães Carenciadas). Currently working on a draft of worst forms of child labor list.(8)

As of 2012 the Government was working to form a tripartite committee to combat child labor; however, it is unknown if this committee has been formed. In 2013, the Government organized workshops and seminars to raise awareness and coordinated efforts to advance a list of the worst forms of child labor.(21) A delegation from São Tomé and Príncipe led by the Minister of Health and Social Affairs and representatives from the Chamber of Commerce, labor unions, and NGOs participated in the third Global Conference on Child Labor in Brazil.(18)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of São Tomé and Príncipe has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan and List of Worst Forms of Child Labor (TIP)	Includes a regulatory framework with public policies aimed at the eradication of child labor. Created from São Tomé and Príncipe 's South-South partnership with Brazil and the United States. (22) The National Action Plan and List of Worst Forms of Child Labor are currently awaiting approval and have not yet been implemented.(21)
Community of Portuguese-Speaking countries (PALOP)	São Tomé and Príncipe and other members of the Community of Portuguese-speaking countries have approved four target areas in which they will focus their efforts to combat child labor: the exchange of information and experiences, awareness-raising campaigns, use of statistical methodologies to collect child labor data, and technical cooperation and training.(23-25)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of São Tomé and Príncipe funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Centers that provide shelter, education, and skills training*‡	Government-run centers with land, buildings, social work staff, and school stipends for approximately 250 at-risk children, including street children and orphans.(5-7, 26)
Disadvantaged Mothers Program (Mães Carenciadas)*‡	Government program that provides microcredit loans to families in need. Also offers subsidies for children of mothers who are heads of household to attend school up until 15 years of age, the compulsory age for basic education in São Tomé and Príncipe.(8)
XIV Government Program (Programa do XIV Governo)*	Government program that seeks to provide more training and educational opportunities, improve the quality of education, provide infrastructure for education and provide technical and professional training, all in basic and secondary education.(8)
Education for All Program*‡	Government program includes comprehensive data collection to better understand the current state of education in the country, teacher training, and a campaign to sensitize parents to the importance of education.(27)
Program for low-income families*‡	Program funded by UNICEF and the Governments of São Tomé and Príncipe to help poor mothers and help low-income families keep their children in school.(28)
Registry to document undocumented minors‡	Ministry of Justice and State Reform and UNICEF campaign to create a registry to document undocumented minors, allowing further inspection by the General Inspection of Labor in cases of child labor.(8)
Media campaign	Government media campaign against child labor, which continued throughout the reporting period.(3)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of São Tomé and Príncipe

The Government does not have programs that specifically target children domestic service and street work.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in São Tomé and Príncipe (Table 9).

Table 9. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

In 2013, Senegal made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government approved the National Strategy on Child Protection and the National Strategy for Economic and Social Development (2013–2017), launched a new conditional cash transfer program that requires beneficiaries to keep their children in school, and began establishing regional branches of the Ministry of Labor to raise awareness of child labor policies and address child labor issues at the local level. However, children in Senegal continue to engage in child labor in agriculture and in the worst forms of child labor in forced begging. Senegal's laws do not fully protect children from child labor. In addition, enforcement agencies lack adequate resources to effectively carry out their work. Furthermore, redundancy among government agencies and interagency bodies tasked with combating child labor impedes effective coordination and implementation of efforts.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Senegal are engaged in child labor in agriculture and in the worst forms of child labor in forced begging. (1-4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Senegal.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	14.9 (510,420)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	53.6
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	8.3
Primary Completion Rate (%)		60.5

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from DHS Survey, 2010–2011.(6)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Herding cattle* (2, 3)
	Fishing,* activities unknown (1-3, 7)
	Production of millet,* corn,* and peanuts* (2)
Industry	Gold mining, salt mining,* and work in rock quarries* (2, 3, 8-11)
Services	Domestic service (1-3, 8, 10, 12)
	Street vending (4, 7, 13)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Domestic service as a result of human trafficking (1-3, 8, 10, 12)
	Commercial sexual exploitation as a result of human trafficking (1, 10, 14)
	Forced labor in begging, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2, 3, 8, 10, 15-19)
	Forced labor in garbage collection† (2, 19, 20)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Senegal

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In Senegal, it is traditional practice to send boys to Koranic teachers called marabouts to receive education, which may include vocational training and apprenticeship. Some marabouts force their students, called talibés, to beg on the streets for money and food, then to surrender their earnings.(2, 8, 15-17, 21) Marabouts who force their talibés to beg typically set a daily quota that talibés must meet or otherwise face beatings.(15, 16, 21) Some talibés who fail to meet quotas are forced to spend the night on the street.(16) There are tens of thousands of talibés, mostly under age 12, estimated to be in situations of forced begging. These boys often live in overcrowded, unsanitary conditions; receive inadequate food and medical care; and are vulnerable to sexual exploitation.(16) The problem of forced begging appears to be increasing in Senegal. A 2013 census of daaras (Koranic schools) in the Dakar Region found that almost 30,000 of the nearly 55,000 talibés in the area are forced to beg.(22, 23)

In the Casamance Region, talibés working in the fields are exposed to leftover landmines from a 29-year conflict in the region.(24) Talibés typically come from rural areas within Senegal and from neighboring countries, sometimes as a result of human trafficking.(8, 16, 25, 26)

Some girls reportedly leave school after being sexually harassed by school staff or as a result of early pregnancy.(2) Access to education is also limited by the availability of schools and the use of volunteer and temporary teachers who are often absent.(27, 28)

In 2013, the Government collected data on child labor in the mining region of Kedougou.(3)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Senegal has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article L. 145 of the Labor Code (13)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Arrêtes ministériels n° 3750 and 3751 (29, 30)
List of Hazardous Occupations Prohibited for Children	Yes		Arrêtes ministériels n° 3749, 3750, and 3751 (29-31)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Arrête ministériel n° 3749 (31)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Loi n° 2005-06 (32)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Arrête ministériel n° 3749 ; Penal Code (31, 33)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Arrête ministériel n°3751 (3, 30, 34)
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	Yes	20	Article 70 of the Constitution (35, 36)
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	18	Loi n° 2008-28 (35-37)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Loi n° 2004-2037 (25, 38)
Free Public Education	Yes		Constitution (39)

Section L.145 of the Labor Code grants the Minister of Labor authority to waive the minimum age for work based on local needs.(13) An exception within Arrêtés ministériels n° 3750 and 3751 allows boys under age 16 to work in underground mines and quarries if they are doing “light work,” such as sorting and loading ore, handling and hauling trucks within specified weight limits, or handling ventilation equipment.(3, 13, 17, 25, 29, 30, 40) However, allowing children under age 18 to perform any work in underground mines and quarries is inconsistent with ILO C. 138.(41, 42) While the use of children for drug trafficking is prohibited, it is unclear whether prohibitions exist on the use of children in the production of illegal drugs.(3, 34)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MOL)	Enforce child labor laws through the Labor Inspections Office and the use of social security inspectors. Child Labor Unit responsible for maintaining a database of child labor violations and for monitoring and evaluating child labor activities.(3, 20, 25, 43, 44) Labor inspectors responsible for enforcement in the formal sector, which covers state-owned corporations, private enterprises, and cooperatives.(20, 26)
Local Tribunals	Adjudicate child labor trials.(20)
Ministry of Justice	Enforce laws on child trafficking, begging, commercial sexual exploitation, and the use of children for illicit activities.(3, 25, 45)
Children’s Unit of the Senegalese Police	Specialize in child protection.(1)
Police Vice Squad	Combat the commercial sexual exploitation of adults and children, particularly related to tourism, by patrolling tourist areas, including beaches, hotels, bars, nightclubs, and massage parlors.(1)
Local Police and Gendarmes	Intervene in cases in which children face physical abuse in forced labor situations, and report cases involving children to the Children’s Unit.(1, 25)

Law enforcement agencies in Senegal took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, the Ministry of Labor (MOL) began establishing regional branches to raise awareness of child labor policies and address child labor issues at the local level. Labor inspectors receive training on child labor issues, which ILO officials have indicated is adequate.(3) If an incident of child labor is found during an inspection, the inspector informs the business owner that the child should be removed from work. If the child is not removed within the specified timeframe, the case is turned over to a local tribunal for adjudication.(20) Since this process does not penalize violators for their first offense, it may not deter employers from exploiting children in the workplace. The Child Labor Unit has no full-time staff. MOL staff, whose primary responsibilities pertain to other units, work part-time for the Child Labor Unit.(3, 43, 44) Research did not identify any information on the number of inspectors, inspections conducted, or amount of funding for labor law enforcement.

Criminal Law Enforcement

With few exceptions, daaras are not subject to government regulation or inspection.(16) In 2013, in response to a fire in a daara that killed nine talibés who were locked in by a marabout, the President of Senegal promised that the Government would create a plan to regulate daaras better in order to stop the exploitation of children.(46) Research did not identify whether the Government had begun to do so. Criminal laws related to child labor are rarely enforced in practice, especially those against forced begging.(3, 18, 25, 45) The territorial jurisdiction of the Children’s Unit is limited to Dakar, and the office employs only two agents.(1, 3, 25) Although other police stations in Senegal are expected to report cases involving children to the Unit, research found no evidence that this occurs regularly.(1) No information was found on the number of investigators employed, cases investigated, citations issued, or prosecutions made.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Interagency Committee Against Child Labor	Coordinate initiatives to address child labor, including the National Action Plan on the Prevention and Abolition of Child Labor in Senegal; chaired by MOL and comprising employers' organizations, 20 government ministries, religious leaders, international agencies, and governors from various regions.(25, 44, 45, 47, 48)
Inter-ministerial Commission	Coordinate implementation of the National Strategy on Child Protection and its related action plan.(3)
MOL's National Committee Against Child Labor	Eliminate child labor through legislation, policy, and collaboration with civil society and other partners; led by the Minister of Labor, with members including the Minister of Family, the Minister of Justice, and the Minister of Finance.(25, 48)
National Task Force Against Trafficking in Persons, in Particular Women and Children	Report on human trafficking in Senegal and coordinate the implementation of the National Action Plan on Combating Trafficking in Persons and other efforts to combat the problem.(10, 49)

In 2013, the National Task Force Against Trafficking in Persons' budget was increased from $20,000 to $100,000. (23) No information was available on the funding of other child labor-related coordinating bodies. Redundancy between the four coordinating bodies creates confusion and hinders effective collaboration and implementation of efforts.(1, 16) The National Committee Against Child Labor was inactive during 2013.(48)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Senegal has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan on the Prevention and Abolishment of Child Labor in Senegal	Aims to improve and enforce the legal framework on child labor, prevent the worst forms of child labor and child labor by increasing the supply of educational and training opportunities, and build institutional capacity by establishing regional and departmental branches to coordinate local efforts; budget is approximately $2.7 million.(3, 50-52)
National Strategy on Child Protection†	Addresses child protection through a national body to coordinate social policy on child protection efforts; includes an action plan with a recommended budget of $18 million.(3, 45, 47, 53)
National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Human Beings	Includes goals of enhancing the legal framework to prevent human trafficking, effectively implementing laws, providing effective protection and care for victims, and strengthening social and educational initiatives for vulnerable children.(1, 34, 47, 49)
Ten-Year Education and Training Program*	Aims to provide quality, universal, primary education to all children by 2015.(25, 47)
National Social Protection Strategy*	Classifies children as a specific vulnerable group and includes provisions for their protection against harmful practices, exploitation, and violence.(25, 47, 54)
National Strategy for Economic and Social Development†	Includes goals such as promoting youth employment and entrepreneurship, increasing access to social services such as education and health services, and improving the quality of education.(27)
Child Begging Action Plan†	Aims to combat child begging.(3)

* The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Policy was launched during the reporting period.

In 2013, the Government launched the National Strategy on Child Protection and the National Strategy for Economic and Social Development (2013–2017).(3, 27, 45, 47, 53) Limited capacity, leadership, and funding constrain the Government's efforts to implement policies such as those listed in Table 7. A lack of coordination among the relevant agencies also hinders implementation.(3)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Senegal funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Project to Fight Against Trafficking and the Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Government program that aims to enhance government capacity to design and implement local initiatives to address child trafficking and other worst forms of child labor, particularly forced begging, forced labor of girls, and commercial sexual exploitation. Technical monitoring committees at the local level, composed of public and private stakeholders overseeing implementation of the project. As a result of the program, some departmental governments have developed individual action plans to address child labor.(1, 25, 47)
Daara Mapping Project†‡	Project that falls under the National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Human Beings. Implemented by the National Task Force Against Trafficking in Persons; involves assessments of the daaras of Dakar, including the number of daaras, where they operate, the type of education given in each, as well as the number of children in daaras who are forced to beg, their place of origin, and who enrolled them.(10)
Modern Daaras‡*	Government-built schools that provide students with Koranic instruction, as well as courses in reading, writing, and mathematics.(18, 45)
Conditional Cash Transfer†‡	Government program that requires beneficiaries to keep their children in school; total budget for this program was approximately $10 million in 2013.(3)
ILO Action Programs*	Program aiming to combat child labor in the gold mining region of Kedougou and in the informal urban economy in Saint Louis.(3)
Interagency Program for Improving the Situation of At-Risk Children in Senegal	ILO/UNICEF-funded program that provides services to directly benefit victims of the worst forms of child labor in the Thiés region. Services include the purchase of school equipment, placement in training programs, assistance with school enrollment, provision of health and counseling services, and the development of income-generating activities for families. Provides awareness-raising, information, and training on relevant ILO conventions and includes pilot system for observing and monitoring child labor in the rural community of Ngoudiane.(51, 55, 56)
Basic Education Program*	USAID-funded program to improve the quality of and access to education, and ensuring that talibés receive basic education.(57)
Eliminating the Worst Forms of Child Labor in West Africa and Strengthening Sub-Regional Cooperation through ECOWAS I & II	USDOL-funded regional projects that supported ECOWAS to strengthen its role in combating the worst forms of child labor in the West Africa sub-region by providing policy and capacity-building support for all ECOWAS states.(58, 59)
Prevention and Elimination of Child Labor in West Africa	Government of Spain-funded, 5-year, $5.4 million program in four countries in West Africa that aims to contribute to the progressive elimination of child labor and the prevention and immediate elimination of the worst forms of child labor through a systemic and sustainable response by the public and private sectors and civil society.(56)
Ginndi Center‡	Government-run shelter that serves abused and vulnerable children, including runaway talibés, street children, and child trafficking victims; provides shelter, food, education, vocational training, family mediation, and medical and psychological care; and operates a toll-free child protection hotline through which the public can report child labor abuses.(1, 2, 8, 16, 18, 25, 49, 60)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Senegal.

Given the rising number of talibés in forced begging, current government programs are not adequate to combat the problem effectively. Additionally, existing programs do not target commercial sexual exploitation, domestic service, or agriculture, nor are existing programs on child labor in the gold mining district of Kedougou sufficient to address the problem fully.(16, 47, 51)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Senegal (Table 9).

Table 9. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

Serbia

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

In 2013, Serbia made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Anti-Trafficking Coordinator, in a partnership with several NGOs, created anti-trafficking teams in seven locations to raise awareness of trafficking, create prevention programs, and assist in victim identification. However, children in Serbia, particularly Roma children, continue to engage in the worst forms of child labor, including forced begging and commercial sexual exploitation. In addition, the National Assembly did not adopt the 2013–2018 national strategy to guide the government’s work in preventing and protecting children from child pornography and trafficking. Serbia’s laws also fail to protect children fully from the worst forms of child labor. Serbia does not specifically prohibit the use, procurement, or offering of a child for the production and trafficking of drugs. In addition, the Government does not have a list of hazardous occupations prohibited for children, and there is a general lack of coordination among government agencies to address the worst forms of child labor.

I. Prevalence and Sectoral Distribution of Child Labor

Children in Serbia are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including forced begging and commercial sexual exploitation.(1-5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Serbia.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	6.0 (54,045)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	92.5
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	6.7
Primary Completion Rate (%)		93.2

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2013.(6)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children’s Work Project’s analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 3, 2005.(7)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Activities unknown* (8)
Industry	Manufacturing, activities unknown (9)
	Construction, activities unknown (9)
	Mining and quarrying (9)
Services	Street work, such as washing cars,* collecting scrap material,* working as street vendors,* and begging (4, 10-12)
	Wholesale and retail trade (9)
	Repairing motor vehicles (9)
	Working in food service, information and communication, and transportation and storage (9)

Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, begging, and petty crimes as a result of human trafficking (3, 5, 13, 14)
	Forced begging* (13)
	Used for forced theft* (13)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C.182.

While some data exists on children’s work, information is not complete enough to determine the extent to which children under age 18 work and their specific activities.

Children most vulnerable to exploitation for labor and commercial sexual exploitation include children from the Roma population, poor rural communities, foster care, low-income families, and those with special needs.(4) Victims of trafficking for commercial sexual exploitation, including children, are mostly trafficked internally.(5)

Economic hardship, ethnic discrimination, and cultural norms, particularly for girls, often discourage minority groups, especially Roma children, from attending school.(10) This makes them more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Serbia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 66 of the Constitution of the Republic of Serbia (15)

Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 26 of the Constitution of the Republic of Serbia (15)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 350 of the Criminal Code of the Republic of Serbia (16); Article 26 of the Constitution of the Republic of Serbia (15); The Law on the Protection Program for Participants in Criminal Proceedings of 2006 (17); Article 58 of the Law on Foreigners (18); The Law on Social Welfare (19); The Law on Temporary and Permanent Residence (5)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 183–185 of the Criminal Code of the Republic of Serbia (16)

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 25, Law on Military, Labor and Material Obligation (20)
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	18	Article 39 of the Law on the Army (21-23)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Article 71 of the Constitution of the Republic of Serbia(15); Article 9 and 98 of the Law on the Foundations of the Education System (24)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 71 of the Constitution of the Republic of Serbia (15); Article 91 of the Law on the Foundations of the Education System (24)

The Government of Serbia has not established a list of hazardous activities and occupations prohibited to children.(25)

The Criminal Code applies different penalties to those who use children to make pornography-based on the age of the child.(16, 26) When this crime involves children under age 14, the penalties range from 1 to 8 years in prison; penalties for using minors, defined as individuals older than age 14 and younger than age 18, to make pornographic materials range from 6 months to 5 years.(26) This minimum penalty of 6 months for using minors to create pornography may be an insufficient deterrent for such a serious crime.

Article 247 of the Criminal Code prohibits giving drugs to minors for their own use or for another’s use.(16) However, the Criminal Code does not prohibit specifically the use, procurement, or offering of children under age 18 for the production and trafficking of drugs and other illicit activities.(3, 17)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
The Ministry of Labor, Employment and Social Policy’s Labor Inspectorate	Enforce labor laws and conduct inspections, including those related to child labor.(10)
The Ministry of Interior	Enforce laws prohibiting commercial sexual exploitation and trafficking through the Organized Crime Police Force and the Border Police Force.(25) Oversee the General Police Directorate, which consists of 27 local police directorates, with some having dedicated trafficking units comprising police, prosecutors, social workers, health workers, and local NGOs.(5, 27)
The State Prosecutor’s Office	Lead investigations on trafficking cases and exchange information on human trafficking through a network of prosecutors and two NGOs.(27) Provide financial support to the Center for Human Trafficking Victims’ Protection by collecting fees from defendants in minor criminal cases.(28)
The Center for Human Trafficking Victims’ Protection, Ministry of Labor, Employment and Social Policy	Identify and rescue child trafficking victims and children at risk of being trafficked, conduct needs assessments, and refer victims to social services.(12, 28) Includes the Agency for Coordination of Protection of Trafficking Victims and the Urgent Reception Center for Trafficking Victims.(28) Maintain a database of its beneficiaries and of the services provided to them, and participate in research projects that relate to trafficking.(28)
Parliamentary Committee on Children	Review all draft legislation in terms of children’s rights to ensure legislation is aligned with international norms and standards. Monitor the implementation of the child-related provisions of all laws pertaining to children.(4, 12) Report to the UN CRC.(4)
Deputy Ombudsman for Children’s Rights, Office of the Protector of Citizens	Monitor and conduct research on the situation of children’s rights in Serbia, including producing reports on child begging, promote legal prohibition of corporal punishment and inclusive education of children, and manage the drafting of a comprehensive law on children’s rights for Parliamentary approval.(22, 25, 29)

During the reporting period, the Center for Human Trafficking Victims’ Protection was not able to establish its emergency shelter for victims of human trafficking because the shelter’s potential physical location was the subject of litigation.(9) However, the Government offered a new location for the emergency shelter known as the Urgent Reception Center. NGOs raised concerns that the Center for Human Trafficking Victims’ Protection lacked procedures for assisting child trafficking victims.(28) Criminal law enforcement agencies in Serbia took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, 250 inspectors in the Serbian Labor Inspectorate were authorized to inspect the formal sector, including for child labor violations.(13) If inspectors discovered unregistered businesses, they might have penalized them for not being registered.(25) The Inspectorate conducted approximately 30,000 labor inspections. The Ministry of Labor, Employment and Social Policy reports no child labor violations.(25) Research indicates that the Government reported no data on children under age 15 working in the formal sector, including in agriculture.

According to the reports of the Confederation of Autonomous Trade Unions of Serbia, the Labor Inspectorate is sometimes denied the right to enter a workspace to conduct inspections in new private enterprises.(30) Additionally, there has been a decline in the number of inspections in agriculture. Inspectors generally lacked specialized training and the necessary equipment, such as computers and vehicles, to facilitate adequate enforcement of the labor laws prohibiting child labor.(8, 12, 13)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2013, the Government identified 76 victims of human trafficking, 30 of whom were under age 18, and 16 individuals who were at risk of being trafficked.(9, 28) Approximately half of the underage children were trafficked for sexual exploitation, while the remainder of the children were trafficked for labor or forced marriage.(13, 14)

The Government charged 63 individuals for committing crimes such as trafficking for sexual exploitation, criminal activity, begging, forced marriage, and commercial sexual exploitation.(28)

Children found in forced begging are often penalized for petty offenses instead of being treated as victims of trafficking.(1)

The Anti-Trafficking Coordinator participated in numerous conferences, workshops, and international meetings that addressed different aspects of human trafficking and victim protection, including in a regional seminar, “Capacity Building for Combating Human Trafficking for the Purpose of Labor Exploitation,” where he presented the country’s mechanism for fighting against trafficking for labor exploitation.(28)

During the reporting period, the Government, along with NGOs and international organizations, continued to train various government officials on how to recognize, investigate, and prosecute trafficking, as well as how to assist victims properly.(4, 19, 28)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Although the Government of Serbia has established mechanisms to coordinate anti-trafficking efforts, research found no evidence of a coordinating mechanism to combat child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6). While the Council for Children’s Rights exists to coordinate children’s issues across the Government, it does not include the coordination of all child labor issues.

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Council for Combating Trafficking in Human Beings (Council)	Set government policies on anti-trafficking. Includes the Ministers from the Ministries of Interior; Finance; Labor; Employment and Social Policy; Health; Justice; and Education. Chaired by the Minister of Interior.(27)
Anti-Trafficking Coordinator	Implement the policies of the Council and coordinate day-to-day anti-trafficking efforts among various government agencies; cooperates with local NGOs. Appointed by the Minister of Interior.(28)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Serbia has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Strategy for Improvement of the Status of Roma in the Republic of Serbia*	Aims to improve the status of Roma in housing, education, employment, and health, as well as to include representatives of Roma communities in the process of policy implementation. Resulted from signing the Declaration of the Decade of Roma Inclusion (2005–2015) in 2005.(31)
Strategy for Combating Trafficking in Human Beings 2006 and the National Plan of Action to Combat Trafficking in Human Beings (2009–2011)	Aims to address the problem of trafficking in human beings in the areas of institutional framework, prevention, assistance, protection, and re-integration of victims; international cooperation; and monitoring and evaluation of mechanisms to combat human trafficking. Currently active until new Strategy is adopted.(27)
Special Protocol on the Treatment of Trafficking Victims by Judicial Authorities	Aims to provide judicial officials with clear guidance to facilitate adequate treatment of trafficking victims.(32)
National Plan of Action for Children and General Protocol on Child Protection from Abuse and Neglect (2005–2015)*	Establishes policies to protect children from abuse, neglect, exploitation, and violence. Associated protocols include the General Protocol on Child Protection from Abuse and Neglect (2005–2015); the Special Protocol on Behavior of Law Enforcement Officers in Protecting Juvenile Persons from Abuse and Neglect; and the Special Protocol on Protection of Children Accommodated in Social Care Institutions.(22, 26)

*The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

During the reporting period, the Government developed several policies that need to be either finalized or adopted. The Government completed a draft of the new National Strategy for Preventing and Combating Trafficking in Persons for 2014–2020 (National Strategy) and its accompanying Action Plan for 2014–2015 (Action Plan), but they have not yet been adopted by the National Assembly.(27, 28) Instead of developing two separate strategies, the new National Strategy and Action Plan on Trafficking will incorporate policy positions from the previously proposed National Strategy to Prevent and Protect Children from Trafficking and Exploitation for Pornography and Prostitution (2012–2016).(9)

Although the Government adopted the Decade of Roma Inclusion, Roma families continued to be forcibly evicted from their homes or settlements for redevelopment projects without receiving alternative housing, leaving some Roma families homeless.(33-36) This situation increases the vulnerability of children in such families to involvement in the worst forms of child labor.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Serbia funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
The Child Allowance Program*‡	Government cash benefits program for poor families, conditional on school enrollment for children age 7 or older. Provides a regular allowance of $30 and $39 to single parents with children.(22, 37, 38)
Assistance to Roma Children in Education*‡	Ministry of Education program to encourage Roma children to attend school regularly and to provide training to help them learn the Serbian language to better integrate into the school environment.(17)
Programs under Social Security Law*‡	Program that provides a range of social services, including assistance to trafficking victims.(5) Includes 140 social centers to maintain 24-hour duty shifts in order to protect children from abuse and neglect.(9)
Anti-trafficking efforts‡	$155,000 project funded by the Government, European Union, and Germany to assist the Anti-Trafficking Coordinator and several NGOs in creating anti-trafficking teams in seven locations to raise awareness of trafficking, create prevention programs, and assist in identifying victims of trafficking.(13, 28) Anticipates extending its activities to 10 additional cities over the next 2 years, with funding of $180,000 provided by external actors.(13) Additional efforts include a government program that provides maintenance of an anti-trafficking Web site and publicizing Serbia's anti-trafficking hotline.(4, 19) Government program that grants foreign and domestic trafficking victims free access to social and medical care, and provides them with witness and victim protection services.(5, 13, 19, 28, 39)
Shelters for victims of trafficking	Government-run shelter for trafficking victims. In 2013, organized a workshop, providing its own educational and training materials to local NGOs and the police to inform them about the Center for Social Work's role in victim protection and to share information on how to conduct planning sessions with victims of trafficking.(28)

*The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Serbia.

Although the Government of Serbia funded and participated in several social programs, these programs do not directly address the social inclusion of Roma children, the problems of forced begging, or the issue of children working on the street.

Individuals at risk of statelessness, including Roma parents and their children, lacked required documentation, such as birth registration, which restricts their access to basic social services like health and education.(10, 31) Complicated administrative procedures, language barriers, and prejudice against minorities, including Roma communities, discourage minorities from initiating the registration process and accessing social services. While a technical working group exists to streamline complex registration procedures for undocumented Roma, including the registration of children whose parents are not registered, training is still needed for the judges, registrars, and social workers to implement the revised procedures properly.(10, 40) This inability to access social services increases vulnerability of Roma children to the worst forms of child labor.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Serbia (Table 9).

- U.S. Department of Labor. Roundtable on the worst forms of child labor. Travel notes. Washington, DC; April 8, 2014.

In 2013, Seychelles made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Attorney General's office has established a committee to bring Seychelles' national laws into harmony with ILO Convention 182 on the worst forms of child labor. The Government engaged in awareness-raising programs focused on the commercial sexual exploitation of children. It also continued implementing the Juvenile Project of Child Rehabilitation, which provides services for vulnerable children, targeting school drop-outs and victims of the worst forms of child labor. However, though evidence of other worst forms of child labor is limited, children in Seychelles continue to engage in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation. The Government has not established a minimum age for all hazardous work nor has it developed a comprehensive list of hazardous work activities prohibited for children. The Government has not taken sufficient action to identify victims of child trafficking nor to protect children from commercial sexual exploitation associated with tourism.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Seychelles are engaged in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation.(1-10) However, information about other worst forms of child labor is limited. Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Seychelles. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		104.5

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2011, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2014.(11)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis, 2014.(12)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of human trafficking* (1, 2, 7-10, 13)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Children in Seychelles, predominantly girls, are induced into commercial sexual exploitation by peers, family members, and pimps.(2, 8, 9) Foreign tourists and migrant workers are believed to contribute to the demand for commercial sex in Seychelles.(8, 9) Seychellois children are exploited in commercial sex in nightclubs, bars, guest houses, hotels, brothels, and on the street.(8) According to NGOs, drug addicts under age 18 are among those at risk of entering commercial sexual exploitation.(2, 8, 9)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Seychelles has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Constitution (14)

Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Constitution (14)

* No conscription or no standing military.

Article 31(b) of the Constitution of the Republic of Seychelles stipulates that the minimum age for dangerous, harmful, and unhealthy work should be higher than the minimum age for work of 15 years, though it does not specify an age.(14) Article 22(4) of Seychelles’ Conditions of Employment Regulations allows children ages 15 to 17 to work in the restaurant, tourism, or entertainment industries and at night with the written approval of a “competent officer,” though a definition for “competent officer” is not provided in the legislation.(18)

Seychelles’ laws do not protect boys from being procured or offered for prostitution.(4, 15) Further, the law does not prohibit the use of children of either sex, for example, by a client, for commercial sexual exploitation.(19, 20)

Research did not uncover whether Seychelles has established laws to protect children from involvement in illicit activities, including drug trafficking.

The Attorney General’s office has established a committee to bring Seychelles’ national laws into harmony with ILO Convention 182 on the worst forms of child labor; the committee is working on draft legislation.(19, 20) Legal revisions are expected to set the minimum age for hazardous work at 18 and develop a list of hazardous occupations prohibited for children.(19, 21)

In Seychelles, there is no conscription into military services. Children under 18 may be voluntarily recruited with parental consent, but no minimum age appears to be specified in the law.(17)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Employment and Human Resources	Enforce child labor laws.(8, 22)
Seychelles' Police	Enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor.(23)

Research found no evidence that law enforcement agencies in Seychelles took actions to combat child labor.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, the Ministry of Employment and Human Resources employed six labor inspectors.(24) However, the number and results of labor inspections conducted last year are unknown. During 2013, Ministry of Labor inspectors conducted regular checks to monitor school attendance and manage truancy.(10)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2013, according to reports, the Government did not take legal action against those who exploited children for commercial sex.(9)

Research did not find evidence that the Government collects or makes publicly available data on the number of investigations and prosecutions related to commercial sexual exploitation and trafficking of children.(2, 9, 22)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address the commercial sexual exploitation of children (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Anti-Trafficking Committee (NATC)	Coordinate counter trafficking in persons efforts. Composed of representatives from the police force, the Attorney General's Office, and the Ministries of Social Development, Foreign Affairs, and Home Affairs.(9)
Department of Social Development (DSD) Task Forces	Under the Ministry of Social Development and Culture, lead the implementation of policies against child prostitution.(2) Has established 25 district task forces to address social problems, including child prostitution, at the local level. Composed of social workers, police, community nurses, youth workers, school counselors, NGOs, and other civil society groups.(25)

In 2013, not all DSD task forces remained active.(23)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Seychelles has established policies related to the commercial sexual exploitation of children (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Social Renaissance Plan of Action (2012-16)	Establishes a 5-year roadmap in the areas of education, health, employment, human resource development, social affairs, community development, and security.(5) Includes provisions to decrease violations of children's rights, bolster child protection, and enhance services to victims of commercial sexual exploitation, including child victims.(5) Implemented and monitored by Ministries of Home Affairs; Health; Community Development; and Education, Employment and Human Resources, among other agencies.(2)

* The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Policy was launched during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Seychelles funded programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing the commercial sexual exploitation of children (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children awareness raising‡	Government program that implements awareness-raising activities aimed at youth. Focuses on the dangers of commercial sexual exploitation of children.(9)

Provides a package of services, including education and psychological care. Target population may include children who are victims of the worst forms of child labor.(19)
Transportation subsidy*‡	Government-funded program that subsidizes bus fares to school for students in need who live more than three kilometers from school buildings.(26)
National Early Childhood Care and Education Trust Fund *‡	Government-administered trust fund to promote the healthy development of children.(2) Funded several projects during the reporting period, including the purchase of educational materials and playground equipment and the training of early childcare providers.(2)
Technical and Vocational Education and Training (TVET) Program*‡	Government-implemented training program for secondary school students 16 years of age and older who have difficulty with traditional school curricula. Aims to deter students from dropping out of school.(19) Program enrollment increased in 2013.(20)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Seychelles.

Despite these efforts, the Government lacks mechanisms to adequately identify child trafficking victims and provide them with protection and rehabilitation.(9, 19) Further, the Government has not taken specific actions to protect children from commercial sexual exploitation associated with tourism.(9, 19)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Sierra Leone

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2013, Sierra Leone made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government launched the Agenda for Prosperity, which includes strategies to address child labor; released data from the National Child Labor Survey (2010–2011); and participated in social programs to address child labor and child trafficking. However, children in Sierra Leone continue to engage in child labor in agriculture and in the worst forms of child labor in mining. Sierra Leone lacks a law prohibiting the use of children in illicit activities and there is limited funding for enforcement efforts or social programs.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Sierra Leone are engaged in child labor in agriculture and in the worst forms of child labor in mining. According to the preliminary findings of a National Child Labor Survey (2010-2011) conducted by Statistics Sierra Leone with support from the ILO, 45.9 percent of all children ages 5 to 17 years were engaged in child labor.⁽¹⁾ Some 22.0 percent of children ages 5 to 17 years were identified as being engaged in hazardous work.^(1, 2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Sierra Leone.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	34.7 (579,851)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	73.8

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

The majority of children are trafficked from rural provinces or refugee communities to urban and mining areas.(10, 17) Reports suggest that children from Nigeria, The Gambia, Côte d’Ivoire, and Guinea may be trafficked to Sierra Leone for begging, domestic service and for commercial sexual exploitation.(10, 17) Children have been trafficked internally, especially from rural to urban areas and to diamond-mining areas for sexual exploitation and other labor.(9, 17)

In 2013, the Appeals Chamber of the Special Court for Sierra Leone (SCSL) upheld the conviction of former Liberian President Charles Taylor for a range of crimes under international law, including recruiting children under the age of 15 to participate in armed conflict.(18-20)

While the Government of Sierra Leone has not ratified the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons, the Cabinet approved its accession and recommended that Parliament ratify it in February 2013.(28)

Research did not uncover laws prohibiting the use of children in illicit activities.

Labor laws prescribe fines that may neither reflect the present value of Sierra Leone's currency nor be commensurate with the severity of the crimes. For example, penalties for violations of the Employers and Employed Act are liable to a fine of 50 pounds or to imprisonment of six months.(9, 22)

Act 57 of the Employers and Employed Act permits the father or the guardian of a child between the ages of 12 and 14 to serve as an apprentice, including in a trade or skill or in domestic service.(2, 22) This provision is not in line with ILO C. 138, which requires apprentices to be at least 14 years of age.(16)

According to the Basic Education Act, the Government has established the right to free primary education. (10, 27) However, in practice, schools charge fees to pay for uniforms, books, and salaries for unregistered teachers.(10, 21, 24, 29) Some children work part-time in order to earn money for these school fees.(10, 27, 29, 30) Other barriers to education include poor sanitation, unsafe school conditions, and travel costs to and from school.(9, 31)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Social Welfare, Gender and Children's Affairs (MSWGCA)—Child Protection Unit	Enforce child labor law and monitor compliance with child labor regulations.(2, 9)
Ministry of Labor and Employment—Child Labor Unit (CLU)	Supervise implementation of ILO C. 138 and 182; and formulate, implement, and monitor compliance with child labor regulations.(2, 16)
Ministry of Labor and Employment—Labor Officers	Enforce child labor provisions in the Child Rights Act. Handle all labor issues in the district and initial investigations.(13)
District Councils	Enforce child labor laws in the informal sector.(9, 13)
Village Child Welfare Committees	Promote awareness on child rights. Report child welfare concerns to village and government officials who are responsible for children's issues. Provide recommendations and instructions on the maintenance and support of specific village children. Address complaints and concerns of adults or children in the village.(13, 21)
Ministry of Mineral Resources	Enforce regulations against the use of child labor in mining and monitor the field. Has the authority to suspend licenses of mining operators who engage in child labor.(2, 13, 17)

Organization/Agency	Role
Sierra Leone Police— Family Support Unit (FSU)	Investigate and prosecute various crimes, including child trafficking and child labor.(2, 13) Monitor and compile data on trafficking and crimes committed against children.(28)
Transnational Organized Crime Unit (TOCU)	Provide statistics and information on cases of trafficking in persons (TIP). Responsible for enforcing human trafficking cases.(28)
Ministry of Social Welfare— National TIP Secretariat	Develop a digitized database to track all TIP cases in Sierra Leone.(28) During the reporting period, the Secretariat agreed to collect TIP data from all ministries and NGOs, which includes victim, perpetrator, investigation, court case, and victim services. In February 2014, the Secretariat finalized data questionnaires that were given to relevant ministries, law enforcement posts, border posts, and service providers.(28)

Criminal law enforcement agencies in Sierra Leone took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, law enforcement agencies in Sierra Leone took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms. The CLU employs three part-time staff; however, reports indicate it lacks resources to establish branch offices to monitor child labor in remote areas of the country.(2) Research did not identify a budget for the CLU. The Ministry of Labor employs seven labor inspectors, four labor officers, and seven factory inspectors.(2) The Ministry created four new factory inspector positions and five new labor officer positions during the reporting period. With the exception of three inspectors, this staff is located in the capital and is responsible for enforcing labor laws in the formal sector.(2) Child labor is only one part of the job for these new Ministry hires. Labor inspectors lacked resources, including transportation and equipment, to conduct inspections. No child labor inspections were conducted, and no citations were issued during the reporting period.(2)

In April 2013, police officers, representatives from various ministries, including the Ministry of Labor, and factory inspectors, were trained in labor inspection and child labor monitoring. A standard checklist was developed, which includes items related to child labor.(2, 10, 11) The Government has a mechanism to refer cases to police and other government agencies.(2) During the reporting period, hundreds of village child welfare committees were set up in each of Sierra Leone's 149 chiefdoms.(2)

According to the Mines and Minerals Act, the Minister, after consultation with the Minerals

Advisory Board, can revoke licenses from license holders who are found to be using child labor.(23) However, information was not available on whether the Government has been enforcing this law.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2013, the newly appointed FSU director included proactive child labor investigations as part of the Unit's work plan.(2) However, no law enforcement officers were dedicated to proactive investigations into cases of child forced labor, trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and use of children in illicit activities; no proactive investigations took place during the reporting period.(2) In 2013, police investigated 24 cases of child trafficking nationwide and 163 cases of "child cruelty," which can include child labor-related offenses.(2, 28) Charges were filed in two of those cases, one was brought to court, and 10 remain under investigation.(28) Generally, reported complaints are referred to the FSU for action. The Government established a complaint line for issues related to child protection, but it is not targeted toward child labor.(2) The Government prosecuted cases under the Anti-Trafficking and Sexual Offenses Act during the reporting period, but no information was available on these cases.(2, 17)

The Sierra Leone Police had no funding for investigating child labor issues, and reports indicate a lack of funding necessary for sufficient office facilities, transportation, and fuel.(2, 10)

During the reporting period, the Government finalized plans to establish the Freedom Line, a 24-hour hotline staffed by the Sierra Leone Police Communications Unit, and to train its staff on how to refer cases to police, welfare, and judicial responders.(28)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Trafficking in Persons (TIP) Task Force	Coordinate the needs and requirements of agencies involved in providing shelter and services for victims, gather some data on reported trafficking cases, and meet regularly to develop policy and address the issue of child trafficking.(2, 6, 32) Chaired by the Ministry of Social Welfare, Gender, and Children's Affairs, it includes the Ministries of Justice, Labor, Education, Internal Affairs, Information, Health, Foreign Affairs, Tourism, Local Government, Youth, and Sierra Leone Police.(28) Drafted guidelines in 2013 for identifying trafficking in persons and a trafficking action plan. During the reporting period, Task Force members raised awareness on TIP, collaborated with other government agencies on several cases, and coordinated with local government officials outside Freetown.(28)
National Technical Steering Committee on Child Labor	Meet on an ad-hoc basis to discuss major issues related to child labor as they arise.(2, 16)

Though the Ministry of Social Welfare submitted plans and a budget to establish the inter-agency National Commission for Children to coordinate and exchange information, as mandated by the Child Rights Act, the Commission has yet to be established or funded. During the fourth quarter of 2013, the Ministry of Social Welfare received a budget of approximately $4,650 for human trafficking-related activities.(2, 33)

The National Technical Steering Committee on Child Labor did not meet during the reporting period.(2)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Sierra Leone has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Education Sector Plan (2007–2015)*	Implements education law and includes specific objectives to reduce child labor and school absenteeism, including making communities aware of alternatives to child labor and enforcement of labor rights and child labor laws.(34, 35)
Agenda for Prosperity†	Addresses child labor and the worst forms of child labor through expanded social welfare programs, establishment of conditional cash transfers, improved enforcement, and better education.(2, 36)
Transitional Joint Vision For Sierra Leone of the United Nations Family (2013–2014) *†	Includes strategies to increase school enrolment for vulnerable children and provide youth employment.(37)

* The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Policy was launched during the reporting period.

The Agenda for Prosperity was launched during the reporting period. It is the country's third Poverty Reduction Strategy Paper. The Agenda for Prosperity is a six-year development agenda, which includes strategies to combat child labor through the provision of social protection and education opportunities.(2, 36, 38, 39) Research did not find information on the implementation of the Primary Education Policy of 2001.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Sierra Leone participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Program to combat the recruitment of child soldiers and child soldier prevention programs in local schools†	Roméo Dallaire Child Soldiers Initiative-funded, 5-year program that provides child protection training for the police and army. Implements an education program, run by former child soldiers, in 45 schools across five districts of Sierra Leone to teach children about their legal rights, child soldiering and tactics used to recruit children.(40). The program will make child rights training mandatory for the local police and armed forces and outlines standards on how troops must engage with children in combat.(40) During the reporting period, the Government participated in this program, which trained troops on child soldier prevention strategies and educated children on child soldiering.(40) While child soldiering in Sierra Leone is no longer a problem, the project aims to prevent future child labor recruitment, given its prevalence during the civil war.(28, 40)
Youth Empowerment and Employment Program*	$600,000 UNDP-funded, 3-year program launched in 2011 that strengthens national policy, strategy, and coordination for youth employment and seeks to provide basic support services for youth in Sierra Leone, including business development and career advice and guidance.(41)
Youth-to-Youth Fund	German Federal Ministry for Economic Cooperation and Development-funded program implemented in partnership with ILO, UNIDO, and Youth Employment Network. Provides youth with financing for small-scale projects aimed at creating employment for young people through entrepreneurship.(42)
Program to combat child trafficking and forced child labor in Sierra Leone	U.S.-donor funded project implemented by World Hope International. Rescues and restores trafficking victims in a Trafficking in Persons Recovery Center and combats trafficking through awareness and education at the community level.(43) In September 2013, the project, with the National TIP Task Force and the Ministry of Social Welfare, Social Welfare Ministry, trained law enforcement officials and social workers in Freetown, Makeni, and Bo on protection and identification of trafficking victims.
Shelters	Government program that refers child trafficking victims to private shelters that house child victims of forced labor and trafficking.(13) During the reporting period, shelters provided victims, including child victims of rape, forced prostitution, or forced labor, with physical, psychological, and spiritual care and supported the prosecution of the trafficking perpetrators.(28)
Centers for street children	Government program that provides psychological support, medical care, vocational training, and help in locating their families.(13)
Tackling Child Labor through Education (TACKLE) project	Jointly launched by the European Commission and the ILO to combat child labor through education in 12 African and the Caribbean countries and the Pacific group of states (ACP).(44, 45) Aims to strengthen institutional capacity to formulate and implement child labor strategies and conduct research and increase the knowledge base on child labor.(45) During the reporting period, trained factory inspectors and law enforcement officials to identify child labor violations. Government also drafted a National Action Plan for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor as part of the project.(9)
Eliminating the Worst Forms of Child Labor in West Africa and Strengthening Sub-Regional Cooperation through ECOWAS I & II	USDOL-funded regional projects that supported ECOWAS to strengthen its role in combating the worst forms of child labor in the West Africa sub-region by providing policy and capacity building support for all ECOWAS states.(46, 47)
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues Project	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016 established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010. Aims to build the capacity of the national Government and develop strategic policies to eliminate child labor. In April and September 2013, conducted child labor training for labor inspectors and developed a Child Labor Action Plan.(16)
Disadvantaged Children and Youth Program in Sierra Leone	EU and Irish Aid-funded project implemented by GOAL, a humanitarian organization. Works to reduce child labor, child sex trafficking, and social exclusion of children by providing 2,000 children in Freetown with alternatives to child labor through expanded educational opportunities, family reunification, small business training, and grants for caregivers.(2, 48)
National Child Labor Survey	Government released data from the 2010–2011 report conducted by Statistics Sierra Leone and the ILO.(2)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

Although Sierra Leone has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem.(2)

Solomon Islands

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

In 2013, Solomon Islands made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. On April 22, 2013, the Government ratified ILO C. 138. During the reporting period, the Government certified an anti-human trafficking law, but it will not take effect until it has been gazetted. Education is still not compulsory, and laws do not adequately protect all children from hazardous work and commercial sexual exploitation. In addition, the Government has not established a body to coordinate efforts to combat child labor, and resources for enforcement are lacking. Children in Solomon Islands continue to engage in the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation, particularly in association with the fishing and logging industries.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Some children in Solomon Islands are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, primarily commercial sexual exploitation.(1, 2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Solomon Islands. Data on some of these key indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	Unavailable

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Working in plantations, activities unknown* (5)
Services	Domestic service, including in logging camps and on fishing boats* (2, 6, 7)

	Used in the production of pornography* (6, 7)
	Forced domestic service, including in logging camps and on fishing boats* (2, 6, 7)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Both boys and girls are engaged in commercial sexual exploitation associated with the logging, tourism, and fishing industries in areas near logging camps, on fishing boats, and in the capital city of Honiara.(1, 2, 6, 9) In particular, girls are trafficked within Solomon Islands and sent to logging camps for the purpose of commercial sexual exploitation.(2) There are reports that some children are brought by their parents to foreign and local fishing ships for commercial sexual exploitation with fishermen.(2, 9) It also has been reported that parents offer their minor children in marriage to loggers and miners; subsequently, the children may be forced into domestic service or commercial sexual exploitation.(2)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Solomon Islands has ratified some key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3). On April 23, 2013, the Government ratified ILO C. 138, which came into force April 22, 2014.(10)

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The Government has not ratified two conventions relevant to child labor known to occur in Solomon Islands, namely, the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography, and the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

The Labor Act permits children as young as age 12 to work.(11) This is not consistent with international standards, which require a minimum age no lower than 14 for admission to employment. Children under age 15 are prohibited from working in the industrial sector or on ships, and children under age 16 are prohibited from working in underground mines.(11) Further, children between ages 16 and 18 are prohibited from working in mines or on ships without a medical certificate, and are prohibited from working at night without specific written permission from the Commissioner of Labor.(11) Despite these provisions, Solomon Islands does not have a comprehensive law protecting children under age 18 from hazardous work, or a comprehensive list of hazardous occupations and activities from which children are prohibited.(1) In addition, according to the Commissioner of Labor, the existing penalties and fines for employing children in hazardous conditions are too insignificant to serve as deterrents.(1)

Solomon Islands

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

While forced labor is prohibited, the law does not establish any penalty for a forced labor conviction.⁽⁷⁾ The Immigration Act, passed in 2012, prohibits and punishes all forms of trafficking in persons and provides specific legal protections against the trafficking of children.⁽¹³⁾ During the reporting period, the law was certified, but it will not take effect until it has been gazetted.^(15, 16) No implementing regulations accompany the legislation.^(1, 2, 13) Laws do not specifically prohibit the use of children in illicit activities, such as drug trafficking.^(1, 14) Prostitution laws do not cover boys between the ages of 15 and 18 and, therefore, leave them without legal protection.^(7, 14)

Education in Solomon Islands is not compulsory.⁽¹⁷⁾ Although the Government has a policy of free basic education, research found no evidence that this right is enshrined in law. In 2013, the Government continued to implement the Free Fee Basic Education (FFBE) Policy, which covers the basic costs to operate schools, but permits school administrators to request additional contributions from families such as cash, labor, and fundraising on behalf of the school.^(7, 8, 18, 19) This policy may not be sufficient to cover the true cost of attendance at all schools. Additional school fees, uniform costs, book fees, and transportation needs may still prevent some children, particularly girls, from attending school.^(7, 16, 18, 19)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Commerce, Industry, Labor, and Immigration (MOCILI)	Enforce child labor laws. The Department of Immigration within MOCILI is the lead agency on issues of human trafficking. ^(1, 15)
Royal Solomon Islands Police	Enforce criminal laws against the worst forms of child labor. ⁽⁷⁾ Work in partnership with the Australian-led Regional Assistance Mission to Solomon Islands on human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation cases. ⁽¹⁾

Criminal law enforcement agencies in Solomon Islands took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms. However, research found no evidence that labor law enforcement agencies took such actions. Sources, including the Government, note that inadequate capacity and resources have prevented meaningful enforcement of the laws.^(7, 15, 18)

Labor Law Enforcement

The Government reported that MOCILI lacks the capacity to enforce child labor laws.^(7, 15) Research did not uncover the number of inspectors responsible for child labor law enforcement, nor the level of funding allocated for this purpose. MOCILI does not collect data on the number of inspections, violations found, or penalties assessed with regard to child labor.⁽⁷⁾

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research found no data on the number of investigators responsible for the enforcement of criminal laws against the 34 worst forms of child labor, nor on the number of investigations, prosecutions, or convictions.⁽⁷⁾ There were conflicting reports on the number of trafficking cases identified, and research did not determine whether any of these cases involved children.⁽¹⁵⁾ In 2013, with the support of the American Bar Association Rule of Law Initiative, the Department of Immigration held an interagency training on human trafficking in Solomon Islands.⁽¹⁵⁾

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Advisory Committee on Children	Advise the Cabinet on issues affecting children, coordinate the implementation of the UN CRC, and develop advocacy materials to promote the rights of children.(20)
Trafficking in Persons Advisory Committee	Ad-hoc committee created by the Government in 2012. Members include MOCILI and NGO representatives.(15)

Research found no evidence of a body to coordinate overall child labor efforts. In 2013, TIPAC met three times.(15) Research found no information as to whether the National Advisory Council was active.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Solomon Islands has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Children's Policy/National Action Plan for 2010-2015	Commits the Government to substantially improving services and the legal framework for child protection over a 5-year period.(20) Objectives of the policy include ratifying the UN CRC Optional Protocols, raising the minimum age for employment to 18, achieving universal primary education, registering all births by 2015, and creating a mechanism for the coordination and enforcement of child protection laws and policies.(20) During the reporting period, the Government did not ratify the UN CRC Optional Protocols or raise the minimum age for work.
Free Fee Basic Education (FFBE) Policy	Aims to increase educational access by subsidizing school fees for grades one through nine.(18) The policy covers the operational costs for children to attend school, but allows for school management to request additional contributions from families such as cash, labor, and fundraising on behalf of the school.(7, 8, 18, 19, 21) In 2013, the Government continued to implement FFBE.(16)

The National Plan does not specify relevant agencies in its intended coordination mechanism, and it is unclear whether relevant agencies are participating in this coordinating mechanism for enforcement.(20) The FFBE may not sufficiently cover all costs for schools, depending on their location; additional school fees, uniform costs, book fees, and transportation needs may still prevent some children from attending school.(18, 19) Attendance and dropout rates indicate that girls in Solomon Islands are less likely than boys to finish school.(18, 22)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence of programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Solomon Islands (Table 8).

Table 8. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested

In 2013, Somalia made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Federal Government of Somalia (FGS) launched a Go-2-School Initiative with UNICEF support with a goal of enrolling one million children in school during the next 3 years. In addition, the Somalia National Army (SNA) made efforts to prevent recruitment and use of underage personnel, including through screening of soldiers before paying their salaries. The FGS and SNA also promulgated a Code of Conduct that, among other features, expressly prohibited recruitment of personnel below eighteen years of age. However, children in Somalia continue to engage in the worst forms of child labor as child soldiers and in child labor in agriculture. The terrorist organization Al-Shabaab remained the main perpetrator of the abduction and use of child soldiers in Somalia. The SNA also continued to use child soldiers. There are reports that the Ahlu Sunnah Wal Jama'a (ASWJ) militia, which to date has refused to become part of the SNA, also used child soldiers. Somalia continued to lack many elements necessary to effectively address the worst forms of child labor, including an established justice sector, policies, and programs.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Somalia are engaged in the worst forms of child labor as child soldiers and in child labor in agriculture. (1-12) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Somalia. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Work in agriculture, including threshing grain* and herding livestock* (1-5)
Industry	Construction, activities unknown, and breaking rocks* (1, 3, 4, 6)
Services	Street work, including begging, portering, shining shoes, washing cars, conducting minibuses, and selling cigarettes, khat (a legal amphetamine-like stimulant), sweets, and toothbrushes (1, 4-7)
	Domestic service (1, 4-6)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Use by armed groups as child soldiers, sometimes as a result of forced recruitment, including to plant explosive devices, operate checkpoints, serve as human shields and suicide bombers, conduct assassinations, transport weapons, and provide intelligence and logistical support (1, 3, 6-12)
	Forced labor in domestic service, agriculture, livestock herding,* rock breaking for gravel,* and construction work* sometimes as a result of human trafficking (7-9, 12)
	Use in piracy (8, 15)
	Commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3, 8, 16)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

Somolia

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

The terrorist organization Al-Shabaab engages in the widespread and systematic conscription and recruitment of children for armed groups and is the main perpetrator of the use of child soldiers in Somalia.(11, 17) Boys as young as age 8 are bribed or forcibly taken from their homes, schools, and the streets to serve as soldiers. Armed groups recruit girls through bribery or force for sexual servitude and for domestic labor.(1, 3, 8, 9) There are reports that the Ahlu Sunnah Wal Jama'a (ASWJ) militia, which to date has not yet integrated into the Somali National Army (SNA), recruited children.(11, 17) There are also reports that Somalia's numerous clan and other militias use child soldiers.(8, 11, 17) The Federal Government of Somalia (FGS) condemns the use of child soldiers. However, there were reports of children associated with the SNA during 2013.(1, 11, 17) Children also were involved in the Somaliland forces in 2013.(17)

In Somalia, protracted violence has led to the breakdown of all basic services, including public education.(18-20) In addition, droughts, floods, and decades of violence have led to the displacement of over 1.5 million Somalis. These constraints, as well as the forced recruitment of children from schools by non-state terrorist and militia groups, have limited children's access to education, as schools are either unavailable or unsafe.(9, 18, 20-23) The cost of tuition and the lack of educational infrastructure also hinder children's access to school.(19, 20, 24)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Somalia has ratified one key international convention concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

Somalia lacks a coherent central legal system.(18, 25, 26) The FGS does not have effective control over some parts of the country, and most essential governance functions were provided by regional administrations, including the self-declared Republic of Somaliland in the northwest and the semi-autonomous region of Puntland in the northeast.(1, 8, 9, 23, 25, 27) Only the laws of the internationally recognized FGS are discussed in this section. The FGS ratified ILO C. 182 in March of 2013, but it has not ratified the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict; the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography; or the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.(28)

The FGS has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Labor Code (29)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	16, 18	Labor Code (29)
List of Hazardous Occupations Prohibited for Children	No
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Provisional Constitution (30)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		1962 Penal Code (31)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Provisional Constitution (30)
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	18	Provisional Constitution (30)
Compulsory Education Age	No
Free Public Education	Yes		Provisional Constitution (30)

The FGS did not pass any new laws related to child labor or child soldiers during the reporting period.(7) Furthermore, the Provisional Constitution does not include a minimum age for work or hazardous work, but the pre-1991 Labor Code contains provisions on this issue.(7) For hazardous work the labor code prescribes a range of minimum ages for certain activities. For example, the minimum age for construction is 16, and the minimum age for work underground is 18.(32) In April 2014, Parliament issued a public statement on a commercial contract in which it cited pre-1991 laws, suggesting that the FGS continued to recognize relevant historic legal provisions; however, no official determination has been issued.(29) Prohibition of the sexual exploitation of children is included in the 1962 Penal Code; however, the Penal Code requires extensive updating. Many fines in the Code equal less than one U.S. dollar today.(7, 33) It appears that under Article 405 of the Penal Code children involved in prostitution would not be protected from criminal charges for prostitution under Somali law.(31) The FGS did appoint a Minister of Labor and Social Affairs and the Parliament is currently considering a draft labor law. Despite the Provisional Constitution calling for free education to the secondary level, a universal free education system in Somalia is not in place.(7, 30) The FGS did open two public schools in Mogadishu, and the regional governments of Puntland and Somaliland operated other public schools.(7, 29)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The FGS has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministries of Labor and Social Affairs, Gender, and Family Affairs	Enforce laws related to the worst forms of child labor.(1)
Somali National Police	Investigate and enforce laws related to the worst forms of child labor, including forced labor, trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and the use of children in illicit activities.(7)

Research found no evidence that law enforcement agencies in Somalia took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, the FGS did not employ any inspectors to enforce child labor laws and conducted no inspections or investigations of reported violations of child labor laws.(7)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2013, no child labor related arrests or convictions were made. The Somali National Police Force, which remains understaffed and undertrained, lacks capacity to investigate or enforce laws such as the prohibition of forced labor and protection from armed conflict.(7)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that the FGS established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms. The FGS does have two child soldier military focal points who communicate with UNICEF about claims of children present in military barracks and plans for four more positions to be added in more remote regions.(1, 29) The FGS has also formed a Children Associated with Armed Conflict (CAAC) Working Group, which

Somolia

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

met regularly in conjunction with the United Nations Assistance Mission to Somalia (UNSOM) and UNICEF during the year.(17, 29) The Working Group was first established in 2012 when UNICEF assisted the FGS in drafting the FGS' two Child Soldier Protection Plans in July and August 2012 respectively.(29)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The FGS has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Child Soldier Action Plan	Addresses the recruitment and use of child soldiers by the Somali National Army (SNA).(1, 34)
Action Plan to End the Killing and Maiming of Children in Contravention of International Law	Addresses the killing and maiming of children as a result of conflict in Somalia.(34)
General Order Number One	Prohibits commanders from employing child soldiers, requires training on the protection of children's rights in armed conflict, and authorizes UNICEF to inspect all military camps to verify that child soldiers are not present. Issued by the Chief of Defense Forces.(7)

In 2013, the FGS made some progress on the Child Soldier Action Plan for the national army, including the drafting of Standard Operating Procedures (SOPs) for the reception and handover of children formerly associated with armed forces and armed groups.(7, 35) In February 2014, the Ministers of Defense and National Security signed the SOPs. The SNA also promulgated a Code of Conduct, which, among other provisions, prohibited recruitment of individuals younger than 18 years of age.(35) No additional information was available on the Joint Technical Committee (JTC) responsible for facilitating action plan implementation.(27) The FGS does not have any policies on providing free and compulsory education.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the FGS participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
ILO-IPEC Children in Armed Conflict Program	$238,194 European Commission-funded, 2-year project implemented by ILO-IPEC to prevent child recruitment and reintegrate children associated with armed forces and groups in south central Somalia. Collaborates with UNICEF to focus on the economic reintegration of former child soldiers through vocational and entrepreneurship training and assistance with starting a business or accessing wage employment.(36, 37)
UNICEF Country Program	In cooperation with the Federal Government of Somalia (FGS), aims to equitably increase school enrollment, construct schools, develop curriculum, and train teachers. Also works to prevent the recruitment of children into armed groups and to place former child soldiers into rehabilitation programs.(1, 23) Program includes the construction of a rehabilitation facility solely for children and is expected to accommodate up to 660 children when at full capacity, compared to 100 to 150 children currently.(2)
Go-2-School Initiative*†	FGS program, with the support of UNICEF, that seeks to enroll 1 million children who are not currently in school between 2013 and 2014.(38)
SNA soldiers Pay Screening Plan	Governments of U.S. and Italy-funded program that establishes a screening process whereby soldiers' identity and age are verified before they receive their pay.(7)
Child-At-Risk Program	USAID program that provides services to some children at risk of finding employment in clan militias.(27)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

International donors who pay the stipends of SNA soldiers continued a screening program during the year. Screening teams comprised of African Union officers, local Somali tribal elders, and high-ranking SNA officers verify the identity and age of each soldier before they receive payment.(7) The SNA screened more than 1,000 new troops to identify and remove underage recruits.(1) Current forces undergoing training abroad and domestically underwent vetting by an international team that included senior SNA generals, international military advisors, and a technical monitor.(1, 2, 8, 39) For example, a U.S. civilian contractor and the European Union Training Mission (EUTM) screen recruits that they train inside Somalia to weed out any underage individuals. Vetting also applies to members of a militia receiving stipends under the Gedo pilot project.(35) Other militias outside Mogadishu, such as those associated with ASWJ, have not yet agreed to incorporate themselves into the SNA, but such vetting would apply equally to them should they decide to do so.(35) Research identified no other FGS programs to assist children in other forms of child labor such as agriculture, or in worst forms of child labor such as forced labor.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Somalia (Table 8).

Table 8. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested

In 2013, South Africa made a significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government amended the Basic Conditions of Employment Act to include protections for children working without a contract; approved the third phase of the National Child Labor Action Program; and established guidelines for acceptable household chores. In addition, the Government approved the 2013 Prevention and Combating of Trafficking in Persons Act, which is a comprehensive national anti-trafficking law that includes specific provisions for child trafficking; but the Act has yet to be promulgated and take effect. The Government also trained labor inspectors on child labor issues and maintained programs that assist vulnerable children, including no-fee schools and school feeding programs. Studies also indicate that the Government's Child Support Grant and the Old Age Pension may help reduce child labor. However, children in South Africa continue to engage in child labor in agriculture and domestic service. In addition, Government social programs to address child labor do not match the scope of the problem. Some families are required to pay local school fees, and all families must pay for books, uniforms, and other school-related expenses, which may affect children's access to education. Also, the Government does not publish comprehensive results of child labor enforcement efforts.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in South Africa are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture and domestic service.(1-5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in South Africa. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	Unavailable

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2004, UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2014.(6)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis, 2014.(7)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Use of children in illicit activities, including drug trafficking, home burglaries, and gang-related activity (5, 10)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2, 5, 8-11)
	Domestic service, farming, food service, street vending, and begging, as a result of human trafficking (2, 5, 8-11)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Children in South Africa are trafficked from rural areas to urban areas, including Johannesburg, Cape Town, Durban, and Bloemfontein.(9) South African girls are trafficked for commercial sexual exploitation and domestic service.(9) South African boys are trafficked internally for farm work, food service, begging, and street vending.(8, 9) Reports indicate that orphaned children in South Africa are especially vulnerable to trafficking.(5)

The Government reports that South African girls are more likely than boys to be involved in child labor.(12) However, the Government does not collect comprehensive data on the number of children engaged in the worst forms of child labor.(2, 5, 13, 14) Although birth certificates are required to qualify for services, including education, more than 20 percent of babies are not registered by their first birthday.(2, 15)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

South Africa has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

In 2013, the Government amended the Basic Conditions of Employment Act (BCEA) to cover all forms of work. Previously, the BCEA only covered formal employment relationships.(1, 27) This change will provide protection to children working without a contract.(1, 27) The Government also established guidelines for acceptable household chores.(1, 28) In 2013, the Government approved the 2013 Prevention and Combating of Trafficking in Persons Act (PCTPA), which is a comprehensive national anti-trafficking law that includes specific provisions for child trafficking, but the Act has yet to be promulgated and take effect.(1, 5, 29) In June 2013, the Government ratified the ILO Domestic Workers Convention Number 189. Following ratification, the Convention awaits implementation in South Africa.(30)

Although access to free education is mandated by law, school fees vary depending on the municipality and region.(1) The Government implements a no-fee school program that covers the poorest primary schools.(1, 31, 32) According to the Government, 81 percent of schools are “no fee.”(1, 31, 32) The Government also provides some fee waivers to children receiving government grants.(15, 26, 33) The Government provides books, but all families must pay for stationery, uniforms, and other school-related expenses, which may affect children’s access to education.(8, 26, 33, 34)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
South African Department of Labor (SADOL)	Enforce child labor laws.(1, 35) Inspectors identify suspected cases of child labor and human trafficking and forward evidence to South African Police Service (SAPS) officials, who investigate and forward cases to the South African Department of Justice and Constitutional Development (SADODJ) for prosecution.(8, 11) Coordinate a report entitled “State of Child Labor in South Africa.”(34)
Department of Social Development (DSD)	Provide child protection and social services to vulnerable children, including victims of trafficking.(2, 9)
South African Department of Justice and Constitutional Development (SADODJ)	Enforce criminal laws, including child labor laws.(1, 35)
National Prosecuting Authority (NPA)	Prosecute criminal cases, including human trafficking cases.(1)
South African Police Service’s (SAPS) Human Trafficking Desk	Monitor and evaluate efforts to investigate trafficking crimes, train human trafficking investigators, and refer human trafficking cases to provincial SAPS units.(1)
Labor Centers	Serve as field offices for inspectors to investigate child labor violations. Operated by Child Labor Intersectoral Support Groups (CLIGs).(1, 34)

Law enforcement agencies in South Africa took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, South African Department of Labor (SADOL) employed 1,542 labor inspectors and conducted over 101,792 routine inspections to protect vulnerable workers, including child laborers. The compliance level for these inspections was 54 percent.(1) A limited number of sources indicate that labor inspectors do not inspect farms without an invitation due to concerns of entering private property and concern over safety, which may leave children working in agriculture unprotected.(1, 34) SADOL does not have a central unit responsible for delivering training programs for labor inspectors.(1) However, SADOL trained labor inspectors on child labor issues in 2013.(1) The Government

South Africa

allocated over $40 million to SADOL for inspection and enforcement service during the year.(1) In the beginning months of 2013, SADOL publicized a number of child labor cases through a press release to highlight the severity of child labor-related offenses.(36) However, the Government does not make complete statistics publicly available on the number of child labor investigations opened, closed or resolved, or the number of citations and convictions made.(1) Depending on the type of offense, child labor violations are tried in either a criminal or labor court.(11)

When cases involve foreign nationals, inspectors send the cases to the Department of Home Affairs (DHA) before the cases are taken on by the South African Department of Justice and Constitutional Development (SADOJ). Inspectors also refer these cases to social workers to determine if a child worker is in need of care or protection.(1, 37) However, a shortage of social workers may delay this practice. The Department of Social Development (DSD) has acknowledged the shortage of social workers and is working to address the need for more social workers by offering scholarships to students interested in pursuing that field of study.(34, 37)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2013, the National Prosecuting Authority (NPA) trained 150 prosecutors and 60 additional staff on the new trafficking law. During the reporting period, the Government supported the IOM's training of 950 officials on trafficking issues, including legal frameworks, agency roles, and identification criteria.(5) In 2013, the Government had five ongoing cases involving child trafficking. Also, during the reporting period, the Government convicted one child trafficker.(5) However, the Government does not publish comprehensive data on human trafficking cases, prosecutions, or convictions. In addition, investigators lack sufficient training on how to identify human trafficking situations.(10)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Implementation Committee on Child Labor (ICCL)	Monitors and supports advocacy and awareness raising; mainstreaming of child labor into government policies; and the implementation of child labor programs, legislation, and enforcement. (1, 35, 38, 39) Chaired by SADOL; members include representatives from commercial agriculture, trade unions, government agencies, and SAPS.(1) Includes provincial level child labor coordinating structures that fully participate in the Committee's efforts.(4, 38).
Child Labor Intersectoral Support Groups (CLIGs)	Aims to prevent child labor, including in scavenging and trafficking. Established by SADOL, members include multiple Government agencies and are managed by child labor coordinators in each province.(1, 34)
Trafficking in Persons Task Team (TPT)	Coordinates the Government's anti-trafficking efforts. Led by the NPA's Sexual Offenses and Community Affairs Unit and SADOJ's Victim Support Directorate, members include SADOL, DSD, and DHA, as well as other representatives of national law enforcement.(1, 5)

In 2013, ICCL met on a bimonthly basis, and members submitted progress reports on efforts to implement the country's national strategy to eliminate child labor to the executive branch.(1) During the reporting period, members of TPT took lead roles in coordinating agency efforts to comply with the new Trafficking Law.(5)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of South Africa has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Child Labor Action Program for South Africa, Phase III (CLPA)†	Serves as the primary policy instrument to prevent and eliminate child labor in South Africa.(11, 26) Calls for activities across the Government and the promotion of new laws against the worst forms of child labor.(1, 11, 26) Also includes a list of indicators to monitor the Government's efforts against child labor.(26)

Policy	Description
South African Education Action Plan to 2014*	Serves as the first phase of a comprehensive national education plan through 2025. Focuses on addressing 27 education goals, including ensuring that all students stay enrolled in school through age 15.(40)
National Development Plan 2030*	Provides a comprehensive development plan for South Africa, including economic development, education, and social protection.(41)

* The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Policy was launched during the reporting period.

During the reporting period, SADOJ began drafting a new anti-trafficking National Action Plan.(5)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of South Africa funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Child Support Grant‡	Government program that provides monthly direct cash transfer to primary caregivers vulnerable children.(1, 2, 15, 34, 38, 42, 43) Helps alleviate economic pressures and lower the cost of raising a child.(1, 2, 11, 15, 38, 42, 43) Reaches more than 10 million children.(34) Sources have indicated that as a result of the Child Support Grant, recipients may be less likely to send their children away for child labor and are more likely to have positive educational outcomes.(1, 2, 34, 44)
Old Age Pension‡	Government program that provides cash transfers to eligible adults over age 60. Assessments of the Pension's impact indicate that children's school attendance and completion increase and child labor decreases in rural households with male pension recipients, especially for boys in households with male recipients.(1, 43, 45) Studies also indicate a decrease in the total hours worked by children, especially among girls.(1, 43, 45)
Care Dependency Grants and Foster Care Grants*‡	Government program that helps families and children, including those vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, by encouraging children to remain in school and not enter the labor market.(1)
Social Service Program*‡	DSD program that administers social services to vulnerable individuals, including child laborers, based on referrals from social workers.(1, 14, 15, 37)
National School Nutrition Program*‡	Government program that provides school meals to vulnerable children.(33, 34, 46)
Hotline‡	Government program that funds an NGO-operated hotline, which refers child labor complaints to government protection agencies or the SAPS.(1)
Shelters and Care Centers*‡	DSD program that funds 13 shelters and oversees 17 NGO-operated care centers for victims of abuse and trafficking, including children.(5, 9, 10)
Awareness Raising Campaigns‡	Government program that conducts anti-trafficking awareness campaigns. In 2013, the Government conducted 22 trainings to more than 1,700 students.(5)
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues Project	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016 established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010. Aims to improve the evidence base on child labor through data collection and research.(47)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of South Africa.

The Government has identified constraints on its capacity to offer social protection for children. For example, the child protection system still lacks the skilled staff to assist the majority of children who need care.(15, 37) Although South Africa has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient, including in agriculture and domestic work.(1, 2) In addition, it is unknown how many complaints related to child labor were made to the Government's hotline.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in South Africa (Table 9).

South Sudan

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

In 2013, South Sudan made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. Despite ongoing political and ethnic conflict, the Government of South Sudan provided training on child rights to child protection officers. However, children in South Sudan continue to engage in child labor in agriculture and in the worst forms of child labor in armed conflict. The Government is receiving this assessment because the Sudan People's Liberation Army (SPLA) used children in military operations against armed groups allied to David Yau Yau and has recruited and used children in the conflict that began on December 15, 2013. Militia groups also recruited children for armed conflict during the year. In addition, gaps in legislation continue to put children at risk and child labor laws are not effectively enforced.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

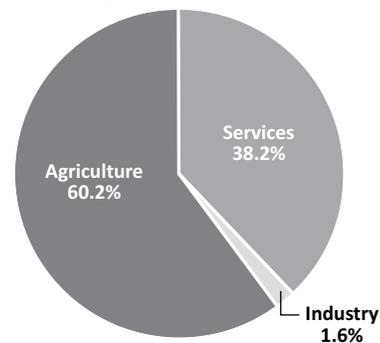

Children in South Sudan are engaged in child labor in agriculture and in the worst forms of child labor in armed conflict. (1, 2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in South Sudan.

	Use of underage children in armed conflict, sometimes as a result of forced recruitment (15, 23, 25, 26)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Although the SPLA released children from within its ranks during the year, it also used children, some of them in military operations against armed groups allied to David Yau Yau.(6, 11, 15, 19, 27, 28) The SPLA also used and recruited child soldiers in the conflict that began on December 15, 2013.(6, 11) Some public officials subjected girls to domestic servitude, and children were recruited by government security forces to serve in noncombatant roles during the year.(6, 15) Children were used to patrol the border between Uror and Pibor counties; in Uror county, children performed community policing activities.(24, 28)

Children remain within the ranks of the Lord’s Resistance Army and are used as cooks, porters, concubines, and combatants. Some of these children have since been taken to other countries, such as the Central African Republic and the Democratic Republic of the Congo.(11, 15) Militia groups, such as the White Army, also recruited children, some of them forcibly, throughout the year and during the December 15 conflict.(6, 11, 15, 25, 26, 29) In addition, during a military parade for armed groups allied to David Yau Yau, children were seen serving as bodyguards to commanders.(24)

In 2013, the status of Abyei, an area claimed by South Sudan but controlled by the northern Sudanese government, was not resolved and inter-ethnic conflict continued, resulting in more than 468,000 displaced persons and refugees in South Sudan.(26, 30, 31) The December 15 conflict also resulted in hundreds dead and 40,000 South Sudanese and foreigners taking refuge at UN bases.(32) The ongoing conflict diminished the Government’s ability to deliver aid, provide education, and address the worst forms of child labor.(11, 23, 31, 33-36)

In South Sudan, only 30 percent of children under the age of 5 have a birth certificate. Unable to prove citizenship, nonregistered children may have difficulty accessing services such as education.(37, 38)

Food insecurity and high cost of living may also impede access to education in South Sudan, as many families may not be able to afford to send their children to school.(31, 39-42) Many children (especially in rural areas) do not have access to schools, often due to the lack of infrastructure.(1, 33, 43-45) Schools were occupied, destroyed, and damaged by armed groups and armed forces during the year.(27, 28, 46) The lack of access to education may increase the risk of children’s involvement in the worst forms of child labor. In addition, there has not been a comprehensive child labor survey in South Sudan.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

South Sudan has ratified two key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

South Sudan

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

In November 2013, South Sudan's national legislative assembly passed a bill to allow for the ratification of the UN CRC and the two optional protocols. The President must sign the bill before the UN CRC and optional protocols are ratified.(19, 47) The Government has not ratified the Palermo Protocol.

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation

Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 31.1 of the Child Act (48)
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	18	Article 31.1 of the Child Act (48)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	13	Article 9.1(b) of the General Education Act (19, 51)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 6(a) of the General Education Act; Article 14.1 of the Child Act; Article 29.2 of the Constitution (1, 5, 48, 50)

Children working in unpaid employment do not have the same protections under child labor laws and regulations as children working in paid employment.(48) Primary education in South Sudan lasts 8 years and the General Education Act indicates that a child must be enrolled in school at age 5 to 6 years.(19, 51) This means that children are only required to attend school until the age of 13. This standard makes children ages 13 and 14 particularly vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, as they are not required to be in school, but are not legally permitted to work either.(19) In addition, even though laws provide for free primary education, in practice, parents must often pay teachers' salaries, a cost that is prohibitive for many families.(1, 33, 43). The cost of uniforms also keeps some children from attending school.(13)

In 2013, the SPLA Chief of General Staff signed a directive on the Child Protection Punitive Order, which instructs commanders to identify persons under the age of 18 following a unit inspection.(6) However, only two units completed inspections during the reporting period.(11) It is unclear whether this directive will contribute to the release of children from SPLA ranks. The Government also drafted an updated list of hazardous work for children during the year; the list has not been finalized.(52) In addition, the 2012 Labor Bill is still being finalized.(17, 19)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor, Public Service, and Human Resource Development (MoLPS&HRD)	Develop labor policies, enforce child labor laws, conduct workplace inspections, and oversee the operation of vocational training centers.(1, 48, 53) Through the Ministry's Child Labor Unit, investigate cases of child labor.(6)
Ministry of Gender and Social Welfare	Coordinate activities on children's rights and act as the focal ministry for child protection.(38)
SPLA's Child Protection Unit	Identify child soldiers and provide training on children's rights to child protection officers and members of the SPLA.(54)

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Interior	Enforce criminal laws to combat human trafficking and maintain a database on crime statistics.(55)
Ministry of Justice	Protect citizens' rights and enforce the Comprehensive Peace Agreement and the Constitution, including child protection provisions in those laws.(5, 56)
South Sudan Police Services	Enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor.(1, 19)
Human Rights Commission	Raise awareness of human rights, monitor the application of human rights in the Constitution, and investigate complaints regarding human rights violations, such as human trafficking.(57, 58)

Criminal law enforcement agencies in South Sudan took some action to combat child labor, including its worst forms. However, research found no evidence that labor law enforcement agencies took such actions.

Labor Law Enforcement

The Ministry of Labor, Public Service, and Human Resource Development (MoLPS & HRD) has an estimated 10 labor inspectors and two investigators in its Child Labor Unit, which appears to be insufficient for the size of the population.(5, 19) MoLPS & HRD officials also reported that they lack sufficient resources to conduct labor investigations.(11) Prosecutors and law enforcement officials are not familiar with the Child Act, which prohibits the worst forms of child labor, as it has not been adequately disseminated.(19, 38, 59)

The Government of South Sudan established the Federal Labor Statistics and Information Center to compile statistics and publish reports, including those on labor inspection activities.(60) However, it appears that the Government did not collect, maintain, or make such information accessible to the public.(19) Research did not reveal whether labor inspectors receive training, the number of child labor citations, or if penalties were applied for any citations issued during the reporting period.(19)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2013, the Child Protection Unit (CPU) trained 1,043 child protection officers on child rights. The CPU also vowed to take measures against soldiers found abusing children and called on members of the SPLA to report all children within its ranks.(61, 62) In addition, SPLA commanders received training on child protection; approximately 300 new police recruits received anti-trafficking training during the year.(15, 54) Despite these efforts, the SPLA recruited children during the reporting period even though the Child Act sets the minimum age for voluntary military recruitment at 18.(19, 48)

Although the Joint Action Plan to Combat the Use of Child Soldiers commits the SPLA to hold its military officers accountable for the recruitment or use of children, the Government did not investigate or prosecute officers who committed such crimes.(15) Research found no information on the enforcement of criminal laws that relate to the worst forms of child labor, including the number of investigations, prosecutions, convictions, or whether appropriate penalties were applied.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6)

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee on Child Labor	Coordinate efforts to combat the worst forms of child labor across government ministries. Led by the MoLPS&HRD.(6)
Disarmament Demobilization Reintegration Commission	Oversee and coordinate the implementation of the 1-year Joint Action Plan to Combat the Use of Child Soldiers and reintegrate children formerly engaged in armed conflict.(1, 15, 23, 63)

Research could not uncover whether the National Steering Committee on Child Labor coordinated activities to combat child labor in 2013.(11)

South Sudan

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of South Sudan has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Joint Action Plan to Combat the Use of Child Soldiers	Requires the SPLA to demobilize children within its ranks.(64) Aims to improve efforts to verify the age of new recruits and to provide reintegration services, such as vocational training, to demobilized children.(15) Implementation support through UN.(65, 66)
MoLPS&HRD's Policy Framework and Strategic Plan (2012–2016)	Aims to eliminate child labor and support best practices in occupational safety and health in all work places.(67, 68)
South Sudan Development Plan (2011–2013)	Provides cash transfers to households with children under the age of five, seeks to provide children affected by armed conflict with reintegration services, and aims to improve access to and the quality of education.(69)
UN Development Assistance Framework (2012–2013)	Seeks to improve education access and quality and includes provisions for social protection and the reintegration of ex-combatants.(70)
War Disabled, Widows and Orphans Commission Policy (2010–2014)*	Aims to provide orphans with services such as education and training.(71)

*The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

The Government of South Sudan implemented the Joint Action Plan to Combat the Use of Child Soldiers by removing children from within the SPLA's ranks until the conflict that began on December 15, 2013.(15, 72) The Joint Action Plan does not provide effective reintegration services for girls and some SPLA officers continue to deny that children exist in their ranks. In addition, the Government has repeatedly missed its deadlines for demobilizing all child soldiers as agreed in the Joint Action Plan.(15, 62)

In 2013, the Government of South Sudan drafted a National Social Protection Policy and a Policy on Children Without Appropriate Care and Support, which have yet to be adopted.(73, 74) It is unclear whether the UN Development Assistance Framework was adopted or if it is being implemented.(70) It is also unclear whether an implementation timeline and budget exist for the War Disabled, Widows and Orphans Commission Policy.(71)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of South Sudan participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description and Objectives
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues Project	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016 established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010. Aims to build the capacity of the national government and develop strategic policies to address the elimination of child labor in South Sudan.(75)
Tackling Child Labor through Education Project	Jointly launched by the European Commission and the ILO to combat child labor through education in 12 African and Caribbean countries and the Pacific group of states.(76) Aims to improve the child labor and education legal framework, strengthen the government's capacity to develop and implement child labor strategies, carry out activities to combat child labor, and collect data on child labor and education in South Sudan.(76)
World Bank Grant*	$9 million World Bank-funded program that aims to improve employment and financing opportunities for youth and women, including by supporting 50,000 small business entrepreneurs and generating 250 jobs.(77)
UNICEF Country Program	UNICEF-funded program implemented by the Government from 2012 to 2013 that aimed to develop child protection systems with an emphasis on birth registration, child-sensitive justice system, and reintegration services for children affected by armed conflict.(78)
Refugee assistance programs*	Government programs to assist refugees and allow the return of South Sudanese (including families and children) from the north. Receive support from the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, IOM, USAID, USDOS, and other organizations and include the provision of food, shelter, emergency reintegration, and livelihood assistance.(23, 79-81)

*The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

Although South Sudan has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, including in agriculture. Reports also suggest that the level and amount of rehabilitation services provided to child soldiers are not sufficient to meet the total need.(82, 83)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As a result, statistics on children's work in general are reported in this chart, which may or may not include the worst forms of child labor. Sri Lanka

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2013, Sri Lanka made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government reactivated its National Steering Committee (NSC) on child labor; launched a project to create a child labor free district by 2016 which will serve as a model to be replicated in all 25 districts; and assisted in the formation of 755 Child Protection Committees in schools across the country in part to prevent trafficking of children. It also implemented an innovative, fully automated Labor Inspection System Application that supports on-site inspection processes. However, children in Sri Lanka continue to engage in child labor in agriculture and manufacturing. The Government's enforcement efforts continued to be weak, particularly with regards to hazardous child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Sri Lanka are engaged in child labor in agriculture and manufacturing. (1-4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Sri Lanka.

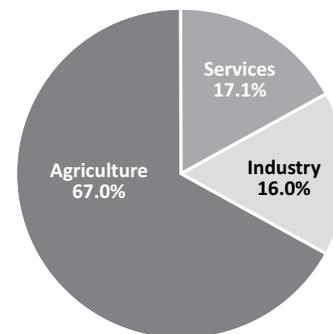

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	9.2 (302,865)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	97.8
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	10.4
Primary Completion Rate (%)		96.9

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2014.(5)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Child Activity Survey, 2008-2009.(6)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, activities unknown (2-4)
	Fishing,* including deep-water fishing*† (1, 3)
Industry	Manufacturing, activities unknown (3, 4)
	Mining,† including gem mining* (1, 3, 7, 8)
	Construction, activities unknown (1, 8)
	Production of fireworks*† (1)
Services	Domestic work (2, 3)
	Transportation, activities unknown (3, 8)
	Street vending and begging (1, 3, 8)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1-4, 9)
	Domestic service and begging as a result of human trafficking (1, 2)
	Forced labor in domestic service, agriculture, fish-drying,* and fireworks* industries (2, 9)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

There are reports that children are subjected to bonded and forced labor in domestic service and in agriculture on dry zone farming areas (tea estates). Although information is limited, there are reports that children are also subjected to bonded and forced labor in the fireworks and fish-drying industries.(2, 9)

The Government reports that the employment of children, particularly young girls, as domestic workers in Colombo has decreased over the last few years due to better implementation of child protection laws.(10) However, children, particularly from former conflict zones and rural and estate areas, continue to be employed as domestic workers by households in Colombo and other urban areas.(1, 10) Domestic service is a largely unregulated and undocumented sector. Some child domestics are subject to physical, sexual, and emotional abuse; there are also reports of rural child domestic workers in debt bondage living in third-party households.(2, 3, 9)

Children, predominantly boys, are trafficked internally for commercial sexual exploitation in coastal areas as part of the sex tourism industry.(2, 3, 9) Children are also trafficked internally and abroad to work as domestic servants, primarily in Middle Eastern countries, which can leave them vulnerable to labor and sexual exploitation.(9, 11) Some child domestic workers trafficked to Colombo households are subjected to nonpayment of wages, and restrictions on their movement, along with the hazards discussed above.(2, 9, 12)

The Government’s 2008/2009 Child Activity Survey excluded the inaccessible Northern Province due to civil conflict occurring at the time of research.(13) The Government has reported that a child activity survey in Northern Province is planned for 2014.(14)

Most children in Sri Lanka have access to basic education.(5) However, barriers to education access include uneven distribution of schools, inadequate school infrastructure facilities, and problems with teacher deployment and training. This is particularly true in the Northern and Eastern Provinces, which have been affected by the civil conflict that ended in 2009.(15)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Sri Lanka has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

In 2013, the Ministry of Justice prepared two bills which, if passed, will contribute to combating child labor, including its worst forms. The Children Judicial Protection Bill requires increased collaboration between the court, police, and Department of Probation and Child Care Services (DPCCS).(14) The Obscene Publication Bill updates legislation outlawing child pornography and is under consideration by the Attorney General. Additionally, the Ministry of Education (MOE) has drafted an amendment to increase the compulsory education age to 16 years.(14)

The legal framework does not cover domestic workers in third-party homes.(3)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Labor Relations' (MOLLR) Department of Labor (DOL)	Enforce child labor laws. Has existing mechanisms in place at the national and district level offices for the public to use when filing complaints on child labor.(25)
Women and Children's Bureau of the Sri Lankan Police (WCBSLP)	Enforce laws on child labor, child trafficking, and commercial sexual exploitation of children.(8)
National Child Protection Authority (NCPA) Police Unit	Investigate complaints and tasked with prevention and victim protection.(8)

Organization/Agency	Role
Department of Probation and Child Care Services (DPCCS)	Coordinate services for children found during inspections. Children are referred by the court to DPCCS which is part of the Ministry of Child Development and Women's Affairs (MCDWA).(8) Under the direction of DPCCS, case workers refer child laborers and children involved in commercial sexual exploitation and trafficking to psychosocial and protection services, including four shelters and two national training and counseling centers. Centers provide victims with medical, legal, psychosocial, life skills, and vocational skills training.(9, 26, 27)

Law enforcement agencies in Sri Lanka took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, DOL's labor inspectorate employed 428 labor officers to enforce all labor laws, including those related to child labor.(8) DOL conducted an enforcement training program and training-of-trainer programs on child labor and hazardous child labor for police, probation and child labor officers, and a workshop at the police training college.(8) DOL also introduced a new labor inspection form, which has an increased number of questions on child labor, and prepared training manuals on the worst forms of child labor, including hazardous child labor regulations.(8, 14) However, government officials maintain that DOL's capacity to enforce hazardous occupation regulations is weak and not all enforcement officers have received training.(8)

During the reporting period, DOL conducted 54,213 labor inspections, including 231 special child labor inspections.(8, 14) Ten children were removed or assisted as a result of the inspections, and two penalties for child labor violations were issued and fines were collected.(8)

MOLLR launched the Labor Inspection System Application (LISA), which is the first of its kind in South Asia. The fully automated system supports on-site inspection processes where authorized personnel can use a hand-held tablet to enter data on inspections as they occur, and track and monitor their status and disposition. The system was developed with funding support from USDOL and technical support from the ILO.(28) Labor officers will be provided with the tablet computers with the customized application to record inspection findings. Inspectors can use the application to monitor and track specific children and ensure that they do not return to child labor once they have been identified and removed.(29) As of February 2014, 400 tablet computers were purchased, the system had been successfully piloted and implemented regionally, and labor inspectors were trained in anticipation of nationwide implementation.(29, 30)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2013, the Women and Children's Bureau of the Sri Lankan Police (WCBSLP) had 45 officers and 36 branch operations throughout the country.(8) In the remaining police stations without WCBSLP representation, the officers in charge oversee functions of the division.(8) The WCBSLP received three cases on human trafficking, however it is not known if these cases involved children.(31)

The National Child Protection Authority (NCPA) Police Unit has approximately 40 police officers who investigate complaints involving children including child labor. NCPA also has approximately 250 child protection officers based in the districts who are tasked with prevention and victim protection.(8, 32) During the reporting period, it initiated one investigation on a suspected child trafficking case.(31)

Complaints on child labor, child commercial sexual exploitation, and child trafficking violations can be made via a hotline to the WCBSLP and the NCPA. Both the WCBSLP and the NCPA face a shortage of funds that affects their ability to carry out their mandate.(8)

The Government of Sri Lanka acknowledges and is committed to investigating allegations of previous recruitment and the use of children in armed conflict by non-state armed forces. While some recruiters of child soldiers were killed during the conflict, research has found no evidence of prosecutions and convictions of living survivors who violated the law on children and armed conflict.(33-36)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
The National Steering Committee on Child Labor (NSC)	Coordinate the implementation of the Roadmap to End the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2011–2016), the Government’s key mechanism for the elimination of the worst forms of child labor.(1, 25, 37) Chaired by the Secretary of MOLLR and includes representatives from key government agencies, employer and workers’ organizations, ILO, UNICEF, and other NGOs.(25)
NCPA	Coordinate actions along with the NSC to protect children, including against the worst forms of child labor.(12, 25) Assist children who are victims of physical and sexual abuse, sexual exploitation, and armed conflict through formulating policies and enforcing laws, coordinating groups, and conducting research and mobilizing resources. Independent agency under MCDWA.(38, 39)
National Anti-Trafficking Task Force (NTF)	Coordinate government anti-trafficking interventions among ministries, departments, law enforcement agencies, and civil society groups. Review related legislation and recommend legal and policy reforms on the country’s response to trafficking in persons.(8) Led by the Ministry of Justice and includes representatives from NCPA, Sri Lanka Police, Immigration, Foreign Employment Bureau, and other private, nongovernmental, and civil society groups.(8, 31)
WCBSLP	Coordinate government efforts to combat child trafficking, forced child labor, the commercial sexual exploitation of children, and the involvement of children in illicit activities in coordination with the NCPA.(8, 39)

In 2013, the NSC held two meetings after a year of inactivity. As a result of these meetings, the NSC developed a draft child labor policy and identified three sectors where child labor surveys should be conducted: plantations, fisheries, and fireworks sectors.(8)

During the reporting period, the National Anti-Trafficking Task Force (NTF) produced an update to its National Plan of Action and created a subcommittee to address confusion among government officials and the public over trafficking terminology. Under its oversight, a Ministry of Child Development and Women’s Affairs (MCDWA) subcommittee developed guidelines for operation of the trafficking victims shelter opened in December 2012.(31)

During the reporting period, the NCPA began a review of why laws on human trafficking have not been implemented effectively with regards to children.(31) It also conducted 74 public awareness programs among estate sector employees, and created 755 Child Protection Committees in schools across the country in part to prevent trafficking of children.(31) The DPCCS conducted 25 public awareness programs on protection of children from child sex trafficking.(31)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Sri Lanka has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Roadmap to End the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2011–2016)	Specifies time-bound goals, including developing and/or strengthening the management, coordination, implementation, resource mobilization, and reporting of programs that will lead to the elimination of the worst forms of child labor by 2016.(1) Provides district-level mainstreaming strategies to address specific sectors of child labor, including armed conflict, plantations, fisheries, and tourism. Outlines strategies to include child labor issues within social protection and education goals.(1) Implemented by NSC.(8) In 2013, NSC began implementing a limited number of Roadmap activities due to limited funds.(8) MOLLR and District Secretariat of Ratnapura, with assistance from the ILO, began a project to make Ratnapura District a child labor free zone by 2016. Will serve as a pilot project to raise awareness and train government officials so that it can be expanded to other districts in the future.(8)

Policy	Description
The National Human Resources and Employment Policy for Sri Lanka (NHREP) (2012)	Provides an overarching umbrella framework to several existing national policies related to employment and human resources formulated by different ministries. Sets eliminating child labor in hazardous activities as a priority and a goal of zero tolerance for the worst forms of child labor by 2016.(40)
National Education Sector Development Framework and Program II (ESDFP-II) (2012–2016)*	Aims to increase the equitable access, quality, and delivery of education. Supports accelerated learning and non-formal education for dropouts from the formal education system. Implemented by the Ministry of Education (MOE).(41)
National Plan of Action on Anti-Human Trafficking	Developed by NTF.(25) In 2013, NTF updated the plan and the majority of activities completed were related to awareness raising and training.(31)

*The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

In 2013, the Government drafted a National Child Protection Policy. The policy is intended to ensure effective coordination among all organizations and actors working for the protection and development of children in Sri Lanka, and outlines key policy recommendations including strengthening and expanding non-formal education opportunities for vulnerable children (including child laborers) in geographic locations with the highest concentrations of vulnerable households. It recommends measures to prevent and eliminate the trafficking of children including through improved detection and identification of traffickers and victims, and to provide greater protections to child victims.(42) The Government reported that Ministry of Labor and Labor Relations (MOLLR) is finalizing the draft policy.(14)

During the reporting period, the NSC drafted a new national child labor policy with technical assistance from the ILO. The draft policy aims to end the worst forms of child labor by 2016 through a variety of activities including effective enforcement of relevant laws and mainstreaming child labor into key development policies and programs.(8)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Sri Lanka funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Ratnapura District Child Labor Free Zone by 2016†	Ratnapura District's project includes identification of children engaged in child labor, a rehabilitation program, assistance to families of children at risk of engaging in child labor, and an awareness campaign. Operated by the District Secretariat of Ratnapura with assistance from the MOLLR and technical and financial support from the ILO. Will serve as a model to be replicated in all 25 districts in Sri Lanka.(43)
Shelter for Victims of Human Trafficking‡	MCDWA shelter provides victims with safe shelter and access to medical, psychological, and legal assistance. Opened in December 2012 with a grant from USDOS, and is the first shelter for trafficking victims including child trafficking victims.(8, 44)
Transforming School Education	$100 million World Bank financed, 5-year education project to support the ESDFP. Objectives include promoting access to primary and secondary education, improving the quality of education, and strengthening governance and delivery of education services.(45) Appoints school attendance committees to promote school enrollment and attendance, and runs school nutrition and health programs.(25)
New Beginnings for Children Affected by Conflict and Violence	USAID-funded project implemented by Save the Children and DPCCS. Objectives include improving care and protection for children, and strengthening child protection mechanisms.(46)
Decent Work Country Program (DWCP)†	ILO technical assistance project detailing the policies, strategies, and results required to realize progress toward the goal of decent work for all. Program has four strategies to reduce the worst forms of child labor (WFCL): capacity building for mainstreaming WFCL into sectorial plans and programs, area-based integrated approach within districts, strengthening institutional mechanisms for improved coordination and monitoring, and development of a knowledge-base for tracking progress.(47) DWCP outcomes are linked to UNDAF and NHREP outcomes. MOLLR has committed to the budget and to prioritize this program's agenda to combat the worst forms of child labor.(47)

Program	Description
United Nations Development Assistance Framework (UNDAF)†	An agreement pegging UN assistance to Sri Lanka's long-term development priorities with the goal of sustainable and inclusive economic growth with equitable access to quality social services, strengthened human capabilities, and reconciliation for lasting peace. Stipulates that UN agencies will support national efforts to strengthen justice for children and achieve the goal of zero tolerance of the worst forms of child labor, including the trafficking of children for exploitative employment.(48)

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Sri Lanka.

In early 2013, the ILO, in partnership with the Sri Lanka Press Institute and the Sri Lanka Press Complaints Commission, and with support from the NTF, released a Media Guide on Reporting on Human Trafficking and Forced Labor. It was developed for all electronic and print media to encourage accurate reporting of cases on human trafficking and forced labor. It also aims to ensure protection of victims and increase public awareness of the phenomenon.(49)

Also during the reporting period, DOL conducted awareness programs on hazardous child labor. Programs targeted school children and social partners including principals, teachers, parents, family health officers, taxi drivers, fishing villages, and tourist resorts. The programs included printing and distributing new training guides and pamphlets on child labor for social partners.(8) In addition, DOL aired television programs including a cartoon and interviews to publicize the hazardous labor laws. DOL reported an increase in the number of inquiries requesting clarification on the application of the law after the programs aired.(8)

The MOE continued its effort to improve education for the children of plantation workers who are vulnerable to dangerous forms of child labor, such as domestic work in third-party homes outside the plantations. The MOE also conducted teacher training for plantation teachers; held supplementary classes for secondary school-aged children; and took steps to improve math, science, and English skills of plantation school children.(8)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, Suriname made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government began participating in a multi-country USDOL-funded project to enhance capacity to combat child labor. During this time, the Government also implemented a national child labor survey. The Government continued to expand education programs for vulnerable populations and took anti-trafficking efforts by taking steps to establish a shelter for child trafficking victims. However, children in Suriname continue to engage in child labor in mining and in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation. Suriname has not risen the compulsory education age to equal the minimum age for employment. Additionally, Suriname does not collect or publish data on child labor inspections and violations.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Suriname are engaged in child labor in mining and in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation.(3-8, 10, 11) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Suriname.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	6.4 (6,671)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	95.8
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	6.6
Primary Completion Rate (%)		87.8

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2011, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2014.(1)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children’s Work Project’s analysis of statistics from MICS Survey, 2010.(2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Activities unknown* (3, 4)
Industry	Mining, particularly gold mining (3-8)
Services	Street work, including street vending* (3, 4, 6, 7, 9)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of human trafficking* (3, 4, 6-8, 10, 11)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Children, predominantly boys, work in Suriname’s gold mines.(3-6) In gold mining, children carry heavy loads and are exposed to mercury, excessive noise, and extreme heat common to Suriname. Child miners are vulnerable to being crushed by collapsing sand walls.(5)

The commercial sexual exploitation of children continues to be a problem, including in mining camps in the country’s interior.(3, 4, 6, 7, 11) Limited evidence suggests girls are also trafficked within Suriname for commercial sexual exploitation.(7, 11) According to recent reports, children’s involvement in street vending may be declining.(9)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Suriname has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Free Public Education	Yes		Constitution (15)

* No conscription or no standing military.

Article 20 of the Law on Basic Education requires children to attend school until they are at least age 12.(4-6, 13) This leaves children between ages 12 and 14 particularly vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, as they are no longer required to attend school and are not legally permitted to work.(3)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor, Technology, and Environment (MLTE)/ Department of Labor Inspections (DLI)	Enforce laws related to child labor in the formal sector.(5, 6)
Ministry of Justice and Police (MJP)	Enforce criminal laws related to child labor. Monitor and enforce child labor laws in the informal sector, including on the streets.(4, 6, 7)

Law enforcement agencies in Suriname took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, the Ministry of Labor Technology and Employment (MLTE) employs 80 inspectors.⁽⁷⁾ Standard training for all labor inspectors includes identification of child labor violations.⁽⁷⁾ In 2013, the MLTE conducted inspections of companies, checking for compliance in several areas of labor law, including child labor.⁽⁷⁾ However, information on the number of inspections conducted by MLTE and child labor violations found as a result in 2013 is not available.⁽⁷⁾

Criminal Law Enforcement

The Youth Affairs Police (YAP) within Ministry of Justice and Police (MJP) covers law enforcement involving children under age 18 and is jointly responsible for child labor-related crimes.^(4, 6) When the YAP finds children working on the street, these children are sometimes registered and sent home without being referred to any relevant services.^(6, 7) MJP's Anti-trafficking Police Unit (TIP) investigates reports and allegations of trafficking in persons and forced sexual exploitation nationwide, including cases involving children.^(6, 7) In 2013, MJP's TIP organized three human trafficking training sessions for police officers. The unit currently has 14 full-time officers, an increase of 6 inspectors over 2012.^(4, 7, 13) Child trafficking victims are referred to shelters that provide the necessary services.^(3, 4, 16) During the reporting period, four children were identified as potential trafficking victims, and as a result of investigations, the Government referred these victims to NGOs that provided protective services.^(4, 7)

According to the Government Prosecutor's Office, there were three ongoing child labor cases during the reporting period, all involving trafficking and sexual exploitation. Two were initiated in 2013, and verdicts in all remained pending at the end of the year.⁽⁷⁾

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Commission for the Elimination of Child Labor (NCECL)	Coordinate efforts to combat child labor, including by researching different forms of child labor, advising on policy related to combating child labor, and formulating an action plan. ⁽⁷⁾ Comprises 11 members with representation from Presidential Commission on Child and Adolescent Policy; labor unions; private sector entities; academic institutions; NGOs; and the Ministries of Social Affairs, Education, Regional Development, Justice and Police, and MLTE. ^(3, 4, 7)
Anti-Trafficking Working Group	Coordinate Government's anti-trafficking efforts. ^(3, 4, 6, 7) Provide care to victims of trafficking through government-supported NGOs. ^(7, 18) Has seven members, six from government agencies and one representing the NGO community. Initiatives include those that target the worst forms of child labor, such as commercial sexual exploitation of children. ^(4, 6, 7)

In October 2013, the Anti-Trafficking Working Group hosted a 4-day workshop on combatting trafficking in persons for stakeholder groups with the goal of developing a unified strategy.^(7, 18)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Suriname has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Suriname

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2013, the National Commission for the Elimination of Child Labor (NCECL) began drafting a National Action Plan on Combatting Child Labor, but it has not yet been adopted.(7)

The Government of Suriname also participates in several regional initiatives to address child labor. Suriname’s Ministry of Transport, Communication, and Tourism participates in the Joint Group for the Elimination of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children in Tourism. The Group, which comprises members from the Ministries of Tourism of 10 Latin American countries, implements awareness-raising campaigns throughout the region.(4, 6, 7) Suriname is also a member of the Joint Regional Group for the Americas, which conducts child labor prevention and awareness-raising campaigns in tourism and whose members include Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru, Uruguay, and Venezuela.(19)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Suriname funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Country Level Engagement and Assistance to Reduce (CLEAR) Child Labor project†	USDOL-funded capacity building project in at least 10 countries. In Suriname, aims to build local and national capacity of the Government to address child labor by improving monitoring and enforcement of laws and policies related to child labor.(20) Will support a national child labor survey to inform effective policy development.(20)
Child and Youth Hotline‡	Government-run hotline that provides confidential advice to children in need, including victims of the worst forms of child labor.(21)
Anti-trafficking Hotline‡	Government-sponsored hotline through which citizens can provide information to police about trafficking cases, though it received no calls in 2013.(7, 11)
Human Trafficking Awareness Programs	Government funds anti-trafficking activities. In 2013, Anti-trafficking Working Group carried out four-day workshop on linking the work of various government agencies to address trafficking in persons.(7, 13, 18)
Afterschool Program*‡	Ministry of Education after-school program for primary students, which offers meals and homework assistance. Ministry of Education continued to implement a school-based feeding program for children from low-income families.(4, 6, 22) In 2013, program expanded to include more primary schools.(7)
Basic Education Program*	$14 million Inter-American Development Bank project to improve basic education. Implemented through the Ministry of Education. Aims to enhance education quality and reduce student dropout rates.(4, 6) Five major project components are enacting institutional reform, updating school curricula, improving educational materials, enhancing teacher capacity, and providing technical assistance.(4, 7)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Suriname.

In addition to the above efforts, the Ministry of Social Affairs began the process of establishing a shelter for child trafficking victims. During the reporting period, the Ministry began hiring and training shelter staff.(7)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Suriname (Table 9).

Table 9. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Laws	Increase the compulsory education age to at least 14, the minimum age for work.	2009 – 2013
Enforcement	Collect and make publicly available information of labor inspections and violations related to the worst forms of child labor.	2012 – 2013
	Create a mechanism to refer children discovered working on the streets to appropriate services, helping to prevent their return to work.	2010 – 2013
Social Programs	Assess the impact that existing education programs may have on child labor.	2009 – 2013

Swaziland

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

In 2013, Swaziland made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government extended free education through grade five and designated three newly hired labor inspectors as child labor investigators. However, children in Swaziland continue to engage in child labor in agriculture and livestock herding. While the Government has improved the legal framework on the worst forms of child labor in recent years, significant gaps in laws remain, including the lack of a list of hazardous occupations prohibited for children or a compulsory education age. Additionally, the roles and responsibilities of coordinating agencies in combatting the worst forms of child labor are not clear.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Swaziland are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture and livestock herding.(3-5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Swaziland.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	11.7 (35,368)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	92.5
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	13.0
Primary Completion Rate (%)		76.8

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2011, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2014.(1)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children’s Work Project’s analysis of statistics from MICS 4 Survey, 2010.(2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Growing maize,* picking cotton,* and harvesting sugarcane* (3-5)
	Herding cattle* and other livestock* (3, 4)
Industry	Work in factories* (6)
Services	Domestic service (3, 4)
	Work on the streets as vendors, bus attendants, taxi conductors, and porters (4, 6)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Herding livestock,* domestic service, agriculture, and market vending as a result of human trafficking (6-8)
	Commercial sexual exploitation (3, 7)
	Growing, manufacturing, and selling drugs* (4)
	Serving alcohol in alcohol selling establishments* (4)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Swaziland has one of the world’s highest HIV/AIDS prevalence rates, affecting more than a quarter of the population. According to UNICEF’s 2010 Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey, 23.6 percent of children under 18 have lost at least one parent, mostly as a result of HIV/AIDS.(9-11) Furthermore, a source indicates that orphans face unfair and unequal treatment in schools.(3) These factors may increase the risk of children’s involvement in the worst forms of child labor. Although the Government has conducted general labor force surveys, the surveys did not cover child labor, and the Government has not made it a policy to collect data on the worst forms of child labor.(12-14)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Swaziland has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Children's Protection and Welfare Act (15)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Children's Protection and Welfare Act (15)
List of Hazardous Occupations Prohibited for Children	No
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Constitution (16)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		People Trafficking and People Smuggling (Prohibition) Act (17)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Crimes Act and General Pornography Act (6)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Children's Protection and Welfare Act (15)
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Umbutfo Swaziland Defense Force Act (3, 18)
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	18	Umbutfo Swaziland Defense Force Act (3, 18)
Compulsory Education Age	No
Free Public Education	Yes		Constitution; Free Primary Education Act (16, 19)

Swaziland lacks a list of hazardous occupations that are prohibited for children, but the Government has indicated its intention to adopt such a list through regulation by the Minister of Labor and Social Security (MLSS).(19) The Employment Act excludes domestic employment, agricultural, and family undertakings from the minimum age provisions.(20) Swaziland also lacks a compulsory education law.(6, 8, 19) Children's vulnerability is further increased by illegal and substantial school fees that are required by school officials and create a barrier to education.(3) In addition, while the Government has drafted a Sexual Offenses and Domestic Violence Bill, it is yet to be enacted.(3) Finally, a 1998 Administrative Order, Act No. 6, grants local chiefs the power to require any resident, including children, to perform agricultural and other work, or else be penalized, is reported to still be used, despite the High Court's declaration that it's null and void.(4, 7, 21, 22)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms. However, the specific roles of agencies in enforcing child labor laws and whether the mechanisms for referral to social welfare and other agencies exist, is not clear (Table 5).

Swaziland

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MLSS)	Enforce child labor laws and promote relations between labor, government, and business through tripartite dialogue.(3, 23)
Department of Social Welfare	Enforce child labor laws by looking out for the interests of vulnerable populations, including orphans, children, and elderly people.(3, 23)
Royal Swaziland Police	Enforce child labor laws, including any related to children, and participate in the National Children's Coordination Unit (NCCU).(3, 23)

Labor law enforcement agencies in Swaziland took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms. However, research found no evidence that criminal law enforcement agencies took such actions.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, the MLSS hired 14 new labor inspectors and now employs a total of 30 labor inspectors.(3) However, the Government reported that it employed 32 labor inspectors during the previous reporting period.(19) Three of the new inspectors were designated as child labor investigators and provided specialized child labor training by the International Labor Organization.(3) The MLSS conducted 3,028 labor inspections during the year.(3) A source indicates that no child labor violations were reported although children are working in the informal sector. The MLSS indicates that it does not have sufficient resources, including transportation, to conduct inspections.(3) In addition, there does not appear to be a system to record child labor complaints.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2013, research found no actions taken to enforce criminal laws pertinent to child labor, including its worst forms. No information was available on the number of investigations, prosecutions, or convictions.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Children's Coordination Unit under the Deputy Prime Minister's Office	Coordinate efforts on child labor including policy and advocacy and oversee implementation and monitoring of the National Plan of Action (NAP) for Children.(23)
Anti-Human Trafficking Task Force	Exchange information on cases of trafficking between relevant stakeholders.(3)

In 2013, the Government continued to work on establishing a Child Labor Unit under the MLSS to coordinate issues related to child labor.(3) The Government has also created of a National Task Team that includes all ministries that deal with children.(19) However, the roles and activities of these different entities and how they relate to child labor, are not clear.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Swaziland has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Action Program on the Elimination of Child Labor (APEC) of 2008	Serves as the primary policy framework for the prevention and elimination of child labor, with the goal of eradicating the worst forms by 2015. The APEC focuses on six key areas: legislation and enforcement; empowerment of vulnerable households; education and training; public awareness and social community mobilization; withdrawal, rehabilitation, and social reintegration; and institutional capacity.(6, 12)
National Plan of Action for Orphans and Vulnerable Children (2011-2015) *	Includes nine strategic objectives, including education, psychosocial support, child protection, and research and monitoring and supports orphans and vulnerable children's (OVC's) enrollment in school. Does not explicitly address child labor, but includes child laborers as among the most vulnerable children.(24)
National Children's Policy (2009)*	Represents the policy framework of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act.(19)
National Social Development Policy (2010)*	Provides protections for children including OVCs, street children, children with disabilities, and others.(19)
Education Sector Policy (2011)*	Seeks to provide equitable access to education.(19)
National Strategic Framework and Action Plan to Combat People Trafficking†	Assigns responsibilities to relevant Government agencies on trafficking in persons.(25)

* The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Policy was launched during the reporting period.

The Action Program on the Elimination of Child Labor (APEC) of 2008 was never implemented and technically expired in 2012.(3, 6, 19) The new APEC was drafted by the National Task Team and aims to improve implementation of the APEC and better reflect new legal requirements due to the passage of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act in 2013 but was not adopted.(3, 6, 19)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Swaziland participated in and funded programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Free Primary Education Program (FPE)*‡	Government program to provide free primary education expanded in 2013 to children in grades one through five and will extend to grade six in early 2014.(3)
NAP for Children‡	Government NAP that implements the Children's Protection and Welfare Act and covers children engaged in harmful, hazardous, and exploitative work.(19)
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries, to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016 established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010. Aims to improve the evidence base on child labor through data collection and research in Swaziland.(26)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Swaziland.

Despite the Government's efforts to provide free education through grade five, the Government has yet to provide free education up to grade seven as the Constitution and the free primary education act require.(3, 16, 19) Government resources allocated to education, the fight against HIV/AIDS, and other social protection programs that may impact the worst forms of child labor are still limited, and existing social programs lack components on child labor.(3, 27)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2013, the United Republic of Tanzania made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government finalized its list of hazardous child labor and hired 10 additional labor officers; trained police officers, investigators, and prosecutors on child labor and human trafficking; and established 14 district child labor committees. The Government also continued to support programs on the elimination of child labor. However, children in Tanzania continue to engage in child labor in agriculture and mining. Gaps remain in laws regulating the voluntary military recruitment of children and children's engagement in illicit activities.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Tanzania are engaged in child labor in agriculture and mining.(1-8) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Tanzania.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Tanzania is a source, transit, and destination country for child trafficking.(1, 4) Trafficking of children for forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation is a problem in Tanzania, which particularly affects children trafficked internally.(4, 39) Trafficking often involves family members, friends, or brokers, who promise rural families jobs or assistance with education for their children in the urban areas of Arusha, Dar es Salaam, and Mwanza.(39) Children are trafficked for domestic service, and girls are trafficked for commercial sexual exploitation, including along the Kenya-Tanzania border and in touristic areas in the country.(6, 37, 39, 40) Children from Burundi, Uganda, Rwanda, and the Democratic Republic of Congo are trafficked to Tanzania for mining, domestic work, and agricultural labor.(4, 37, 41, 42)

II. Legal Framework on the Worst Forms of Child Labor

* No conscription or no standing military.

During the reporting period, Tanzania's Constitution was under review.(2) As part of their constitutional review, district governments recommended incorporating child labor issues into the Constitution.(2)

Tanzania's Constitution stipulates which laws apply across the entire United Republic; labor laws are not included.(48, 55) Therefore, mainland Tanzania and Zanzibar have separate legislation governing child labor.(1) In addition to mainland Tanzania's and Zanzibar's legal frameworks on child labor, some districts have incorporated restrictions against child labor into their local by-laws.(13, 20, 56)

Because mainland Tanzania and Zanzibar have different labor laws, each has a different minimum age for work and laws governing hazardous labor.(43, 44, 46–48, 51) Zanzibar has two different minimum ages for work. Article 100 of the Zanzibar Children's Act of 2011 prohibits children under age 18 from working, while the Zanzibar Employment Act and Act 116 of the Zanzibar Labor Act of 2007 stipulate age 17 as the minimum age for work.(45–47) In contrast, the minimum age for work on mainland Tanzania is 14.(43, 44)

While the Constitution and mainland Employment and Labor Relations Act, Law of the Child Act of 2009, Zanzibar Children's Act of 2011, and Zanzibar Employment Act No. 11 of 2005 prohibit forced labor, the National Defense Act and the Constitution include exceptions for forced labor through compulsory national service.(43, 45–48, 51) The Zanzibar Employment Act permits children in Zanzibar under the minimum working age to engage in domestic work. However, the mainland law does not explicitly prohibit child domestic work.(43, 46)

While Zanzibar clearly stipulates the prohibition of the use of children for illicit activities, mainland Tanzania does not.(46, 47) The mainland law does not clearly provide penalties for using children for illicit activities, including the production and trafficking of drugs. During the reporting period, the Government finalized its list of hazardous work, which applies to mainland Tanzania.(8, 57)

Although Tanzania's age for voluntary military recruitment is 18, children under 18 years of age may volunteer with the consent of parents, guardians, or, if orphaned, that of the local district commission.(51, 58, 59) The law does not stipulate any restrictions on children under age 18 engaging in combat, and, therefore, it is unclear whether this law complies with the provisions of ILO C. 182.

While primary education is free, students or their parents are required to contribute money to pay for books, school feeding programs, the construction of classrooms, and the provision of teachers' houses.(6, 8, 60) In addition, corporal punishment in schools is lawful in Tanzania and, while information is limited, data have shown that the use of corporal punishment by teachers may increase dropouts.(18, 61–64) Furthermore, some children may lack birth registration, which makes it difficult for them to access education and health and other social services.(23, 28, 48, 65) As a result of HIV/AIDS, some children must work for survival; thus, they become head of household and are unable to attend school.(28, 57)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Employment (MOLE) (mainland)– Child Labor Unit	Enforce child labor laws at the national level.(1, 6)
MOLE (mainland)– Labor Administration and Inspection Section	Coordinate labor inspections carried out by the area offices and prepare, review, and recommend guidelines on labor inspection services and compliance with labor legislation. Provide legal guidance upon request; disseminate information to employers and employees on their rights and obligations; and assist area offices in conducting labor inspections.(66)
MOLE (mainland)– Labor Officers	Inspect locales for suspected violations of child labor laws.(1) Assigned to each region of Tanzania. Respond to reports of child labor violations, issue noncompliance orders, and report incidents to local police authorities and other responsible ministries.(1) Accept complaints about violations of child labor law.(1)
Ministry of Community Development, Gender and Children	Enforce child protection laws and regulations and employ community development officers to monitor child labor at the district and village levels and report findings to the Regional Administration and Local Government (PMORALG).(2, 16) Coordinate all children issues through the Child Development Policy of 2008. Key advocate for the primary education agenda at the community level.(67)
Ministry of Health and Social Welfare	Implement, monitor, and evaluate health and social welfare policies, including those related to children.(68) Support vulnerable groups of children through the National Costed Action Plan for most vulnerable children.(67, 68) Employ Social Welfare Officers at the district level who monitor child labor at the district and village levels and report findings to the PMORALG.(69)
Ministry of Labor, Economic Empowerment and Cooperatives— Labor Commission (Zanzibar)	Enforce Zanzibar’s child labor laws and administer provisions of the Zanzibar Labor Act, including inspections.(1, 13, 26) Investigate reports of child labor reported by police and refer cases to social welfare officers for support.(1, 13, 45, 66)
Ministry of Social Welfare and Youth Development (Zanzibar)—Child Protection Unit	Ensure compliance with child protection laws, including child labor.(68)
Police (mainland)	Include a trafficking desk and investigate cases of child labor reported to police stations, and in some cases, refer them to labor officers or solicit the assistance of social welfare officers. Include Gender and Children’s desks to handle cases related to children.(13, 39, 70)
Police (Zanzibar)	Investigate and compile reports of incidents of child abuse, child labor, trafficking, rape, and other forms of child endangerment.(13, 39)
INTERPOL Criminal Investigation Department— INTERPOL National Central Bureau for Tanzania	Investigate various priority crimes, including trafficking in human beings and illegal immigration. Headed by a Commissioner of Police, staffed by 23 police officers, and includes focal points responsible for trafficking.(13, 71)
Ministry of Home Affairs (mainland)	Enforce anti-trafficking laws, including child trafficking.(13)
Ministry of Health and Social Welfare (Zanzibar)	Enforce anti-trafficking laws, including child trafficking.(13)

Law enforcement agencies in Tanzania took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

The Ministry of Labor and Employment (MOLE) regulations dictate that one or more labor officers be assigned to each region; however, Geita, Kagera, Katavi, Simiyu regions did not have a dedicated labor officer during the reporting period.(1) In 2013, the mainland MOLE hired 10 labor officers and employed 81 officers by the end of 2013.(1, 7) Eighty percent of the newly hired labor officers were stationed in the field, where child labor is more prevalent.(1) On the mainland, 3,092 labor inspections were conducted during the reporting year.(1, 7) Inspections were carried out in establishments covering the agriculture, mining, domestic service, hotels, trade, industry and commerce, construction, and fishing sectors.(7) Of the establishments inspected, 10 were found to be using children in their operations.(7) Information on the number of citations and penalties issued was not found. In Zanzibar, 240 labor inspections were conducted in 2013.(1) In some instances, cases are not pursued because of the cost of legal expenses; poor families,

Tanzania

especially in rural areas, are often unable to pay for legal fees and transportation to participate in court hearings. Research did not find the number of child labor violations that resulted from the 240 labor inspections conducted in Zanzibar.

Budget figures for the Child Labor Unit on the mainland and Zanzibar were unavailable for 2013.(1) There is a lack of sufficient resources to thoroughly investigate reports of child labor, and the Child Labor Unit sometimes request support from NGOs to conduct field visits.(1)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Of the trafficking in persons cases reported in 2013, three resulted in convictions; the other two were dismissed due to a lack of victims' testimony, evidence, and/or witnesses.(39) It is unclear whether these cases involved children.(39)

During the reporting period, new police officers, investigators, and prosecutors received training on child labor and human trafficking.(1, 39)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Intersectoral Committee on Child Labor (NISCC)	Oversee interagency child labor policy coordination, provide guidance on the overall implementation of child labor activities, and strengthen local structures' capacity to address child labor.(7, 36) Chaired by the Prime Minister's Office—PMORALG, members include the Ministries of Labor, Community Development, Gender and Children, and Health and Social Welfare, as well as NGOs.(1, 7, 27)
Anti-Trafficking Secretariat and Committee	Promote, define, and coordinate policy to prevent trafficking.(4, 39, 49)
Regional Task Force on Human Trafficking and Illegal Immigration	Maintain a list of service providers to which trafficking victims can be referred. Launched in 2013 in cooperation with IOM.(38, 72, 73)

Members include the District Executive Director, Officer Commanding District, District Community Development Office, District Education Officer, District Medical Officer, Social Welfare Officer, District Trade Officer, Legal Officer, Cooperative Officer, Planning Officer, representatives from regional affiliations, and representatives from NGOs and community-based organizations that deal with child labor.(2, 7) There were 14 district child labor committees during the reporting period.(7)
Village Child Labor Committee	Coordinate and oversee efforts related to child labor at the village level.(7)
Zanzibar Child Labor Steering Committee	Coordinate various implementing agencies responsible for child labor. Provide policy guidance on the Zanzibar National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor (NAP). Exchange information with the mainland Tanzania NISCC.(13)

Multi-sector Task Force on Violence Against Children	Implement the 3-year National Plan to Prevent and Respond to Violence Against Children and enforce the Law of the Child Act.(63, 74)

The National Intersectoral Committee on Child Labor (NISCC) met once during the reporting period. This meeting was insufficient to deal with the scope of the child labor problem in Tanzania.(39)

In 2013, the Anti-Trafficking Secretariat and Anti-Trafficking Committee met four times to draft and review regulations and standard operating procedures required for implementation of the 2008 Anti-Trafficking in Persons Act.(39)

*The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Policy was launched during the reporting period.

Information was not available on the amount of funding budgeted towards the implementation of the National Action Plans for the Elimination of Child Labor in mainland Tanzania and Zanzibar.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Tanzania funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

The Government sits on the WEKEZA national project advisory council.(2) In 2013, the Government contributed to a WEKEZA study that reported an increase in child school enrollment and a reduction in forced child migration and child labor as a result of the Tanzania Social Action Fund Conditional Cash Transfer. In one case, a child was brought back home so his family could get more cash from the program.(2) The study also revealed that some children are still engaged in child labor in order to purchase food.(95)

In 2013, Thailand made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. Despite political unrest during the year and the Government entering caretaker status in November 2013, the Government took several actions to address child labor. In collaboration with the private sector, the Government focused on prevention efforts to combat labor abuses, including child labor, in the fishing sector. Fishing coordination centers were created in seven provinces to increase protection for workers, including strengthening monitoring through inspections and registering of workers. In addition, the Government enacted the Transnational Organized Crime Act and ratified the UN Trafficking in Persons Protocol in order to strengthen institutional frameworks on transnational organized crimes that can include the worst forms of child labor and human trafficking. The Government improved its data collection systems for reporting on identification and investigations of trafficking cases, and reported on the number of child victims involved in these cases. However, children in Thailand continue to engage in child labor in agriculture, including in the shrimp and seafood processing sector, and in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation. Thailand remains weak in its enforcement efforts, particularly in the home-based business sectors. The Government also lacks current nationwide data on child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Thailand are engaged in child labor in agriculture, including in the shrimp and seafood processing sector, and in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation. (1, 2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Thailand.

	Vending, begging, and domestic service as a result of human trafficking (5, 19-23)
	Forced labor in the production of garments, in shrimp and seafood processing, in domestic service, and in begging (5, 8, 11, 22, 24)
	Use of children in armed violence, such as serving as scouts, informants, and committing acts of arson (12, 25)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Shrimp and seafood processing occurs in the central and southern coastal regions of Thailand. The majority of child laborers in this sector are between the ages of 15 and 17, and both boys and girls are equally engaged in labor, with slightly more girls working than boys.(26) Child labor in the shrimp and seafood processing sector is predominantly among migrant children, but it is also found among Thai children in the southern provinces.(26)

Children as young as age 7 are paid to fight in a form of boxing called Muay Thai, in which they use knees, elbows, hands, and feet to fight, with no protective equipment.(14-17) Work in a gambling place is deemed hazardous by Thai law; however, gamblers place bets on the children fighting.(16, 17) Migrant children may be subjected to forced labor in begging, the selling of flowers, garment factories, shrimp and seafood processing, and domestic service.(1, 5, 8, 11)

Children are trafficked to and within Thailand for commercial sexual exploitation and labor exploitation.(5, 10, 22) They are trafficked to Thailand primarily from Burma, Cambodia, and Laos, and from within Thailand, for commercial sexual exploitation.(5, 10, 19) Children who are trafficked are forced to sell flowers and candy and beg on the streets.(5, 22) Children are also trafficked to and within Thailand into Bangkok and other urban areas to serve as domestic servants.(21)

Children from Laos are reported to seek work in Thailand to support their families, including working in Thai karaoke bars or brothels.(2, 27) Access to education, particularly for migrant and ethnic minority children, is limited by a variety of factors. These factors include a lack of awareness among local government officials and migrant families of migrant children’s right to an education; language barriers, including class instruction and school applications only in the Thai language; the long distances children must travel to attend school; the prohibitive costs of school lunches; burdensome student registration requirements; and family pressure to work rather than attend school.(2) Ethnic minority, stateless, and migrant children are the most at risk of engaging in the worst forms of child labor, particularly in the informal sector.(5)

Thailand continues to experience an ethno-nationalist separatist insurgency based in the four southernmost provinces, which have a majority Malay-Muslim population. Children, teachers, and other education personnel have been killed or wounded in the conflict, which has forced the intermittent closure of schools in the region.(25, 28) There is some evidence that separatist groups recruited children to commit acts of arson or serve as scouts and informants. There are also reports of children’s involvement in village defense militias.(12, 25)

The Government lacks current nationwide data on the worst forms of child labor.(2) In addition, current reporting and statistics on child labor that do exist often omit street children and migrant children.(29)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Thailand has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

In 2013, the Government strengthened the regulatory framework to combat human trafficking and the worst forms of child labor by enacting the Anti-Transnational Organized Crime Act (2013) and ratifying the UN Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and its Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children.(2, 38) The Government reports that the Act will provide law enforcement agencies the ability to carry out more efficient investigations and prosecution of trafficking in persons (TIP) cases that fall under the category of transnational organized crime.(39)

In the agricultural sector, the Labor Protection Act permits children between the ages of 13 and 15 to work during school vacation or non-school hours, as long as they receive parental permission and the nature of the work is not hazardous or otherwise detrimental to the child's well-being.(2) However, the number of hours permitted for children to perform light work in agriculture is not clear.(40) During the reporting period, the Department of Labor Protection and Welfare (DLPW) reported that it is revising the ministerial regulation on agricultural work to adjust the minimum age of agricultural workers to comply with international standards.(2, 41, 42)

In fishing, Ministerial Regulation No. 10 issued under the Labor Protection Act permits children ages 15 to 16 to work on fishing boats if they are accompanied by a parent or guardian, or with the written consent of a parent or guardian. However, the 2012 hazardous work list for children prohibits children under age 18 from working on fishing boats.(2) During the reporting period, the Government drafted a revision of The Ministerial Regulation on Sea Fishing Vessels, which would provide greater protections for workers in line with international standards, including increasing the minimum age for work on sea vessels from 16 to 18 years, and updating the Labor Protection Act.(2) However, the revision has not been finalized.(12)

Thailand

The Ministerial Regulation on Labor and Welfare Protection for Domestic Workers offers some protection to domestic workers in third-party households.(5) However, the regulation fails to define the number of allowable working hours. (10, 43)

While Thailand has various laws prohibiting crimes against children, it does not have laws specifically addressing child pornography. This makes it more complicated for law enforcement to prosecute child pornography offenders and does not provide a clear protection mechanism for child pornography victims.(2, 27)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Department of Labor, Protection, and Welfare (DLPW) of the Ministry of Labor (MOL)	Enforce labor laws, including the Labor Protection Act and its ministerial regulations on domestic work, agriculture, and sea fishing vessels, through workplace inspections.(5, 27, 44) Operate a MOL telephone hotline, Hotline 1506, to answer questions involving working conditions and receive complaints from the public about child labor.(45, 46)
Fishing Coordination Centers (operated jointly by the Department of Employment, DLPW, and the Marine Police)	Monitor and inspect working conditions of fishing vessels. Aim to increase protection for workers, and allow migrants to become legalized through a registration process.(2, 47)
Anti-Human Trafficking Division (AHTD) of the Royal Thai Police (RTP)	Enforce laws specifically related to forced labor, human trafficking, and commercial sexual exploitation of women and children.(2)
Department of Special Investigations (DSI) in the Ministry of Justice	Investigate complicated human trafficking crimes, including those related to police complicity and transnational or organized crime. MOU between Thai Police and DSI states that a NGO or social worker can choose which entity will investigate and that that entity must work on the case from start to finish.(2, 47, 48)
RTP and Attorney General	Enforce the Transnational Organized Crime Act.(27)

Law enforcement agencies in Thailand took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, the DLPW's operational budget for the labor inspectorate was $492,280, a 24 percent increase from the 2012 budget.(2, 42) The DLPW employed 678 labor inspectors, a number that the Department recognized as insufficient to adequately monitor all workplaces covered by Thai labor laws.(2, 42) DLPW requested additional labor inspectors, but this request was rejected by the Government.(2) To address this issue, the DLPW authorized the Thai Police and Thai Navy (in the case of sea fishing vessels) to conduct labor inspections. As of January 2014, approximately 160 officers from the Marine Police and Navy were trained and registered as labor inspectors.(2) The DLPW reported that, in addition to regular annual training, 150 junior labor inspectors, 693 labor inspectors, and 40 occupational safety and health inspectors received focused training on the worst forms of child labor.(2, 42) Labor inspectors were also trained on how to conduct home inspections.(12)

DLPW labor inspectors inspected 581 workplaces, specifically for child labor law violations, and found 27 workplaces that were in violation of the law. The violations included employing children who were under age 15, failure to notify DLPW of employed youth workers, delayed payment of wages, and the use of child labor for overnight shifts.(2, 41, 42) DLPW confirmed that, in cases where fines were applicable, they were collected; however, examples of penalties reported by DLPW are less than what is prescribed by law.(2) DLPW only monitors labor violations under labor laws and does not keep track of criminal cases under TIP statutes.(47) Despite the Ministry of Labor's (MOL) efforts to hire interpreters to facilitate communication with migrant workers, labor inspection teams were rarely accompanied by interpreters. Inspectors often rely on the interpreters who are provided by the employer or other migrant workers inside the factory.(2)

Enforcement of the list of hazardous work prohibited to children is concentrated in the formal sector, such as the industrial and service sectors.(2) Under the Home Workers Protection Act (Act), DLPW now includes home-based workplaces under its purview.(2) However, labor inspectors have limited access to the entities covered by the Act, including home-based businesses and home-based employment sites, which require a warrant to inspect. This makes the inspection of private homes to monitor the welfare of child domestic workers or children working in home-based employment very challenging.(2, 12)

The MOL used the Labor Protection Network as another means to learn about reported cases of child labor violations. The 45,979-person network is composed of government agencies, NGOs, employers, academics, and community groups.(2, 49) Its purpose is to raise awareness, disseminate information, and provide a mechanism for reporting labor violations.(10)

In October 2013, the Department of Employment created fishing coordination centers in seven provinces which are responsible for registering migrant workers and conducting inspections of boats and working conditions. Through increased pressure on boat owners and employers, the creation of the centers has led to an increase in registered workers which assists in identifying and protecting child laborers.(2)

NGOs report that grievance mechanisms are weak for workers, including child laborers, in the informal sector, in remote areas, and on fishing vessels.(2)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2013, the Anti-Human Trafficking Division (AHTD) of the Royal Thai Police (RTP) and the Department of Special Investigations in the Ministry of Justice had 300 officials and 22 officials, respectively, who were responsible for enforcing laws specifically related to forced child labor, trafficking, and commercial sexual exploitation of children.(2) From January to December, the RTP initiated investigations into 674 trafficking cases, doubling the figure from last year. These cases involved 1,020 trafficking victims, including 757 victims under the age of 18.(50) Through formalized complaint mechanisms for workers, and with assistance from inter-agency partners, the DLPW reported that it assisted 38 labor trafficking victims, including four victims under the age of 15, to claim wages and overtime pay when the employer failed to comply with labor laws.(2, 47)

During the reporting period, the Ministry of Social Development and Human Security (MSDHS) trained 300 frontline police officers and social workers on trafficking victim identification. The RTP trained 874 police officers, including 169 female police investigators, on human trafficking investigation techniques.(2)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Thailand

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
The National Committee to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Coordinate the implementation of child labor policies and plans, facilitate cooperation among various coordinating ministries, and report semiannually to the Thai Cabinet on child labor issues.(44) Chaired by the MOL, with representation from other government agencies, employer and worker associations, and civil society groups.(51) Oversee three subcommittees that monitor the National Policy and Plan to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2009-2014); update the list of hazardous activities prohibited to children under age 18; and work on key performance indicators to measure and eliminate the worst forms of child labor in Thailand.(44, 52) In 2013, the MOL expanded participation to include the Ministry of Information and Communication Technology, the National Statistical Office, the Budget Bureau, and the Public Relations Office to facilitate cooperation on data collection to combat the worst forms of child labor.(2, 41, 42) In coordination with DLPW, the subcommittee on hazardous work for youth labor worked with the ILO on technical studies to provide scientific evidence to clarify permissible temperatures, noise levels, and weightlifting amounts to amend the Labor Protection Act (LPA) hazardous child labor laws.(2, 42) Subcommittee on monitoring and evaluation has extended its responsibilities to include development of the second National Policy and Plan to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2015-2019).(2)
The Anti-Trafficking in Persons Committee (ATP)	Make decisions and policy recommendations on combating human trafficking, and coordinate strategy across agencies. Chaired by the Prime Minister. Supervise the Coordinating and Monitoring of Anti-Trafficking in Persons Committee (CMP).(33, 53, 54) Oversee multiple other subcommittees that cover a range of topics, including data collection, combating trafficking in fishing sector, and implementation of the national anti-trafficking policy.(55)
The Coordinating and Monitoring of Anti-Trafficking in Persons Committee (CMP)	Monitor and evaluate the implementation of policy, as well as prepare plans and recommendations for review by the ATP. Chaired by the Deputy Prime Minister.(33)
National Operation Center for the Prevention and Suppression of Human Trafficking	Coordinate anti-human trafficking activities, including those involving child forced labor, trafficking, and commercial sexual exploitation. Secretariat for the ATP and CMP falls under the Ministry of Social Development and Human Security (MSDHS). Manage 76 Provincial Operation Centers for the Prevention and Suppression of Human Trafficking; these serve as the frontline implementers of anti-human trafficking activities.(2)

During the reporting period, the Government of Thailand worked with counterparts from Laos, Brunei, Burma, China, Malaysia, and the United Arab Emirates to improve information-sharing and collaboration on prevention and enforcement to combat human trafficking.(2) The Government also began implementing an action plan under a Memorandum of Cooperation with the Government of Japan, which calls for the exchange of information for the purpose of preventing and combating trafficking in persons.(47)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Thailand has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
The National Plan of Action (NPA) to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2009–2014)	Aims to prevent, protect, and withdraw children from the worst forms of child labor, improve legislation and law enforcement related to the worst forms of child labor, and build the capacity of officials who administer policies and programs on the worst forms of child labor.(1, 44, 56) Key performance indicators include a reduction in the number of children engaging in the worst forms of child labor; increased efforts to remove children from the worst forms of child labor; increased criminal prosecutions against employers who exploit children; increased capacity and knowledge of practitioners working in this field; and increased national- and provincial-level administrative and management efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor.(5) In 2013, the DLPW received a government budget allocation of $172,356 to specifically implement the NPA.(2)
The Government's National Policy Strategies and Measures to Prevent and Suppress Trafficking in Persons (2011–2016)	Comprehensive Anti-Trafficking in Persons Policy contains five strategies which are operationalized in annual action plans.(55) Strategies include prevention; prosecution; protection and assistance; development of policy and promotion mechanisms; and development and management of information.(57)

Policy	Description
National Child and Youth Development Plan (2012–2016)*	Main principles include (1) the enforcement and implementation of the National Child and Youth Development Promotion Act of 2007 and relevant laws; (2) the idea that every child and young person has the right to receive basic education of the highest quality; (3) the notion that children and youth have the right to basic health care services of the highest standard; and (4) the idea that children and youth have the right to play, rest, and participate in recreational activities.(58, 59)

*The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Thailand funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
National and Provincial Operation Centers for Providing Assistance to Women and Child Laborers‡	DLPW program that provides assistance to women and child laborers, collects and disseminates information on the worst forms of child labor, and reports their activities to the National Committee. (5)
Trafficking victim support services‡	MSDHS' Bureau of Anti-Trafficking in Women and Children program that operates 76 Provincial Operation Centers to provide emergency assistance and protection to human trafficking victims. Nine long-term shelters offer medical care, psychosocial services, education, and life skills education for human trafficking victims.(10, 19, 54) In 2013, government shelters provided services to 681 trafficked victims, including 518 children under the age of 18.(50)
Migrant Learning Centers‡*	Government and nonprofit organizations program to provide basic education to children in migrant communities. Government District Education Offices provide guidance and technical support to ensure that children receive a learning assessment and meet qualifications to earn a certificate of completion issued by the Ministry of Education.(10)
Combating the Worst Forms of Child Labor in Shrimp and Seafood Processing Areas in Thailand	$9 million USDOL-funded, 4-year project implemented by ILO-IPEC to eliminate child labor in the shrimp and seafood processing industry. Aims to strengthen policy frameworks to protect the rights of Thai and migrant children; assist the shrimp and seafood processing industry to comply with labor laws; and provide education and other services to at-risk children and families in the targeted areas. (1)Targets 7,500 children for the prevention and withdrawal from the worst forms of child labor, and 3,000 households for livelihood services.(1) In 2013, completed and finalized a baseline survey of child labor in the shrimp and seafood processing areas in Samut Sakhon, Songkla, Nakhon Si Thammarat, and Surat Thani.(26) Completed a migrant child labor survey targeting shrimp and seafood processing areas in Samut Sakhon. Piloted and implemented the Good Labor Practices Training Program for factory owners and workers.(60, 61) Worked with two subdistrict governments to institute a pilot for child labor monitoring systems in Samut Sakhon and Songkhla provinces to keep current data on child labor.(2)
Project Childhood	$3.67 million UNODC-operated, multiyear project to build the capacity of law enforcement officials in Thailand, Cambodia, Laos, and Vietnam to identify and prosecute child sex offenders.(62, 63)
ILO-GMS TRIANGLE Project	Government of Australia-funded, 5-year project implemented by ILO to reduce the exploitation of labor migrants through increased legal and safe migration and improved labor protection. Includes six participating countries in the Greater Mekong Sub-region.(64) In 2013, surveyed fishermen in four provinces in the east and south of Thailand and found that 5.5 percent of fishermen were younger than age 18. Worked with the Ministry of Labor to develop a labor inspection training module that focused on child labor, forced labor, human trafficking, and migrant worker protection.(2, 65)
One-Stop Crisis Center (OSCC) 1300 Hotline	MSDHS program that focuses on teenage pregnancy, human trafficking, child labor, and violence against children, women, the elderly, and persons with disabilities. In 2013, OSCC was upgraded and centralized under MSDHS; it created a standardized referral system and coordination process with specialists from the MOL, the Ministry of Public Health, and the RTP.(2, 41) Operators who spoke foreign languages were not yet hired in 2013; enough information is not yet available that measures the effectiveness of the new OSCC hotline to recognize, identify, report, and refer child exploitation victims.(2) From June 9, 2013 to January 13, 2014, the OSCC 1300 hotline received 3,500 calls regarding incidents of violence against children, women, and the elderly (1,604); social problems, such as homeless or missing persons (1,366); teenage mothers (316); human trafficking (197); and child labor (17).(50)

*The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Thailand.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

During the reporting period, various government agencies contributed to awareness raising about child labor. In 2013, the DLPW trained 10,578 children and youth with a special emphasis on the worst forms of child labor; and reached out to 154,170 people in rural areas to raise awareness on child labor, including its worst forms, and demonstrated how to report cases to the DLPW.(2, 42) The agency also developed a briefing pamphlet to explain the LPA ministerial regulation on domestic workers in migrant languages with the inclusion of a sample of standard employment contracts for domestic workers, and tasked provincial offices with the collection of information on domestic workers in each province.(2) The Ministry of Agriculture and Cooperatives and the Office of the Cane and Sugar Board, under the Ministry of Industry, conducted a series of awareness-raising events to eliminate the use of child labor and promote the sound management of chemical use among sugarcane producers and manufacturers.(2, 66) The Ministry of Interior instructed provincial social workers to increase efforts to facilitate the provision of day care for children of workers during sugarcane cutting season and during school breaks.(2, 42, 66) The Ministry of Education instructed local education offices to monitor the use of child labor and publicize information on hazardous child labor to parents and communities.(2, 42)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Bangkok; March 5, 2014.

In 2013, Timor-Leste made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government passed a resolution to establish the National Commission against Child Labor. The new law also provides protection for children working in family-owned businesses. However, children continue to engage in child labor in Timor-Leste, primarily in agriculture. Timor-Leste still has yet to complete the National Action Plan Against Child Labor and has yet to approve a list of hazardous work activities from which children would be prohibited.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Timor-Leste are engaged in child labor, many of them in agriculture.(1, 2) While the extent of the problem is unknown, within agriculture, children work in the production of coffee, especially on family farms.(1, 2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Timor-Leste.

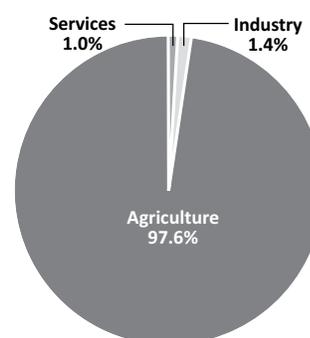

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	10-14 yrs.	19.9 (26,268)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	69.7
Combining Work and School (%)	10-14 yrs.	12.6
Primary Completion Rate (%)		71.0

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2011, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2014.(3)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Timor-Leste Survey of Living Standards Survey, 2007.(4)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of coffee* (1, 2)
	Fishing,* including work on boats* and repairing nets* (2)
Industry	Construction,* including brickmaking* (2)
Services	Domestic work* (2)
	Street vending,* begging,* and scavenging* (2)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor, sometimes as a result of human trafficking* (2, 5-8)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

In a few cases, families place their children in indentured servitude or bonded labor in order to settle outstanding debts.(7, 8)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Timor-Leste has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Timor-Leste

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation

Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 81 of the Immigration and Asylum Act of 2003; Article 164 of the Penal Code of Timor-Leste; Article 67 of the Labor Code (9-11)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 175 of the Penal Code of Timor-Leste; Article 67 of the Labor Code (9, 11)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 67 of the Labor Code (9)
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 14.1 of the Law on Military Service (12, 13)
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	14/15	The Constitution; The Law of Basic Education (7, 14)
Free Public Education	Yes		The Constitution; The Law of Basic Education (7, 14)

The legal framework in Timor-Leste is not completely consistent with international standards regarding child labor. A minor is defined as a person whose age is less than 17 years.(9, 11) This standard may leave children age 17–18 particularly vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor.(15) In 2012, Timor-Leste’s Child Labor Commission working group finalized a list of hazardous work activities from which children under age 18 would be prohibited and submitted it to the Council of Ministers for approval.(14, 16, 17) At the conclusion of the reporting period, the Council had not reviewed and approved the list.(2)

The Law of Basic Education provides free and compulsory primary education for children for nine years.(14) The Law requires children to start school in the year they turn 6, regardless of whether they have reached that age by the time the school year begins. As such, some children start school at age 6 and therefore finish at age 15, whereas children who begin at age 5 finish at age 14.(5) Because some children 14 years of age are no longer required to attend school and are not legally eligible to work, they may be particularly vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. In addition, there is no system in place to enforce primary compulsory education or to ensure primary education is free.(7, 15)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
The Secretariat for Professional Training and Employment (SEPFPOE)	Enforce laws related to child labor. Administer the Labor Inspection Directorate, which is responsible for investigating incidents of forced labor.(2)
National Police of Timor-Leste (PNTL)	Enforce laws related to child labor and criminal laws against forced labor, commercial sexual exploitation, and human trafficking. Includes the Vulnerable Persons Unit.(2, 14, 16)
The Ministry of Social Solidarity (MSS)	Enforce laws related to child labor.(2) Receive referrals from agencies responsible for conducting investigations including child victims. Includes the National Directorate of Social Services.(2) Maintain a directory of service providers for which trafficking victim referrals can be made.(8)
Immigration Police; Border Police	Enforce criminal laws against forced labor, commercial sexual exploitation, and human trafficking.(2)

Law enforcement agencies in Timor-Leste took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, the budget for the inspectorate directorate of the Secretariat for Professional Training and Employment (SEPFPOE) was $150,000. In addition, the office had two cars, one of which was inoperable during the reporting period.(2) According to SEPFPOE and the ILO, available resources are insufficient to adequately conduct inspections, particularly outside Dili.(2, 14)

The Government employed 20 labor inspectors, and three had formal responsibilities both to investigate child labor cases and to enforce child labor laws. The ILO noted that this is an appropriate number of inspectors.(2, 5) SEPFPOE inspectors did not receive any specific child labor related training in 2013.(2) During the reporting period, SEPFPOE conducted random and unannounced inspections of businesses in the formal sector and plans to provide data on the number of inspections in its 2013 annual report.(2) The Government continues to lack a formal mechanism for filing complaints regarding child labor, including its worst forms.(2, 8, 18) In addition, the inspectorate directorate does not publish data on the overall number of investigations.(1) No violations of child labor laws were found, and no penalties or citations for child labor law violations were issued in 2013.(2) Finally, research found no evidence any governmental agency that supports the coordination of child labor enforcement efforts with the provision of appropriate social services for the victims of child labor, including its worst forms.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2013, the National Police of Timor-Leste PNTL had an operating budget of $26.6 million, but continues to face significant human resource and budget execution challenges.(2, 8, 12) One source indicates the police encountered logistical and transportation obstacles in conducting investigations, including cases with child labor.(2) The Vulnerable Persons Unit under the PNTL declined to provide any information on investigations carried out in 2013.(2) There was one known case involving the sale of a child for domestic service as a result of outstanding family debt. The case was referred to the Ministry of Social Solidarity (MSS) and the Psychosocial Recovery & Development in East Timor (PRADET), a local NGO responsible for monitoring children's rights, which provided services, including financial assistance.(2) Together, the PNTL and PRADET prevented the victim from entering domestic service, and as a result the case was never referred to the Prosecutor General's office.(2)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
The Child Labor Commission (CLC)	Design and develop policies on child labor.(14, 19) Recommend policies, raise awareness, and contribute to efforts to ratify the international conventions related to child protection.(16) Located within the Office of the Prime Minister, but chaired by the Chief Labor Inspector of the Secretary of State for Vocational Training and Employment Policy.(5) Comprised of the Secretariats of State for Vocational Training and Employment Policy; Youth and Sports, and Promotion of Equality; the Ministries of Education, Agriculture, Finance, Justice, Health, Social Solidarity, Tourism, Public Works and Commerce, Industry, and the Environment; Trade Unions Confederation; the Chamber of Commerce and Industry; Forum Tau Matan (Eyes on Human Rights Forum); and the NCACL.(2)
National Commission against Child Labor (NCACL)	Address the worst forms of child labor. Tripartite body comprised of members from relevant government ministries, the Chamber of Commerce and Industry, and the Unions' Confederation and support activities conducted by the CLC.(2)
The Inter-Agency Trafficking Working Group	Coordinate the Government's anti-trafficking efforts. Chaired by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Cooperation and includes the MSS, Ministry of Justice, the Ministry of Defense and Security, the Secretary of State for the Promotion of Equality, SEPFPOPE, and the PNTL.(8)
The Ministry of Defense and Security	Oversee the Immigration Police, the Border Police, and the PNTL, all of which work to enforce criminal laws against forced labor, sexual exploitation, and trafficking.(14, 16)

In November 2013, the Government passed a resolution to establish the National Commission against Child Labor (NCACL) to combat the worst forms of child labor.(2) On March 3, the NCACL held its first meeting.(12) The relationship between the NCACL and the Child Labor Commission (CLC) remains unclear.(2)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Timor-Leste has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Timor-Leste Project for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Launched in 2009 in partnership with the ILO and the Government of Brazil to contribute to the implementation of ILO C. 182. Implementation activities include: (1) establishing the CLC; (2) developing a national list of work deemed hazardous and prohibited from children; and (3) developing a national action plan on child labor.(2)
The Timor-Leste Strategic Development Plan 2011-2030	Provides short-term and long-term plans for the nation's development, including the eradication of the worst forms of child labor, poverty alleviation, and implementation of social transfer programs. (2, 14, 20) Specifies commitments to improve the educational system over the next 20 years, including addressing gender parity in primary schools and the preventing school dropouts.(14, 20)
The Decent Work Country Program	Prioritizes the improvement of youth employment conditions and opportunities.(21)

In 2011, the CLC began development of a National Action Plan Against Child Labor.(16) The National Action Plan, still awaiting completion, has been assigned to the newly established NCACL.(22) In early 2012, a National Plan of Action on anti-trafficking was presented for review to the Council of Ministers, which took no action during the reporting period.(8, 22)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Timor-Leste funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
As-needed shelter for victims of human trafficking‡	Supported by MSS and run by the Psychosocial Recovery & Development in East Timor (PRADET). A local NGO, as-needed shelter that offers services for victims of human trafficking.(5, 8, 22) Received $16,000 in funding from MSS in 2013, but no trafficking victims identified. Some funds supported 55 attendees (including 30 local officials such as "suco" village chiefs and Suco Council members) for anti-trafficking and awareness training.(8, 12)

Program	Description
The Mother's Purse (Bolsa da Mae)*‡	MSS program that provides a cash subsidy of $80–$360 to poor families with a female head of household. Aims to improve the well-being of children by conditioning the subsidy on children's school attendance and their regular medical visits.(2, 17) Serves an estimated 15,000 children. Technical assistance provided by the UNDP.(2)
School Feeding Program*‡	Government program to provide one hot meal per day to children in school, reaching about 325,000 students.(2)
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues Project	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016, established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010. Aims to build the capacity of the national Government and develop strategic policies to address the elimination of child labor and forced labor in Timor-Leste.(23)
Community training on human trafficking‡	$15,000 MSS funded project, implemented by the Alola Foundation, a local NGO, to conduct training on human trafficking to raise awareness in the rural districts of Maliana, Ainaro, and Oecusse. Training focused on identifying and assisting victims.(8)

*The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Timor-Leste.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms in Timor-Leste (Table 9).

In 2013, Togo made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government released a report on child labor and youth. The Government intercepted a number of child trafficking victims and prosecuted traffickers of children. In addition, the Government continued to operate a hotline and shelter for children. However, children in Togo continue to engage in child labor in agriculture and in the worst forms of child labor in domestic service. The Government has not devoted sufficient resources to enforce its child labor laws effectively. Togo's social programs to combat the worst forms of child labor do not match the scope of the problem, and rely largely on NGOs and international organizations for implementation.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Togo are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture and in the worst forms of child labor in domestic service.(1-4) More than 70 percent of all working children in Togo, ages 5 to 14, are engaged in agriculture. The majority of children employed as domestic servants are girls ages 5 to 14.(1, 5-8) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Togo.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	35.7 (616,132)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	85.3
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	35.5
Primary Completion Rate (%)		73.5

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2011, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2014.(9)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 4, 2010.(8)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Harvesting cotton,* cocoa,* and coffee* (4, 10-13)
	Producing beans* and corn* (11)
	Herding cattle†* (14)
Industry	Quarrying*† (11, 12)
	Construction, activities unknown* (15)
Services	Domestic work† (1, 5-8, 15, 16)
	Portering* and small-scale trading in markets (4, 11, 13-15)
	Begging† (4, 13)
	Auto and motorcycle repair* (15)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Garbage scavenging* (15)
	Forced begging (4, 13)
	Commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of human trafficking (4, 13, 15, 17)
	Farming, domestic work, and market work, as a result of human trafficking (4, 13, 15, 17)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

The practice of sending Muslim boys to Koranic schools is a tradition in certain communities.(10) Some boys are forced by their teachers to beg in the streets.(4, 13) In 2013, the majority of children trafficked were trafficked from rural areas, especially the Plateau Region, and research indicates the majority of trafficking victims were boys.(18) The customary practice of confiage, which involves sending a child to a relative or friend for school, may place children at risk of exploitation by internal trafficking.(3, 19) Children are trafficked from Togo to countries in West and Central Africa to work in agriculture. In addition, children from Benin and Ghana are trafficked to Togo for forced labor.(13)

Research found that many children lack access to education and birth registration. Moreover, the UN CRC has noted that there are not enough schools, and many children in rural areas have no access to primary education.(3) The CRC has also noted that half of all children in Togo are not registered at birth.(3) Unable to prove citizenship, non-registered children are vulnerable to trafficking and may have difficulty getting health care and education.(3, 8, 20) Research also found that children face sexual abuse in school. Moreover, the UN CRC has noted that sexual abuse and rape of children in school is widespread throughout Togo.(3) Victims of sexual violence in schools often have extended absences or drop out.(21) In addition, a source indicates that girls perform domestic duties, such as fetching water and laundry, for their schoolteachers.(22)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Togo has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations concerning child labor.

Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Decree 2008-129 (11, 29)
Free Public Education	Yes		Decree 2008-129 (11, 30)

* No conscription or no standing military.

Although Law 1464 and the Labor Code prohibit excessive work hours and night work for children, these laws do not establish penalties for employing children in hazardous child labor, including work at night.(11, 23, 24) The Labor Code's forced labor provisions do not impose penalties sufficient to deter it. Violators can receive a fine and 3 to 6 months' imprisonment, which can be doubled if it is a repeat offense.(23) Also, though education is free, in practice, the costs of uniforms and books prohibit many families from sending their children to school.(11, 29)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MOL)	Enforce all labor laws, including child labor laws.(31)
Ministry of Justice (MOJ)	Enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor.(10, 12)
Ministry of Social Action and National Solidarity (MASSN)	Enforce laws against the worst forms of child labor.(10, 12, 15)
Police's Child Protection Unit (CPU)	Investigate cases with child victims, including child trafficking.(15, 32)

Criminal law enforcement agencies in Togo took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms. However, research found no evidence that labor law enforcement agencies took such actions.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, the Ministry of Labor (MOL) employed 81 labor inspectors, which was an increase from 75 inspectors employed the previous year.(15) However, the MOL acknowledges that funding for inspectors is insufficient. Moreover, UNICEF and several NGOs have noted that inspectors do not devote enough time to children.(15, 33) In addition, information is not available on the number of inspections conducted, child labor violations found, or the number of citations and penalties issued by the Government in 2013.(15)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2013, the Government rescued and provided assistance to 324 boys and 256 girls who were trafficking victims.(18) During the reporting period, the Government identified 85 suspected child traffickers, arrested 81, prosecuted 61, and convicted 40 of child trafficking.(18, 34) However, the Police's Child Protection Unit (CPU) lacks resources to conduct investigations, and its employees must respond to calls in taxis and personal cars.(35) Furthermore, among law enforcement personnel, knowledge of the different laws protecting children varies from region to region. A source indicates that staff members in some regional offices do not have copies of many child labor laws.(31)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Committee for the Reception and Social Reinsertion of Trafficked Children (CNARSEVT)	Serve as the primary focal coordinating agency for child labor issues, including the worst forms of child labor.(15, 18) Responsible for compiling information and statistics on trafficking, and coordinating actions against the worst forms of child labor. Assisted by MOL's Child Labor Unit.(10, 18, 20)
National Steering Committee for the Prohibition and Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor (NSC)	Promote child labor legislation, mobilize resources, and collect data.(31, 36) MOL's Child Labor Unit acts as its secretariat.(10, 14, 15, 31, 36)

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Child Labor Committees	Operate in Togolese villages and include representatives from several ministries, the National Council of Employers, unions, and NGOs.(10, 12, 18, 20, 27, 31) Coordinate efforts by sharing information with officials in Lomé about trafficking trends and work with the MASSN to track the return of trafficking victims.(18, 20, 27, 36)

In 2013, CNARSEVT continued to coordinate with other agencies and refer child victims to social services.(15) NSC has limited its actions to evaluating and approving NGO action programs to eliminate child labor.(36) Members of the NSC attribute this shortcoming to the committee's lack of financial resources: Its secretariat is understaffed and has no budget.(36)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Togo has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan on Child Labor 2012–2015	Serves as the primary government policy instrument to prevent and eliminate child labor in Togo.(15, 34, 37)
National Strategy on Elimination of Child Labor through Education, Training, and Apprenticeship	Aims to reduce child labor through education, training, and apprenticeship.(34)
National Plan of Action on Child Trafficking	Calls for legal and health services, including providing meals and medical care for child-trafficking victims and conducting awareness-raising activities for local communities and border officials. Promotes the education of children and improvement of livelihoods for families, and calls for the establishment of structures to monitor the trafficking of children.(34, 38)
National Labor Policy	Seeks to raise awareness among parents, employers, and community leaders on child labor; seeks to provide labor inspectors with training on child labor issues; and calls for the adoption and implementation of the National Action Plan on Child Labor.(39, 40)
National Plan for Registering Births in Togo*	Aims to increase documentation of births. Calls for simplifying the process for regional officials to document births in rural areas.(18)
Quadripartite Agreement between Governments of Togo, Ghana, Benin, and Nigeria	Works to prevent child trafficking along the countries' shared borders and facilitate the repatriation of trafficked children and extradition of traffickers.(18)
Strategy to Increase Growth and Promote Employment 2013-2017†	Serves as the primary national anti-poverty plan, which includes components on child labor and education.(15, 34, 41)

* The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Policy was launched during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Togo funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016 established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010. Aims to build the capacity of the national government and develop strategic policies to eliminate child labor, improve the evidence base on child labor through data collection and research, and strengthen legal protections and social service delivery for child domestic workers.(42)
Eliminating the Worst Forms of Child Labor in West Africa and Strengthening Sub-Regional Cooperation through ECOWAS I & II	USDOL-funded regional projects that supported ECOWAS to strengthen its role in combating the worst forms of child labor in the West Africa sub-region by providing policy and capacity building support for all ECOWAS states.(43, 44)

Program	Description
MASSN Radio awareness campaign*‡	Government program that conducts awareness campaigns to disseminate the Child Code of 2007.(10, 13, 27)
Allo 1011 hotline‡	Government program that maintains a hotline for reporting child abuse, including child trafficking.(10, 13, 15 27)
Tokoin Community Center‡	Government program that maintains a temporary shelter for victims referred by the Allo 1011 hotline.(13, 27)
Cash Transfer Program for Vulnerable Children in Northern Togo†	World Bank-funded program that aims to prevent child labor and child trafficking by providing cash transfers to high-risk families with young children.(33, 45)
Togo Community Development and Safety Nets Project*	World Bank-funded program that aims to improve access to development and social safety nets for vulnerable populations.(46)
Free school lunch program*‡	Government program that provides free school lunches.(33, 47) In 2013, increased the number of beneficiaries from 44,000 to 67,774 students.(34)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Togo.

In 2013, the Government released a report on child labor and youth, which was conducted by Understanding Children's Work. The report provides information on the scope of the child labor situation in Togo.(48, 49) The Government also released a report on commercial sexual exploitation of children aged 8 to 17 in Togo. The report identified 1,533 children engaged in commercial sexual exploitation.(15, 18, 34)

Although Togo has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem. Many programs rely largely on NGOs and international organizations for implementation. As a result, many of these interventions may not be sustainable over the long term. In addition, it is unknown how many complaints related to child labor were made to the Allo 1011 hotline.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Togo (Table 9).

Tonga

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

In 2013, Tonga made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The lack of information regarding the worst forms of child labor in Tonga may be an indicator of a small or hidden problem. To address this knowledge gap, the Government sought to validate its data on child labor complaints, and conducted a spot survey in key sectors in which limited evidence has indicated that child labor occurs. Gaps in the legal framework remain; the country has no laws specifying a minimum age for work or defining hazardous forms of work for children under age 18, leaving children unprotected from many types of labor exploitation.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

There is little information available about the extent and nature of the worst forms of child labor in Tonga. Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Tonga. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	7-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		103.0

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2014.(1)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis, 2013.(2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Tonga has ratified one key international convention concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The Government has not ratified ILO C. 182 or the CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution, and Pornography.

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

* No conscription or no standing military.

Tonga has not established a minimum age for work or for hazardous work, nor has it established a list of hazardous occupations prohibited for children. The Government has drafted an Employment Relations Bill and placed it into public consideration; if enacted, it would establish minimum ages for work and hazardous work.(13, 14) The Criminal Offenses Act prohibits the procurement of any girl under age 21 for prostitution either within or outside the country.(7) The Act does not provide the same protections for boys under 21, but it prohibits “indecent assault” on both boys and girls under age 12.(3, 7) There is no military conscription in Tonga. The minimum age for voluntary service is 18; however, with parental approval, children can enlist in the military at age 16 for noncombat positions.(9)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Commerce, Tourism, and Labor (MCTL)	Enforce labor laws relating to child labor. MCTL's business license inspectors look for children engaged in the worst forms of child labor in the course of their regular inspection duties.(3) If MCTL receives a specific report of child labor, Chief Labor Inspector visits the site, conducts an investigation, and requests police involvement if necessary.(3)
Tongan Police Transnational Crime Unit and Domestic Violence Unit	Enforce criminal laws relating to the worst forms of child labor.(3, 15)
Ministry of Internal Affairs, Immigration Department	Collaborate with Tongan Police and MCTL on enforcement of criminal laws relating to the worst forms of child labor, when circumstances warrant.(3, 14, 15)

Research found no evidence that law enforcement agencies in Tonga took any actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

The Ministry of Commerce, Tourism, and Labor (MCTL) has acknowledged a need for more inspectors.(15) No funding was allocated to child labor investigations. No known cases of child labor were reported, investigated, or prosecuted during the reporting period.(3, 15)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that the Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Tonga has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Strategic Development Plan (2009 – 2013)*	Includes the goal to increase the performance of technical and vocational education services and infrastructure in the country.(16) Priority given to women and children to strengthen competencies in agriculture and fishing. Plan identifies horticulture, fishing, business and marketing, plumbing, carpentry, and motor maintenance as other areas where training is needed.(17)
Tonga Education Policy Framework*	Aims to build the capacity of the Ministry of Education, improve school quality, and achieve universal primary education.(3)

*The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

Research did not determine the extent to which children who receive skills training under the Strategic Development Plan are protected from dangerous work.

During the reporting period, the Government took steps to collect better data on child labor. MCTL attempted to validate its registered data on child labor complaints, and the Ministry of Internal Affairs (MOIA) conducted a “spot survey” to look into sectors in which limited evidence has indicated child labor occurs. The Government stated that a report on this survey was under development by the Crisis Intervention Desk of the National Forum of Church Leaders in Tonga for MOIA.(14)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Although limited evidence suggests that there may be problems in some sectors, research found no evidence of programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Tonga (Table 7).

Table 7. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

Trinidad and Tobago

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2013, Trinidad and Tobago made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government established the Counter-Trafficking Unit to partner with the Police and the Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions to prosecute traffickers, as well as to coordinate with government agencies and non-governmental organizations to ensure victim protection. The Government also signed a Strategic Plan with UNICEF to promote children's rights, education, and early childhood development. In addition, it adopted a National Youth Policy that seeks to incorporate youth as partners in national development and mainstream youth issues in national policies. However, while the prevalence is thought to be limited, children in Trinidad and Tobago are reported to engage in child labor in agriculture and in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation. The Children's Authority of Trinidad and Tobago, which is mandated to protect children's rights by the Children's Authority Act of 2000 and the Children's Authority (Amendment) Act of 2008, is still not fully operational. The Government also has yet to ratify a list of hazardous occupations prohibited to children.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

While the prevalence is thought to be limited, children in Trinidad and Tobago are reported to engage in child labor in agriculture and in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation.(1-4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Trinidad and Tobago.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	3.0 (5,975)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	97.8
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	3.3
Primary Completion Rate (%)		91.0

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 3, 2014.(6)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Activities unknown* (1-3, 7)
Services	Domestic service* (7, 8)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of human trafficking* (3, 4, 9) Used in drug trafficking as a result of human trafficking* (3)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

A lack of data on the nature and prevalence of the worst forms of child labor precludes the development of policies and programs that address child labor issues, including in agriculture and commercial sexual exploitation. While the Government has previously expressed interest in conducting a National Youth Activity Survey that would inform such policies and programs, it has yet to produce one.(10)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Trinidad and Tobago has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government has not ratified the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography.

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation

Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Trafficking in Persons Act (13)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Sexual Offences Act; Children Act; Trafficking in Persons Act (13-16)

Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	18	Defence Act (17)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	12	Education Act (18)
Free Public Education	Yes		Education Act (18)

* No conscription or no standing military.

Trinidad and Tobago's Miscellaneous Provisions (Minimum Age for Admission to Employment) Act (2007) sets the minimum age for employment at 16.(11) However, current legislation does not establish a clear minimum age for hazardous work. There is also no list of hazardous occupations prohibited to children, even though the Government has reportedly been developing one since 2004.(19, 20)

In 2013, the Government implemented the 2011 Trafficking in Persons Act, which prohibits trafficking in persons, including children, for purposes of sexual or labor exploitation.(3, 9, 13). The Children Act, which is meant to replace the current Children Act of 1925, and which strengthens legislative frameworks that protect children's rights, was passed in 2012 but still requires "proclamation" by the President to take effect.(3)

Trinidad and Tobago

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Trinidad and Tobago has no compulsory military service and the minimum age for recruitment to the armed forces is 18. However, those who are willing to join between the ages of 16 and 18 may do so with written approval from a parent or guardian.(21)

The Education Act provides for free and compulsory schooling for children between the ages of 6 to 12.(3, 18, 20) This leaves children ages 12 through 15 vulnerable to child labor, as they are not required to be in school and are not legally permitted to work.(19, 20) The aforementioned Children Act seeks to amend the Education Act by raising the minimum age of compulsory education to 16, making it commensurate with the minimum age for work.(3, 20)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Small and Micro Enterprise Development (MLSME)	Monitor and enforce child labor laws, in part through the Labor Inspectorate Unit.(1, 2) Enforce hazardous labor laws through the Occupational Safety and Health Authority, and coordinate the enforcement of laws related to forced child labor in conjunction with the Ministry of the People and Social Development and the Ministry of National Security.(1, 3)
Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions	Oversee the enforcement of criminal laws in Trinidad and Tobago and lead the Criminal Law Department, which falls under the Ministry of the Attorney General.(22)
Trinidad and Tobago Police Service	Enforce criminal laws, including the commercial sexual exploitation of children and the involvement of children in illicit activities, in conjunction with the Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions.(1, 2)
Counter-Trafficking Unit	Investigate trafficking cases.(3, 23) Partner with the Police and the Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions to prosecute traffickers, as well as coordinate with government agencies and NGOs to ensure victim protection.(2, 3) Established in January 2013 and forms part of the Ministry of National Security.(3)

Law enforcement agencies in Trinidad and Tobago took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, The Ministry of Labor and Small and Micro Enterprise Development (MLSME) employed 15 labor inspectors in its Labor Inspectorate Unit. These inspectors carried out 892 inspections of businesses and found no cases of child labor.(3) The MLSME reports that inspectors received ongoing training on child labor issues in 2013, and the ILO has reported that this training, as well as the number of inspections conducted, is adequate. Ministerial funding and resources are also believed to be sufficient for the scope of the problem.(3)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2013, the Counter-Trafficking Unit employed five investigators. While the Unit's investigators received training on the worst forms of child labor, it was reported that the Police Service were in need of additional training to improve inter-agency coordination.(3) The Government allocated an annual budget of $950,000 for the operation of the Counter-Trafficking Unit, and the IOM reported that this budget was sufficient. The IOM also reported that the number of investigators was adequate.(3)

While the Counter-Trafficking Unit did not report any criminal child labor violations during the reporting period, the number of investigations related to the worst forms of child labor is unknown.(3) There are three ongoing investigations into suspected cases of child trafficking, with two involving the commercial sexual exploitation of children, and the third involving children being forced to sell drugs. None of the cases has confirmed specific victims. (3) During the reporting period, the Counter-Trafficking Unit and the IOM worked with NGO shelters to assess the services that are available to trafficking victims.(3)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee for the Prevention and Elimination of Child Labor	Coordinate Government efforts to combat child labor and oversee the development of national policies on child labor.(2, 20, 24)
National Task Force Against Trafficking in Persons	Coordinate efforts to combat trafficking in persons and prosecute traffickers. Coordinate the provision of assistance to trafficked victims and develop national policies on trafficking.(3) Established by the Trafficking in Persons Act.(13)
Child Protection Task Force	Review policies and legislation on child protection issues and make recommendations on how public and private stakeholders can reduce risks to children's well-being. Tasked with making recommendations on how the Children's Authority of Trinidad and Tobago can be made fully functional.(3)

In 2013, the Prime Minister convened the Child Protection Task Force, which had not been active in the previous reporting period, and mandated that it make recommendations on how the Government can reduce risks to children and provide protections for them.(3) It was reported that the Government did not convene the National Task Force Against Trafficking in Persons in 2013.(3) Evidence suggests that the National Steering Committee for the Prevention and Elimination of Child Labor was also inactive in 2013 given a governmental report that called for its re-establishment.(3, 20)

The Children's Authority (Amendment) Act of 2008 contains provisions to empower the Children's Authority of Trinidad and Tobago. This body was conceived through legislative efforts in 2000 and was designed to enforce laws on children's welfare, promote the rights of children, and provide services for child protection.(1, 25-27) However, the Children's Authority has yet to become fully operational.(3)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Trinidad and Tobago has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Strategic Plan for Child Development, 2012-2016	Aims to develop comprehensive initiatives across governmental ministries to promote and protect children's rights, including the elimination of all forms of child labor. Participating ministries include the MLSME and the Ministry for Gender, Youth, and Child Development.(3)
National Strategy for Child Rights†	Seeks to strengthen mechanisms and structures for protecting children's rights.(3)
National Youth Policy†	Seeks to incorporate youth as partners in national development and mainstream youth issues in national policies.(3)
Trinidad and Tobago – UNICEF Strategic Plan†	Aims to improve the lives of children through five focus areas, including evidence-based policy making, the promotion of children's rights, child protection programming, and education and early childhood development. Ministry of Planning and Sustainable Development will coordinate the planning and implementation of initiatives in concert with the UN's 2012-2016 efforts in the Eastern Caribbean.(28)

† Policy was launched during the reporting period.

The Government has yet to produce an action plan to implement policies that call for the prevention and elimination of child labor.(20)

In November 2013, the Government participated in the XVIII Inter-American Conference of Ministers of Labor to foster continued dialogue and cooperation on labor issues throughout the Americas. The joint declaration of the Conference promotes social dialogue to address child labor and reaffirms country participants' commitment to work with civil society organizations to advance efforts toward the eradication of child labor.(29)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Trinidad and Tobago funded programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
MLSME Programming‡	Aims to raise awareness about child labor and disseminate information on its negative effects through newspaper messages and its radio program "Labor Link."(2, 3)
Educational Programming*‡	Ministry of Education programs that encourage children to remain in school, including a school meal program that provides breakfast and lunch to children from low-income families; a book grant program; and a School Support Services Program that aids high-risk students with homework, counseling, and other services.(1-3)
Empowerment Social Strategies (PRESS ON) Initiative*‡	Ministry of the People and Social Development poverty reduction initiative that targets at-risk populations, including children, and which focuses on food security, youth training and skills development, and educational support.(3)
National Child Registry†	Government program to help provide an effective method for monitoring child welfare and development.(3)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Trinidad and Tobago.

It is not clear whether additional programs to address child labor in agriculture or assist children engaged in commercial sexual exploitation are needed given the limited scope of these problems.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Trinidad and Tobago (Table 9).

Tunisia

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

In 2013, Tunisia made a significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. Tunisia approved a new Constitution, which includes new legal protections for children, and began implementation of a National Plan of Action to Combat Child Labor. The Government increased the number of labor inspectors from 380 to 490, trained them on child labor-related issues, and identified 53 violations of child labor law. The Government also established Child Protection Delegates in each governorate; continued to provide households vulnerable to child labor with cash transfers, access to health care, and school supplies; and initiated a national school feeding program to reduce drop-outs and improve access to public primary schools. However, children in Tunisia continue to engage in child labor in street work and are engaged in the worst forms of child labor in forced domestic service. Tunisia does not have a law to prohibit human trafficking. Furthermore, lack of current national level data on child labor makes it difficult to determine the prevalence and nature of child labor in Tunisia.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Tunisia are engaged in child labor in street work and in the worst forms of labor in forced domestic service.(1-4) Work in these sectors makes both girls and boys vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation.(1, 5, 6) NGOs report that child labor has become more pervasive and visible in Tunisia since the revolution in 2010.(7, 8) The highest poverty and unemployment rates in Tunisia are in the rural southeast region of the country and in the governorate of Kasserine.(9-11) Rural children in Tunisia are less likely than urban children to attend school past age 10.(11) Such children may be working instead of attending school.(9) These children often migrate to urban areas with their families in search of economic opportunity where they become vulnerable to being trafficked.(12) The lack of comprehensive national level data on child labor makes it difficult to assess the nature and extent of child labor in Tunisia.(9)

Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Tunisia. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent

Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	Unavailable

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of human trafficking (5, 12, 15)
	Domestic service sometimes as a result of human trafficking (5, 12, 15)
	Use of children in drug trafficking* (15)
	Forced domestic service (4, 5, 16)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Tunisian children, mostly girls, work in domestic service.(1-3) There are also reports that girls are engaged in commercial sexual exploitation and domestic services as a result of trafficking.(1, 5, 12, 17) Recent reports indicate that young girls from the Northwest region of the country are particularly vulnerable to being trafficking for domestic service.(12) Tunisia is a source and destination country for children engaged in forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation as a result of trafficking. Child migrants fleeing conflict in neighboring countries are particularly vulnerable to human trafficking in Tunisia.(4, 12) Tunisians are vulnerable to transnational trafficking, often lured by traffickers with false promises of well-paid jobs abroad.(12)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Tunisia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 5 of the Penal Code (21)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 232 of the Penal Code; Child Protection Code (19, 21)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 171 and 224 of the Penal Code (21)

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation

Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	18	Child Protection Code (19)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Constitution of Tunisia 2014 (22)
Free Public Education	Yes		Constitution of Tunisia 2014 (22)

Tunisian law is not completely consistent with international standards regarding child labor. After an inspection of the workplace, the Labor Code allows the Government to authorize some children to engage in hazardous work from age 16 as long as the child's health is monitored and the work is paired with specific education and training.(18) The Labor Code gives the Ministry of Youth, Sports, Women, and Family the authority to determine in which hazardous jobs and activities children are not permitted to engage.(23) Children working in the informal sector do not have the same protections under child labor laws and regulations as children working in the formal sector.(18)

Tunisia does not have adequate law to prohibit human trafficking or trafficking of children. The Ministry of Justice has drafted an anti-trafficking bill in collaboration with international organizations. The bill has not yet been passed into law.(15, 24, 25)

The new Constitution, passed in January 2014, codifies the rights of children and sets the stage for new and updated policies and legislation that could provide greater protections for children engaged in child labor.(26, 27)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Social Affairs (MSA)	Enforce child labor laws through its inspectors and through collaboration with child protection officers and medical inspectors to identify and prevent the economic exploitation of minors. Collaborate with the General Union of Tunisian Labor to ensure that the Labor Code is enforced and that cases of child labor are reported and prosecuted.(18, 28, 29)
Ministry of Women and Family Affairs' Regional Centers for Family and Child Protection Delegates (MWFA)	Carry out activities for the protection of vulnerable children; established in 2013. Each governorate represented by its own delegate.(3, 30-32)
Ministry of Education	Collaborate with MWFA to identify children vulnerable to child labor.(17, 33)
Ministry of Justice (MOJ)	Employ a special policy unit tasked with enforcing laws against child commercial sexual exploitation.(7, 23, 28)
National Police	Maintain a special unit to address child commercial sexual exploitation.(23)
Ministry of Interior's Crisis Unit	Enforce law among extremist networks that recruit young Tunisians.(12)

Labor law enforcement agencies in Tunisia took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms. However, research found no evidence that criminal law enforcement agencies took such actions.

Labor Law Enforcement

The Government of Tunisia identified 53 infractions to child labor law and increased the number of labor inspectors from 380 to 490 during the reporting period, but it did not publish information on the resolution of cases.(34, 35) Tunisia has a law to protect children in domestic service, but a limited number of sources state that it is virtually unenforced.(12) Inspectors received training on enforcing laws regarding child labor.(4)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Enforcement agencies do not distinguish effectively between human smuggling and human trafficking, which has hampered the Government's ability to identify trafficking victims, to investigate and prosecute trafficking offenses, and to convict offenders.(4)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor including in its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
MOJ, Interagency Anti-Trafficking in Persons Committee	Coordinate efforts to combat trafficking. Submitted a draft anti-trafficking bill to the Constituent Assembly in late 2012. (7, 28, 35)

Supported by the ILO.(25, 36)

*The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Tunisia.

Turkey

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2013, Turkey made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government published a national child labor survey and increased the number of labor inspectors by 41, from 958 to 999. In addition, the Government established child labor units in five provinces, which are charged with monitoring and coordinating all child labor projects. The projects specifically target children working in mobile and temporary agriculture, on the streets, and in small and medium sized companies. The Government also approved the 2013 Foreigners and International Protection Law, which includes strengthening coordination mechanisms and services to address human trafficking. However, children in Turkey continue to engage in child labor in agriculture, mostly in mobile seasonal work. The Government does not have laws that protect children working in agricultural enterprises employing fewer than 50 workers or small shops employing up to three persons. It also lacks legal protections for children involved in domestic service and work on the street.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Turkey are engaged in child labor in agriculture, mostly in mobile seasonal work.(1) During the reporting period the Government released a 2012 Child Labor Force Survey, which revised the 2006 survey according to 2008 based population projection. Data from the survey indicates one-third of working children are ages 6–14 and two-thirds are ages 15–17.(2) The report found that from 2006 to 2012, the incidence of child labor in rural areas increased from 44.9 percent to 55.2 percent while child labor in urban areas decreased from 55.1 percent to 44.8 percent.(2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Turkey.

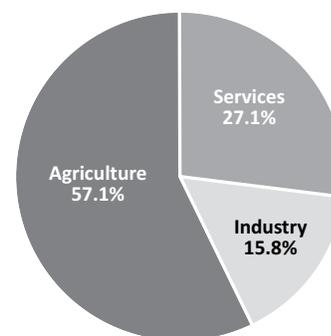

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	2.6 (320,254)
Attending School (%)	6-14 yrs.	92.4
Combining Work and School (%)	6-14 yrs.	1.6
Primary Completion Rate (%)		102.5

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of cotton, hazelnuts, citrus fruits, sugar beets, cumin, peanuts, and pulses (3-14)
Industry	Production of furniture, bricks,* shoes,* leather goods* (4, 14, 15) Auto repair*† (14, 15)
Services	Street work, including selling facial tissue packets or flowers, carrying bundles in market areas, cleaning car windshields, and begging (1, 4, 14, 15)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of human trafficking (14-17) Criminal recruitment of children for sexual exploitation and for the drug trade (18) Use of child soldiers as a result of recruitment by Kurdish militant groups* (14, 19-21)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Evidence suggests that the number of child laborers involved in the production of furniture has considerably declined in the past decade, although the significance of the decline is unknown.(1) With the exception of the hazelnut harvest, which occurs during school vacation, children working in agriculture often migrate with their families for much of the year and may have limited access to health care and education.(3, 11, 12, 15)

Girls are trafficked into Turkey primarily from ex-Soviet countries for commercial sexual exploitation.(17)

There are also reports that children are recruited by Kurdish militant groups that have been fighting in Turkey for nearly three decades.(14, 19-21) A ceasefire has been in effect since March 2013 but militant groups reportedly remain equipped to attack government forces should the ceasefire unravel.(21, 22) During the reporting period, Kurdish groups made a commitment to ensure that 16–18 year olds are not used in combat zones, but media reported that recruitment of under-18s continued.(21) The current number of child soldiers in Kurdish militant groups is unknown. (14)

The Syrian Conflict has resulted in hundreds of thousands of Syrian refugees relocating to Turkey, some in government camps principally along the southern border and some moving into urban areas throughout Turkey. Due to their high level of vulnerability, some refugee children in urban areas are subject to a range of abuses including child labor, sexual exploitation, and trafficking.(1, 23) Some reports indicate that Syrian girls are sold into marriages.(23) During the reporting period, the Government finalized plans to issue biometric identity cards to Syrians, to provide occupational training, and to allow Syrians to work without usual permit formalities, hoping that parents' access to work will alleviate child labor abuses.(24)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Turkey has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4).

Free Public Education	Yes		Education Reform Law (1)

In 2013, the Government extended the minimum wage to workers of all ages.(1) This allows for equal pay for all workers, including 15-year-olds who were not previously included in minimum wage laws, and further discourages legally hiring children below the age of 15 if employers believe that they can pay a lower wage.(24)

Under the National Defense Service Law 3634, 15- to 18-year-olds can be deployed in civil defense forces in the event of a national emergency.(27, 28)

As stated in Article 4 of the Labor Code, labor Laws does not cover children who work in agricultural enterprises employing 50 or fewer workers or in small shops employing up to three persons.(11, 15, 25) These gaps in the labor law leave children vulnerable to exploitative conditions without legal protection. The Government also lacks legal protections for children working in domestic service and working without an employment contract, including those that work on the streets, as stated in Articles 1 and 4 of the Labor Code.

The 2013 ‘Foreigners and International Protection Law’ established the new Department of Protection of Human Trafficking victims within the new General Directorate for Migration Management (GDMM); outlined a new process for identifying human trafficking victims; created a new system to allow human trafficking victims to be eligible for renewable residential permits; and provided funding for three NGO-implemented human trafficking victims shelters in Istanbul, Ankara, and Antalya.(23)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Labor Inspection Board Presidency within the Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MOLSS)	Implement laws on child labor and hazardous child labor, including regulating work environments and conditions for children. Monitor the implementation of the Labor Law provisions in work places under its jurisdiction. Conduct joint inspections with the Mentoring and Inspection Presidency to find children under legal working age who have dropped out of school and direct them back into education.(1)
Mentoring and Inspection Presidency within MOLSS	Monitor compliance with laws related to social security of all workers, including child workers. Conduct joint inspections with the Labor Inspection Board Presidency to find children under legal working age who have dropped out of school and refer them to education services.(1)
Turkish National Police (TNP)	Enforce laws defining criminal activity.(1)
Ministry of Justice	Prosecute legal cases regarding child labor or exploitation of children.(1)
Ministry of Family and Social Policy (MFSP)	Receive all referred child laborers in need of assistance. Directorate General of Child Services within MFSP coordinates services targeted to children living and/or working on the streets.(1)

Law enforcement agencies in Turkey took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, the Government continued to increase the number of labor inspectors authorized to conduct inspections, including on child labor, from 958 to 999. While the number of inspectors is still considered inadequate to fully enforce Turkey’s labor laws, the Government has made a significant effort to meet the demand, nearly doubling the size of the labor inspection force since 2008.(1) Labor inspectors spend the first three years of their careers as assistant inspectors. They receive on-the-job training that includes modules to raise their awareness on child labor and on legal provisions and enforcement mechanisms to address it.(1)

In 2013, 23,504 inspections were conducted involving 2,209,565 workers, including 397 children. Child labor penalties were levied on the 56 violations in 49 workplaces, and approximately $27,000 was collected in fines.(24) However, the majority of child labor in Turkey does not take place in areas and establishments where labor officers have jurisdiction to conduct inspections. This includes small agricultural and forestry enterprises of fewer than 50 employees and small shops employing up to three persons.(1) Social security inspectors, within the Mentoring and Inspection Presidency, do visit businesses of all sizes, and can relay findings of child labor to the Labor Inspection Board Presidency.(24)

Complaints about child labor can be made by phone to a hotline operated by the Directorate General of Child Services within the Ministry of Family and Social Policy (MFSP) or through the Prime Minister’s Office Communications Center Web site.(29) Research did not uncover how many calls were made to the hotline.

Criminal Law Enforcement

The Turkish National Police (TNP) handle all issues related to the treatment and protection of children but do not have a specific unit focused on child labor exploitation.(30) The TNP also investigates cases of human trafficking.(30) The Ministry of Justice, the TNP, and Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MOLSS) provide anti-trafficking training to their employees.(30) These agencies refer child victims to MFSP services.(31) The Government identified 15 adult trafficking victims, all of whom were victims of forced prostitution, and prosecuted 33 individuals on charges related to trafficking. There were no child trafficking victims identified, and no children were placed in child protection institutions during the reporting period.(23) The Ministry of Interior and NGOs provided training to law enforcement, judicial, and Ministry of Interior officials on human trafficking and the law, the referral system for human trafficking victims, and victim identification of human trafficking victims.(23)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee (NSC) on child labor issues	Coordinate and monitor programs and projects to be implemented nationwide to prevent child labor, primarily in its worst forms.(1) Chaired by the MOLSS Undersecretary and includes senior government officials, workers, employers, and NGOs. Coordinate the Time-bound National Policy and Program Framework for the Prevention of Child Labor.(1)
Advisory Board on child labor issues	Develop solutions for preventing child labor and exchange information among institutions regarding their work on child labor. Chaired by MOLSS and composed of representatives from government ministries, workers’ unions, employers’ organizations, NGOs, and universities as well as ILO and UNICEF representatives who participate as observers.(1, 32)
Child Labor Branch of the Employment Policies Directorate within MOLSS	Coordinate all child labor programs and efforts of the Ministry of Education, the Child Services Directorate General in MFSP, the Ministry of the Interior, the Ministry of Justice, and NGOs.(1, 24, 29, 33)
The Child Services Directorate General	Coordinate services for children living and working on the streets; located within the MFSP.(31, 34)
Task Force on Human Trafficking	Coordinate the implementation of the National Action Plan on Combating Human Trafficking. Located within the Ministry of Foreign Affairs (MFA) and coordinated by an ambassadorial-level official; includes officials from six ministries as well as representatives from NGOs, the IOM, and municipalities.(35, 36)

Turkey

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2013, MOLSS launched new offices with dedicated personnel in five priority pilot provinces: Gaziantep, Adana, Sanliurfa, Ordu, and Kocaeli. The offices are charged with monitoring and coordinating all projects and programs in each province while ensuring no overlaps among government departments.(1) In addition, the City Council of Adana formed a Committee to Combat Child Labor and Monitor Working Children.(1)

The Task Force on Human Trafficking has not met since 2012 and did not generate any reports in 2013.(23) However, the Government announced that the Ministry of Interior will create a new GDDM, which will house a new Department of Protection of Human Trafficking Victims. The GDDM will cover migration, asylum, and trafficking in person issues and was expected to be operational in April 2014.(23) When the GDDM is operational, it is expected to create a Coordination Board that will subsume responsibilities of the current Task Force on Human Trafficking.(23)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Turkey has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Time-bound National Policy and Program Framework for the Prevention of Child Labor	Aims to eliminate the worst forms of child labor by 2015. MOLSS, through the National Steering Committee, is the coordinating institution.(1, 37) Prioritizes reducing poverty, improving the quality and accessibility of education, and increasing social awareness and sensitivity to child labor.(1) Priority target groups include children working on the streets, heavy and dangerous work in small- and medium-sized enterprises, and mobile and seasonal agricultural work, except in family businesses. Articulates objectives, indicators, outputs, target groups, activities, and responsibilities for the elimination of the worst forms of child labor.(1)
Second National Action Plan on Combating Human Trafficking	Refines the strategy for the prevention of human trafficking and develops sector-specific action plans.(23)
Ninth Development Plan, 2007–2013	Includes priorities of poverty alleviation and decent work which have an impact on preventing child labor.(1, 38) In July 213, the Tenth Development Plan, 2014–2018, was adopted by the General Assembly of Parliament and includes a focus on increasing equality of opportunity in education and increasing attendance in pre-school education.(39)
Strategic Plan for the Ministry of National Education, 2010–2014	Includes objectives to increase participation rates from pre-school to secondary education, promote vocational education, and terminate gender, and regional disparities.(40)
The Rural Development Plan, 2010–2013	Aims to enhance the living and working conditions of the rural population through sustainable agricultural development and was prepared by the Ministry of Food, Agriculture, and Livestock.(41) Addresses child labor in agriculture and focuses specifically on seasonal migrant labor.(42)

The Government of Turkey reports that they review the impact of policies on child labor when renewing or updating a policy. However, they do not make their assessments publicly available.(24)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Turkey funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Activation of Local Sources on Preventing Child Labor†	MOLSS-implemented 3-year program to support the Time-bound Framework through enhancing local capacity and building an effective monitoring system.(31) Targets children working in dangerous activities in small and medium-sized companies, children working in the streets, and children working in mobile and temporary agricultural work.(1) In 2013, established child labor monitoring units in five provinces to provide coordination and collaboration with other organizations and institutions in the province.(1) Sustain current and direct new efforts to prevent child labor, especially in its worst forms, to include assessments, guidance and direction, reporting, capacity building, and raising awareness. Identified 500 children to receive services.(1)

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Elimination of Worst Forms of Child Labor in Seasonal Commercial Agriculture in Hazelnut [†]	Association of Chocolate, Biscuit and Confectionery Industries of Europe (CAOBISCO)-funded 2-year project that focuses on child labor in hazelnut harvesting in the Black Sea province of Ordu. Aims to raise awareness of the importance of education and the hazards of child labor among farm worker families, farm owners and supervisors, and local administrators and educators in partnership with provincial and municipal government entities and local NGOs.(1, 43) In 2013, withdrew or prevented 252 children from work and counseled 330 seasonal worker families. Effectiveness measurement will be taken in the harvest season of 2014.(44) Documentary video, Pikolo, was produced by the MOLSS-ILO-Ordu partners to raise awareness on child labor in other localities.(1)
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues Project	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016 established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010. Improving the Work and Social Lives of Seasonal Mobile Agricultural Labor (METIP) [‡]	Government program to provide educational opportunities, including transportation, school supplies, and uniforms, to children of migrant laborers in order to prevent child labor in temporary agricultural work.(1) In 2013, Government budgeted $4.5 million to the project and explored ways to incorporate the program into provincial social services to ensure long-term sustainability and expansion to all 81 provinces.(1)
Child and Youth Centers [‡]	MFSP's Directorate General of Child Services program operates 37 Child and Youth Centers and six homes which provide rehabilitation services to children working on the streets. Provide health screening, psychosocial support, occupational training, and education programs including social, cultural, artistic, and sports activities.(34, 42, 46) Provide financial support to families to help with the child's education.(42)
Conditional Education and Health Care Assistance Program [‡]	Government program that aims to reduce poverty through cash transfers.(34) Condition for families to participate in the program is for children between ages 6 and 15 to regularly attend primary school.(29) Provides milk to all primary school children and distributes books free of charge.(31)
Shelters for Victims of Trafficking [‡]	MFA program funded shelters for human trafficking victims in Istanbul, Ankara, and Antalya. Operated by NGOs and provide psychological, medical, and legal services for human trafficking victims.(23)
'157' Hotline for Victims of Trafficking [‡]	MFA and IOM funded and operated 24-hour toll-free hotline in multiple languages for human trafficking victims. Advertised through government awareness raising campaigns in airports and other points of entry into Turkey.(23)
Improving Social Integration and Employability of Disadvantaged Persons ^{†‡}	$12.2 million European Union and Government of Turkey jointly funded grant aims to address poverty, lack of education, unemployment, and housing problems for Roma citizens. Includes activities of providing official identity cards to Roma citizens and supporting parents into the labor market to combat child labor.(24, 47)

[†] Program was launched during the reporting period.

[‡] Program is funded by the Government of Turkey.

The Government of Turkey reports that they review the impact of a program on child labor when renewing or updating that program. However, they do not make their assessments publicly available.(24)

In 2013, Tuvalu made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government, in collaboration with the ILO, began revising its laws to improve compliance with international standards, including those related to child labor. Tuvalu also continued implementing the Decent Work Country Program and educational programs that aim to keep children in school and provide alternative training for those that have dropped out. However, limited evidence suggests that children in Tuvalu continue to engage in child labor, particularly in agriculture and fishing. Gaps remain in the Government's legislative framework. Children ages 15 to 17 are not protected from work in hazardous environments, and children, particularly boys, are not adequately protected from commercial sexual exploitation. In addition, the Government has not collected data to determine the prevalence and nature of the worst forms of child labor in the country to inform policy and program development.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Limited evidence suggests that children in Tuvalu are engaged in child labor, particularly in agriculture and fishing.(1, 2) There is little available information about the extent and nature of the worst forms of child labor in Tuvalu.(3, 4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Tuvalu. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent

Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	Unavailable

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Tuvalu has ratified one key international convention concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The Government of Tuvalu has not ratified ILO C. 182 on the Worst Forms of Child Labor.

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

In 2013, with support from the ILO, the Government began revising its laws to improve compliance with international standards, including those related to child labor. It also began working toward ratification of key ILO conventions, including the convention of the worst forms of child labor.(4) However, Tuvalu's current legislative framework still has a number of gaps.

Tuvaluan law does not protect all children under 18 from hazardous work. There is no explicit minimum age for hazardous work nor a hazardous work list.(7) Article 85 of the Employment Act prohibits children under age 15 from working on ships and in industrial undertakings, unless approved by the Minister of Labor. Article 86 of the Act prohibits boys under 16 from working in underground in mines. However, Article 87 permits boys under 18 to engage in these same types of work with certain restrictions.(7) There are no restrictions preventing girls ages 15 to 17 from performing work in underground mines, aboard ships, or during the night.(7)

Article 92 of the Employment Act allows children above the age of 14 to enter into 5-year apprenticeship programs. Apprentices may legally live away from their families, increasing their vulnerability to exploitation.(7) Article 118 gives the Minister of Labor Minister authority to exempt any person or class or group of persons from provisions of the law, including those provisions related to child labor.(7)

Articles 136, 137, and 139-142 of the Penal Code protect girls from prostitution, but there are no similar legal protections for boys older than age 15.(8, 13) Therefore, when the court has reasonable cause to suspect that a female child is being subjected to commercial sexual exploitation, it may issue the Tuvalu Police Force a warrant to search the premises and arrest the accused individual(s) under Article 143 of the Penal Code.(8) When a case involving the commercial sexual exploitation of a minor goes to trial, the court may appoint a guardian for a female victim. Since the law does not cover male children in similar circumstances, they lack this protection.(8)

All pornography is illegal in Tuvalu, and the Article 166 of the Penal Code includes penalties for those who make, distribute, or possess obscene publications.(3, 8, 14) While Article 141 of the Penal Code proscribes the use of children younger than age 15 for unlawful activity, it fails to protect children ages 15 to 17.(8)

Tuvaluan law regarding sexual and trafficking offenses, including those involving minors, designate maximum but not minimum sentences; this could lead to light sentences that are not commensurate with the gravity of the crime.(8)

Though there is no law guaranteeing free education, the Government's education policy provides for free tuition for children ages 6 to 13.(3, 4, 15, 16)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Department of Labor (DOL)	Enforce labor laws, including those related to child labor.(1, 3, 4, 17)
Tuvalu Police Force	Enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor, including those related to child trafficking and the commercial sexual exploitation of children.(3, 4)

Labor law enforcement agencies in Tuvalu took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms. However, research found no evidence that criminal law enforcement agencies took such actions.

Labor Law Enforcement

DOL employs one officer to conduct labor inspections.(4) No inspections conducted during the reporting period revealed child labor.(4) However, reports indicate that DOL has limited institutional capacity to carry out its duties. (3, 18) The Government does not have sufficient resources to formally monitor and enforce child labor laws.(2)

Criminal Law Enforcement

The Government did not track the number of criminal investigations related to the worst forms of child labor during the reporting period. There were no known prosecutions for these crimes in 2013.(4, 8)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The National Advisory Committee on Children, chaired by the Ministry of Education, is responsible for coordinating children's issues and reporting and monitoring on the CRC.(1, 3, 4) However, research found no evidence that the committee functions as a mechanism to address child labor, including in its worst forms.(4)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Tuvalu has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Te Kekeega II*	National development strategy with key objective of improving livelihoods through private sector development and more effective use of public resources.(4) Focuses on improving access to and quality of education for Tuvaluan children.(4)
Tuvalu Education Strategic Plan II (2011-2015) (TESP II)*	Aims to enhance quality of education. Targets all levels of education, from early childhood through secondary, technical, and vocational education.(19) Priority areas include improving curriculum and assessment measures, increasing student achievement, enhancing the quality and efficiency of management, developing human resources, and strengthening strategic partnerships.(19)
Education and Training Sector Master Plan*	Targets children who drop out of school. Implemented by the Ministry of Education.(3, 15) Offers children alternative education and training opportunities.(15)

*The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2012, the Government of Tuvalu participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description and Objectives
Decent Work Country Program (DWCP)	ILO-implemented program that aims to strengthen Tuvalu's labor laws, support the ratification of ILO Convention 182, and improve labor market monitoring systems by collecting recent statistics on child labor.(18, 20) Seeks to improve labor market information and calls for the inclusion of child labor modules in planned household surveys.(20)

Despite these efforts, research found no evidence that the Government of Tuvalu implemented any programs during the reporting period to provide services to children in child labor.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Tuvalu (Table 8).

Uganda

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

In 2013, Uganda made a significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government published the National Labor Force and Child Activities Survey 2011/12 during the year. The survey is the first comprehensive national survey on child labor in Uganda and includes detailed information on the activities of children in the country. The Government also trained 100 immigration officials to identify trafficking victims, registered 399 child victims of trafficking, and rescued 26 children who were being trained in Uganda to assist armed groups in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC). In addition, Uganda began to participate in two new child labor projects. However, children from Uganda are reportedly recruited and forcibly abducted to join rebel militias operating in the DRC and Kenya. Within the country, children continue to engage in the worst forms of child labor in agriculture and in commercial sexual exploitation. Gaps in the legal framework persist, such as between compulsory education and minimum working ages, and enforcement information is not made available.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Uganda are engaged in the worst forms of child labor in agriculture and in commercial sexual exploitation. (1-6) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Uganda.

	Use of under age children in armed conflict, sometimes as a result of abduction and human trafficking (28, 29)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Uganda is a source and destination country for the trafficking of children.(27, 30) Children are trafficked internally for sexual exploitation and forced labor in fishing, agriculture, and domestic service.(30) In some cases, Ugandan children have been trafficked to Central, East, and North Africa for commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor.(25, 31) Children from Burundi, the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC), Kenya, Rwanda, Tanzania, and South Sudan are also trafficked to Uganda for commercial sexual exploitation and agricultural work.(30)

During the year, children from Uganda were recruited and forcibly abducted for service by the March 23 Movement (M23), an armed group based in the DRC, and the Democratic Forces for the Liberation of Rwanda (FDLR) armed group.(28, 29) It is reported that young Muslim boys between the ages of 10 and 15 were recruited and brought to the DRC and Kenya to join rebel militias, though the perpetrators are unknown. In addition, Ugandan children were reported to be in training in Uganda for Allied Defense Force (ADF)/National Army for the Liberation of Uganda rebel activity in the DRC.(28) Children associated with armed groups may be forced to serve as combatants, porters, spies, guards, domestic servants, and sex slaves. Children also monitor military check points and are used during looting expeditions.(29)

During the year, there were no reports that the Lord’s Resistance Army (LRA) had abducted or conscripted children within Uganda for use in armed conflict. However, limited evidence suggests that the LRA used abductees from South Sudan, the DRC, and Central African Republic (CAR) as temporary porters.(32) The Uganda People’s Defense Force (UPDF) assisted two children returning from LRA captivity during the reporting period; however, children abducted by the LRA continue to be unaccounted for and may be held by the LRA in the DRC, CAR, and South Sudan.(28)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Uganda has ratified the African Union Convention for the Protection and Assistance of Internally Displaced Persons in Africa (Kampala Convention).(33) The Convention prohibits armed groups from recruiting children or allowing them to participate in conflict in any manner.(34)

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

* No conscription or no standing military.

The use, procurement, or offering of any child for prostitution is illegal under Article 5 of Uganda's Employment (Employment of Children) Regulations 2012. (3) Despite these Regulations, Section 131 of the Penal Code only criminalizes those who procure or attempt to procure a girl for the purpose of commercial sexual exploitation. The Penal Code does not protect boys from being procured for the same purpose. (41, 46) The Penal Code penalizes intermediaries, but it is not clear whether it penalizes clients. The Code does not protect children who are procured or offered for prostitution from being treated as offenders rather than victims.(41, 46)

During the reporting period, Uganda passed the Anti-Pornography Act, 2014. Section 14 of the Act prohibits child pornography.(47)

Article 10(3)(a) of the Education (Pre-Primary, Primary, and Post-Primary) Act 2008 calls for free and compulsory primary education through age 12, but fees for school supplies and operating costs are often prohibitive for families. The law leaves children ages 12 to 14 particularly vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor as they are not required to be in school nor are they legally permitted to work in areas other than light work.(12, 24, 45)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Gender, Labor, and Social Development (MGLSD)	Enforce labor laws.(6, 9, 38) District labor officers conduct labor inspections, including occupational safety and health inspections, throughout the country.(9, 24, 38, 48, 49) The Child Labor Unit (CLU) develops policies and programs on child labor; serves as a resource for MGLSD's non-specialized labor inspectors, and occupational health and safety inspectors; and works with partners to implement awareness raising campaigns.(9, 49)
Ministry of Internal Affairs(MIA)	Enforce criminal laws against forced labor, trafficking, commercial exploitation, and the use of children for illicit activities. Lead investigations related to trafficking in persons.(9) Within the MIA, the Uganda Police Force's (UPF) Special Investigations Unit manage trafficking cases while the Sexual Offenses Department manage cases of commercial sexual exploitation. The Child and Family Protection Unit (CFPU) process child abuse cases, including child labor. (49) MIA's Immigration Department assist in the identification of potential trafficking victims.(28)
CFPU liaison officers	Handle child labor complaints and overall child protection issues at police posts that do not have a CFPU officer.(9)
Ministry of Justice and Directorate for Public Prosecutions	Prosecute trafficking cases.(50)

Law enforcement agencies in Uganda took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

Uganda's centralized labor inspection system was taken apart in the mid-1990s, following the decentralization of the country. The Local Governments Act, No. 1 of 1997 transferred labor issues from the central government to the districts.(48) The labor inspection function in the country has subsequently deteriorated.(48) Each of the 112 districts in the country is supposed to have a district labor officer responsible for addressing all labor issues, including child labor. There are conflicting estimates of the total number of district labor officers; however, the highest estimate is 49 officers countrywide.(49) Funding and logistical support for district labor officers is inadequate, and some officers are responsible for additional non-labor duties.(6, 49)

Comprehensive information on labor inspections is not available, but labor officials in some districts report conducting about 20 general inspections per year. This level of inspection is inadequate given the size of the country but lack of funding prohibits a sufficient number of inspections.(49) Information is unavailable on the number of child labor law violations and penalties issued. Labor officials participated in a two-day training on assisting women and child laborers to access justice.(49)

A source indicates that Uganda is in the process of developing a more comprehensive inspection program that involves all relevant public sector agencies.(51)

Criminal Law Enforcement

The Uganda Police Force's (UPF) Child and Family Protection Unit (CFPU) has about 500 officers throughout the country who handle child abuse, including child labor, complaints.(49)

Information was not available on the exact number of child labor complaints or investigations during the reporting period. The CFPU lacks sufficient resources to fully carry out its mandate.(49)

Uganda

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

The Anti-Human Trafficking National Taskforce trained 100 immigration officers to identify potential trafficking victims during the reporting period. All 300 immigration officers have now received training on trafficking.(28) UNODC trained the Anti-Human Trafficking National Taskforce on investigation techniques. IOM and the National Coordinator of the Anti-Human Trafficking National Taskforce trained over 30 police, immigration, and Ministry of Gender, Labor, and Social Development (MGLSD) officials on providing assistance to child victims of trafficking. (28) In addition, IOM trained 15 officials from the Directorate of Public Prosecution, the National Taskforce, and the Police's Special Investigations Unit on investigations and prosecuting trafficking suspects. The Prevention of Trafficking in Persons Act has yet to be integrated into the general police training curriculum.(28) Training on other worst forms of child labor appears to be insufficient.(49)

Uganda registered 236 male and 243 female child victims of trafficking.(52) Fifty-six defendants were taken to court for new cases during the year and four people were convicted of trafficking crimes. Two of the parties were convicted for attempting to take a baby out of the country illegally.(28) The parties each paid a fine of $485 in lieu of imprisonment. During the year, the government also arrested three people in eastern Uganda suspected of holding four girls for sexual exploitation.(28) The three defendants were on trial during the reporting period. In addition, the government arrested 56 suspected illegal labor recruiters.(28) A Chinese national accused of trafficking two girls for sexual exploitation was released on bail during the year and fled the country; an international warrant has been issued for his arrest.(28)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee (NSC) on the Elimination of Child Labor	Coordinate child labor issues and implementation of the National Action Plan (NAP) for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2012/2013-2016/2017). Led by the MGLSD with representation from several ministries and trade unions, development agencies, civil society, and media houses.(12)
Stop Child Labor Partners Forum	Coordinate, monitor, and evaluate child-related program and policies in Uganda. Led by the National Council for Children (NCC), representatives come from several ministries, CPFU, and civil society groups.(12)
Anti-Human Trafficking National Taskforce	Coordinate anti-trafficking efforts among government ministries, draft policy, implement public information campaigns, and establish a database for trafficking cases. Led by MIA with 30-member representation from several ministries and government directorates, UPF, Interpol, and other security organizations.(12, 28) Standard Operating Procedures outline the responsibilities of various stakeholders.(12, 28)
National Child Protection Working Group	Address child protection issues. Led by MGLSD with participation from various ministries and civil society.(12)

In 2013, all of Uganda's coordinating mechanisms for child labor met regularly. The Anti-Human Trafficking Taskforce met nearly every month, and the National Steering Committee (NSC) on the Elimination of Child Labor, Stop Child Labor Partners Forum, and National Child Protection Working Group met quarterly.(12)

In 2012, Uganda established a Coordination Office to Combat Trafficking in Persons (COCTIP) and Anti-Human Trafficking Taskforce.(28, 53) The COCTIP Office is supposed to draft policy, implement public information campaigns, and manage a database on trafficking cases; however, it is not yet operational and serves primarily as a coordinating center.(4, 28, 50, 53)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Uganda has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
NAP for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2012/2013-2016/2017)	Aims to reduce the worst forms of child labor in Uganda by 2017 by increasing enrollment and completion of primary education; increasing access to social protection and assistance by households; increasing public awareness; strengthening the legal and policy framework; withdrawing, rehabilitating, and integrating working children; and enhancing tripartite collaboration.(15)
National awareness strategy on trafficking†	Developed during the year as a result of a training conducted by IOM and the National Coordinator of the Anti-Human Trafficking National Taskforce for government officials from intelligence agencies and the Justice, Law, and Order sector.(28)
Decent Work Country Program (2013–2017)	Outlines strategies for promoting decent work in Uganda. Priorities include youth employment and improved social protection for both formal and informal workers.(54) Includes a focus on prevention and elimination of the worst forms of child labor.(54)
National Development Plan (2010/2011-2014/2015)	Outlines Uganda's development priorities and implementation strategies. Includes an objective to promote and empower artisanal and small scale miners, in part by training mining communities on child labor issues and enhancing monitoring of child labor in the mining industry. Addresses increasing household incomes and the availability and quality of gainful employment and access to social services.(55)
National Education Development Plan (2004-2015)*	Supports expansion of the basic education system to include complementary programs for disadvantaged children and youth.(56)
Skilling Uganda (2011–2020)*	Strategic plan for business, technical, and vocational education and training. Aims include providing vocational training to youth who drop-out of school.(57)
UNDAF Uganda (2010–2014)*	Aims to improve the situation of vulnerable populations through sustainable livelihoods and access to quality social services.(58)
Implementation Plan for the Amnesty Act of 2000 (2013–2015) †	Published during the year, the plan continues activities to disarm, demobilize, and reintegrate former LRA rebels, including child soldiers. Implemented by the Uganda Amnesty Commission along with other government agencies, (28)

* The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Policy was launched during the reporting period.

The National Anti-Trafficking Taskforce has drafted a national action plan to combat trafficking; the plan is in the final stages of review. The plan aims to prevent trafficking, increase prosecutions, and improve coordination and services. (59)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Uganda participated in and provided funding for programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Skilling Uganda*	Ministry of Education and Sports (MOES) program that provides vocational training to youth who drop-out of school. During the reporting period, the World Bank contributed $75 million, OPEC contributed $25.5 million, and Saudi Arabia contributed $13.5 million.(12, 57) Government will improve 26 vocational schools with these funds.(12)
Uganda Social Assistance Grants for Empowerment (SAGE)*‡	MGLSD program that provides direct income support of about $8 a month to poor and vulnerable households in 14 pilot districts located in Central, Northern, and Western Uganda. Supported by donors in the amount of approximately $49 million.(12) Government has provided about $2.4m in office space, equipment, and staff and has also released $800,000 in funding for the program. During the year, 104,000 people received program benefits.(59)
Coordinated Response to Human Trafficking in Uganda†	IOM project that provides support to children trafficked from Karamoja region for exploitive labor on streets in urban areas of Uganda and builds capacity of services providers in Karamoja and elsewhere in Uganda.(53) Provided assistance to 77 girls and 55 boys trafficked internally from Karamoja.(28, 53) During the year, the program, together with the government, launched a Web site to raise awareness about trafficking issues in Uganda and provide information on laws and government activities. The Web site helps link trafficking victims to appropriate contacts.(28, 53)

Uganda

Program	Description
Uganda Youth Development Link (UYDEL)	Program focused on child protection, including protection from sexual exploitation, trafficking, and labor, that provides rehabilitation and livelihoods skills training to victims. Services provided at five drop in centers and outreach posts in Kampala slum, one drop-in center in Kitega, Mukono District, and one rehabilitation transit center at Masooli in Wakiso District.(60)
Uganda Women's Effort to Save Orphans (UWESO)	Provides shelter and counseling to trafficking victims under the age of 18.(28)
Strengthening the evidence base on child labour through expanded data collection, data analysis, and research-based global reports	$5,028,453 million USDOL-funded, 4.5-year project implemented by the ILO to increase statistical information and research for improved policy and program formulation on child labor. With support of the project, the Government published the National Labor Force and Child Activities Survey 2011/12 during the reporting period.(11, 61) The survey is the first comprehensive national survey on child labor in Uganda and includes detailed information on the activities of children in the country.(11)
Combating Child Labor through Education‡	MOES three-hour after school education program in areas where children are unable to attend school for a full day. Program collaborates with MGLSD and received support from ILO and the Dutch government.(12) Schools receive some funding from district budgets.(12)
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues Project	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016 established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010. Aims to improve the evidence base on child labor through data collection and research in Uganda.(62)
Country Level Engagement and Assistance to Reduce (CLEAR) Child Labor Project†	USDOL-funded capacity building project implemented by the ILO in at least 10 countries to build local and national capacity of the Government to address child labor. Aims to build local and national capacity of the Government to address child labor by improving legislation addressing child labor issues, including by bringing local or national laws into compliance with international standards; improve monitoring and enforcement of laws and policies related to child labor; and develop, validate, adopt, and implement a NAP on the elimination of child labor in Uganda.(63)
African Youth Empowerment and Development Initiative (AYEDI)†	$3 million USDOL-funded, 4-year project awarded in 2013 and implemented by World Education, Inc. to address exploitative labor among youth under the age of 18. The project will provide training to youth to help them develop marketable skills and serve as civic leaders in their communities.(64, 65)
Youth Venture Fund‡*	Government program aimed at reducing youth unemployment.(28)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Uganda.

In 2013, the government carried out a number of activities to raise awareness about trafficking in Uganda. The National Coordinator of the Anti-Human Trafficking Taskforce made regular contributions to media pieces on trafficking and spoke with target audiences, including youth groups, and Taskforce worked with NGOs to develop awareness raising campaigns.(28) The CPFU held regular discussions with secondary school students about commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor. Together with the IOM, the government screened an anti-trafficking movie and the National Theatre and is continuing to use the film for sensitization and discussion.(28)

The UPDF rescued 26 children between the ages of three and thirteen who were allegedly in training for ADF rebel activity in the DRC on Buvuma Island in Lake Victoria. The children were taken to a rehabilitation shelter run by the Ugandan Youth Development Link (UYDEL).(28) With IOM assistance, the National Taskforce and UPF assisted some victims of trafficking with their return home, including through provision of temporary shelters for children. The government's anti-trafficking budget is small, and the country is dependent on agency and donor contributions for its activities.(28) Funds for assistance to trafficking victims come primarily from the IOM and NGOs.(28)

Although Uganda has programs that address child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, Ukraine made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government increased the punishment for engaging children in pornography, begging, and other exploitative labor to between 5 and 10 years of imprisonment.

It provided training on child labor to labor inspectors and on trafficking to law enforcement and migration officials as well as judges. It provided the Cyber Crimes Department with new software to track child pornography. The Ministry of Social Protection (MSP) also published standardized guidelines for all regions to use in providing services to trafficking victims. However, children continue to engage in child labor in the service sector and in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation, including pornography. Gaps remain in some areas of laws as well as policy and program implementation. The Criminal Code does not prohibit the possession of child pornography and lacks clarity regarding the age of consent for sexual relationships. The National Action Plan to Implement the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child and the National Program for Combating Human Trafficking remained unfunded in 2013. Furthermore, shelter and rehabilitation centers for children, including street children and victims of trafficking, are insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Ukraine are engaged in child labor in the service sector and in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation, including pornography.⁽¹⁾ Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Ukraine.

Ukraine

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Commercial sexual exploitation of children, including pornography, remains a serious problem in Ukraine.(7, 10) Children are trafficked from Ukraine to other countries as well as within the country.(9, 11) Homeless, orphaned, and poor children are at high risk of being trafficked and are targeted by recruiters for child pornography.(8, 12) There is a lack of research on the work activities carried out by children in agriculture, construction, and services in Ukraine. Access to education is limited for rural and Roma minority children. In areas with low population density, some schools have closed due to the lack of school-aged children, forcing children to travel to distant villages for school.(10)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Ukraine has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 188 of the Labor Code, Article 150 of the Criminal Code, Criminal Procedure Code (1, 13, 14)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 190 of the Labor Code (13)
List of Hazardous Occupations Prohibited for Children	Yes		Order No. 46 (1, 15)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 43 of the Constitution of Ukraine (16)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 149 of the Criminal Code, Criminal Procedure Code (1, 14)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 301-303 of the Criminal Code, Law On Childhood Protection; Law on Amendments to Some Legislative Acts of Ukraine on Combating the Distribution of Child Pornography (1, 14, 17, 18)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 309 of the Criminal Code (14)
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 15 of the Law of Ukraine on Military Duty and Military Service (19)
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	18	Article 15 of The Law of Ukraine on Military Duty and Military Service (19)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	18	The Law on General Secondary Education (20, 21)
Free Public Education	Yes		The Law on General Secondary Education (20, 21)

In Ukraine, the minimum age for work is 16; however the Labor Code allows children in secondary or vocational schools to perform light work at age 14 with parental consent, provided that work does not interfere with their education and is not harmful to their health.(1, 22) Research found that minors in vocational training programs for hazardous occupations are permitted to perform hazardous work for less than four hours a day beginning at age 14, as long as occupational health and safety standards are met.(15) Moreover, the ILO Committee of Experts noted that the minimum age for such work is 2 years below the international minimum age of 16 for entering hazardous vocational training.(22)

In 2013, the punishment for engaging children in pornography, begging, and other exploitative labor increased to 5 to 10 years of imprisonment.(1) However, existing criminal laws in Ukraine continue to have gaps in fully protecting children from the worst forms of child labor. While the Criminal Code prohibits commercial exploitation of children, it does not specifically define an age of consent for sexual relations. In some courts, children ages 16 to 17 have been prosecuted as offenders rather than victims of sexual exploitation.(1) In addition, there is no law that prohibits the possession of child pornography.(1)

The President signed Decree No.562 that prohibits mandatory military service starting in 2014.(1) It is not known whether the unrest in Ukraine will have any impact on this decision.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Social Policy (MSP) State Labor Inspectorate (SLI)	Conduct child labor inspections as part of the regular inspection process. Approximately 85 percent of inspections are unannounced.(1)
SLI/ Department of Oversight for Labor Issues/ Oversight of the insured and child labor/ Child Labor Division	Enforce child labor laws, including laws on hazardous child labor.(1, 7, 18)
Ministry of Social Policy's Department on Adoption and Children's Rights Protection	Identify children involved in the worst forms of child labor, most of whom are in the informal sector.(7, 18)
Ministry of Interior's Criminal Police for Children's Affairs (CPCA)	Address involvement of children in criminal activities. Among other responsibilities, identify children in the informal sector involved in the worst forms of child labor, and address crimes against minors.(1, 7) Refer children in need to social services offered by the Ministry of Social Policy.(18)
Ministry of Interior's Department for Combating Crimes Related to Human Trafficking (CTD)	Enforce laws against child trafficking and cybercrimes.(1, 9)
State Migration Service	Assist refugees and migrants in need in the country.(18) Prevent human trafficking.(1)
State Border Guards Services (SGBS)	Protect the country's borders and identify cases of trafficking.(18)
Office of the Ombudsman for Children's Rights	Monitor the rights of children, including the issue of child labor, ensuring that Ukraine abides by international obligations regarding children's rights. Coordinate the development of laws on child protection.(5, 23)

Law enforcement agencies in Ukraine took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, the State Labor Inspectorate (SLI) employed 572 labor inspectors, which is fewer than the 706 it employed in 2012.(1) A number of inspectors, including new hires, were trained on child labor issues during 2013. According to the SLI, the number of inspectors is inadequate compared to the number of registered employers in Ukraine (1.369 million).(1, 24) Funding for inspections is limited; inspectors lack offices, transportation, and travel budgets.(1, 25) Inspectors are required to obtain prior approval for inspections from their central office, which may hamper the inspectors' ability to detect and act on sudden child labor law violations. The percentage of businesses inspected each year is about 2.5 percent and inspections in the informal sector are not authorized.(1, 24)

During the reporting period, SLI conducted 9,746 child labor inspections, including in the agricultural sector.(24) SLI found 1,082 minors working in violation of the labor law: 6 children under 14 years old, 14 children ages 14 to 15, 73 children ages 15 to 16 years, and 989 children ages 16 to 18 years.(18) The most common violations were for overly long working hours, failure to maintain work records, hazardous conditions, and delayed pay.(1)

Ukraine

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

SLI filed 325 administrative cases against employers that resulted in court proceedings and 25 cases were forwarded to law enforcement bodies for criminal enforcement action.(18) According to SLI, administrative and certain criminal fines assessed against employers for child labor violations are too low. They range between $60-$200 for administrative violations and are about $100 for some criminal violations.(1) The amount of collected fines for 2013 was approximately $1.3 million, but there are no separate statistics on fines collected for child labor violations.(1)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Under the administrative reform undertaken by the Government over the past few years, the Criminal Police for Children's Affairs (CPCA) was reorganized into a unit under the Criminal Police Department of the Ministry of Interior and the CTD was reorganized as the Counter Trafficking Division under the Criminal Investigation Department and Cyber-Crime Division.(5) The reform resulted in the departure of specially trained detectives and a reduction in time spent on trafficking investigations.(18) However, during 2013, the CTD was elevated back to the level of Department.(1) It is too soon to determine the effect this will have on staffing at the CTD. During 2013, the CPCA employed approximately 3,000 officers throughout the country, while the CTD had more than 500 officers. (1, 18)

In 2013, IOM provided anti-trafficking training to 70 law enforcement officers and 80 State Migration Service officers, as well as training on work with witnesses and victims of trafficking to 120 judges.(1) However, concerns have been raised that the training of judges is more focused on punishing offenders, even if they are under age 18, than treating children as witnesses or victims. During the first six months of the year, 30 minors were brought up on charges for prostitution.(1)

The Cyber Crimes Division obtained two new software tools to scan seized electronic media for pornographic images and to track illicit images online in real time. The Department's regional offices were trained on the software.(1)

In the first six months of 2013, the Government opened five cases under section 149 of Criminal Code involving child trafficking.(22) The State Judicial Administration convicted 109 defendants in 2013, but information on convictions for human trafficking is not broken down by whether the cases involved adult or child victims.(9) Also in early 2013, the Government indicted 201 individuals for criminal offenses involving violence, cruelty, or child pornography and 178 individuals for crimes involving procurement or pimping.(22)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
MSP	Take a leading role in coordinating policy on child labor and trafficking issues.(9, 18)
Interagency Council on Family, Gender Equality, Demographic Development, Prevention of Violence in the Family, and Counter Trafficking Issues	Coordinate efforts to address the worst forms of child labor, including trafficking of children.(5) Members include representatives from the Ministries of Justice, Education, Security, Health, Foreign Affairs and international and non-governmental organizations.(1) Chaired by the MSP.(9)

The Ministry of Social Policy (MSP) published a full year report on its anti-trafficking activities in March, 2014. However, research did not find any evidence of efforts to address other child labor issues.(18) In addition, although the Interagency Council's requirements call for a meeting every 3 months, the council did not meet in 2013.(1, 5)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Ukraine has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan for Child Protection 2010–16 (NAP)	Aims to protect children, including from economic exploitation, through awareness raising, rehabilitation of victims found in the worst forms of child labor, access to education, and creation of a child labor monitoring system.(1, 18)
National Program for Combating Human Trafficking Until 2015	Guides the work of the National Coordinator on Combating Human Trafficking and contains specific actions and timetables in regard to preventing, protecting, and prosecuting trafficking crimes.(8) Resulted in a number of adopted regulations, including some that pertain to interagency cooperation, one regarding procedures to identify trafficking victims, another establishing the right to financial assistance for trafficking victims, and another establishing a State Registry for Human Trafficking Crimes.(8, 17)

In 2013, the Government of Ukraine did not provide funding to either NAP or the National Program for Combatting Human Trafficking.(1) Due to a lack of funding, the implementation of the monitoring system under the NAP did not move beyond the implementation of a pilot program in two locations in 2012. Research found no evidence of additional actions under NAP during the reporting period.(5) The lack of sufficient funds hampers the ability of the Ministries to implement actions called for under NAP and the National Program for Combatting Human Trafficking. (23, 26)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Ukraine funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Shelters and Centers for Socio-Psychological Rehabilitation of Children‡	MSP operated program to provide protection in 28 short-term shelters and 80 long-term rehabilitation centers for children in need, including street children.(9)
Centers for Social Services for Family, Youth, and Children‡	Government run program to provide services for victims of human trafficking, assess victims' needs and draft rehabilitation plans. As of 2013, offered 736 Centers.(8, 9) In 2013, MSP adopted "Standards for Social Services for Trafficking Victims" to standardize the provisions of services across local regions.(9)
Anti-trafficking awareness-raising programs‡	Joint effort by State Border Guard Service (SBGS) and IOM to prepare anti-trafficking messages aired on television. Publishing articles in print and electronic media to raise awareness of trafficking.(9)
Multiplication of the Anti-Trafficking National Referral Mechanism in Ukraine‡	Government and OSCE joint program that trained approximately 5,000 officials in several regions of Ukraine to identify and provide services to trafficking victims. Involved collaborative work between local agencies and non-governmental partners.(17) Included training for additional 300 officers on the national referral mechanism in cooperation with IOM.(9)
Countering Trafficking in Persons (TIP) Project	USAID-funded project implemented by IOM to reduce trafficking in persons by building the capacity of Ukrainian institutions to address the problem by strengthening the national referral mechanism and increase government funding for counter-trafficking efforts.(27)
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues Project	USDOL-funded capacity building project implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016 established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010. Aims to improve monitoring and enforcement of laws and policies related to child labor in Ukraine.(28)
The Decent Work Country Program*‡	Government and ILO 3-year joint program that incorporates the results of the evaluation from the 2008–2010 Decent Work Country Program of Ukraine.(29) Includes a social protection component to improve the social status of migrant workers, develop and implement a national occupational safety and health program, and strengthen the labor inspection system.(29)
Free school lunches*‡	Government sponsored program that provides free school lunches to certain categories of children including those from families with many children, families of Chernobyl victims, low-income families, and families in some rural areas.(26)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Ukraine.

Ukraine

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

During the reporting period, IOM identified 23 children as trafficking victims, the majority of whom were girls. Most of the children were trafficked for forced labor, street begging, and sexual exploitation.(9) IOM provided services to all victims. However, MSP granted only nine children status as victims of trafficking, which allows victims to benefit from free government services.(9) IOM asserted that the failure to grant this status may have resulted from the insufficient provision of documentation to MSP.(9)

Although MSP provides services for children in shelters and social-psychological rehabilitation centers, the current capacity is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem.(5) In addition, the Centers for Social Services for Family, Youth, and Children have experienced a large turnover of staff due to an excessive workload and low pay.(8) This may restrict the Centers in their ability to efficiently address the main needs of trafficking victims. Likewise high turnover in the regions, where local agencies are responsible for identifying trafficking victims under the National Referral Mechanism, has hampered the provision of services to victims.(9)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Ukraine (Table 9).

Table 9. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Laws	Amend the Labor Code to prohibit all children younger than age 16 from working in hazardous occupations in vocational training.	2011 – 2013
	Ensure that laws treat children of age 16 and older as victims of sexual exploitation rather than as offenders.	2012 – 2013
	Amend the Criminal Code to prohibit possession of child pornography.	2012 – 2013
Enforcement	Increase the number of inspectors, provide labor inspectors with appropriate resources to carry out inspections, and increase the number of inspections.	2011 – 2013

	Collect complete data, disaggregated by age and type of trafficking for victims of trafficking served by the justice system.	2013
	Ensure that judges treat children who are victims of commercial sexual exploitation and other worst forms of child labor as victims and not offenders.	2013
	Closely monitor the effects of the recent administrative reform and ensure that protection of children from child labor and its worst forms remains a priority.	2010 – 2013
Coordination	Ensure that the Interagency Council on Family, Gender Equality, Demographic Development, Prevention of Violence in the Family, and Counter Trafficking Issues carries out its mandate to coordinate the Government's efforts on all child labor issues, not just trafficking, through regular meetings and other activities as appropriate.	2009 – 2013

	Ensure that all reasonable efforts are made to obtain needed documentation when considering whether to grant "trafficking victim status" to children.	2013
	Increase the number of shelters and social-psychological rehabilitation centers for children.	2013
	Take steps to reduce turnover in both the Centers for Social Services for Family, Youth, and Children and in local agencies that are part of the National Referral Mechanism to ensure that victims of human trafficking are provided the amount of quality services they require.	2012 – 2013

Uruguay

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

In 2013, Uruguay made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government continues to implement the national plan focused on addressing the commercial sexual exploitation of children, as well as the national plan to combat child labor in garbage dumps. Numerous public awareness campaigns about child labor were also implemented during the reporting period and included areas within the interior of the country. However, children in Uruguay continue to engage in the worst forms of child labor in garbage dump scavenging and in commercial sexual exploitation. Uruguay lacks a comprehensive national child labor policy, and programs to prevent and eliminate child labor are limited.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Uruguay are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in garbage scavenging and in commercial sexual exploitation.(1-4) Research indicates that many children work in the informal sector. However, specific activities related to children’s work in the informal sector are unknown.(5)

Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Uruguay.

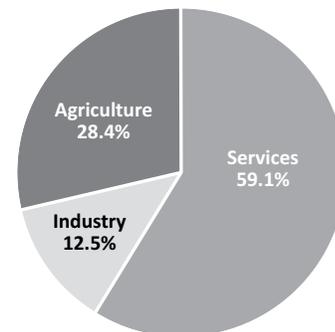

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	6.1(31,955)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	97.8

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182

The Government has found that the number of children of afro-descent engaged in child labor is higher than that of children of other ethnic groups in Uruguay.(1, 13, 14) Children of afro-descent are more likely to be engaged in work that exposes them to harm.(13, 14) The Ministry of Social Development and the National Statistics Institute (INE) have estimated that approximately 20,000 children scavenge in garbage dumps with their parents.(8, 15) A March 2013 Ministry of Social Development report revealed that children in 1,211 homes in Montevideo, where families sort garbage and recyclables, live in unsanitary and unhealthy conditions. More than 70 percent of these children live in chronic poverty.(5, 8) Children engage in commercial sexual exploitation, especially in tourist areas and near the borders of Uruguay with Argentina and Brazil. There are limited reports that minors engage in prostitution as a way to assist their families.(2-4) Children are also trafficked internally for sexual exploitation, and there is some evidence that they are engaged in child pornography.(9, 11, 12) The 2009 National Child Labor Survey found that 11.6 percent of children between the ages of 5 and 17 were engaged in some form of economic activity. Of these children, 8.5 percent were engaged in work that was considered to be hazardous. Engagement in such work is more likely to occur in rural areas than in urban areas.(1)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Uruguay has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

The Adolescent Labor Division within the Institute for Adolescents and Children (INAU) grants minors between the ages of 13 and 15 permission to engage in light work. The Government of Uruguay has not yet drafted a list of what occupations constitute light work.(2, 16) Research did not identify any potential penalties for violations of Resolution 1012/006 on hazardous occupations that are prohibited for children.(17) Decree 321 also identifies the agricultural sector as hazardous and prohibits the engagement of children under the age of 18 in this sector. It also stipulates penalties for any infractions.(18) The Migration Act comprehensively prohibits the trafficking of persons into or out of the country for the purpose of forced labor or sexual exploitation. The law also lists trafficking of children as an aggravating circumstance.(20, 26)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MLSS)	Monitor overall enforcement of labor laws and, compliance with labor regulations and issues penalties for violations. Responsible for the legal protection of workers, including by identifying locations and conditions where child labor may occur (5, 8, 27-29) MLSS Inspection Unit responsible for inspections to address violations of the law. MLSS's inspectors refer child labor cases to Institute for Adolescents and Children (INAU).(5, 8, 27, 28)
Ministry of Social Development's Institute for Adolescents and Children (MIDES/INAU)	Lead agency responsible for children's issues in Uruguay. Assist all children, including those employed within informal sector.(2, 30) Enforce and implement policies to prevent child labor and provide training on child labor issues.(29) Evaluate permit requests and grants work permits, ensuring children under 18 are not employed in hazardous work. Support child welfare and protection and coordinate services for children found in child labor.(5, 8, 29, 31) Work with the Ministry of Labor and the National Insurance Bank to investigate child labor complaints and with the Ministry of Interior (MOI) to prosecute cases when legal violations found.(32) INAU's Department of Child Labor: 1) prevent and monitor the participation of minors in work activities that might adversely affect welfare and development, 2) monitor work conditions and environment as well as legislation on minors, 3) investigate all accidents and complaints of irregularities at the national level and 4) propose amendments and regulations of current legislation regarding child labor.(33)
Ministry of the Interior (MOI)	Investigate all organized crimes, including child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation of children, and use of children in narcotic operations. Gather evidence for a judge to a make ruling.(3, 12, 32, 34) Children identified as victims of the worst forms of child labor through MOI investigations can be placed under protection or custody of INAU.(3, 34)
Specialized Court for Organized Crime	Operated by two judges and two public prosecutors who have ability to mandate police investigations. (3, 12, 34).

Law enforcement agencies in Uruguay took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

When the Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MLSS) or INAU find violations of child labor law while performing inspections, each agency may carry out investigations and apply sanctions according to its legal mandate; where criminal laws may have been violated, it may report cases to the judiciary for further investigation.(32) National Insurance Bank medical staff may also report possible violations that have resulted in labor accidents to the judiciary for further investigation.(32) INAU has 10 inspectors; two are in Artigas, one in Flores, one in Lavalleja, and six in Montevideo. This reflects a decrease from 11 in 2012.(8) There are 130 MLSS inspectors who conduct investigations and assess any penalties associated with labor violations, including child labor.(3, 8, 30) When MLSS receives a complaint regarding child labor via its hotline or other means, it shares this information with INAU, which then investigates and assists the children who might be affected. MLSS classifies hotline complaints under child labor only if the phrase is specifically mentioned, which may result in the misclassification of child labor cases.(3) INAU also operates a hotline to receive complaints about child labor, but it does not keep current statistics on reported cases. INAU conducts most of its inspections in the capital of Montevideo, although the National Child Labor Survey indicates that most child labor occurs in rural areas.(3, 8) INAU's 2013 annual report indicates that, during the reporting period, it conducted a total of 4,046 inspections, compared to 3,200 in 2012, and that it received 44 complaints of child labor violations.(35) The impact of the large number of inspections conducted by single labor inspectors on the quality of inspections is not known. No information is available on the number of citations or penalties applied.

Criminal Law Enforcement

The enforcement of criminal laws is mainly the responsibility of the Ministry of Interior (MOI) and INAU. The Government reported that, during the reporting period, investigators received adequate training on the relevant worst forms of child labor.(8) No information is available about the number of investigations or prosecutions carried out, the number of convictions, or the adequacy of the investigations. The Specialized Court for Organized Crime only reviews criminal cases involving three or more individuals, which excludes many human trafficking and child labor cases.(36) Generally, it takes 1 to 2 years to resolve a case involving the commercial or sexual exploitation of children, and the same amount of time before penalties called for in the law can be applied.(3, 34)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Committee for the Eradication of Sexual Exploitation of Children and Adolescents (CONAPEES)	Implement actions to combat sexual exploitation of children and adolescents.(2, 3) Develop public policies and a national plan of action with respect to commercial sexual exploitation of children and adolescents, taking into account Uruguay's existing norms and international commitments. Led by INAU and composed of representatives from several government agencies, NGOs, and UNICEF.(37)
Committee for the Eradication of Child Labor (CETI)	Coordinate efforts between law enforcement bureaus and NGOs to develop a plan of action for child laborers and their families.(30) CETI is led by the Ministry of Labor and INAU; it is chaired by the Inspector General and coordinated by the Sub-Inspector General of the MTSS. It is composed of government agencies, industry representatives, labor groups, and NGOs. The Committee meets every two weeks.(2, 8, 37, 38)
Anti-Trafficking Interagency Committee	Coordinate Uruguay's anti-trafficking efforts;chaired by MIDES.(2, 3)

During the reporting period, INAU increased coordination with MLSS's Inspection Unit to immediately communicate child labor irregularities found during inspections. INAU established a mechanism to quickly deploy teams to remedy these irregularities.(8) The Committee for the Eradication of Child Labor (CETI) opened branches in the interior of the country to work with provincial committees to advance government efforts to fund the permanent deployment of child labor inspectors in that region.(8)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Uruguay has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Strategy for Infancy and Adolescence*	Covers a time frame of 20 years (2010-30) and identifies goals to be achieved by 2030. Developed by government agencies, political parties, civil society, and private sector organizations; recognized as a roadmap to policies on children.(2, 39)
CONAPEES National Plan for Eradication of Commercial and Non-commercial Child and Adolescent Exploitation	Works to eliminate the commercial sexual exploitation of children. Goals include strengthening victims' rights, improving protection measures for victims and witnesses, keeping children in school, reintegrating children who had previously left school, and developing alternative income strategies for families.(2, 3) In 2010, CONAPEES proposed the creation of three teams of service experts who could be sent to various regions of the country to assist child victims of commercial sexual exploitation.(3) It is unknown, however, whether this plan was implemented during the reporting period.

Policy	Description
National Action Plan to End Child Labor in Garbage Scavenging	CETI-launched national action plan implemented by government agencies, including MLSS and MIDES, to combat child labor in garbage dumps. The plan includes specific projects that involve education, healthcare, housing, and law enforcement agencies.(5, 8)
MIDES 5-year Plan	Range of programs intended to impact child labor. Major focus areas include: social and labor inclusion, citizen participation, social and educational inclusion, awareness-raising, and programs giving special benefits to youth and populations at risk.(8)
MERCOSUR United Against Child Labor Campaign	Develops public awareness about the need to combat child labor in MERCOSUR. Addresses child labor in agriculture, domestic work, and sexual exploitation, with particular emphasis on communities along country borders.(40)
Second Presidential Declaration on the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor in MERCOSUR (2012)	Promotes greater articulation between governmental agencies, levels of government, and with civil society among MERCOSUR members.(41)
MERCOSUR Southern Child Initiative	Aims to defend the rights of children and adolescents in the region by raising awareness and seeking coordination among member states regarding the commercial sexual exploitation of children, child trafficking and pornography, child labor, and migrant labor; by improving country legal frameworks to harmonize them with international conventions affecting children, and by exchanging best practices.(42)

* The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

In November, the Government participated in the XVIII Inter-American Conference of Ministers of Labor to foster continued dialogue and cooperation on labor issues throughout the Americas. The joint declaration of the Conference promotes social dialogue to address child labor and reaffirms country participants' commitment to work with civil society organizations to advance efforts toward the eradication of child labor.(43)

Research found no evidence of the existence of a comprehensive policy aimed at combating the worst forms of child labor.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Uruguay funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Pro-Child (Pro-Niño)‡	Telefonica Foundation (Fundación Telefónica)-implemented program focused on prevention and eradication of child labor. Established in 2000; has more than 10,000 active youth participants nationwide.(2, 44)
National Plan of Equality*‡	Institute for Social Security-run program mandates that beneficiaries have their children attend school and receive medical services. Plan established the Family Allocations Program, a conditional cash transfer program to reduce national poverty levels and assist working families with their children, as well as families in need.(45-47)
Ministerio de Desarrollo Social (MIDES) Youth Affairs Bureau (INJU) Programs‡	MIDES Youth Affairs Bureau implements three programs intended to impact the worst forms of child labor: (1) Participation, Citizenship, and Culture; (2) Education and Educational Integration; and (3) Training and Work. (8)
Southern Child Initiative/ MERCOSUR (Niñ@ Sur)	The MERCOSUR Southern Child initiative includes public campaigns against commercial sexual exploitation, trafficking, and child labor; mutual technical assistance in raising domestic legal frameworks to international standards on those issues; and the exchange of best practices related to victim protection and assistance.(48 49)
Regional Action Group for the Americas (Grupo de Acción Regional para las Américas)	Conducts prevention and awareness-raising campaigns to combat the commercial sexual exploitation of children in Latin America. Members include Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Paraguay, Peru, Suriname, Uruguay, and Venezuela.(48, 50)
Regional Project to End Child Labor in Latin America	$4.5 million Government of Spain-funded, 3-year project implemented by ILO-IPEC to combat child labor.(51)

Program	Description
Education Program to End Child Labor	$1.3 million Government of Spain-funded, 2-project implemented by ILO-IPEC that aims to strengthen public policies and government capacity to combat child labor in 19 countries in the Americas, including Uruguay.(51)

*The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Uruguay.

Plans to address child labor in garbage scavenging, as well as the commercial sexual exploitation of children, have been adopted, but programs to assist these children have not been established. CETI continued to compile information detailing the situation of children and adolescents engaged in garbage scavenging work in the cities, and the government plans to develop a national strategy and an inter-agency protocol of action based on this information.(8) Research found no evidence of any existing or planned programs to assist working children in other sectors. Although Uruguay has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem. More programs are needed to reach those who are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in the agricultural sector and in commercial sexual exploitation.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, Uzbekistan made no advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. Notwithstanding initiatives to reduce child labor, Uzbekistan has received this assessment based on the Government's continued complicity in the use of forced child labor. The national Government maintained policies in the cotton sector, which mandate harvest quotas and cause local administrators to organize and impose forced labor on children and adults. Although the Government continues to publicly deny the use of forced labor, including of children, in the cotton harvest, information indicates that children continue to be required to engage in the worst forms of child labor in cotton production. The Government invited an ILO high level-mission to observe the fall 2013 harvest, and reports indicate that the Government did ensure that young children (under age 15) were able to continue to attend school during the harvest season. However, local government officials continued to close secondary schools (colleges and lyceums) during the harvest, mobilizing children ages 15 to 17 to pick cotton to meet the Government-mandated harvest quotas.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

There is a lack of current data on child labor in Uzbekistan; to date, the Government has not conducted a national survey on child labor, and a credible and comprehensive national mechanism to monitor child labor, including during the fall harvest period, does not exist. However, evidence shows that children under age 18 continue to be forced to work during the annual cotton harvest, due to a governmental system that requires local administrators and farmers to meet cotton harvest quotas.(1-10) In addition, each spring, during the pre-harvest season, there are reports that some children also work long hours sowing cotton, followed by weeding through the summer months.(5, 11-13) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Uzbekistan.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	4.3 (244,095)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	84.1
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	5.0
Primary Completion Rate (%)		91.8

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2011, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2014.(14)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis of statistics from MICS3 Survey, 2006.(15)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Sowing, weeding, and harvesting of cotton† (2, 5, 9, 12)

Uzbekistan

NO ADVANCEMENT

In 2013, the Government, along with local administrators, continued its efforts to keep primary-level students (under age 15) in school and out of the fields during the cotton harvest. Sources indicate that most primary school students were not mobilized by local authorities for the 2013 harvest.(3, 4, 27) However, NGO and U.S. Embassy reports indicate that there were isolated incidents of children as young as 10 working in the cotton fields.(4, 21, 27) The 2013 ILO monitoring mission found 53 children ages 16 and 17 picking cotton and did not verify a single case of children under 15.(9)

Sources indicate that local administrators continued to close secondary schools (colleges and lyceums) during the harvest and forced children ages 15 to 17 to pick cotton to reach the quotas mandated by the national Government. Evidence suggests that the harvest quotas were between 66 and 155 pounds per day for older children.(2, 4, 10, 21, 27, 28)

Children forced to work in the cotton harvest miss weeks of school every year, which may negatively impact their learning.(6, 7, 29) There were NGO reports that students who refused to participate in the cotton harvest were threatened with physical abuse, low grades, or expulsion; and their parents were threatened by local authorities.(2, 6, 7, 23-26)

While not a policy of the Government, children are also trafficked internally and abroad, primarily to destinations across Asia, for commercial sexual exploitation.(8, 22)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Uzbekistan has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

The Labor Code of Uzbekistan and the Law on the Guarantees of the Rights of the Child, as amended in 2009, establish the minimum age for work at 16 and the minimum age for part-time light work with parental consent at 15.(21, 30, 31) The Labor Code also prohibits hazardous labor for children under age 18.(29)

The Decree on Adoption of the List of Occupations with Unfavorable Working Conditions to Which it is Forbidden to Employ Persons under Eighteen Years of Age presents a list of hazardous activities forbidden for children younger than age 18.(21, 29, 33) This List specifically includes the manual harvesting of cotton. The Decree on Approval of Provision on Requirements on Prohibition of Use of Minors' Labor further bars employers from using children to work under specific hazardous conditions. These include working underground, underwater, at dangerous heights, or with dangerous equipment, or doing work that requires lifting or moving heavy loads.(21, 32) This Decree also grants authority to parents and labor inspectors to cancel the employment contracts of workers younger than age 18 if the work involved could endanger the child's health or well-being.(32)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor	Conduct labor inspections, including inspections for compliance with child labor laws.(21, 39)
Ministry of Interior Office for Combating Trafficking	Investigate criminal violations involving the worst forms of child labor, including trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation.(22) Investigate crimes related to trafficking in persons, which may then be prosecuted by the Prosecutor General's office.(22)
Prosecutor General's Office	Prosecute criminal violations involving the worst forms of child labor, including human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation.(22)
Ministry of Secondary Education and the Ministry of Higher Education's Center and Secondary Specialized and Professional Education	Monitor elementary through secondary students to prevent forced child labor.(40)
Coordination Council	Monitor all forms of child labor.(41) Comprises representatives from the Ministries of Labor and Social Protection, Education, Foreign Affairs, and Internal Affairs, the Women's Committee, the Center on Human Rights, the Board of Secondary and Vocational Education, and NGOs.(9)
Women's Committee of Uzbekistan	Monitor school attendance through the academic year, especially during the cotton harvest. A total of 14 regional and 194 district branches of the Women's Committee involved in monitoring school attendance.(41)

Law enforcement agencies in Uzbekistan took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

The Ministry of Labor employs a total of 296 labor inspectors. These inspectors received two trainings on child labor during the reporting period.(28, 41) Information was not available regarding the number of inspections the Government carried out in 2013.(28)

Uzbekistan

NO ADVANCEMENT

Law enforcement agencies in Uzbekistan took certain actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms, during the reporting period. For example, there is evidence that in 2013, local administrators formed child labor monitoring teams to prevent children under age 15 from working in the cotton harvest.(28) However, it is not known whether these local monitoring mechanisms were established in all cotton growing areas.

As previously noted, the Government invited an ILO high-level mission to observe the fall 2013 cotton harvest and to assess the use of child labor in the harvest.(9) The monitoring mission took place from September 11 through October 31, 2013; it included eight monitoring units responsible for monitoring eight zones, which covered all cotton-producing areas of Uzbekistan. Each monitoring unit was led by one international coordinator and consisted of six members, including government representatives.(9) The monitors reported that there were six closed colleges in two zones, and significant absenteeism in colleges in four zones. The ILO mission noted that in one zone a higher level of school absenteeism coincided with the relatively large number of children found picking cotton in that zone.(9) The ILO monitors also observed that school records were not maintained sufficiently across zones and that the districts' lists of cotton pickers, including information on their age, may not have been kept current throughout the harvest season.(9)

The monitoring mission identified 53 children, ages 16 and 17, who were working in the cotton fields during the harvest in violation of Uzbekistan's labor laws.(9) It was noted that this number may have been an underestimate as the ages could not be verified for some additional individuals found working in the cotton fields who may have been under the age of 18.(9, 21) Monitors found regional disparities in the awareness, implementation, and enforcement of Uzbekistan's labor laws, which resulted in specific cases of child labor.(9)

As a result of these violations, the Government and the ILO reported that warnings or fines were issued to responsible persons at eight educational institutions, and to farmers in two districts. The Government also reported that three warnings were given in response to these violations.(9, 41) Outside of the cases identified during the ILO monitoring mission, there were no other reported sanctions or prosecutions against those responsible for engaging children to work in the cotton harvest or in any form of child labor.(21)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2013, the Government investigated 1,013 criminal human trafficking cases that involved 71 child victims.(41) The Government prosecuted 517 human trafficking cases.(41) Information was unavailable on the number of convictions. The Government provided medical, psychological, and social assistance to 1,392 trafficking victims, which included 31 child victims.(41)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Coordination Council†	Coordinate efforts to address child labor issues and provide support to the ILO cotton harvest monitoring mission.(9)
Interagency Working Group	Coordinate efforts to address labor rights issues, including child labor.(39, 42, 43) Report to the ILO on the Government's implementation of ratified conventions, prevent forced labor, and protect working minors.(40, 42-45)
Interagency Commission on Combating Trafficking in Persons	Oversee efforts to combat trafficking.(20, 22) Chaired by the Prosecutor General and includes representatives from other government entities, such as the Ministries of Labor and Social Protection, Interior, and Foreign Affairs, the National Security Service, and the State Customs Committee.(22)
Local interagency committees	Monitor human trafficking at the provincial, regional, and municipal levels.(22)

† Coordination effort was launched during the reporting period.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Uzbekistan has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan for the Application of ILO Conventions (NAP)	Includes a National Policy on child labor issues.(21, 45, 46)
Decree on Additional Measures	Establishes actions and efforts to be taken to address the worst forms of child labor. (46) Outlines additional activities to be implemented in 2012–2013 in response to ILO Convention requirements, including awareness-raising, monitoring of the cotton harvest, and activities on the worst forms of child labor targeting government ministries, international organizations, students, parents, and employers.(45-47)
National Plan of Action Against Trafficking in Persons 2013–2014	Specifies actions for law enforcement bodies, ministries, agencies, and NGOs to take to combat human trafficking.(48)
Education Sector Plan 2013– 2017*	Defines the 5-year development for the education sector and aims to ensure equal opportunities and quality education for all.(49)

*The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

The national Government maintained policies in the cotton sector, which mandate harvest quotas and offer strong incentives for local administrators to organize and impose forced labor on children and adults.(3, 4, 50) Reports indicate that in 2013, the Government of Uzbekistan continued to enforce a 2012 Prime Ministerial Decree (an internal communication that has not been made public) prohibiting the mobilization of children in primary school under age 15 to harvest cotton.(8, 21) However, the decree does not include protections for children ages 15 to 17 from the worst forms of child labor.(8, 27)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

While the Government of Uzbekistan funded programs that address human trafficking in 2013, there is no evidence of national programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing other types of child labor. However, as described in Table 8, the Government has other social programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms.

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
School Assistance*‡	Ministry of Education program that provides winter clothes and other educational resources to needy families to support their school attendance.(51) During the reporting period, 563,191 students from underprivileged families received winter clothing and 535,631 first-grade students received free text books.(41)
Family Support Assistance*‡	Government of Uzbekistan program that provides an allowance to low-income families. Allowance continues to be paid to the family if their children continue their education up to the age of 18.(51)
Child Protection Assistance*	UNICEF program that engages with the Government of Uzbekistan to support the development of a national child protection system that will prevent and respond to children who are at risk of or have been subject to child abuse, exploitation, and violence.(52)
Shelter Support‡	Ministry of Labor operates a shelter for trafficking victims and provides them with medical, psychological, legal, and vocational training. Government provides shelter and office space to two NGO-run shelters.(10)
Awareness-raising†‡	Government supports broadcasts to raise awareness on labor trafficking. During the reporting period, the Government generated awareness on labor trafficking through print and television media, and on billboards in all major cities and transportation hubs.(10) In 2013, in the context of the monitoring mission, the ILO carried out awareness-raising and conducted over twenty training seminars across Uzbekistan on international labor standards.(9)
Human Trafficking Hotlines‡	Ministry of Labor operates several hotlines to report incidents of trafficking.(22)
Labor Hotlines	Trade unions operate hotlines for workers to report labor violations.(41)
Cotton Picking Machine Provisions*	Government program that provides farmers with cotton picking machines to help reduce the need for human cotton pickers. Provided farmers with 400 cotton-picking machines in 2013.(41)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Uzbekistan

Vanuatu

NO ADVANCEMENT

In 2013, Vanuatu made no advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. During the reporting period, the Government continued implementing a policy to mandate National Minimum Standards in Education, a key component of which is child protection. Vanuatu also continued participating in the ILO Decent Work Country Program (DWCP) and the Pacific Policy, Advocacy, Planning, and Evaluation Program (PAPE). However, limited evidence suggests that children are engaged in child labor in agriculture and are found in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation. The Government lacks a complete preventive legal framework, and Vanuatu has not established a minimum age for hazardous work or developed a list of hazardous activities prohibited to children. Vanuatu has not established a coordinating mechanism to combat the worst forms of child labor and does not implement programs to combat the problem.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Although data are limited, sources indicate children in Vanuatu engage in child labor in agriculture and are found in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation. Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Vanuatu. Data on some of these key indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	7-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		83.6

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2014.(1)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis 2014.(2)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Activities unknown* (3-5)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation* (6, 7)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)-(c) of ILO C. 182.

There have been no national surveys of child labor in Vanuatu to determine the nature and prevalence of the problem. By tradition, children in Vanuatu are expected to assist with agricultural production from a young age.(5)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Vanuatu has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓

	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Employment Act (8)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No
List of Hazardous Occupations Prohibited for Children	No
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Employment Act, Article 102 of Penal Code (8, 9)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Penal Code (9)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Penal Code (9)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	N/A*
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	N/A*
Compulsory Education Age	No
Free Public Education	No

* No conscription or no standing military.

The Employment Act establishes the minimum age for employment at 15. It permits children under age 12 to perform light work on farms owned and managed by a family member; however, it does not define what constitutes “light work”.(8) Children ages 12 through 14 may perform light domestic or agricultural work if a family member is employed with the child. The Act also prohibits children younger than age 16 from working at night and provides restrictions on night work for children between ages 16 and 18.(8) The Government has not established a minimum age for hazardous work, nor does it have a list of hazardous activities or occupations prohibited to children.(8)

Information was not available on whether there are laws that regulate the use of children in illicit activities such as drug trafficking; however, incitement of another person to any criminal offense is prohibited by the Penal Code.(9) Vanuatu has no national army; therefore, there is no conscription. The Education Act establishes that for children between ages 6 and 14, it is “the duty of the child’s parents to ensure that the child attends a school.”(10) However, education is not compulsory at any age.(5) Free education is not guaranteed by law; the Education Act provides for the assessment of fees.(10) However, the Government has established a free education policy.(5)

Through the DWCP, the Labor Department of Vanuatu has requested financial assistance from the ILO to prepare new regulations on child labor and to translate the revised Employment Relations Bill into local languages.(11) The Government has also made labor law reform a key priority and has drafted the new legislation to replace the current Employment Act.(12) No information on the progress of these efforts was available at the time of reporting.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Labor Department	Enforce provisions set forth in the Labor Code, including child labor laws. Most recent data from 2012 indicate that the Department employs four labor inspectors.(13)
Vanuatu Police Force	Enforce all criminal laws, including those regarding trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children. Also collaborate with the Customs, Immigrations, and Labor Departments.(14) Based on the most recent data available, the Police Force employs 50 investigators.(14)

Research found no evidence that law enforcement agencies in Vanuatu took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms. Information was not available as to whether the Government collects data on investigations, violations, or prosecutions related to child labor.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Although a committee exists to monitor child rights in Vanuatu and to eliminate commercial sexual exploitation, research found no evidence that the committee functions as a coordinating mechanism to address child labor, including all its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Children's Committee (NCC)	Coordinate Government efforts to improve children's well-being, including eliminating the commercial sexual exploitation of children. The NCC is also responsible for monitoring child protection issues and for creating a comprehensive and integrated agenda for children's rights.(5, 15, 16)

Research found no information regarding the activity of the NCC during the reporting period.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Vanuatu has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Vanuatu Education Road Map (VERM)*	Establishes a comprehensive strategic direction for the country's education sector and specifically supports the goal of achieving universal primary education by 2015. VERM has three strategic goals: to increase equal access to education, including by increasing government grants and phasing out parental contributions; to improve the quality of education; and to improve management of the education system.(17)
Child Protection Policies*	Train teachers, community members, and parents on child abuse and protection. Trainings were held in 2013 in Sanma province.(18) As of 2012, the most recent period for which research found information, the policies were being implemented in nine schools reaching almost 2,000 students.(19)
National Minimum Standards in Education*	Includes a requirement that all primary schools develop and implement Safe School Policies that cover child protection and emergency preparedness.(19)

*The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

Vanuatu has a free and universal education policy. However, in practice, school fees and lack of physical access to schools are significant barriers to education.(5, 13, 20) The lack of standards in this area may increase the risk of children's involvement in the worst forms of child labor.(10, 21) Research did not identify any new policies that were launched during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Decent Work Country Program	Program implemented by the ILO and the Government to specify the improvement of youth employment conditions as a priority; it establishes the number and quality of labor inspection reports filed as measurement toward that goal.(11)
Pacific Policy, Advocacy, Planning, and Evaluation Program (PAPE)	Program implemented by UNICEF to support the development of evidence-based social and economic policies promoting the rights of children in the Pacific region.(22) PAPE also provides technical assistance for collecting data on children's issues.(22, 23).

*The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

Research uncovered no information on the status of these programs or their accomplishments in 2013. The Government does not appear to have programs that specifically address the worst forms of child labor in Vanuatu, namely commercial sexual exploitation.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Vanuatu (Table 9).

Table 9. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Laws	Define "light work" in the Employment Act.	2009 – 2013

	Establish a compulsory age for education that is equal to or older than the minimum age for work.	2009 – 2013
Enforcement	Collect and make publicly available data on investigations, violations, and prosecutions related to the worst forms of child labor.	2012 – 2013

Social Programs	Conduct research to determine the prevalence and nature of child labor in Vanuatu, in order to inform policy and program design.	2013
	Implement programs to address the worst forms of child labor, specifically commercial sexual exploitation.	2012 – 2013

In 2013, Venezuela made no advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government's current policies and programs aim to alleviate poverty and improve conditions for some working children. However, children in Venezuela continue to engage in child labor in domestic service and in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation. The Government does not have sufficient efforts in place to protect children in key sectors where child labor is prevalent. In addition, information is not available on the effectiveness of the Government's coordinating body on child labor, and the Government has not established a list of hazardous occupations prohibited for children.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Venezuela are engaged in child labor in domestic service and in the worst forms of child labor in commercial sexual exploitation.(1-5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Venezuela.

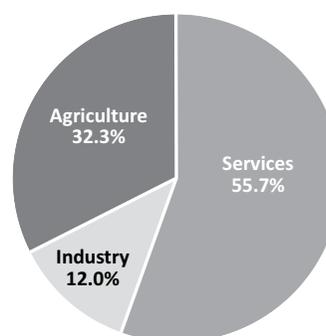

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent

Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced labor in domestic service* and street begging* (4, 11)
	Commercial sexual exploitation sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2, 4, 5, 14)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Children are sometimes trafficked to urban areas, such as Caracas and Maracaibo, or to resort destinations, such as Margarita Island, for commercial sexual exploitation.(4, 13)

It has been reported that the Government's 2011 census found approximately 262,000 children and adolescents between the ages of 10 and 17 working in Venezuela. Research could not determine the extent to which the survey encompassed the informal sector, or whether there are studies that target the worst forms of child labor.(10)

* No conscription or no standing military.

Articles 79 and 80 of the Regulations on Occupational Safety and Health Conditions prohibit activities considered to be dangerous or unhealthy for children under 18 years of age, but do not specify or incorporate a list of these activities. Similarly, Article 96 of the Law for the Protection of Children and Adolescents prohibits children under 18 from working in activities not permitted by law, but does not specify which activities are considered hazardous. (16, 17, 25) The Government has yet to establish a list of hazardous occupations prohibited to children under age 18. (2, 5, 25, 26)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Popular Power for Labor and Social Security (MINPPTRASS)	Enforce labor laws, including child labor laws. Develop policies and projects regarding child labor.(5, 27)
National Institute for Prevention, Safety, and Health at Work (INPSASEL)	Assist MINPPTRASS in enforcing labor laws and conditions of work in Venezuela. Help develop labor inspection apparatus as well as implement national labor policies.(28)
Ministry of Popular Power of the Interior, Justice, and Peace (MPPRIJP)	Investigate trafficking in persons cases through its Criminal Investigative Division and its Scientific, Penal, and Criminal Investigative Corps (CICPC). Role of CICPC is to help enforce laws related to commercial sexual exploitation and illicit activities.(5, 10)

Although the Government has stated that the Ministry of Popular Power for Labor and Social Security (MINPPTRASS) and the National Institute for Prevention, Safety, and Health at Work (INPSASEL) carry out child labor inspections in the formal and informal business sectors, there was no publicly available information regarding the number of labor inspections conducted, or the sanctions applied, during the reporting period.(5, 10, 29) It is also unknown whether labor inspectors received training on child labor or had adequate resources. Similarly, there was no publicly available information regarding criminal law enforcement, including the number of victims, convictions, or prosecutions for trafficking or commercial sexual exploitation.(10) No information was publicly available on the number of investigators employed, or on their training and resources.(10)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
System for the Protection of Children and Adolescents	Coordinate and protect children's rights and address child labor issues through policies and programs at the national and state levels. Comprised of several government ministries, government councils, and representatives from civil society.(16, 30) Provided for by the Law for the Protection of Children and Adolescents.(16)

Research could not determine the extent to which the System for the Protection of Children and Adolescents was active during the reporting period. Research could also not determine whether the Government maintains a coordinating body that addresses the trafficking of children, including for commercial sexual exploitation.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Venezuela has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Second Socialist Plan for the Economic and Social Development of the Nation (2013-2019)*†	Provides a roadmap for reducing poverty by improving economic opportunity, access to health care, education, and housing. Does not contain language on the elimination of child labor.(31)
National Plan of Action Against Abuse and Commercial Sexual Exploitation (PANAESC)	Addresses the prevention of commercial sexual exploitation of children under age 18 and rehabilitation of victims.(32)
National Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons	Provides strategies for the removal of children from trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation, as well as for their social reintegration.(2, 32)
UNICEF Action Plan for Venezuela (2009-2013)	Promotes education, violence prevention, and the protection of children's rights. Does not specifically target child labor, but does highlight lack of child labor data and identifies child labor indicators as one of its evaluation and monitoring components.(33)

Policy	Description
MERCOSUR United Against Child Labor Campaign	Develops public awareness about the need to combat child labor in MERCOSUR. Addresses child labor in agriculture, domestic work, and sexual exploitation, with particular emphasis on communities along country borders.(34)
Second Presidential Declaration on the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor in MERCOSUR (2012)	Promotes greater articulation between governmental agencies, levels of government, and with civil society among MERCOSUR members.(35)
MERCOSUR's Southern Child Initiative	Aims to defend the rights of children and adolescents in the region by raising awareness and seeking coordination among member states regarding the commercial sexual exploitation of children, child trafficking and pornography, child labor, and migrant labor; by improving country legal frameworks to harmonize them with international conventions affecting children, and by exchanging best practices.(36-38)

*The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Policy was launched during the reporting period.

In 2013, President Nicolas Maduro announced his intent to implement the Second Socialist Plan for the Economic and Social Development of the Nation, a six year plan with broad goals that include the promotion of educational activities for youth. However, it is not yet clear how the Plan is being implemented, or the extent to which it will impact child labor.(10) While the Government has adopted poverty reduction strategies, as well as policies that target the trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children, research found no evidence of a national policy that targeted other forms of child labor, such as domestic service and garbage scavenging.

In November 2013, the Government participated in the XVIII Inter-American Conference of Ministers of Labor to foster continued dialogue and cooperation on labor issues throughout the Americas. The joint declaration of the Conference promotes social dialogue to address child labor and reaffirms country participants' commitment to work with civil society organizations to advance efforts toward the eradication of child labor.(39)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Venezuela funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Program to Dignify Working Children and Adolescents (PRODINAT)†	National Council for the Rights of Children and Adolescents (IDENA) administered program that aims to eradicate exploitative working conditions and establish safe business environments where children above the legal age may work.(5, 10, 26, 40)
Children of the Barrio Mission (Misión Niños del Barrio)‡	IDENA-administered program that provides services to at-risk and under-privileged children, including child laborers. Primary goal is to eradicate exploitation, abuse, and the psychological and physical mistreatment of children from birth to age 17.(5, 10, 41)
Negra Hipólita Mission (Misión Negra Hipólita)‡	Governmental program that provides assistance to vulnerable groups, including street children.(42) Assists children engaged in child labor, including those working at garbage collection sites and on the street.(43, 44) Has assisted more than 50,000 children since its inception in 2006.(44)
Communal Centers for Comprehensive Care (CCPI)*‡	IDENA-supervised centers that provide meals and educational assistance to at-risk children from birth to age 12. CCPI also partner with the Ministry of Popular Power, Health, and Social Development to provide medical and dental care to children.(45)
National Day Camps*‡	IDENA-administered program under the Community Vacation Plan that provides summer day camps to children with a focus on athletic, artistic, and cultural activities. In 2013, program reached 1.6 million children and adolescents.(10)
Regional Action Group for the Americas (Grupo de Acción Regional para las Américas)	Conducts prevention and awareness-raising campaigns to combat the commercial sexual exploitation of children in Latin America. Members include Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Paraguay, Peru, Suriname, Uruguay, and Venezuela.(46, 47)

Program	Description
Elimination of Child Labor in Latin America (Phase 4)	$4.5 million Government of Spain-funded, 4-year project implemented by ILO-IPEC to combat child labor in 19 countries, including Venezuela.(48)
Education and Monitoring Program for the Eradication of Child Labor	$1.3 million Government of Spain-funded, 2-year project implemented by ILO-IPEC that aims to strengthen public policies and government capacity to combat child labor in 19 countries in Latin America, including Venezuela. Includes the objective of developing information systems on the worst forms of child labor.(48)

*The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Venezuela.

In 2013, it was reported that the Program to Dignify Working Children and Adolescents (PRODINAT) had lost efficacy due to a lack of governmental funding. It was also reported that the Communal Centers for Comprehensive Care (CCPI) lacked the capacity to carry out their missions and that their coordination with the National Council for the Rights of Children and Adolescents (IDENA) had deteriorated.(10) Research could not identify government programs that targeted children engaged in other forms of child labor, for example in domestic service and commercial sexual exploitation.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Venezuela (Table 9).

Table 9. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Laws	Specify and adopt a comprehensive list of hazardous occupations and activities prohibited to children.	2009, 2011 – 2013

Coordination	Make information on the activities of the System for the Protection of Children and Adolescents publically available.	2013
	Publish activities of any coordinating mechanism that addresses the trafficking of children, including for commercial sexual exploitation.	2013

In 2013, Yemen made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. In March, the Ministry of Social Affairs and Labor (MOSAL) issued Ministerial Decree Number 11, which codifies the age limit for hazardous work, and lists specific jobs considered hazardous for children and penalties for employers who violate the law. The Ministry of Education, MOSAL, and the Ministry of Planning and International Cooperation (MOPIC) are participating in donor-funded programs that target special needs groups, including child laborers and street children, and in rehabilitation of schools affected by violence due to the country's internal conflicts. However, children in Yemen continue to engage in child labor in the agriculture sector and in the worst forms of child labor as child soldiers. Gaps in laws, enforcement, policies, and programs to combat child labor remain. There is no information available on whether enforcement actions were taken during the reporting period, and the child labor policy has not been implemented for more than five years. Both the Yemeni Army and other armed groups continue to use children in the country's internal conflicts. No evidence was found of Government efforts to provide demobilization and rehabilitation services to child soldiers who have been involved in combat.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Yemen are engaged in child labor in the agriculture sector and in the worst forms of child labor as child soldiers. (1-6) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Yemen.

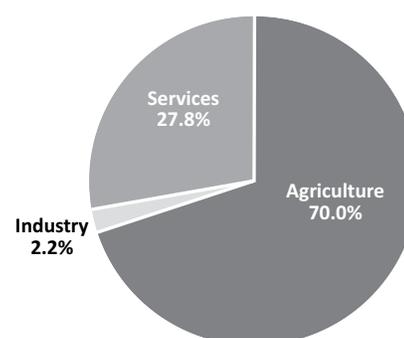

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Yemen is undergoing a political transition. Armed conflict involving Houthi-aligned forces persists in the north and between the Yemeni Armed Forces (YAF) and al-Qa’ida in the Arabian Peninsula (AQAP) in the south of the country.(20)

Children in Yemen are vulnerable to recruitment and engagement in ongoing armed conflicts.(15, 19, 20) During the reporting period, 106 children were reported to be recruited, all boys between 6 and 17 years of age.(19) While a 1991 law prohibits the use of child soldiers, the Yemeni Armed Forces (YAF), military police, many tribal militias, Popular Committees, al-Qa’ida in the Arabian Peninsula, and other non-state elements, continue to have children in their ranks.(11, 18, 19) In 2013, the YAF and tribal-based factions used children in support roles. However, tribal-based factions also used children in armed conflict.(21) Family members, military officers, and local sheiks facilitate the recruitment of children for the YAF through the means of false identification and birth certificates.(18) Limited evidence suggests that boys in AQAP are subject to sexual abuse.(21)

Determining precise ages of children recruited for military activity is a problem due to the low number of birth registrations.(22) However, limited evidence suggests that 12- to 15-year-old married boys in northern tribal regions are considered adults and therefore are obligated to show their allegiance to their tribe by participating in different activities in the internal conflict. Some reports indicate that boys under age 18 were tribal fighters in conflicts; however, other sources indicate that boys were used only as guards.(17)

Limited evidence suggests that the Government of Yemen has made some efforts to prevent the recruitment of children.(15) The Government does not appear to have any disarmament, demobilization, or reintegration programs for children affected by armed conflict.(23)

Rural children are trafficked within Yemen to hotels in Aden, Sana’a, Taiz, and other cities for commercial sexual exploitation.(15) Yemeni children are trafficked to Saudi Arabia for commercial sexual exploitation, forced labor, forced begging, and smuggling of qat.(13, 16, 24) Saudi tourists marry Yemeni girls in temporary marriages, lasting up to a few months, until the tourist either deserts the girl or takes her back to Saudi Arabia where often she is subjected to sex trafficking or abandoned.(14, 16) During the reporting period some men, in order to be accepted into the armed forces, forced their sisters under age 18 into forced marriages with leaders of AQAP.(21)

Access to education in Yemen remains a serious problem. In 2011, it was reported that less than half of all boys and about one quarter of girls attend secondary school.(16) Access to education is limited in poor rural areas, and poor rural girls are the most vulnerable to dropout before the compulsory age.(25) Households sometimes pull children out of schools to work due to household economic and food security concerns.(26) Sometimes girls leave school early so they can get married, and they rarely finish their education after marriage. There is no minimum age for marriage in Yemen, and there is evidence that girls as young as age 8 are forced into marriage.(17, 27)

Enrollment rates in schools have been seriously affected by Yemen's internal conflict and high levels of violence. There is some evidence that these problems have prematurely closed schools and that school buildings have been destroyed during periods of violence.(9, 21, 28-30) In some cases, enrollment has been affected by the internal displacement of persons in the south and north.(9, 21, 28-30) During the reporting period, the Government worked with UNICEF, the Social Fund for Development (SFD), the Global Partnership for Education (GPE), and the Government of Japan on rehabilitation work for many affected schools and construction of temporary schools in conflict-ridden areas.(31-33)

Children in Yemen often are often paid the same wages as adults, a factor that encourages families to allow their children to work.(11)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Yemen has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

* No conscription or no standing military.

In March 2013, MOSAL issued Ministerial Decree Number 11, which codifies the age limit for hazardous and nonhazardous work, and specifically lists jobs considered hazardous and penalties for employers who violate the law.(11, 40) The hazardous list for children identifies 42 occupational and activity sectors, including spraying

Yemen

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

agricultural pesticides, working in tobacco, narghile tobacco, and cloth dyeing factories; working in x-ray and nursing establishments; working with iron and aluminum saws; working in all fishing and diving activities; and descaling of fish with sharp instruments.(40)

There is no criminal law that prohibits foreign tourists from sexually exploiting children and adults in Yemen.(17)

The trafficking law is not fully comprehensive, and only narrowly focuses on transactions and movement of humans internationally. There are no provisions for children trafficked domestically.(15, 45) A new law is awaiting endorsement in parliament, and this law will criminalize forced marriage.(15, 41).

Yemen does not have compulsory military recruitment, and the voluntary recruitment age is 18.(16, 39) The 1991 law prohibiting the use of children as soldiers does not establish a penalty for violations.(11)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
The MOSAL Child Labor Unit (CLU)	Enforce child labor laws, conduct inspections, and inform the Ministry of the Interior of any violations.(10)
Ministry of Interior (MOI)	Enforce child labor laws; police agencies within the MOI handle trafficking investigations.(10, 11)
Ministry of Justice (MOJ)	Enforce child labor laws and prosecute and adjudicate child labor cases.(10)
The Ministry of Human Rights, MOJ, the Ministry of Legal Affairs, Parliament, and the Social Fund for Development (SFD)	Maintain supporting roles in combating child trafficking.(13)

Research found no evidence that law enforcement agencies took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

During the reporting period, the CLU had 160 inspectors, which is a large increase from the 57 inspectors that existed in 2012. While inspectors have received training, they have been unable to perform their inspection duties due to lack of funding and transportation.(11) As there were no inspections carried out in 2013, there is no information on violations found or prosecutions for offenses.

Criminal Law Enforcement

Anti-trafficking efforts were impeded during the reporting period due to the political transition.(41) Research found no information on the number of arrests, investigations, prosecutions, or convictions for offenses related to the worst forms of child labor, including trafficking.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
The National Steering Committee to Combat Child Labor	Coordinate child labor issues in Yemen; consists of representatives from MOSAL, the Higher Council for Motherhood and Childhood (HCMC), the Chamber of Commerce, ILO-IPEC, and local NGOs.(42)

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
The Technical Committee on Combating Child Trafficking, composed of HCMC, relevant ministries, the UN, and local NGOs	Coordinate efforts to combat child trafficking and smuggling. Established in 2008 and composed of representatives from Saudi Arabia and Yemen and Ministry of Social Affairs and Labor, and UNICEF. Meet on a weekly basis and is currently working on the development of a national strategy to combat human trafficking.(43)
National Network for Child Protection	Hold regular meetings and training sessions; established by HCMC.(36)

In January 2013, UNODC, in partnership with the League of Arab States, held a training workshop on anti-trafficking legislative drafting for the committee charged with this task, made up of representatives from the MOJ, MOI, the General Attorney's Office, and other civil society members in Sana'a. The workshop concluded with recommendations for Yemen to adopt a comprehensive law and develop a national strategy on combating human trafficking.(44)

The National Steering Committee to Combat Child Labor authored the March 2013 Ministerial Decree on hazardous work prohibited to children. In December, MOSAL organized a workshop which included representatives of Yemen's Children's Parliament, NGOs, and the private sector on the issues of child labor.(11)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Yemen has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Policy and Program Framework for the Eradication of Child Labor and Elimination of Its Worst Forms	Created in 2005 and developed by MOSAL, ILO-IPEC and HCMC to eliminate child labor. Implementation of the National Policy and Program Framework for the Eradication of Child Labor and Elimination of its Worst Forms has been delayed by more than 7 years due to a lack of funds and poor coordination among the ministry and other parties.(36)
National Strategy for Combatting Trafficking in Persons*	Drafted in 2013 by the Ministry of Human Rights. Includes researching the problem, training awareness and cooperation between Yemen and neighboring countries, training officials, and creating protection procedures for trafficking victims. Research did not reveal any information on the status of implementation of the National Strategy for Addressing Trafficking in Persons.(41)
The Child Protection Sub-Cluster (CPSC)*	Addresses the effect of the internal strife between Government forces and tribal combatants on Yemen's children.(45) Reports on child rights violations, assesses risks and trends faced by children in the crisis; builds capacity among civil society organizations responding to children's needs and coordinates child protection working groups in all conflict-affected areas.(45) In 2013, met to discuss a policy paper on the review of legislation to protect children; also discussed educating children about the dangers posed by military mines.(46)

*The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

The Yemeni Cabinet approved during the reporting period a UN-drafted action plan to reduce the use of child soldiers, which was signed by the Prime Minister after the end of the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Yemen participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Phase IV of the Social Fund for Development (SFD)	SFD program to achieve poverty reduction through economic and social development.(47) Special needs groups, including child laborers and street children, are targeted under the SFD for social protection and education programs in partnership with the Ministry of Education, MOSAL, and the Ministry of Planning and International Cooperation. Includes improving centers for street children and developing safe child health and educational services.(48) Phase IV of the SFD, which runs through 2015, has received significant funding ($167 million) from the United Kingdom's Department for International Development (DFID).(49) In 2013, SFD assisted with the rehabilitation of 33 schools affected by violence in Abyan.(32)
Social Welfare Fund (SWF) cash transfer program*	International Development Association program for low-income households; reaches almost 1 million poor and vulnerable Yemeni households. Provides beneficiaries with vocational skills and economic opportunities, including small and micro-enterprise development, in order to eventually graduate from the cash transfer program.(50)
Direct cash transfer program sponsored by DFID*	$2.3 million DFID-funded program with Government participation, which provides direct cash transfers for 20,000 chronically poor and food-insecure households during 2012.(49, 51) Reports from 2013 indicate that there are delays in its implementation; however, the DFID expects to meet targets for 2013 and 2014.(52)
Temporary classrooms in conflict-affected areas	Government of Japan-funded project to support construction of 24 new schools in areas affected by conflict in Aden, Lahj, Abyan, Al Dhale, and Shabwa Governorates.(31)
Middle East Partnership Initiative projects	Government participates in project run by the US DOS that offers business training for high school youth; may encourage decent work for youth and reduce their vulnerability to worst forms of child labor. One such project targets youth in Sana'a and Aden for training and internships.(53, 54)

*The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

The Yemeni government closed the reception center for the rehabilitation of child labor trafficking victims in Sana'a due to a low number of clients, but MOSAL continued to operate a center in Haradh.(14, 23) Efforts to combat trafficking in persons in Yemen are hampered by lack of government funding and due to weakened governance during the two-year transition Government.(15, 22)

Although Yemen has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem.(11)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Yemen (Table 9).

Table 9. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

	Take steps to address factors that prevent girls and boys from attending school, such as income pressures on families.	2013

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
	Evaluate social protection programs to determine whether they have had an impact on reducing child labor, particularly in the agriculture and fishing sectors.	2011 – 2013

In 2013, Zambia made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government hired 55 new labor inspectors and created a new District Child Labor Committee in Kaoma District. The Government also eliminated examination fees for grades seven and nine and expanded implementation of the social cash transfer program in some provinces. However, children in Zambia continue to engage in child labor in agriculture and mining. The Government has yet to adopt into law the draft statute on hazardous forms of child labor. Gaps also remain in the current legal framework related to children; for instance, the Education Act does not include the specific age to which education is compulsory and the Government has not defined school-going age as required in the law, which may leave children under the legal working age vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Zambia are engaged in child labor in agriculture and mining. Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Zambia.

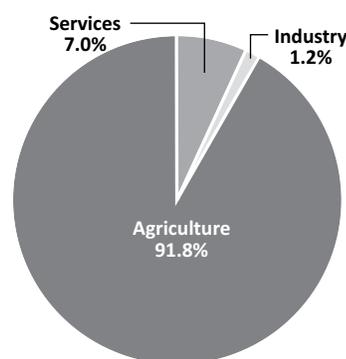

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	7-14 yrs.	28.1 (992,722)
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	65.2

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Children who were trafficked for agriculture work were primarily trafficked from the Democratic Republic of the Congo or neighboring countries, while most domestic service workers who were trafficked were trafficked internally. (3) Some children in Zambia are forced by jerabo gangs, which are illegal mining syndicates, to load trucks with stolen copper ore in the Copperbelt Province. (8) In addition, the Government has yet to release information on child labor from the 2008 Labor Force Survey, although the general Labor Force Survey results were released in 2011. (9, 10)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Zambia has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

Zambia has not ratified the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution, and Child Pornography, while commercial sexual exploitation of children continues to be a problem in Zambia.

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including in its worst forms (Table 4).

* No conscription or no standing military.

Zambia has not enacted into law a list of hazardous occupations prohibited for children, although the draft Statutory Instrument on Hazardous Forms of Child Labor is pending Parliamentary adoption.⁽³⁾ In addition, the penalties for child prostitution violations in the Employment of Young Persons and Children Act are different from those in the Penal Code.⁽¹⁷⁾ While the Penal Code treats child prostitution as a felony with a minimum 20 year jail sentence, the Employment of Young Persons and Children Act treats penalties as civil and punishment is a fine of $35–$165. In practice, the Penal Code would be applied, however research did not discover any such prosecutions in recent years.⁽¹⁸⁾ The Education Act of 2011 requires the Government to provide free education up to the seventh grade, and stipulates that education is compulsory for children of school-going age.^(3, 16, 19) However, the Act does not provide a specific age or definition of “school-going age,” which may allow children to leave school before they are legally able to work.⁽¹⁶⁾ The lack of standards in this area may increase the risk of children’s involvement in the worst forms of child labor. Furthermore, the Government of Zambia does not provide public schools in every village, so some communities must contribute their own labor and resources to fill this gap. While government primary schools are free, schools are understaffed and parent-teacher association and other associated fees prohibit some students from attending.⁽²⁰⁾ In 2013, the Government undertook new efforts to promote female education and eliminated

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including in its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MLSS) Child Labor Unit (CLU)	Implement and enforce child labor laws. ⁽³⁾
Zambia Police Service Child Protection Unit (CPU)	Work with MLSS to identify and remove vulnerable children from the streets. Work with 72 District Street Children Committees to rescue street children from child labor, including the worst forms, and place them with families, in foster care, or in children’s homes. ^(9, 17) Work with immigration officials to combat child trafficking, with local officials regarding crimes against children, and with schools to education and sensitize children about abuse; and collaborate with the Ministry of Justice to investigate and prosecute child labor cases. ^(9, 21)
Zambia Police Service (ZPS) Victim Support Unit	Handle the enforcement of laws against trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and/or use of children in illicit activities. ⁽³⁾
Ministry of Justice	Investigate and prosecute child labor cases. ^(9, 21)

Law enforcement agencies in Zambia took actions to combat child labor, including in its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, the MLSS recruited and trained 55 new labor inspectors, increasing the number to 108. Despite the addition of 55 new labor inspectors, the MLSS believes that the number is inadequate to conduct inspections country-wide and plans to continue to seek an increase in the number of inspectors.⁽³⁾ The new labor inspectors received a month-long training on child labor in 2013. The CLU was allocated $36,000 for 2013, which is the same as the budget allocation for 2012.⁽³⁾ The MLSS stated that the budget and transportation were inadequate to conduct

Zambia

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

inspections.(3) No child labor cases or prosecutions were recorded in 2013; the MLSS conducted labor inspections in public institutions only and did not conduct any in the private sector where child labor is more likely to be found.(3)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2013, 7 potential child trafficking cases were identified by the Government.(8)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including in its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
MLSS	Coordinate government efforts on issues of child labor, including the worst forms.(3)
MLSS-CLU	Coordinate with District Child Labor Committees (DCLCs) in 24 of Zambia's 102 districts to increase local awareness of child labor. Mobilize communities against child labor, including its worst forms.(3)
Zambia Police Service Child Protection Unit	Coordinate with the Ministry of Community Development, Mother, and Child Health (MCDMCH) to protect children from general abuse, including the worst forms of child labor.(3)
DCLCs	Respond to child labor complaints at the local level and file complaints to the MLSS. Composed of ZPS, MLSS, MCDMCH, and civil society stakeholders.(3)

In 2013, the Government created a DCLC in Kaoma District in the Western Province. Kaoma District was targeted due to the high prevalence of child labor on tobacco farms.(3) The Government intends to establish DCLCs in all districts but lacks the resources. DCLCs serve as the main referral mechanism for social welfare services.(3) Due to overlapping responsibilities and communication lapses, individual agency mandates may not be carried out effectively in some cases and a lack of DCLCs may lead to inadequate referral mechanisms.(9)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Zambia has established policies related to child labor, including in its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Child Labor Policy	Establishes an action plan and designates responsible agencies to address child labor issues.(3, 19)
National Action Plan for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Identifies five specific priorities for Government focus: improve and enforce existing laws and policies on child labor, protect all children from hazardous labor, strengthen institutional capacity, raise awareness, and establish monitoring and evaluation systems.(3, 19)
Poverty Reduction Strategy Paper*	Includes the eradication of the worst forms of child labor as a goal.(9)
Sixth National Development Plan (2011–2016) *	Includes the eradication of the worst forms of child labor as a goal.(3, 22)
Education Policy and Education Act of 2011*	Includes rights of children, including the right to free education, and provides for the re-entry of teen mothers into school.(3)
National Employment and Labor Market Policy*	Proposes interventions to eliminate the worst forms of child labor through services provided in the agriculture, health, and education sectors. Provides skills and education to prepare young people for decent and productive work.(9, 14)
UN Development Assistance Framework for Zambia (2011–2015)*	Includes the prevention, protection, and rehabilitation from the worst forms of child labor as a policy outcome in accordance with the Sixth National Development Plan.(23)

*The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

Efforts to implement the Child Labor Policy have been restricted due to inadequate funding.(19)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Zambia funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including in its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Tackling Child Labor through Education (TACKLE) project	Jointly launched by the European Commission and the ILO to combat child labor through education in 12 African and the Caribbean countries and the Pacific group of states (ACP).(24) Aims to strengthen the capacity of national and local authorities to implement and enforce child labor laws and policies in Zambia.(9, 19, 25, 26) Extended until August 2013 and included ILO training on child labor issues for government officials and teachers; implementation of four Action Programs to assist children exposed to or at risk of child labor, especially those living in vulnerable communities; and awareness-raising on child labor through education initiatives.(9, 19, 25, 26)
Global Action Program on Child Labor Issues Project	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO in approximately 40 countries to support the priorities of the Roadmap for Achieving the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor by 2016 established by the Hague Global Child Labor Conference in 2010. In Zambia, the project aims to improve the evidence base on child labor through data collection and research.(27)
Pilot social cash transfer program*‡	Government program that provides funds on the condition that parents send their children to school rather than to work.(19)
Government child labor sensitization efforts‡	Government programs to sensitize the public on child labor at the national and district levels through implementing partners.(3)
Zambia National Service skills training camps*‡	Government program that provides camps for life skills training to at-risk youth, including victims of the worst forms of child labor and children living and working in the streets.(9, 19)
Youth Empowerment Fund*‡	Government program that provides start-up capital for youth to start businesses based on their skills.(3)
School Feeding Program*‡	Government program that provides meals for children that attend school.(3)

*The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Zambia.

In 2013, the Government expanded the implementation of the social cash transfer program in various provinces.(3) Although Zambia has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, especially in some of the most common worst forms of child labor, particularly children in the agriculture and mining sectors and those working on the streets.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including in its worst forms, in Zambia (Table 9).

Table 9. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Laws	Ratify the CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution, and Child Pornography.	2013
	Adopt the draft statutory instrument that enumerates the hazardous occupations prohibited for children.	2009 – 2013
	Determine through statutory instrument the school-going age for compulsory education.	2012, 2013
	Harmonize legislation to ensure that penalties for child commercial sexual exploitation are consistent.	2009 – 2013

In 2013, Zimbabwe made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. Zimbabwe ratified the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on Children in Armed Conflict, as well as the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons. However, children in Zimbabwe continue to engage in child labor in agriculture and mining. The Government did not sufficiently fund large-scale social programs such as the Basic Education Assistance Model Program. In addition, Zimbabwe continues to lack specific social programs targeting sectors in which the worst forms of child labor are most prevalent. Gaps remain in the country's legal framework against child labor, and education is not compulsory or free, which increases children's vulnerability.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Zimbabwe are engaged in child labor, including in agriculture and mining. The Government's 2011 Child Labour Survey report released in 2013 concluded that the worst forms of child labor are increasing and should be a cause for concern.(1-3) Data on key indicators on children's work and education are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Zimbabwe

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

The Government's 2011 Child Labour Survey found that of children 5 to 14 years of age engaged in economic activity, 95.6 percent worked in agriculture, forestry, and fishing; with 95.9 percent living in rural areas.(1) According to UNICEF, approximately 100,000 of Zimbabwe's 1.3 million orphans survive on their own in child-headed households.(13) This breakdown of the family unit, as well as poverty, were major factors in children's vulnerability to child labor.(1, 3, 13) The lack of birth registration prevents children from obtaining education and can lead to children entering the workforce at a young age.(3, 6) In addition, the deterioration of Zimbabwe's economy and manufacturing sector has also led to a recent increase in child labor.(8)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Zimbabwe has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

In 2013, Zimbabwe ratified the UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict, as well as the Palermo Protocol.

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Labour Relations Act of 2002 (14)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Labour Relations Act of 2002 (14)
List of Hazardous Occupations Prohibited for Children	Yes		Children's Protection and Adoption Act (15)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Constitution; Labour Relations Act (14, 16)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Sexual Offenses Act; the Children's Protection and Adoption Act; the Censorship and Entertainment Control Act (3, 6, 15, 17)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Criminal Code (6)
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	Yes	18	National Service Act of 1979 (18)
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	16	National Service Act of 1979 (18)
Compulsory Education Age	No
Free Public Education	No

Section 11(1)(a) and (3)(b) of the Labour Relations Act, allowing for the employment of apprentices at the age of 13, is not in conformity with the ILO Minimum Age Convention.(14, 19) Research was unable to determine if children in the informal sector have the same legal protections as children working in the formal sector.(19) Zimbabwe has no permanent legislation specifically prohibiting trafficking in persons for purposes other than sexual exploitation.(6, 20, 21) In January 2014, President Mugabe passed a Temporary Measure Regulation using Emergency Powers on trafficking in persons. The temporary measure prohibits some forms of sex and labor trafficking and mandates the establishment of centers for trafficking victims and an inter-ministerial anti-trafficking committee; however key definitions in the regulation are inconsistent with the Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons.(22) Zimbabwean law does not provide free schooling or establish a compulsory age for education for children. Section 19 (2)(d) of the new Constitution ratified in 2013 includes a right to a basic Government-funded education, but notes that the Government does not have to provide it due to a lack of resources.(3, 6) School fees are often prohibitively expensive and limit access to education.(1, 3, 8) The Government failed to meet its obligation of supporting secondary school students with school fees.(3, 6, 23) Although Section 19 (3)(a-b) of the new Constitution addresses child labor by requiring legislation to protect children from exploitative labor practices and protecting children from work that is inappropriate for their age or could harm their well-being, education, physical or mental health or spiritual, moral, or social development, laws have not been passed or amended in accordance with these Constitutional provisions.(6, 16)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MOL) Department of Social Welfare	Enforce labor laws and investigate labor-related complaints, including complaints involving child labor. (6)
Zimbabwe Republic Police (ZRP)	Share responsibility with the MOL and the Ministry of Justice and Legal Affairs (MOJ) for enforcing laws against the worst forms of child labor of a criminal nature.(6) Address issues related to child labor through Victim Friendly Units in every district. Conduct transnational trafficking investigations through an anti-trafficking desk at the Interpol National Central Bureau office.(6)
Ministry of Justice and Legal Affairs (MOJ)	Oversee all courts, including labor courts. Address trafficking and child victim cases through Victim Friendly Courts.(6)

Research found no evidence that law enforcement agencies in Zimbabwe took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, the Ministry of Labor (MOL) employed approximately 123 labor inspectors for enforcing labor-related laws, including child labor laws, although many labor inspector positions are unfilled due to high turnover.(3, 6) While the funding and training of labor inspectors has increased in recent years, these resources remain inadequate for the inspectors to be able to investigate and pursue violations of child labor laws. The MOL reports that labor inspectors lack the necessary resources to carry out inspections, such as office facilities for maintaining records, transportation, and fuel.(3, 6) In addition, the MOL does not disaggregate data on labor law violations by age.(6) Therefore, the number of violations related to child labor is unknown.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2013, information was not available regarding the number of investigators, investigations, arrests, or prosecutions related to criminal laws on child labor, including its worst forms.(6) The government did not appear to vigorously investigate and prosecute trafficking offenses; though the government provided minimal information on its efforts.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee to Address the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Address the worst forms of child labor. Chaired by the MOL and includes several government ministries, international organizations, and civil society groups, such as worker and employer organizations.(24)

Zimbabwe

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Ministry level committee on children's issues	Coordinate government ministries related to children's issues, separate from the National Steering Committee. Meet on a quarterly basis.(6)
Inter-ministerial Task Force on Trafficking in Persons	Create a national action plan on trafficking in persons (TIP) that will be chaired by the Ministry of Home Affairs with participation from a large collection of Government entities. Mandated by the President's temporary TIP regulation.(22)
National Task Force on Street Children	Work on street children issues.(6)

In 2013, due to a lack of funding, the National Steering Committee did not meet during the reporting period, and research did not find evidence that the task forces listed in Table 6 were active during 2013.(24)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Zimbabwe has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor (NAP)	Strengthen the analysis of child labor issues and the creation of an entity to coordinate responses to the findings of this analysis. Consists of three thematic areas including education assistance, poverty assistance through a cash transfer scheme, and health assistance.(6)
UN Development Assistance Framework 2012-2015*	Provide support to the Government regarding the utilization of the Child Labor Survey in development planning.(25)

*The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

In 2013, the Government took no action to implement the NAP. A member of the National Steering Committee reported that resources have not been allocated to implement the National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor (NAP).(2, 6) In addition, research did not demonstrate that the results of the Child Labor Survey have been used to inform policies and programs in Zimbabwe.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence of programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms. The Government funds and participates in other programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms.

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Phase II of the National Action Plan for Orphans and Vulnerable Children (NAP OVC II)*	Government program includes a focus on equity and access to quality education for children and aims to assist 80,000 people, including by providing protection services to 25,000 children. Provides a cash transfer program that encourages families to keep children in school.(12, 26, 27) With funding from the European Commission and the Governments of the Netherlands, Sweden, and Britain, provides food and health services to high-risk families, including child-headed households. Also provides for protection services for child victims of abuse, violence, and exploitation.(12, 26, 27)
Basic Education Assistance Module (BEAM) *‡	Government program, supported by the Department for International Development (DFID), provides basic financial assistance for costs such as tuition and examination fees. Aims to keep children in school and to recruit children to enroll who lack access to school as a result of economic hardship.(20, 27, 28)

*The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Zimbabwe.

Research found no evidence of programs to address the worst forms of child labor in mining or agriculture.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Zimbabwe (Table 9).

Part 6 Non-Independent Countries and Territories

NON-INDEPENDENT COUNTRIES AND TERRITORIES

There is limited information regarding child labor and government efforts to combat it in non-independent countries and territories eligible for GSP benefits.¹ Obtaining data on the prevalence and distribution of the worst forms of child labor is difficult, and statistics on child work and school attendance are often not available from the sources used in this report.

In some cases, there is no evidence to suggest that the worst forms of child labor exist in certain territories. In these cases, when laws appear to meet the guidelines called for in ILO C. 182 and embodied in the TDA, and the territory has a good enforcement framework, no suggested actions have been included.

In regard to ratification of key international conventions concerning child labor, these non-independent countries and territories generally are not eligible to become members of the ILO. Even though they are not members of the ILO, ratification of ILO C. 138 and ILO C. 182 may extend to some of them.^{2,3} Similarly, ratification of other conventions, such as the UNCRC, may also apply to some of them.

Across non-independent countries and territories, research indicates a variety of legal structures that govern laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms. Some territories are self-governing, except in the areas of foreign affairs and defense. Domestic laws in the Metropoli do not generally apply to these territories, unless explicitly extended. In other territories, certain domestic laws of the Metropoli apply, and in a few territories, all domestic laws in the Metropoli apply.

Research found some information on the efforts of non-independent countries and territories in the areas of enforcement, coordination, policies, and programs, but in many cases this information was limited.

Assessments

Evidence suggests that the worst forms of child labor are an issue in some non-independent countries and territories. These entities are assessed in the same manner as all other countries included in this report. Other non-independent countries and territories do not appear to have a problem with the worst forms of child labor. These entities fall into three types.

The first type of non-independent country and territory is one in which the population of children is either non-existent or extremely small (under 50). For this reason, ILAB does not write profiles on these territories. The three territories that fit this category are Heard and McDonald Islands, the Pitcairn Islands, and the British Indian Ocean Territories/Chagos Archipelago. The Heard and McDonald Islands are uninhabited, and the population of the Pitcairn Islands is less than 50 people.⁴ The British Indian Ocean Territories is inhabited by U.S. and U.K. military personnel.⁵

The second type of non-independent country and territory is one with no evidence of a worst form of child labor problem and with a good legal and enforcement framework. Given both the lack of a demonstrated problem and the presence of a preventive legal and enforcement framework, ILAB does not assess the efforts of or include suggested actions for these territories. Such entities will be marked “No assessment.” There are currently five territories that fit this category.

The third type of non-independent country and territory is one in which there is no evidence of a worst forms of child labor problem, but that lacks a good legal and enforcement framework. The lack of such a framework is a gap in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. For this reason, such non-independent countries and territories are assessed as “No advancement.” There are currently seven territories that fit this category.

Most of the areas covered in the summary report are considered non-metropolitan territories and are therefore ineligible to become members of ILO. While ILO still does not have an official definition for “non-metropolitan territory,” in earlier versions of the ILO Constitution, “colonies, protectorates and possessions which are not fully self governing” was used in place of this term. An ILO member can submit a declaration to ILO requesting that these conventions apply to their non-metropolitan areas. Please see the chart regarding ratifications of international conventions and selected non-independent country and territory laws at the end of this discussion.

In 2013, Anguilla made a minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. During the reporting period, the Government participated in an initiative with the UNDP to assist at-risk youth. The Ministry of Social Development continued to sponsor the National Conference on Youth and Development, in which the National Youth Council made recommendations on the protection of children and access to education. While the extent of the problem is unknown, some children in Anguilla are reported to engage in the worst forms of child labor, specifically in commercial sexual exploitation. The Government appears to lack a list of hazardous occupations prohibited to children. It also lacks a developed framework and targeted programs that address the commercial sexual exploitation of children.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

While the extent of the problem is unknown, some children in Anguilla are reported to engage in the worst forms of child labor, specifically in commercial sexual exploitation.(1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Anguilla. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children’s Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		78.7

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2008, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2014.(4)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children’s Work Project’s analysis, 2014.(5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children’s work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children’s Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation* (1-3, 6, 7)
	Used in the production of pornography* (1)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

Some children reportedly perform sex acts in exchange for money and gifts.(1, 6) Evidence suggests that in some cases these transactions may occur with the knowledge, consent, or initiation of the child’s parent.(1, 6) There are also reports that non-Anguillan migrant children may be involved in commercial sexual exploitation.(1) Research has found no evidence that the Government of Anguilla collects or disseminates information regarding the prevalence and nature of the commercial sexual exploitation of children and other worst forms of child labor.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

British Overseas Territories (OTs) are territories under the jurisdiction and sovereignty of the United Kingdom (UK), but they do not form part of the UK. They are self-governing, except in the areas of foreign affairs and defense. Domestic UK law does not generally apply to OTs, unless explicitly extended.

The following convention has been extended to Anguilla (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification

	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Employment of Women, Young Persons and Children Act; Employment of Children (Restriction) Act; Education Act (8-10)

List of Hazardous Occupations Prohibited for Children	No
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Constitution (11)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Criminal Code (12)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Criminal Code (12)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Criminal Code (12)

	Non-Combat: Yes	16
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	17	Education Act (9)
Free Public Education	Yes		Education Act (9)

* No conscription or no standing military.

Section 3 of the Employment of Women, Young Persons and Children Act prohibits children under the age of 14 from working in industrial undertakings such as mining, manufacturing, and construction. However, the law does not prohibit young persons between the ages of 14 and 18 from engaging in industrial undertakings, which may leave them vulnerable to dangerous work.(10) Research could not identify whether Anguilla has a comprehensive list of hazardous occupations prohibited to children.

During the previous reporting period, the Government received UNICEF funding to begin drafting legislation that would strengthen protections against child abuse.(14) Research has not found whether this draft legislation has been completed, or the extent to which it addresses the commercial sexual exploitation of children.

The UK Government has introduced systems to track ages and locations of individual soldiers, with the aim of preventing under-18s from being deployed into hostilities. Deployment of members of the armed forces who have not yet reached 18 years is permitted when there is a genuine need and the situation is urgent.(13, 15-17)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Department of Labor of the Ministry of Finance, Economic Development, Investments, and Tourism	Enforce child labor laws through the Labor Commissioner, pursuant to the Employment of Children (Restriction) Act.(8, 18)
Department of Social Development of the Ministry of Social Development	Safeguard the well-being of children and investigate reports of child abuse.(19-21)
Royal Anguilla Police Force	Investigate child protection cases.(19-21)

Research found no evidence that law enforcement agencies in Anguilla took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Ministry of Social Development	Implement child protection efforts and ensure Anguilla complies with the CRC.(22, 23)

In 2013, the Government of Anguilla continued to coordinate child protection issues through the Ministry of Social Development.(23) However, the extent to which the Ministry addressed the worst forms of child labor, and particularly the commercial sexual exploitation of children, is unclear.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Anguilla has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Child Protection National Action Plan*	Calls for the development of the Child Protection Protocols.(22) In 2013, the Ministry of Social Development, with the involvement of UNICEF, organized the interagency Child Protection Protocol Consultation Workshop to continue to develop the Child Protection Protocols.(24, 25)
Safeguarding and Child Protection Protocols and Procedures*	Provides guidance and support on identifying, reporting, investigating, managing, and prosecuting child abuse cases. Developed by the Ministry of Social Development in conjunction with UNICEF. (19, 21, 23) Reported to address legislative gaps in the protection of children.(24)

*The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

In 2013, the Ministry of Social Development sponsored the Seventh Annual National Conference on Youth and Development, in which the National Youth Council met at the Anguilla House of Assembly to make recommendations on the protection of children, youth employment, and access to education.(26-28) Also during the reporting period, the Ministry of Tourism engaged public and private agencies to debate a comprehensive tourism policy that would guide the sustainable development of the sector. However, it is unclear if safeguards against child labor or the promotion of children's rights were included in the debate.(29)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Anguilla funded social programs that may have an impact on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Safeguarding Children in Anguilla Project*‡	Ministry of Social Development media campaign that engages civil society groups on child protection issues.(14, 23) In 2013, produced an outreach campaign that targeted the Spanish-speaking community of all ages on raising awareness of children’s issues.(23)
Department for Youth and Culture programming*‡	Department for Youth and Culture program that provides a range of cultural activities for children ages 11 to 18 during summer months; facilitates development of youth centers where young people can participate in educational activities.(23)

*The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Anguilla.

In 2013, the Government of Anguilla, through the Ministry of Social Development, began working with the UNDP to develop a project for at-risk youth.(23)

The question of whether these initiatives have an impact on the commercial sexual exploitation of children remains unclear. Research found no evidence that the Government has carried out programs to combat the commercial sexual exploitation of children directly.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO PREVENT THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the continued prevention of child labor, including its worst forms, in Anguilla (Table 9).

Table 9. Suggested Government Actions to Prevent Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

British Virgin Islands

NO ADVANCEMENT

NON-INDEPENDENT COUNTRIES AND TERRITORIES

In 2013, the British Virgin Islands made no advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. While there is no evidence of a problem, the Government has not developed a list of hazardous occupations prohibited to children.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor exists in the British Virgin Islands.(1)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

British Overseas Territories (OTs) are territories under the jurisdiction and sovereignty of the United Kingdom (UK), but they do not form part of the UK. They are self-governing, except in the areas of foreign affairs and defense. Domestic UK Law does not generally apply to OTs, unless explicitly extended.(1)

The following convention has been extended to the British Virgin Islands (Table 1).(1)

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The Government has not developed a list of hazardous occupations prohibited to children.(2)

The UK Government has introduced systems to track ages and locations of individual soldiers, with the aim of preventing under 18s from being deployed into hostilities. Deployment of members of the armed forces who have not yet reached 18 years is permitted when there is a genuine need and the situation is urgent.(7-10)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Even though there is no evidence of a problem, the Government has established an institutional mechanism for the enforcement of labor laws for the British Virgin Islands (Table 3).

Table 3. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for coordinating mechanisms to address child labor, including its worst forms, in the British Virgin Islands.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor, including its worst forms, in the British Virgin Islands.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for social programs to address child labor, including its worst forms, in the British Virgin Islands.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO PREVENT THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the continued prevention of child labor, including its worst forms, in the British Virgin Islands (Table 4).

Christmas Island

NO ASSESSMENT

NON-INDEPENDENT COUNTRIES AND TERRITORIES

For the 2013 reporting period, no assessment has been made regarding Christmas Island's efforts to advance the elimination of the worst forms of child labor because 2013 is the first year suggested actions are included for Christmas Island. While there is no evidence of a problem, gaps exist in the legal framework to prevent children from involvement in the worst forms of child labor. Christmas Island does not have a minimum age for hazardous work, or a list of hazardous activities which may leave children vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

There is no evidence that children on Christmas Island are engaged in the worst forms of child labor.(1, 2)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Acts Interpretation Act 1901 provides that Christmas Island is part of the definition of “Australia” in the laws of Australia. Accordingly, all legislation of the federal parliament applies to these territories unless specifically excluded, including Australia’s ratification of conventions.(3)

Because Australia has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor, the following conventions apply to Christmas Island (Table 1).

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification

	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓

	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

Christmas Island is subject to the child labor laws of the state of Western Australia.(1) The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 2).

Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Commonwealth Criminal Code Act 1995 of Australia (5)

No information was found on whether any laws specifically define hazardous work or establish a minimum age for it.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Even though there is no evidence of a problem, the Government of Australia has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms, which apply to Christmas Island (Table 3).

For the 2013 reporting period, no assessment has been made regarding Cocos (Keeling) Islands' efforts to advance the prevention of the worst forms of child labor because 2013 is the first year suggested actions are included for the Cocos (Keeling) Islands. While there is no evidence of a problem, gaps exist in the legal framework to prevent children from involvement in the worst forms of child labor. Cocos (Keeling) Islands do not have a minimum age for hazardous work, or a list of hazardous activities which may leave children vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

There is no evidence that children on the Cocos (Keeling) Islands are engaged in the worst forms of child labor.(1, 2)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Acts Interpretation Act 1901 provides that the Cocos (Keeling) Islands are part of the definition of “Australia” in the laws of Australia. Accordingly, all legislation of the federal parliament applies to these territories unless specifically excluded, including Australia’s ratification of conventions.(3)

Because Australia has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor, the following conventions apply to the Cocos (Keeling) Islands (Table 1).

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Even though there is no evidence of a problem, the Government of Australia has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms, which apply to the Cocos (Keeling) Islands (Table 3).

Cook Islands

NO ADVANCEMENT

NON-INDEPENDENT COUNTRIES AND TERRITORIES

In 2013, the Cook Islands made no advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. While there is no evidence of a problem, the Government's legal framework is insufficient to protect children from prostitution and pornography, and research could not determine whether laws prohibit internal trafficking or use of children in illicit activities. Also, a list of hazardous occupations prohibited to children has not been developed.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor exists in the Cook Islands.(1-3)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Cook Islands is a self-governing territory of New Zealand. The territory follows a combination of its own laws and some of the laws of New Zealand and the United Kingdom that were enacted prior to self-government in 1965.(1, 4) There are no armed forces in the Cook Islands.(5, 6) New Zealand is responsible for the Cook Islands' defense at its request and in consultation with the Cook Islands.(5)

Since 1988, no treaty signed, ratified, accepted, approved, or acceded to by New Zealand extends to the Cook Islands, unless New Zealand acted expressly on behalf of the Cook Islands.(7)

The following convention has been ratified by the Cook Islands (Table 1).

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Free Public Education	Yes		Education Act of 2012 (14)

In 2012, the Cook Islands enacted the Employment Relations Act, which prohibits children younger than 13 years of age from being employed.(8, 15) The Act also prohibits a school-aged person, defined as 13 to 16 years old, from working during normal school hours, for more than 10 hours a week outside of school hours, or for work that is not considered light work.(8) Light work is defined in the Act as work that does not threaten the child's health and safety, or hamper the child's education or vocational orientation and training.(8) Under the Act, children under 18 years old are prohibited from working in hazardous occupations.(8) However, research indicates that a list of hazardous occupations has not been developed.

Under the Cook Islands Crimes Amendment Act 2004, trafficking in persons across borders is illegal; however, it is not clear whether internal trafficking is addressed in the Act.(12, 16)

The Cook Islands Crimes Act of 1969 prohibits prostitution but does not address child prostitution or child pornography.(12, 16, 17) In 2010, the Government of the Cook Islands began a comprehensive review of the Crimes Act to amend provisions of the Act, to include criminalizing child prostitution and child pornography.(1, 2, 17) To date, the Act has not yet been modified.(2, 17)

Research could not determine whether laws prohibiting the use of children for illicit activities exist.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Even though there is no evidence of a problem, the Government has established institutional mechanisms to monitor the implementation of child labor laws in the Cook Islands (Table 3).

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor, including its worst forms, in the Cook Islands.

Falkland Islands (Islas Malvinas)

NON-INDEPENDENT COUNTRIES AND TERRITORIES

NO ADVANCEMENT

In 2013, the Falkland Islands made no advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. Although no information suggests that the worst forms of child labor are a problem, the Government appears to lack a complete preventive legal framework to protect all children from trafficking for the purposes of labor exploitation. It also is unclear whether the Falkland Islands have established a more comprehensive list of hazardous work prohibited to children, and whether the use of children in illicit activities is prohibited. This leaves children vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor exists in the Falkland Islands.(1, 2)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

British Overseas Territories (OTs) are territories under the jurisdiction and sovereignty of the United Kingdom (UK), but they do not form part of the UK. They are self-governing, except in the areas of foreign affairs and defense. Domestic UK Law does not generally apply to OTs, unless explicitly extended.(3)

The following conventions have been extended to the Falkland Islands (Table 1).

Falkland Islands (Islas Malvinas)

NO ADVANCEMENT

NON-INDEPENDENT COUNTRIES AND TERRITORIES

The UK Employment of Women, Young Persons, and Children Act makes it illegal to employ children in work that exposes them to physical, psychological, or sexual abuse. The Act protects children from work that is underground, underwater, at dangerous heights, or in confined spaces, as well as from work that requires using dangerous machinery, equipment, or tools without training and supervision, and prohibits work at night in any industry.⁽⁷⁾ No information was found on whether the Government has developed a more comprehensive list of hazardous occupations prohibited to children, or if the law explicitly prohibits the use of children in illicit activities.^(14, 15)

Although child trafficking has not been identified as having occurred in the Falkland Islands, the law does not appear to protect children, specifically young persons older than 16, from internal and cross-border trafficking for the purposes of labor exploitation.^(8, 9, 15)

The UK Government has introduced systems to track ages and locations of individual soldiers, with the aim of preventing under 18s from being deployed into hostilities. Deployment of members of the armed forces who have not yet reached 18 years is permitted when there is a genuine need and the situation is urgent.^{(11, 12, 16, 17).}

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for enforcement actions to address child labor, including its worst forms, in the Falkland Islands.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for coordinating mechanisms to address child labor, including its worst forms, in the Falkland Islands.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor, including its worst forms, in the Falkland Islands.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for social programs to address child labor, including its worst forms, in the Falkland Islands.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO PREVENT THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the continued prevention of child labor, including its worst forms, in the Falkland Islands (Table 3).

In 2013, Gibraltar made a moderate advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. While there is no evidence of a problem, the Government has strengthened its preventive legal framework to help protect children from exploitive labor. In 2013, the Government of Gibraltar enacted the Gibraltar Merchant Shipping (Maritime Labour Conventions) Regulations, which extends labor protections to children working aboard ships through age 18. However, critical gaps remain in the legal framework to prevent children from being involved in the worst forms of child labor. The legal framework does not appear to define a minimum age for all work, nor does it appear to fully protect children ages 15 through 17 from hazardous work. The law also does not appear to prohibit the use of children in illicit activities that are not of a sexual nature, such as for drug trafficking, theft, or burglary. These gaps continue to leave children vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor exists in Gibraltar.(1-3)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

British Overseas Territories (OTs) are territories under the jurisdiction and sovereignty of the United Kingdom (UK), but they do not form part of the UK. They are self-governing, except in the areas of foreign affairs and defense. Domestic UK Law does not generally apply to OTs, unless explicitly extended.

None of the following conventions have been extended to Gibraltar (Table 1).

Gibraltar does not appear to have a clearly defined law or regulation setting a minimum employment age for all work. The Education and Training Act of 1974 bars employing children under the age of 18 as apprentices, and possibly in other work, without the written consent of the Government's Director of Education; however, the Act affords the Director wide discretion in determining whether to consent to the employment.(11) The definition of "child" also varies throughout the legal framework.(5, 9, 11)

Three laws limit employing children in hazardous activities. The first law, the Working Time Act, prohibits children under age 16 from employment that is dangerous to their life, health, or morals; though the Act does not list specific industries or activities that would fall within this definition, it does regulate working time for young persons ages 15–17; specifically, work performed at night, the maximum amount of hours a young person may work, and the minimum amount of time employers should allocate for breaks and rest periods.(5) Research has been unable to locate any list or more specific definition promulgated under the authority of this law. The second law, Gibraltar's Employment Act prohibits children under age 15 from working in "industrial undertakings," which the Act defines broadly to include mining, manufacturing, construction, and transportation.(4, 5) Finally, the Merchant Shipping Regulations enacted in 2013 bar children under 18 from working at night on marine vessels and bar children under 16 from working on vessels at all.(4) Taken together, the various regulations may not fully protect children ages 15 through 17 from hazardous work, as the Employment Act specifically allows children of these ages to work at night in industrial undertakings in mining and in manufacturing of iron, steel, paper, raw sugar, and glass work.(4) It is not clear whether any other government rule exists that details a more comprehensive list of hazardous activities prohibited for all children under 18. Also, while the Crimes Act 2011 prohibits the use of children for begging, it is not clear whether laws exist prohibiting the use of children in illicit activities such as the production and distribution of illegal drugs.(9)

The UK and the Royal Gibraltar Regiment are responsible for defending Gibraltar.(2, 10) The UK Government has introduced systems to track ages and locations of individual soldiers, with the aim of preventing under 18s from being deployed into hostilities. Deployment of members of the armed forces who have not yet reached 18 years is permitted when there is a genuine need and the situation is urgent.(2, 10, 14-16)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Although there is no evidence of a child labor problem in Gibraltar, limited evidence suggests that institutional mechanisms have been established to enforce labor laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms.(3, 17) However, research did not identify these institutional mechanisms.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for coordinating mechanisms to address child labor, including its worst forms, in Gibraltar.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor, including its worst forms, in Gibraltar.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for social programs to address child labor, including its worst forms, in Gibraltar.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO PREVENT THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the continued prevention of child labor, including its worst forms, in Gibraltar (Table 3).

Table 3. Suggested Government Actions to Prevent Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested

	Amend the law to protect all children under 18 from clearly defined hazardous work.	2012 – 2013
	Clarify whether laws exist regarding the use of children for drug trafficking or other illicit activities.	2011 – 2013

In 2013, Montserrat made no advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. Although there is no evidence of a child labor problem in Montserrat, critical gaps exist in the legal framework to prevent children being involved in the worst forms of child labor. Although the Montserrat Labor Code protects children from performing hazardous work, it is unclear whether the Government has established a comprehensive list of hazardous activities. It also is unclear whether the law prohibits the use of children in illicit activities such as drug trafficking, begging, and theft or burglary. These gaps leave children vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

While the Montserrat Labor Code prohibits the employment of children under 16, it includes an exception allowing the employment of children older than 14 in light work. In addition, children under the age of 18 may not be employed at night or in occupations designated as hazardous.(4) The Minister of Labor for Montserrat is entrusted with the responsibility of deciding what constitutes light work and what constitutes hazardous work, but research found no comprehensive list of hazardous work for all children up to age 18.(4) In addition, research did not find any law or regulation prohibiting the use of children in illicit activities.

The UK Government has introduced systems to track ages and locations of individual soldiers, with the aim of preventing under-18s from being deployed into hostilities. Deployment of members of the armed forces who have not yet reached 18 years is permitted when there is a genuine need and the situation is urgent.(3, 7, 9, 10)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

For the 2013 reporting period, no assessment has been made regarding Niue's efforts to advance the prevention of the worst forms of child labor because this 2013 report is the first year suggested actions are included for Niue. While there is no evidence of a problem, the Government has not established adequate legal protection to prevent the worst forms of child labor. Niue's Terrorism Suppression and Transnational Crimes Act of 2006 specifically address child prostitution. However, there is no law addressing other forms of commercial sexual exploitation of children nor is there an established minimum age for labor and comprehensive list of hazardous work prohibited to children. Additionally, research has not identified any laws that prohibit the use of children for drug trafficking or other illicit activities.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor exists in Niue.(1)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Niue is a self-governing territory of New Zealand and does not follow New Zealand laws. There are no armed forces in Niue as New Zealand is responsible for Niue's defense.(2, 3)

Since 1988, no treaty signed, ratified, accepted, approved, or acceded to by New Zealand extends to Niue, unless it was done expressly on behalf of Niue.(4)

The following convention has been ratified by Niue (Table 1).

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

In Niue, children under the age of 16 are prohibited from working in the public sector, but they can help with family businesses.(8) There are, however, no labor laws and no established minimum age for labor.(8) There also is no comprehensive list of hazardous work prohibited to children.(1, 8)

The Terrorism Suppression and Transnational Crimes Act of 2006 makes it an offense to traffic children, and any person convicted of this offense may be imprisoned for a term not to exceed 20 years.(5) Research, however, has not identified whether there are laws that specifically address child prostitution and other forms of commercial sexual exploitation of children, such as pornography. Research also has not identified whether laws exist regarding the use of children for drug trafficking or other illicit activities.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for enforcement actions to address child labor, including its worst forms in Niue.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Even though there is no evidence of a problem, the Government has established institutional mechanisms to address children's rights and protection (Table 3).

Table 3. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor, including its worst forms, in Niue.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for social programs to address child labor, including its worst forms, in Niue.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO PREVENT THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Norfolk Island

NO ADVANCEMENT

NON-INDEPENDENT COUNTRIES AND TERRITORIES

In 2013, Norfolk Island made no advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. Although no information suggests that the worst forms of child labor are a problem, gaps exist in the legal framework to prevent children from involvement in the worst forms of child labor. National legislation fails to prescribe a minimum age for employment, prohibit hazardous work for children, and fully protect minors under 18 from exploitation in prostitution, which leaves children vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

There is no evidence that children on Norfolk Island are engaged in the worst forms of child labor.(1, 2)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

According to the Government of Australia, the extent to which legislation, including laws implementing Australia's treaty obligations, applies to the external territories varies. In relation to Norfolk Island, legislation of the federal parliament applies only if it is expressly stated to do so or if it is obvious from the legislation in question that it was intended to do so.(3) The territory follows a combination of its own laws and some of the laws of Australia.

Evidence suggests that Australia's ratification of conventions applies to Norfolk Island (Table 1).

There is no minimum age for employment on Norfolk Island. Children younger than age 15, however, are subject to limitations under the Norfolk Island Employment Act of 1988.(1, 4) Children younger than age 15 may not work more than 20 hours a week, at night, or during school hours.(5) Parental consent and written agreement are required to employ persons younger than age 18.(5) Information is limited, but it does not appear that Norfolk Island has restrictions on hazardous child labor, and the Government has not developed a list of hazardous occupations prohibited to children. However, employers have a duty to provide a safe working environment as well as the required safety equipment and clothing, without any charge to their employees.(4)

The Criminal Law Amendment Act 1995 makes it illegal to employ a person younger than age 16 for the purposes of prostitution.(5) Therefore, the criminal laws fail to fully protect children ages 16 to 18 from prostitution. The Child Welfare Act of 2009, however, protects children under the age of 18 from sexual and financial exploitation by allowing officials to take children at risk of harm or injury into safe custody.(10-12)

In November 2012, the Government of Norfolk Island, through the Legal Service Unit, began preparing legislative amendments to address gaps in its legal framework to enhance protections for children vulnerable to exploitative labor. (1, 2, 11) Research indicates that such amendments have not yet been passed or implemented.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Even though there is no evidence of a problem, the Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 3).

Table 3. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Employment inspectors and child welfare officers	Monitor the employment of young workers and take action with regard to their protection, including the production of child pornography.(4, 10, 11)
Australian Federal Police	Enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor.(5)
Australian Federal Police: Human Trafficking Teams	Investigate human trafficking for the purpose of transnational sexual and labor exploitation.(4)
Australian Federal Police: Child Protection Operations Team	Perform an investigative and coordination role for multijurisdictional and international child sex exploitation online, child sex tourism, and child pornography.(5, 13)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Although there is no evidence of a problem, Norfolk Island is included in Australia’s Interdepartmental Committee on Human Trafficking to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Interdepartmental Committee on Human Trafficking	Chaired by the Attorney General’s Department, deals with child labor issues from a trafficking perspective and consists of 10 government agencies including the Australian Federal Police, the Office for Women, the Department of Immigration and Border Protection, the Australian Crime Commission, the Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade, Fair Work Ombudsman, Fair Work Building and Construction, the Department of the Prime Minister and Cabinet, the Department of Education, and the Department of Employment.(2, 14)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor, including its worst forms, in Norfolk Island.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for social programs to address child labor, including its worst forms, in Norfolk Island.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO PREVENT THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the continued prevention of child labor, including its worst forms, in Norfolk Island (Table 5).

Table 5. Suggested Government Actions to Prevent Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Laws	Establish a legal minimum age for employment.	2010–2013
	Establish laws to prohibit children under age 18 from engaging in hazardous work.	2010–2013

(formerly called Saint Helena)

In 2013, Saint Helena, Ascension, and Tristan de Cunha made no advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. Although no information suggests that the worst forms of child labor are a problem, gaps exist in the legal framework to prevent children from involvement in the worst forms of child labor. The Government lacks legislation prescribing a minimum age for work, and it is unclear whether a list of hazardous occupations exists for children. It also is unclear whether laws exist regarding the use of children for drug trafficking or other illicit activities. These gaps may make children vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor exists in Saint Helena, Ascension, and Tristan da Cunha.(1)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

British Overseas Territories (OTs) are territories under the jurisdiction and sovereignty of the United Kingdom (UK), but they do not form part of the UK. They are self-governing, except in the areas of foreign affairs and defense. Domestic UK Law does not generally apply to OTs, unless explicitly extended.(2)

The following conventions have been extended to Saint Helena, Ascension, and Tristan da Cunha (Table 1).

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The Government has no legal framework establishing a minimum age for work.(10) The Education Ordinance prohibits children of compulsory school age from working during school hours.(8) No information was found on whether the Government has developed a list of hazardous occupations prohibited to children.

No information was found on whether laws exist regarding the use of children for drug trafficking or other illicit activities.

The UK Government has introduced systems to track ages and locations of individual soldiers, with the aim of preventing under 18s from being deployed into hostilities. Deployment of members of the armed forces who have not yet reached 18 years is permitted when there is a genuine need and the situation is urgent.(2, 6, 7, 11)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for enforcement actions to address child labor, including its worst forms, in Saint Helena, Ascension, and Tristan da Cunha

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for coordinating mechanisms to address child labor, including its worst forms, in Saint Helena, Ascension, and Tristan da Cunha.

For the 2013 reporting period, no assessment has been made regarding Tokelau's efforts to advance the prevention of the worst forms of child labor because 2013 is the first year suggested actions are included for Tokelau. While there is no evidence of a problem, it is unclear whether the Government has laws prescribing provisions against the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor exists in Tokelau.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Tokelau is a dependent territory of New Zealand; however, international treaties are applied only with the consent of the Government of Tokelau.(1) New Zealand's ratification of conventions does not apply automatically to Tokelau (Table 1).(2, 3) It is unknown which international treaties Tokelau has consented to.

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification

	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

New Zealand's laws apply to Tokelau. However, they are implemented complementary to Tokelauan domestic law, which applies to the local level.(2) Research has not indicated whether domestic laws ensure that children under 18 are protected from child labor and its worst forms. There are no armed forces in Tokelau as New Zealand is responsible for Tokelau's defense (Table 2).(3)

No information was found on whether the law establishes a minimum age for employment or engagement in hazardous work in Tokelau.

The Tokelau Crimes, Procedures, and Evidences Rules Act of 2003 prohibit prostitution and illicit activities; however, there is no information on age.(4) It is unknown whether or not children are protected from use in illicit activities or protected from all forms of commercial sexual exploitation.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for enforcement actions to address child labor, including its worst forms, in Tokelau.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for coordinating mechanisms to address child labor, including its worst forms, in Tokelau.

Turks and Caicos Islands

NO ADVANCEMENT

NON-INDEPENDENT COUNTRIES AND TERRITORIES

In 2013, the Turks and Caicos Islands (TCI) made no advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. Limited evidence suggests that the Islands' 2,000 undocumented children are vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation as a result of human trafficking. The Government lacks a complete legal framework to prevent child labor, including its worst forms. During the reporting period, anti-trafficking legislation remained in draft form. TCI has not established a minimum age for performing hazardous work, leaving children under 18 vulnerable.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Limited evidence suggests that the Islands' 2,000 undocumented children are vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation as a result of trafficking.(1, 2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Turks and Caicos Islands. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	Unavailable

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2005, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2014.(3)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis, 2014.(4)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor as a result of trafficking* (1, 2, 5, 6)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

TCI is a destination country for children trafficked for forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation. The Islands' 2,000 undocumented children are vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation as a result of trafficking.(1) Limited evidence suggests that girls from the Dominican Republic are trafficked to TCI for commercial sexual exploitation.(6) Anecdotal information suggests that migrants from Haiti, the Dominican Republic, and Jamaica are trafficked to the Islands for commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor; however, it is unclear how many victims are children. Limited evidence suggests that commercial sexual exploitation occurs in bars and brothels in TCI.(1)

Undocumented children and their parents do not have birth certificates. Many undocumented children came to TCI from Haiti, especially after the 2010 hurricane. The TCI Human Rights Commission faces many challenges in obtaining more information on these children.(6)

The TCI Human Rights Commission found that many migrant children were not able to attend public schools due to the lack of space in schools.(6) The TCI Education Department has been tasked to review the problem and to work with Immigration and Border Control on expanding classroom sizes; however, no more information is available on the outcome of these efforts.(4)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

British Overseas Territories (OTs) are territories under the jurisdiction and sovereignty of the United Kingdom (UK), but they do not form part of the UK.(7, 8) They are self-governing, except in the areas of foreign affairs and defense. Domestic UK Law does not generally apply to OTs, unless explicitly extended.(9)

The following convention has been extended to the Turks and Caicos Islands (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

* No conscription or no standing military.

Research found no evidence of a minimum age for hazardous work or a comprehensive list prohibiting children from hazardous work.

Research also found no evidence on whether the Government has laws prohibiting the use of children for drug trafficking or other illicit activities. In addition, a child trafficking law remains in draft form, leaving victims of child sex trafficking unprotected.(1)

The UK Government has introduced systems to track ages and locations of individual soldiers, with the aim of preventing under-18s from being deployed into hostilities. Deployment of members of the armed forces who have not yet reached 18 years is permitted when there is a genuine need and the situation is urgent.(11, 13-15)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Even though there is limited evidence of a problem, the Government has established an institutional mechanism for the enforcement of criminal laws for the Turks and Caicos Islands. The Government has not established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations specific to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role

In 2013, research could not determine whether law enforcement agencies in TCI took actions to investigate or enforce laws relating to child labor, including its worst forms.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has not established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

There is limited evidence of a problem in TCI; therefore, it is unclear if the Government needs to develop policies to address child labor, including its worst forms.

In response to the USDOS 2013 Trafficking in Persons Report, the Government's Human Rights Commissioner expressed concern and paid attention to the issue of trafficking and undocumented children on the Islands. However, the report did not contain information on how this issue would be addressed, and research did not uncover any other policies or efforts.(5)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence of social programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms, in the Turks and Caicos Islands.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO PREVENT THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the prevention of child labor, including its worst forms, in the Turks and Caicos Islands (Table 6).

Wallis and Futuna

NO ASSESSMENT

NON-INDEPENDENT COUNTRIES AND TERRITORIES

For the 2013 reporting period, no assessment has been made regarding Wallis and Futuna's efforts to advance the prevention of the worst forms of child labor, because there is no evidence of a worst forms of child labor problem and the country has a good legal and enforcement framework on child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor exists in Wallis and Futuna.(1)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Wallis and Futuna is considered a French "Overseas Collectivity." As such, Wallis and Futuna cannot ratify international conventions; however, ratifications of such conventions by France apply to Wallis and Futuna.(2) (Table 1).

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention		Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

French law applies in Wallis and Futuna.(1, 3) The Government has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 2).

Table 2. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Penal Code (7)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Penal Code (4, 7)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Penal Code (7)

	Non-Combat: Yes	17
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Education Code (4, 10)
Free Public Education	Yes		Education Code (4, 10)

* No conscription or no standing military.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Even though there is no evidence of a problem, the Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 3).

Table 3. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor Inspectors	Enforce labor laws and report violations involving children to local social assistance personnel. Nominated to serve 2-year terms in Wallis and Futuna.(1)
Defender of Rights	Promote children's rights, including through the prohibition of child labor.(1)

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for enforcement actions to address child labor, including its worst forms.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for coordinating mechanisms to address child labor, including its worst forms.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor, including its worst forms, in Wallis and Futuna.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for social programs to address child labor, including its worst forms, in Wallis and Futuna.

West Bank and the Gaza Strip

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

NON-INDEPENDENT COUNTRIES AND TERRITORIES

In 2013, the Palestinian Authority (PA) made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor in the areas of the West Bank under PA control. The PA established the National Committee on Child Labor to serve as a coordinating mechanism to combat the problem. It expanded the number of the country's Child Protection System Referral Networks (CPNs), which coordinate to protect vulnerable children such as those in child labor, from eight to 12 to cover each of the West Bank's 12 districts. Furthermore, the Ministry of Social Affairs continued to provide some assistance to low-income families with the goal of keeping children out of child labor. However, children in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip continue to engage in child labor in agriculture and street work. The PA legal framework does not include prohibitions against forced labor or trafficking. The PA continued to lack an adequate number of inspectors and child protection officers to enforce child labor laws. There is also no evidence of any targeted programs for children involved in child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip are engaged in child labor in agriculture and street work.(1-4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7-14 yrs.	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		90.2

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2012, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2014.(5)

Source for all other data: Understanding Children's Work Project's analysis, 2014.(6)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including the production of dates,* peppers,* eggplant,* tomatoes,* and poultry* (1, 2, 4, 7-11)
	Fishing,* activities unknown (11)
Industry	Construction, including demolishing buildings and collecting pebbles and gravel for construction purposes* (1-4, 10-15)
	Manufacturing, activities unknown (1, 4, 9-11)
	Blacksmithing* (11)
Services	Street work, including street vending (1, 4, 9, 11)
	Portering* and trading (1, 11)
	Work in auto body shops and metal workshops* (10, 12, 16)
	Work in shops, restaurants, or hotels* (4, 9, 11)
	Transportation* (9)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Collecting scrap metal and solid waste* (4, 9, 11)
	Used as combatants in relation to armed conflict* (4)
	Used to smuggle food and other goods, including through tunnels (1, 4, 9, 11)
	Forced labor in agriculture* and begging* as a result of trafficking (17, 18)

* Evidence of this activity is limited and/or the extent of the problem is unknown.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a) – (c) of ILO C. 182.

During the first half of 2013, children continued to be paid to smuggle goods through Gaza's tunnels but, after that point, most smuggling tunnels were closed.(4, 19) Although past reports have indicated children were used as human shields and informants, there were no such reports during 2013.(20)

West Bank and the Gaza Strip

NON-INDEPENDENT COUNTRIES AND TERRITORIES

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

The West Bank and the Gaza Strip lacks a sufficient number of schools to serve all children. Children often travel long and dangerous distances to attend schools, in some instances, because of Israeli restrictions on access and movement. (21, 22) Schools are also sometimes poorly equipped and unhygienic.(21, 22) Access to schools is also hindered by the violence perpetrated by both Israeli and Palestinian forces. During the first half of 2013, UNICEF reported 29 attacks on schools in the West Bank.(4)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Palestinians have Non-Member Observer status at the UN. As such, the Palestinian Authority (PA) is not eligible to ratify UN and ILO conventions (Table 3).(19, 23)

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	N/A
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A
	UN CRC	N/A
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	N/A
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	N/A
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	N/A

No unified and comprehensive set of child labor and education laws exists for all of the West Bank and Gaza. Since the 2007 takeover in Gaza by Hamas, the PA has not had enforcement capabilities in the Gaza Strip.(4, 19) In the West Bank, under the terms of the Oslo-era agreements between the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Israeli Government, the PA has civil law jurisdiction in the areas of the West Bank designated Area A and Area B, which represent approximately 39 percent of the West Bank's land area and contain approximately 96 percent of the Palestinian population. In Area C, which represents 61 percent of the West Bank's land area and contains approximately 4 percent of the Palestinian population, the Israeli Government has control.(4, 9, 19, 25) This report discusses only the efforts of the PA in the areas it controlled in 2013 and early 2014. For more information, see the USDOS's 2013 Human Rights Report.(4)

The PA has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

* No conscription or no standing military.

Research found no evidence of legal prohibitions against forced labor or trafficking.(17, 27) Rather than applying higher penalties, Law No. 16 applies the same penalties for rape and sexual assault of children 15 through 17 years of age as it does for such crimes committed against adults.(29)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor's (MOL) Inspection and Protection Administration	Enforce labor laws, including those on child labor.(17)
Ministry of Social Affairs (MOSA), Child Protection Department	Protect children's rights, including through the provision of services to children found in the worst forms of child labor.(25)
Police	Investigate violations of criminal laws including provisions against commercial sexual exploitation of children.(25)
Office of the Attorney General	Prosecute cases of child exploitation, including child labor.(25)
Child Protection System Referral Networks (CPNs)	Coordinate to protect vulnerable children, including those in child labor. Operate at a district level.(25, 30) MOSA, the police, the Attorney General, UNICEF, and NGOs make up the CPNs, which have specific annual work plans that guide their work with children affected by or at risk of exploitation and violence. The role of some agencies is to provide services to vulnerable children, while others ensure crimes against children are prosecuted in accordance with the law.(25, 30)

PA law enforcement agencies took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, the Ministry of Labor (MOL) employed 42 labor inspectors, 12 of whom are specifically assigned to monitor child labor conditions. Government officials describe the MOL as understaffed and in need of at least 300 labor inspectors in order to enforce labor laws, including those on child labor.(9, 31)

Government officials likewise describe Ministry of Social Affairs (MOSA) case workers as overburdened by a large case load and as lacking the resources needed to follow up on reported child labor violations.(9) As of December 2010, MOSA had fewer than 13 child protection social workers in the West Bank.(25) Research did not determine whether these numbers have changed. MOSA also does not have legal authority to enter homes, where child labor cases are reported to occur, to inspect for child labor.(25)

During the year, MOL inspectors and MOSA officers worked to raise awareness with business owners on minimum age requirements for work eligibility and the importance of keeping children away from dangerous machinery.(9) In 2013, the MOL and MOSA continued to encourage parents to send their children to school rather than work.(9)

MOL sent a small number of cases involving underaged children who were engaged in hazardous work to the Office of the Attorney General for prosecution.(4) However, no data were found on the number of child labor inspections conducted or the precise number of violations reported during the reporting period.(9)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2013, CPNs were created in the remaining four districts of the West Bank not previously covered, so that all 12 districts now have such networks.(9, 30) No further information was found on investigations of criminal worst forms of child labor.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The PA has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Committee on Child Labor	Create national policy on child labor. Led by the MOL, and includes representatives from the MOSA, the Ministry of Education, Ministry of Health, Ministry of Justice, and other ministries; as well as the ILO, UNICEF, and Save the Children, among others.(9)

In November 2013, the PA Cabinet formed the National Committee on Child Labor. The Committee held two meetings in 2013 and finalized a MOU among the government ministries making up the Committee.(9)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Some reports indicate that, during 2012, the PA developed and updated a national plan of action on children and that, during 2013, the National Committee on Child Labor was created to begin developing a national child labor policy.(9, 30) Research found no evidence that either policy was adopted during the reporting period, nor did it find evidence of any other policies to address child labor, including its worst forms.(9)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the PA funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 7).

Table 7. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
MOSA social protection programs*‡	MOSA programs that provide cash assistance, health insurance, and free education.(9, 30) Families are assessed for eligibility; one of the goals is to prevent families from resorting to child labor. MOSA and the Ministry of Education (MOE) also make efforts to ensure that children who have dropped out are sent back to school.(30)
MOSA vocational centers*‡	MOSA program that operates eight vocational centers for children who have dropped out of school. These centers have been integrated into the CPN system.(9, 28)
Palestinian Child Protection Helpline 121	Save the Children Sweden-funded program implemented by Together (Sawa), a civil society organization, that supports a Child Protection Helpline 121.(32, 33) Provides free support and counseling to children and adolescents to protect them from abuse, neglect, violence, and exploitation. Government officials work with the Helpline to provide services to victims.(32, 33)
UN Relief and Works Agency programs*	UN-funded programs that support education for children and youth in refugee camps in the West Bank and provide microfinance and other forms of support to families.(34)
Water, Sanitation and Hygiene (WASH) in Schools*	UNICEF-supported project that aims to improve water, sanitation, and health facilities in schools in the West Bank.(34)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is partially funded by the PA.

In 2010, MOSA's vocational centers were criticized in the PA's report to the CRC as outdated, poorly resourced, and ineffective.(25) In 2013, PA officials solicited additional support to expand vocational programs for youth, but research did not determine whether such funding was received.(28)

West Bank and the Gaza Strip

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

NON-INDEPENDENT COUNTRIES AND TERRITORIES

From late 2012 until March 2013, Israel irregularly transferred the PA's customs and Value Added Tax (VAT) revenues collected on imported goods destined for the West Bank and Gaza via Israeli points of entry. This lack of predictable revenue negatively impacted the PA's ability to implement social protection efforts, including those to combat child labor, in early 2013.(17, 19, 35) Israel announced the normal resumption of these revenue transfers on March 25, 2013.(35) This revenue represents 70 percent of the PA's domestic revenue, and forms a significant part of the resources available for salaries and social protection program transfers.(19)

Despite the above efforts, there are no programs in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip to address specifically child labor in agriculture and street work.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip (Table 8).

Table 8. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Laws	Amend the law, possibly through establishing a united criminal code, to expressly prohibit forced and compulsory labor as well as trafficking.	2009 – 2013
	Apply higher penalties for rape and sexual assault of 15 through 17-year-old children than for similar crimes against adults.	2013
	Empower government officials to inspect homes for cases of the worst forms of child labor.	2013
Enforcement	Provide sufficient resources and staff to the MOL and the MOSA to enforce child labor laws adequately.	2010 – 2013
	Collect and make publicly available more complete data on the enforcement of laws on child labor.	2010 – 2013
	Collect and make publicly available current data on the steps being taken to enforce criminal laws against the worst forms of child labor.	2010 – 2013
Government Policies	Establish a new children's policy that includes provisions to protect children from the worst forms of child labor.	2012 – 2013
Social Programs	Conduct research to determine the activities carried out by children working in fishing and manufacturing to inform policies and programs.	2013
	Improve educational access by addressing violence aimed at schools and by increasing the number of well-equipped and hygienic schools available for students, including through programs like WASH in schools.	2011 – 2013
	Research the impact of PA social protection and education programs on the worst forms of child labor.	2012 – 2013
	Update, expand, and increase the resources for programs such as the vocational training centers, and create programs to combat child labor in agriculture and street work.	2010 – 2013

Western Sahara

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

NON-INDEPENDENT COUNTRIES AND TERRITORIES

In 2013, Morocco, which controls most of the territory of Western Sahara, made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor in Western Sahara. The Government of Morocco initiated its Integrated Public Policy on the Protection of Children, a key phase of its National Plan of Action for Children. The Government continued to invest in education in the region through the Tayssir cash assistance program and to extend services provided by the second phase National Initiative for Human Development Support Project to Western Sahara. However, evidence suggests that children continue to engage in child labor. The Government of Morocco lacks a national coordinating mechanism to combat all worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Limited evidence suggests that children in Western Sahara are engaged in child labor.(1) In general, there has been a lack of research to understand the extent of child labor in Western Sahara.

Data on key indicators on children’s work and education are not available from the sources used in this report.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Moroccan-controlled territory of Western Sahara is subject to Moroccan laws.(2) The Popular Front for the Liberation of the Polisario Front, a Sahrawi national liberation movement, controls 15 percent of the territory, and information on the laws applicable in this area is unavailable.(1, 3, 4)

Morocco has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor and those conventions extend to the areas in the Western Sahara administered by the Moroccan government (Table 1).

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The Government of Morocco has established relevant laws and regulations related to child labor that extend to Western Sahara (Table 2).

Table 2. Laws and Regulations Related to Child Labor

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 143 of the Labor Code of 2004 (5)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 147 of the Labor Code of 2004 (5)
List of Hazardous Occupations Prohibited for Children	Yes		Hazardous Child Labor List; Decree no. 2-10-183 (6-8)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 10 of the Labor Code of 2004 (5, 9)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 503 of the Penal Code (9)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Hazardous Child Labor List; Decree no. 2-10-183 (6-8)

Standard	Yes/No	Age	Related Legislation
Minimum Age for Compulsory Military Recruitment	N/A*
Minimum Age for Voluntary Military Service	Yes	18	Royal Decree of 9 June 1996 (10)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Law No. 04-00 (11)
Free Public Education	Yes		Law No. 04-00 (11)

* No conscription or no standing military.

Children in the informal sector do not have the same legal protections as children working in the formal sector. The Labor Code does not apply to those who are self-employed, work in private residences (including domestic workers), or work in traditional artisan or handicraft sectors for businesses with fewer than five employees, which leaves children working in these sectors unprotected by the law.(5, 12, 13)

The Labor Code allows children under the age of 15 to perform certain types of agricultural work and children ages 16 and 17 to perform agricultural work at night, potentially exposing children involved in this exempted agricultural work to hazardous labor.(5)

The Labor Code's prescribed penalties for employing children younger than age 18 in hazardous work include fines or jail time between 6 days and three months. The ILO Committee of Experts notes that the fines imposed on companies for employing children are inadequate to act as an effective deterrent.(13).

The Government participated in two workshops during the reporting period to draft additional trafficking provisions in the Penal Code that would add further protections for victims of human trafficking.(2)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Morocco has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms that extend to Western Sahara (Table 3).

Table 3. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Employment and Social Affairs' (MOESA) Child Labor Task Force	Enforce child labor laws and oversees programs on child labor. Employ labor inspectors in 51 sectors nationwide; one inspector in each sector is dedicated to child labor.(2, 14)
The Ministry of the Interior	Enforce prohibitions on prostitution and other exploitive crimes involving minors as established in the Penal Code.(14)
Ministry of Justice (MOJ)	Prosecute criminal offenses against children, such as commercial sexual exploitation and child trafficking.(14)
MOJ's Child Labor Units	Process cases involving women and children once in the court system.(2)

Law enforcement statistics do not specify the specific region in which actions were taken to combat child labor, including in its worst forms. Therefore it cannot be determined which actions were conducted specifically in Western Sahara.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4).

Table 4. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Ministry of Solidarity, Women, Family and Social Development (MSWFSD)	Coordinate the implementation of the National Plan of Action for Children (PANE) (2006–2015). Establish continuity of child protection efforts, increase access to education and eliminate child labor. (14, 15)
The National Observatory for Children's Rights	Register complaints related to child welfare and refer them to the labor inspectorate units and to the general law enforcement officials. Operate a toll-free telephone number available to child victims of violence, including commercial sexual exploitation. Operate specific units for women and children victims of violence in hospitals.(2) Operate 75 Child Reception Centers that provide services to child victims of violence, sexual abuse, or neglect.(16)
MOESA, Office for the Fight Against Child Labor	Provide some guidance and limited funding to NGOs working against child labor.(2)

Although the Government has a mechanism to coordinate its anti-trafficking efforts, it does not have a body to coordinate nationwide efforts to combat other forms of child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government of Morocco has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms that extend to Western Sahara (Table 5).

Table 5. Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
MSWFSD's National Plan of Action for Children (PANE)* †	Establishes policies that promote children's health, protection, civic participation, and education. Supported by UNICEF.(14, 15) Promotes the Integrated Public Policy on the Protection of Children, an interdisciplinary approach to: analyze the scope of services that prohibit, prevent, and respond to abuse, exploitation, and violence against children; and define responsibilities by coordinating mechanisms to improve access, regional coverage, and impact of services.(2)
United Nations Development Assistance Framework (UNDAF)	Addresses education, health, and socio-economic development in an effort to alleviate poverty. Plan includes a focus on equal access to education for vulnerable children.(18)

* The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Policy was launched during the reporting period.

During the reporting period, progress on the legislative and institutional front was slowed due to the breakup of the governing coalition and related ministry restructuring.(2)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Morocco funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including in its worst forms that extend to Western Sahara (Table 6).

Table 6. Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
National Initiative for Human Development Support Project Phase II (INDH2)*	$100 million World Bank-funded Government program that increases access to basic services, such as schools; provides enhanced income-earning opportunities, such as micro-credit for women; and supports improved participation at the local level, to assure sustainability.(19) Western Sahara receives more funding per capita under the INHD program than does Morocco proper.(20, 21)
Tayssir Conditional Cash Transfer Program*‡	Ministry of National Education and Vocational Training (MONEVT) program that provides direct cash transfers, between $7 and $16 a month, to qualifying families provided the children meet school attendance criteria. Aims to increase school enrollment and reduce dropout rates, particularly in rural areas.(14, 22-24)
National Vocational Programs*‡	MONEVT program that provides education and training and specific programs that address factors that contribute to the reduction of child labor.(2)
Non-formal education programs*‡	MONEVT program that offers vocational training and alternative education programs to assist school dropouts to re-enroll in school. Has enrolled a number of working children, including child domestics. During the 2012/2013 school year, 63,488 children enrolled, of whom 30,282 were girls.(16)
Social Welfare Program*	Part of the UNDAF, addresses education, including equal access to education, especially for vulnerable children. Also addresses health and socio-economic development of children.(2)

Program	Description
High Commission for Planning	A division of the Minister of Planning and Development of the National Territory that conducts annual labor surveys, which include the collection of data on the number of children younger than age 15 who work.(25-27)

* The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Morocco.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Western Sahara (Table 7).

Table 7. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor, Including its Worst Forms

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Recommended
Laws	Approve legislation to prohibit children under the legal working age from employment in the handicraft sector and to regulate apprenticeships in traditional sectors.	2009 – 2013
	Ensure that relevant child labor laws and regulations apply equally to children working in the formal and informal sectors.	2013
	Amend legislation to increase the penalties for those who employ children under age 18 in hazardous work.	2012 – 2013
Enforcement	Disaggregate enforcement data for Western Sahara and publish information on the number of investigations and prosecutions and the amount of penalties imposed for violations of child labor and child exploitation laws.	2013
Coordination	Establish coordinating mechanisms to combat child labor, including its worst forms.	2012 – 2013
	Conduct a needs assessment to determine the extent of child labor in Western Sahara.	2013
Policies	Conduct study to measure the impact of previous education plans and the impact of PANE in Western Sahara.	2013
Social Programs	Assess the impact that existing programs may have on child labor.	2013

TDA CRITERIA AND CORRESPONDING GUIDANCE QUESTIONS

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

TDA Conference Report Criteria:

- Although not explicitly discussed in the TDA conference report, any government that supports the use of forced child labor cannot be said to be implementing commitments to eliminate the worst forms of child labor.

Guidance Question

1. *Was the government complicit in the use of forced child labor?

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

TDA Conference Report Criteria:

- “Whether the country has adequate laws and regulations proscribing the worst forms of child labor;”
- “Whether the country has adequate laws and regulations for the implementation and enforcement of such measures;”

Guidance Questions

1. Did laws meet the following international standards:
 - a. a minimum age for admission to employment in line with ILO Convention 138;
 - b. a minimum age for admission to hazardous work in line with ILO Convention 138 and 182;
 - c. a minimum age to which education is compulsory in line with ILO Convention 138;
 - d. ratification of ILO Convention 182; and
 - e. prohibitions on each of the worst forms of child labor as established in ILO Convention 182?
2. If the country’s constitution and laws are not compliant with international standards embodied in ILO Conventions 138 and 182, has there been any change in the constitution or laws that brings the country closer to being fully compliant?
3. If laws were not comprehensive in their prohibitions of all variations of a particular worst form, has there been any change in the constitution or laws that brings the country closer to being comprehensive?
4. *Were there aspects of laws that are contrary to international standards and likely to increase children’s vulnerability to the worst forms of child labor? This question would apply both to countries with child labor problems as well as countries in which there is no evidence of a worst forms of child labor problem and when the country has gaps in its legal and enforcement framework on child labor.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

TDA Conference Report Criteria:

- “Whether the country has established formal institutional mechanisms to investigate and address complaints relating to allegations of the worst forms of child labor;”

ILAB identified two distinct concepts from this criterion to assess country efforts. In this section (Section III), ILAB analyzed whether or to what degree the country had defined enforcement agency roles and had investigated and addressed complaints relating to allegations of the worst forms of child labor. In Section IV (below), ILAB analyzed whether or to what degree the country had institutions charged with coordinating overall efforts to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Guidance Questions

1. Was there an increase or reduction in inspectors to enforce child labor laws and regulations and was the number of inspectors adequate?
2. Was there an increase or decrease in the funding and resources to enforce child labor laws and regulations? Was the amount an improvement or decline and were these resources adequate given the incidence of child labor in the country?

3. Did the country increase or decrease training offered to inspectors, including specialized training on child labor, and was this training sufficient?
4. Did the government create or improve a mechanism for filing and resolving complaints expeditiously regarding child labor?
5. Was there an increase or reduction in child labor inspections? Were inspections targeted to sectors in which child labor occurs more or less frequently? Was the number of inspections sufficient given the incidence of child labor in the country?
6. Was the quality and quantity of citations or penalties issued related to child labor adequate? Did the country make available information on specific inspection results and citations or penalties imposed for violation of child labor laws and regulations?
7. Was the quality and quantity of criminal prosecutions of crimes related to child labor adequate? Did the country make available information on criminal prosecutions of crimes related to child labor?
8. Did the government establish or improve a process for information sharing among enforcement authorities?
9. *Were there any aspects to the country's enforcement practices that likely increase children's vulnerability to the worst forms of child labor?

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

TDA Conference Report Criteria:

- “Whether the country has established formal institutional mechanisms to investigate and address complaints relating to allegations of the worst forms of child labor;”

Guidance Question

1. Was an agency or committee created to coordinate government efforts to combat the worst forms of child labor? Did such an agency or committee meet more regularly and take more action, or did it meet less regularly and take less action?

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

TDA Conference Report Criteria:

- “Whether the country has a comprehensive policy for the elimination of the worst forms of child labor;”

Guidance Questions

1. Did the government establish any new policies or plans that specifically address the worst forms of child labor or any one of the worst forms of child labor?
2. Did the government incorporate the worst forms of child labor specifically as an issue to be addressed in poverty reduction, development, educational or other social policies, such as Poverty Reduction Strategy Papers, etc?
3. Did the government establish any poverty reduction, development, educational or other social policies, such as Poverty Reduction Strategy Papers, etc., that did not explicitly address the worst forms of child labor or any one of the worst forms of child labor, but that might have had an impact on them or it? If so, have any studies been conducted to assess the impact of such a policy on the worst forms of child labor?
4. If the country established any of the above plans, do they designate responsibilities, establish goals, and set timelines?
5. Using the criteria in Question 4, did the government effectively implement existing policies and plans?
6. *Were there on-going country policies or were they any changes to the country's policies that likely increase children's vulnerability to the worst forms of child labor?

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

TDA Conference Report Criteria

Appendix II

TDA CRITERIA AND CORRESPONDING GUIDANCE QUESTIONS

- “Whether social programs exist in the country to prevent the engagement of children in the worst forms of child labor, and assist in the removal of children engaged in the worst forms of child labor;”

Guidance Questions

1. Did the government fund or participate in any new or ongoing programs that aim to eliminate or prevent the worst forms of child labor?
2. Did the government fund or participate in any social protection programs that could reasonably be expected to have an impact on child labor? Were any of the countries’ programs shown, through research, to have an impact on child labor?
3. Are the countries’ programs sufficient to combat particular forms of child labor given the scope and magnitude of those problems?
4. Do the programs provide services directly to children?
5. Do the programs adequately target at-risk populations?
6. Were the programs fully funded?
7. Are the programs meeting their goals?
8. Are the program efforts sustainable?
9. Using the criteria in questions 4-8, did existing government programs improve or worsen compared with the previous year?
10. *Were there any changes to the country’s programs that likely increase children’s vulnerability to the worst forms of child labor?

A yes response to questions with an asterisk indicates a country that would likely receive an assessment of minimal or no advancement.*
