

U.S. Department of Labor
Bureau of International Labor Affairs
Office of Child Labor, Forced Labor, and Human Trafficking

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS:

Child Labor and Forced Labor Reports Released in 2014

1. What is DOL's Bureau of International Labor Affairs (ILAB) releasing in 2014?

ILAB is releasing the 13th edition of the Department's Findings on the Worst Forms of Child Labor, as mandated by the Trade and Development Act of 2000 (TDA); the sixth edition of the List of Goods Produced by Child Labor or Forced Labor, as mandated by the Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act of 2005 (TVPRA List); and updates to the List of Products Produced by Forced or Indentured Child Labor, as mandated by Executive Order 13126 (EO List).

This year's TDA report introduces a new streamlined format for presenting the status of the efforts of the 143 countries benefiting from U.S. trade preferences to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The new TVPRA List features the addition of new goods from countries that the Department has a reason to believe are produced by child or forced labor in violation of international standards. With respect to the EO List, this year, for the first time, ILAB is publishing narrative descriptions of the forced or indentured child labor occurring in the mining, production, or manufacture of each of the listed products. ILAB is also publishing in the Federal Register a notice of initial determination to add a new product to the EO List.

2. What information does each report cover?

The TDA Report covers children in the worst forms of child labor, and contains narrative profiles of 143 countries and territories. Each profile includes information on the prevalence and sectoral distribution of child labor in the country or territory; legal framework on the worst forms of child labor; enforcement of laws on the worst forms of child labor; coordination of government efforts on the worst forms of child labor; government policies on the worst forms of child labor; and social programs to address child labor. Each profile begins with a narrative assessment stating whether countries have made significant, moderate, minimal, or no advancement in eliminating the worst forms of child labor.

The TVPRA List covers adults and children and focuses on goods made by child labor or forced labor in violation of international standards. The TVPRA List includes 136 goods from 74 countries. The EO List covers only children in forced child labor, and is intended to ensure that U.S. federal agencies do not procure goods made with forced or indentured child labor. The EO List includes 35 products made by forced or indentured child labor, from 26 countries.

3. What changes were instituted with the 2013 TDA Report?

This year, ILAB introduced a new format for country profiles to make the report a more user-friendly document and a better policy tool for engagement. The new format displays key information in a more streamlined manner, using more tables and less text than in previous years. There are two main changes. First, information considered “static” or relatively unchanged from year to year (e.g., sectors in which children work, laws, and enforcement agencies) is condensed into tables in each section, along with any updates on developments during the reporting period. Second, findings about gaps in government efforts are elaborated in a narrative following the table.

4. What criteria did DOL use to determine country assessments for TDA beneficiary countries?

In the TDA Conference Committee Report, (2000), the Congress indicated that the following criteria should be considered when determining whether countries are meeting their international commitments to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. These criteria include whether the country has:

- Adequate laws and regulations proscribing the worst forms of child labor;
- Adequate laws and regulations for the implementation and enforcement of such measures;
- Formal institutional mechanisms to investigate and address complaints relating to allegations of the worst forms of child labor;
- A comprehensive policy for the elimination of the worst forms of child labor;
- Social programs to prevent the engagement and assist in the removal of children in the worst forms of child labor.

The TDA Conference Committee Report also asks that a sixth criterion be considered, which is whether the country is making continual progress toward eliminating the worst forms of child labor. The country assessment tool is intended to inform the sixth criterion rather than reflect a determination of “whether a country has implemented its commitments to eliminate the worst forms of child labor.” That determination is reserved for the President.

DOL operationalized these criteria through a series of questions, which are included in the Report’s Appendix.

5. How does DOL assess country efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor?

Beginning with the 2009 edition, each TDA report identifies a set of suggested actions for countries to take in order to advance efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The implementation—or lack of implementation—of these suggested actions establishes a baseline from which to assess a country’s advancement. These actions, in combination with other efforts undertaken by a country, were considered when assessing the level of a country’s advancement during the current reporting period compared with previous years.

The reporting period is January 2013 to December 2013. However, meaningful actions undertaken during the first quarter of 2014 (January – March) were also considered.

Once a country's efforts were identified, ILAB assessed (1) the significance of efforts—actions that could have a meaningful impact in eliminating the worst forms of child labor—undertaken during the reporting period, and (2) the extent to which these meaningful efforts addressed certain TDA criteria, outlined above, during the reporting period. In addition, ILAB reviewed whether a government was complicit in the use of forced child labor, including the forcible recruitment of children for armed conflict.

6. What criteria are used to evaluate information and place goods on the TVPRA List?

In order to compile a credible List that is as comprehensive as possible, ILAB developed a draft research methodology and published it in the Federal Register on October 1, 2007, with a request for public comment. Public comments were integrated, as appropriate, into ILAB's final procedural guidelines, which were published in the Federal Register on December 27, 2007. See 72 Fed. Reg. 73374 or <http://edocket.access.gpo.gov/2007/pdf/E7-25036.pdf>. The procedural guidelines list the following five principal criteria:

- Nature of the information;
- Date of the information;
- Source of the information;
- Extent of corroboration from various sources; and
- Whether the information indicates a significant incidence of child labor, forced labor, or forced child labor in the production of the good.

These criteria are used in evaluating all information relevant to goods produced by child labor and forced labor in violation of international standards, to formulate the List.

7. Why are there differences between the goods on the TVPRA and EO Lists and information in the TDA Report?

If the Lists include child labor in the production of a good or product, this good or product is also included in the TDA Report for that country. The Lists were developed pursuant to their respective procedural guidelines, while TDA reporting is intended to provide a comprehensive picture of child labor in a country; its context; and laws, regulations and programs to address the issue.

8. What is the difference between the TVPRA List and the EO List?

The EO List is intended to ensure that U.S. federal agencies do not procure goods made with forced or indentured child labor. Thus the EO List differs from the TVPRA List, which is intended to promote efforts to monitor and combat forced labor and child labor in the production of goods in foreign countries. The EO on U.S. federal procurement applies only to the goods on the EO List, not to those on the TVPRA List. In addition, the EO List covers forced or indentured child labor, while the TVPRA List focuses on a broader population, including adults in forced labor and children in exploitative labor that is not necessarily forced or indentured.

9. Why do the TVPRA and EO Lists include goods produced in the informal or “artisan” sector of production?

In compliance with the mandates of the Lists, ILAB’s research focuses on all economic activity in the production of goods. Economic activity includes all formal and informal sector production of goods, including goods produced just for personal and family consumption. Examples of informal sector activity include casual day-labor hired without contract; small-scale farming and fishing; artisanal mining and quarrying; and manufacturing work performed in home-based workshops. The production of illicit goods is included in these informal economic activities but the listings of such goods is not intended to condone or legitimize these goods or forms of work.

10. Why do the TVPRA and EO Lists include goods that are not exported to the United States?

The TVPRA mandate directs ILAB to monitor and combat child labor and forced labor “in foreign countries” and to develop a List of “goods from countries.” It does not restrict the List to goods that are exported to the United States. In most cases, ILAB does not have information about whether the goods on the List are consumed domestically or exported.

11. Why do the goods on the TVPRA and EO Lists vary in their level of specificity - e.g. “Stones” from India vs. “Granite” from Nigeria?

The TVPRA procedural guidelines define a ‘good’ as “goods, wares, articles, materials, items, supplies, and merchandise.” ILAB determines the type of good included on the List based on the level of specificity in the sources used to corroborate the use of child labor or forced labor in the production of a good. ILAB welcomes additional information from interested parties that provides greater detail on the goods listed.

12. Which report(s) contain information about adults?

Only the TVPRA List includes information pertaining to adults; it includes goods made by adult forced labor. The TDA and EO mandates focus exclusively on children.

13. Which report(s) include information on the service sector, such as domestic work?

Only the TDA Report covers work in the service sector; the two Lists focus exclusively on the production of goods.

14. Does DOL acknowledge the progress that is being made to address these problems?

All three reports take into account existing efforts to combat child labor and forced labor. The TDA Report has an explicit focus on government laws, enforcement, coordination, policies, and social programs; it contains detailed descriptions of the efforts of many governments to combat the worst forms of child labor. DOL has published procedural guidelines governing the development of its Lists (TVPRA and EO), which address the extent to which government, industry, and third-party efforts may be taken into account in making decisions to place goods on the Lists.

15. What consultation process does ILAB engage in with countries and industries that appear on the Lists?

Foreign countries, industry groups, and civil society have several opportunities to engage with ILAB in relation to all ILAB reports on international child labor and forced labor. Each year, ILAB releases a Federal Register notice requesting information from any party on child labor and forced labor internationally. Responses to this request are typically received from governments, industries, and civil society, and are used in developing all reports, as appropriate. ILAB also sends letters to the embassies of all countries and territories covered in the TDA Report and Lists, requesting their views on the TDA country profile and any goods that appear on the lists from the country in question. In addition, pursuant to the procedural guidelines governing the TVPRA and EO Lists, ILAB welcomes submissions from governments, industry groups and the public at any time, evaluates and responds individually to each submission. ILAB also meets throughout the year with any government, industry or civil society group requesting a meeting on issues related to the reports.

16. What is the Department of Labor doing to combat the worst forms of child labor in the United States?

DOL is the sole federal agency that monitors child labor and enforces child labor laws. The most sweeping federal law that restricts the employment of child workers is the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA), enforced by DOL's Wage and Hour Division (WHD). In addition, the Occupational Safety and Health Act and related regulations, enforced by DOL's Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA), apply to all employees regardless of age. WHD and OSHA have an active referral process in place for cases involving children under age 18, and the enforcement staffs of the respective agencies have worked collaboratively on a number of investigations.

WHD's YouthRules! Web site at <http://www.youthrules.dol.gov> provides information about child labor, including the jobs minors may perform and the hours they may work. A WHD toll-free helpline is also available (866-4US-WAGE or 487-9243) to provide information about child labor laws.

More information can be found on the Web site of the Wage and Hour Division: <http://www.dol.gov/whd/>.

17. How can I obtain more information about these three reports?

More information can be found on the Web site of the Office of Child Labor, Forced Labor, and Human Trafficking: <http://www.dol.gov/ilab/reports/child-labor/>.

18. How can I provide feedback on these three reports?

The Office of Child Labor, Forced Labor, and Human Trafficking welcomes feedback on all three reports. To submit feedback, you may send an email to ocft@dol.gov.