General Comment

Requiring anyone or any company to be party to a law which requires the purchase of any goods or services just because they are a citizen and have a pulse is not right.

Further requiring them to be party in any way to any procedure which goes against conscience and takes a life, even yet unborn, is not right.

I do not believe that anyone should be working and paying taxes so that the government can perform cost sharing and pay for the health-care of those who do not.

What other comments need to be made. Is there a need for an exemption? If the law stands, you bet. There should be an exemption for everyone, whether they be corporation or individual. No one should be required, in any way, to be a party to the taking of a life.

We should not be required to pay for the health-care of others. And, we definitely shouldn't be required to pay for abortions.

But, regardless of the exception, it is a bad law and should be thrown out.
