General Comment

I find the interference in women's health issues by religious groups to be abhorrent. Not only do these groups seek to impose their agenda on their own adherents but they regularly attempt to force the public at large to submit as well. The US government should not allow religious groups to dictate or influence who is and isn't eligible for basic medical care. These decisions should be left to the individual. The US is supposed to be a secular country, our citizen's health care should not be subject to the approval of any religion.
