Subject: mandates for contraception, etc.
Date: Wednesday, September 28, 2011 9:20:16 AM

As a citizen, and as a physician specializing in the field of high-risk obstetrics (Maternal-Fetal Medicine), I'm writing to voice my strong opposition to the mandates recently signed by Kathleen Sebelius regarding various forms of contraception, some of which may actually work as early abortifacients. If someone wants these measures, they should be required to pay for them, not have other citizens pay for them through our taxes. I'm afraid we're rapidly degenerating into a society where everyone gets everything they desire, expecting someone else to pay the bill. This simply doesn't work, as is plain from the economic hole we're digging for ourselves. What ever happened to personal responsibility??? What right has the government to force some citizens to provide services, to which they are morally opposed, for other citizens?

Please reconsider these mandates.

Respectfully,

Daniel J. Wechter, MD
