General Comment

I think having an alternative investment vehicle available to the public by the brokers is a good thing. There are a lot of educated people out there that learn from this information and can use it to build their IRA's. I have had my funds invested with a financial advisor at a very well know firm for over 20 years and have less then 4% on my funds over that time. I am now managing my funds and in 1 day have made up for the lose my well know firm had done for this year. I had my monies in mutual funds and that will not even keep you up with inflation that we are told we don't have. Let people make their own decisions on investments of their money. I still believe that this is the " Land Of The Free".
