General Comment

Dear sirs, after reviewing the proposed changes regarding the use of option trading in IRA's I must lodge a STRONG objection to these proposed changes. As an investor who has not used this particular strategy yet in my IRA, but has been educating myself recently on the usefulness of these techniques, I find it unacceptable that these rule changes would eliminate the possibility of my making extra money within the IRA format. These types of trades also would allow me to "smooth" out some of the volatility presently being seen with in the markets. I urge that this change not be adopted.
