General Comment

Please revise the wording in this proposal regarding any potential restriction of option trading within an IRA account. For those of us that take the time to learn the proper way to use these options in a low-risk way it provide an extra income boost to our retirement savings. The use of options actually lowers risk in an IRA portfolio. Selling calls can provide extra income in addition to dividends while buying puts can limit downside risk in the event of a market correction. Eliminating these options will actually increase the risk of an IRA portfolio. Please consider revising the language of this rule to allow options trading within an IRA account.
