General Comment

Once again you treat all people as children unable to take care of their own affairs. I have spent my hard earned money and considerable long hours educating myself in trading options and now obviously this committee thinks I don't the right to manage my own money. I have done well trading options for income and to have less risk in my portfolio, and you want to take that for me. Why not try restricting trading in options until people complete some required training that most online brokers already provide, instead of taking that right from everyone. The intent of this rule some of you think will help some people, but will penalize those who spent time and money to try to educate themselves in options trading. Do not take this investing tool from us. Thank You
