General Comment

In regards to the proposed rules changes on IRA and 401k accounts, I have been trading options in my retirement account for many years. The proposed rules changes could eliminate my ability to trade options to increase my income and capital gains. This strategy has been very successful for retirement account. I have taken the time to learn how to successfully trade options and reduce my risk. It would be blatantly unfair to eliminate this investing platform of trading options in retirement accounts for those of us who take the time to learn the process and execute options trading. Trading options has help me increase my retirement account so much more than just simple stock investing. Thank you for your time
