Please allow this email to second the comments of Professor Baron regarding this issue.

In Ohio, it has become increasingly difficult to manage personal injury litigation on behalf of injured Ohioans because collection agencies like ACS, Ingenix, Rawlings and others regularly refuse to produce the controlling documents in the absence of litigation, thereby increasing cost and delaying claim resolution. When they do produce the controlling documents in litigation, those documents often do not reflect the claims the collection agencies made.

Requiring full disclosure of the stop loss insurance documents will go a long way towards remedying this problem.

Thanks you.
