General Comment: I am the HR Administrator at Cooper Bussmann, a division of Cooper Industries, a self-insured, self-administered corporation located in Houston, TX. Our 401(k) plans are governed by ERISA.

Diversified Investment Advisors, the 3rd party administrator of our defined contribution and defined benefit plans, provides full disclosure of all fees to participants. The disclosure is noted in quarterly statements that are either mailed to participants or sent electronically if elected by the participant. Our employees use Diversified’s website to maintain their 401(k) accounts and to make plan changes. Anytime a plan participant transfers out of a Vanguard Dev Mkts fund, the website provides a warning notifying the participant about a redemption fee if the amount was held in the fund 60 calendar days or less. It even notifies the participant that the fee is paid directly to the fund, not to Diversified. If a participant elects a service that has a fee, such as the Diversified Managed Account, he or she is notified of the fee prior to confirming the election. That fee is disclosed on the quarterly statement as well. As a company, we hold Diversified Investment Advisors responsible for providing disclosure of all fees to plan participants. However, to maintain employee relations, I notify new hires of the fees during orientation, and the fees are also provided when they enroll in the program and services on the Diversified website. When I do articles about the 401(k) program in our company newsletter, I also provide fee information if it is applicable.

Attached is one of the information sheets that Diversified provided last Fall when they conducted plan benefit seminars for our employees. Each employee received a copy of this document. I also provide a copy to our new hires during orientation.

Sincerely,

DeAna M. Boren

Diversified Managed Account

A comprehensive, professional investment management service where your retirement plan account is invested in the funds available in your plan based on a personalized asset allocation strategy matched to your needs by Roberton Associates, a recognized expert in developing asset allocation strategies for retirement investors. You provide the financial information that you want considered.

Yes. This service will manage your defined contribution(401(k)) account based on information you provide about your total financial picture.

Yes. Roberton Associates will review the appropriateness of your investment allocation strategy periodically to ensure that it continues to meet your changing goals over your lifetime.

Yes. Rebalancing occurs initially upon subscription to the service and then every 90 days thereafter.

Yes. Go to www.divisvest.com and click on “Account Overview” or go to the “Retirement Planning” section to view your “Control Panel” and see current account information or to update your profile and other important personal financial information.

Yes. The annual service fee is 0.25% on the retirement assets that are allocated to the service. This fee accrues daily, is deducted from your account monthly and is reflected as a fee on your quarterly statement.

For example, assuming $10,000 of retirement plan assets invested in the Diversified Managed Account for the entire year, the annual service fee is $25.

Sign up: Log on to your account at www.divisvest.com to turn on the service – click on “Diversified Managed Account” under new features on the “Account Overview” page. Additional information regarding the fees and other terms and conditions applicable to the Diversified Managed Account is available in the Managed Account Agreement, which you must accept to subscribe to this service. You can turn the service off at any time by going to the Diversified Web site. If you elect to turn the service back on, you will need to wait 90 days.
