a distinction should be made between higher risk uses of options and those which can be used to conservatively hedge or generate income. covered calls and cash-secured puts are probably not riskier than long stock positions. people in congress who do not understand this, are clearly incompetent to regulate their use.