In a just world, there wouldn't be a huge difference between "suitable" and "in the best interest." If it's not in my best interest, how can it possibly be suitable?

Why is it I can trust the grocery bagger, who I don't pay, to act in my best interest, such as not putting the tomato juice can atop the bread, but I can't trust someone charging 1% AUM to do the same?

Steve Abney
Winter Haven FL