I strongly support the proposal for the new rule regarding the management of retirement plans. Retirement plan advisors should be required to act on the financial interests of retirees. Because of the 2008 financial downturn, and very long vesting periods for some of my prior retirement plans, I find myself with only minimal retirement savings. I am doing everything in my power to fix this problem, but it is incredibly frustrating to work with retirement plan advisors who I simply cannot trust to act in my best interest. This is not an abstract or academic issue for me. This is the reality of perhaps never being able to afford to retire.

Sincerely,
