

Comment submitted by: Nick ONeill, Kennett Square, Pennsylvania, United States

This a comment re: RIN 1210-AB33. 15 years ago when I took my family to an amusement park and stood in line with people who appeared to be of a lower income status than my family but non the less had every expensive souvenir and were wearing all the expensive logo and sports team attire, while my family did not so that I could put money into a retirement account for my future, I remarked to my wife that we were being fools because when the future arrived our government was not going to allow the spenders to suffer for having not saved. I predicted that I would be screwed for having lived responsibly within my means. That day is now at hand. I'm 65, I have paid off my 10 year old car and my mortgage is low on my house. I almost have enough to retire even though I am paying 100% of two sons college education and lost a huge amount of my savings thank to the government mandated housing debacle. Now my government wants to confiscate my retirement so that it can redistribute funds the people who never struggled to save. Shame on my government.

Our Founding ?Fathers would vomit. Please forward this to every beaurucrat and agnecy that thinks that confiscation/redistribution of savings is in the interests of freedom.