Dear representative of the People,

To take another's life is without question a crime in any culture, an offense against nature, and deeply painful to those who commit such an act, no matter the circumstances and regardless of whether they are fully conscious of it. How can we say then that to prevent one from existing in the first place is acceptable? To force the People of this nation to fund contraceptives such as Plan B as well as sterilization blurs the line between what is truly health care and what is, if we were all honest about it, simply convenient. You are endorsing the funds to a cause with which reasonable people deeply disagree. Please broaden the exceptions for employers who object to these procedures. There is no challenge or dignity in taking the course of least resistance. Is this an honorable way to fulfill the great privilege of your office?

Peace,

Sara Nagel

Sincerely,
