General Comment

The rights for conscience objections should be with the patient. Health care should focus on the patient and give the best care to them. Religious conscience objections are easy ways to break the system and give bad health care to the patient. It allows for a medical provider to push religious dogma onto their patients. Religious objections can include not providing vaccinations, offering prayer over medicine, refusing to help homosexuals, or many other things that are not in the best interest of the patient.

If there is a reason not to do something, it should be based on medical / science reasoning and not on some arbitrary dogma.
