I am a Thrift Savings Plan participant and it should not be difficult for me to know that I am getting good advice from a trusted advisor rather than a salesman who may make money for rolling my account into a fund they manage even if I would have lower returns. Why would a delay benefit the consumer?