General Comment

There is way too much unknown still and no information to tell us what to expect. A delay on this rule is imperative in order for the Advisors to be educated enough to make sure we can offer clients the best possible products or tools to help them reach their goals. This rule in my opinion needs to be altered so that clients can choose any financial product that makes sense to help them retire without having to worry about whether or not they will have enough money to maintain their lifestyle and not worry about running out of money.
