General Comment

There should be no cases in which my financial adviser puts his firms or his own financial interests above mine when counseling me as to where to put my money. I am sure most investors rely on their advisors, as i do, to help them make the most of their invested assets every time they suggest a trade. The Conflict of Interest Rule is a service to both the financial advisor and the investor because it belies any question of the adviser's interests so that the investor's faith in the advise given is not compromised. Please do not exempt any investments from the rule and certainly do not rescind the rule.
