General Comment

I am against the new "fiduciary" rule for retirement investors. Let me decide what is best for me. I like my current ROTH IRA setup with my financial advisor, and this new rule will force me to change it to something that will have drastically higher fees. The DOL thinks that they are looking out for me, but they are inadvertently causing me to give away more of my retirement money to my financial advisor. Let us think for ourselves. If my financial advisors are not acting appropriately, then I will fire him and find a new one. Thank you.
