Secretary of Labor Alex Acosta,

Your fellow American citizens are watching you and your department very closely now thanks to the new media tools. We the people gave POTUS Donald Trump a landslide electoral college victory to enable he, his cabinet, and conservative constitutional congressmen/women to drain the swamp inside D.C. Beltway. You all really need to honor that in your job by supporting the agenda he campaigned on and by stopping any obstruction as described by this Heritage's Daily Signal article. Please read and heed.

Fortunately, the Trump administration's stated policy is to "empower Americans to make their own financial decisions," a sharp break from the way the Obama administration viewed people.

Time is running out, but Trump's labor secretary still has a chance to fulfill the letter and spirit of the president's order.

The choice is clear: The secretary should delay the rule until the department, working with the SEC, can complete a new economic and legal analysis.
