

Sec. Acosta,

The "Fiduciary Rule" goes into effect 6/9 and yet you want to rescind it. Why? It just forces financial advisors to actually do their jobs and act in their clients' best interests - i.e., to advise them on what to do to make more money for themselves. Wanting to rescind it makes it seem that you want the advisors to act in their own interest - by siphoning clients out of their money. Who are you in public since for - Americans by the way? - Frank
