Employee Benefits Security Administration U.S. Department of Labor,

Thank you for taking comments on the preservation and enforcement of the DOL's proposed fiduciary rule.

This legislation targets the losses that ordinary savers face when retirement advisers provide retirement advice that results in higher fees or commissions for the advisers, not the best options for the retirees.

It makes such clear sense to require advisers to work in the best interest of their clients; I am frankly shocked that the DOL is considering cutting this rule.

Conflicted advice costs retirement savers $17 billion each year. As the child of two near-retirees, and someone who hopes to retire herself after a career in the non-profit sector, I want the assurance that profiteering on retirement savings is outlawed.

I am writing to support implementation & enforcement of the fiduciary rule in its current form.
