General Comment

AHPs offering coverage across state lines.

Historically State Insurance Commissioners have had authority to approve insurance products offered to individuals and businesses in their states. This proposal would allow Association Health Plans in a single industry to shop of insurance in states with little in the way of health coverage and benefit requirements and consumer protections and then offer those health insurance products in states that have taken the initiative to protect their health insurance purchasers (both individual and business) from skinny low cost health plans devoid of benefits and consumer protections. Association Health Plans that seek to offer insurance coverage in different states should be required to comply with the insurance laws of each state in which they seek to do business.

AHP coverage of sole proprietors and partners without common law employees Under existing law, if a sole proprietor or partnership does not have common law employees, the sole proprietor or partners have not been able to participate in a group health plan as employees. This proposal would allow sole proprietors and partners without common law employees to participate in a group health plan offered by an Association Health Plan if they belong to the sponsoring association. While this expansion of coverage may, on the surface, appear benign, it presents unique challenges and risks to an Association Health Plan. Given the guaranteed issue and guaranteed renewability requirements of the non-discrimination rules in the proposed regulations, Association Health Plans should, as part of a bona fide employment based classification, be able to exclude from coverage groups of two or less individuals or groups with no common law employees.

Non-discrimination provisions applicable to AHPs

Current law does not permit Association Health Plans to discriminate against individual participants by taking health status factors into account in either offering them coverage or setting the benefits they will receive or the rates they will pay.

Current law does permit Association Health Plans to underwrite distinct groups or employers taking into account the group's or employer's own overall health status or claims experience and does not limit the amount a distinct group or employer can be charged for coverage. This underwriting practice has permitted Association Health Plans to grow and succeed in offering the kind of affordable health coverage to small employers envisioned by the President's Executive Order. This method of underwriting and rate setting is very common in the Association Health Plan industry today. The proposed regulations will require that Association Health Plans not treat member employers as distinct groups and consequently all groups would be treated the same for benefits and rates with a few limited "bona fide employment based classifications" taken into account. It is noted that gender and age are not included in the proposed regulations as "bond fide employment based classifications." The writers of the proposed regulations go to great lengths in justifying and supporting the new non-discrimination rule that they are proposing. Nevertheless, when the new non-discrimination rule prohibiting underwriting that takes into account any health status factor by group or employer is combined with the guaranteed issue and guaranteed renewability rules the result is a disaster for Association Health Plans. Most Association Health Plans do not have the resources to withstand one or two years of bad claims experience (even with stop loss insurance) without raising their rates to the point that they are not competitive in the small group market. Individual group or employer underwriting is the safety valve that allows Association Health Plans to maintain and grow with reasonably priced coverage and benefits and fulfil the promise of more affordable health care for small employers.

If the decision of the Department is to proceed with the non-discrimination rule as proposed, we would ask the Department to consider a grandfathering of existing Association Health Plans that have already met the bona fide or true single employer test to continue the underwriting practice they currently use.
