General Comment

I find it very disturbing that the Employee Benefits Security Administration would do anything to make it more difficult for Americans to learn of the details of their retirement and changes that are being made. This is very suspect and not in good faith to American labor.

The financial services industry has demonstrated time and time again that they need good solid common sense regulation to reign in their lust for profit over the retirement security of Americans. Why in the world would the EBSA do anything to make that deception easier financial services industry? You should be on the side of labor concerning our retirement. I say, stand up! And do right by American Labor. Anything else is unacceptable.

Sincerely
Matthew Forest VanBrocklin
