General Comment

I am a small business owner of a firm that specializes in ecological restoration. We offer a 401(k) plan as a benefit of employment. Our retirement plan offers a range of investment choices that are screened for social and environmental sustainability. We believe it is essential for our business to place our funds in companies that promote the same values that we stand for. Sustainability is a core mission for us, and offering retirement funds consistent with our values helps us recruit and retain employees. I believe that new regulations on retirement plans should encourage retirement investing in SRI funds, or at the very least allow them to continue to be offered without hindrance.
