General Comment

I am stunned to learn that the same people who insist at the top of their voices that American rights include brandishing guns, not wearing masks, and calling police on unarmed law-abiding neighbors, are now taking aim at our ability to take into account the type of investment choices made with our retirement dollars.

I may not be able to stop the reckless subsidies of fossil fuel corporations who have known for decades that their products are bringing annihilation upon the sacred system of life on our Mother Earth, but I have every right to direct my retirement accounts away from enriching the CEOs of same corporations. I am investing in the future of my son, and his, and theirs. Why aren't you doing the same?

The only joy I have in this insanity, is that if the current administration is attempting to stop socially responsible investing, it means that it is having an impact.
