General Comment

Though I understand your intention in protecting investors, I am one such investor that prefers less government regulation telling me and my chosen portfolios what to invest in. We are informed investors and can decide for ourselves how much consideration and weight to give these sustainability scores.

Previous performance does not guarantee future performance. By limiting our ability to choose environmentally-sustainable stocks, you limit our freedom to invest with a long-term strategy in mind. These stock options allow us to invest our money for the long term, not for quarterly returns and performance. This regulation will not protect consumers from a financial crisis; it is not intended to regulate banks. I strongly request this new regulation be declined.

Very Respectfully,

Luke Sieburg
