General Comment

I understand that many people are concerned about ensuring that retirement investments are being made in order to maximize shareholder value as opposed to incorporating some perceived social good. While I agree that shareholder value should be the sole purpose of the firm, the larger issue is that so long as the politicians in this country continue to play the identity politics game, we will never advance as a society. Social harmony will be achieved sooner and more authentically only if we as a society place LESS emphasis on diversity. It's a thought that is contrary to the prevailing narrative. But, intelligent people know this to be true.
