ATTN: Department of Labor

[RIN 1210-AC03]

Dear Labor Secretary Walsh: Reduce climate risks to our retirement savings! [RIN 1210-AC03]

I am writing to the Department of Labor as a supporter of Sierra Club, the largest grassroots environmental organization in the nation, with 3.8 million advocates dedicated to stopping the climate crisis and creating a just, equitable clean energy future.

The Department of Labor is wisely proposing to reverse the Trump Administration's rules discouraging those in charge of private employer-sponsored retirement plans from considering climate change and other environmental, social and governance (ESG) factors in making investments or voting on climate-related shareholder resolutions.

I strongly support the Department's proposal to restore the flexibility of retirement plan managers to consider all issues that are financially material. As your proposal states, ESG issues are often financially material. By blocking certain ESG investment strategies and erecting cost barriers to integrating ESG factors broadly, the Trump Administration deprived plan managers of the tools they need to protect the financial interests of workers and retirees. This arbitrary action is rightly being tossed aside.

That said, I urge the Department to go further than simply restoring to plan managers the option of considering ESG issues. Certain ESG issues — including the enormous and growing risks of climate change — represent significant threats to the stability of our financial system and our economy, as well as retirement returns. They are, by definition, financially material. Plan managers must consider these issues to fulfill their duties of prudence and loyalty to plan beneficiaries.

Specifically, in addition to finalizing this proposed rule, I urge you to propose a new rule requiring retirement plan managers to show how they consider climate change risks in their investment decisions. Retirement plan managers should be aware of which companies and funds (including mutual funds) are facilitating the expansion of fossil fuel infrastructure, accelerating greenhouse gas emissions, and failing to align their business plan with the goals of the Paris Agreement. Companies engaging in such practices are contributing to an unsustainable economy and bleak retirement picture for many workers, especially those workers that don't plan to retire for several more decades. Retirement plan managers who choose to invest in these companies should be required to explain how they reconcile these investments with their duty of loyalty to plan beneficiaries.

The new rule also must require plan managers of participant-directed plans like 401ks to offer at least one investment option with a credible strategy for addressing climate change risks. Millions of workers and retirees have expressed grave concern about climate change and want to use their savings to invest in companies with business models oriented toward climate solutions and sustainability. Companies with strong sustainability track records and ESG funds have often outperformed those without such track records in risk-adjusted returns. Retirement plan managers who choose not to offer any plan focused on sustainable businesses for their climate-concerned savers should be required to explain how they reconcile this failure with their duty of loyalty to plan beneficiaries.

The Department of Labor should seize this historic opportunity to reshape the private employer-sponsored retirement system. Addressing climate risks — arguably the most serious threat to the long-term financial well-being of workers and retirees — must become a fundamental job responsibility of plan managers. Thank you.

Signed,
