General Comment

I own a small business and manage my own IRA investment account, which currently allows me to buy and sell options. I have been trading options for over 15 years and use options to reduce my overall risk in investments in addition to providing additional income streams to existing owned equities.

I am opposed to this legislation, or any legislation that would limit my ability to invest freely in the markets using all the available tools in the marketplace.

I am not a large investor and by having options to utilize as a tool in investing provides a much lower risk to growing my IRA account than just relying on stocks and bonds.
