General Comment

I feel as though these regulations would "adversely" affect returns on my Traditional IRA account, as I would no longer be allowed to trade options.

The trading of options in my IRA has given me an added boost to my retirement yields and safety. Without that option, my returns will be significantly curtailed. I have invested considerable time in learning to utilize these instruments to reduce volatility and increase income in my IRA account.

It would be absolutely unfair to deny me as an "individual", this important investment tool in my retirement portfolio!

I am against said regulations, without specific language guaranteeing my right to utilize the ability to trade options in my IRA.
