General Comment

I would like to comment on the proposed rule change regarding using options in IRA accounts. Short and sweet....leave it alone. I could ask you a dozen questions about this, but just considering this change basically makes me think of just two. First, either you don't understand option trading to reduce risk or secondly, it's government again screwing with our lives. I've never bought an option in my life.....sold quite a few which reduces the cost on the stock. Even if people lose money using options, it's their money. We're not children and who says we need all this protection anyway? Sometimes I wonder if this is the U.S.A. Just stick with what you know.....and protecting our wealth.....well, the figures speak volumes already.
