General Comment

I am a retiree living in Boynton Beach, Florida. I have a self directed IRA. I own stocks in my IRA account that I have chosen to buy. I am currently able to sell call options in that account.

This provides me with 2 benefits:

1. I am able to create additional income to support my retirement.
2. I am able to reduce the impact of falling stock prices.

I understand that this proposed rule change will prohibit me from selling call options.

I am against this rule change and cannot see how anyone who owns individual stocks is harmed using this strategy.
