General Comment

I am an investor who uses options in my retirement account that i manage myself. I have made money using option trading in my IRA and find it is as a way to increase income for my retirement. I consider options trading safer in many ways than buying the stock outright as I am actively selecting the price. I think the proposed rules will hurt my ability to make up the extra income that will be needed when social security payments reduce in the future. I do not want to be limited to basic trades in my IRA account as I am likely not able to make up the income. Do not pass this rule!
