Concerning the rule being proposed: as a small fry investor who uses a self-directed IRA, I am extremely concerned about the proposed rule. I think the rule is misguided in both intent and extent to which it proposes to use a steamroller to flatten a pill-bug. I have noticed that a significant number of 'petitions' have come your way stating support of same - in particular the MoveOn crowd. Methinks they are simply adding their name to same without any consideration of how the rule would affect them or anyone else.

Of particular concern is the proposal to strip my ability to use options to contain market downside or take advantage of upsides.

On balance I believe the rule should be completely withdrawn.

Sincerely
Stephen Lippe
