I understand that someone has proposed that options not be allowed in IRAs. While their intentions may be good, this is taking away some of my freedoms and rights as an investor.

If the government bans all casinos, then maybe they can consider banning options in IRAs. How many people are wasting their retirement income at the casinos???

But there is a big difference between options and casinos. Being able to sell covered call options in IRAs is a source of extra income (in these no interest income environments) and it is a form of protection (insurance) against market declines. Please do not let this bad proposal to ban options from retirement IRAs happen.

Sincerely,
Deborah Copeland
