

In 2013, Malawi made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government updated its Education Act, making education compulsory, and launched its National Youth Policy. The Government held its first meeting of the Child Labor National Steering Committee and supported social programs to address child labor, particularly in the tobacco sector. However, children in Malawi continue to engage in child labor in agriculture and fishing. The Government has not finalized or fully implemented key legislation or policies protecting children from the worst forms of child labor, including the Child Labor Policy and the Child Protection Policy.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Malawi are engaged in child labor in agriculture and fishing. (1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Malawi. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources of this report.

Malawi

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Children are engaged in hazardous work in the production of tobacco.(7, 18) Children who handle tobacco risk illness from nicotine absorption, including green tobacco sickness.(12, 25, 26) Children are also exposed to pesticides and chemicals.(10, 26) Children may work alongside family members who are tenants on farms.(16) In this tenancy system, farm owners loan agricultural inputs to tenants and deduct the debt from future profits. Those who cannot meet production quotas and are unable to repay these debts may face debt bondage.(27)

Most labor trafficking of children in Malawi is internal.(18) Children, typically boys, are trafficked from southern Malawi to tobacco farms in Malawi’s northern and central regions. Children are trafficked from Malawi to Tanzania for child labor in fishing. Children who are trafficked may be charged for their transport, food, clothing, and housing, and may be forced to work in debt bondage without resources to return home or provide for themselves.(18, 21)

Limited evidence suggests that girls from rural areas have been promised clothing and lodging from brothel owners, for which they are later charged high fees and are coerced to engage in commercial sexual exploitation to pay off their debts.(18)

Although primary education is free, barriers to education include families’ socioeconomic pressures and inability to pay required school-related expenses such as books and uniforms.(1, 7, 28, 29) Despite some Government support for book subsidies for poor families and training and teaching resources for schools, resources overall are limited and students drop out for many reasons, including poor school conditions and the lack of school materials, uniforms, qualified teachers, and relevant school curricula.(1, 8, 16, 19, 30)

Children with family members with HIV/AIDS may assume the responsibility of the head of their households, sometimes becoming the primary caretaker to a sick parent and having to work to support their families.(31) These children, especially those who are orphaned, are at increased risk of entering into the worst forms of child labor.(32-35)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Malawi has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

* No conscription or no standing military.

Malawian law has three different sources that speak to the minimum age for hazardous work. While Section 23 of the Constitution states that children under age 16 are entitled to protection from hazardous work, Section 22 of the Employment Act sets the minimum age for hazardous labor at 18.(36, 37, 42, 43) Additionally, the Child Care, Protection, and Justice Act defines children as persons 16 and under, and therefore its restriction on hazardous work does not protect children ages 16–18. Consequently, there is some confusion regarding the enforcement of the minimum age for hazardous work.(25, 42)

Section 21 of the Employment Act sets the minimum age for employment at 14 in agricultural, industrial, or non-industrial work.(36) However, it does not apply to work in homes, leaving child domestic workers vulnerable to exploitation.(36, 42) Section 79 of the Child Care, Protection, and Justice Act includes protections for children through age 16 from trafficking.(25, 44) Children age 17 are not protected. Article 142 of the Penal Code punishes permitting the sexual exploitation of girls, even though the sale of a child into prostitution is not prohibited. While the Penal Code prohibits pornography and criminalizes the procurement of prostitution, it only applies to girls, and it does not prohibit the sale of a child into prostitution.(39) The Penal Code includes provisions for indecent assault against boys; however, boys may still be vulnerable to sexual exploitation.(39)

While there is a legal framework for labor inspection of commercial farms, it does not cover inspections in private homes, including for domestic work, or privately owned farms.(42, 45)

The Tenancy Bill, first drafted in 1997, would regulate labor tenancy and include legal protections for children working in agriculture through the tenancy system.(7, 19, 43, 46) However, due to the exploitative nature of the tenancy system, including its impact on child labor, in 2013, the Ministry of Labor (MOL) supported outlawing the tenancy system, and is no longer pursuing passage of the Tenancy Bill.(45)

In October 2013, the Government passed the Education Bill, making education compulsory until age 14.(4, 45, 47, 48)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MOL) – Child Labor Unit (CLU)	Monitor and implement child labor law compliance through child labor monitoring visits.(49)
MOL – General Inspectorate	Perform inspections and investigate all labor complaints, including those related to child labor.(7)
Ministry of Home Affairs	Enforce trafficking laws and identify trafficking and child labor victims.(50)
District Labor Offices	Enforce child labor laws at the district level.(7)

Law enforcement agencies in Malawi took actions to combat child labor, including its worst forms.

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2013, MOL was allocated roughly $2.5 million for labor-related work; however, it is not clear how much was allocated for child labor activities.(7) The Child Labor Unit (CLU) had three full-time employees based in MOL in Lilongwe during the reporting period.(45) The Ministry advocated for CLU to be upgraded into a department, which would enable it to have staff members focused on children in each of the country’s districts.(45)

Each of Malawi’s administrative districts employed a District Labor Officer (DLO), who was responsible for all labor issues including child labor.(7, 45) In January 2014, MOL employed 29 DLOs and 120 labor inspectors, 60 of whom are dedicated to monitoring child labor.(7) District labor offices are directly funded from the Treasury.(7) According to MOL officials, DLOs were limited in their ability to carry out monitoring and reporting due to budget and resource constraints, including a lack of fuel for vehicles.(7, 45, 51)

Six hundred labor inspections were carried out in 2013.(7, 29) The Government did not conduct proactive labor inspections. Most labor inspections were conducted in response to reported labor law violations.(7) In the agricultural sector, inspectors focused on large, commercial farms due to limited resources.(7)

The CLU in MOL reported that there were six child labor violations in Kasungu District (a tobacco-growing region) in 2013, but could not give exact figures for the whole country.(18) All of the cases in Kasungu were settled out of court, and the offenders paid all wages due, including repatriation costs.

The Government operates a referral process to transfer trafficking victims detained by law enforcement authorities, though services remain limited.(18) Government officials reported providing assistance to several child trafficking victims at a social rehabilitation center in Lilongwe for orphans, vulnerable children, trafficking victims, and gender-based violence victims.

Criminal Law Enforcement

Child labor cases during the reporting period were resolved through out-of-court settlements and payment of fines.(18) While reports on several trafficking cases were consolidated, the police did not systematically report child labor cases.(52) According to the Malawi Police Service’s law enforcement data for seven districts, 15 trafficking offenders were convicted in 2013; however, it is not clear that all of these cases involved child trafficking victims. Reported penalties for convicted traffickers included fines and prison sentences of up to 30 months.(29) The Mchinji and Phalombe district police also provided information on trafficking cases in their districts, separately.(18) During 2013, Mchinji police reported arresting suspects in 10 trafficking cases, and obtaining eight trafficking convictions.(29) Phalombe police reported five investigations involving 12 suspects; each investigation involved boys and young men being sent to Mozambique for forced labor on farms. In Phalombe, eight traffickers were convicted, with sentences ranging from 12 to 18 months’ imprisonment with hard labor, with two others convicted but given suspended sentences. The Kasungu District Social Welfare Office identified 59 child labor victims and returned them to their homes in 2013.(18)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor, including its worst forms (Table 6).

Table 6. Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Child Labor Network	Draft policies, identify resources, and harmonize programs and activities for the elimination of the worst forms of child labor.(46, 49, 53)
National Steering Committee on Child Labor	Provide policy guidance to support the elimination of child labor and implementation of the National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor (NAP). Chaired by the Ministry of Agriculture, members include representatives from government ministries, trade unions, employers, development partners, and civil society organizations.(18, 31)
Child Protection Technical Working Group	Oversee child protection issues. Includes representatives from the Government, international organizations, development partners, and NGOs and is chaired by the Ministry of Gender, Children, and Social Welfare.(7, 18)
District Child Protection Committees	Coordinate all child protection activities at the district level and improve local coordination on child protection issues. May be combined with a district orphan and vulnerable child committee and a district committee on child rights.(18)

The Child Labor Network met twice at the national level during the reporting period.(7, 45) In January 2013, the National Steering Committee on Child Labor held its first meeting in Malawi.(7, 49)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

*The impact of this policy on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Policy was launched during the reporting period.

The National Child Labor Policy, which focuses on the issue of child labor and provides Government, civil society, and other partners with a framework to implement child labor programs and activities, awaits Cabinet approval and is not yet in effect.(18, 27) The Government has not finalized or fully implemented the Child Protection Policy, which outlines the Government's child protection strategy.(61)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

In 2013, the Government of Malawi funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 8).

*The impact of this program on child labor does not appear to have been studied.

† Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ Program is funded by the Government of Malawi.

Although Malawi has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem.
