

In 2016, Afghanistan made a moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The President signed a new Law to Combat Trafficking in Persons and Smuggling of Migrants, hired 14 new labor inspectors, and adopted the Policy on Child Labor in Carpet Weaving. The Government also prosecuted five soldiers involved in a possible case of bacha bazi – a practice involving exploiting boys, often through threats or violence, for social and sexual entertainment – and investigated 60 men in Balkh Province for involvement in such practices. Bacha bazi exists in all provinces of the country, with specific cases documented in the provinces of Balkh, Baghlan, Helmand, and Uruzgan during the reporting period. While some elements of bacha bazi are prohibited under existing Afghan law, the term is not specifically included or defined in the law, making it challenging for law enforcement officials to comprehensively address and compile statistics on these cases. Boys who are victims of bacha bazi are often treated as criminals rather than as victims. In addition, children in Afghanistan are engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including in armed conflict and forced labor in the production of bricks. Also, Afghanistan’s labor inspectorate is not authorized to impose penalties for child labor violations, and the Government lacks sufficient programs to eliminate the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Afghanistan engage in the worst forms of child labor, including in armed conflict and the forced production of bricks.(1-6) Table 1 provides key indicators on children’s work and education in Afghanistan. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children are subject to commercial sexual exploitation throughout the country. The practice of bacha bazi (boy play), in which men – including warlords, police commanders, influential tribal leaders, and mafia heads – force boys to provide social and sexual entertainment, is particularly prevalent.(32, 37, 38) In many cases, these boys are dressed in female clothing, used as dancers at parties and ceremonies, and sexually exploited.(32) According to the Afghanistan Independent Human Rights Commission, the practice exists in all provinces of the country.(39) Research has found specific cases in the provinces of Baghlan, Balkh, Faryab, Konduz, Helmand, Takhar, and Uruzgan.(35, 38, 39) A national inquiry conducted in 2014 found that most boys were between the ages of 13 and 16, and that 60 percent of them had been subjected to physical violence, confinement, and threats of death.(32) Some government officials, including members of the Afghan National Police, the Afghan Local Police, and the Afghan Border Police, exploit boys for bacha bazi as well as to work as tea servers or cooks in police camps.(6, 32, 34, 35, 37, 39-41) Some local police commanders abduct boys and use them for bacha bazi.(34, 35) One source indicated that the practice of bacha bazi is the biggest weakness of the police forces.(27) In 2016, the Ministry of Interior ordered police to stop having parties in which boys are dressed as girls and forced to perform dances.(39) In 2016, in Uruzgan Province, the Taliban used boys engaged in bacha bazi to attack policemen who subjected the same boys to sexual exploitation.(27) The police chief of Balkh province stated that some local officials support and defend suspects of bacha bazi.(38)

Children are trafficked both within Afghanistan and internationally. Afghan boys are used for forced labor in agriculture and construction abroad, and girls tend to be used for commercial sexual exploitation and domestic work in destination countries, primarily Iran and Pakistan.(4) Children were trafficked for debt settlement, including in the production of bricks and illicit drugs.(3, 4, 10) Reports indicate that girls from Iran and Pakistan are trafficked to Afghanistan for commercial sexual exploitation.(4, 30)

Widespread violence and lack of economic opportunities leads some Afghan children to leave Afghanistan.(42-46) There are reports that the Iranian government and the Islamic Revolutionary Guards Corps (IRGC) coerce male Afghan migrants and registered refugees, including boys as young as age 12, to fight in Syria in IRGC-organized and -commanded militias by threatening them with arrest and deportation to Afghanistan.(41) Media reported that there were covert recruitment agencies in Afghanistan and that a Syrian opposition leader has urged the Afghan government to prevent recruitment within Afghanistan.(47) Boys, especially those traveling unaccompanied, are particularly vulnerable to trafficking. Some Afghan boys are subjected to sex trafficking in Greece after paying high fees to be smuggled into the country.(41, 48)

Non-state groups, such as the Taliban and Islamic State in Khorasan Province, recruited children for use in armed conflict, to plant improvised explosive devices, or to act as suicide bombers.(28) The UN verified the continued use of children in combat and non-combat roles by the Government in 2016, including five cases of recruitment by the Afghan National Police, two by the Afghan Local Police, and one by the Afghan National Army, at times using fake identity documents.(6, 37, 41) Low birth registration and falsified identity documents contribute to the problem because it makes the determination of a recruit’s age difficult.(49, 50) Observers reported that some officials accepted bribes to produce identity documents for boys stating their age was above 18 years old.(41)

Based on a 2013 report by the Afghanistan Independent Human Rights Commission, about 6 million children are out of school. Barriers to education for children include displacement of populations due to conflict, the use of schools as military bases, distance from school, school-related fees, lack of security, and not being allowed by parents to go to school, particularly for girls.(10, 25, 51, 52) Approximately, 1,000 schools closed in 2016 due to security issues.(53) In 2016, approximately 600,000 Afghan refugees returned from Pakistan.(54) About half of returnee children from Pakistan do not attend school.(55) They are also particularly vulnerable to child labor.(36, 56) Some individuals who facilitate repatriation take returnees to brick factories and keep them in debt bondage to repay their transportation costs.(37)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Afghanistan has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

The Government has established laws and regulations related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Afghanistan's legal framework to adequately protect children from child labor.

In November 2016, the Parliament passed the Law to Combat Trafficking in Persons and Smuggling of Migrants, which repealed the Counter Abduction and Human Trafficking Law of 2008. The President signed the Law in December 2016, and it entered into force in January 2017, when it was published in the Official Gazette.(68) The Law prohibits recruiting, transferring, transporting, harboring, or receiving children for the purposes of exploitation, including sexual exploitation, production of pornography, forced dancing, and use in armed conflict or illicit activities.(68)

During the reporting period, the President's Cabinet began drafting a Child Protection Act to address some worst forms of child labor. The Parliament must review the draft before it is adopted.(6) The current draft law defines and prohibits bacha bazi, although the penalty remains unclear. The draft also asserts that health facilities and parents are responsible for birth registration.(69)

Although forced labor and child trafficking are illegal, research did not find criminalization of debt bondage.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor, including its worst forms (Table 5). However, gaps in labor law and criminal law enforcement remain and some enforcement information is not available.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Child Protection Action Network (CPAN)	A coalition of government agencies, NGOs, and community and religious leaders. Receive complaints of child labor, investigate such cases, and refer them to NGO and government shelters that provide social services.(6, 70) Not all provinces have a CPAN.(16)
Ministry of Labor, Social Affairs, Martyrs, and Disabled	Respond to complaints of child labor, child trafficking, and child sexual exploitation; refer cases to the Attorney General's Office and NGO shelters; and operate a shelter for trafficking victims in Kabul.(50)
Ministry of the Interior	Enforce laws related to child trafficking, the use of children in illicit activities, and child sexual exploitation.(70)
National Directorate of Security	Identify human trafficking victims and refer these cases to the Ministry of the Interior.(71)
Attorney General's Office	Investigate and prosecute human trafficking, abduction, and sexual exploitation cases.(50)

Labor Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether labor law enforcement agencies in Afghanistan took actions to combat the worst forms of child labor.

In 2016, the Child Protection Action Network (CPAN) was the primary mechanism of monitoring child labor cases. It is unknown how many individuals were in charge of investigating child labor complaints in CPAN, but the Ministry of Labor, Social Affairs, Martyrs, and Disabled (MoLSAMD) employed 32 labor inspectors.⁽⁶⁾ The number of labor inspectors is insufficient for the size of Afghanistan's workforce, which includes more than 7.9 million workers.⁽⁷³⁾ According to the ILO's recommendation of 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, Afghanistan should employ roughly 200 labor inspectors.^(70, 74, 75) Government officials, NGOs, and UNICEF acknowledge that the number of labor inspectors is insufficient. Labor inspectors do not have legal authority to enforce child labor laws.⁽⁷⁰⁾ MoLSAMD, in cooperation with CPAN, can respond to complaints of child labor, investigate cases, and issue warnings or refer the case to the Attorney General's Office. A person wishing to file a complaint must specify the legal grounds for labor violations in writing.⁽⁷²⁾

Business owners are not required to allow unannounced inspections.⁽⁷⁰⁾ Based on available information, MoLSAMD only inspects businesses that are registered with the Ministry.⁽⁶⁾

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2016, criminal law enforcement agencies in Afghanistan took actions to combat the worst forms of child labor (Table 7).

In 2016, the Ministry of the Interior employed two officers in each anti-human trafficking unit throughout Afghanistan's 34 provinces; however, the priority of these units is to combat human smuggling rather than combat the worst forms of child labor.

Afghanistan

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Government officials stated that they lacked equipment and transportation to carry out investigations.(6) Victims of human trafficking were routinely prosecuted and convicted of crimes.(4, 41) Officials hope that with the adoption of the new Law to Combat Trafficking in Persons and Smuggling of Migrants, victims will be more easily distinguishable from perpetrators because of clearer definitions in the new law.(76) In 2016, the Government made 115 arrests, 63 prosecutions, and 34 convictions for human trafficking crimes; however, it is unknown how many of these involved child victims.(50)

In 2015, the President ordered the creation of a committee to investigate and prosecute cases of commercial sexual exploitation of children by security forces, but the committee never convened.(6, 30) In June 2016, the President ordered an investigation into reports of sexual abuse of children by police officials. The President’s Office stated that any official involved in such sexual abuse would be prosecuted and punished, regardless of rank.(77) Officials in Balkh Province began investigating 60 men suspected of using boys for bacha bazi.(38) In October 2016, five Afghan National Army soldiers were accused of sexually abusing a boy, possibly in bacha bazi. All five were arrested and transferred to an Afghan National Army court, where one soldier was convicted of unlawful use of lethal force and sentenced to two years of imprisonment; another soldier was convicted of battery and sentenced to one year of imprisonment.(41) Some government officials contributed to the lack of prosecutions of individuals who subject boys to bacha bazi.(4, 38) The Afghanistan Independent Human Rights Commission’s 2014 report assessed that most men who engage in bacha bazi paid bribes to, or had relationships with, law enforcement, prosecutors, or judges that effectively exempted them from prosecution.(41)

Male child victims of human trafficking, especially those who were engaged in commercial sexual exploitation or were used as child soldiers, were sometimes referred to juvenile detention and rehabilitation facilities, rather than receiving appropriate victim support services.(4, 30, 41, 78) Male child sex trafficking victims, including those subjected to bacha bazi, were in some cases referred to juvenile rehabilitation centers on criminal charges.(41) The UN noted that some children associated with armed groups were kept in detention centers instead of juvenile rehabilitation centers.(28) The UN reported that some of these children were subjected to torture and ill treatment.(78, 79)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Although the Government of Afghanistan has established coordinating mechanisms to address certain forms of child labor, research found no evidence of an overall mechanism to combat child labor, including all its worst forms (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
High Commission for Combating Crimes of Abduction and Human Trafficking	Address human trafficking in general, including child trafficking. Led by the Ministry of Justice; other members include nine ministries and five other entities.(70, 71) In 2016, the Commission met quarterly, and its Technical Committee met monthly.(37)
Inter-Ministerial Steering Committee on Children and Armed Conflict	Coordinate efforts to eliminate the recruitment and use of child soldiers. Led by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and monitored by the UN and NGOs.(80)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

The Government has established policies related to child labor, including its worst forms (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Labor Policy	Includes objectives to eliminate the worst forms of child labor, including those involving hazardous activities; pass legislation prohibiting child labor; and effectively enforce child labor laws.(15) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.
Action Plan for the Prevention of Underage Recruitment	Aims to prevent the recruitment of minors into the Afghan National Security Forces, including the Afghan National Army, the Afghan National Police, the National Directory of Security, and pro-government militia groups. Seeks to ensure the release of children under age 18 from the armed forces and facilitate their reintegration into families and communities.(81)
Policy on Child Labor in Carpet Weaving†	Provides social services to children, as well as incentives for weaving families that avoid child labor. Includes an implementation plan.(82)

Policy	Description
National Strategy for Children at Risk	Creates a framework to provide social services to at-risk children and their families, and guides donors in contributing toward a comprehensive child protection system. Focuses specifically on working children, trafficked children, child soldiers, and other children affected by conflict.(83) Since the adoption of the policy, the establishment of CPANs has been an important achievement in its implementation.(84) However, not all provinces have a CPAN.(16) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2016, the Government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, including its worst forms (Table 10).

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
USDOL-Funded Projects to address child labor	USDOL projects that aim to build capacity of government law enforcement officials and address child labor in the carpet industry. These are Project to Prevent Child Labor in Home-Based Carpet Production in Afghanistan, a $2 million project implemented by GoodWeave; and Country Level Engagement and Assistance to Reduce Child Labor, a capacity-building project implemented by the ILO in at least 11 countries to build local and national capacity of the Government to address child labor.(85, 86) For additional information, please visit our Web site.
Age Verification of New Afghan National Security Forces Recruits†	Joint Government and UNICEF program that operates child protection units in the Afghan National Security Forces recruitment centers. Aims to ensure that new recruits meet the minimum age requirement of age 18 by carefully screening applicants.(87) The process includes an ID check and a requirement that at least two community elders vouch that a recruit is age 18 or older and is eligible to serve.(88) The Government opened 12 new child protection units in 2016.(76) From January to November 2016, child protection units prevented the recruitment of 315 boys and 3 girls into the security forces.(41)

† Program is funded by the Government of Afghanistan.

The Government ran public service messages through radio, television, and print media to raise awareness about human trafficking issues.(37, 41) The Afghan Independent Human Rights Commission conducted 60 educational training programs on preventing and combating human trafficking for officials, university lecturers, mullahs, and civil society activists; the programs reached 2,091 individuals.(41)

There is no evidence of programs designed specifically to prevent and eliminate child labor in agriculture or forced child labor in the production of bricks. Research found that shelters and support services for male child trafficking victims older than age 10 were particularly limited.(33, 76) Some boys who are victims of human trafficking are sent to juvenile rehabilitation centers due to the lack of shelters.(37)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE THE WORST FORMS OF CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms, in Afghanistan (Table 11).

This ratio is the total number of new entrants in the last grade of primary education, regardless of age, expressed as a percentage of the population at the theoretical entrance age to the last grade of primary education. A high ratio indicates a high degree of current primary education completion. The calculation includes all new entrants to the last grade (regardless of age). Therefore, the ratio can exceed 100 percent, due to over-aged and under-aged children who enter primary school late/early and/or repeat grades. 73. CIA. The World Factbook, [online] [cited May 18, 2017]; <https://www.cia.gov/library/publications/the-world-factbook/fields/2095.html#131>. Data provided is the most recent estimate of the country's total labor force. This number is used to calculate a "sufficient number" of labor inspectors based on the country's level of development as determined by the UN.
74. ILO. Strategies and Practice for Labour Inspection (GB.297/ESP/3). Geneva, Committee on Employment and Social Policy; November 2006. <http://www.ilo.org/public/english/standards/re/m/gb/docs/gb297/pdf/esp-3.pdf>. Article 10 of ILO Convention No. 81 calls for a "sufficient number" of inspectors to do the work required. As each country assigns different priorities of enforcement to its inspectors, there is no official definition for a "sufficient" number of inspectors. Amongst the factors that need to be taken into account are the number and size of establishments and the total size of the workforce. No single measure is sufficient but in many countries the available data sources are weak. The number of inspectors per worker is currently the only internationally comparable indicator available. In its policy and technical advisory services, the ILO has taken as reasonable benchmarks that the number of labor inspectors in relation to workers should approach: 1/10,000 in industrial market economies; 1/15,000 in industrializing economies; 1/20,000 in transition economies; and 1/40,000 in less developed countries.
75. UN. World Economic Situation and Prospects 2012 Statistical Annex. New York; 2012. http://www.un.org/en/development/desa/policy/wesp/wesp_current/2012country_class.pdf. For analytical purposes, the Development Policy and Analysis Division (DPAD) of the Department of Economic and Social Affairs of the United Nations Secretariat (UN/DESA) classifies all countries of the world into one of three broad categories: developed economies, economies in transition, and developing countries. The composition of these groupings is intended to reflect basic economic country conditions. Several countries (in particular the economies in transition) have characteristics that could place them in more than one category; however, for purposes of analysis, the groupings have been made mutually exclusive. The list of the least developed countries is decided upon by the United Nations Economic and Social Council and, ultimately, by the General Assembly, on the basis of recommendations made by the Committee for Development Policy. The basic criteria for inclusion require that certain thresholds be met with regard to per capita GNI, a human assets index and an economic vulnerability index. For the purposes of the Findings on the Worst Forms of Child Labor Report, "developed economies" equate to the ILO's classification of "industrial market economies; "economies in transition" to "transition economies," "developing countries" to "industrializing economies, and "the least developed countries" equates to "less developed countries." For countries that appear on both "developing countries" and "least developed countries" lists, they will be considered "least developed countries" for the purpose of calculating a "sufficient number" of labor inspectors.
